Vetoed and favored Committees vote on AWACS

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate committee recommended Thursday that the proposed sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia be vetoed, but Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker said he is more confident than ever the sale will go through.

"We have a certain momentum," Baker told reporters. "It's now winnable. Several weeks ago it wasn't."

Baker offered his assessment prior to the Foreign Relations Committee's 9-8 vote against the sale, a lineup that the GOP leader had anticipated.

The committee vote came despite Baker's plea that "not a single issue has more far-reaching consequences for the ultimate security of this country."

And Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., had told his colleagues: "If the Senate rejects this sale, I predict that every senator who votes against it will regret it."

In Philadelphia, President Reagan reacted by saying, "Frankly, I'm gratified that it was that close. Of course, I wish they'd gone the other way."

The president said that with the committee vote that close, he is still confident the sale will be approved on the Senate floor.

The Foreign Relations panel action came a few hours after the Armed Services Committee endorsed the sale 10-5, concluding in a report that it "will enhance the potential of U.S. military forces to protect U.S. interests in the Persian Gulf region."

The House rejected the $8.5 billion sale Wednesday by a 301-111 margin, but the deal goes through unless it also is rejected by the Senate, where the administration has been concentrating its lobbying efforts.

A Senate vote, originally scheduled next Wednesday, has been postponed until the week after next.

Undersecretary of State James L. Buckley, testifying at the Foreign Relations panel's final hearing on the sale, said a congressional veto of the sale would jeopardize America's most practical means for moving combat forces into the Persian Gulf if needed to protect oil fields.

Baker told reporters President Reagan still has "an uphill fight" to win the sale but said he was far more optimistic Thursday than he had been even a day earlier.

Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, saying he is close to his own decision, hinted he might come out in favor.

Senate leaders said they put the vote off because the president will be in Mexico next week for a 22-nation summit conference.

Committee members opposed to the sale issued a separate statement saying Saudi oil fields should continue to be protected by the U.S.-operated AWACS planes already there because "the stability of the Saudi government cannot be assured."

Reagan prepares for development conference

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — President Reagan assailed the Soviet Union on Thursday as having nothing to offer the global poor, while he rejected the claims of "some shrill voices" that he is tightfisted with America's helping hand.

Setting the stage for his journey to Mexico next week for a conference between 22 industrial and developing nations, Reagan offered no promise of increased foreign aid in the years to come, though he noted the United States already gives more than any other nation.

Instead, he said a greater contribution "is to follow through with our own economic recovery" coupled with greater private investment in foreign trade.

"By getting our own economic house in order, we win, they win, we all win," the president said, referring to the industrial democracies on one hand and the poorest nations on the other.

The speech, before the World Affairs Council, broke no new ground. But it affirmed Reagan's thoughts on international economics one week before he meets with 21 other heads of government in Cancun, Mexico, to review relations between the world's rich and poor.

The president was interrupted when one man in the audience of several hundred shouted from the balcony: "Are nuclear weapons the way to world peace?" Reagan said, in return, "I spoke here in 1975 and there wasn't an echo."

As he continued, several others chanted "Stop nuclear war," and were promptly escorted from the room. Outside the hall, meanwhile, striking Philadelphia teachers and fired federal air traffic controllers demonstrated against the president's spending policies.

"For the record," Reagan declared, "the Soviets will not attend the conference at Cancun. They simply wash their hands of any responsibility, insisting all the economic problems of the world result from capitalism, and all the solutions lie with socialism."

"The real reason they're not coming is that they have nothing to offer," the president said. "In fact, we have just one question for them: who's feeding whom?"

"I can hardly remember a year when Soviet harvests have not been victimized by 'bad weather,'" he continued. "They've had quite a long losing streak for a government which still insists the tides of history are running in its favor."

"The Soviets, of course, can rely on farmers from America and other nations to keep their people fed."

"To listen to some shrill voices, you'd think our policies were as stingy as your Philadelphia Eagles' defense," Reagan said. "There's a propaganda campaign in wide circulation that would have the world believe capitalist U.S. is the cause of world hunger and poverty."

Airlines engage in fare war

By GREG SMALL
Associated Press Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — Hawaiian Airlines' standard round-trip fare for the popular flight between Honolulu and Maui Island was $94 at the start of the year. Early this week, the airline was charging just $43 one-way — and throwing in the return trip for nothing.

The "Fly Home Free" promotional fare — $43 for short flights and $63 round-trip for longer inter-island trips — was identical to Aloha Airlines' "Be Our Guest" fare.

Yesterday Hawaiian announced an even lower fare: $37.90. Aloha immediately cut its fare accordingly.

But the lowest fare going in the Hawaiian skies is the $29.90 charged on Saturdays by Mid Pacific Airlines, an upstart newcomer leading a three-way inter-island air fare war that is delighting the flying public.

On any other day, Mid Pacific charges $37.90, hence the moves by Hawaiian and Aloha.

Since January, fares on some flights have gone down by as much as 50 percent, according to Hawaiian Air spokesman Tom McGarvey.

The fare war began last March when Mid Pacific entered the inter-island flight market on a limited basis.

Unlike Aloha and Hawaiian, which fly to all the state's major islands, Mid Pacific serves only two islands from Honolulu — Maui and Kauai — with a tiny fleet of three turbo-prop planes.

While Aloha and Hawaiian have been losing passengers and money, Mid Pacific has turned a profit, despite being forced to undercut the major competition, says Mid Pacific spokesman Keith Haugen.

All the airlines, however, will be boosting their fares on Dec. 20 for the holidays, which traditionally mark an upsurge in the number of tourists coming to the island state.

"All three of us will be able to fill our planes during Christmas and New Year's," Haugen said.

It was the inability of Aloha and Hawaiian to fill their planes that led them to enter the fare war. But the two larger carriers insist it is not competition from Mid Pacific that is causing their slump. Both Hawaiian and Aloha blame shrinking tourism totals.

Mid Pacific, on the other hand, says 85 percent of its passengers are local residents who rely on inter-island flights to visit family and friends or to conduct business, according to Haugen.

Figures from the Hawaii Visitors Bureau show just a slight decrease in the total number of visitors to Hawaii so far this year. But the drop is much higher on the neighboring islands.

Aloha's Milton Goto said he interprets the figures to mean that people are willing to travel as far as Honolulu but "the cost-conscious traveler" balks at paying extra money to visit the outer islands.

Hurt by both the decline in passengers and the loss of revenues from the fare war, Hawaiian and Aloha also have been forced to cut

Students meet with Trustees next week

By SARA ZAPPIA

The need for a university student center will be the major topic of discussion at the Oct. 22 meeting of the Board of Trustees.

Student Body President Don Murday stated that a major reason why students move off campus is because there is no place to go and nothing to do on campus. He also stated that the university must do something to resolve this need for social space before things get out of hand.

Murday pointed out that the student center has been a topic of interest for several years, and he feels that it is time something is done toward making it a reality.

Another topic of discussion will be a request for longer library hours. Murday claimed that there are few places on campus to study, and the hours of the library are not satisfactory. He said that a student center would solve this problem.

Also on the agenda is a discussion of coeducation at the university. Student Body Vice President Tara Kenney will explain the need for integration between male and female students. She will also relate this to the request for a student center.

The final topic of the meeting will be a presentation by Murday thanking Father Hesburgh for his 30 years of service to the University.

staff by 10 percent and slash wages 10 percent for non-union employees.

Despite Mid Pacific's obvious effect on their business, neither Aloha nor Hawaiian consider the newcomer a real threat to their established stronghold on inter-island air traffic.

Hawaiian's McGarvey noted that his airline and Aloha transport thousands of passengers a day, while Mid Pacific handles only hundreds.

Nevertheless, Mid Pacific is growing. Haugen said the carrier will be adding staff soon and doubling its fleet to six planes by the end of the year. The airline also plans to open new routes to Hawaii Island.

Haugen also pointed out that even in a sluggish economy, Mid Pacific is meeting success in the inter-island

The Rev. Sun Myung Moon, founder and spiritual leader of the Unification Church, and a top aide were charged in a federal indictment yesterday with conspiracy and defrauding the government of income taxes. Unification Church officials denied the charges, and accused the government of a "fundamental attack on all religions in America." Moon, 61, was accused of filing false personal tax returns for 1973, 1974 and 1975 and failing to report about $112,000 on interest earned on bank deposits in those years. He also was charged with failing to report $70,000 worth of stock he and his wife received in a trade for merchandise in 1973. If convicted of the charges, Moon could be imprisoned as long as five years on the conspiracy count and three years on each count of filing false returns and be fined $25,000. Church leaders said Moon, a Korean native who has a home in Irvington, a suburb of New York City, was "out of the country," and would not say whether he would return to the United States to face charges. — AP

It said 847 other officials were brought to court and 240 others given "lighter punishment." The nationwide campaign also recovered $177 million in state money that was illegally diverted from state coffers. — AP

Thousands of people converged on Jerusalem yesterday for an annual holiday march that was sharply trimmed from previous years. The Jerusalem march is timed to coincide with the Jewish holiday of Sukkot, the Feast of Tabernacles, which commemorates the 40-year journey from Egypt to the Promised Land by the ancient Israelites. Unlike those of previous years, the march avoided the center of town, and Israeli army units did not join the parade. An army spokesman said cutbacks in military spending precluded their participation. — AP

Sen. Barry Goldwater will undergo hip surgery in Phoenix early next month but plans to stay in Washington at least until the Senate votes on the proposed sale of AWACS surveillance planes to Saudi Arabia. Goldwater, 72, is expected to be hospitalized for two weeks, then spend four weeks recuperating at his Paradise Valley home, his office said Wednesday. The Arizona Republican suffers from a buildup of calcium in his joints that chips away and causes extreme pain, said Judy Eisenhower, the senator's administrative assistant. The operation is set tentatively for Nov. 2 or 3 and will be on Goldwater's left hip, she said. He had surgery on his right hip in 1976. — AP

Prince Charles and Princess Diana moved closer toward setting up house Thursday when wedding presents and other personal effects were moved to Highgrove, the royal country estate. Presents that had been on public display at St. James's Palace in London until last week were loaded into trucks and taken on the four-hour journey to Gloucestershire. The load also included items belonging to Prince Charles taken from Buckingham Palace. Work at the country estate is not complete and a formal moving-in day has yet to be fixed. Charles and Diana are expected to move in at the end of this month after they return from Wales, their first public tour together since their August honeymoon. — AP

There is a new brand of bottled water for sale, but its distributors wouldn't want anyone to drink it. It's Mississippi River water — "impure and unnatural," the label promises. Contents include "hydrogen, oxygen, petroleum, phenol, unidentified floating objects, nuclear waste and chloroform." The thick, gray-brown substance is advertised to remove paint, kill weeds and cultivate tumors. The product, a descendant of the Pet Rock and canned smog, is bottled by three students at Tulane University and is sold at gift shops in New Orleans' French Quarter. Ron Small, a business major, said he came up with the idea as a "tongue-in-cheek comment on the quality of the city's water." "The ingredients are actual," he said, "and all the city's water is taken from the river." One difference is that Small glues his products' lids shut for safety. "We don't want any kids drinking it," he said. — AP

And the nominees are . . .

There is a distinct possibility that the next time you pick up an Observer (when you return from fall break) headlines on the front page will proclaim the selection of a new president of the University of Notre Dame.

Rumors are rampant on campus that a successor to Fr. Theodore Hesburgh will be named during the University Board of Trustees meeting, which commences next Friday at 9:30 a.m. Information Services Director Richard Conklin told me yesterday afternoon that the issue of the impending presidential vacancy is not officially on the agenda of the meeting. However, he added, "We'll just have to wait and see."

In fact, he expressed a desire to know the whereabouts of our executive news editor next Friday, "just in case." "We want to be flexible on Friday and to know the whereabouts of members of the media so we can reach them on an hour's notice if there's a press conference," Conklin explained.

When compared to the amount of speculation that preceded the naming of Gerry Faust as the new Notre Dame head football coach, the amount of armchair guessing and predicting that has surrounded the upcoming presidential selection seems very limited; a few murmurs here, a couple of whispers there.

Perhaps the reason why there's been so little serious discussion about the matter is the recognition of the position's lofty requirements and the subsequent desire to remain discreet about the possible successors.

Or maybe the reason is that no one can really come to grips with the idea of Notre Dame without "Father Ted" at the helm. Next year will mark Hesburgh's 30th year as President of the University. A tenure of such duration is almost unheard of at a major American college.

Think of it for a moment.

Thirty years — that's more years than most of the students (and some of the professors) have been living. Over half of Notre Dame's 67,000 alumni have Hesburgh's signature on their diplomas. America has been deeply altered by the 50s, the Kennedy assassination, Vietnam, the 60s campus uprisings, Watergate, Iran and all of the other good and bad events that have marked the turbulent years since 1952. But "Father Ted" has stood firm like the statue of Fr. Sorin.

And just like Fr. Sorin, Hesburgh has come to symbolize everything Notre Dame stands for. The Chicago Tribune reported Sunday that Hesburgh is approaching former U.S. President Herbert Hoover's mark in the Guinness Book of World Records for receiving the most honorary degrees. For Notre Dame, Hesburgh has been the quintessential leader — and public relations specialist.

Now he is stepping down. It's true, this time he really is. For years now, he has made an annual offer to step down, and for just as many years, the Board of Trustees has asked him to stay on longer.

Inside Friday

But now the decision must be made. Rumors circulating around the halls of the administration building — and the serving lines in the dining halls — have by now included everyone in the presidential "race" from Dan Devine to the little old man who collects litter on the quad. We must remember, however, that the choice is constitutionally limited to a member of the Congregation of the Holy Cross and a member of the order's Indiana Province. That stipulation certainly cuts the field of candidates.

Despite these limitations, amateur "dome watchers" have managed to build up quite a list of "serious" contenders. OK, let's get down to the nitty gritty line I've so far avoided — the watch list of the people most often mentioned by some of my most reliable sources:

- Fr. James Burtchael, professor of theology, and the man who several years ago served as University Provost — only to resign after a brief tenure.
- Fr. Thomas Blantz, associate professor and chairman of the history department.
- Fr. Ernest Bartell, professor of economics.
- Fr. David Tyson, assistant professor of management and director of sophomores in the College of Business Administration.

The only reasonably certain thing I can say about this informal list is that the Notre Dame administration — just like its ultimate chairman of the board — often works in mysterious ways. The chances are probably quite good that none of the professors listed above will get the nod, but if one of them does, don't forget where you heard your information.

Looking ahead for the moment, what would life be like for any successor to Father Ted? From all indications, Hesburgh will not fade away after he resigns the presidency, but rather move on to that impressive sounding position of Chancellor.

"It's going to be very interesting to see how this person (new president) will react to being an understudy of Father Ted," observed Student Body President Don Munday on last night's WSNB-AM broadcast, "Notre Dame Week in Review." "There's no doubt in my mind that Fr. Hesburgh will still be calling the shots."

Indeed. Although we know that Fr. Hesburgh will still be there after next Friday, somehow, by resigning his position, he will be ending an era at Notre Dame, and for all of us, something will never be the same.

The Center for Civil and Human Rights and the Notre Dame Law School are presenting a lecture series featuring attorney Jack Greenberg. Greenberg, Director-Counsel for the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, has been involved in nearly every major civil rights case argued before the Supreme Court since 1949.

Greenberg speaks on civil rights

By JIM PLAMONDON
News Staff

Jack Greenberg, the Director-Counsel for the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, spoke on the history of civil rights in the United States yesterday afternoon. The program, entitled "Civil Rights in Retrospect and Prospect," was sponsored by the Center for Civil and Human Rights division of the Notre Dame Law School.

Greenberg, an attorney of national prominence who has been involved in nearly every civil rights case handled by the Supreme Court, gave a detailed summary of the important events, trials, and constitutional amendments which have had an impact on the struggle for equality for blacks.

Greenberg focused on two doctrines that developed in the period from after the Civil War to the Civil Rights Act of 1964. First, he pointed to the states' rights and actions as a premise for the 14th Amendment.

Greenberg also used the Plessy vs. Ferguson and Brown vs. the Board of Education cases to explain illegal discrimination and its causes.

In addition, Greenberg spoke about the "intent and effect" aspect of discrimination, referring to whether segregation is specifically intended or simply happens.

Finally, he discussed affirmative action programs. He offered as an example universities, which now set quotas for the number of minorities accepted.

Greenberg concluded his lecture with an "optimistic" view of the civil rights movement, predicting that "the law will accelerate" in its attempt to create equality among men.

Greenberg will present another lecture today at 12:15 p.m. in room 115 of the Law School. His talk will center on capital punishment.

Protect Egypt AWACS begin Mid-East duties

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Two AWACS spy planes from Oklahoma began surveillance on Egypt's borders yesterday. President Hosni Mubarak swore in his holdover Cabinet, and Parliament enacted a new law to control internal dissent by prescribing the death penalty for unauthorized use of weapons.

The government blamed Libya for two bombings at Cairo Airport earlier in the week that killed a baggage handler and injured four people.

In Moscow, the official Soviet news agency Tass reported that President Leonid I. Brezhnev sent a message seeking improved Kremlin ties with the successor of President Anwar Sadat.

The two Airborne Warning and Control Systems planes flew here nonstop from the United States and immediately began patrolling Egypt's northern, southern and western borders, said Gen. Ahmed Nasr, commander of Cairo West Military Airport. An Israeli official in Tel Aviv, who asked not to be identified, said Israel had no objection to the use of AWACS in Egypt because, unlike those President Reagan wants to sell to Saudi Arabia, they "are not directed against us." Israel lies to the east of Egypt.

U.S. officials said the AWACS were sent to Egypt to demonstrate confidence in Mubarak and will remain under the control of 50 Americans assigned to fly and maintain them.

Defense Minister Abdel Halim Abu Ghazala said an agreement reached after Sadat's assassination Oct. 6 was "that two AWACS be stationed here to watch over the northern, western and southern borders. We have not bought them... They are here for the joint exercises (of U.S., Egyptian, Sudanese and unspecified Persian Gulf states' troops) that begin in November."

Egypt's 800-mile western border — most of it with Libya — is especially tense. The two countries fought a border war in July 1977 and Egyptian border forces have been on alert since. To the south of Egypt lies Sudan, which has complained that Libya is attacking its western border from Chad. Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy has an estimated 18,000 troops in Chad and has said Sudanese President Gaafar Nimeiri will be the next Arab "traitor" to fall.

State-run Egyptian TV said the AWACS would demonstrate to Khadafy "that America stands beside us." Foreign Minister Kamal Hassan Aly said in an interview with NBC-TV here that the AWACS "will mean many things, not only to Khadafy, but to the others who endanger the area as a whole, and it is a good sign of cooperation with Egypt and the United States, which is more needed these days."

Aly also told NBC that Egypt blames Khadafy for two bombs that exploded in luggage taken off a Maltese airliner at Cairo Airport on Tuesday, the day Egyptians voted for Mubarak to succeed Sadat. The flight originated in Libya and Egyptian officials said the bombs were set with timers.

'Conscience Week' concludes tomorrow

By TOM SHAUGHNESSY
News Staff

Prisoner of Conscience Week (Oct. 12-17) is sponsored by Amnesty International in order to highlight the plight of political prisoners throughout the world.

This year's Prisoner of Conscience Week is being held within the context of the new report released by Amnesty International on Oct. 9, 1981. According to this report, about half of the 154 United Nations member states are holding political prisoners, according to Notre Dame government professor Gilbert Loescher.

Loescher, who formed the Notre Dame chapter of Amnesty International in 1976, said that "it is important to note that these are only a fraction of the total number being held."

During this week, Amnesty International groups throughout the world are holding religious services, vigils, and public meetings. Some groups are sending delegates to foreign embassies to press for the release of political prisoners.

Amnesty International has groups in fifty countries throughout the world, with 200 adoption groups in the United States. An adoption group is assigned specific prisoners by the International Secretariat of Amnesty International and these groups work for their release.

The Notre Dame chapter sponsors prisoners in the U.S.S.R. and Syria. In the twenty years of its existence, Amnesty International has secured the release of over 10,000 prisoners of conscience.

The next meeting of Amnesty International will be held on Oct. 28 in the International Students' Lounge in the basement of LaFortune. All new members are contact. For more information contact Prof. Loescher.

Former U.S. justice aids blind students

WASHINGTON (AP) — Potter Stewart, who helped mold American law for 23 years on the Supreme Court, has turned in retirement to reading those cases aloud for the budding young lawyers who need most to hear them.

After stepping down from the high court last July 3, Stewart volunteered as a reader at the Washington chapter of the non-profit Recording for The Blind Inc.

The retired justice recorded a dozen pages of a 255-page text called "The Rights of Aliens" on Thursday for William Poyner, a second-year student at Antioch Law School.

Stewart, speaking in a Midwestern baritone, made his recording debut for the non-profit group last week with a reading from a book called "Assignments in Legal Research."

The 66-year-old jurist calls the two-hour sessions challenging but rewarding, adding that the readings take a great deal of concentration.

He says he is looking forward to reading again.

His next assignment is the 188-page text of the New York Penal Code.

Recording Center spokeswoman Judy Reis said Stewart has not worked out definite recording dates, in part because he is still sorting his schedule.

Stewart read yesterday in a soundproof booth under the careful supervision of another volunteer Edna Lingreen.

Ms. Lingreen, who followed along with the same text and operated the recording machinery, is a retired senior trial lawyer with the Justice Department's Antitrust Division.

Stewart reads not only the texts of the various cases, but also the detailed footnotes often set out in tiny print.

Law school textbooks are at the center of American legal education. They contain both court opinions and often lengthy commentary and citations to various cases.

Ms. Reis said readers and their monitors must be experts in the field in which they are reading. She noted that where one reader leaves off, another picks up, so that any one reader may not finish a whole text.

The spokeswoman said that a master tape of Stewart's readings — as with all of the the chapter's recordings — will go to the Recording for the Blind headquarters in New York. Copies are then made available to other blind law students.

One copy will be sent to Poyner, a resident of Washington, D.C., where Antioch Law School is located.

Recording for the Blind is a 30-year-old private group that records and provides free taped cassettes of educational textbooks to more than 17,000 handicapped and blind people in all 50 states.

market precisely because it is new. Without an established staff of senior pilots and other officers, the salary tab for Mid Pacific is lower. The airline hasn't been burdened with "swollen management staffs," Haugen said.

Operation costs are also kept low, Haugen said, because Mid Pacific is non-union and therefore does not have to meet the salaries being paid at Aloha and Hawaiian.

Haugen said the turbo-props also save money, and he touted them as "the most economical way to fly distances of less than 400 miles." Aloha and Hawaiian use jet planes on their routes.

Although Hawaiian and Mid Pacific say the air fare war appears to have eased off, pending the start of the Christmas season, Aloha's Goto isn't so sure.

University Artist Series continues its fall semester presentation with a performance by France's Duo Vox Nova at Sacred Heart Church Tuesday, Oct. 27, at 8:15 p.m. There will be a $2 admission charge at the door.

95-0 vote

Senate restores SS benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, reversing itself on one of the year's most controversial budget cuts, voted 95-0 yesterday to restore the minimum Social Security benefit of $122 a month for more than 2.5 million recipients.

The bill also is designed to shore up the sagging fund that pays for Social Security survivor and retirement benefits, in part by making sick pay, in many cases, subject to payroll taxes for the first six months a worker is off the job.

The measure cleared unanimously only after Republicans crushed a Democratic-led attempt to increase taxes on the oil industry by more than $14 billion and use the money for the giant federal pension system.

Congress, acting on Reagan's request, voted earlier this year to abolish the minimum Social Security benefit beginning next March. Democrats fought bitterly against the move at the time, but Senate Republicans used their new majority strength to force the change. The House later voted to restore the benefit for all three million current recipients. And last month, Reagan asked Congress to restore the benefit for most of them. Senate Democrats had tried unsuccessfully on several occasions to do just that.

The measure will now go to a conference committee where House and Senate negotiators will attempt to work out the differences in the two bills.

While final passage of the bill was a foregone conclusion, most of the debate centered on the proposal to raise taxes on the oil industry.

The vote was 65-30 to table, and thus kill, a proposal by Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., to repeal part of the "windfall profits" tax cut Congress gave the oil industry earlier this year. That cut was part of a bill providing a three-year reduction in personal income taxes.

Senate aides said they expected the bill to restore the minimum Social Security benefit and help shore up the fund that provides old age and survivor benefits would win final passage either late yesterday or today.

Eagleton's plan would have raised taxes on so-called newly discovered oil by an estimated $14.2 billion through 1990. The money would have gone into a new Social Security Reserve Trust Fund to provide a cushion for the financially troubled program.

"It is estimated that between 70 and 80 percent of this oil is produced by the top 50 oil companies, for whom the tax break is a pleasant, if gratuitous, bonanza," Eagleton said.

He also said his proposal was an attempt at beginning the "dismantling" of the tax bill passed earlier this year, which he described as "the worst legislative abomination in the history of the United States Senate."

U.S. sends military assistance to Sudan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States plans to send Sudan about 20 tanks, a dozen howitzers and two jet fighters before the end of this year to strengthen that country's defenses against threats from Libya, a senior defense official said Thursday.

This official, who asked that his name not be used, said, "We wish we could do a lot more than that" in the short term, but those weapons, plus some lesser equipment, would just about eat up the $100 million the Reagan administration has asked of Congress for military aid to Sudan.

"There is some symbolism" in these hurry-up deliveries, even in the relatively small numbers, the official said. He stressed that Sudan's leaders believe they must show that they are acting to defend the country from Libyan incursions.

He said there is fighting along the Sudanese border with Chad, where he estimated Libya has some 4,000 troops, and "absolute evidence" of Libyan air attacks on Sudanese villages.

Noting that there are some 13,000 Cubans and 1,400 Russians in Ethiopia along Sudan's eastern flank, as well as Libyans in Chad on the western side of the country, this official said "the most clear and present military danger at the moment lies in Sudan," although the United States also is concerned about possible Libyan threats to Egypt.

The M-60A3 tanks, 105mm artillery pieces and two-seater F-5F fighters will come out of U.S. military stocks. The number of Americans, all technical and logistics specialists, to be sent to Sudan with the equipment would be "fairly small," the official said. He did not say how small.

Cannetti wins Nobel prize

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Elias Canetti, a shy and reclusive Bulgarian-born writer whose works reflect themes of death and the Nazi regime he fled, won the 1981 Nobel Prize in literature Thursday.

The 76-year-old author of plays, novels and memoirs written in German was cited by the Swedish Academy "for writings marked by a broad outlook, a wealth of ideas and artistic power."

Canetti has been widely known for five decades in European literary circles but his translated works have sold only about 100,000 copies in the United States since the 1940s, according to his New York publisher, The Crossroad Publishing Company.

Publishers in London and West Germany said the soft-spoken, bespectacled author who "looks like Einstein with a great mane of white hair" shuns the limelight. He was notified of the award Thursday by his agent in London, John Wolfers. One report said he was at a Bavarian resort in West Germany with his wife, but he could not be reached there.

"I have contacted him and he asked me to keep my mouth shut, so I'm keeping my mouth shut," Wolfers said. "He is a very private man."

In contrast to the 1969 Nobel literature winner Samuel Beckett, Canetti plans to attend the award ceremonies Dec. 10 to pick up his $180,000 prize, his German publisher said.

Michael Samuel of the BBC's Bulgarian section said Canetti was so shy he refused to be interviewed. He described the author as "really more of a philosopher than a writer" who was strongly influenced by Franz Kafka. Samuel said Canetti was a prolific writer "at one time" but has not written anything in recent years.

Canetti, who lives in England and is a naturalized British subject, has spent time in Switzerland and Austria, where he learned German.

His literary background was formed in Vienna, then the capital city and a cultural haven of the dying Austro-Hungarian Empire, which also spawned such writers as Robert Musil and Sigmund Freud.

Canetti's breakthrough came in 1935 with the novel "Die Blendung" ("Auto-Da-Fe or The Tower of Babel"). One of his best-known works is a memoir of his youth — "Die Gerettete Zunge," translated into English as "The Tongue Set Free: Remembrance of a European Childhood" — which received special mention by the Swedish Academy.

Chrysler distributes bonuses

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. employees in the United States will find an extra $50 in their paychecks today, representing "goodwill bonuses" as part of a special profit-sharing benefit agreement between the company and the United Auto Workers union.

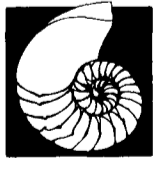

The bonuses, which will go to 80,000 hourly and salaried workers in the United States and Canada, will cost Chrysler about $4 million, the No. 3 auto-maker said.

Company and union officials also are ironing out the details of a special lottery to distribute 3,004 prizes to UAW members. The lottery and the bonuses will cost about $6 million.

The bonus and lottery package was negotiated as part of a profit-sharing program agreed on by Chrysler and the UAW in July to compensate UAW members for the wage and benefit concessions they made to help Chrysler win federal loan guarantees.

But the union pushed for the additional bonus and lottery package to help ease workers' anger over raises given to Chrysler executives earlier this year.

The profit-sharing program itself extends through Dec. 31, 1983, and will distribute among UAW members at Chrysler 15 percent of any Chrysler profits in excess of 10 percent of the company's net worth.

The New Establishment

When I was a young priest, there was a kind of poetry about faith that I believed to be literal truth. In the year before priestly ordination, when I was a subdeacon, I accepted the obligation of reciting daily the Roman Breviary. Each day, all of us who were in Holy Orders recited psalms, prayers and readings in the Latin language for an hour or more.

Saying the office, we were told, was the Lord's work; these Latin texts were the voice of God's Holy Spirit praying to Himself; be faithful to your office, and you'll always be a good priest. I believed what I was told without reservation. I tried never to be careless or bored by what I was doing, even when the meaning of the words was obscured by my inability to translate.

In 1956, the office was shortened; in the years during the Council it was temporarily revised, and later, it was revised into the form we have now. During the time of revision, we were allowed options: We could substitute other prayers for parts of the office, or we could read Scripture instead.

After a while, it wasn't clear to me — and to other priests, I think — what was expected of us. One fact became clear: Our daily obligation of prayer did not have to be glossed over by any romance of our singing lovesongs as the voice of the Paraclete honoring Himself.

Nowadays, I enjoy saying the office as a prayer of the Church, but the reality of what I am doing has been demythologized from the sublimities I believed in as a subdeacon.

As novices, we were taught a theology of the canonical vows of poverty, chastity and obedience, which we were choosing to accept for life. After Vatican II, we were told in retreats that the old theology of the vows was incorrect, based on misreadings of Scripture. But here, said the retreat master, was a new theology which would justify our choice of being poor, chaste and obedient men. The obligations didn't change; only the reasons for the obligations.

Fr. Robert Griffin

Letters to a Lonely God

Personally, I think that there never was a real theology of the vows, but only opinions which call themselves theology. I am celibate as a priest because the Church insists on celibacy as a condition of my ministry; and the Church, in its discipline, is both traditional and practical. My vows of obedience and poverty belong to the essence of a common lifestyle for those belonging to a religious community. There are arguments touching on holiness that make sense of the way community members live. I will not permit those arguments to bind my soul as though they were creeds.

To survive as a priest, it is necessary to maintain a sense of humor. Humor is a form of grace which probably should be treated as a footnote in solemn treatises dealing with the theological virtue of love. To laugh at yourself, when you are on the point of exploding with indignation and anger; to laugh at others, when they would bear down on you with an invoked orthodoxy about as intolerant as the Grand Inquisitor's: For such laughter, necessary to salvation, you need an inner strength of resistance as great as that of martyrs about to be disemboweled for their faith.

The laughter needed as sacramental should be neither cynical nor mocking nor derisive, coming, as it should, out of an amusement that is loving, tolerant and respectful. The people you are laughing at love the same things you love, and they labor in the cause of truth. But very plainly, in the renewed Church, heady with a sense of freedom, there has arisen a new breed of church person as solemnly pretentious as the layers spinning out legalisms in the old Roman Curia.

These church persons represent to me the figure of the New Establishment. I cannot take them as seriously as they take themselves, because I've already lived through it once. Whatever they tell me, I've been there before.

The clerics of the New Establishment are beautiful in their sincerity. I am happy to learn from their bright, articulate scholarship. I wish they could be sympathetic with my personal sense of deja vu.

I go into the chapel to say Mass. I can't find the candles which belong on the altar, and I'm left with the strong impression they've been hidden. Sensing there is a message here for me, I ask questions of an informed priest.

"Nothing should be on the Eucharistic table but the bread and wine for the Lord's Supper," he said. "The candles should be free-standing, off the altar and on the floor."

It was obvious to both of us that I had not been doing my homework.

"If you read the documents from the Bishops' Committee on Liturgy," he said, "you'd know these things."

"I think I have a copy," I said. "I didn't look at it too closely."

"The Bishops' Committee on Liturgy," he said, "is the voice of the American Presbyterate."

He was right to be firm. Some of us old dinosaurs need to be rebuked. It is a grave fault in us to be inattentive to the voice of the American Presbyterate.

"Next time," I said, in tones as chastened as I could make them, "don't hide things on me. I'm ignorant, but I'm always ready to learn."

When I was a young priest, if there were not two lighted candles on the altar, the celebrant was guilty of sin. Wapelhorst and Fortescue, respected liturgists, said so. Noldin and Jone, widely read moralists, concurred. If neither candle was lit, the sin was mortal; if only one candle was lit, the sin was venial. I remember feeling anxious when the wind played tricks on the altar.

Actions — in liturgy or living — are as important as the truth they express. Symbols carry the meanings we assign them. In a community of worship, it is necessary to agree on our symbols and sacred actions. But it is not kind to blast an old nun placing flowers near the tabernacle with the thundering voice of the American presbyterate. The new orthodoxy needs to be gentle with the old orthodoxy, and that kind of gentleness, I think, is called tolerance.

The Church today is beautiful, as always, but you have to take it with a grain of salt. All we can see of the Church is its Human Element. Everything else are signs signifying a mystery. Some of the Human Element, hearing commandments from an inner Sinai and smashing altars and icons on the way down the mountain, has to justify itself in the name of Authority which puts an end to discussion.

Human Elements constantly require redemption. Laughter can be redemptive. It is healthy for establishments to laugh at themselves. All of us are such funny, funny people. Some seminarians were divided in their opinions as to whether Monday should be observed as a meatless day at the seminary table. "It's the least we can do," some said, "to show our solidarity with the hungry people in the Third World." Others said, "No, abstinence from meat should be a private choice; maybe everyone could do it together every other Wednesday."

An old priest asked: "Whatever happened to Fridays and the fast days of Lent?"

It was hard for Catholics to keep the discipline, he was told. Anyway, that was institutional. But certainly, it was only the selfish people who wouldn't go meatless on a Monday or an occasional Wednesday?

Some of us old dogs think it's very funny when we find ourselves trying to learn new tricks. We hope we are not the only ones laughing in these days of the New Establishment.

The Beach Boys: Remarks of a Rebel

I haven't been to a rock concert in years. But then this wasn't exactly a rock concert. My image of a rock concert stretches from my own experiences in junior high and high school, playing for dances in local recreation halls and gyms, to early concerts by Bob Dylan and The Rolling Stones, to the psychedelic era at San Francisco's Fillmore and Winterland ballrooms, to what everyone at the time felt was the demise of Rock and Roll at the lethal Alhambra concert. This wide spectrum of musical events paralleled the course of my adolescence in the '60s: the embarrassing beginnings, the prophetic promise, the ecstatic fruition and the abrupt awakening.

These concerts and the era for which they spoke so forcefully had a common emotional and social tenor: rebellion.

Rebellion, defiance, exclusion of The Establishment: groups like The Rolling Stones, The Beach Boys and The Beatles symbolized these attitudes. But the times have changed and we, the musicians and their audience, have aged. Nothing reminds me more starkly how the times have changed than my recent conferences with freshmen, nearly all of whom tell me they plan to enroll in the College of Business.

Likewise, the concert last Friday night by The Beach Boys revealed something new to me about the process of maturation.

The performance was, in a curious way, an authentic one — though not such as would have satisfied a '60s audience. Although The Beach Boys sang their famous songs about cars and surfboards and "California Girls," about adolescent rebellion and the search for the identity, one could hardly call the rendition of these songs of 15 to 20 years ago genuine "self-expression." They were acting. No one believed that Mike Love or Bruce Johnston, through their voices, their dancing or their comic acrobatics, portrayed their current life or their current values: it was make-believe, a kind of theatre.

So in one sense the audience lost an element of urgency, of self-assertive necessity in the music, such as was provided in less-memorable contrast by the opening group, Red Ryder. On the other hand, what was gained, and what obviously drew this extremely diverse crowd of ND students, South Bend teenagers, the many of us from The Beach Boys' generation, and even a few white-haired matrons such as the enthusiastic grandmother I had the privilege of accompanying, was the universality which the music has come to acquire over the years. This was not, in my sense of it, a Rock concert; this was a Folk Music concert. The audience knew the songs as well as the performers did and came to sing along. The ambiance of the occasion was one of fun and togetherness, fostered mutually by the crowd and the musicians. The content of the songs was mythical, no longer topical to those who sang it or those who listened and sang along so far away from a California summer. A remarkable transformation has occurred in this music, one of which The Beach Boys are aware: from songs about a very particular time, place and set of attitudes, arrayed in seductive harmonies, these songs have become true folk music, their melodies impressed upon our memories and their words now representing events in the realm of legend.

I can remember clearly the first Beach Boys record, because it was the first album I ever bought. It was a seventh grader in Southern California and had strongly mixed feelings about The Beach Boys. I was drawn to their music and yet I ridiculed it. The Beach Boys were the epitome of surfing and the surfers were the "in crowd," with a macho status beyond even that of football players. I wanted that status but I wanted it on my own terms; and so The Beach Boys came to represent a prestige I both wished for and disdained.

Last Friday night I heard The Beach Boys in person for the first time; I was heartened to realize how, through the sheer endurance of these songs and the continuing good-natured delivery of them by the singers, my own early conflicts, rebellions and attempts to find a true identity had been transmuted into a lasting expression of an important stage in the universal process of maturation.

yards and two touchdowns passing. ND went on to a 11-1 record and another National Championship.

November 25, 1978, at LA — USC 27, ND 25:

USC led 17-3 at halftime and 24-6 at the end of the third quarter. That's when the action started. On Notre Dame's first possession of the fourth quarter, Montana threw a 57-yard pass to Kris Haines for a touchdown to make it 24-12. With seven minutes left, Notre Dame embarked on a 98-yard scoring drive aided by passes to Haines, Dean Maszta and Ken MacAfee, to close the deficit to 24-19. The defense held and ND regained the ball on its own 43 with 1:35 left. A long pass to Vagas Ferguson and an interference call got the ball to the 12-yard line. From there, Montana found Pete Holohan in the end zone to give the Irish a 25-24 lead with only 46 seconds left. The Trojans took to the air and with 19 seconds left completed a 35-yard pass to the ND 24. One more play and a time out set up a 37-yard field goal with two seconds left. After an incredible fourth quarter and a marvelous performance by both clubs, USC won 27-25.

Pozderac steady amidst changes

By CHUCK GREENE
Sports Writer

As the USC game grows ever closer, it becomes increasingly apparent that the play of the Irish offense must improve for Notre Dame to have any chance of winning. One of the crucial areas that will be tested against the Trojans is the offensive line, led by senior Phil Pozderac.

Pozderac, a 6-9, 260-pound tackle, has not played as well as he expected to so far this season. "Like everyone else, I'm still trying to master this new offense," he says. "Of course, I know all of my blocking assignments by now, but there are so many little things that I'm just starting to realize this offense can accomplish."

Coming to Notre Dame out of Garfield Heights, Ohio, Pozderac has seen a lot of change in his four seasons here. "I guess I've learned to deal with different people more than anything else," says the big senior. "Along with learning the offense, which was challenging enough, I had to play for different line coaches in my first two seasons."

"Then, when I finally mastered the offense and the different coaches, I had only last season in that system. Coach (Gerry) Faust came in and it was like starting all over again." Also, Pozderac has made the change from playing behind all-American Tim Foley his first two seasons here to starting the past two seasons.

This season's early problems seem to baffle Pozderac just as they do the rest of the team. As he puts it, "After the third game (Michigan State), I thought that we finally had things together, but we don't. I think the complexities of the offense that are just starting to be understood are a big part of the problem, but other than that, I can't seem to put my finger on it."

Phil Pozderac

Pozderac also expressed his feeling that Coach Faust is putting a lot of unnecessary pressure on himself because he wants to do well. "He is trying to do to many things at one time," Pozderac says, "but as he begins to understand college football more and more, his mistakes will become fewer and fewer.

"It's so hard to say anything bad about him, he's such a nice guy."

As far as the USC game is concerned, Pozderac says not to count the Irish out just yet. The rivalry itself will make it close, according to Phil, who also says, "We have the personnel to beat them, but we'll have to play ball-control offense, keeping our defense off the field, to be successful."

The future could bring many different things for Phil Pozderac, but right now it looks like pro football is a strong possibility. "The pros like my size, and I'd like to play professionally," he says. "One of my weaknesses is the fact that scouts think I'm not strong enough, but that doesn't worry me much, because I'll get stronger."

Before the pros can have Pozderac, he has to finish his career here first. Notre Dame fans will see next weekend how accurate his predictions for USC are, but for now they hope that Phil and the offense can get it together and play as well as it is able to.

NL Championship moves to Montreal

MONTREAL (AP) — A remarkable pitching performance by Ray Burris may have removed the underdog label from the Montreal Expos as they return home for tonight's third game of the National League Championship Series against the Los Angeles Dodgers.

In fact, the Expos might be favored over the veteran-laden Dodgers going into Friday night's contest in Olympic Stadium.

The best-of-five series stands tied at one game apiece with all the future action in Montreal, where the cool weather might work to the advantage of the Expos. They boast the league's best home record of 38-18 this season.

Manager Jim Fanning, more than pleased with the 3-0 victory that the 31-year-old Burris posted in Game Two Wednesday night, said, "If we had left Los Angeles any worse than 1-1, our backs would be fully against the wall."

Now, he has ace Steve Rogers to pitch against Jerry Reuss of the Dodgers in the third game, scheduled to start at 8:20 p.m. EDT.

Rogers beat the Philadelphia Phillies twice in the NL East Division championships, while the left-handed Reuss won the final game of the West playoffs against Houston to put the Dodgers into this league title set.

Rookie left fielder Tim Raines, who hit safely three times in Wednesday night's game, commented, "I've seen Reuss just once and I think I had three hits off him."

"I don't think cold weather would have any effect on us. We've been playing there all year. I think we've got an advantage because we've been playing in Montreal."

Raines, who hit .304 during the strike-restricted regular season with 71 stolen bases, was activated for the Championship Series having recovered from a broken hand.

Manager Tommy Lasorda of the Dodgers didn't think any weather conditions would affect his club.

"We weren't able to generate any offense in that second game and I've never seen Burris pitch that well."

Nobody could remember when the veteran right-hander had last thrown a nine-inning shutout. Searching the record books, it was determined he last did it with the Chicago Cubs against Houston on May 3, 1977.

Losing pitcher Fernando Valenzuela, in his rookie season, had led the National League with eight shutouts, but he commented, "Nobody can win them all."

General manager

Green says 'yes' to Cub post

CHICAGO (AP) — Dallas Green, who managed the Philadelphia Phillies to their first world championship in 1980, officially became general manager and executive vice president of the Chicago Cubs Thursday.

Green, who had been groomed for the same position with the Phillies, was introduced by Andrew J. McKenna, chairman and chief executive officer of the Cubs since they were purchased by Tribune Co. from William Wrigley last summer.

"Green's background is consistent with the criteria established for the job he is assuming," said McKenna. "It was considered important that the candidate have a background in player development and come from a winning organization. Green will have complete authority in the operation of the club."

Terms of Green's contract or its length were not revealed, but it was believed to be long term and lucrative.

Green, 47, originally turned down the Cub offer but said that "Andy was very persistent."

"I'm no Messiah but I guarantee nobody's going to outwork us," said Green. "It's intriguing and exciting. If I didn't think I could do the job, I wouldn't be here today."

Green, who has been in the Phillies organization for 27 years, said there were similarities between the Cubs of today and the Phillies of 1972 who finished 33 games behind the leader.

"This is a big moment in my life and, hopefully, a big moment in Cub history," said Green, who left his options open as to hiring a field manager. Rumor has it Lee Elia, his third base coach at Philadelphia, will get the job currently held by Joey Amalfitano.

"I want to talk to Joey face to face first and then I'll make my decision," said Green, who expects to meet with Amalfitano early next week.

Green said it was a very difficult decision for him to leave the Phillies, who are run by General Manager Paul Owens and have been put up for sale by owner Ruly Carpenter.

"I have sincere appreciation for what Ruly has done for me and my family," said Green, "and Paul Owens and I grew up together. But I have to close my era with the Phillies and go on with the Cubs."

Green fielded questions about free agents, lights in Wrigley Field, possible trades and bringing home-run hitters to the cozy ballpark.

"The free-agent era is here and you have to live with it," said Green.

"I'm not ruling out free agents but the money is available. That you can't win playing all day games is an interesting theory. Lights are not a first priority right now, other things are more important. I have a strong theory that if you are in decent shape you can handle July and August playing day games."

"Bill Buckner is not going anywhere if I can help it. Everyone loves home runs but you still have to play the game. We want athletes who can do a lot of things and not wait for home runs, or a situation where if there are no home runs you lose ball games."

... Yanks

Bob Watson led off the inning, and his fly ball to the wall in right field may have been an omen. Keough had thrown 70 pitches through four innings, and nothing looked easy for the A's right-hander. The next batter, Rick Cerone, grounded to third, and that gave Randolph his opportunity.

He had not hit a home run since April 28, but this one more than made up for it.

Righetti also struggled in the early going as the A's had runners in scoring position in each of the first three innings. But he settled down, retiring the final seven batters he faced before he was lifted in favor of Davis.

Davis, who struck out three in 1 1/3 innings of relief in Game One of this series, retired six straight before Gossage came on in the ninth.

In his stint, Righetti struck out four and walked two, yielding four singles. His worst inning was the second, when he allowed consecutive one-out singles to Kelvin

Moore and Dave McKay. But he struck out Jeff Newman, and Rob Picciolo grounded into an inning-ending forceout, as Oakland's best threat went by the boards.

It was never, by any means, a pitchers duel, and the drama of this final game of the series was diminished even further by the absence of the man who calls himself "the straw that stirs the drink," the Yankees' Reggie Jackson.

Jackson was scratched from the starting lineup because of an injury he sustained merely by running onto the field in Wednesday afternoon's game at Yankee Stadium. Jackson strained the muscle in his left calf, apparently just by stepping on it wrong and he felt soreness in it again Thursday.

In the end, it was the Yankees, the big kid on the block, who prevailed, the triumph of Bully Ball over Billy Ball. Now, the Yankees await the winner of the Montreal-Los Angeles series, which resumes Friday night in Montreal tied at one victory apiece.

... Zavagnin

Zavagnin is more than ready to meet the challenge.

"They're powerful, there's no doubt about that," he says. "I don't think they'll fool around with the pass too much, either. They'll take it right to us."

"It's going to be an all-out battle in the trenches. I think if we can control both lines of scrimmage that we have an excellent chance of beating USC."

Contrary to the consensus of the student body, Zavagnin feels that this season can be salvaged. "I'm hoping for a six-game winning streak," he says, "and if we're invited to a bowl game, a seven-game winning streak. We have the talent, that's for sure, but it'll be tough since we play three more teams (USC, Penn State and Miami, Fla.) that are in the top 20."

"We're a much better team than we've been showing lately. And I think we'll show everybody just how good we really are, beginning next Saturday."

Fall baseball

Irish impress with 9-3 slate

By TIM LARKIN
Sports Writer

One would think a 9-3 record would have most teams truly excited about their performance. Notre Dame's baseball team posted that mark in its fall exhibition season, but the players aren't reacting with joy, as they look forward to a winter's preparation for the spring season.

"On the last day I found that the players weren't satisfied with the season," says Coach Larry Gallo. "The kids expect to win now and they realize that they still have things to work on. But with a 9-3 record, I have to be happy."

Gallo is certainly satisfied after accomplishing what he wanted to do this fall. He gave the freshmen some playing time so they won't be foreign to it next spring, and tried a lot of players at different positions so he knows what he's got to work with in the spring season.

Also, Gallo's veteran players were able to work on their hitting in these exhibition games. Henry Valenzuela, who will supply power to the offense, had an excellent fall, batting .472, driving in 17 runs and hitting four home runs. Just behind him was Rick Chryst with a .425 average. Chuck Tasch, who will be expected to provide some punch in the fifth spot next spring, compiled a .324 clip.

"I'm confident that we're going to hit," says Gallo, "but I try to stress to the players that defense and pitching will win ball games."

With the loss of Jim Montagano, Notre Dame's offense will be less explosive, so this fall Gallo displayed his own brand of Oakland's patented "Billy Ball." In a game when the Irish fell behind 5-0 in the first inning, Gallo still had his players stealing. He told them that unless their opponent can stop them, he's not going to divert from his gameplan.

Gallo is filling the hole behind the plate created by the loss of Montagano with three players. Phil Dingle (.300 average) and Tim Ambrey (.200 average) will be his mainstays, plus he has freshman Dave Clark, who went one-for-three at the plate. "I feel confident at that position and I think we're stronger defensively," says Gallo.

Another freshman Gallo is pleased with is Henry Lange. Lange can play both infield and outfield, and although he only had a couple of hits in eight at-bats, he, too, drew praise from his coach: "He's come along quite well," Gallo says, "and I know he'll make a valuable contribution to our team."

Playing the roles of Gallo's top starters will be Steve Whitmyer and Bill Matre. Whitmyer had a 2-1 record this fall with a deceiving 7.20 ERA. In the game against Xavier, he gave up six runs in three innings in his only poor outing of the fall. Matre was a perfect 3-0 with a respectable 3.45 ERA. The bright spot on the Irish pitching staff was freshman Bob "Buster" Lopes, who had a 1-0 record with a sparkling 1.12 ERA in eight innings pitched.

"He (Lopes) is really going to help us," says Gallo, "One thing that impresses me and the players is that he's mature and has composure, and he's only 17 years old."

"I didn't have any major disappointments this fall," Gallo continues, "just minor ones that if we don't nip them in the bud, they would become enormous in the spring. We had some mental lapses, but I'm not too concerned since it's a common thing when you only play on weekends."

If mental mistakes were the only problems Gallo had this fall, he must be very satisfied with his team. He'll be even more content if his team can continue these good fortunes into the 1982 spring season.

Bethel defeats St. Mary's

By MARY SIEGER
Sports Writer

Last night in the Angela Athletic Facility, the Saint Mary's volleyball team was defeated by Bethel College by scores of 8-15, 9-15, 15-13, 15-4 and 14-16. The team now has a 6-6 record so far this season.

One of the reasons for last night's disappointing performance was inconsistency. "We hit the ball out of bounds 17 times while our opponent had the serve," comments Head Coach Erin Murphy. This means that the team gave the Pilots 17 points simply by hitting it out of bounds.

Despite the team's loss, junior Heidi Krumdieck had her best game of the season while teammate Loret Haney had her best defensive game ever.

This weekend the team travels to Illinois Benedictine College for a tournament. "We need to work on our hitting and on our defensive positioning before the tournament," Murphy says.

Murphy is still optimistic about the rest of the season. "Our standings in the conference are still good," she says, "and that's the most important thing."

Both Murphy and the team are looking forward to this weekend's tournament because she hopes that it will pull the team out of its losing streak. "This is the finest team we've ever had, and the sooner the players begin believing that, then the sooner we will be on a winning track," adds Murphy.

Today in History

Today's highlight in history:
 In 1978, Polish Cardinal Karol Wojtyla was elected pope. He took the name of John Paul II.
 On this day:
 In 1756, British forces under Robert Clive marched against the Nawab of Bengal, India.
 In 1793, Marie Antoinette of France was beheaded.
 In 1941, the Germans captured Odessa in the Soviet Union in World War II.
 And in 1970, Anwar Sadat became president of Egypt, succeeding the late Gamal Abdel Nasser.

At linebacker

Zavagnin does job quietly

By CHRIS NEEDLES
Sports Writer

At times, he may feel like he is a molehill next to a mountain. But Mark Zavagnin takes it all in stride.

Zavagnin is Notre Dame's weakside linebacker, which of course places him right next to all-American middle linebacker Bob Crable. So while the outgoing Crable grabs all the headlines, and deservedly so, for his performances, Zavagnin just goes about his business of being a steady, solid linebacker.

"He (Crable) is the all-American," says Zavagnin, "and it's only right that he gets all the attention he does. But I don't feel frustrated.

"I learn a lot by playing next to Bob. He'll point out things that I do wrong and we try to correct them. And a lot of times, I return the favor."

But, as most everything so far this season has gone sour for the Irish, so too has it been a downer for Mark Zavagnin. Although the junior from Evergreen Park, Ill., has played well in the first five contests, he has only received recognition for one performance — and that was negative!

Despite performing admirably so far, Zavagnin is remembered today only for one seemingly insignificant play in the Purdue game. Of course, Notre Dame fans all remember it like it was last evening's nightmare.

The Boilermakers were moving the ball down the field in the game's final minute, when quarterback Scott Campbell went back to throw. But he threw slightly behind his intended receiver, and Zavagnin made a great play to cut in front of the Purdue player, intercept the pass, and ensure Notre Dame's 14-7 victory. Unfortunately, Mark forgot one thing.

The ball.

One play later, Purdue was on the Irish one-yard line, setting up for the eventual killing, a 15-14 upset. Problem was, despite Notre Dame's inefficient offense that day and the breakdown of the secondary in the final two minutes, many "fans" unfairly blamed Zavagnin for the loss because of the dropped interception.

"It really bothered me personally," says Zavagnin now. "I mean, it (the interception) could have turned the game completely around. But I guess it just wasn't meant to be."

Zavagnin has rebounded quite well from the unwarranted criticism. Last Saturday against Florida State, he had his best day as a Notre Dame athlete, recording 13 tackles (two of them for losses) and intercepting two passes, returning one for 27 yards to set up Notre Dame's second field goal at the start of the third quarter.

"I was surprised at how quick I was able to read and react to their (Florida State's) plays," Zavagnin says. "On that second interception, I was surprised that he (FSU quarterback Rick Stockstill) even threw it — I guess he never saw me coming. "That one I didn't drop."

Once again, though, Zavagnin's performance was overshadowed by another standout game turned in by Crable, who recorded 19 tackles, and also by the shock present in the aftermath of Notre Dame's third loss in five games. But Zavagnin accepts the lack of recognition as a part of living next door to an all-American.

"He (Crable) deserves all the recognition he gets," says Zavagnin. "I'm not impressed, really, if I get a bunch of newspaper articles and stuff done on me.

"For me, as long as I feel I've done my best, and my family and friends recognize that, that's all I really care about."

After Saturday's game, Zavagnin had nothing but respect for Florida State. "I don't think I've ever seen a team get their receivers out into their patterns faster," he said. "I think the key (to the game) was in the second half when we were in a prevent defense and they just ran the ball. We played with a lot of intensity in the first half, but didn't keep it up."

But Zavagnin is not looking back, for one week from tomorrow, Southern California invades Notre Dame Stadium. The Trojans, who feature Heisman Trophy candidate Marcus Allen, are quite possibly the best team the Irish will face in this season's sadistic schedule. And

ND-USC rivalry enters 53rd year

By MARK ROLFES
Sports Writer

One week from tomorrow, Notre Dame meets the Trojans of Southern California for the 53rd time. The two teams have had an intense rivalry since 1926, the year of the first game between the two schools. They have played each other every year since then, except for the war years 1943-1945.

Notre Dame leads the series, 27-21-4, yet have only won 2 of the last 14 contests. The last three times ND has beaten USC, the Irish have won National Championships (which is not a good omen for this year's game).

Here is a list of what may be the ten best contests between ND and USC:

December 4, 1926, at Los Angeles — ND 13, USC 12:

In the first meeting ever between the two, in front of 80,000 in the L.A. Coliseum, Notre Dame came from behind to score a touchdown in the final minute of the game. USC took a 12-7 lead in the fourth quarter. ND quarterback Charles Riley had not been moving the Irish offense, so with six minutes left, Coach Knute Rockne put in Art "Petit" Parisen, a 150-pound quarterback who had not played in weeks. Two long passes to freshman John Niemas gave the Irish a touchdown with only a minute left and the victory.

November 26, 1927, at Soldier Field, Chicago — ND 7, USC 6:

Soldier Field was packed with 120,000 fans who saw the Irish win an exciting, defensive battle. A wide open first quarter produced all of the scoring, with Charley Riley connecting to Ray Dahman on a 24-yard pass for the decisive score. The rest of the game saw a number of USC opportunities, all of which were terminated by turnovers and a tough ND defense.

December 6, 1930, at LA — ND 27, USC 0:

The year 1930 represented a new football stadium and Knute Rockne's last team. ND and USC came into the game as the top two teams in the country. Against a USC team considered by many to be the strongest team in its history, in Rockne's last game as coach, a game the Irish supposedly could not win, perfect execution and all-around excellence gave the Irish a decisive 27-0 win. Both Notre Dame's offense and defense were overpowering, as it outgained USC, 433 yards to 140.

November 21, 1931, at Notre Dame — USC 16 ND 14:

At the end of the third quarter, ND held a 14-0 lead. USC scored early in the fourth quarter, but missed the extra point. Holding the Irish on their next possession, the Trojans regained the ball and marched 57 yards for another score. The score now 14-13, USC got the ball again with three minutes to play. A 40-yard pass set up a 24-yard field goal with less than a minute left to give USC a thrilling 16-14 win.

December 6, 1947, at LA — ND 38, USC 7:

For the first time, both teams came into the game undefeated. Frank Leahy's Irish had a 10-7 halftime lead, but in the second half, they were on fire. Their first play was a 76-yard touchdown run by Emil Sitko, ND's second leading all-time rusher. Their next possession was a 54-yard touchdown drive. Bob Livingstone later had a 92-yard run, longest run from scrimmage in Notre Dame history. The victory gave ND the National Championship.

December 4, 1948, at LA — ND 14, USC 14:

With only three minutes left, USC took a 14-7 lead, but Billy Gay ran back the ensuing kickoff 87 yards for the Irish, setting up an Emil Sitko touchdown. The Notre Dame defense played very well, holding USC to only 14 points despite six fumbles by the Irish offense.

November 26, 1966, at LA — ND 51, USC 0:

Coming off the "game of the century" against Michigan State (a 10-10 tie), the Irish clinched a National Championship by crushing USC, 51-0, the biggest win by either team in the history of the series. Led by all-Americans Alan Page and Nick Eddy and quarterback Coley O'Brien, the 9-0-1 Irish dominated every facet of the game.

October 27, 1973, at ND — ND 23, USC 14:

Both teams went into the game undefeated as Notre Dame ended USC's 23-game unbeaten streak, the first Irish win in the series since 1966. This USC team featured Pat Haden, Lynn Swann and Anthony Davis. The Irish led 13-7 at halftime and on their first play of the second half, Eric Penick ran 85 yards for a touchdown. Three field goals by Bob Thomas clinched the win for Notre Dame, who went on to a Sugar Bowl win over Alabama and a perfect 11-0 National Championship season.

October 22, 1977, at ND — ND 49, USC 19:

In the now-famous "green jersey" game, Dan Devine's fired up squad whipped a strong Trojan team. Jerome Heavens and Vagas Ferguson led the Notre Dame backfield and Joe Montana was 13-for-24 for 167

Yanks win, go to Series--again

OAKLAND (AP) — Willie Randolph snapped a scoreless tie with a two-out homer in the sixth inning and the New York Yankees captured their 33rd American League pennant by beating the Oakland A's 4-0 Thursday night to complete a three-game sweep of the league championship series.

Graig Nettles, who already had driven in six runs in the first two games of the series, ripped a two-out three-run double over the head of centerfielder Rick Bosetti in the ninth inning to put an end to the 1981 story of the upstart A's.

Dave Righetti, the Yankees 22-year-old rookie left-hander, held Oakland scoreless through six innings, but after throwing 112 pitches, he was replaced by Ron Davis and then Goose Gossage, who finished up for the World Series-bound Yankees. In all, they held the A's to five hits.

Former Yankee manager and player Billy Martin's A's could score only four runs in three games against New York while the Yankees scored 20.

New York stranded nine runners through the first five innings, which took two hours to play. Finally, Randolph ended the tension by picking on a 1-0 delivery by Matt Keough that he lofted high over the left field wall for his first home run since April and his first in post-season play since 1977.

New York won the first two games of the AL Championship Series at Yankee Stadium by scores of 3-1 and 13-3, setting playoff records with their run total and 19 hits in the second game. It looked like they were on their way to another rout as Keough struggled, then wriggled from one jam after another before finally yielding to one of the Yankees' least potent bats.

A woeful batting slump down the stretch had dropped Randolph from his normal leadoff spot to ninth in the New York order. He came into the game hitting just .214, on 6-for-28, through seven playoff games.

In the sixth, though, he finally broke out, sending the Yankees in quest of their 23rd World Series championship.
