Dirty filter delays space shuttle launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A clogged filter, never refurbished after Columbia's first mission in spring, shattered a near-flawless countdown yesterday, grounding the shuttle for two days — or longer.

"We're looking at something like Friday. Or Saturday, or Sunday or Monday," said flight director Neil Hutchinson. Bill Jones, the astronaut's trainer, said the delay may be long enough that Joe Engle and Richard Truly would return for rest at home base in Houston.

The decision to scrub came with liftoff 31 seconds away.

Eager to make their first tour of space, Engle and Truly climbed instead from the cockpit, stiff from nearly five hours strapped knees-up in their flight couches. They managed a wry smile.

The technical problem was with two Auxiliary Power Units — devices that are crucial to Columbia's guidance. Clogged APU filters had been untouched since the shuttle landed after its debut flight in April. NASA's experts thought they didn't need maintenance.

The scrub sequence was almost the same as April's first launch attempt. There the countdown clock stood at nine minutes when a computer anomaly caused a scrub. The shuttle lifted off two days later for the first flight of the world's only reusable spaceship.

Another attempt at Launch II for Columbia cannot be made until Friday since it takes at least 48 hours to unload and reload the ship's half million gallons of liquid oxygen and liquid hydrogen.

"We still have a need to understand the problem," said NASA spokesman Hugh Harris. "At the present time, there has been no determination made as to how long it might take to fix."

"The problem" was in two of three Auxiliary Power Units - APUs. Experts said hydrazine fuel leaked into the APU gear boxes and mixed with a lubricant, creating extra-high pressure and forced the scrub.

In essence, technicians will do what motorists have to have done to keep their cars going. They'll change the oil and filter, and if necessary flush out the system. The APUs even resemble a power steering pump. The turbine-driven units generate the mechanical power to a pump that produces pressure for the hydraulic system which provides the muscle to swivel the main engines on liftoff and move the wing surfaces for landing.

"It's going to take time to get the filters out of the APU's and purge them and clean them and bring them back on line," Hutchinson said in Houston mission control. He said he guessed all would have gone OK if technicians hadn't seen the pressure and launched anyway.

The major worry for yesterday's launch had been the weather which had been marginal all week. But at the scheduled 7:30 a.m. liftoff time there was no rain, there was little wind, and — though heavy clouds blanketed the sky — there was sufficient visibility.

Forecasters said conditions will deteriorate in coming days. And, almost as proof, heavy rain pelted the shuttle in early afternoon.

Paul and Gladys Davis of Wildwood, Fla., left, were among the first to arrive at space shuttle view sites near Cape Canaveral in anticipation of the shuttle's launch. The flight was scrapped 31 seconds before liftoff when a mechanical problem was discovered, and the Davises went home disappointed. (AP photo)

Strip search

SMC students sue for $140,000

3By BOB VONDERHEIDE
Staff Reporter

Seven Saint Mary's students filed a suit in U.S. District Court last week seeking more than $140,000 from the city of South Bend for damages suffered in a strip search of the women following their arrest last January for underage drinking.

The trial on the suit, however, isn't likely to begin until at least next spring, according to the women's attorney Michael Cotter.

The complaint states that the women "suffered serious emotional distress, trauma, public humiliation and embarrassment" as a result of the strip search.

Each woman is demanding $10,000 or more in compensatory damages, more than $10,000 in punitive damages, attorney fees and court costs.

The women are Brigid Streb, Patricia Brandy, Laura Potts, Colleen Rooney, Tricia Wrenn, Mary Muldoon and Eileen Heidkamp.

Kyle Woodward is the only woman arrested who is not joining the suit.

The arrest occurred Jan. 30, 1981 at Corby's Tavern, 1026 Corby Boulevard. The eight Saint Mary's women, then aged 19 and 20, were taken by police to the South Bend Police Department City Jail for booking, processing and incarceration. During processing, a female corrections officer strip searched the students.

The complaint says the actions of the police that night "constitute an intentional infliction of emotional distress, negligence, gross negligence under the laws...."

"I think my rights have been violated," said Heidkamp. "I'd really rather not discuss it."

None of the other girls contacted by The Observer would comment.

Cop waits for woman nemesis

By MICHAEL BEZDEK
Associated Press Writer

WEST TRENTON, New Jersey — Lt. Peter Coughlin has worked 26 years for the State Police and says he might retire were it not for a woman he is particularly keen to meet.

Coughlin, 50, has spent two years trying to find Joanne Chesimard, a.k.a. Assata Shakur, New Jersey's most wanted fugitive and a suspected leader of the Black Liberation Army.

"I can retire right now, but I don't want to until we get her," Coughlin said. "It gets to be a personal thing after a couple of years."

Chesimard was convicted of killing a state trooper in 1973, and she escaped from the Correctional Institution for Women at Clinton two years ago last Monday.

Her escape came about a year after establishment of the state police Fugitive Unit, which Coughlin heads.

People who make Coughlin's quarterly "12 Most Wanted" list are considered the most dangerous of some 800 New Jersey convicted or suspected criminals on the lam.

But of them all, Bronx-born Joanne Deborah Byron Chesimard has proven the most elusive. She remains the one Coughlin said he "would most definitely like to meet."

Until recently, Coughlin said his "best information" was that Chesimard was somewhere in California. He has maintained for years that she has been waging a small war on police, and evidence is now mounting to support his claim.

Scores of clues have indicated there may be a connection between Chesimard and the recent $1.6 million robbery of a Brink's truck during which two Nyack, N.Y., police officers and a Brink's guard were slain and three members of the radical Weather Underground were apprehended.

Four suspects in the case are believed to have ties to the BLA, including Anthony Laborde and Marilyn Buck, both still at large and both believed by authorities to have aided Chesimard's escape.

Laborde is a co-suspect with James Dixon York of Linden, N.J., in a New York shootout several months ago during which one policeman was slain and another wounded, Coughlin said.

York, who was captured and charged with the police shootings shortly after he was added to New Jersey's most wanted list, is also suspected of being one of the five who aided Chesimard's escape Coughlin said.

Coughlin's search for Chesimard has been made more difficult because while the general public knows little of behind-the-scenes police work, Chesimard knows a great deal.

While she was in prison, she used the Freedom of Information Act to obtain more than 1,700 pages of FBI documents concerning her case, including details of police investigations.

Coughlin said the search is also hampered by the network of radicals believed to have aided her flight and by the fact that one of the suspects at large in the Brink's case has been identified as a "Chesimard look-a-like."

"If one-tenth of the reports we get are correct, she's been all over the place in the last couple of years," he said. "They want to make a heroine out of her."

But among state troopers, she is no heroine. Indeed,

Women charge that Church discriminates

By Michael Wilkins
News Staff

The role of women in the Church and the changing views on this issue were discussed last night by Sr. Marietta Starrie in a lecture given in the Hayes-Healy Auditorium.

Starrie dealt with the differences between the theoretical role of women in the Church and the actual role they play within its structure. She stated that though Vatican II stressed the equality of men and women, the Church does not practice this claim within its own structure.

Starrie sighted several examples of discrimination against women within the official life of the Church. All women are laywomen in the official eyes of the Church by the fact that they can not be ordained and therefore can not serve in the Church hierarchy, Starrie said.

Other examples Starrie cited include the restrictions placed on women on proclaiming the Gospel and delivering the homily at Mass.

Women are not permitted to receive more than six sacraments and are allowed to administer only the sacrament of baptism.

Starrie feels that women are forced into passive participation in the Church and tend to experience themselves as lesser in holiness. "To the very church into which we were baptized, we are stepsisters, whose presence and whose views still cause embarrassment to some of our brothers in Christ," Starrie said.

Other denominations have ordained women into their churches, at least in theory, Starrie said, but even these advancements have not necessarily helped to reduce the sexism within their churches.

The change from within that has been attempted in many of these

South Bend Police said test results from the FBI crime lab may be completed by the end of the week, furthering the investigation into a hit-and-run accident October 12 that injured a visiting Notre Dame graduate student. Captain Thomas Gargis of the South Bend police traffic division said parts of the bicycle ridden by the student and sections of a vehicle impounded in connection with the accident are being analyzed at the FBI lab in comparison testing. Gargis said results of the tests are expected "in the near future, maybe yet this week." Catherine Campbell, a 25-year-old graduate student from England, suffered a broken leg and head injuries when struck by the hit-and-run vehicle as she rode her bicycle in the 500 block of N. Eddy. She remains in St. Joseph's Medical Center in poor condition, and has not regained consciousness. — The Observer

Most people with clogged heart arteries can be treated successfully with medicine and do not need coronary bypass surgery, an operation now performed on 110,000 Americans a year, a study concludes. The doctors found that the death rate among victims of coronary artery disease who were treated almost exclusively with medicine was 1.4 percent a year over five years. "The implications are profound, because basically, it says that medical treatment can afford a remarkable improvement in prognosis without the need for cardiac surgery," said Dr. Bernard Lown, who directed the study. Bypass surgery has become an increasingly common treatment for people whose heart arteries are narrowed by fatty deposits, even when this condition does not cause chest pain or other outward signs of ill health. Other studies have produced conflicting figures on whether the operation prolongs life. "Medical treatment at the present time reduces mortality to a remarkably low level," Lown said in an interview. "This cannot be improved on by any type of surgical intervention." — AP

Six persons have been named to the Board of Directors of the national Alumnae Association of Saint Mary's College, Notre Dame, Indiana. The new Alumnae Association board members from South Bend are Sister Mary Louise Gude, C.S.C. and Patricia Cain Murray. A 1963 graduate of Saint Mary's, Sister Mary Louise is currently an assistant professor of French at Saint Mary's as well as the French Coordinator for the Department of Modern Languages. In 1979, Sister Mary Louise was acting Assistant to the President at Saint Mary's College. Sr. Mary Louise who has authored numerous publications and papers, is a member of the Modern Languages Association and the American Association of Teachers of French. Patricia Cain Murray has been active in a number of school, parish, and civic programs including PTA and library volunteer, C CD teacher, Pre-Canva volunteer and Board of Education member for her parish. She is also a member of the St. Joseph County Lawyers' Wives and Indiana State Bar Auxiliary; seven-year volunteer with the mentally retarded and Board member of the Reins of Life, a therapeutic horesback-riding program for the handicapped. — The Observer

The Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway, a $2-billion to $3-billion ditch through Alabama and Mississippi that would be larger and costlier than the Panama Canal, narrowly escaped the Senate's budget knife yesterday. By rejecting, 48 to 46, an amendment to eliminate money for the project in the current fiscal year, senators agreed to keep construction on the nation's biggest water project on schedule. Approval came over objections by critics that it could not be justified in the face of sharp cuts in other, more vital domestic programs. Backers said the canal, once completed, would give a big economic boost to states to the east of the Mississippi River by providing an important alternative commercial route for coal and other products now moved by rail or down the Mississippi. — AP

Denmark has expelled a Soviet diplomat for alleged espionage activities, Foreign Ministry sources said yesterday. Soviet Embassy spokesman Alexandre Tchikhira confirmed that Second Secretary Vladimir Merkoulou was declared persona non grata last week but said his government feels the expulsion was unjustified. "As our ambassador told the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Mr. Merkoulou did nothing against Danish law," Tchikhira said. He refused to comment on Danish allegations that Merkoulou was an agent of the KGB, the Soviet secret police. The ministry also refused official comment, but a source there who asked not to be identified said Merkoulou "would not have been declared persona non grata if he had been behaving as he should." — AP

Price discusses administrations

By BILL KOLB
Staff Reporter

Professor Don K. Price of Harvard University addressed the question "Is government service a profession?" in a lecture Tuesday at Century Center. A brief panel discussion followed.

Having served both as Dean of Harvard's Kennedy School of Government from 1958-1977 and as a consultant on Public Administration to Presidents Roosevelt, Eisenhower, Kennedy and Johnson, Price said he believes that Public Administration is indeed a profession. But he also denied vigorously that government service "in a complete sense" is as much a profession as are medicine, engineering and law.

These specialized professions "muscle in on" the territory of general government service, for it lacks its own exclusive domain. The "specialists" attempt to avoid involvement in value issues or political conflicts that are not explicable in terms of their particular expertise. But having moved into the higher ranks of government, they become general administrators, "often without realizing that they have done so."

Price said that government officials who have no special area of expertise also lack the specialist's organizational "measure of self-government, the right as a separate entity in society to regulate its own affairs and define its own standards."

This lack, he said, is a phenomenon peculiar to American history.

According to Price, 19th century moral reformists discouraged policy-making as part of the duties of general administration, treating it merely as an ability to carry out managerial duties. It was therefore not until World War II, with the creation of the American Society for Public Administration, that the generalists had their own professional society. But their work still did not bear directly on substantive shaping policy.

Price maintained that the forces of American history also resulted in the specialists gaining ascendancy over the generalists in policy-formulating government service.

After World War II, advancements in science and technology resulted in an establishment of developmental and regulatory institutions that required specialized expertise. The result was what Price called a "vertical dimension of professional responsibility," the duty of the specialized administrator being to formulate policy as well as to carry it out efficiently.

Price said that today, this vertical dimension has resulted in a pluralistic tug-of-war between governmental agencies. He said that a horizontal dimension of responsibility is needed that combines intellectual competence with "an obligation to a general public interest."

Price concluded, stating "a concern for good administration requires a concern for the content of policies, and indeed political authority needs the support of a career system of professional generalists if it is to enforce its policies and protect a system of true constitutional responsibility. Toward that end, we in America evidently still have a lot to learn."

Following Price's lecture, a panel discussed current issues in public administration. Panelists were Professor Peri Arnold; Professor Tom Thorson of Indiana University at South Bend; Mr. Elroy Kelsenberg, South Bend Director of CETA; and Price.

A graduate of Vanderbilt University and a Rhodes Scholar, Price currently is Weatherhead Professor of Public Management emeritus at Harvard University.

His lecture is part of a series of lectures on American professions sponsored by the Notre Dame Department of History.

Parish finds missing painting

By MIKE LEPRE
News Staff

A painting reported missing from a corridor of Saint Hedwig's Hall in South Bend after two Saint Mary's functions Friday was recovered Monday evening on the rectory grounds.

The painting, which depicts a dark section of woods, disappeared sometime after the conclusion of two separate functions involving students from Saint Mary's LeMans and Holy Cross halls. Security checks of the church's property made throughout the evening raised speculation that the painting had been stolen in the confusion of the partygoers leaving.

The members from the LeMans gathering were not implicated in the incident.

A door connecting the Holy Cross party room to the corridor containing the painting was left open throughout the evening, while a similar door leading to the LeMans party had been locked. For this reason the responsibility for the missing painting had been placed upon the people from Holy Cross Hall.

Erin Diamond, a resident of Holy Cross and sponsor of the get-together was held liable for the painting's disappearance. "Being a private party," she explained, "the person who ran it must be held responsible for the painting." St. Hedwig's had given Diamond an indefinite length of time to attempt to locate the painting before they would consider pressing charges against her.

In addition, Saint Hedwig's decided not to investigate the incident, but rather to leave it to Diamond. In Diamond's words, the church asked her "to come up with the painting."

Early Monday evening, three days after the theft, the picture was found. Fr. Matt, of Saint Hedwig's, spotted the painting near a wall outside the church.

While it had been raining that evening, no reported damage had been done to the painting.

Plans for restoring the painting to its original location have been made, and charges will not be pressed against the group, according to an employee of Saint Hedwig's.

Ex-helicopter pilot holds six hostages

MUNCIE, Ind. (AP) — A "frustrated and angry" ex-helicopter pilot in Vietnam took six newspaper employees hostage at gunpoint on the second anniversary of the seizing of the American hostages in Iran, saying his fellow soldiers never got the media attention they deserved.

No one was hurt and no reporters or editors were involved in the incident at Muncie Newspapers Inc., publishers of the morning Muncie Star and the afternoon Muncie Evening Press. Jay Stader, 32, of Muncie, who said he flew a helicopter during the Vietnam War, was arrested on a charge of criminal confinement and was initially held at the Delaware County Jail on a $40,000 bond. Stader was arraigned at 3:30 p.m. EST but did not enter a plea. Bond was then reduced to $20,000 and arraignment date was set.

He was interviewed in jail yesterday afternoon by an official of the Delaware County Mental Health Department.

One of Stader's early demands was to talk with news anchorman Cameron Harper of Indianapolis television station WTHR. Although Harper was at the jail yesterday afternoon, Sheriff Gary Carmichael said Stader "doesn't want to be bothered" with an interview.

The hostages included a security guard, one mail room worker and four newspaper carriers.

The incident began about 3 a.m. and was over less than an hour later when Stader, armed with a double-barreled shotgun, was taken into surrendering by the hostages. He remained in the building, however, until he was convinced to leave by Lt. Charles Hittson, chief hostage negotiator for the Muncie Police Department.

"He was frustrated and angry that

Protestant churches as well as within the Roman Catholic Church does not work because of the preservationism felt from the inside of these structures, Starrie stated.

"The recent tendency is that the challenge to restructure is liable to be suppressed by the structure itself as much as possible," Starrie emphasized.

Women respond in a variety of ways when confronted with the idea of having women seek a more visible role within the Church. On the whole, they see themselves representative.

Some women see no significance in the women's movement within the Church. Some see hope and optimism for the future of women within the Church, convinced of the values women would have in a more official role. There are even a number of women who do not participate actively in the church or leave it entirely because of their lack of respect for their role.

Starrie feels that women need to call the Church to be truly Christian. This can be done, she says, by setting a model to it. This model would have to recognize the gifts and diversities of women and speak honestly and clearly about them with the hierarchy.

With neighborhood Seniors to hold Block Party

By TOM SHAUGHNESSY
News Staff

The Senior class, along with employees of the Senior-Alumni Club, will run Friday's Block Party with the Northeast neighborhood, according to Dean of Students James Roemer.

"It is a Senior class party, so it is appropriate that they run it," he said.

Seniors will cook all of the food, and a crew of thirty Senior Bar employees will serve the beer. The dining halls had been considered to prepare the food, but this idea was rejected in favor of a "hospitable gesture" on the part of the seniors, said Dean Roemer.

The ACC has been granted a license to serve beer, and only seniors will be admitted. The seniors will be required to present their student identification cards, and only those who are 21 will be served beer. All seniors will be allowed into the Block Party, however. Since there will be underaged people at the Block Party, both students and neighborhood children, the "experienced people from a licensed bar" are needed, explained Roemer.

A phone committee of 40 people has contacted some 1400 households in the Northeast community, and about 2000 people are expected to turn out for the Block Party. The neighborhood is also invited to the pep rally.

"This event is an alternative to the Death March," Roemer said. Corby's, Irish Country, Bridget McGuire's, and The Commons have all agreed to close between the hours of 6 and 8 p.m., as a "gesture of good will toward the community and to prevent an impromptu Death March after the Block Party," stated Dean Roemer.

In the past, the Death March has caused "some strain with the neighbors," and the Block Party is an opportunity to "shake hands with the community," said the Dean of Students.

no one is more feared than Chesimard. Coughlin said he sees reminders of that fear every day — a compelling example being the officer who survived the turnpike shootout with Chesimard.

Working a desk job now, he is still shaken by what began as a routine check on a suspicious vehicle and ended in a bloody gun battle with Chesimard, who was wounded, and a suspected member of the Black Panthers, who was slain.

The officer — who asked that his name, while a matter of public record, not be brought to public attention again — refuses to discuss anything relating to Joanne Chesimard.

"I have a wife and a child. Please," he said.

Although state troopers are forever on the lookout for Chesimard, much of the investigation is left to Coughlin, who spends his days around the National Crime

Information Center computer and by the phone.

He has learned everything he can about her; now and then he even curls up with "Assata Speaks," a biography by a radical sympathizer who portrayed Chesimard as an "African gem" who was "railroaded" by authorities.

A just-the-facts type of cop, Coughlin makes few personal asides about the case, although he said he thinks the first mistake was to send Chesimard to a medium security prison like Clinton. She had already stunned authorities by managing to conceive a child, now living with relatives, while she was in a holding cell in Middlesex County awaiting trial.

When he started the Fugitive Unit, Coughlin cleared state police files of about 200 names of people who had been captured or released or who had died since they were listed. Since then, 16 of the first 27 Coughlin put on his most wanted list have been apprehended.

"There's always an opening," Coughlin said.

Still, Coughlin doesn't like the distinction of being in the only state where the most wanted of the most wanted has been at large for two years.

"I guess it's human nature. I guess most cops would like to arrest somebody that bad. Whatever else we're working on, she's always No. 1," he said.

Congress repels Arab satellite sale proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Stung by a burst of congressional criticism, the administration yesterday withdrew a plan to sell communications satellite equipment to an Arab consortium that includes Libya and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

However, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. indicated the administration may resubmit the plan. "We are withdrawing this proposal until we can study the issue further and consult," he told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

"Next time we'll try to do the homework," said a department official who asked not to be quoted by name.

A statement issued by the State Department said: "We are aware of congressional concerns regarding the proposed sale of commercial communication satellites to the Arab Telecommunications Satellite Organization (Arab-Sat). In deference to these concerns we are withdrawing the case for further review and consultations."

The proposed sale drew little attention when notice of it was filed Oct. 30 under the Arms Export Control Act.

But the issue bubbled to the surface Tuesday when Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger was asked about the sale by the Foreign Relations Committee and replied that he was not aware of it.

Weinberger noted that many of the nations in the consortium were U.S. allies, but said he would like to check on military implications of the satellite.

The State Department official said it was "amazing" Weinberger was ignorant of the proposed sale.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, a committee member, said Tuesday the new sale proposal "came to us cold with no advance notice, no consultation whatsoever."

Coming on the heels of the struggle over selling AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia, Glenn said the administration's handling of the satellite deal "almost defies credibility."

Under the terms of the proposed sale, Ford Aerospace and Communications Corp. would design, test and deliver certain unspecified satellite components to Aerospatiale de France for use in the Arab-Sat regional satellite communications system.

The proposed system involves two working satellites and one spare.

Susan Frutkin, director of public affairs for Ford Motor Co., parent company of Ford Aerospace, said such systems have commercial uses including telephone, telex and television transmission.

It is understood plans exist to launch the Arab medium-size communications satellites at National Aerospace and Aeronautics Administration facilities at Cape Canaveral, Fla., the only satellite launching facilities now available.

Details on timing of such a launch were not immediately available.

The Arab satellites are said to be similar to those already built for Canada and Indonesia and to those being planned and built for India, Brazil and other countries.

By law, a license for the communications system sale would have gone through unless vetoed by both houses of Congress within 30 days

SMC College Bowl continues

By JULIANNE JONES
News Staff

The final round of matches of the Saint Mary's Intramural College Bowl Tournament will be played this Sunday at Carroll Hall, with the team that wins the most games in a six-game series being declared the winner of the tourney.

College Bowl is a nationally played question and answer game based on general knowledge.

During a match, two teams of four players each vie to answer questions correctly.

Questions are drawn from a variety of subjects ranging from music to politics. General knowledge and a quick recall of facts are prime requisites for play.

Mary Anne O'Donnell, Director of Student Affairs at Saint Mary's and the Regional Coordinator of College Bowl, and Lisa Schulte, Regina Hall Director, coordinate the campus tournament.

Approximately thirty women, organized into seven teams, are involved in the competition. Each team plays a total of six games in an elimination-style tournament. The eight games to be played on Sunday comprise the final round; previous matches were held on Oct. 29, and Nov. 1.

Following Sunday's games, an "All-Star" team will be chosen from the best players among all participating. This "All-Star" team will hold practice matches with faculty teams in preparation for participation in the regional competition. Winners of the regional tournament advance to national play.

According to Schulte, coordinating the annual event for a second year, personal competitiveness is not a main objective of the players. "The girls play for the fun of it," she explained. "They enjoy playing the games and playing against each other."

Due to an extensive publicity run, the College Bowl Tournament has found support on the Saint Mary's campus.

President Reagan rejects tax proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — By rejecting a proposal of his budget director and a key Senate Republican to raise up to $80 billion in new taxes over the next three years, President Reagan has virtually abandoned his promise to balance the government's books by 1984.

Administration sources said yesterday the president told his economic advisers that he opposes major new tax increases even if the alternative is a red-ink budget in the final year of his current term. Those same advisers concede a deficit is inevitable without new revenues to close a widening gap wrought by recession.

Instead, Reagan will continue to pressure Congress for deep spending cuts to deflate a deficit that could balloon to as much as $90 billion in 1982 and $150 billion by 1984 without further budget savings, according to the sources, who did not want to be identified by name.

The president's economic advisers have begun to admit in recent weeks that their original plan for a record boost in defense spending, a record cut in taxes and a balanced budget — all by 1984 — will no longer succeed because of the deteriorating economy. But the advisers have been at odds over what elements of the program should be scaled back.

Reagan's decision to risk continued budget deficits marks a victory for Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan and a defeat for budget director David A. Stockman.

Regan has been the administration's leading opponent of sharp, new tax increases, while Stockman has been arguing that a balanced budget can no longer be achieved unless the president seeks new revenue increases to offset a sizeable part of the tax cut approved by Congress during the summer. The new law reduces business and individual taxes by $280 billion through 1984.

Stockman, projecting a worsening deficit outlook, persuaded the president to ask Congress in September for $22 billion in tax increases and $13 billion in defense cuts as part of a revised package of $115 billion in savings needed to balance the budget by 1984.

But as the projected deficit continued to grow, Stockman has been lobbying for significantly higher tax increases, a position opposed by Regan and other Treasury officials.

Communist, Solidarity

Polish leaders conduct talks

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's three most powerful leaders met for more than two hours yesterday in a session that paved the way for new joint talks that could lead to a greater role for the church and Solidarity in solving the nation's crises, the state news agency said.

Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, who is Poland's Communist Party chief, prime minister and defense minister, Lech Walesa, head of the independent union Solidarity, and Archbishop Jozef Glemp, Poland's Roman Catholic primate, met at a government guest house within sight of the Soviet Embassy.

The Polish news agency PAP said the three leaders discussed Poland's current crisis situation and the "possibilities of creating a front of national understanding, a permanent platform of dialogue and consultation of political and social forces on the ground of constitutional principles."

The agency said the meeting was "considered to be useful and at the same time preparatory for further essential consultations."

Neither Walesa nor Glemp would comment as they left the locked iron gates of the heavily guarded guest house next door to the Belvedere Palace, residence of Polish head of state Henryk Jablonski.

Jaruzelski was not seen departing the conference, the first of its kind since labor unrest in August 1980 launched Solidarity, the only independent labor federation in the Soviet bloc.

Before the meeting the Communist Party lashed out at what it called "suicide" strikes leading the nation to "economic collapse", and Walesa warned that the Poles would govern themselves if their demands were ignored.

Hours before the conference, Walesa declared:

"We'll meet, all three of us, and that will decide in which direction we go. If I win this, I've won everything. Either the general will do what he can to understand those he governs, or he won't understand them and then we will have to govern ourselves."

Walesa spoke to Solidarity's 107-member Country Commission, the union's national leadership executive, which was holding its own meeting in the Baltic port of Gdansk. He then left for Warsaw.

the media had been giving attention to the Iranian hostages and not to returned Vietnam veterans," Hittson said. "He feels like the news media have turned their backs on Vietnam vets."

Larry Shores, editor of the Star, said "I have no information that his gripe is against us. His gripe may be a general gripe against the way the media has handled Vietnam veterans. This is probably a very difficult period for Vietnam veterans now that we're going through this again." He referred to the anniversary stories on the seizing of the American embassy.

"I think we have been very good in our coverage of veterans," Shores said.

He said the papers have run listings of when veterans organizations meet, plus several page one stories on attempts by Vietnam veterans to form veterans' organizations.

Cotter also declined last night to comment on the trial.

The suit states that the women's rights under the Fourth, Fifth and Fourteenth Constitutional Amendments, and a federal law have been violated. The police actions, the complaint states, resulted "from the negligent and ineffective training by supervisory officials and training officers of the South Bend Police Department regarding the Constitutional rights...."

Last spring, the city prosecutor dismissed the charges on the women, who all pleaded not guilty, after they agreed to 10 hours of community service each. It was unclear then whether the women would sue the city for the strip search.

The city maintained that the search was within the constitution even though City Attorney Richard Hill admitted February that the search was not warranted.

"It was our position then that we have no liability," said Hill. "That is still our position." Hill refused yesterday to comment further on the suit.

An internal investigation following the strip search analyzed the actions of the female corrections officer. The Board of Public Safety accepted a report of the investigation on Feb. 17.

The report indicated that strip searches are only necessary for prisoners suspected of concealing weapons, contraband or evidence.

The report, however, defended a strip search as legal anytime.

According to the Feb. 5 Observer, the female officer performing the search of the women did not realize the department's "unwritten" policy deeming "pat-down" searches as sufficient for misdemeanor suspects.

Ken Griffey became a member of the New York Yankees yesterday after he was traded by the Cincinnati Reds. In exchange for Griffey, a .307 lifetime hitter, the Reds received minor-league pitcher Brian Ryder and a player to be named later. Griffey reportedly has agreed to a multi-year contract with the Yankees. He had been eligible to become a free agent at the end of the 1981 season. — Associated Press

Three lawyers from New York City will be panelists for a Sports and Entertainment Law Forum to be held at Notre Dame's Center for Continuing Education tomorrow. The morning session will run from 10 a.m. to 12 noon, and the afternoon session from 2-4 p.m. The three panelists will be Seymour Peyser, Richard Zahnd and Sidney Bluming, all of whom are specialists in this expanding field of law. Peyser has served as vice-president of and general council to United Artists Corporation. Zahnd is general council to Madison Square Garden Corporation, the company that owns and operates the New York Knicks and Rangers. Bluming once represented the New York Yankees. — The Observer

Pat Corrales has signed a two-year contract to manage the Philadelphia Phillies, a team spokesman said today. Corrales, a former manager of the Texas Rangers, had been a coach under former manager Dallas Green, who resigned recently to become general manager of the Chicago Cubs. BC point-shaving trial continuing

NEW YORK (AP) — The one-time in-law girlfriend of former Boston College basketball player Rick Kuhn testified yesterday that he threatened to kill her if she ever told of an alleged scheme to shave points during the 1978-1979 season.

Barbara Reed, 25, currently a nurse at a hospital in Syracuse, also testified that during the season, Kuhn allegedly was being paid $500 for each game he helped rig.

Reed, uncharacteristically began giving presents, furniture, a stereo, television and jewels.

He said he had a betting thing set in a way to make money during the season so we could be taken care of.

Reed, a prosecution witness, was under questioning Kuhn and four other men — Anthony and Rocco Perla, both of Bradenton Hills, Pa.; Paul Mazzei of Pittsburgh; and James Burke of Queens — are on trial in Brooklyn before U.S. District Judge Henry Bramwell on charges they conspired to shave points during six Boston College games to the advantage of knowledgeable bettors.

In later testimony, another Boston College player of the time, Joe Beaulieu, said Kuhn had asked him to participate in the point-shaving scheme and said the participants would be brought to New York and availed of cocaine and, "I assume," money.

He said the deal Kuhn proposed — which Beaulieu said he didn't become involved with — was not to lose games, but to keep the score within the point spread.

Asked why he did not tell officials about the proposal, Beaulieu said he was concerned about his eligibility, that Kuhn was "a friend of mine," and said he did not think the plan important because the team wasn't playing with any less "intensity."

Miami Dolphin coach Don Shula has good reason to smile — the Dolphin win last Sunday put him within a game of 200 NFL victories. (AP photo)

Shula chases yet another record

MIAMI (AP) — This Sunday could be another landmark in Don Shula's career, but the Miami Dolphins coach is more concerned about the effect a victory over New England could have on his club's 1981 championship drive.

The Dolphins' 27-10 victory over Baltimore last Sunday gave Shula a 199-80-6 record since he began his National Football League coaching career at Baltimore, at age 33, in 1963.

Only George Halas, Curly Lambeau and Tom Landry have won 200 professional games.

"Right now, the important thing is us winning our seventh game. Someday, when you have time to cherish all your accomplishments, it's something I'll be proud of," Shula said.

"I have the ball that was given to me after the 100th (Oct. 15, 1972). It's at home. But it doesn't help me win Sunday," he added.

"This is the year we want to change a lot of things around," Shula said. "This is another important test for us to determine whether or not we're playoff-bound."

His first victory was 20-14 over San Francisco on Sept. 22, 1963. Raymond Berry was injured that game, and Shula's Colts went on to an 8-6 finish.

"I remember a young head coach who wanted to do well and a great receiver going down," Shula said. "Actually, we had the game won a week earlier in my coaching debut against the New York Giants. We were picked apart by a quarterback named Y.A. Tittle and a back named Alex Webster."

Shula said the early victories aren't any more meaningful than some of his recent ones.

"You just move on. That's the thing that I do whether I win or lose. I've never been one to dwell on the past."

Shula, coach of two Super Bowl winners, including the NFL's only 17-0 team ever, said the 19 years have slipped by quickly.

Yankees replace Jackson

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees picked up veteran outfielder Ken Griffey from the Cincinnati Reds yesterday in exchange for minor-league pitcher Brian Ryder and a player to be named later.

Calling Griffey "a proven quantity, a great player and a gentleman," Lou Saban, president of the Yankees, introduced the new Yankee player to the media at Yankee Stadium.

Griffey, who has a lifetime batting average of .307, comes to the Yankees after eight seasons with the National League team. Saban said, "An agreement in principle has been reached with Ken and his agent, Tom Reich."

None of the parties involved would reveal the terms of the agreement, but Reich did admit it was a "multi-year" contract. He also said, "Griffey isn't with Cincinnati because last spring they (the Reds) declined to make such an offer — a long-term contract with a guaranteed salary."

Griffey, 31, wore a blue Yankee cap with the white New York insignia and held up one of the famed pinstriped shirts during the news conference.

Griffey, a right-fielder most of his career, was quickly asked if he was prepared to replace slugger Reggie Jackson, now a free agent, as the New York right fielder.

"I'm here to do the job they hired me to do — play the outfield. I play wherever the manager puts me," said Griffey, who himself could have become a free agent following the 1981 season.

Pressed on whether he could fill Jackson's big shoes with the Yankees, the diplomatic Griffey shrugged and said, "In terms of defense, I know I can. Reggie can do an awful lot of things on offense, but I'm a lifetime .300 hitter and I can do some things, too. But, whatever happens, I've played right field, center and left field; I'll do what the manager tells me to do."

Griffey said the Yankees were the only team he knew of who tried to work out a deal with the Reds for his services, adding that they were also his only choice of a new employer "in the American League."

One thing that appeared to stand out in his mind was the fact that Yankee Stadium has a natural grass playing field.

"That takes a lot of pressure off the legs," explained Griffey, 31. "I expect I'll be doing a lot more bunting than I did in the National League."

Reich said the Yankees fit the criteria that Griffey had in mind in changing teams.

"We were looking for natural grass, a contender and an economic package that was correct for a player of Ken's magnitude," Reich said.

Asked if they'd had any problems dealing with volatile Yankee owner George Steinbrenner, Reich said, "Absolutely not. He has good vision and he's aggressive. His public image is one thing, but he's great to do business with. He knows how to pull the trigger; to make up his mind and do the job."

Griffey thanked Steinbrenner, who did not attend the news conference. Asked about the periodic eruptions in Steinbrenner's dealings with his players, Griffey smiled and said, "I've had to deal with Mr. Wagner (Reds General Manager Dick Wagner), and he can be pretty hard to deal with, too."

Wagner, commenting on the deal in Cincinnati, said, "The first goal of the Reds was to sign Griffey to a long-term contract. After numerous meetings and talks with Kenny's agent, it was apparent we could not work out an arrangement suitable to both parties.

"Rather than wait for the (agent re-entry) draft, we felt it to be the aggressor. In doing this we are able to obtain two quality players who are prospects — both with professional experience."

"Ryder is a fine young pitcher who, at 21, has four winning seasons of experience and a total of 13 major league wins. He is well regarded by scouts who feel he has a very bright future."

Steinbrenner has said Yankees, who lost the World Series to the Los Angeles Dodgers in games, will undergo some changes before next season. And he hinted broadly at times that the changes will be sweeping.

The starting front line in the November 28 opener against Michigan St. Joseph's of Rensselaer figures to be Billy Varner and Tom Sluby at forwards, with Barry Spencer, normal a swingman, playing center. Sorrows — Cecil just isn't ready yet.

On the surface, it looks like might be a disappointing season sort of a football season with gy shorts and sneakers. Not much of season for Digger to be under the microscope. And if things do go sour, Phelps still will be here to kick around. Having turned down the UCLA job and lost his desire for a job in pro basketball, Digger's pretty much committed to Notre Dame for at least the next five years, subv alumni permitting.

But, despite the gloomy outlook there is one aspect that sticks out and refuses to leave: this season more than any other in the past decade, Notre Dame will be in the underdog position that it literally thrives on.

Blair Kiel, down on his luck in the early season and down on the field here against Navy, is back on his feet and has established himself at quarterback. See related story at right.

Blair Kiel now "in" as No. 1 quarterback

By DAVE DZIEDZIC
Sports Writer

"He can't pass."
"He never sees his receivers."
"He's got a rifle of an arm, but he can't complete a pass."
"He never steps up in the pocket."
"He can't read defenses."
"He always runs when he rolls out."
"He can't throw long."

If you've been around the University of Notre Dame at all over the past two years, you've probably heard at least one of the above statements made about sophomore quarterback Blair Kiel.

Why is it that Irish fans have expressed little confidence in Kiel? After all, he did start nine of the Irish's 12 games last season. He led Notre Dame to a 9-2-1 record, a Sugar Bowl bid, and a No. 9 ranking in the final AP poll.

So why have so many people been bad-mouthing Blair Kiel? A look at some of Kiel's statistics might provide an answer.

Last season, Kiel completed 48 of his 124 passing attempts for 531 yards and no touchdowns. He was intercepted five times. Blair was effective, but Notre Dame fans never considered him to be their quarterback. Coach Dan Devine's bo-hum offense was blamed for some of Blair's problems. "How could any Notre Dame quarterback look good this year?" they asked.

Many believed that things would be different in 1981. With Blair Kiel running Gerry Faust's go get 'em offense, Irish fans believed they were in for an exciting and successful season.

Then senior Tim Koegel announced that he would be returning for his final year of eligibility. All of a sudden, Kiel wasn't sure whether or not he was the man anymore.

Kiel was eventually named the starting quarterback for the LSU game, but Faust announced that the Irish had two No. 1 quarterbacks.

Here's where the big problems started for Kiel. He started the LSU game, but Koegel started against Michigan, Purdue, Michigan State, and Florida State. And besides being relegated to the second-string job, Kiel's statistics were suffering. After five games, Kiel had completed only a third of his passes for 68 yards and had been intercepted five times.

"He can't throw."
It started again.

"It bothers me for two reasons when people criticize me," Kiel says. "First of all, I don't like to make mistakes any more than the fans like to see me make mistakes. Second of all, it's not fair for outsiders to criticize me without having the experiences that I've had. I don't see those people out on the field trying to play football."

Kiel knows why he has had so many difficulties this season. "The problem has been myself," he explains. "I doubted myself. I wasn't sure when to throw and when not to throw. I felt a great deal of pressure. Every time I was playing, I felt a need to prove myself to the coaches and the fans. I was trying very hard, but I wasn't succeeding."

Offensive coordinator Tom Lichtenberg agrees with Kiel. "Not being the starting quarterback affected Blair a great deal," Lichtenberg explains. "He got to the point where he was pressing too hard."

"He had trouble adjusting to our system," Lichtenberg adds. "Everyone was having difficulties."

Kiel was having a tough time adjusting to his role. "It's been tougher than I expected to adjust this year," he says. "I thought I wouldn't have to go through some of the problems that I had last year. I still miss home, and there's been a lot of pressure around here since we've been having problems."

Then, after the FSU game, the coaching staff decided to give Kiel the ball against USC. "We decided to make Blair the No. 1 quarterback," Lichtenberg says. "With his speed and running ability, he gives us an added dimension."

And what a dimension! Since being named the starting quarterback against Southern Cal, Kiel has completed 25 of 46 passes for 340 yards and no interceptions. He enjoyed his best day ever in an Irish uniform against Navy, completing 13 of 23 passes for 215 yards and two touchdowns. "Kiel's the best quarterback I've played against in a long time," said Navy defensive end Travis Wallington after the game. "He's extremely quick, and he's passing even better than he was last year."

Digger Phelps deserves better

Among all the signs being hung out dorm windows during LSU weekend, back when people still cared about football season, amidst all the "L.S. Who's" and "We Love Gerry's Kids," there was one ominous proclamation hanging from Alumni Hall that stood out prominently:

"Does Moeller Have a Basketball Coach?"

The sign seemed harmless at first, but after some conniving person contacted the wire services, it suddenly appeared in newspapers from Indianapolis to Los Angeles. Sports editors across America ate it up, too. You see, everybody in America, it seems, hates Digger Phelps, and now it looked like even his own student body was turning against him. What a scoop!

Digger Phelps returned to the scene of the crime this past Monday, speaking to a spirited crowd of over 100 in Alumni's lounge. He gave his normal speech on how everyone in the world is corrupt in their recruiting practices except Notre Dame, and how he is unable to garner any program savers like Pat Ewing because the admission standards are too high.

Any cynic would say that Digger was just making excuses about this coming season. Problem was, he was telling the truth.

The positive reception Digger received the other night was rather surprising. You see, last season was supposed to be the big year — six experienced seniors, mixed in with some talented underclassmen, were to lead the Irish all the way to the Final Four. These guys didn't even need a coach. The hotel reservations in Philadelphia were in the bag.

And then Brigham Young got in the way and ruined everyone's Spring Break. When the students returned to campus, they wanted Digger's head delivered on a silver platter. "If Digger hadn't overcoached, we'd still be playing" seemed to be the general opinion.

Never mind the victories over Indiana, Kentucky, San Francisco and Virginia, all of these masterpieces in coaching strategy. Never mind the fact that the Irish missed four one-and-ones and two layups in the last two minutes against BYU. It was all Digger's fault.

Chris Needles
Sports Writer

But Digger Phelps has survived. And if he makes it through this season unscathed, he should receive the Congressional Medal of Honor. With this season's schedule, though, a Purple Heart may be more appropriate.

Phelps, as he readily will admit, faces a Gargantuan task in rebuilding his troops this season — replacing six graduated seniors and the departed Joe Kleine with only two recruits and two new walk-ons. Forget Tim Andree's ankle injury — things can't get any worse.

The schedule doesn't help, either — Indiana, UCLA, Kentucky, Missouri, Virginia and USF. And then, second semester begins.

One thing Digger will not tell you is that his team will be great, or even good, this year. Deep down, he realizes that this season could be a potential disaster and he wisely doesn't want to get students' hopes up too much. Look what happened to Gerry Faust.

So, this year, Digger is stressing the little things. "We really need the student support," he repeats, with emphasis, over and over. He will badger the referees a little more. Tighter rims will be installed in the ACC to encourage deep rebounds, thereby negating his team's vast height disadvantage.

But let's face facts. The best playmaker on the team is John Paxson, who is exceptional. The team's best outside shooter is — yep, you guessed it — John Paxson. If anyone is unfamiliar with a "box-and-one" defense, you should have the technique memorized by Christmas. Paxson may see it thrown at him in every game.

Knight, Phelps Coaches schedule appearance

By SKIP DESJARDIN
Associate Sports Editor

Indiana basketball Coach Bobby Knight will join Digger Phelps in an appearance at Notre Dame Monday night. The two men will talk about basketball, answer questions and meet with students in the Engineering Auditorium.

Knight led the Hoosiers to the NCAA Championship last spring in Philadelphia. It was the second time one of Knight's teams had won the tournament. He is probably the most well-known, and definitely the most out-spoken coach in the country.

The appearance is part of a drive to raise money to help pay the medical bills of Indiana forward Landon Turner, who was seriously injured in an automobile accident in July. All proceeds from the night's activities will benefit The Observer-Landon Turner Fund.

Knight and Phelps are good friends, and anything can happen when the two of them get together. "The two of them together are incredible," one of Phelps' friends says. "I don't think I've ever laughed so hard in my life as I did the last time I saw them together."

The event is being sponsored by Alumni and St. Ed's Halls, in cooperation with The Observer.

"Bobby really wants to speak with the students here," says Phelps. "He is putting an incredible amount of time into raising money for Turner, and he is very excited about the way Notre Dame students are showing their support."

Knight will be in South Bend Monday to attend a dinner and speaking engagement at the Century Center. Proceeds from that event will go toward off-setting Turner's medical expenses as well.

The Observer-Landon Turner Fund got a great boost last weekend when just under $600 was collected
