Nuclear plant declares state of emergency

ONTARIO, N.Y. (AP) — A tube ruptured in a cooling system at the Ginna nuclear power plant yesterday, emitting radioactive steam into the atmosphere and leaking thousands of gallons of water into the reactor's containment sump before the plant was stabilized, officials said.

The reactor of the plant, 18 miles northeast of Rochester, New York's third-largest city, was shut down automatically and was doused with water to keep it from overheating, said Gary Sanborn, a spokesman for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

He said the plant "appears to be fairly stable."

Nemen M. Terc, an NRC emergency preparedness analyst, said there was no damage to the reactor core. The reactor's fuel elements were never uncovered, said Ebe McCabe, NRC regional reactor projects section chief.

Harold Denton, director of the NRC, said in Washington that "it might be expensive for the operator to clean up, but in terms of public health consequences it wasn't very serious."

Officials said the reactor was being cooled down well below operating temperature and the cooling down process was expected to be completed by today or tomorrow.

Richard de Young, director of the NRC's office of enforcement, said it would be "a number of weeks" before the plant is back to normal.

Denton identified the gases released as radioactive xenon and krypton.

The radiation release — described by one official as no higher than what could be expected in nature — was emitted in five-second puffs, totaling three minutes, while the wind was blowing from the northwest at 14 mph, officials said. Snow was falling over Rochester.

Officials said none of the workers at the plant were exposed to radioactivity. Non-essential personnel, most of Ginna's 250 workers, were evacuated to an on-site raining center, said utility spokesman John Oberlies, but no residents of the area were evacuated. Local schools and a large Xerox plant near the nuclear plant were notified of the emergency, said Monroe County Public Relations officer Clarence Bassett.

About 45,000 people live within 10 miles of the plant. Rochester has a population of 300,000.

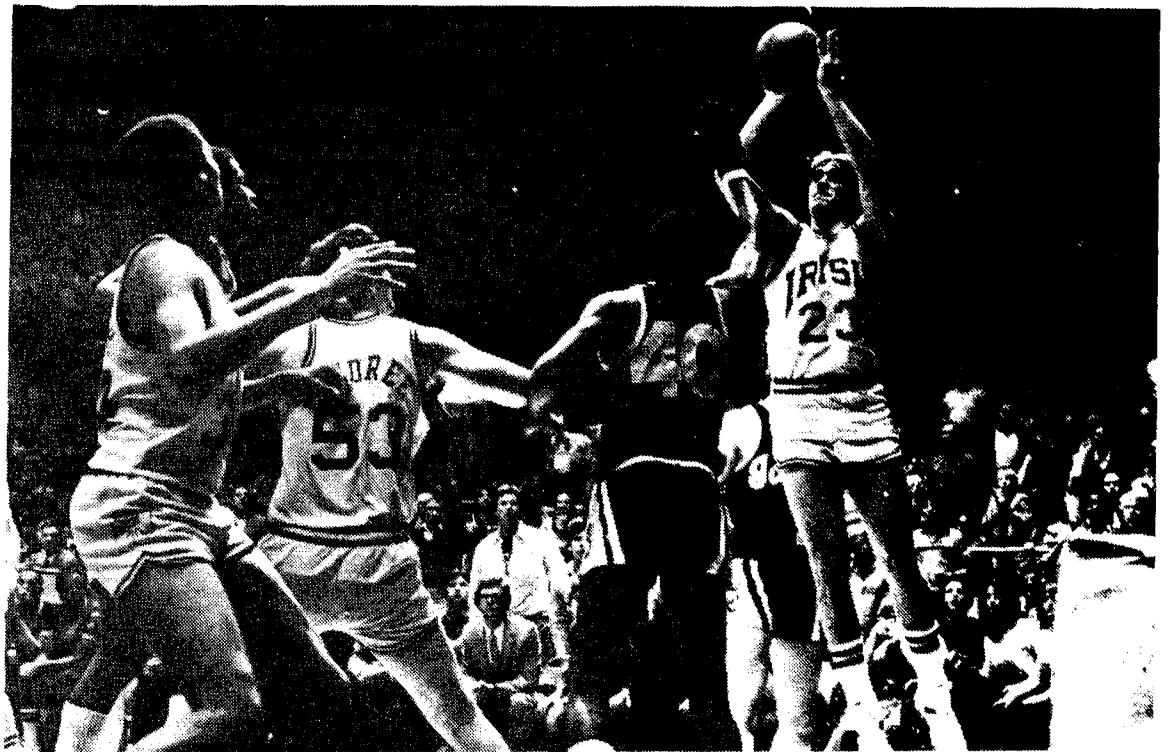

Officials declared a "site emergency," the second most serious of four emergency classifications, within 75 minutes of the tube rupture at 9:25 a.m.

NRC officials said the incident marked the first use of that emergency classification since the March 28, 1979, accident at the Three Mile Island plant near Harrisburg, Pa. TMI was the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident. The plant remains shut.

By midday, Bassett said the leak was "isolated and terminated."

According to Barbara Thomas-Noble of the state Health Department, industry officials measured the radiation at the plant's boundary at 1.5 millirems. Officials estimate a

Envisioned empire

Billionaire loses holdings to banks

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The failing Amazon agri-business project of U.S. Billionaire Daniel K. Ludwig was being officially transferred to Brazilian owners yesterday, ending the tycoon's vision of multiplying his fortunes with a jungle empire.

Documents were scheduled to be filed with the Rio de Janeiro State Corporate Registry giving title of Ludwig's farm-ranch complex on the equator in northern Brazil to a group of 23 Brazilian banks, insurance firms and conglomerates. At the presidential palace in Brasilia, a ceremony was scheduled to formally sign over ownership.

Ludwig, an 85-year-old New York recluse, had been lured to the Amazon by its vast natural resources. But his 15-year-old Jari project — 6,117 square miles of timber, cattle, aluminum mines, clay pits and experimental rice farms the size of Connecticut and Rhode Island — was on the verge of financial collapse.

Ludwig also was the target of intense nationalism that, according to some accounts, unjustly branded him an "imperialist exploiter."

The Brazilian firms, which incorporated the project under the name Companhia do Jari — Jari Co. in Portuguese, Brazil's language — put up $100 million in capital. They were helped by an additional $180 million pledged by Banco do Brasil, a large government-run bank.

With those resources, the consortium says it can guarantee payment of Jari's outstanding $340 million debt and finance the project for three years while efforts to make it profitable are under way.

When Jari was started in 1967, the generals who ruled Brazil said they wanted to develop the Amazon at almost any cost. They enthusiastically invited Ludwig to invest.

Ludwig cleared a 250,000 acres of jungle and planted seedlings of a fast-growing Asian tree called gmelina to produce wood pulp. He built a mill in Japan and had the pulp towed halfway around the world on special barges. He mined for bauxite, the ore that yields aluminum. He cleared land for cattle and undertook a special high-yield rice project. He also built a company town in the middle of the jungle and installed plumbing, electricity, sewers, roads and telephones.

But the gmelina trees failed to adapt. Spending got out of hand, and by 1980 Jari was losing $100 million a year. Protracted legal disputes arose over Ludwig's title to the property. His secretive business ways provoked "Yankee gohome" fever.

Official doors once opened for Ludwig slammed shut. Criticized, pressured, ignored and frustrated, he turned his back in disgust. In 1981 he stopped paying debts on

Videotapes help cancer patients

By JEFF BARNARD
Associated Press

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — As captain of his high school tennis team, Peter F. Findlay used videotape to improve his volley. Now the 18-year-old is using videotape to learn how to live with leukemia.

Findlay and other young cancer patients are finding that recording group discussions helps them understand their hopes and fears.

"There is something about being recorded, made permanent, that is particularly relevant to these kids, who are facing the possibility of dying," says Stephanie L. LaFarge, who helped start the program.

Doctors and nurses say they also benefit, by seeing how important it is to understand their patients' feelings.

The tapes grew out of Ms. LaFarge's discussions with adolescent cancer patients at Rhode Island Hospital as part of her doctoral dissertation for Columbia University. Ms. LaFarge is a consultant in pediatric oncology, or cancer treatment, at the hospital.

She and Dr. Robert Tull, a hospital psychologist, have produced four tapes of groups of five youngsters each, aged 13 to 22, who talk about their experiences with different forms of cancer.

"When a kid is diagnosed as having cancer, part of his life is out of control," Tull says. "We have these kids edit the tapes themselves and pick out the music that goes along with them. Being able to take control of any part of your life at that point is critical."

"Seeing the tape again often brings back thoughts I may not have been thinking about lately," says Findlay, now a freshman at Brown University. "The last time I looked at the tape, I was in remission. I forgot about how I felt when I got the disease. One of those things was not taking every day for granted."

Besides giving the patients a chance to share experiences like the pain of chemotherapy and the fear of what changes will occur in their lives, the tapes allow their families, friends and even strangers to find out a kid with cancer is still a regular kid, Ms. LaFarge says.

"We decided to use videotape to entice the adolescents to do something for other people," said Tull, who with Ms. LaFarge is on the faculty of the Brown University School of Biology and Medicine.

"Videotape is good in learning to ski," Ms. LaFarge said. "It works the same way in coping with the fact that you have cancer. It is a tool."

While the project was born out of a desire to help the children, Dr. Paul A. Pitel says it is of greater benefit to the hospital staff.

"As a physician, I think it's been very helpful in that the children explain very clearly what their needs are from the medical staff and how our actions — good and bad — affect them," says Pitel, a blood and cancer specialist at Rhode Island Hospital.

"The psychology of health is a controversial area," Pitel said. "But it is very clear that patients need to maintain a certain degree of optimism and energy just to get through what is often a trying experience."

Pitel said the tapes also help the parents understand the feelings of their children, who often try to protect members of the family by hiding their fear and suffering.

"It is difficult to get adolescents to participate in group therapy, but if you tell them you are making a videotape and through the medium of television they will communicate a message to others, they are very willing to do it," Pitel said.

Student elections held earlier to aid incoming officers

By RICH COLLIS
News Staff

The Ombudsman elections committees held meetings last night for those students interested in running for Student Body offices or for Student Senate seats. Committee Chairman Andy Tucker met with candidates for SBP and SBVP, representing a total of four tickets, and Senate hopefuls from the four campus senatorial districts.

The meetings included a review of the rules guiding the elections, focusing on campaign violations and spending limits for campaign budgets.

Petitions for office were also distributed to the candidates. Petitions require 100 signatures for a ticket to be put on the SBP-SBVP ballot and 50 signatures to gain a Student Senate nomination. Petitions for those students still interested in running for Student Senate seats will be available all day tomorrow in the Student Government Office.

Campaigning will begin at noon on Feb. 1 and end at noon Feb. 7. Elections will be held in the residence halls on Feb. 8.

Student elections are being held earlier this year so that incoming officers can accustom themselves to the student government system.

The aircraft carrier USS Constellation, part of the U.S. naval presence in the Indian Ocean, dropped anchor at the Kenyan port of Mombasa yesterday for a goodwill visit, the U.S. Embassy said. The carrier, whose home port is San Diego, Calif., is scheduled to visit Mombasa until Saturday. The 60,100-ton Constellation is one of about 25 American warships that patrol the region, including the Indian Ocean, Arabian Sea and Persian Gulf. The Palestine Liberation Organization in Beirut, Lebanon, yesterday accused American U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick of issuing statements "hostile to the Palestinian people and to its sole legitimate representative." The PLO statement also accused Mrs. Kirkpatrick of "supporting the Israeli aggressor" because of an interview she gave Israeli radio over the weekend. In the interview, she was quoted as saying the PLO was not the only representative of the Palestinian people. She also was quoted as saying the Palestinian guerrilla movement has "participated in terrorist operations with help from the Soviet Union and Cuba." The statement said the PLO is recognized as the sole representative of the Palestinian people by 117 nations, more than twice the number that recognize Israel. — AP

The American Legion has pledged $1 million for the Vietnam Veterans' memorial to be built on the Mall in Washington, D.C., Jan Scruggs, president of the memorial fund, said yesterday. Scruggs made public a telegram sent by American Legion Commander Jack W. Flynt to Interior Secretary James Watt, which said Flynt was "deeply concerned by (Watt's) hesitancy in approving construction of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial." Flynt's wire from the Legion's Indianapolis headquarters said he had reviewed the memorial's design and "because we see it to be a dignified and eloquent tribute to the service and sacrifice of Vietnam veterans, (we) are pledging 1 million toward its construction." — AP

The Center for Experiential Learning and the Social Concerns Commission of Student Government is co-sponsoring a Social Concerns Seminar from March 13-20 in Washington D.C. The seminar is actually a one-credit hour course offered by the Department of Theology called "Social Concerns — Government" and is open to Notre Dame and Saint Mary's sophomores and juniors. The seminar will be limited to 24 students who are "willing to commit themselves to preparation, immersion in the weeklong educational experience, evaluation and follow-up," according to the program director Marcia Le May. Requirements for the course include attending a speech given by Archbishop Hunthausen of Seattle on the topic of "Why Challenge Nuclear Arms: Risking a Christian Response," on Jan. 29 at 7:30 p.m. in the Library Auditorium. — The Observer

Lauren Toohey, an 11-year-old liver transplant patient from Pittsburgh, clutched a Humpty Dumpty doll and chomped on a French fry yesterday as she was released from Children's Hospital two months after her operation. The Kinnelon, N.J., youngster quietly posed for news photographers as her parents expressed thanks to the doctors and hospital staff. "We're very grateful," said Joseph Toohey, Lauren's father. Now we're looking for a future with her." Dr. Bud Shaw, a member of the team that transplanted the liver of a 4-year-old Wisconsin boy into Lauren on Nov. 14, said she will remain in the Pittsburgh area for further routine tests. "Her surgery was pretty stable for a liver transplant. Her post-operative history has been fairly phenomenal," Shaw told reporters. Toohey said Lauren has shown no trace of the cancer that forced doctors to replace her liver. The operation was performed by Dr. Thomas Starzl, the only physician in the United States who now transplants livers. — AP

New York City mayor Edward Koch was flying home yesterday from a 10-day vacation in Spain to face a newspaper-inspired attempt to draft him for the governor's race. The mayor's news secretary, Tom Goldstein, said that just before the mayor left for Spain he made it clear at a news conference that he was not interested in running for governor. Koch has said repeatedly that he will not run for any office other than mayor. However, a New York Post editorial said yesterday that "New York City needs him, but so does New York State." It called for Koch to run for the Democratic nomination for governor. Most of page three of the Post was devoted to a plea to readers to clip and mail in a coupon urging Koch to run. "The more coupons are received from our readers, the bigger the response, the more it is possible that a 'Draft Ed for Governor' movement will gather force and eventually sweep him to victory," the newspaper said. — AP

A tradition up in smoke

They called it the "hotspot" of South Bend. It was part of every student's weekend routine. The people, the atmosphere, the music. All this and more attracted the Saint Mary's-Notre Dame community. For years it had been an Irish tradition.

But then, on one bitter cold Sunday morning, it all came to an end. It started in the back, smoldering the "Skoll" (a popular chewing tobacco) covered walls, making its way past the newly-recovered pool tables and across the sticky, beer infested floors. Fire was everywhere, destroying a long time tradition.

Corby's Tavern, Inc., was gone.

The damage estimate was rounded to a mere $50,000 (are cement blocks really that expensive?). The "hole in the wall" interior, as it was recently described by an ND alumnus, was ruined. For those who frequented Corby's it may be difficult to think of it as being anything but ruined, even after a major fire. Yet, it was the home of the Rugby team and hundreds of other students who loved Corby's.

The little "hole in the wall" bar on Corby's Street was the most popular off-campus spot. Even though there were always "too many guys and not enough women" at Corby's, it was always packed on the weekends. Why did so many people flock to such an "establishment?" A Notre Dame senior remarked, "I like Corby's because its where the 'real' people go. People like you for what you are, not because you have a reptile on your shirt." Another SMC senior added, "the music is great" at Corby's (even though you can't really hear it because it's too loud) "and it's where all my friends hang out. It's definitely not the atmosphere that attracts us."

Corby's became a lifestyle for many devoted people. Everyone who went there was accustomed to the same Grateful Dead tapes, the same familiar faces behind the bar and the same weekend crowd. This was Corby's and that's just the way it was.

Occasionally, Corby's even attracted the atypical in the crowd found there. One Notre Dame senior who was wearing multi-colored embroidered ducks on his Khaki pants commented on Corby's: "I like Corby's because it got that 'homey' touch to it...it's like drinking in my garage. Although, my garage is more tastefully furnished. Actually, I think it's a dump but what else is there?"

The die-hard Corby's fans visited the bar daily for happy hour. "I remember going to Corby's after classes during the week," commented an ND grad. "That was the best time to go, when there weren't a million people around."

Cathy Domanico

Inside Tuesday

Another younger bar frequenter said of Corby's, "It was the only place you could go underage." Many seniors have happy memories of their first underage drinking days at Corby's.

In fact, now that Corby's is closed, the younger drinkers are seeking other alternatives to it. "A great deal of underage people tried to get into Senior Bar last weekend. That was the Corby's crowd," ND Student Government Vice President Tara Kenney explained. The Commons and Irish Country, she added, also had more business than usual. Places like Nickie's are also picking up.

But dare the true Corby's fans change their lifestyles and move on to someplace else like Irish Country or Senior Bar? "No!" said a very "old"

SMC sophomore. "I lived there (at Corby's). I will not go to Irish Country; it just can't replace the Corby's crowd. Bridget's is the only place that can come close to Corby's"

Well, for now, Corby's is gone.

"Corby's will fade into everyone's memory...like the old Library (the earlier name for the deceased Goose's)," said an ND alumnus.

Devoted Corby's fans keep hoping that their haven will soon be resurrected. But until then, remember the Old Corby's tradition.

Student committee to evaluate OSA

By MICHELE DIETZ
News Staff

Plans for an ad hoc committee to evaluate the Office of Student Affairs dominated last night's Student Senate meeting.

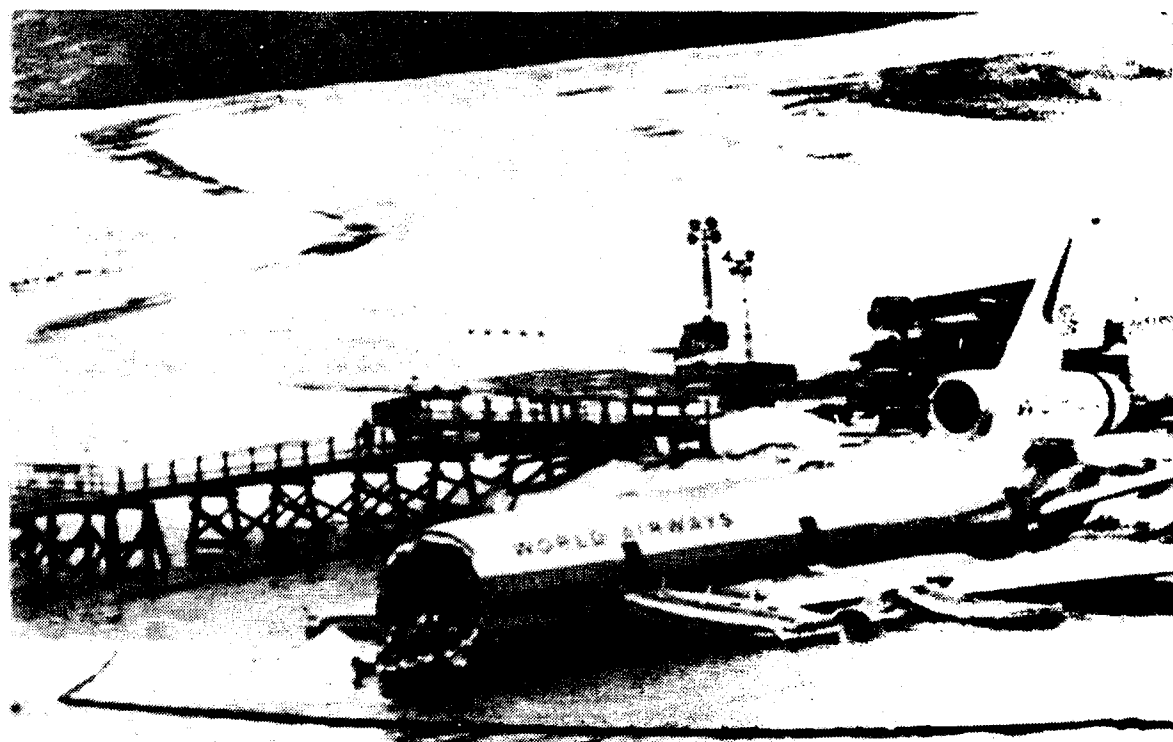

The committee, to consist of several Senate members, will look at the Office of Student Affairs in relation to the rest of the Notre Dame community and make recommendations to better the OSA.

"It is not meant as a slap in the face," Don Murday, Student Body president, remarked. "The committee will merely get answers to our questions. The committee will evaluate the entire office and not any one official.

Also introduced at the meeting was the name of the psychologist who will work with the Student Life Committee. Dr. Bob Heckle will work with the committee to investigate social life at Notre Dame.

A budget report was also presented to the Senate by Karen Kiley, Student Body treasurer. A Student Senate first, the budget listed financial figures of the Student Union, Student Government, and Off-Campus funds.

Medical examiners find possible crash hero

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Florida jetliner that plunged into the Potomac River barely reached takeoff velocity after roaring down the runway 15 seconds longer than normal, then lost speed almost as soon as it was airborne, according to instrument readings revealed yesterday.

Federal investigators, disclosing data from the Boeing 737's flight recorder, said the twin-engine aircraft had trouble developing proper acceleration almost from start of takeoff and never got more than 377 feet into the air.

Medical examiners, meanwhile, concluded all but one of the 74 people who died aboard the plane Jan. 13 suffered severe injuries from impact and probably could not have survived the accident even if rescue workers had reached them immediately.

The only exception, said Brian Blackburn, deputy chief medical officer for the District of Columbia, was Arland Williams, 46, of Atlanta, who died of exposure and drowning. He said Williams suffered no injuries from the crash.

The finding again raised speculation that Williams was the hero who passed a helicopter lifeline to others before he slipped beneath the ice-caked surface of the river. Four passengers and a stewardess survived.

Several doctors said privately that it is likely Williams was the man, but none would say that positively. Police, who are handling public statements about recovery of the bodies, refused to say where Williams was found.

The recorder showed the plane, taking off in a snowstorm, reached the 144-knot speed needed to lift off and begin its climb. But six-tenths of a second later, the plane began to lose acceleration, never attaining a speed of more than 147 knots, nor an altitude greater than 377 feet — at a point where it should have been at 1,000 feet.

Seconds later it clipped a busy commuter bridge spanning the Potomac River and crashed beneath the river's ice. Seventy-eight people were killed, including four motorists on the bridge.

Francis McAdams, overseeing the investigation for the National Transportation Safety Board, told reporters the plane took about 15 seconds longer than normal to lift off from the runway and then failed to get proper acceleration. It was airborne "less than 30 seconds," he added.

Information from the flight data recorder, which measured among other things the plane's altitude, speed, and heading, appeared to substantiate testimony from at least three witnesses who have told investigators the plane lifted from the runway well beyond the normal takeoff point.

Investigators, although refusing to speculate about the cause of the crash, have paid particular attention to reports from witnesses that excessive ice had accumulated on the airplane before takeoff. After it was de-iced, the plane stood for at least 43 minutes before it began its flight.

Talks in limbo

Gromyko, Haig discuss START

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviets are hoping today's meeting between Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. will show Western Europe the Kremlin is sincere about restarting strategic arms limitation talks despite tension over Poland.

Soviet and East European sources say in addition to arms limitation talks, Gromyko is expected to raise such issues as Israel's annexation of the Golan Heights, U.S. support for the rightist regime in El Salvador and alleged American foot-dragging on independence for Namibia.

Haig has said he wants to use the talks to "express first-hand and directly the outrage" of the United States against military repression in Poland. Gromyko said yesterday he had no intention of discussing this with Haig — who aides say won't bring up arms talks.

The Haig-Gromyko meeting was originally slated for today and tomorrow, but shortened to one day at Haig's insistence after the Dec. 13 military crackdown in Poland. It was hoped that the meeting might result in the setting of a date to open the strategic arms talks, formerly called SALT but nicknamed START by the Reagan administration. Now American officials say those talks are in limbo.

A Soviet official who asked not to be identified said Gromyko's decision to attend the meeting despite chilly East-West relations was designed to show Western Europe that the Soviet Union is doing what it can to ease world tensions.

Nearly a year ago, Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev proposed a summit meeting with Reagan, but the United States demurred. Recently, the Soviets have again been saying a summit could prove useful.

Soviet foreign policy has attempted to isolate America from its NATO allies by making the White House appear to be the enemy of peace.

While the NATO alliance has shown some unity in the face of martial law in Poland, Europe has failed to join the United States in imposing sanctions against Moscow and Warsaw.

Earlier this month, the NATO foreign ministers issued a statement blaming the Soviet Union for the imposition of martial law in Poland and warning that they would consider sanctions if repressive measures weren't lifted. Last week, NATO representatives in Brussels said the situation in Poland had worsened and that sanctions might be announced soon.

The Soviets have tried to convince Western allies that they will be the ones who will suffer if they impose trade sanctions.

Although France has been highly critical of Soviet involvement in Poland, the state-owned utility last week signed a 25-year contract to purchase natural gas from the Siberian oil fields. West Germany and Italy have also agreed to purchase Siberian natural gas.

"The tapes are very powerful. I think they cut through people's defenses, because they are so vivid. In an age when we are all sensitized to the film and television media, I think they are even more powerful."

Findlay and his parents showed a tape of his discussions with fellow patients to members of their church and to friends in his native Greencastle, Ind.

"When we showed it in church, people came to see it who I never met before," Findlay said. "It wasn't a particularly positive film in many respects. For some people it takes real guts to see it. Then they stay and it makes you feel good."

socket, was among the first group of girls to videotape their discussions.

"We were all nervous at the beginning," said the Bryant College business student who lost her left arm to muscle cancer. "We didn't even move our heads — just our eyes — because we knew somebody was looking at us."

As they got used to it, they opened up, trading feelings about being in the hospital, the reactions of friends and family, and how doctors and nurses could make them feel better.

Miss Lanoue especially remembers one girl from that group, who has since died.

"Man, she could talk," she said. "Just to listen to her is inspiring. Even though she is gone, I can still listen to her."

lethal dose of radiation at between 600 and 1,000 rems, while a millirem is one-one thousandth of a rem, she said.

Radiation checks showed the "dose rates" to be no higher than what could be expected in nature, Sullivan said. "Surface contamination is not expected to occur," he said.

"We are told that all systems worked as they were supposed to work," said Bassett. "The company said all the bells went off when they were supposed to and that the shutdown system operated properly."

The plant, named for retired RG&E board chairman Robert E. Ginna, has a history of steam tube problems, according to NRC records. The plant underwent an emergency drill test last Thursday. Despite a communications problem due to a computer, the exercise went smoothly, said Terc, who directed the drill.

In Albany, state officials activated their Emergency Operations Center to monitor the situation. Under disaster planning procedures upgraded after the Three Mile Island accident, the county takes the lead in such emergencies, with the state Health Department taking the lead for the state.

Regional NRC administrator Ronald Haynes, arriving in Rochester with a team of experts to investigate the incident, said: "surely we've had steam generator tube leaks, but not this bad. This is certainly classified as an unusual event."

According to Jack Bryan, public information officer for the state Disaster Preparedness Commission, radiation was released in bursts, totaling three minutes' worth. The releases occurred over one hour, said Jay Dunkleberger, director of the Bureau of Nuclear Operations of the state emergency office.

Sanborn said yesterday that a tube leak in the steam generator in the primary cooling system apparently leaked at the rate of 75 gallons per minute.

McCabe said about 8,000 gallons of water was standing 9.3 feet deep in the containment sump well. He said the water was probably slightly radioactive, "but certainly not dangerous."

Last September, the NRC rated the nation's nuclear power plants and found 36, including Ginna, to be average in overall operation. Twenty-one were below average and 15 were above average.

Jaruzelski lashes out at U.S., Solidarity

POLAND (AP) — Polish Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski bitterly attacked the independent labor federation Solidarity, the United States and its allies yesterday and hinted that military control of Poland's mines and factories will continue for some time.

In his first address to the Sejm, or Parliament, since martial law was declared Dec. 13, Jaruzelski said some restrictions on civil liberties could be lifted by the end of February, but only if there are no "illegal activities" directed against the state, Radio Warsaw reported.

Warsaw radio also reported gasoline sales would resume in February, under a strict rationing system.

In Belgium, Common Market representatives meeting at their Brussels headquarters agreed to push for higher interest rates on Common Market export credits granted the Soviet Union.

"Before the 13th of December last year, the stability and security of the state had been unshaken and the economy was crashing," Warsaw radio quoted Jaruzelski as saying. "The threat of fratricidal war was in the air."

Repeated demands for order were ignored, he said. "Agreement was an obstacle for the extremist forces in Solidarity who saw their supreme goal in destruction of the socialist statehood of Poland... I charge these forces with paralyzing the authorities, with sowing hatred and with breaking the law time and again, with strike terrorism."

He said lifting of martial law would depend "on the fulfillment of conditions which would secure a permanent, safe and normal course of life, the smooth functioning of the economy."

He said Poland has a long way to go before martial law is ended.

"The calendar must not decide the future of our country, and above all no external pressure whatsoever must decide it," he said in an apparent reference to Western demands for the release of interned and restoration of civil liberties.

"If no illegal actions develop, if unforeseen circumstances do not arise, these restrictions (on civil liberties) will be lifted, or considerably reduced, at any rate, by the end of next month," said Jaruzelski.

He accused the United States and NATO of indulging in "psychological propaganda aggression" against Poland, especially by withholding food shipments.

He repeated Polish claims that attempts by the West to have martial law lifted violate the Helsinki accords. Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko was expected to make the same assertion today in talks with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. in Geneva.

In Washington, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said diplomatic reports contradict Jaruzelski's claim that repressive measures may soon be lifted. He said Jaruzelski's speech seemed to be a justification of martial law, so it "surely could not be characterized as positive in its implications."

The ND-SMC ski team participated in a nine-team meet in Brandywine, Ohio, on Saturday. The Saint Mary's team finished fifth overall in the slalom. Sharon Smiggen finished seventh in the slalom, and Nancy Sheft finished eighth. In the giant slalom, the St. Mary's squad finished second. In individual giant slalom competition, Smiggen finished fourth, Dwyer finished fifth, and Sheft finished eighth. The Notre Dame women finished third as a team in the slalom. Katie Gaffney finished third, Sue Hull placed 11th, and Beth Mahrer finished 14th. The ND women won the giant slalom team competition. Gaffney finished second, Theresa Abrams finished third, Mahrer finished sixth, and Hull placed 12th. The ND men finished third in the team slalom competition. Mike Maas finished third, Sean Chandler seventh, Steve Hilbert 15th, and Kim Hewson 19th. The men also finished third in the giant slalom competition. Hewson placed sixth, Chandler finished ninth, Phil Stenger 10th, and Barry Tharp 11th. — The Observer

Bookstore Basketball Commissioner Emeritus Rob Simari and An-Tostal Chairman Kevin Cawneen have announced that Dave Dziedzic will be the commissioner of the 1982 tournament. Dziedzic will soon be forming a committee to assist him in organizing the prestigious tournament. — The Observer

The City of San Francisco continued its boisterous Super Bowl celebration yesterday, as the fans awaited the return of their heroes. Balloons of red and gold, the 49ers colors, fluttered in clusters over City Hall. But with the fun-making came some trouble. More than 100 people suffered minor injuries and another 100 were arrested. Police used riot gear and called in reinforcements in the rowdiest spots in what some observers called San Francisco's biggest street party since the end of World War II. — AP

HOCKEY — In hockey action this past week Keenan scored three quick goals in the last three minutes to edge a tough Cavanaugh squad, 4-3. The game, which featured more than just good play, came to a close with each team having only three players on the ice. Cavanaugh is off this week while Keenan meets Stanford Thursday night.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL — This past Sunday a quick Farley team out-ran and out-rebounded Lyons I, and in the end out-scored them, 25-14. As Lyons coach Dennis Rischard said, "They were a lot quicker than we were and were more aggressive on the boards". Coach Rischard and his team have a chance to improve their record this Sunday against Badin, who also picked up a win in this past Sunday's competition. The game is slated for 2:30 and will be played in gym II of the ACC.

CROSS COUNTRY SKI — As reported earlier, the NVA will sponsor a weekend cross country ski rental at a cost of $12 a weekend. The equipment will be issued from 4 to 5 p.m. on Friday afternoons in the room across from the golf shop and should be returned in the same place Sundays at the same time.

VOLLEYBALL — There is a mandatory meeting for all the captains of both men's and women's volleyball teams this Thursday. The men will meet at 4 p.m. and the women at 4:30. Both meetings will be held in the ACC auditorium.

TRACK — As reported last week, Non-Varsity Athletics is sponsoring an indoor track meet for both men and women. The deadline for entries is tomorrow, Jan. 27, and should be submitted to the NVA office (C-2 ACC).

The only thing missing was Kool and the Gang.

"We played so good, it was such a big win," gushed Paxson. "It was great to see the student body in the game, too. They really pulled us through."

But leave it to the maestro himself to give credit to the students where it was due.

"They're beautiful," Phelps said. "They got us back in it and they didn't quit on us."

"We're on a roll now, and we need them. We're only two weeks into the semester, so maybe if we lock the library doors, we'll be all right."

On this memorable night, when another chapter was penned into the endless anthology of Notre Dame comebacks, the stat sheet read thusly: Ron Rowan, 17 points; Bill Varner, 11 points; John Paxson, 10 points.

And for the 11,345 in attendance — one giant assist.

IRISH ITEMS: Cheerleader Jody DeGraff, injured in a pregame tumble, suffered only a badly bruised tailbone and will be all right... From hot to cold: Idaho scored 36 points and shot 82 percent in the first half. In the second half, the Vandals shot 33 percent and tallied just 12 points... Both teams went with the same lineups throughout the entire second half, with four Vandals logging the entire 45 minutes... The Irish upped their record to 5-10, while Idaho fell to 16-2... Idaho finished the game with a 60 percent figure from the field, while Notre Dame hit 53 percent.

Rowan stars

Irish sack Vandals in OT

By CHRIS NEEDLES
Sports Writer

Just as Notre Dame reached "the other side of the mountain," as Digger Phelps put it Saturday, it was buried underneath an avalanche by Idaho in last night's first half. To the tune of 94 percent shooting at one point.

But leave it to the mountain boy himself, Ron Rowan, to dig the Irish out of an 18-point deficit and lead ND to a marvelous 50-48 overtime upset of the 11th-ranked Vandals last night at the ACC.

Rowan, a freshman forward who hails from the hills of western Pennsylvania, paced the Irish with 17 points off the bench, including three key free throws in the extra session, to cap another of Notre Dame's patented comebacks.

Just where last night's victory ranks in the annals of Irish basketball history is not certain. A jubilant Phelps tried to put it in perspective after the game.

"I thought the Marquette win a few years ago (when the Irish came back from a 14-point halftime deficit to beat the No. 1 Warriors) was a great comeback," said Phelps. "But this is right up there with the best of them."

Needless to say, things were looking pretty dismal for the Irish in the first half. Idaho surged like a runaway Amtrak to a 28-10 advantage, thanks to some unconscious field goal shooting.

With 7:32 left in the first half, the Vandals had missed just one of their first 15 shots in the game. Yes, that's 94 percent. "That's even great from the foul line," commented forward Bill Varner.

The Vandals not only could throw the ball in the ocean, as the saying goes, but they threatened to shoot it through the eye of a needle. The Irish were down by 18 points, they had committed turnover after turnover — in all, it looked as though two weeks of solid performances, when Notre Dame climbed up and over the 2-9 hump, was going to be blown away in just 40 minutes of action.

But then a funny thing happened. Idaho missed a shot.

Never has one errant shot so reversed the momentum of a basketball game. The sellout crowd, knowing a rare occurrence when it sees one, roared its approval. And roared some more.

With a "sixth man" on their side, the Irish went on a 10-point spree of their own, including two buckets by guard John Paxson, and closed to within ten points at the half. The Vandals were down to "only" 82 percent, but that was falling as quickly as South Bend's wind chill.

"I think they got too hot too quickly," said Phelps.

"We tried not to think about it too much," Paxson said. "The coaches assured us that sooner or later they were gonna start missing. We kept our zone packed in, and it finally paid off."

No arguments here. In the final 32 minutes of the game, Idaho shot just 10 for 25 (only 6 of 18 in the second half) and scored only 20 points. The defense rests its case.

Meanwhile, the Irish were clawing slowly but surely back into contention. It was still a 10-point Vandal lead (42-32) with 13 minutes left when Coach Don Monson made a crucial (and wrong) decision. With his squad controlling the game's tempo, Monson went to a delay offense to run some time off the clock.

Digger Phelps began licking his chops.

"I told the players that if they (the Vandals) wanted to hold the ball for ten minutes, we were gonna let them," Phelps said, "because the crowd's gonna react and eventually they were gonna turn it over. And that's what I think really helped us."

Lo and behold, the Irish ran off another 10-point surge, culminated by two Rowan free throws, to tie the game at 42 with 5:35 left. Then Idaho hit two straight buckets, and visions of another near miss (a la Villanova) danced in the heads of Irish fans.

But thanks to the magic of John Paxson, and also two missed Idaho free throws, Notre Dame forced the extra five minutes.

Paxson hit a short baseline jumper with :08 left to tie the game at 46, then stole the outlet pass and called time out in one motion with :03 left. The Irish set up a play for Varner but his 25-footer at the buzzer hit the back of the iron and bounced away.

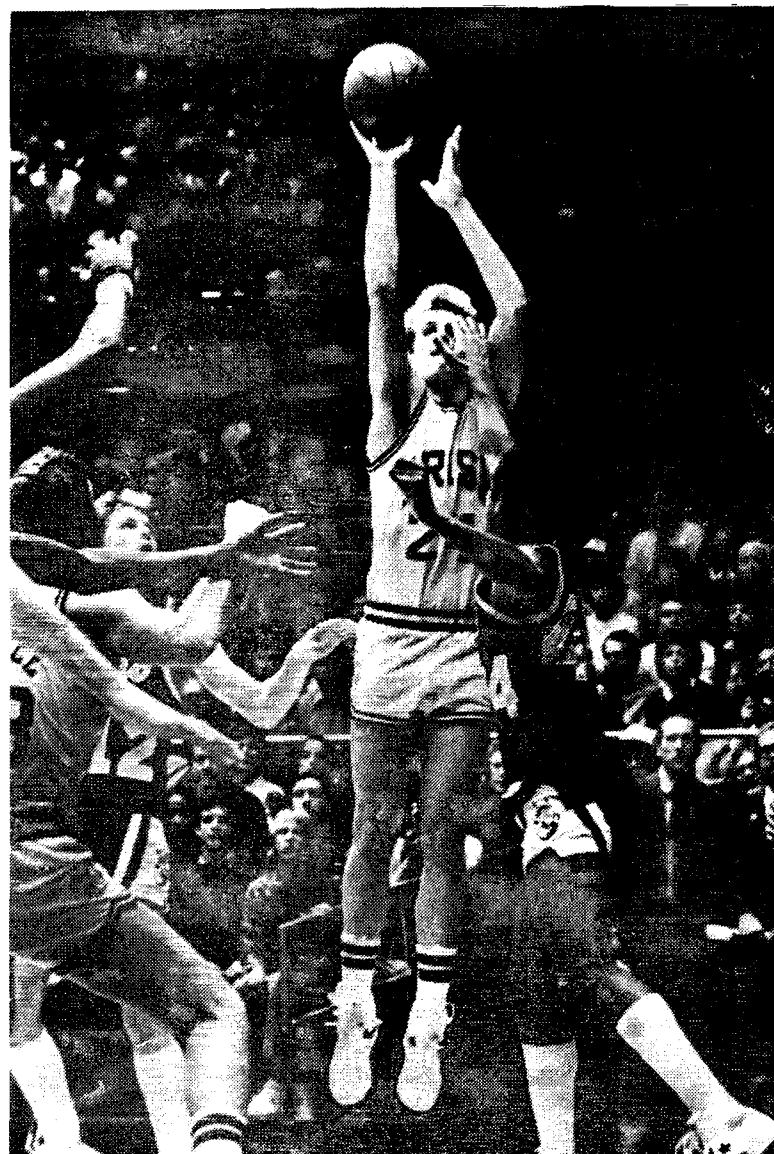

Thanks to Rowan's free throws, Notre Dame looked golden with a 49-46 lead and only :48 remaining. Idaho's Brian Kellerman (18 points to take game scoring honors) hit a gift layup, and then teammate Ken Owens (12 points) stole the inbounds pass and threatened to spoil the party.

But Varner came out of nowhere to reject Owens' layup attempt, and eventually ended up on the foul line to put the game away.

He didn't.

Varner made only one out of two and the Vandals had an opportunity to force a second overtime. They went to their ace Kellerman, who was 7-of-8 in the first half but only 2-of-6 after halftime. His 15-footer hit the front of the iron, Rowan (who else?) rebounded, and the celebration began.

Tripucka adjusts to NBA, Pistons

By WILL HARE
Sports Writer

Kelly Tripucka would have loved to play basketball in his home state of New Jersey. But when the New Jersey Nets had the tenth pick in the first round of the 1981 NBA draft, they ignored the ex-Notre Dame great and chose another small forward, Albert King. Apparently Coach Larry Brown did not want the Nets to select anyone who played for his enemy, Digger Phelps.

Two picks later, Tripucka was selected by the Detroit Pistons. Since then he has been a surprise to Brown and other critics throughout the NBA world with his outstanding play.

Tripucka is currently ranked second among rookies with a 20.2 scoring average. He has scored in double figures in 40 of 43 games including a 38-point performance against Julius Erving and the Philadelphia 76ers. Kelly has been the top point man for the Pistons in 12 games and is averaging nearly 38 minutes a contest, which is unheard of for rookies in the NBA.

For a guy who looked as if he had indigestion when he was selected by the Pistons, Tripucka has adjusted to the Detroit situation quite well. "I was just disappointed because I wanted to play back home. I hadn't talked to anybody from Detroit, so it was a totally unexpected thing," says Tripucka.

"They hadn't had a winning program and I wasn't used to that," he continues. "But now I'm in a situation where I'm starting, I'm playing a lot of minutes, doing well and it makes everything different."

At the time of the draft, Tripucka was criticized by scouts for being too slow for the NBA. However, he has even played in the backcourt on several occasions this season.

"My senior year, I did a little bit more ball-handling than usual. That helped a little bit," he says. "Then over the summer, I got to play mostly guard when I played in the summer leagues. I think that really helped me a lot. So, I was able to make the transition."

Tripucka, along with heralded rookie teammate Isiah Thomas, has brought a winning attitude into the Motor City. "We're here to contribute to the team and make the team better," he adds. "We have been accepted really well. The other guys are happy for us because they've been part of the losing seasons."

Tripucka has been a success not only because of a good attitude, but also because of sheer hustle. "Kelly is my blue-collar worker," says Detroit coach Scotty Robertson.

"He rolls up his sleeves and digs in. He's the kind of player who skins his knees and arms at the beginning of the season and they stay that way until the season is over," Robertson points out. "If there is a loose ball on the floor, Tripucka will grab it."

At 6-6, Tripucka is matching up against a bigger forward almost every night. Yet Kelly has adjusted. "The competition is tremendous every night. The players are more physical," Tripucka says.

"The players are faster and it's more of a high scoring game. But there is defense, which most people don't realize," says Tripucka. "For me, I can't go inside as much. The players are bigger and they block more shots."

The Pistons have fallen on hard times in January. Detroit is now in fifth place in the NBA's Central Division, but Tripucka remains optimistic. "I think we have a chance to sneak in there. I think if we can win 38-40 games, we should be in the playoffs," he says.

You've done it again

Well, Notre Dame, you did it again.

In the past, things haven't always been this way. During the good times, the ACC was packed for matchups with the likes of UCLA, DePaul, Marquette and San Francisco.

But during the good times, more often than not, the building echoed in emptiness for games against teams like Brown, Canisius, Montana State and Cal-Poly Pomona.

Now, in what could easily be called "the bad times," the South Dome of the ACC has been filled for every game. Despite the brutal cold and the dismal record, Irish fans have come to the ballgames.

There have been no repeats of the embarrassing Fairfield incident, when students cheered for the other team. There have been no half-empty houses, when the bleachers might just as well be folded up.

A week and a half ago, the worst basketball slump in ten years here reached its lowest point. Burdened with a 2-9 record, Notre Dame was actually down by 10 points to a Davidson team that was mediocre at best.

It was at that point that the students came to life. Digger Phelps got it started with a couple of technical fouls, and Ron Rowan put the finishing touches on it with 13 points. But the students sustained the momentum that has yet to subside.

Last night the fans, Phelps and Rowan topped that feat with a win that somehow seems to make all the losing worth it.

Phelps said all there was to say about last night's upset when he met with the press afterward.

"This is a special crowd."

"The best."

It seemed that the Vandals would run away with the house midway through the first half. With 7:32 to go, Gordie Herbert hit an off-balance jumper from 17 feet, the 14th basket in 15 attempts for Idaho. Phelps slowly rose from the patented crouch, walked down the court toward the Idaho bench, and yelled at Vandal coach Don Monson.

"Don't you guys ever miss?"

But the next time down the floor they did just that.

It was at that point that the students made their biggest contribution to Notre Dame sports in two years.

Skip Desjardin
Sports Editor

You stood up.

And you stayed on your feet for the rest of the game.

Notre Dame scored ten straight points, prompting Monson to call a timeout. But it was too late. Phelps decided then that the Irish could play man-to-man with the nation's eleventh-ranked team. He was right, but he had an ace in the hole.

The infamous "sixth man," whose exploits have unjustifiably been exaggerated since the infamous upset of San Francisco in March of 1977, made the difference the rest of the way.

"I don't like to make excuses," Monson told reporters, "but the crowd made a difference. When our guys went to the line down the stretch, they were definitely distracted."

"I'd like to play these guys in my building. We get crowds, but..."

He trailed off before finishing, but his intent was clear.

"But not like this," the bewildered shake of his head said it all.

Phelps was jubilant in the press room when it was over, but he became serious quickly when asked about the crowd and the role it played in the win.

"I just hope they show up again Wednesday night," he told reporters. "After beating Maryland and Idaho, we don't want a let down. The students have been unbelievable through all this, and I just hope they stay with us."

"We need them every step of the way from here on in, as much against Maine as we will against anybody else."

In years past, there would almost certainly be a large number of empty seats for a game like tomorrow's with the unheralded Black Bears. But this is a new year. Students believe in this team, as they have in no other since any of them have been here.

Yeah, Notre Dame, you did it again.
