Canadian oil rig sinks, crew missing

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland (AP) - The giant oil rig Ocean Ranger sank in a raging storm 200 miles offshore yesterday, and all 84 workers were feared lost in 40-foot seas. They had been ordered earlier to take to lifeboats.

The multimillion-dollar Ranger, described as the biggest oil rig in the world, went to the bottom of the Grand Banks of Newfoundland a few hours after dawn, according to the rig manager, Mobil Oil Canada Ltd.

The rig went down nine hours after the crew was ordered off the badly listing rig and into covered lifeboats, Mobil said.

It was not known how many of the men made it into the boats, but the crews of rescue planes and ships said they saw bodies floating in the area. No rescues had been reported by late afternoon.

Asked if there was any hope that some might still be alive, a Mobil spokesman said "there was no indication of any survivors."

A search and rescue spokesman in Halifax, Nova Scotia, said the type of life raft used by the rig was designed so survivors could live for several hours even if their raft was upside down in the water. The rig reportedly carried survival suits said to help keep a wearer alive for about an hour.

A spokesman for the rig owners — ocean Drilling and Exploration Drilling Co. of New Orleans, La. — said that of the 84 people on the rig, 10 Americans and 25 Canadians were employees of the owners.

Company public relations officer Al Spindler said the remainder of the crew were service hands employed by sub-contracting firms. Most would be Newfoundlanders.

Spindler said the Ranger was the biggest and toughest oil drilling platform afloat. No figure was immediately available for its value, but Lloyd's Shipping Register of Colchester, England, said the sinking was the largest loss in oil rig history.

Snow whipped by 80 mph winds battered the Ranger overnight Sunday. Mobil reported the rig was listing at 15 degrees and that the men had been ordered to abandon it. Communications went out soon after.

When search planes reached the area at first light they said the rig was still upright, although tilting 10 to 15 degrees.

But within a short time there was no sign of the rig, said the rescuers, who were operating in poor visibility. All that could be seen was some of the gear used to anchor the six-year-old Ocean Ranger in place.

Mobil spokesman Ed Bonnell said the rig might have capsized before sinking, but "that's only a hypothesis."

Spindler said the rig was especially designed to withstand the rigors of winter in the North Atlantic. "It underwent much worse — just this winter it underwent worse," said Spindler.

Last week the Ocean Ranger was reported to have listed severely when too much ballast was pumped into one of its legs. An unidentified crewman was quoted in television news reports last week as saying an order to abandon ship was given during the incident.

Mobil confirmed that a general alarm had been sounded when the rig listed but that the problem was

Support for Braun alters plans

By MIKE LEPRE
News Staff

Due to the restrictions of martial law in Poland prohibiting Polish director Kazimierz Braun from leaving his homeland, the Notre Dame-Saint Mary's Theatre has cancelled its planned production of a Shakespearian comedy, in favor of a Polish protest program.

Braun, a highly regarded professor from the University of Wroclaw, had planned to join the Theatre Department as the director of this spring's Shakespearian comedy. However, as a result of the declaration of martial law in Poland, Braun has not been permitted to leave his country.

ND-SMC Theatre Publicity Director Mary Francell explains, "In January the Polish Consulate said that they would confirm Braun's arrival, but apparently they were misled, or they misled us." The last communication between the Theatre group and Braun himself was through a postcard that he sent while in Japan during late November of 1981.

In that postcard, Braun wrote "I hope to see you in the United States in January of 82," however, following Braun's return to Poland, communications between the parties were lost.

According to Francell, "had martial law not occurred, Braun would have been out of Poland and here today." As a result of this turn of events faculty members of the Theatre Department decided to defer the scheduled Shakespearian production.

The altered plans include the production of either a Polish play, or perhaps a combination of one-act presentations. According to Francell, the Department would "prefer to find a Polish written play," and under serious consideration is the production of one of a number of plays written by Slawomir Mrozek, a Polish playwright and Solidarity sympathizer.

The aim of the newly instituted program is "to show that we in the Notre Dame-Saint Mary's community have good faith in the Polish citizens," said Anne Patterson, a member of the Theatre group. Pat-

Cookbook for poor

Reagan cuts publications

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — No longer will employees in the Bureau of Land Management office in Cheyenne, Wyo., see their pictures in a staff yearbook. Nor will the Agriculture Department publish a recipe book for poor people that tells how to stuff hard-boiled eggs with crabmeat.

For that matter, you won't be able to subscribe to Dimensions, the magazine published by the National Bureau of Standards, to learn what's new in the government's efforts to measure and weigh. The magazine doesn't exist anymore.

All three publications are casualties of President Reagan's campaign to cut the budget. When Reagan took office in January 1981, one of his first actions was to have the Office of Management and Budget order a halt to all new government films and publications, and a survey of existing publications to see which might be abandoned as unnecessary.

The deadline for finishing the survey is March 31, but the budget office concedes that because of the paperwork involved, that date won't be met.

With the onslaught of Reagan's initial budget cuts, many government agencies responded in part by producing fewer newsletters and magazines.

Figures from Uncle Sam's printer, the Government Printing Office, prove that fewer publications are being churned out. But no one seems to know exactly what is being printed.

Judith Morton of the GPO says the agency's current inventory is about 20,000 titles, including newsletters. Many publications are technical and have only limited appeal. About 80 percent of the GPO's customers are state and local governments and companies that do business with the federal government.

The four most popular publications among the public deal with child care. The best seller is "Infant Care," a Health and Human Services Department booklet that sells for $2.25 per copy.

Other popular titles are the three-volume "Backyard Mechanic," priced at $13.50; the "Dictionary of Occupation Titles," at $13.50 a copy, and the Public Health Service's "Medicine at Sea" at $17.

The GPO also operates 27 bookstores around the country, most in federal office buildings, and wants to close all but four to save an estimated $1.2 billion. A congressional committee moved last week to keep them open, at least until auditors can determine if they are losing or making money.

The GPO loses money on most of its publications because of over-printing and because they often sell for about two-thirds what a commercial publishing house would charge. Hoping to change that, the GPO has hired a marketing director to find ways to make more money.

Reagan's austerity campaign notwithstanding, the government is one of the world's busiest publishers. The Commerce Department alone produces an estimated 1,000 publications. So does the Department of Health and Human Services. The figure is 1,200 for the Interior Department. At the Pentagon, the total is still being added up.

Student Senate reviews budget reallocation

NEWS STAFF

A proposed constitutional amendment giving the Student Senate the power to reallocate Student Activity funds met opposition last night at the Student Senate meeting. A decision on the proposal was tabled until next week.

Drawn up by a Senate ad hoc committee set up to study budgeting procedures, the proposed amendment would establish a standing committee on the Budget. Composed of students drawn from Student Government, the Student Union and the Hall President's Council, the committee would review budget requests and make recommendations to the Senate by May 1. Prior to Feb. 1, the committee would formally review the budget a second time. This provision drew criticism from several members of the Senate.

"If Student Government, the Student Union or the HPC mismanage money within their divisions, reallocation is necessary," commented Student Union Director Bill Lawler. "But it's not fair for one division to take another's allocation."

Concerned about divisions staying within their budgets, Mike Martin, HPC Chairman, commented, "The safety valve of reallocation turns original allocation into a farce."

Keenan Hall President Paul Callahan disagreed. "The budget committee is for the students. There shouldn't be inaccessible pockets of money to help certain groups. Reallocation gives us the opportunity to help benefit all of the students."

"A very dismal show," in which conflicts are worsened rather than resolved is how U.S. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick described the United Nations yesterday in Washington. She told 225 leaders of the American Legion yesterday that some U.N. agencies, including its refugee commission, the World Health Organization and its meteorological service, do "very positive things which we would all be happy to contribute to." But she added, "If we look at what happens in New York out in the Security Council and in the General Assembly, then I guess I believe it is a very dismal show. And what is worse, its effect, I think, is almost precisely the opposite of the intentions of the founders of the United Nations...above all to assist in conflict resolution." "What we find instead is that conflicts, rather than being resolved there are in fact polarized, extended and exacerbated. They are much harder to solve rather than easier to solve, generally speaking," she said. The Reagan Administration's U.N. ambassador made the criticisms in response to a question from a Legion member who asked if it was "worth $5 million a day for our one vote against the world." — AP

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland yesterday assailed the Reagan administration's budget as "an intolerable tradeoff" of social programs for the Defense Department and called for an income surtax to pay for any Pentagon increases. Emerging from a two hour meeting with the AFL-CIO executive council in Florida, Kirkland said administration officials were being unrealistic in voicing hope for an economic turnaround this year. "I think that's whistling through the graveyard," Kirkland told a news conference at the concil's midwinter meeting here. Kirkland accused President Reagan of sacrificing a host of social programs in a time of recession so the administration can increase Pentagon spending by $33 billion in the next fiscal year. — AP

In Cape Canaveral a large "crawler" has been readied to roll out the space shuttle Columbia to its launch pad at the Kennedy Space Center today, officials said yesterday. The three mile move will take about eight hours, space center spokesman Mark Hess said. He said the crawler is a six million-pound vehicle that "moves on big tracks like a big steam shovel" to haul the shuttle at less than one mph to the launch pad, where the Columbia will be poised to begin its third space voyage March 22. The four million-pound shuttle has been housed in the Vehicle Assembly Building, and the journey to the pad will start there at 5 a.m. As soon as the Columbia is rested on the platform, Hess said, technicians will begin hooking it to the pad and securing propellant, electrical, gas and communications lines. — AP

Two brothers were ordered held without bond yesterday in Chicago in the slayings of two police officers who were gunned down after stopping a car on a traffic violation. William Fahey, 34, and Richard O'Brien, 33, were killed Feb. 9. Andrew Wilson, 29, and his brother, Jackie, 21, were arrested Sunday in separate apartments on murder warrants, authorities said. Police said Andrew Wilson told them he accidentally shot Fahey with the officer's gun during a struggle over a jacket as Fahey was reaching for his revolver. Wilson told police he then shot O'Brien in self-defense when the patrolman approached him with his pistol drawn, authorities said. — AP

A newspaper article in Newport, R.I., identified a prostitute as a potential witness in Claus C. von Bulow's attempted murder trial and apparently provoked a judge to ask jurors yesterday whether they were reading about the case. Superior Court Judge Thomas H. Needham later blasted reporters who tried to find out what was said in the private meeting with jurors and lawyers — which took up much of the morning. "Your number could be seriously curtailed if there is another repetition of the group as a whole trying to find out," the judge warned. Assistant defense attorney John Sheehan said after the conference that the defense would not file a motion for a mistrial, suggesting jurors had not seen the story in question. Von Bulow, 55, is accused of twice trying to murder his wife, Martha "Sunny" von Bulow, with insulin injections during Christmas visits to their Millionaires Row mansion in 1979 and 1980. — AP

Illness interrupts Atlanta murder trial

ATLANTA (AP) — Wayne B. Williams' murder trial was cut short yesterday when a minor intestinal virus forced him to leave the courtroom a second time, just as his uncle took the stand as a defense witness.

Earlier, two defense witnesses had testified that Williams disliked homosexuals and referred to them by a derogatory term. Prosecutors claim Williams is a homosexual and that his sexual preference played a part in the deaths of the two young black men he is accused of killing.

Doctors at Grady Memorial Hospital had treated the 23-year-old Williams for his illness during a lunch break yesterday, and he returned to the courtroom for the afternoon session.

He left again about 3:30 p.m., and Superior Court Judge Clarence Cooper recessed the trial for the day when it became apparent that Williams could not return. Cheryl Tyler, a court spokeswoman, said the defendant was taken back to the county jail.

The incident interrupted the testimony of Williams' uncle, Ralph Barnhart of Columbus, who had just taken the stand.

Williams, a black free-lance photographer and aspiring talent promoter, has pleaded innocent to charges of murdering Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, two of 28 young blacks whose deaths over a 22-month period have been investigated by a special police task force.

No arrests have been made in the other 26 cases, but prosecutors have presented evidence in 10 additional deaths in an effort to show a pattern that might fit the Cater and Payne slayings.

Carla Bailey, a business associate of Williams, testified that Williams called homosexuals "twinkies" and "wished not to be in their presence."

Faith Swift, a friend of Bailey, said Williams enjoyed flirting with women and "just didn't like" homosexuals.

Defense lawyers have been chipping away at prosecutors' contention that Williams is a homosexual. They called Williams' girlfriend to the stand last week to say she had had sexual relations with him.

The defense opened the eighth week of the trial yesterday by calling Bailey, Swift and other character witnesses for Williams.

Bailey also contradicted a prosecution witness who claimed to have seen Williams with one of the 28 slaying victims. Williams has denied knowing any of the victims.

Kent Hindsman testified last month that Williams gave him a ride home from a recording studio in December 1980 and that Bailey and 15-year-old Joseph "Jo Jo" Bell, the 24th victim on the task force list, were in the car.

Bailey said yesterday the teenager in the car with them was named David Stevens.

Under cross-examination, however, Bailey admitted she told law enforcement agents before Williams was arrested last June that she had never been with Williams when he was transporting any of the young singers who auditioned for him.

Pledge to Israelis Begin protests missile sale to Jordan

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin declared yesterday that President Reagan would break a pledge to maintain Israel's military advantage if he lets Jordan buy U.S. anti-aircraft missiles and F-16 warplanes.

Israel's 120-member parliament, the Knesset, passed a bi-partisan resolution yesterday expressing "deep concern" over the possible sale and asking President Reagan and Congress "to refrain from a danger so grave to Israel's security." The vote was 88-3 with six abstentions.

The Foreign Ministry said the issue would be brought up immediately by Israel's new ambassador to Washington, Moshe Arens. He presents his credentials to President Reagan today.

Jordan's King Hussein has not officially requested specific American arms nor have any been publicly offered.

But Begin's government has moved swiftly to state its sharp objections after reports that Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger proposed selling Hawk mobile anti-aircraft missiles and F-16 fighter jets to Jordan last week during his visit to Amman.

Officials accompanying Weinberger said such a deal would help balance Jordan against its pro-Soviet neighbor Syria and also keep the Soviet Union from selling more arms to Jordan.

If the Reagan Administration goes ahead with the sale, Israel appears ready for a confrontation on the scale of its bitter but losing fight against last year's sale of advanced radar planes to Saudi Arabia.

"We must not postpone even for a single day the registering of our position in the face of this grave threat to the security of our people," Begin told the Knesset. He spoke from a wheelchair, which he uses while recovering from a broken hip joint he suffered in November.

... Publications

Still, Reagan claims to have made some progress. In his State of the Union address last month, he said his effort to reduce federal regulation had resulted in nearly 23,000 fewer pages in the Federal Register, the daily publication of federal regulations and notices.

Morton reported that in the fiscal year which ended Oct. 1, the GPO used 103.7 million pounds of paper, nearly 6 million pounds fewer than in the previous 12 months. She predicted a similar decrease this year.

Dimensions magazine was only one of an unknown number of publications to die as a result of Reagan's budget cuts last year. OMB officials cannot say how many have been abandoned, because the survey is still under way.

The OMB followed its own directive by printing fewer copies of Reagan's new fiscal 1983 budget, and distributing fewer free copies to members of Congress and the media.

The OMB printed 33,963 copies of the budget this year, compared with 64,889 copies last year, and it gave away 16,963 copies compared with 41,899 last year. To save money, the OMB omitted the usual leather bindings for the two dozen volumes of the budget given to congressional leaders.

The overall savings so far have been considerable, said OMB spokeswoman Robin Rayborn. In fiscal 11-82, $103.7 million was saved by eliminating publications, including $6,000 for the Bureau of Land Management yearbook in Cheyenne and $33,000 for the Agriculture Department recipe book.

The Commerce Department saved $325,000 by combining 13 internal magazines into one publication and another $50,000 by using a lower grade of paper for its magazine, Business America, said Richard Valentine, a department spokesman.

Shoppers charge discount store

COHOES, N.Y. (AP) — Battalions of sale-crazed shoppers laid siege to a discount store in this aging textile-mill city yesterday, engaging other bargain hunters in hand-to-hand combat after the doors opened for a Washington's Birthday sale.

"It's total chaos. There's women fighting with each other, women grabbing the same handbags and belting each other," said Police Sgt. Jim Young, who was standing duty at Cohoes Specialty Stores Ltd.

The excitement was stirred by leather blouson jackets by Kenar for $79 ("nationally advertised at $290"), Capraro dresses for $23 (down from $238), and $11 Halston metallic handbags, once $150-$170, among other sale items.

Hundreds of women and a few men, looking out of place, began to queue up in the cold before dawn. By the end of the day bargain hunters were expected to have doubled the population of this city of 19,000 north of Albany where the Hudson and Mohawk rivers meet.

Young said five off-duty officers were hired to back up the store's regular security force in patrolling the mammoth sale.

Cohoes, which sells namebrand and designer clothes for men and women, normally offers a wide range of goods at prices 20 percent to 30 percent lower than traditional retail, according to Ben Ames, the store's vice chairman.

But prices really plummet on Washington's Birthday.

Darlene Levy, 21, of Lake Grove on Long Island, spent the weekend at a former college roommate's house in nearby Waterford so she could get in line at 5:30 a.m.

Last year, Levy said, she got a $660 three-piece Oscar de la Renta suit for $29, and in the process "I got knocked down. But I'm back for more."

Profits in the modern, 50,000 square foot, two-level store in the downtown shopping area are based on "volume and watching our expense structure. That's one of the reasons we're not in a high-priced mall," said Sanford Zimmerman, the store's chairman.

"Making it worth our while does not mean making a profit," added Margery Lapp, coordinator for advertising and promotion. "Clearing out is important in this business too. You don't want all that old merchandise lying around."

"Washington's Birthday...the only way I can describe it is...madness," said Lapp. "People line their arms with Etienne Aigner purses and then sit on the floor and start bartering."

The lines were so long by the time the store opened last year that some customers couldn't get in until noon.

By early afternoon yesterday, Lapp said it was "elbow-to-elbow" on the sales floor, with a good crowd still waiting outside.

... Braun

erson asserts that although their Polish protest "will not be saying anything new," the group has "t finally been touched through the situation surrounding Braun."

"Very oft t en people are so far removed from what's going on in other parts of the world," said Patterson, "that they fail to realize the difficulties and hardships facing citizens in other countries." In addition to a Polish production, the Theatre Department is also hoping to attract a number of speakers to the campus in an effort to familiarize the ND-SMC students with the current situation in Poland.

While another foreign director is being sought for the new production, the Theatre students are losing a certain degree of valuable experience. "As students of the Department we are losing the opportunity of not only working with a great artist," said Patterson, "but we are missing out on the experience that producing a Shakespeare play obviously provides."

Although most of the ND-SMC Theatre members wanted to do the Shakespeare presentation, the students are behind the Polish program.

Francell feels that the main concern of the group at this point in time is to come up with "some sort of production to involve all the students," and is assured that "once the Polish program gets started people will really begin to get excited about it."

While unusual circumstances have caused the Shakespearean comedy to be cancelled for this year, the presentation is to be rescheduled for production some time next year.

Heavy security

Police protect Pope, jail four

IBADAN, Nigeria (AP) - A slightly sunburned Pope John Paul II was ringed by heavy security yesterday as he celebrated Mass in the Moslem city of Ibadan. The Nigerian press said four people were jailed for carrying guns at earlier stops by the pontiff.

Papal Spokesman Romeo Pancirolli said church officials were unaware of the arrests, and the Lagos police commissioner said he had no knowledge of one of the incidents reported by the government-controlled news agency.

Ibadan was the midway point of John Paul's eight-day African tour, his first trip overseas since he was shot in St. Peter's Square last May 13. A Turk, Mehmet Ali Agca, has been convicted of the assault.

Helmeted Nigerian soldiers surrounded John Paul's limousine, and when the pope tried to slide open the sunroof to wave, a guard slammed it shut. Police also seized several Polish flags held by well-wishers to check them for weapons or bombs.

The government-controlled Nigerian News Agency reported yesterday from Lagos that police detained a man with a loaded pistol and six rounds of ammunition on Friday as he tried to force his way into the 100,000-seat National Stadium where the pope celebrated Mass. It was not clear whether the man was charged.

But Lagos Police Commissioner Al-Hagi Mohammed Nasarawa told The Associated Press he had no knowledge of the incident.

The News Agency of Nigeria also said two men and a woman were seized at the Kaduna airport after the pope left there Sunday. The agency said a taxi driver reported seeing a loaded pistol in a bag they were carrying and that all three were charged yesterday in a magistrate's court with illegal possession of firearms. The three were identified as a student nurse, a pharmacist and a "trader," all from Lagos.

Handguns and street crimes have become common in Nigeria's larger cities in recent years. The possession of a handgun without a police permit is illegal but the law generally is ignored.

The 61-year-old pope, looking a bit tired, told a friendly crowd of more than 100,000 at Ibadan University not to exploit black Africa's poverty for political reasons and to never lose sight of religious conviction.

He was cheered as he celebrated Mass on the athletic fields of the university, 95 miles north of Lagos.

The crowd included professors in gowns and mortar boards, papal knights with tricorne hats and students in blue jeans. They were joined by members of Nigeria's Christian and Protestant communities, as well as academics from neighboring Benin, Togo and Cameroon.

"The cultural underdevelopment of some ... must not be used as a tool for partisan, ideological, economic or social aims," the pope said in his homily.

"The cynical exploitation of human misery and ignorance for aims that have nothing to do with human dignity and the elevation of man and of society is a great crime against the work of the Creator," he said.

The pro-chancellor of Ibadan university, Dr. Christopher G. Okojie, said he hoped the papal visit would promote the attainment of human equality by "just and holy means."

The pope was presented with a bronze bust of himself and a native picture of the Last Supper superimposed on a silver Nigerian map.

The pope dined last night with Nigeria's 32 bishops. During the meeting, he responded to allegations by some Moslems and exponents of native beliefs that the church had introduced European ideas into Africa in an effort to subjugate blacks.

"The church comes to bring Christ," he declared. "She does not come to bring the culture of another race."

The pope's five-day visit to Nigeria concludes today. Tomorrow he flies to neighboring Benin, formerly the French colony of Dahomey. He then travels to Gabon and Equatorial Guinea before returning Friday to the Vatican.

Nigeria is Africa's most populous nation with 90 million people. Of these, 30 million are Moslem, 18 million Christian and 5 million to 6 million Roman Catholic. The remainder pursue different forms of ancestor worship and animism, the belief in spirits and demons.

Salivfic impact

Shea tells religious stories

By CINDY COLDIRON
News Staff

Last night speaking to a capacity crowd at Saint Mary's Carroll Hall on "The Way Religious Stories Work", Father John Shea, director of the ministry program for the Archdiocese of Chicago, remarked that "experiencing the self in relationship to the mystery of a story was as important as the story contributing to one's religious experience."

He said that "stories could function religiously in three ways. The first way is that they can widen your consciousness, pull you into the depth of every day and open you up to the mystery of everyday life. When a story functions religiously it brings to the heart a mystery of life and opens up a wider horizon."

Shea continued saying, "religious stories have to fill you with feeling and perception. It has got to engulf you and make you feel your existence...it has to give you a sense that what you found in the story is salivfic. It has to intersect in your life and the relationship to that mystery has to be sensed as salivfic."

Referring to the story of the miraculous catch of fish by Jesus and St. Peter, Shea said that "when a story has religious impact, you are forced into this salivfic question of what will you do with a gift that is freely given? Will you use it over and against your brothers and sisters or give it away to benefit all like Peter did?"

"In order for a story to have salivfic impact, it has to stay with you. You have to meditate on it and use its images and metaphors. When you grow up in the religious tradition, stories can tend to lose their impact and become old. So there is a need within every living tradition for certain people to retell the story so that the power of the story once again fascinates."

Reflecting on the place should religious stories hold today Shea said "what is needed for sacred stories is that they become extended into the culture. We need a culture that reverberates the religious experience. When you inherit sacred stories, you have to make them your own."

Shea, who also teaches systematic theology at Saint Mary of the Lake Seminary in Mundelein, Ill., has taught theology courses at the University of Notre Dame and has given numerous workshops on the relationship of theology and ministry.

In other business, Student Body President Don Murday reported that the Senate's Committee to Study Student Life at Notre Dame has invited an independent team of psychologists to examine Notre Dame's social life. The team will be on campus Feb. 24 - 28.

Responding to a recent editorial in The Observer that charged Student Government with having a "roll over and die" attitude on the keg issue, Murday commented, "We've got to work within the system. You don't get things done by throwing a letter in The Observer and saying 'Fr. Van is out of touch and should be tossed out.' I don't think we are a passive group, but if we don't work within the system, we can't get anything done."

Achieve your goals with us

Prudential is the largest multi-lines insurance company in America; and one of the largest financial institutions in the world. But that doesn't mean that we're only looking for business majors. There are plenty of opportunities for those in the sciences and liberal arts.

You see, our diversity and size enables us to offer careers in so many different fields that there's always something that will interest you. With us you can grow while doing what you want to do. And if you should later decide that you'd like to explore another career path, you can make your career change within our company and get paid for the additional education or training needed to make that transition. There's no loss of accumulated benefits, no worries between jobs, nothing to hold you back from making or changing your personal career goals.

So, if you're looking for a career, but are uncertain as to which career path to take, why not check out Prudential and achieve your goals with us.

Ford-United Auto Workers finally agree

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers union has not "ruled out" the possibility of resuming contract concession talks with General Motors Corp., Union President Douglas A. Fraser said yesterday.

"But I think the chances of that occurring are certainly a lot less than 50-50," Fraser said on the CBS-TV "Morning" program.

Late Saturday, the UAW reached agreement with Ford Motor Co. on a 31-month contract expected to save Ford hundreds of millions of dollars with a freeze in wages and cost-of-living allowances and elimination of eight paid personal holidays.

Negotiations on possible concessions at Ford and GM began amid the longest industry slump in a half-century. Talks at GM collapsed Jan. 28 and bargaining with the No. 1 automaker is not planned again until regularly scheduled talks this summer.

Fraser and auto industry analyst Arvid Jouppi of the brokerage firm Colin, Hochstin Co. estimated the cost savings from the concessions at as much as $1 billion over the term of the contract, but Ford officials have not said whether that would lead to lower car prices.

Auto industry analysts said GM probably will try to persuade the UAW to resume concession negotiations.

"We've said repeatedly that we'd like to resume talks with the UAW at any time," GM spokesman Bruce T MacDonald said.

Fraser has said he would not ask the UAW's GM council to reopen the GM talks and that any decision on the matter would have to come from the union council.

If Ford workers ratify the contract, it will be the first time in more than four decades of bargaining between the UAW and the industry that there have been three different wage and benefit scales at the big three automakers.

GM and Ford say their labor costs are more than $20 an hour, but analysts estimate the Ford agreement would lower that figure by $2 or $3. Three rounds of concessions by workers at Chrysler Corp. that ended early last year already have lowered labor costs there by more than $3 an hour.

The contract at GM expires Sept. 14, the same day the current contract at Ford would have expired had bargainners not negotiated an emergency contract in its place.

The union opened talks at GM and Ford on Jan. 11, and the next day the No. 1 automaker announced that any savings from union concessions would be passed on to consumers. The talks at GM collapsed because of widespread opposition from UAW workers to making any sacrifices.

The union's rank and file at Ford will vote on ratification of the new tentative agreement if the union's 225-member Ford council approves the pact tomorrow in Chicago. The rank-and-file vote was expected to take about two weeks.

Judge says mistrial for official

MOUNT VERNON, Ill. (AP) — A mistrial was declared yesterday in the trial of a former University of Illinois administrator accused of stealing $608,000 for lavish nightclub sprees and female companions.

Judge Harold Jensen of Champaign County Circuit Court declared the mistrial in the case of Robert Parker after the jury said it could not reach a verdict. The panel deliberated seven hours.

Jensen set a retrial date of March 8. The prosecutor said he would decide within a week whether to prosecute again.

Parker, 60, was charged with transferring the money from the University of Illinois Foundation to a dormant bank account of UD Corp., a subsidiary of the foundation. Parker was an officer in both organizations and vice president for finance at the university.

Four women testified during the trial that they had received more than $400,000 from Parker for companionship that sometimes included sex.

Parker's attorney, Arthur Lerner of Champaign, had told the jury of six women and six men that they should find his client innocent by reason of insanity. He said Parker, who is married, was a "perfect gentleman for 25 years," trusted and beloved by his co-workers and superiors.

"Somewhere there was a change — a complete change in this man," Lerner said. "I don't know why."

Two psychiatrists testified for the defense Friday that Parker is suffering from paranoia.

"A mental disease is like a window into hell — it is something you can't control," Lerner told the jury.

But a psychiatrist for the prosecution testified he found no evidence of any major psychiatric disorder when he examined Parker.

"He's not paranoid, he's not suffering from paranoia; he's a thief," said Thomas Difanis, Champaign County prosecutor.

Psychiatrists and other witnesses testified that Parker told them he felt abused and unappreciated by his superior, Ronald Brady, the university's executive vice president. The two defense psychiatrists traced Parker's problem to these feelings.

Six injured

Freighter burns out of control

KALAMA, Wash. (AP) — A flaming 600-foot freighter filled with wheat was beached yesterday on the Columbia River while doctors treated six people injured in the spectacular fire that burned out of control.

Fire broke out aboard the freighter Protector Alpha as it took on fuel oil Sunday night at the Kalama terminal, about 30 miles north of the port of Portland, Ore.

An early-morning explosion aboard the stricken ship injured two Coast Guard firefighters and a Seattle fireman, while three freighter crewmen were hospitalized suffering smoke inhalation. Two of the firefighters were in critical condition.

"The fire is still burning," said

Coast Guard Chief Guy Scull. Firefighters were trying to confine it, but were letting the sections already on fire burn themselves out, he said.

"There's a lot of fuel on board and there's grain on board. If the grain goes, it could burn a couple of weeks. That's an estimation."

The freighter, longer than two football fields and holding 28,000 tons of wheat, was towed upriver from the Kalama grain terminal and beached out of the way of other ships.

Flames inside the ship were visible from shore and thick black smoke could be seen by motorists along Interstate 5 across the river. The fire fed on fuel oil, not wheat, said Scull.

The 30 Filipino crewmen and two Greek agents aboard were ordered to abandon ship.

The fire probably started when bunker fuel spilled into a generator room beneath the fuel tanks, said Dan Baxter, chief of Rural Fire District 2. The generators apparently ignited the fuel, said Baxter.

Large quantities of high-expansion foam needed to fight the fire had to be sent from Portland, Seattle and other locations, and firefighters meanwhile could do little to extinguish the blaze.

Some 25 to 30 firefighters were stranded aboard the blazing ship for about half an hour after it was set adrift because of fears the adjacent grain elevator would catch fire.

3rd round TKO

Sugar Ray clobbers Finch

RENO, Nev. (AP) - Sugar Ray Leonard battered Bruce Finch to the canvas three times and stopped him in the third round Monday night to retain the undisputed welterweight boxing championship of the world.

Leonard completely dominated this mountain gambling resort's first title fight in 72 years. The bout was billed as "Reno's Got It," but Reno had it for less than nine minutes as Leonard completely outclassed Finch.

Leonard, who weighed 146, one pound under the class limit, had said, "In the first round, I'm going straight for him." But the champion opened cautiously, circling while Finch, 145, stalked him.

Finch was doing well in the second round as Leonard continued to seem tentative. Then, Leonard exploded, and Finch didn't have a shot.

About midway in the second round, Finch pinned Leonard in a neutral corner and landed several punches to the head and body while missing many others. Suddenly, Leonard pounded three savage hooks to the body and a crisp right to the jaw that sent Finch staggering across the ring. Leonard leaped to the attack and landed a fusillade of head punches, climaxed by a right that dropped Finch.

Finch struggled up at the count of eight and went down a short while later from another flurry to the head. Again he struggled up and managed to last out the round, although he reeled about the ring like a drunk.

Then, in the third round, Finch seemed to be boxing well when Leonard suddenly unleashed a left hook that traveled just a few inches to the challenger's jaw. Down went Finch on his hands and knees. He struggled up at eight, wobbled back against the ropes and referee Mills Lae signaled the fight was over at 1:50 of the round.

At a prefight press conference, Leonard had told Finch, "I'll give you an opportunity to fight for the title, not to win it."

Finch never had a chance.

The 27-year-old Finch is called "Lightnin'" but on this night, Leonard packed all the thunder.

The two men had met each other as amateurs nine years ago, with Leonard winning a three-round decision.

Finch said he turned pro because "I was getting too many black eyes, and I wasn't getting paid for it."

"I'm a much better fighter than I was when I was an amateur," said Finch. But he is not in Leonard's class. And with money on the line, he couldn't last three full rounds.

Finch, a native of Milwaukee, Wis., who fights out of Las Vegas, lost for the fourth time against 30 wins and one draw in a pro career that started in 1973. He made $100,000, which was 33 times more than his previous high purse. It was Leonard's first defense of the undisputed title he won Sept. 16 when he stopped Thomas Hearns in the 14th round at Las Vegas. The easy victory was his 32nd against a single loss to Roberto Duran, which Leonard avenged in New Orleans on Nov. 25, 1980.

Leonard has said he wants to defend the title three or four times this year, and his next fight might be against Roger Stafford, rated No. 3 by the World Boxing Association and No. 4 by the World Boxing Council. Finch had been rated third by the WBC but was unranked by the WBA.

Leonard's impressive victory, worth at least $1 million, was witnessed by a sellout crowd of 6,700. It was televised live by Home Box Office and was broadcast by ABC Radio.

The bout was the first title match here since Jack Johnson retained the world heavyweight championship by knocking out Jim Jeffries in the 15th round July 4, 1910, in one of boxing's legendary fights.

Men's hoops playoffs approach

MEN'S BASKETBALL — In a close game this past Sunday, Grace (11) edged out O-C (10), 45-44. The game was to decide one of the two teams to represent the Pac Ten division in this year's tournament. As O-C coach Lee Manfred pointed out, "two of the things that really hurt us were Grace's strong rebounding and in the end, their free-throw shooting." Grace, a fast and physical team, heads into the first round of the play-offs against once-beaten Holy Cross (5).

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL — Two top teams clashed last night as last week Pasquerilla East was up-ended by Farley II, 20-16. Farley captain Cindy Battel attributed the win to good ball handling and basic teamwork. "It was a close game to the end, but we were taking good shots and hitting them." The "Pac" clinched the victory with a bucket by Shay Koelher and upped their record to 7-1, second only to undefeated Lewis I.

HOCKEY — Off-Campus was handed its first defeat last week by Grace, 6-3. The game was much closer than the score would indicate, though, as O-C pulled its goalie with four minutes left in the game in hopes to even the score at four apiece. The tactic failed, however, as Grace took advantage of the opportunity, scoring twice more before it was over. Bill O'Neil led all scorers with a hat-trick. In addition, Tim Farrell, captain Rich Laski, and Dave Crawford each chipped in a goal for Grace, which now sports a record of 4-0, to lead the north division and top the NVA poll.

TRACK — All those signed up for the interhall track meet will be contacted this week as to the time and date of the event.

RACQUETBALL — The pairings for the men's and women's doubles tournament will appear in The Observer in tomorrow's edition. All scores must be turned in no later than 5 p.m. today.

CROSS COUNTRY SKI — Mini-courses in cross country skiing will be held Feb. 17 at 4 p.m., and Feb. 20 at 10 a.m. Students, faculty, and staff will receive expert instruction, with all equipment furnished in two separate sessions which should last two hours apiece.

WRESTLING — Entries for the interhall wrestling tournament should be submitted by Feb. 24. Weight classes for the event will include: 123, 130, 137, 145, 152, 160, 167, 177, and heavy-weight. Halls may sign up as teams. To enter call 239-6100 or come in (C-2 ACC). Contestants will be notified of the exact time and date.

SWIMMING — The NVA will sponsor an interhall swimming meet Feb. 24 at 7:30 p.m. Some of the events will be: 200 yd. medley, 200 yd. freestyle, 100 yd. freestyle, 200 yd. freestyle relay, and diving events. The meet is open to both men and women. For more information call Dennis Stark, at 6222 or Tom Kelly at 6100.

Wife satisfied

Wayne Levi wins Hawaiian Open

HONOLULU (AP) Now, perhaps, Wayne Levi's wife can stop nagging him.

"She's been after me all year," he said, then lifted his voice into a falsetto parody.

"I want to go to (the Tournament of Champions at) La Costa. We've just GOT to go. So you've got to win a tournament. And you've got to win one quick," Levi said, then let his voice drift down to its regular range as he continued the imaginary conversation with a sheepish look and a shrug of his shoulders.

"Well, I'll do what I can," he said.

And that, his victory in the Hawaiian Open golf championship over the weekend, gave Levi, 28, the third individual victory of his 6-year tour career and provided Judy Levi that trip to La Costa, Calif. and the prestigious Tournament of Champions in April.

"It was a very, very important win for me," Levi said. Not only did his gritty performance in the face of numerous challenges get him a spot in the winners-only field at the Tournament of Champions, he also gained a spot in the Masters and won an exemption from qualifying through the 1983 season.

"It's always a great feeling to win a golf tournament, to know you can beat all the great players on the tour," Levi said. "This is particularly important since it gives me a berth in the Masters" in Augusta, Ga. in April, the first of the year's four major championships.

"I played very well there last year. I have a good feeling about that tournament. I feel I can play well there again, that I can really be competitive there."

The triumph was worth $58,500 from the purse of $325,000 and boosted his earnings for the young season to $69,658, more than he won all of last year when he drifted back into the ranks of the Monday morning qualifiers.

He had only one more exemption before he'd have to start facing the extremely difficult chore of attempting to qualify for each weekly event.

But while he now can pick and choose his places, his schedule will remain the same for the next few weeks. He's playing in the Los Angeles Open and the four Florida tournaments.

But then there's a little break followed by a couple of happy additions to his schedule — the Masters and the Tournament of Champions.

...Phelps

senior teammates must live.

"Why the hell shouldn't he do it?" barked Don Huff of the Washington Post when asked about the uniqueness of DeStefano's policy. Huff has been close to the Washington area high school basketball scene for several years. "If you really want a kid, then wait until the end of March."

But when the details of Phelps' predicament were explained, Huff said simply, "That's a chance Digger has to take." That is a chance that Phelps cannot and will not take.

Whether Dawkins would have chosen Notre Dame or not really is not the issue. Both DeStefano and Phelps are right in their philosophies given their respective situations, and the net result is that Dawkins is the loser. The solution is simple. Make all college coaches and high school players play by the same rules and wait until after the high school season is over. That doesn't give them much time perhaps, and it doesn't let the college recruiters show off their campuses in all the splendor and excitement of homecoming weekend, football games and pep rallies.

But in the long run, it will be guys like Johnny Dawkins who will come out the winners.

Carl Lewis receives prestigious Sullivan Award

INDIANAPOLIS (ap) - Carl Lewis, 20, the world indoor record holder in the long jump at 28 feet, 1 inch, received the U.S. Amateur Athletic Union's Sullivan Award Monday night as the nation's outstanding amateur athlete for 1981.

Lewis, a sophomore at the University of Houston, received the award at the annual Sullivan banquet at the Indianapolis Convention Center.

He was the first athlete since Jesse Owens in 1936 to win the long jump and the 100-meter dash in the NCAA track and field meet, and he also was a double winner in those events in the Athletics Congress meet last year.

"It is so far out, just incredible," said Lewis, a native of Willingboro, N.J. "This makes me feel good about what it represents. To be named worthy of an award like this speaks for itself."

Lewis is the first black athlete to win the Sullivan Award since Wilma Rudolph in 1961.

The award was presented by former swimmer John Naber, the 1977 Sullivan winner.

Other finalists for this year's award, recognizing accomplishments in 1981, included track star Evelyn Ashford, unbeaten in the 100-meter dash and acclaimed by Track and Field News as the sport's top woman athlete in the world.

Other favorites were figure skater Scott Hamilton, the reigning U.S. and world champion, and swimmer Mary T. Meagher, a Louisville, Ky., high school junior who set world records in the 100- and 200-meter butterfly events.

The other finalists this year were Kathy Arendsen, 23, Holland, Mich., for softball; Chris Campbell, 27, Ames, Iowa, wrestling; Tracie Ruiz, 18, Bothell, Wash., synchronized swimming; Lones Wigger Jr., 44, Carter, Mont., shooting; and Sheila Young-Ochowicz, 31, Pewaukee, Wis., cycling.

"On a strictly logical basis, it's got to be the most prestigious award an amateur athlete can win," said Naber, a former Olympic swimming champion who closed out his career in 1977 with 18 AAU and 10 NCAA titles at the University of Southern California. "An athlete is not only judged on his or her performance, but on their performance compared to other outstanding athletes."

"When I was master of ceremonies for this award three years ago, I referred to the nominees as the equivalent of 10 Heisman Trophy winners at one table. They're all the outstanding athletes in their sports."

Allison loses bumper, wins Daytona 500

DAYTONA Beach, Fla. (AP) — His detractors insist it's Bobby Allison' secret weapon - push a button on the dashboard and the rear bumper falls off.

Then Allison, his 3,700-pound car lightened by between 18 and 30 pounds, depending upon who you ask, and made slicker aerodynamically by the lack of a bumper jutting out from the car, dashes off and hides from the rest of the Grand National field to win yet another stock car race.

Of course, there's not really such a button, but that was the result last May in the Winston 500 at Talladega, Ala. again Sunday when the 44-year-old driver from Hueytown, Ala. won the $927,625 Daytona 500.

Just three laps into the race, Allison and Cale Yarborough - both running along in the middle of the lead draft - bumped while roaring through the fourth turn of Daytona International Speedway's high-banked, 2.5-mile oval.

The bump seemed a small one, not even noticeable to the national television audience or the more than 110,000 people at the track. But the bumper suddenly flew from Allison's car.

Joe Millikan, a few cars behind, ran over the skittering length of metal, cutting his right rear tire and starting an accident that took three cars out of the race and damaged three others.

After the race, marred by three other crashes, one of which took out three of the top cars in the 42-car field and badly damaged four others, Yarborough was incensed about the incident.

"He (Allison) ran all over me," said Yarborough, who was involved in one of the other accidents and still finished second. "That's what knocked the bumper off. He was racing like it was the last lap. He got underneath me and carried me right into the wall."

Allison allowed how he "might have got up into Cale," but he added, "It sure wasn't intentional; it was just one of those things that happens in racing."

Asked about an accusation by Yarborough's crew chief Tim Brewer that Allison's bumper was rigged to fall off, made in the heat of battle in a television interview, Nelson said, "I think anybody who would accuse somebody of that is really digging the bottom of the barrel."

Regardless of how you figure it, Allison joined Yarborough and Richard Petty as the only drivers to win stock car racing's most prestigious event more than once in its 24 years. He also picked up a record winner's share of $120,050, adding that to the $50,000 he won a week earlier in the Busch Clash, a 50-mile dash for pole winners from the previous season.

And the victory earned his team a spot in NASCAR's Winner's Circle program, in which eight cars are paid appearance money for taking part in the entire, 30-race Grand National schedule.

that nature has to be one of the highest honors an athlete can win," said Naber, who now is a promotional spokesman for various amateur athletic programs and is on the board of directors for the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics organizing committee.

Besides Naber, three other former Sullivan Award winners - all former track stars - were in Indianapolis for Monday night's program: Dr. Glenn Cunningham (1933), Don Lash (1938) and Fred Wilt (1950). Lash currently is an Indiana state representative, and Wilt is the women's track coach at Purdue University.

Last year's winner of the Sullivan Award, named for a founder of the AAU, was speed skater Eric Heiden. Only one other skater, Dick Button in 1949, had won the award since its inception 50 years ago.

The first winner was golfer Bobby Jones. Over the years, track and field events provided the greatest number of previous Sullivan winners, with such athletes as Bruce Jenner, Frank Shorter, Bill Toomey, Randy Matson, Jim Ryun, John Pennel, Wilma Rudolph and Rafer Johnson among the 29 honored. Swimming and diving ranked second with nine, including Naber, Tracy Caulkins, Tim Shaw, John Kinsella and Mark Spitz.

Other winners included Bill Bradley and Bill Walton in basketball, Kurt Thomas in gymnastics, Doc Blanchard in football.

team with a lot of talent. In a year they should be really tough."

"We do have a young team," said Head Coach Tom Fallon, "with three freshmen in the lineup. We're going to improve a lot. I'm not upset with this match at all. I'm pleased with our performance today, and our goal will be to win 20 matches again this year."

Crucial week

ND women will 'be there'

By MARK HANNUKSELA
Sports Writer

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Jerzy Kosinski called it "Being there."

Beginning tonight, Notre Dame's women's basketball team will find out if they are in fact "there," or still in the process of finding their way.

The Irish will meet the Fighting Illini of the University of Illinois in Assembly Hall here tonight in the first of a crucial two-game week for Coach Mary DiStanislao's club.

On Saturday, Notre Dame will travel to Columbia, S.C. for a game against nationally ranked South Carolina.

The outcome of both games will go a long way in determining Notre Dame's chances of garnering its first-ever NCAA tournament bid.

Illinois is coming off a disappointing 69-66 loss to Ohio State in the finals of the Big Ten Tournament held this weekend in East Lansing, Mich. The Illini, seeded No. 1 in the tournament, had beaten Michigan State and Indiana before losing to the third-seeded Buckeyes, who had upset Northwestern, the No. 2 seed, in the semifinals the day before.

"Ohio State was just on a roll," says DiStanislao, who watched Sunday's finals. "They used nine or 10 players, while Illinois had only seven, and Ohio State's depth just wore them down."

After winning its first 10 games, Illinois dropped six of its next 14, and fell from its perch as one of the nation's top 20 teams.

But with or without a national ranking, the Illini will pose problems for the nation's top scoring defense. The Irish give up less than 50 points per game, considerably less than the Illini's 84-point offensive average.

Five players currently average double-figures in scoring for the club coached by Jane Schroeder, led by a pair of identical twins, Lisa and Lynette Robinson.

Lisa, a 5-10 guard, scores 16.6 points per game, while Lynette, a 5-11 forward, averages 13.8.

A broken finger has forced Lynette to the sidelines for the past two weeks, and Illinois Sports Information Director Lani Jacobsen says she probably won't play in tonight's game either.

That means that the Illini will be without their rebounding leader (Lynette averages 10.7 rpg.) against the Irish.

"Lisa and Lynette Robinson are the heart and sole of that team," says DiStanislao. "They are its character. Lynette is already out, so if we can just take Lisa out..."

DiStanislao never finished the sentence.

The task of controlling Robinson will probably fall into the hands of Ruth Kaiser, Notre Dame's team leader in steals and minutes played.

Kaiser, at 5-10, will give up nothing in height to Robinson, who will be moved to a forward slot against the Irish.

Starting with Robinson at forward will be sophomore Kim Brombolich, the team's second leading rebounder (7.9) and third leading scorer (11.8).

Diane Eickholt, a 6-1 sophomore from Hinton, Iowa, will start at center. Eickholt averages 10.7 ppg.

Cindy Stein will replace Lynette Robinson in the starting lineup, and play at one guard spot, while senior Pat Morency, at 5-5 the smallest of the Fighting Illini, will play the other.

Morency is the fifth double-figure scorer for Illinois, averaging 10.3 ppg., and Stein, at 9.7, is not far behind.

"Without Lynette Robinson, Illinois loses something," says DiStanislao, "but they are still an excellent team. Their chances for an NCAA berth rest squarely on their success from now until the end of the season, so they are going to come out firing.

"They like to run," adds Notre Dame's second-year coach. "They like to get in games with scores in the 80's and 90's. In order for us to beat them, we have to make it a half-court ball game. We have to slow them down, which means we either have to hit the boards hard or beat them down the floor. They have a lot of weapons offensively, and they are very well drilled, very well coached and they execute very well. It's gonna be interesting."

"Extremely important" might be a better way of putting it.

IRISH ITEMS — Tonight's game marks the third meeting between the Irish and Illini and Notre Dame has yet to win a game in the series. In the two games, Notre Dame has been outscored by 56 points, including last season's 88-53 mauling in the ACC... Ball State and Northern Illinois are the only common opponents between the two schools thus far, although Illinois has already met future Notre Dame opponents DePaul and Michigan State. The Illini showed no mercy to Ball State, humiliating the Cardinals 113-61, while the Irish could manage only a three-point win against the same club three weeks ago. Illinois beat Northern by 14 points, and Notre Dame won by 15... With her 7-for-7 performance from the foul line Saturday, Laura Dougherty set a new Irish record for free throw percentage in a game. The previous best was 6-for-6.

Junior Shari Matvey and the rest of the Irish women face a high-scoring University of Illinois team tonight at 7 p.m. in the Illini's Assembly Hall. See Mark Hannuksela's adjacent story (photo by Cheryl Ertelt).

Recruiting game

Phelps, Prep Star both lose

This is the unfortunate tale of Johnny Dawkins.

Johnny is a superb basketball player — no relation to Darryl Dawkins, the Philadelphia '76ers Lord of the Chocolate Thunder. This Dawkins is a star guard at Washington, D.C.'s Mackin High School. He won't be attending Notre Dame next fall because he simply got caught between a high school coach trying to protect his players' futures, and a college coach trying to protect the future of his program.

For the first time in recent memory, Mackin stands ready to win the Washington Metropolitan Athletic Conference title, traditionally owned by Morgan Wooten's DeMatha squads. The two schools square off tonight to decide the championship. Basketball buffs know that over the years the WMAC has produced such stars as Hawkeye Witney, Sidney Lowe, Derek Wittenburg and Kenny Carr, plus a slew of Notre Dame players like Austin Carr, Bob Whitmore, Adrian Dantley, Collis Jones, Sid Catlet, Don "Duck" Williams, Cecil Rucker and Tom Sluby.

On one side of the Johnny Dawkins story is Paul DeStefano, the coach at Mackin. Prior to the 1981-82 season, DeStefano declared that none of his seniors were to visit college campuses until the conclusion of the season. His action is subject to two interpretations.

A few college coaches view DeStefano as a greedy tyrant doing everything within his power to see to it that his team wins the conference title, a definite feather in his cap that could propel him into the college coaching ranks. A more realistic perspective, however, is that DeStefano is genuinely concerned for the welfare of his players.

"I took over this job in August of Cecil's (Rucker) senior year," Destefano told The Observer Friday. "I really wasn't in a position then to take this kind of action because a lot of the recruiting had already started."

But now that he is firmly established, DeStefano has acted, and the no-visit edict affects not only Dawkins, one of the most highly touted guards in the nation, but all of his seniors, three of whom are being sought after by major college powers. "It was a combination decision of three parties," he says. "The parents, the players and I all agree that it's more important for them to concentrate on our season. Let the recruiters wait until our season's over."

Destefano put up with countless inconveniences during Rucker's senior year, ones that most high school coaches tolerate, but probably should not. "It's not fair to the rest of our team to have one or two seniors missing from practice for a couple of days before a game while they visit campuses," he says. "They can't possibly be concentrating 100 percent on our team."

DeStefano's policy goes one step beyond campus visits. Recruiters can't visit with the players or even call them on the phone. They only may speak with Destefano himself or the players' parents. And these rules apply not only to out-of-town schools, but to Georgetown, Maryland, Catholic University, University of the District of Columbia and American University as well.

But DeStefano is only half the story. The plight of Digger Phelps must be addressed. It's easy for Destefano to say "Let 'em wait," but Digger's response is simple. "I waited last year, and got burned."

During the spring of '81, Phelps waited on three of the nation's top-rated big men to make their decisions. One by one, they signed on elsewhere, leaving Phelps with two guards. And neither Ron Rowan or Dan Duff were rated very highly by prep rating services.

Phelps made the decision long ago that this year he would go after only one guard. With guards John Paxson, Rowan and Duff, plus swingmen Bill Varner and Sluby returning, Phelps knew he simply could not keep that many players happy. The guard he wanted was Dawkins, but when he learned of Destefano's policy last fall, he knew there would be problems.

For Phelps, it came down to a whoever-signs-first situation. "If (Joe) Buchanan wants to sign," he said last week, "we've got to take him. We just can't afford to wait on Dawkins. We could wind up with nothing. We returned to the John Paxson school of recruiting this year. You offer a spot to three or four guys who you know can play, and the one who decides first gets the scholarship."

Buchanan brought the stable of recruits to five — 6-10 center Ken Barlow, forwards Tim Kempton (6-9) and Jim Dolan (6-8), and 6-4 swingman Joe Price, who can serve as a second guard.

And so Saturday's signing of Buchanan officially closed the book on Dawkins as far as Notre Dame is concerned. Phelps still is looking for one more big man ("6-7 and up" he says), but if he doesn't get another, this still will be regarded as one of the nation's best collection of recruits. Of course Notre Dame is elated to have a player of Buchanan's caliber, but the fact remains that Dawkins' menu of possible colleges has been trimmed by one because of the policy with which he and his

OSU Buckeyes defeat Notre Dame men

By ED KONRADY

Last Sunday, the Notre Dame men's tennis team lost a tough 6-3 decision to the Ohio State Buckeyes, led by Big Ten Indoor Champion Ernie Fernandez.

The Irish led 2-1 at the end of the doubles matches, as freshmen Mike Gibbons and Jim Navotny defeated Lior Rusineck and Mark Redding 6-4, 7-6 (7-5), at second singles with Jim Falvey and Tom Pratt defeating Jeff Kohls and Jeff Span at third singles 6-4, 6-1.

At first doubles, Fernandez and Chris Cunin scored the first point for the Buckeyes as they defeated Mark McMahon and Paul Idzik 6-2, 7-6 (7-4).

The score was tied when Mark Redding defeated Tom Robison at fourth singles, 6-4, 6-4. However, the Irish went ahead 3-2 as Captain Tom Hartzell defeated Cunin in a close match at third singles, 7-6, 6-4.

However, the Irish could not pull out the other close matches they needed.

At second singles, Falvey lost to Rusineck 6-3, 6-4, and in the closest match of the day, Tom Pratt lost to Karl Muench. Pratt came back from two match points down to send the match into sudden death. With the sudden death set tied at six points, Muench hit a shot that caught the top of the net and dribbled over.

Muench won the next point and the match, 5-7, 6-2, 7-6 (8-6).

Ohio State sealed its victory as Jeff Kohls defeated Mike Gibbons 6-4, 6-2.

"I thought the freshmen did a great job," said Hartzell. "I remember my first time. I was very tense and nervous when I first came out. They seemed to be relaxed. Tom (Pratt) played an outstanding match — either man could have won it."

No one was making for the exits however, as Mark McMahon took on Fernandez at first singles. McMahon won the first set 6-3, putting quite a shock into the finest player in the Midwest.

"Ernie wants to win this easy," said Chris Cunin, his doubles partner and third singles player for the Buckeyes, "and he can't. This guy (McMahon) is pretty good. He has a good return and good passing shots. Plus, this court seems to raise his game up a level. Ernie thinks he's better and wants to win quickly, but he has to work for it."

Fernandez settled down, and with pinpoint volleying took the next two sets and the match, 3-6, 6-2, 6-2. After the match, Fernandez commented that "McMahon is a strong player from the baseline and seems to come up with the tough shots in the important moments."

"Notre Dame seems like a young
