More SMC, ND students implicated in drug incident

By DIANE DIRKERS
Staff Reporter

Twenty-two students have now been implicated in the hashish incident involving the Notre Dame-Saint Mary's foreign programs. Included in this group, which had originally totalled nineteen, are four students from Saint Mary's and one from Holy Cross Junior College, according to Notre Dame's Director of Information Services Richard Conklin.

Twenty-one of these students are from the Innsbruck program, while the other one had been studying in Angers, France.

Conklin relates the details of the investigation as follows: "When the director of the Innsbruck program was informed of the hashish abuse and the possible threat of legal action, he confronted the Innsbruck students and asked those involved to come forward."

Eventually, twenty-one of them admitted to being engaged in the widespread use of hashish, and action was taken by their respective deans of students.

"Those 15 students from Notre Dame allowed to remain in Innsbruck have been sent a letter from Dean Roemer, notifying them that the following actions will be taken," explained Conklin. "First, they are now on conduct probation. Second, they will be dismissed from the University, effective at the end of the spring term. Third, they will be given the opportunity to reapply for the fall semester of 1982."

In the readmission application, Conklin added, an essay will be required, explaining what the students have learned from their experience in Innsbruck. Decisions will be made on an individual basis concerning reacceptance.

Conklin also commented on the two students who, two weeks ago, were flown back to the U.S.

One student from Innsbruck was dismissed due to a record of prior drug abuse. The other — from Angers — was "believed to have some connection with the drug abuse in Innsbruck," according to Conklin, who gave no further comment on the issue.

Conklin expressed concern about the widespread media coverage of the hashish incident. "It's not that the University is afraid it will look bad — many worse scandals have hit the media and we've weathered them," he stated. "We are more concerned with the welfare of those students involved."

"There is no fifth amendment in Austria," he explained further. "If any news of this reaches the Austrian authorities, and they decide to question these students about their drug abuse, the students must admit to it. This could result in a criminal investigation and charges against the students."

"We hope that this will not happen," Conklin continued. "In the event that it does, we are fairly confident that the Austrian authorities feel we have handled the situation sufficiently and will leave things be. However, there is no way we can be sure."

In light of this, the University has been very cautious with their press releases, which will now be handled exclusively through Notre Dame Information Services. Absolutely no names will be released now, or in the future.

Saint Mary's Dean of Student Affairs Kathleen Rice delayed comment on the matter until a later date.

Literary Festival

Terry comments on poetry and plays

By KATHLEEN DOYLE
News Staff

Playwrights and poets should be encouraged to try more complex forms, according to Megan Terry. "For the human mind can take in a lot more than most people think."

"I tend to trust the audience," yesterday's artist for the 1982 Sophomore Literary Festival stated last night during a question and answer period following the production of three of her plays in the LaFortune Ballroom.

Megan Terry was born in Seattle, Washington in 1932. Her interest in theater began in her childhood. She wrote, directed, and performed in her first musical during seventh grade. She later studied at the Seattle Repertory Playhouse, the University of Alberta, and the Banff School of Fine Arts.

Her fame has come primarily from her involvement in The Open Theater, which she helped found. The Open Theater is an off-Broadway theater in which actors and directors work together to form a drama. Terry also gained recognition through her most famous play and rock opera, Viet Rock.

"My job as a playwright is not one of a monarch, but one of a transmitter, instrument, and shaper, to give a voice to the concerns of others."

"In the streets and in the theater — these are the last two places in America where you can still tell the truth. How long the streets and the theater are kept up is a matter of vital concern to all of us."

In a brief introduction before the Notre Dame-Saint Mary's Lab Theater productions of Advances, Pro Game, and Brazil Fado, director Bea Bosco described Terry's plays "as collages, instead of paintings, where different scraps of life are pasted together."

Terry often employs the technique of transformation in her plays. This device involves actors constantly changing characters and scenes.

"In a play that is more complex, in a collage, I can represent a whole country with just a few actors by using transformation as I did in Brazil Fado, Terry said. "The technique was developed in workshops. It is a way of condensing. The actors can deal with negative material in a positive way." "The technique grew out of observing the plays of children, stand-up comedians, and impressionists," she continued. "By using transformation a great deal of

Proposed draft affects millions

By MIKE SCHIERL
Staff Reporter

President Reagan's withdrawal of his personal opposition to draft registration in late 1981 raised legitimate concern over the imminency of another draft. The expedient implementation of the Reagan-approved plan since that time have undoubtedly heightened this concern. A workable registration system, coupled with Reagan's proposed defense spending increase, signifies American "preparedness" in the event of military confrontation.

This political "message" can suddenly become extremely important to certain young men, however, if they take time to consider fully its possible implications. By signing his name to a draft registration card, a young man puts himself only one letter and ten days away from active military duty. The prospects of a draft are unpredictable. While the time separating the notification letter and reporting date are negligible.

Clearly, the act of registering is not the innocent, isolated act it appears to be. Registration is a designed step in our induction process, as Campus Ministry counselor Mike Baxter asserts, "Registration, in itself, represents a real possibility demanding a firm moral response."

Federal regulation governing the present registration and draft process were finalized on November 17, 1981. Reagan's subsequent approval of the plan's institution, in late 1981, made it clear that registration would remain a legal obligation. According to law, the penalty for not registering is five years in jail, $10,000 dollars, or both. Presently all American males are legally required to register within 30 days before or after their 18th birthday. A "grace" period lasting until the end of February has been established for all previous non-registrants.

Prosecution of non-registrants after that date is almost certain due to gradually declining response. Response from the first two waves of registrants, received in July of 1980, was fairly enthusiastic. An estimated 95 percent of 1961's 19 year-olds filled out their cards. However, only 88 percent of the 19 year-olds born in 1962 responded to the registration held January 5-1, 1981. Finally, only 77 percent last year's 18 year-olds ever responded.

Indeed, the decreasing response may well be due to what Budget director David Stockman labelled slipshot management, but left unchecked, this trend could result in a group of non-registrants large enough to make full prosecution impossible.

Accordingly the Selective Service System (SSS) is taking appropriate steps to avoid any such "snowball effect." The SSS has recently purchased certain commercial mailing lists and intends to send out a "general reminder" of registration procedure to random members of the general public. In addition, a large publicity campaign is currently underway to increase the number of registrants. Obviously, the intent of the SSS is to avoid, prosecution, if at all possible, by encouraging procrastinators, the uninformed, and the misinformed to register immediately.

But it is also clear that the SSS plans to make immediate "examples" out of certain blatant non-registrants as a further method of encouragement. There are 150 such legal cases already underway.

Director leaves Poland, comes to Notre Dame

By MARY BETH PORTER

Kazimierz Braun, the Polish director scheduled to work with the Notre Dame-Saint Mary's Theatre Department and direct the Shakespearean comedy has arrived in Montreal, Canada and is in route to Notre Dame.

Braun, unable to leave Poland when martial law went into effect in December, was recently granted permission by the Polish government to leave the country. Professor Mitchell Lifton, Chairman of the Communication and Theatre Department, has confirmed that Braun is currently in Canada and will arrive at Notre Dame Thursday.

Braun will remain for the rest of the semester, but Professor Lifton gave no details as to how he will complete the semester. Lifton said he has to speak with Braun before any definite arrangements are announced.

According to Mary Francell, publicity coordinator for the department, Braun will decide whether to produce the Polish protest play in place of the Shakespeare play. Francell added that she doubts Braun will decide to produce a Polish protest play, since his family remains in Poland.

Notre Dame security has issued its annual warning of unsafe ice on Saint Mary's Lake after two Holy Cross Hall residents narrowly escaped drowning Sunday afternoon.

Wayne B. Williams turned back attempts by prosecutors yesterday, lashing out at his accusers, declaring: "I'm innocent and that's all there is to it." "Did you experience any panic at any point during the time you were killing these victims?" Assistant District Attorney Jack Mallard asked the 23 year-old murder defendant at one point during the afternoon cross-examination. "Sir, I haven't killed anyone," Williams replied. "Isn't it true you killed them?" Mallard asked. "I'm about as guilty as you are," Williams told him. "Now if you killed them, that would make me guilty. So if you didn't kill them, that means I'm not guilty." At one point Williams said he could have been a victim himself in the string of slayings of 28 young Atlanta blacks that outraged the nation. "I'm 23 years old and, who knows, I could have been one of those persons ending up dead out there," said the defendant. "Heck, anybody n Atlanta could have during that time, and I'm not sure that it's over, to be honest with you." — AP

Congressional investigators said yesterday that commodities fraud has grown into a $200 million-a-year "floating crap game" that easily eludes the federal agency responsible for policing the industry. The Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations heard testimony from investors who were duped out of their life savings and convicted swindlers who practically overnight turned their knowledge of Wall Street into fortunes. One of the swindlers alleged that lawyers with the Commodity Futures Trading Commission who are winning their fraud cases are being hired away by the defendants' law firms. Sen. William V. Roth Jr., R/Del., the subcommittee chairman, said thousands of Americans have been victimized "by con artists operating under the guise of legitimate commodity investment firms." — AP

The United States is keeping a destroyer equipped with sophisticated electronic gear off the coast of El Salvador to listen in on radio communications, Pentagon sources said yesterday. Defense officials who asked not to be identified waved aside suggestions that the warship was meant to be a show of force. A single destroyer does not pack enough combat power for that, they said. Although intelligence-gathering methods are closely guarded, it is known that the destroyers of the Spruance class are fitted with the most advanced equipment for what is called communications-intelligence. The Deo, on station in the Pacific off El Salvador since some time in January, and the Caron, which recently relieved it, are both of the Spruance class. It could not be determined whose radio traffic was being intercepted. But the ship would be in a position to overhear communications among guerrilla units in El Salvador and between those units and supporters in neighboring Nicaragua. — 2AP

Fidel Castro has endorsed a Mexican peace plan for Central America that calls for talks between Cuba and the United States. But he set a condition - that the Reagan administration stop what he called "continuous threats" against its neighbors. The Cuban president, in a letter to Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo, also said he was "ready to offer the fullest guarantees" that weapons in Cuba will not be used for aggression anywhere in the Western Hemisphere. He did not elaborate on what was meant by "guarantees." The Cuban news agency Prensa Latina made the letter public here yesterday. Castro was responding to a three-part peace initiative outlined Sunday by Lopez Portillo in Managua, Nicaragua. It called for a negotiated settlement of El Salvador's civil war, a non-aggression pact between the United States and Nicaragua, and U.S.-Cuban talks to cool mutual hostility. — AP

Draftees were hailed as patriots and builders of a "new society" in a blaze of publicity yesterday marking the Soviet Union's armed forces day. Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper, and other dailies gave front-page coverage to the role of Soviet troops in defending the country, stressing that "everything necessary" was being done to improve combat readiness. A statement issued by Defense Minister Dmitri F. Ustinov accused imperialist circles, chiefly in the United States, of a "vicious campaign" of attacks against Poland and Cuba, of waging undeclared war against Afghanistan and of heating up the Middle East conflict. Army privates in great coats and fur caps used their day off to tour Kremlin landmarks and other war memorials, such as the Soviet armed forces museum in Moscow. Fireworks lighted up frigid night skies over Moscow and other major cities in an annual observance for the estimated 3.5 million members of the world's second largest standing military force, surpassed only by the 4.3 million Chinese in uniform. — AP

Nestle tactics raise controversy

Quite a controversy has arisen regarding the tactics used to influence student opinion regarding the Nestle corporation's marketing procedures in the Third World.

Notre Dame students will vote Tuesday whether or not to continue the University boycott of Nestle products, which was initiated in 1979. Nestle was accused of 'aggressive' marketing procedures involving their infant formula Lactogen, which is allegedly responsible for millions of infant deaths in the Third World. Nestle reportedly distributes 'free samples' of infant formula to hospitals and pays physicians to promote their product to mothers.

University President Theodore Hesburgh remarked concerning the 1979 decision that his "main concern was that students would be given the opportunity to make a well-informed, intelligent decision," adding that "they have." Boycott Committee Chairman Father John Van Wolvlar noted that while the boycott probably didn't sustain any substantial adverse effects to Nestle, "at least it would have some impact."

Food Services Director Robert Robinson predicted in 1979 that the boycott would have a small monetary impact on operations. "It did eliminate Nestle from our competitive bidding program and they were very competitive," Robinson added.

In December the World Hunger Coalition submitted a report in which they called for a continuation of the boycott, according to Student Activities Director James McDonnell. Nestle also submitted a report asking that the boycott be ended. The Boycott Committee reviewed both reports in January, and decided that it was time to revote.

Nestle representatives arrived at Notre Dame last week to debate the issues concerning the boycott with INFAC representatives. Vice-president for Nutrition Research and Development at Nestle Coordination Center Dr. Thad Jackson and his wife, Nestle nutritionalist Thelma Jackson represented Nestle, along with Susan Scanlan. Dr Penelope Van Esterik and Richard Hoyer represented INFAC.

"Students were disappointed with the INFAC presentation at the debate," McDonnell said, adding that he is willing to make a video tape of the debate available Thursday, Friday and over the weekend. Details on this will be announced later.

The impression that most people would have been left with was more in favor of Nestle, according to WHC Coordinator Francis D'Eramo. "I was not particularly happy with the substance of the debate," he said. "I don't think the issues raised were clearly defined or squarely faced. Both sides were nebulous to some extent."

Scanlan arrived on campus 48 hours prior to the debate, and used 'dubious' methods to promote

Kelli Flint

Nestle's position, according to WHC Educational Director George McAleer. "Nestle has been insincere throughout this whole issue," he said. "They are only aiming to project a positive image."

Nestle reportedly randomly phoned students and encouraged them to attend the debate and understand "the unheard side" of the issue. They also allegedly visited Senior Bar on the afternoon of the debate and talked to students there, and invited students out for meals in order to 'discuss the issue'.

D'Eramo noted that Nestle is accused of using gifts in the Third World to seduce the medical profession into distributing the infant formula. "I see an analogy in the process they use in the Third World and the technique they're using here to make their position clear," he said.

McDonnell notes that this is the first time at a major American University that a corporation has expended this kind of effort to defeat a boycott referendum.

The Nestle controversy was in national news during the confirmation hearings for Ernest Lefever, President Reagan's nominee as Assistant Secretary for Human Rights, when it was revealed that Nestle contributed $25,000 to the Washington-based Ethics and Public Policy Center, a conservative foundation headed by Lefever. The center distributed material promoting infant formula to Third World mothers.

Marketing Club President Paul Uritis, who hosted Scanlan, said he believes the information available for students is one-sided. "It's hard to believe that all the allegations INFAC is making are true," he noted. "Whatever unjust marketing practices were made are being atoned for. They have stopped promoting in the mass media."

Uritis believes that the degree of student apathy will "make or break" the boycott. "I think student apathy is a serious problem at Notre Dame, he said. Before, there was always something to fight for, something that affected our personal routine. We seem to be experiencing the doldrums."

Lernoux lectures on journalism

By ANNE KWAK
News Staff

The need for responsible U.S. journalism in Latin America and the importance of the role of the U.S. in helping Latin American countries was addressed by journalist Penny Lernoux at a lecture yesterday in Hayes Healy auditorium.

Ms. Lernoux is an award winning journalist, the Latin American correspondent for the National Catholic Reporter, and the author of a book entitled Cry of the People, which is concerned with the struggle for human rights in Latin America.

Lernoux stressed the fact that there is a lack of information available to those in Latin American countries, as well as a generally uninformed public in the United States as far as foreign affairs are concerned

According to Lernoux, Americans do not understand the many problems in Latin American countries because they are just not adequately informed, and because much of the journalism is biased.

While reporters print information from U.S. officials, they usually refuse to interview foreign officials to find out their side of the story, according to Lernoux. Thus, what is reported is often not objective. She stated, We must stop thinking of Latin Americans as 'no accounts' who don't deserve to be interviewed or questioned.

Ms. Lernoux lived in Latin America for several years, where she was exposed to poor economic conditions, human rights violations, and corruption in many South American countries, as well the major concerns in El Salvador and Nicaragua.

She explained that there is much activity to be reported and investigated, but because of press laws which make it nearly impossible to expose the wrongdoings of governments, most reporters refuse to touch the stories. We definitely need more investigative and interpretive reporting, as far as Latin American problems are concerned, she commented.

Throughout her lecture, Ms. Lernoux stressed the importance of using the power and influence of the U.S. to improve Latin American problems. She suggested the need for responsible journalists who show more care for the ethics of their profession, namely, fair, objective reporting. She also advised that American journalists should be more concerned with morality in journalism than with glamour and money.

As far as change in Latin American countries is concerned, Lernoux advocates nonviolent negotiations rather than military intervention. She spoke favorably on the Church's involvement in foreign problems, but stressed a plea for stronger moral and ethical views on the part of the U.S.

She stated, In order to begin to solve the problems in Latin American countries, we must first care about human life for ethical as well as practical reasons. Change is possible, but we must have hope.

Hispanic authors forum comes to Notre Dame

By CAROL CAMP
Staff Reporter

Thirty-two Hispanic authors will discuss "The Present and Future of Hispanic Literature" in the International Forum of Hispanic Authors at Notre Dame on March 2 and 3.

According to Notre Dame professor and co-organizer Jose Anadon, the forum participants, ten from Spain and twenty-two from eight Latin American nations, "represent the vanguard of Hispanic literature today." Each author is well-known in his respective nation, and his works have been translated into other languages and seriously studied by scholars of other countries.

Many of the writers and literary critics participating in this event have participated in similar forums in Mexico, Venezuela, the Canary Islands, and the University of California (Berkeley). This gathering marks the second time that such a diverse group of Hispanic authors has met in the United States.

The forum's occurrence at Notre Dame is, in Anadon's words, "the end product of a long process." The idea for such an event had been discussed for two years among faculty members and Mexican author Arturo Azuela.

When Azuela came to Notre Dame in the fall of 1980 and again in 1981 to teach mini-courses in modern Hispanic literature the ideas began to materialize. The upcoming forum is the end result of this process. Additionally, Azuela's experience as Vice Minister of Culture for the government of Mexico will be invaluable to both forum organizers and participants.

Forum participants will give presentations in round table sessions which will be open to the public on the following three topics: "New Models in the Hispanic Novel" (10:00-11:30 a.m.); "Latin American and Spanish Influences on the New Generation of Narrators" (3:00-4:00 p.m.); and "Unity and Diversity of Hispanic Literature" (4:30-5:30PM)

Each session will be held twice, and all sessions will occur in the Center for Continuing Education. There is no conference fee, and all are encouraged to attend this event.

At HPC meeting

Provost to address keg issue

By KATIE MCDONNELL

Staff Reporter

Provost Timothy O'Meara will attend next week's Hall President's Council meeting to address questions arising from the keg proposal rejection, in addition to other student concerns, it was announced at the Hall President's Council meeting last night.

Rectors, as well, will meet Monday night to discuss the keg issue.

In response to a growing concern for alcohol abuse, the month of March has been designated as Alcohol Awareness Month, according to Student Body president-elect Lloyd Burke.

At the weekly HPC meeting last night in Walsh Hall, Burke announced that Notre Dame will join with all of South Bend in observing this resolution, which has been organized through Alcoholics Anonymous.

Included on the monthly list of activities are a series of programs to be held at the Madison Center in South Bend, and also a lecture to be held in the Memorial Library auditorium.

In connection with this announcement, HPC Chairman Mike Martin encouraged all new hall presidents to read a statement issued by the HPC last semester on the subject of alcohol abuse, so that they may be fully informed for this project.

In addition, all HPC members were encouraged to join the Student Senate in attending a meeting Saturday, with an independent study group who is here to view campus life. At the request of Student Body President Don Murday, this group will visit dorms, talk to students and then get the opinions of student leaders at this meeting to formulate a report on life at Notre Dame.

It was also announced that Farley Hall won the Andy Sowder Memorial Trophy for the month and was awarded a plaque by the HPC for its display of the best hall spirit on campus. Along with its other social events, Farley residents participated in a series of nightly activities Jan. 17-25 for their annual "Pop Farley Week."

These events included an all-hall mass, a "Farley Night at the Nazz," an all-hall dinner at the North Dining Hall, and ending with a Screw-Your-Roommate dance.

In other HPC news, it was announced that a representative for the Nestle corporation will be on campus today, tomorrow and Friday, in connection with last week's debate and in anticipation of the boycott vote scheduled for March 2. This representative hopes to address students personally through question/answer sessions to be held in any dorm who would like to have her speak.

Also discussed was the Health Advisory Board which has been organized through Student government in an effort to evaluate both the infirmary and the ND Student Health Services. Coming as a response to complaints concerning the general health care offered, this board will consist of a representative from every dorm and a campus chairperson to make sure that all of these objections are heard.

available to the SSS have been obtained in one of two ways: 1) The man has reported himself or 2) A third party source (i.e. neighbor, friend, associate) has reported the man. The "Privacy Act" forbids the SSS access to other agencies' social security numbers at this time.

The SSS sends an immediate warning letter to each of these non-registrant names it receives. If no further information is received by the SSS within 15 days, the name is then turned over to the U.S. attorney in the person's local district. The Attorney then sends the man another letter allowing him another letter stating that he has only 20 days before prosecution may begin. At least three final warning letters are known to have been sent out by the District Attorney in the Northern Indiana District.

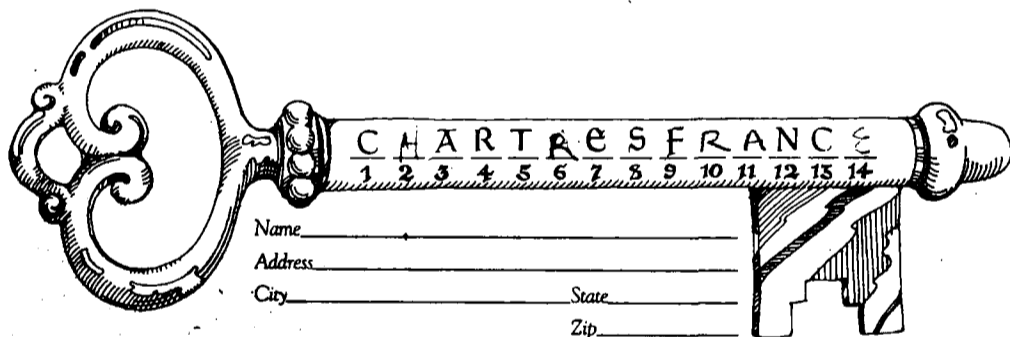

The bottom line is that the registration process from local claims boards to active legal prosecution is already in full swing. Unlike four months ago, a young man can no longer cite its questionable future as a valid reason for ignoring all possible implications. As a spokesman for NIBSCO said, "Basically, there's nothing left for them to do but declare a national emergency and start conscripting."

Reagan aids maintain that the continuation of registration would simply send out the "wrong" signal to allies and would be "imprudent" in light of the recent Polish situation.

Budget cuts crippling education

Ronald Reagan is a man who doesn't know the value of an education.

Unlike nuclear preparedness and American intervention in foreign affairs education is obviously not one of his primary concerns.

He was anti-intellectual as governor of California; he made annual threats about cutting the budget of the University of California, threats rebuffed by the legislature, and is on record with several denigrating remarks about universities and students, for example, "the state should not subsidize academic curiosity," as well as "if we've got to break some heads to shut up the students, let's get it over with."

And it would follow, then, as no surprise what Ronald Reagan is planning to do to the educational system in the United States. His plans to dismantle the Department of Education and cutback student loans, among other things, have caused educational spokesmen to claim Reagan heads "the most anti-education administration of the century." Department of Education Secretary, Terrel Bell, in an administration orchestrated suicide, hopes to replace the Department with the independent federally supported foundation. This foundation, the argument goes, would give local school boards access to federal funds while "avoiding" tight federal control.

"Avoid" is a pretty loaded word. Perhaps it might be replaced with an equally loaded phrase: "managing to ignore." A fair number of those federal controls exist to ensure quality and equitable education to the nation's children. I would question just what federal controls local school boards could avoid. Title IX? Education of the handicapped? Non-discrimination? Certainly the Bob Jones embarrassment hasn't been forgotten already.

Perhaps the replacement plan is not indicative of a plot to undermine elementary education. Perhaps it's just the logical extension of Reagan's New Federalism. But what of Reagan's plan to drastically cut funds allocated to various agencies providing loans and grants to college students?

Reagan's proposed 1983 budget calls for a 25 per cent cut in aid to students and universities. Programs affected include Pell Grants, Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants (SEOG), National Direct Student Loans (NDSL), and Guaranteed Student Loans (GSL), programs participated in by some 7 million college student.

The GSL program will be most dramatically effected. Students will have to pass far stricter financial criteria, interest rates will rise from the current 9 per cent to the going commercial rate, and graduate students will be totally eliminated from the program. As the Pell Grants, SEOGs, and to some extent NDSLs, are intended for the very poor, GSLs are mainly taken out by students with middle class backgrounds. Once again that sector will be made to bear a large part of Reagan's fiscal policy.

It's true that the student loan programs have been poorly administered in the past. We all have heard stories of the countless numbers of doctors, dentists, and lawyers who have defaulted on loans, we all have heard of or know people who took out loans they didn't need and invested in a high yield money market funds. It seems unintelligent to me to simply cut funding rather than attempt to improve the administration of the various programs.

So, the result? Some universities have begun to accept applicants not solely on academic merit, but with an eye on ability to pay. Many students will be forced to leave school, or transfer from private institutions to public universities, placing a further burden on state budgets.

To bring the effects of the proposed cuts closer to home, one only has to look at the situation at Notre Dame. With 60 per cent of the students on some sort of financial aid (grants, loans, campus employment) Notre Dame cannot but be negatively affected. Take a moment to think about how many of your friends, if not yourself, take out student loans in order to meet the difference between tuition costs and what they can afford, coming up with an extra 2500 dollars a year (multiplied by the number of siblings possibly involved) may be an impossibility. And for those who are graduating this May, planning to attend graduate school, financing those studies without the help of low interest student loans is going to be much more difficult.

It's naive to think that you won't be affected, that you will get your loan, because when the money is simply no longer made available, you won't. Will it take the reality of no loan money to get a reaction out of students, who seem at times oblivious to the machinations of their government? Perhaps it will, but let's hope it does not have to come to that. Despite what Mr. Reagan apparently thinks, an investment in education is an investment in the future, and if the goal of the administration is to 'renew' America, it would seem that ensuring the educational opportunities of the nation would be the place to start.

P.O. Box Q

WHC Coordinator comments on debate

Dear Editor: As coordinator of ND-SMC World Hunger Coalition, I would like to thank the representative from the Infant Formula Action Coalition and Nestle for their participation in last Thursday's debate. However, I must also state that the World Hunger Coalition was not entirely pleased with the substance of the debate. WHC had hoped that the debate would proceed in such a way that the positions of both of the participating parties would have been clearly articulated and defended on their own merits; unfortunately, this was not the result. From conversations with those who attended the debate, I gathered that many of them left with a sense of growing confusion, rather than of clarification.

One position that I would like to clarify is that of the ND-SMC World Hunger Coalition. The WHC continues to support the international boycott of Nestle products. There are reasons to do so which cannot be ignored. The U.S. House of Representatives' estimate that one million children per year die as a result of improper use of infant formula is an estimate which demands attention. The endorsement of the boycott by organizations such as the American Public Health Association, the American Medical Student's Association, the UAW, Maryknoll Fathers and Brothers, and many others is also an important factor. These organizations are certainly too responsible to be merely, "... repeating each other," as Dr. Jackson asserted during the debate. Nor can the endorsements of such organizations be dismissed by simply stating, "They are wrong," as Dr. Jackson said of the American Public Health Association.

Nestle has already put forth considerable effort on campus to defeat the Notre Dame boycott renewal referendum. This effort has taken the form of telephone contact with students and of direct-contact solicitation at locations such as the Senior Bar. The World Hunger Coalition is a student organization which does not have the funding or personnel to compete in a lobbying effort with the multinational Nestle S.A. However, it is the responsibility of the Hunger Coalition to make every possible effort to inform the students of Notre Dame. For three years, Notre Dame has participated in the international boycott of Nestle products. The WHC believes that the boycott is a legitimate and productive form of protest whose aim is to preserve human lives. This is not emotionalism or heated rhetoric. Children are dying from infant formula misuse; even the Congress of the United States says so. The World Hunger Coalition urges the students of Notre Dame to support the boycott in the referendum election.

The nuclear criminals

In many journals or at newsstands, journals both scholarly and popular, the consequences of nuclear war are being seriously considered for the first time in years.

Perhaps the most sobering articles are those written by Jonathan Schell for the New Yorker. Schell, with scientific thoroughness, traces the probable effects of nuclear exchange at various levels. He argues that it is literally possible to end life on the planet if Russia and America use even part of their thousands of nuclear weapons.

But even a smaller exchange than that needed to end life would set in train a sequence of meteorological, oceanographic, agricultural and biological disasters that would disrupt life at a civilized level for the survivors of mere blast or first radiation.

Nuclear weapons would deplete the ozone shield, within whose protective envelope evolution took place on this planet. The food chain of sea and land animals would be interrupted. Insects would survive, and their numbers increase, after their natural predators were killed or thinned out. A number of blasts would lower soil temperature. The ecosystem that it took millions of years to build up would be undone in a day.

The plight of survivors, who would not know whether they were dying or not, is as horrifying to contemplate as the numbers of the dead. In the wake of other disasters -- floods, for instance, or earthquakes -- looting and rioting have broken out. A nuclear disaster would dwarf all such earlier scenes. Police and medical services would be so strained as to be, for most purposes, non-existent. The dead would go unburied. Animals would forage.

Imagine going up to such survivors and saying, "We did it all to protect you, to keep you free." The obscenity of such a remark would almost justify the murder that would be its probable response. There is no conceivable exchange, or for joining in any such exchange.

Garry Wills

Some think it moral to forswear a nuclear first strike, but defend the "morality" of a retaliatory strike. If Russians should attack America, are we to wipe out millions of innocent Russian citizens, men, women and children? Why? for revenge? That is morality? In self-defense? But each act we add to such an exchange would recoil upon us in terms of the damage done to earth's ecosystems. We would destroy ourselves for the high moral goal of destroying others. Even to consider such an act is despicable. It is a crime to build or possess such weapons -- which makes most of us Americans criminals.

Syburg directs The Wild Duck

On February 26, the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Theatre will present the opening of The Wild Duck by Henrik Ibsen. The show will play in Washington Hall on the

Jerry Young

Notre Dame campus and will run February 27, March 4, 5, and 6.

Ibsen's play deals with the contemporary family lifestyle and focuses on the Ekdal family. It depicts the dreams and illusions of the Ekdals and an inescapable past that haunts them. When an old friend-of-the-family (Greggers Werle) returns home after 16 years, he attempts to unnerve the family's stable lifestyle by assessing his own idealistic values upon them. His inquisitive actions and probing accusations threaten the very existence of the Ekdals as a family.

Directing The Wild Duck is Professor Frederick W. Syburg. In his twenty-eighth year of teaching in the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Cooperative Department of Communication and Theatre, Syburg has directed productions ranging from Shakespeare to Shaw and Moliere to Miller. "The Wild Duck is essentially a tragicomedy," stated Syburg, "The two leading male characters represent the two sides of the romantic personality — the goal of the romantic being self-realization. One side says 'something's wrong with the world, therefore, one must change it.' The other side says 'just change yourself.'"

First published on November 11, 1894, The Wild Duck premiered in Bergen, Norway on January 9, 1885. Before its completion Ibsen wrote to a close friend:

"I have said everything I wanted to say; and I don't think it could have been said better...It takes place entirely within the confines of family life. I dare say it will arouse some discussion; but it can't offend anyone."

The play, originally performed in five acts, has been combined into three acts. The first setting is in the house of Haaken Werle, a wholesale merchant. Here the audience is introduced to the wealthy environment of the Werle family. The remaining scenes are set in the scant dwelling of the Ekdals. These contrasting environments exemplify a family's dependance on "illusions" that are common to all factions of society.

The Wild Duck, a work of modern classic drama, is a melange of tragic and comic instances that balance each other to produce a rich characterization of family lifestyle. "Even though the play contains many comic scenes," concluded Syburg, "the finale is anything but humorous!"

The curtain for The Wild Duck is at 8:00 p.m. Admission is $2.50 for students and faculty; $3.00 for general admission. Everyone is invited to attend.

'As Time Passes' barely passes

As Life Passes, by R.J. Maturi, describes a twenty-year-old college student's struggle to accept the harshness of reality in the sixties. The story begins with the protagonist, Anthony Rossi, taking a train to see his childhood sweetheart, Julia, in Minneapolis. He has dropped out of the University of Chicago after attempting suicide, and finds happiness and security by rekindling an old romance. Anthony then goes home to Sparta, Minnesota, and his parents decide that he should spend some time in a psychiatric hospital in New York. A very sensitive young man, Anthony is plagued by the thought that his friend Thomas is suffering in Viet Nam. This and his insecurity with women make Anthony an excellent candidate for psychiatric help. He is eventually cured of his maladies and returns home. The ending of this novel is interesting and to describe it here would spoil the book's effect.

Bill Kracklauer

As I read As Life Passes, I couldn't help thinking about J.D. Salinger's Catcher in the Rye. Anthony, like Holden Caulfield, is a very troubled person. Yet, he does resolve his inner conflicts. This novel is interesting because its author, Mr. Maturi, makes some pertinent comments about the challenges which face any young adult. I think this book says some worthwhile things, but the way in which it does so is silly. I'm sure everybody has read pieces of literature that are supposed to contain meaningful messages. Well, no one will have trouble discovering the essence of this book's monitions. For instance, in the second chapter Anthony is engrossed in thought while visiting the Field Museum of Natural History in Chicago. He is reflecting upon his attempted suicide and lamenting his friend's misery in Viet Nam when a kindly old woman approaches him and says, "I sense that you are easily hurt by life and bewildered by its pain and suffering."

I must be fair and admit that the infection of such dialogue is not as abrupt as I have implied above. The reader is introduced to each situation which induces a character to say such mushy, sickly-sweet words. The dialogue of As Life Passes is its greatest flaw. The reader is told exactly how each character feels, and it takes little imagination to create an idea of what each character is like. Many of the major lines in this novel remind me of the love scenes in a Randolph Scott western, which are totally ridiculous.

Still, I enjoyed reading As Life Passes. I wanted to find out what would happen to Anthony, Julia, and Thomas, the major characters. Mr. Maturi makes some keen observations of life which any reader can identify with. If you can overcome the sugary dialogue, As Life Passes is good, light reading.

Mob scenes take Place before movie

I could have sworn the movie started at eleven o'clock.

That's what I thought I had read in the Observer, anyway, so my friends and I got to the Engineering Auditorium in what we figured would be ample time to get seats, ten-fifty. There wasn't a very long line, and we sighed in relief. We wouldn't have to fight for seats.

The movie was "For Your Eyes Only," and was being shown in Emil Hall as usual. I had never seen it, and although I don't like Sheena Easton, I do like Bond movies, so I and four friends decided to drop into the final showing for fun. We stood outside the closed doors, and we could see people inside waiting for the auditorium itself to open.

Eleven o'clock arrived and the line had not started to budge as yet. Behind us a volatile crowd of movie patrons had gathered, and around us, the air began to become rather cold.

Anyone who has ever attended a flick at Emil Hall knows that in winter, the area directly below the doorway to the building is the worst place to be when the crowd is large and impatient.

Cathy, one of the girls in our group, thought quickly. "Maybe we'd better go inside," she suggested.

We pulled open the doors, letting in gusts of cold air, much to the enjoyment of the people inside.

"Boy, I'm sure glad you guys opened the doors," someone said. "It was starting to get hot in here."

Our timing was perfect. No sooner had we got inside than the first barrage of snowballs began to bombard the walls outside. People in the back of the line, which now looked to be several miles long, had opened fire. A state of panic arose, and the crowd started to forge en masse into the building. I had just turned around to tell my friend Patty what a nice coat she had on when I was suddenly swept off my feet and carried along by the frenzied crowd.

"Close the door!" someone shouted.

Snowballs hurtled through the doorway, causing girls to scream and guys to swear. The throng continued to pour into the building, and my arms were plastered at my sides because of the proximity of human life, now at an extreme. I turned to my left and met face-to-face with a tall sophomore. I couldn't think of anything else to do, so I introduced myself. The crowd shifted again, and this time I met a guy who was clutching his date's arm so that they wouldn't be separated.

It was now eleven-twenty, and I peered over the crowd, about six feet to my right, and saw John and Stephanie, the two others in our group.

"I guess the movie doesn't start at eleven," I said.

"I guess not," John said as a snowball flew past his head.

Again the crowd shifted, and I finally ended up on the upper level of the outside lobby, about twenty feet from where I and my friends had started off in the first place. Below the doors where we had once been, students were still being bombed with snowballs. One of them was a tall guy who I couldn't stand, so I savored the moment.

The highlight of the commotion came when someone was hoisted onto the flat area above the tunnel-like doorway of the building. The multitude went wild, and the student took advantage of his sudden popularity, jumping around like a gorilla and threatening to swing from the hanging lamp. He psyched up the crowd even more, so much so that everyone hissed when he descended from his perch.

At eleven-thirty people began to file out from the prior showing of the movie, and I fished around in my back pocket for my wallet, hoping it would still be there. Luckily, it was, so I yanked out a dollar in preparation for entry into the auditorium. Little did I know that it would still be another fifteen minutes before I got in.

Five minutes later the line started to move. The crowd went wild again. Elbows, shoulders, and knees edged their ways through the jungle of people, and we moved as one large mass into the auditorium. As I neared the auditorium door, the crowd became even more dense, and I struggled for air.

"Send up a flare!" someone yelled.

JEB 2-24

I was then rudely pushed into the person in front of me, and looking up, I noticed that it was the tall guy who had been standing under the doorway. The snow was still fresh in his hair. I dared not laugh.

When at last I gained access to the auditorium, I searched quickly for any one of my friends, and sighted all four of them sitting in a row near the wall. I joined them and waited for the movie to start.

In front of me was the person who had been clutching onto his date's arm, but here he was, sans date. I found out that his name was Rob.

"Where's your date, Rob?" I inquired.

"I don't know," he answered. "I seem to have lost her."

The lights went off, prompting a hearty cheer from the audience. I thought I had been through a lot of action already but it was nothing compared with what James Bond had to encounter. When it had finally ended and we were leaving the building, I decided optimistically that the film had been worth all the trouble. But I still didn't like Scheena Easton.

I said goodbye to Rob, but he didn't hear me. He had found his date at last.

"Where were you?" he asked her.

"I was sitting over on the right side, near the wall."

"Well, sorry..."

"Well, what did you think of the movie?"

I left them to their discussion, and vowed never to return to see the last showing of an Emil Hall movie again. But when the midnight showing of "Clockwork Orange" rolled around the next night, I just couldn't resist.

Are you listless?

Do you feel buried by a pile of textbooks? Is your social life less than social? Does it resemble life of any form? Do you sometimes feel like transferring, not out of the school, but out of the universe?

Sue C. Flynn

Well, you are not alone. You ask, "What can I do? Where can I go? Is there any hope for me?" The answers to these questions are lots, lots of places, and lots. You say "Lots is a very vague answer. You don't really know what you are talking about." You may be right, but I don't think so.

I have a plan. I call it my "Things To Do — List '82". Last year was not very inspiring and I had a list called "Things Left Undone — List '81." It was a very long list. Start a list like mine. Think about and keep it with you for a few days, so if you think of something you would like to do, you can write down. Put your list near your desk so you can see it, that is, if you are one of those people who do work. Try not to think of your desk as the lead ball which you are chained to for a few hours a day. Think of it as your very own motivation and inspiration station, or the plane which maintains your cosmic energy, whichever fits for you.

If you find your list looking like this . . .

IN 1982 I WANT TO . . .

- Lose 96 pounds
- Jog 43 miles per day
- Get a 4.0 both semesters
- Quit smoking
- Stop drinking
- Stop biting my nails
- Learn to play the guitar
- Become a black belt in Karate
- Join a jogging club
- Learn sign language
- Write a book
- Get married
- Bear eight children (4 sets of twins)
- Meet 7,682 people
- Star in a Broadway show
- Never say the word 'doorknob' again

. . . you are obviously a very highly motivated person, but you are probably miserable. It is said that misery loves company, but most people don't go to parties to meet miserable people and to keep them company. Most people go to parties to meet happy people, doing things they enjoy and having a good time. Perhaps if you are one of the lonely, miserable people you should add "write a new list" to your list.

When you write your new list, be realistic (note: Real-list-ic). Do not set your goals outside of your reach. It is true that anything is possible, but if it were to all happen at once, what would be left? Take it one step at a time. Maybe your list could read . . .

IN 1982 I WANT TO

- Lose 5 pounds
- Be a little more creative
- Write to some old friends
- Say "good morning" to a stranger every once in a while (even if it is afternoo)
- Remember to thank God for giving me eyes
- Learn to like myself
- Stop and smell the roses

My "Things To Do — List '82" has only one thing on it. In 1982 I want to start taking my own advice.

Trivia Quiz XVII

I had some fun with last week's trivia quiz, and I hope you did too. Here are the answers of the 1981-1982 trivia session:

1. "Somewhere Down the Road" by Barry Manilow differs from all his previous 45 RPM ballads (since late 1975) because it does not have the familiar key change at the end. (Listen again, if you do not believe it.)

Tim Neely

2. The two new acts who have entered into the top ten LPs during 1982 are the Go-Go's (with Beauty and the Beat) and Quarterflash (with Quarterflash).

3. The one non-Top 20 single from HI Infirmity was (c) "Don't Let Him Go."

4. Ignored albums by well-known acts: (a) Ringo Starr — Stop and Smell the Roses; (b) Meat Loaf — Dead Ringer; (c) Black Sabbath — Mob Rules; (d) Steve Miller Band — Circle of Love.

5. The only album to hit number one in 1981 without help from a Top 40 single was For Those About to Rock We Salute You by AC/DC (it was number one the last week of 1981 and the first two weeks of 1982).

6. The "swing-music" LP by an act not normally associated with swing music was Joe Jackson's Jumpin' Jive by Joe Jackson.

7. The country LP by an act not normally associated with that genre was Almost Blue by Elvis Costello and the Attractions.

8. The first commercial release of Springsteen's "Santa Claus Is Coming to Town" was on the album In Harmony 2.

9. The group who is batting three-for-its-last-four on the 45 charts as far as number ones are concerned is Daryl Hall and John Oates; their three chart-toppers were "Kiss on My List," "Private Eyes," and "I Can't Go for That"; the one that missed was the number five hit "You Make My Dreams."

10. This album has spent something like 30 weeks in the top ten, and only one at number one — Escape by Journey.

Now on to this week's quiz. I don't know if you have ever noticed, but quite a few rock songs feature a countdown at the beginning. Based upon the information given, name these hit songs by title and artist.

Iowa slumps, Big Ten race tight

By JOE MOOSHIL
Associated Press

Iowa Coach Lute Olson is a mild-mannered individual but mention the word "slump" in connection with his Hawkeyes and his feathers become ruffled.

"What slump?" said Olson, whose Hawkeyes have lost two of their last three games but still hold a one-game lead over Minnesota in the Big Ten race. "We've won 19 and lost only four, we're in first place in the Big Ten and we're still ranked nationally. We lost a game at Indiana, but anybody who goes to Indiana and expects to win should have his head examined."

But Iowa also lost to Michigan last Saturday, a game Olson admits the Hawkeyes should have won.

Another game the Hawkeyes should win is at home tomorrow night against last-place Wisconsin before squaring off against Minnesota on Saturday in a pivotal contest. Iowa then finishes the regular season on the road at Illinois and Purdue.

"The history and tradition of the Big Ten, with rare exceptions, is that the race goes down to the final week and the final games," said Olson. "All of us have difficult games left."

Behind Iowa and Minnesota are

Ohio State and Indiana, who are tied for third place, two games off the pace. That tie will be resolved tomorrow night when Indiana plays at Ohio State.

Minnesota will be at Michigan, Illinois at Michigan State and Purdue at Northwestern.

Coach Jim Dutcher of Minnesota is not looking past Michigan to the important Iowa game Saturday.

"Michigan is playing tough and we haven't won there in 13 years," said Dutcher. "What happens tomorrow will set the stage for Saturday. All of our preparations are for Michigan."

Dutcher also called the Big Ten race "typical," adding: "Someone always breaks out in front as Iowa did, then the other teams spring back and scramble the race. It seems it always goes down to the last week and there are no exceptions."

"Before the NCAA tournament expanded to 48 teams when only the champion would get a bid, the teams that were behind would say 'what the heck' and let it go at that. But now with three or four teams having a chance to get into the tournament, they don't let you get away."

Besides Iowa and Minnesota, teams scrambling for tournament positions are Ohio State, Indiana, Illinois and Purdue. Iowa has an 11-3 record to 10-4 for Minnesota. Ohio State and Indiana are 9-5 and Illinois and Purdue are 8-6.

Iowa could conceivably clinch a tie for the title this week if the Hawkeyes defeat both Wisconsin and Minnesota and Minnesota also loses at Michigan. Michigan, after an 0-6 start in the Big Ten, has won five of its last eight games and three of the last four.

"Oh, yes. I get kind of angry if they don't," Thompson says. Anyone who has stood alongside this massive man would understand the desire to keep him happy.

"But I tell them from the beginning that I'm not here to be a mother or father to them," he said. "As far as my stressing education goes, I don't feel I'm exceptional in that. Unfortunately, though, the rule breakers get more publicity."

This season was expected to be particularly challenging for Thompson. He was faced with the task of melding three freshmen, including the highly publicized Patrick Ewing, with a team that returned all five starters. Resentment on the part of displaced seniors was a possibility he admits concerned him.

"It wasn't as much of a problem as I thought it might be," Thompson said. "A lot of the reason for that was because of the attitude of our incoming people. Actually, it's been one of my most enjoyable years."

"I wouldn't have had the same feeling if it weren't for the cooperation of the players," he said. "The freshmen have made no special demands in proportion to their reputations."

Besides Ewing, a 7-footer from Cambridge, Mass., Thompson recruited two of the best freshmen in the Washington area — forwards Anthony Jones and Bill Martin.

"If there's been any problem with any of the freshmen, it's been that they're too unselfish," Thompson said. "Anthony Jones in particular. He's so unselfish, he won't take his shots. I guess he's trying to please me, and that's not all bad, but it's much easier to keep the ball away from a kid than it is to make him shoot."

At 6-6, Jones might be designated to take over the role of guard Eric "Sleepy" Floyd, a senior who scores 17 points a game and is Georgetown's all-time leading scorer with 2,149 points going into tonight's Big East Conference game against Providence.

The Hoyas' most publicized victory this season was a 12-pointer over then No. 4-ranked Missouri last Saturday. Floyd and Ewing were the principals in that one. Unfortunately, Ewing also has been the cause, even if indirectly, of some of Thompson's most worrisome moments.

During three straight losses in mid-January, Ewing began to gain a reputation as a dirty player. He had traded elbows with a Yugoslavian player in an exhibition game in November, and at the end of December in the Rochester Classic, he had an elbow-throwing session with Columbia's Tom Brecht.

Then came the nickname "Darth Vader," and Ewing had become a villain of intergalactic notoriety.

EARN OVER $800 A MONTH.

AND OPEN THE DOOR TO A TOP ENGINEERING FUTURE.

How many corporations would be willing to pay you over $800 a month during your junior and senior years just so you'd join the company after graduation? Under a special Navy program we're doing just that. It's called the Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate-College Program. And under it, you'll not only get great pay during your junior and senior years, but after graduation you'll receive a year of valuable graduate-level training that is not available from any other employer.

If you are a junior or senior majoring in math, engineering or physical sciences, find out more today. And let your career pay off while still in college.

GET A HEAD START IN A NUCLEAR CAREER.

For information or an interview, see your NAVY reps on campus:

3-4 March

Train for a career as a Nuclear Propulsion Officer in the Navy. The Navy has the most advanced nuclear equipment in the world, and needs advanced nuclear trained officers to maintain and operate it.

The graduate level training you'll receive in this program could cost $30,000. As a Nuclear Propulsion Officer, you'll be rewarded with increased responsibilities and promotion potential.

QUALIFICATIONS: Age—19 to 27½ years old. Education—Working towards (or have completed) BA or BS degree.

Edmonson second

Indiana's Kitchel tops in stats

CHICAGO (AP) — Ted Kitchel of Indiana and Keith Edmonson of Purdue are engaged in a torrid battle for individual scoring honors in the Big Ten basketball race.

Kitchel has scored 288 points in 14 conference games for a 20.6 average and Edmonson has 285 points for a 20.4 average.

Nobody else is close to the two leaders. Kevin Smith of Michigan State is third with a 17.5 average followed by Clark Kellogg of Ohio State at 17.0, Craig Tucker of Illinois 15.5, Eric Turner of Michigan 14.9, Randy Breuer of Minnesota 14.3, Trent Tucker of Minnesota 14.1, James Griffin of Illinois 13.9 and Jim Stack of Northwestern and Thad Garner of Michigan tied at 13.8.

Russell Cross of Purdue is the field goal percentage leader at .569 with Kitchel a fraction behind at .568 followed by Perry Range of Illinois .545, Kellogg .540 and Breuer at .540.

Kitchel leads in free throw percentage with 78 of 189 for .876 with Tony Campbell of Ohio State second with 39 of 46 for .847 and Tucker of Illinois 65 of 78 for .833.

Kellogg remains the rebound leader 158 for an 11.2 average followed by Brad Sellers of Wisconsin with 131 for a 9.4 average and Griffin with 101 and a 7.2 average.

Darryl Mitchell of Minnesota is the assists leader with 31 and a 2.2 average, followed by Derek Harper of Illinois with 28 and a 2.0 average. John Bailey of Wisconsin and Steve Carfino of Iowa have 22 each and a 1.6 average.

Harper is the assists leader far and away. He has 80 for a 5.7 average with Turner second with 56 and a 4.0

average. Smith has 55 and a 3.9 average and Dan Pelekoudas of Michigan has 54 and a 3.8 average.

Sellers leads in blocked shots with 34 followed by Granville Waiters of Ohio State with 28, Griffin with 27, Cross with 26 and Breuer with 25.

Indiana is the team leader on offense with a 65.6 average followed by Minnesota th 64.1, Illinois 61.7, Iowa 61.3, Ohio State 60.2, Purdue 60.0, Wisconsin 58.6, Michigan 58.5, Michigan State 56.4 and Northwestern 56.3.

Iowa is the team leader in defense allowing only 54.9 points per game. Illinois is second at 56.4 followed by Michigan State 56.9, Minnesota 58.6, Northwestern 58.9, Ohio State 60.0, Purdue 60.8, Indiana 60.9, Michigan 64.9 and Wisconsin 70.5.

Miller wants NCAA playoffs to change

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Eldon Miller, Ohio State's coach, says upset winners of conference tournaments shouldn't draw automatic berths in the National Collegiate Athletic Association's basketball playoffs.

"I don't think a .500 team that wins a conference tournament should be in the NCAA. They should take the teams with the best overall records, the ones that have played consistently well all season," Miller said Tuesday.

The Ohio State coach has good reason for such a stand at this time. The Buckeyes, 18-8 overall but only 9-5 in the Big Ten, are trying to gain an at-large berth to the NCAA.

They face invading Indiana tomorrow night in a game that may determine a Big Ten representative to the national playoffs. The defending NCAA champion Hoosiers, 15-8 for all games, share third place in the league with the Buckeyes.

Miller believes that the Big Ten could wind up with four NCAA teams as it did in 1980. "But if the .500-type teams' win conference tournaments, it will be very difficult for our league to get four teams," he said.

The Big Ten, Pac-10 and Western Athletic Conference are the only major conferences left that don't stage the moneymaking league eliminations.

Miller is lukewarm to such eliminations for the Big Ten.

"Some years it would be a plus, and some years it would not be," he said. "Our league, like the most powerful leagues in the country, could have a team get hot for three or four games and win the tournament. It might not be the best team in the league. If you go to a tournament, you take away from the league race."

Wayne Duke, the Big Ten commissioner and former chairman of the NCAA tournament selection committee, is a firm believer in his league's double round robin of 18 games.

WHERE THE NEED IS... THERE WE WILL BE.

Sentimental Bob Crable wins award

Bob Crable, co-captain and middle linebacker for the 1980-81 Irish football team, received the Kodak All-American Team award during the halftime of last night's Notre Dame-Fordham basketball game.

"I think this is the first time I ever got a standing ovation," said Crable, a senior, moved by the crowd's appreciation for his efforts this past year. "I'm going to get sentimental. I believe Notre Dame is great because of its student body."

Crable was also picked to the Associated Press All-American team (first team) and the United Press International team (first team). — The Observer

Fordham Rams butt Notre Dame by 15

By DAVE DZIEDZIC
Associate Sports Editor

One good player does not make a team.

That's the lesson that Notre Dame learned last night. The Irish learned it the hard way, dropping a 65-50 decision to the Fordham Rams in the ACC. The Irish, now 8-15, may have also lost any hopes of a post-season tournament bid.

Even though Fordham employed a tough box-and-one defense on Notre Dame's John Paxson, the junior guard still was able to score a game-high 21 points (15 in the second half) on 8-of-15 from the field and 5-of-5 from the free throw line.

But Paxson's supporting cast wasn't supportive. The remaining four Irish starters shot only 28 percent (7-of-25) from the field, allowing the Rams to overplay Paxson.

"Tonight was another case of inconsistency on our part," said Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps after the game. "Paxson played well against their defense but our other guys couldn't capitalize. We couldn't get the inside game going.

"When Spencer, Andree, and Rucker play well inside, things open up for our outside shooters. We saw that against South Carolina on Saturday."

The game was a see-saw battle until 3:40 remained in the first half. Fordham led, 23-19, at that point. The Rams then reeled off eight unanswered points to take a 31-19 into the lockerroom.

Even though his club held a 12-point lead Fordham Coach Tom Penders wasn't satisfied at halftime. "We had good games against Notre Dame the past two years," he said. "Two years ago at home, we led them by 40 at halftime and ended up losing by 15. I told our kids not to get complacent. Notre Dame has a lot of pride. I knew the Irish would make a run at it."

The Irish did make a run at it. Notre Dame scored the first six points of the second half, bringing the previously quiet crowd alive. The Rams, in the meantime, had trouble hitting their shots. But the Irish were not able to get within five points of the Rams.

"We kept our composure in the second half, and that was the key," Penders said. "Notre Dame came out strong in the second half, and the crowd got behind them. But I told the guys to keep playing our type of game, and they did."

Fordham's "type of game" was a good display of team basketball. The Rams utilized excellent ball movement and good shot selection. They set screens well and kept looking for the open man.

Fordham's African connection lead the Rams' balanced scoring attack. Seven-foot senior center Dud Tongal scored 18 points to lead a balanced scoring attack. Tongal shot 70 percent (7-of-10) from the floor, while Edward Bona was perfect from the floor, hitting all four of his shots. Bona finished with 12 points.

Notre Dame center Tim Andree could manage only three second-half points to finish with 12.

Even though they shot better in the second half (39 percent) than in the first half (33 percent), the Irish were intimidated by the Rams' big front line. Tongal blocked two shots and Bona (6-8) blocked one, but their mere presence halted several Irish shooters. At times, it appeared that the Irish were afraid to shoot.

Fordham had been frustrated the past two years against Notre Dame, so last night's victory was especially sweet for the Rams.

"It's a good feeling to finally beat Notre Dame," Tongal said. "The Irish are always well coached, but they've had trouble this year. We knew that this had to be our year."

Penders was equally pleased. "After the past few losses to Notre Dame, this one feels great," he said.

Phelps praised Penders for the job he's done with the Rams. "They are a

Attempted rape

Quintin Daley arrested for felonies

By RACHEL BLOUNT
Sports Writer

Charges of five felonies, including attempted rape, were filed Monday against University of San Francisco basketball star Quintin Daley. The 6-3 junior guard, currently the Division I's fifth leading scorer, turned himself in at the Hall of Justice in San Francisco after a warrant was issued for his arrest and was freed half an hour later on $5,000 bond.

The charges, filed against Daley by another USF student, included two counts of assault with intent to commit a sexual act, assault to commit great bodily harm, burglary with intent to commit a felony and false imprisonment. The incident allegedly occurred on December 21, the day before USF's three-point victory over New Orleans in San Francisco.

Daley, who currently averages 24.4 points per game, refused to comment upon his arrest but later told the student newspaper, "I'll be playing ball. That's all I can say." Athletic moderator Father Joseph Eagan confirmed Daley's statement yesterday, saying that "Quintin is practicing and will continue to play." The athletic office refused further comment, but a formal statement issued yesterday by Ron Brill, the University's Director of Public Affairs, stated that "having considered the seriousness of the charges, it would be wrong for the university or anyone representing it to make any comment other than profound concern on the issue or on anyone concerned with it."

Daley, a strong candidate for All-American honors and the leading scorer for the Top Twenty-rated Dons, has led his team in each of the last three contests against Notre Dame, including a game-high 29 points in last year's 80-75 upset loss to the Irish in South Bend. This year, the guard tallied 13 points in USF's 57-55 triumph in San Francisco and led all scorers with 24 points as the Dons fell to Notre Dame at the ACC.

Meadowlands move for N.Y. Rangers?

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The New York Rangers yesterday agreed to tell the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority by April 22 if they plan to abandon Madison Square Garden for the Meadowlands.

If the National Hockey League team decides to move across the Hudson River they will walk into 30-year lease at the 7-month-old arena here. Part of the agreement signed Tuesday includes a $150,000 good-faith payment to the expositions authority.

The Rangers also agreed not to block attempts by other NHL franchises to move to the arena should the New York team decide to stay in Manhattan.

"It is an expression of their intent to come here," said Chairman Jon F. Hanson of the expositions authority, who received the commitment signed by Rangers President Jack Krumpke on Feb. 18 and called the special meeting yesterday to ratify it.

"We have one goal, and that is to bring a hockey team here," said the authority's executive director, Robert Mulcahy.

"We will do anything we can to procure a team. This is the first step, and hopefully, the last. We felt we had to do something to put this in a time frame. We got our foot in the door now, and this gives us a wedge."

It also was agreed that if the Rangers don't move to the Meadowlands, they will not oppose the transfer of an existing team or the assignment of an expansion franchise to the New Jersey facility, located only eight miles from Midtown Manhattan.

That clause is subject to the Rangers' receipt of a favorable agreement regarding territorial indemnification.

The Colorado Rockies of the NHL also have expressed interest in moving to New Jersey.

Thompson 'deflates' Georgetown

By JOHN NELSON

John Thompson, coach of the Georgetown University basketball team, keeps a deflated basketball in his office just as a reminder.

"When I first came to Georgetown, I brought it to remind the kids that they didn't want their lives to be predicated on nine or 10 pounds of air in a basketball," Thompson says. "There are a lot of things more significant."

So, he says, he chose the flat basketball as a graphic illustration, to say to his players: "if someone lets the air out of your basketball, I don't want them to be able to come up to you and say, 'Here, this is your life. What are you worth now?'"

In his 10th season at Georgetown, Thompson has gained a reputation as a teaching coach who stresses academics it an academically tough school. All five of the seniors on his roster will graduate on schedule.
