Black Arts Festival ends on 'good note'

By KELLI FLINT and
BOB VONDERHEIDE
News Staff

Operating on a budget "too small to cover expenses," the Black Cultural Arts Festival included a month of activities with a fashion show and dance at the Athletic and Convocation Center Saturday night.

The major financing for the festival came through contributors within the University, according to student Piper Griffin. There is a basic budget, but that never covers all of the expenses. "The Provosts Office is usually the largest contributor," she added.

The celebration of black history developed from a day to a week to a month, noted Griffin. "Blacks on this campus are proud of that and want to contribute to the celebration," she added.

The festival could have been better if more people had participated, according to Black Cultural Arts Council Chairman Harryl Ammons. Ammons noted that the fashion show and Gospel Ensemble ended the festival on a "good note."

"Somehow, since the black community is so small, it helps the majority of the white populus get to know what the Black culture really is," Ammons said.

Ammons added that for black students adjusting to Notre Dame is "hard at times" but "getting a little better. With a little participation, there is a lot that can be learned."

The festival is intended to expose black history, according to student Colette Payne.

"There is not enough exposure to black history on this campus. The environment is not conducive to that awareness."

Quality-wise, Griffin said she thinks the festival was "excellent" this year. "The South Bend community supported the functions very well," she said. "In some cases, they outnumbered the Notre Dame community."

There were different types of speakers this year, according to Griffin. "Last year we had Cicely Tyson and Marva Collins," she said. "The names are not the same."

The festival also included a presentation by poet Sonia Sanchez, a talent show, and the play "And You Thought All We Could Do Was Dance."

Grace raises money for 1979 ND graduate

By CINDY COLDIRON
Staff Reporter

The residents of Grace Hall hope to raise $2500 to help a former Notre Dame student who was paralyzed when he was shot by a kidnapper last December in Washington, D.C.

Paul Komlosi, a 1979 graduate of Notre Dame and a former Grace Hall resident, had been working as an aide to Rep. Dennis Eckart, a Democratic Congressman in Washington.

On Dec. 19, Komlosi was installing a cassette deck in his car when two men pointed a gun at him, jumped into his car and shoved him into the back seat. The men proceeded to drive around for several hours until one of them, without saying a word, shot Komlosi and the two left him to die.

Komlosi said later that he could tell right away that he was paralyzed. "If I was going to get out of this alive, I knew that I had to stay awake," he said. "But I thought, do I want to be paralyzed for life? It would have been easier to keel over and die."

Komlosi lives with his mother, who is a factory worker, and neither of them has the means to pay for a 12-week physical rehabilitation program that he needs. Confined to a wheelchair for the rest of his life, Komlosi had been very active in interhall sports at Notre Dame.

Mike Burton, president of Grace Hall and in charge of the fund-raiser, stated that raffle tickets will be sold tomorrow and Wednesday for $1 during lunch and dinner in Saint Mary's and Notre Dame dining halls. Other Grace Hall residents who were involved in the planning of this fund-raiser include Bill Beck, Kevin Williams and Mark Rolfes.

Among the items to be raffled are: Phil Carter's football jersey, donated by Coach Gerry Faust; a basketball signed by all the Notre Dame basketball players, donated by Coach "Digger" Phelps; and a book written and autographed by Fr. Theodore Hesburgh.

The winning raffle tickets will be drawn Wednesday night at a time and place to be announced.

Reformed alcoholic analyzes addiction

By MICHAEL WILKINS
Staff Reporter

The Michiana Coalition on Alcohol and other Drug Abuse will present Los Angeles Dodger pitcher Don Newcombe, a reformed alcoholic, and drug abuse expert Mitchell Rosenthal tonight at 7:30 at Clay High School in South Bend. The program is part of the coalition's "Alcohol Awareness Month" for the Michiana area.

The coalition is sponsoring several events to inform the local community about alcohol and to shed some light on the problems that can occur when alcohol is not used sensibly.

"We're really trying to offer some education and possibly promote sensible drinking," said Charlotte Voor, Executive Director of the Alcoholism Council of St. Joseph County. "We're stressing education and prevention while aiming at the social drinker."

The coalition will sponsor open meetings to inform people about the effects of alcohol and alcohol abuse, as well as ways to deal with alcohol-related problems and ideas for alternatives to alcohol. Also scheduled are awareness sessions for youth and their parents and special sessions to inform women about the special problems they may have with alcohol. Former First Lady Betty Ford also will speak later this month.

The program actually went into full force last week with lectures and forums on the effects

Teenage thieves stalk Breen-Phillips, Farley

By VIC SCIULLI
Senior Staff Reporter

Several robberies in two girls dorms in the past few weeks on campus have alarmed residents and caused an increase in security in those two dorms.

During the last week of February, several residents of Breen-Phillips and Farley halls were robbed of their wallets and purses while their rooms were unattended. Rooms on the first and second floors of Breen-

Phillips were most affected by the burglaries. All the rooms were unlocked at the time. Residents reported seeing young boys running through the hall, but no suspects have been apprehended.

Two wallets, belonging to girls from other dorms were found in one of the bathrooms of Farley Hall last Friday. No suspicious characters were seen in the hall; no one is certain as

REV. THEODORE M. HESBURGH is among seven persons named by the U.S. Department of State to observe the elections in El Salvador on March 28. The delegation will be headed by Sen. Nancy L. Kassenbaum, Republican of Kansas, and includes Fr. Hesburgh, Congressman Bob Livingston of Louisiana; Everett E. Briggs, deputy assistant secretary for Inter-American affairs; Clark Kerr, president emeritus of the University of California at Berkeley, and Richard M. Scammon and Howard Penniman, well-known election experts. Scammon and Penniman are in El Salvador this week observing election preparations, and the entire delegation is scheduled in the country during the final week of the campaign to witness the polling and vote counting process. -- The Observer.

GUNMEN WOUNDED THREE PEOPLE at a polling station in Guatemala City yesterday and three guerrillas were killed in a shoot-out, police said, but voters appeared to be ignoring a leftist call to boycott the national elections. Police said the gunmen opened fire at the polling place on the capital's southern edges and fled in a speeding car, shortly before voting for a new president and other officials opened. Later, authorities said three terrorists, one with a sack full of bombs, were killed in a shoot-out with police. At least 36 other people died in political violence on election eve. Election day security was heavy throughout the capital. Soldiers guarded polling places with machine guns mounted on jeeps and spot car checks were made on the highways outside the city. Travelers from two northwestern provinces where leftist guerrilla activity has been heavy reported a better-than-average turnout. In the capital, marimba bands played for the long lives of voters. The government promised "free, clean and pure" elections but leftists urged Guatemalans to boycott them, calling them a "farce." No liberal candidates are running for president. -- AP.

POLISH ARCHBISHOP Jozef Glemp appealed to Poles and the Communist government yesterday to compromise despite what he called the "many harms and violations of human dignity" in life under martial law. Glemp's remarks were considered conciliatory toward the government, which two days earlier announced two priests had been jailed, one for slandering Polish leaders and the other in connection with a police killing. "We need to be reasonable and realistic," the Roman Catholic primate said in a sermon at St. Michael's Church in Warsaw. "We can't say now or never or everything or nothing. We also should look into the future. Our future perspectives are great." Speaking to several hundred people, Glemp said that nearly three months of martial law have brought "EENORMOUS DISRUPTIONS" AND "many harms and violations of human dignity." More than 4,000 people have been detained since Premier Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski decreed martial law Dec. 13 after 16 months of strikes and political challenges to Communist rule by the now-suspended Solidarity union. Glemp, who was condemned the crackdown several times, is considered the spiritual leader of Poland, where more than 90 percent of the nation's 36 million people are devout Catholics. -- AP.

MINORITY STUDENTS make up 8 percent of the University of Notre Dame's undergraduates and 5 percent of its graduate school enrollment in the 1981-82 academic year, unchanged from the previous year. The percentage of black students fell from 4 to 3 in the undergraduate student body, while Hispanic students increased from 3 to 4 percent. Hispanic students' percentage in the graduate school rose from 2 to 3 percent, while the percentage of black students remained at 1 percent. American Indians and Asian Americans made up the rest of the minority students on both levels. There was a 24 percent increase in accepted minority students, reflecting intensified recruiting by the undergraduate admissions office, but rising costs, cutbacks in federal funds and limited University financial aid resources caused low confirmation and high cancellation rates. -- The Observer.

In Memory of Bluto

Every now and then, an event occurs which makes you realize how unpredictable and fleeting life is. This weekend such an event occurred; John Belushi, a comedian of our generation, died at age 33.

The death of John Belushi is different than the recent deaths of celebrities such as Natalie Wood, William Holden or John Lennon. Though many of us enjoyed the works of these entertainers, they were not of our generation. We each have our favorite Lennon tune, but John Lennon started back in the sixties; he was there before us. Belushi came on the scene with us.

John Belushi did not gain national recognition until he appeared on the first Saturday Night Live show in 1975. The show offered satire that commented on subjects that Mom, Dad and big brother could not identify with. They did not know that Candy Slate was a shot at Patti Smith, or let alone who Patti Smith was.

Some people may think that I am stretching it a bit too far to say that the death of a comic who dressed up as a killer bee and a Samurai warrior had an effect on our life.

Yet, he was there on the tube when you didn't get a date for Saturday night and at the movie theater as Bluto when you did. And more importantly, he was the first entertainer whose career we've been able to live with from start to finish.

In this respect, his death hits home; a man who should have had the best years of his career ahead of him -- will be buried.

Though he only performed to a national audience for the last seven years, the characters Belushi portrayed made a statement on the way most people would secretly like to live; i.e., everyone has a little Bluto in them.

This underlying feeling added the special meaning to Bluto's lines in the film "Animal House": "Seven years of college down the drain." Sometimes every college student wishes that he could just stay in college and hide from the real world. (Isn't that why we're here at Notre Dame?) And who is the character in the film that gets the rest of the Delta House brothers ready to turn the worst time of their lives into the best? Bluto ("when the going gets tough the tough get going"). Most importantly, which character in the film ends up the best in the long run? Senator John Blutarski with an attractive wife and a prestigious title.

The main aspect of this desire to be like Bluto is the desire to live life for the moment, a total disregard for the future.

In actuality, the character torments the student who resembles the "Niedermeyer" type who is so concerned with the GPA and the Orgo lab due tomorrow that he does not know the names of the guys in his section and refuses to go out with the gang every now and then. Like Niedermeyer, they will probably end up being killed by their own troops in Vietnam or El Salvador.

His humor took us away from the impending dangers of the nuclear arms race, Three Mile Island and unemployment, and enabled us to enjoy the moment, forgetting the future, because it might not be there.

This is not to say that everyone should totally disregard all responsibilities; but every once in a while it is the best thing in the world to do what you want to and say, "The hell with everybody else." Life is not fair, as Belushi death showed. It does not promise that you will get what you deserve or that you will always have the chance to do what you want, so you better take the chance while you can.

Beneath this disregard for everything, a message of "be yourself" comes through. Bluto did what he wanted.

What we are concerned with is the development of the individual without interfering with other peoples' rights and well-being.

Bluto did not want to harm the members of the other fraternities in "Animal House;" he just wanted them to leave his Delta House alone.

In actuality he wanted them to respect his life.

It is with this respect for life that this column is dedicated to the memory of John Belushi and all the enjoyable moments his talents have added to my life and others.

of alcohol and other drugs, as well as a special program highlighting new techniques in alcohol counseling.

"Awareness Month" is aimed at virtually every group in the community. Senior citizens have the opportunity to learn the problems that can occur when medicine and drugs are mixed. People working in various industries can learn the difficulties that can arise when alcohol interferes with work and the resources are available for the troubled employee.

Another of the goals for the coalition is to help alcoholics and people involved with an alcoholic to learn to cope with the disease. Families are able to learn how to live with an active alcoholic and how children of alcoholics will be influenced by the disease. People will also learn that intervention, the actual process of confronting the alcoholic, is the best way to combat alcoholism.

Special care is being given to educate youth and women, two groups that can be easily damaged by alcohol abuse. Not only will children ranging from high school to elementary age learn how alcohol can damage the body, but they also will learn alternatives to drinking -- such as "getting high on yourself" -- and how to deal with alcohol responsibly.

"Though we will have people relating stories of how alcohol can ruin lives, we're not just trying to scare them into not abusing alcohol," Voor noted. "We're trying to show them options to drinking, at least, how to drink responsibly."

The problems a woman may encounter with alcohol will receive special attention, not only because the problems of alcoholism appear to progress more rapidly in women, but also because of the problems that can occur when drinking during pregnancy. Birth defects associated with heavy alcohol use are known as "fetal alcohol syndrome" (FAS). The conditions related to FAS are permanent and can be very serious. Since no safe level has yet been established for pregnant women, the coalition is stressing education about drinking problems for pregnant women.

In all the groups, one basic theme appears. "What we're trying to tell everybody is 'take care of your body while you're taking care of your life,'" Voor said.

Joseph Dolan confronts Eileen Durkin in The Wild Duck

The Wild Duck soars to new heights

The ND/SMC theater production of Henrik Ibsen's The Wild Duck should not have been missed. This theater classic is Ibsen's finest play, and director Frederic Syberg deserves our admiration and gratitude for giving this rather difficult play a thoroughly adequate and quite enjoyable production.

Walter Davis

The play is about illusions: how they are fostered and kept up, how they cut across one another, how necessary they are to our frail human life, and how, finally, they can destroy. For a campus like ours rife with illusions, the play has a special poignancy.

The young and idealistic Gregers Werle (John Davenport) vows to strip the illusions from his friend's eyes, Hjalmar Ekdal (Richard Lechowich). He proceeds to do this by moving in with him and his wife, Gina (Heather Fraser). When Gregers reveals the truth to Hjalmar about Gina, he produces only depression and despair, instead of enlightenment and strength, and almost breaks the family apart. Undaunted, he persuades Hjalmar's daughter, Hedvig (Eileen Durkin) to bring her father round by an act of noble self-sacrifice, killing the wild duck that is so precious to her. Perhaps grasping the symbolism only too well, Hedvig shoots herself, leaving all, even Gregers, in despair.

For Gregers, the Ekdals live in a world of illusions; yet he, in his belief in the nobility of ideas, is the greatest illusionist of them all. This is an Ibsen play that satirizes idealistic Ibsenism, a symbolic play that criticizes symbol-making. Its play of perspectives is dazzling (almost Chekhovian), mixing as it does comedy and pathos, zany horseplay and terror.

Therein lies its difficulty in performance. Hjalmar, for instance, must convincingly combine self-pity and generosity, foolishness and pathos. On opening night, Lechowich seemed to be able to avoid extremes, but he did so at the expense of a fully convincing portrayal. Perhaps in order not to appear ridiculous, he let some comic moments slip by. He did not seem to get into his part until the comic ranting and raving of Act III, after which things went smoothly. Davenport played Gregers as coldly Satanic (almost like Iago) rather than as a bright-eyed idealist; as a result, his disillusionment received no audience sympathy (the audience almost hissed at times). Instead of wild-eyed enthusiasm, guilt and deflation, he displayed detachment and slight distress. Fraser was solidly peasant-like as Gina, and a bit stiff. Durkin gave a brilliant performance as Hedvig. She resisted the temptation to play the doomed little girl as languid and pathetic. She made her into an angular impetuous adolescent, teeming with life. Raul Aportela was absolutely brilliant as the crazy but dignified old Ekdal, usually drunk and muttering to himself as he wandered about the stage. Joseph Dolan as Dr. Relling and Paul Clay as the drunken theology student, Molvik, gave creditable supporting performance, as did Joe Musumeci as Haakon Werle and Therese Brown as Mrs. Soerby.

The sets by Thomas Leff were quite well done, especially the Ekdal home, half literal studi, half symbolic seabottom. The pacing was lively, but the fake beards plastered here and there on the faces of the male actors were distracting. There were flaws, but the acting was thoroughly competent and interesting. This is a difficult play to stage, and it is notable that it drew a large and enthusiastic audience, even in the midst of the Sophomore Literary Festival. To perform it at all was an act of courage; to do it so entertainingly was a real accomplishment.

Is honesty really the fair policy?

I'm constantly pleased with the fact that I can sit here and complain about something without ever having to make a hard decision about what ought to be done about it.

Congress is trying to decide whether to pass a law making it mandatory for used car dealers to reveal any known defects in the cars they sell. Congressmen are getting a lot of help in making up their minds from Political Action Committees (PACS) supported by the dealers, which have contributed to the politicians' campaign funds.

Andy Rooney

On the surface, it all seems obvious. Of course an honest used car dealer should tell a customer that the engine is shot, the brakes are about gone or the body is almost rusted out under the bright, shiny new paint job. The question, though, is this: Is anyone else selling anything to us being held to that same standard? Do the companies that sell us brand new merchandise have to be honest with us about what's wrong with their product? They don't, of course. We all know that when it comes to an advertisement, almost anything goes. There's a common understanding among us that we take ads with a grain of salt.

There's no doubt about it, asking used car dealers to be absolutely honest may be asking too much. Assume you're an honest person. How would you behave under similar circumstances? If you were selling a house in the fall when it hadn't rained in weeks, would you go to a lot of trouble to tell a prospective buyer that the cellar often has water six inches deep during the spring when it rains a lot? Or wouldn't you bother to mention it? Would you buy a used car from a person like yourself?

We'd all like to live in a world where no law had to be passed to enforce honesty, decency and ethical standards, but we don't live in that world. The Romans had that Latin phrase we've borrowed, "caveat emptor." It means "Let the buyer beware," and most of us recognize with some sadness that we have to live by that rule. It's why we pinch the fruit.

In no case are we more suspicious than in the purchase of a second-hand car, but at the same time there's nothing we buy that we're so incapable of judging accurately. You can look at a car in a lot for an hour and you can drive it around the block, but you're still not going to know that it was in a bad accident four months ago and the frame is weakened and bent. You're not going to know the piston rings are gone and the car uses a quart of oil with five gallons of gas. You can see for yourself that the tires are OK, but you can't determine that the transmission is shot without taking the car apart.

In spite of the money being spent by the car dealers trying to get Congress to vote against the bill, I'm against it anyway. Sometimes the car dealers themselves don't know what's wrong with a car and it would cost them more to find out than the car is worth. The law would make the dealer fill out a checklist of 52 possible defects the car might have.

I'm in favor of that only if everyone else selling us anything has to do the same thing.

the fourth Irish goal of the night.

Logan capped a spectacular weekend three and a half minutes into the final period when he took a perfect pass from Bellomy on the left wing and left Elliot shaking his head once again. It was the fourth goal of the series for the senior from Grosse Pointe Shores, Mich., and it was especially satisfying in light of his self-termed disappointing season.

"I made a decision to play as if the playoffs were a new season, and there was no doubt that I wanted to make up for past problems."

Logan can rectify many problems if he continues to pick up the slack from the loss of a wounded Poulin, and to say that his presence was clearly felt would be an understatement -- just ask Michigan.

The Wolverines made things interesting in the third period when they finally solved Dave Laurion to the tune of three goals, two of which were tallied by Ted Speers. They even erased an Irish score when Adam Parson's goal was disallowed because of an illegal stick at the 10:43 mark, but a two-goal deficit was as close as the Wolverines would get.

Friday's game was a crowd-pleaser in its own way, with the Irish rebounding from a 4-3 third period deficit to score three goals and gain the all-important first game win.

John Schmidt responded to an early Michigan goal at the 11:06 mark when he fired a high shot into the cage for a power-play score after Bellomy won a draw cleanly and dropped to the waiting Irish defenseman.

Logan put Notre Dame in the lead three and a half minutes later when Sean Regan broke the play with a pretty pass from the Irish zone and Logan streaked in on a helpless Elliot. It was an instance of the impressive play displayed by Regan all weekend.

The Irish lead became 3-1 four minutes into the middle period when Mark Doman found the cage on a hard slapshot from directly in front.

The Wolverines knotted the score later in the period when they capitalized on two power-play opportunities that found Perry and Schmidt in the box.

When Kelly McCrimmon's low wrist shot beat Laurion at the 4:17 mark, it looked as if Michigan had finally grabbed hold of control, and the dog-fight down the stretch began.

Rothstein and Logan worked a pretty give-and-go play on an Irish powerplay at the expense of Elliot once again, and Logan picked up his second score of the night.

With the extra skater on the ice after another Michigan penalty, Regan won a scramble in front after a Kirt Bjork shot from the point and put in the fifth Irish goal.

It was the sixth goal, however, that proved to be most important -- and most exciting. It came when Deasey set up fellow freshman Brent Chapman with a nice pass at mid-ice and Chapman raced down the right side on a semi-breakaway. His first shot caught the far post and rebounded at an angle back to him before he flipped it past a stunned Elliot. The three goals came within three minutes of each other, and the explosion gave the Irish the momentum needed to outlast the battling Wolverines.

The series left Notre Dame with a 22-14-2 mark and a date with Bowling Green this Saturday in Motown for the CCHA semi-finals. The survivor will play the winner of the Michigan State-Michigan Tech game for the right to a berth in the NCAA regionals the following week.

Dayton's marksmanship that proved to be the difference. UD was outrebounced, 37-30, but its hot shooting carried the team to victory.

Seniors Mike Kanieski and Kevin Conrad, both playing their final regular-season games at UD Arena, combined for 43 points on a remarkable 20-for-27 from the floor. Junior forward Roosevelt Chapman added 18 points and 12 rebounds.

Conrad, who is about as unselfish a guard as one will ever see, played Paxson evenly, and added nine assists to go along with his 21 points. The 6-10 Kanieski avenged a poor performance in last year's meeting at the ACC (a 70-57 Irish victory) by hitting 11-of-14 from the field, many coming from the perimeter, to finish with a team-high 22 points.

"I don't think there was any pressure on 'Pax,'" said Phelps, "because he won the game here two years ago. He had to work more to get good shots, and he was having a lot of trouble with their hand-checking."

"We were hurt by poor shot selection and turnovers, and we didn't get any offensive rebounding."

In other words, some things never change.

End season

Women suffer fifth straight loss

By MARK HANNUKSELA
Sports Writer

Bring down the curtain boys, the folding act is complete. Notre Dame's women's basketball team completed its second-half slide Saturday by dropping its fifty straight, 68-59 to Michigan State.

The win was the fourth in a row for the Spartans, and it improved their season record to 15-11.

The Irish finish at 16-9, considerably better than the 10-18 mark of a year ago.

"It was a hard way to end the season," Irish Coach Mary DiStanislao said afterwards. "Perhaps our kids can't see the light at the end of the tunnel, yet. If you can, then you just dig harder. But they'll learn."

If and when they do in fact learn, they'll have this season's final three games to help them.

Saturday's was the third straight gam that Notre Dame let slip through its grasp. After trailing by as much as 13 points on two occasions in the first half, the Irish rallied, and eventually came withing a point of the Spartans, 56-55, with just over five minutes left.

The Spartans weathered the storm, however, and went on to score 12 of the game's last 16 points to come away with the win.

"The difference in the game was our inability to stop their running game," DiStanislao said. "The biggest atrocity in the game was our poor shot selection on offense. That led to long, uncontested rebounds, and they were able to use them to get the transition game going."

That transition game hurt the Irish more in the last five inutes than it did at any other time in the game—which was exactly the case in earlier Irish losses to Nebraska and DePaul. Twice in the last minute of the game, the Spartans got free on breaks, and scored three points in the process.

Michigan State led 65-59 when Deb Traxinger converted a Brenda Jezowski steal into a uncontested layup. Jezowski herself then got loose on a break, and covered one of two free throws after being fouled by Laura Dougherty.

Those points hurt, but turnovers and poor shooting hurt worse.

Notre Dame had one of its poorer performances from the floor, connecting on only 37 percent of its shots. The Irish were a dismal 9-of-27 in the first half, as the Spartans built a 36-27 halftime lead.

Michigan State's 40 percent average from the floor was right n it's seasonal average.

Despite its run and gun style Michigan State committed only 11 turnovers in the contest, while the Irish had 23.

The Spartans built up a big first-half edge in rebounding, but finished just five ahead of the Irish (40-35).

Freshman Mary Beth Schueth lead Notre Dame in scoring, pumping in a career-high 29 points of 11-of-18 shooting from the field, and 7-of-9 from the free throw line, a spot Schueth has had a great deal of trouble with this season.

Schueth also led the Irish with 11 rebounds while playing the entire 40 minutes, prompting DiStanislao to rhetorically ask afterwards "What more can you ask of a kid?"

"mary Beth just played a great game," she added, "and she's only going to get better."

Carrie Bates and Shari Matvey each added 11 points for the Irish, but didn't do it together. Marvey scored all of her points in the first half, while Bates got all of her's in the second.

Jezowski led the Spartans with 21 points, 10 over her season average. Karen Wells came off the bench to add 13, almost triple her season average.

Wells hit four of her first five shots after entering the game midway through the first half.

Lil Preston, MSU's leading scorer throughout the season, was held to just 10 points, and 2-of-13 shooting from the floor. She did have nine rebounds to lead the Spartans.

Irish captain Missy Conboy started in her fnal appearance in an Irish uniform. conboy grabbed a rebound and handed out four assists in her 14-minute stint.

"Missy played great," aid DiStanislao. "I hipe the kids lean something from watching how hard Missy works. These last two years, she realized what her effort mean to the team ,and she didn't give up."

"fter doing something for four years, it's tough to realize that you're doing it for the last time," Conboy said. "Never again do I think I'll be a dedicated to something as I was to basketball. It's a disappointment to go out that way, and sometimes I feel sorry but it really couldn't have been any other way."

"i don't have any regrets," she added. "I enjoyed the four years, and I want all the people wo came to our games and followed the team to know that I and everybody else really appreciated it."

Distanislaio echoed those sentiments in her fnal press conference, speaking for assistants pat Knapp and Mary Murphy in saying "We really want to thank the fans and the Varsity Crowd for their support. They were a grea help to us all year, and we remember that. If they continue to stay with us, we will begin to reward them for their efforts."

Icers sweep Michigan, go to CCHA semis

By MICHAEL OLENIK
Sports Writer

With chants of "DEE-troit, DEE-troit" echoing through the North Dome of the ACC, the Notre Dame hockey team wrapped up a two-game sweep and 11-8 total goal advantage over the Michigan Wolverines to advance to the Joe Louis Arena for the CCHA conference championships next weekend.

The Irish earned their second trip to Detroit this season by beating the Wolverines in almost every aspect of the game in both Friday night's 6-5 win and Saturday's 5-3 triumph. The sweep did nothing but clarify the team's sight on the NCAA championship to be decided three weeks down the road in Providence, R.I.

To say the least, that road will be especially difficult, but to Irish co-captain and series standout Jeff Logan, this team may be as ready as any team in Notre Dame history to handle such a task.

"We are a very excited team that is pulling together more and more," said Logan. "And that's exactly what it will take to get us a shot at the National Championship."

Although such thoughts could be seen as premature, it would be a mistake to discount the possibility of Notre Dame making a serious run at the title, as the team continues to progress with each passing weekend.

Michigan felt the brunt of the latest improvements throughout the series, and although Friday's game was in serious question until the final horn, the Irish forced the action for the majority of play.

It was Saturday, however, that the Irish showed the character that the coaches and players have spoken of so frequently. Clinging to the previous night's one-goal advantage, the Irish came out on Saturday and put Michigan away the hard way.

Playing with a hobbled Dave Poulin and without an injured Dan Collard, Smith's crew put together a five-goal binge before Michigan scored almost four minutes into the third period. And although the Wolverines scared the Irish with two more tallies in the next six minutes, the outcome of the series seemed to be decided in the first period of play.

It was after Rex Bellomy's goal off of a pretty feed from Jeff Erry at the 16:54 mark that Notre Dame tightened the belts and broke the backs of an increasingly frustrated Michigan club.

With John Deasey in the penalty box for slashing just 16 seconds later, the Wolverines were provided the opportunity to get right back in the game and the series with a two-minute man advantage. Bill Rothstein shattered those hopes, however, when he picked up a loose puck on the side boards and put a hard shot between Elliot's pads for a key short-handed goal.

That wasn't enough for Logan, though, as he stole the puck behind the Michigan net and skated in front before beating Elliott with a high wrist shot that set the 2,806 vocal Irish supporters into delirium. The play came only one minute after Rothstein's score, and it was the second short-handed goal during Deasey's penance.

The second stanza featured a series of penalties that amounted to little, and it wasn't until the 18:17 mark that Joe Bowie made a big play by stealing a Michigan outlet pass at the blue line and blasting a shot over Elliott's left shoulder for Paxson, Irish top Wolverines . . .

By SKIP DESJARDIN
Sports Editor

PONTIAC, Mich. — "Anybody who thinks John Paxson has to score 30 points in order for this team to win is dead wrong," Digger Phelps said in November. But yesterday he learned it sure doesn't hurt.

Paxson played the finest game of his career, scoring the magic 30 points while leading Notre Dame to a stirring 53-52 win over Michigan in the season finale for both teams.

"You saw today why Pax will be a first-team All-American next year," Phelps told reporters. "By the end of next season, he'll be as good as any player we've had at Notre Dame."

The high praise came after Paxson turned in a performance that could only have been better had it come Saturday before his hometown fans.

The numbers speak for themselves. Besides the 30 points, on 12-for-17 shooting from the floor and six-for-seven from the line, Paxson pulled down six rebounds, dished out three assists, blocked one shot and had two steals. His only foul came with one second on the clock and forced the Wolverines to try a desperation play as the buzzer sounded.

"Paxson was tremendous," said Michigan Coach Bill Frieder. "He made a phenomenal shot when we went ahead in the last seconds."

"We played a good man-to-man against him, and we used three different guys to guard him. To tell you the truth, he gets open even easier against the zone."

The game marked the end of Mike Mitchell's career at Notre Dame. The man Phelps has called the most courageous player he's ever coached scored just four points, but typically came up with four assists.

"It's been an interesting year," said Phelps. "I like the way we didn't let down after losing to Dayton. That's the way these guys have been all year. They've handled difficult season with a lot of class."

The Irish finish 10-17, but had to struggle for the last win. They played in spurts in the second half, shutting out the Wolverines 10-0 through one stretch, but being outscored 8-2 as time slipped away in the final three and a half minutes.

As they had so many times over the course of the season, missed free throws nearly cost Notre Dame the game. Barry Spencer, Tim Andree and Bill Varner all went to the line and missed the front ends of one-and-one opportunities in the last 1:20.

"The local kids were excited to be here, so they missed their shots," Phelps joked. "I told Barry he could be the star and he missed. I didn't say anything to Andree. He missed too, which tells you something about coaching strategy."

Notre Dame had a five-point lead with 2:48 to go when the Wolverines made their final run. Michigan captain Thad Garner hit a free throw, then took a beautiful lead pass off a Michigan trap against Paxson and went in for a dunk. Andree was called for travelling and a blocking foul, and Mitchell threw the ball away, but the Wolverines could manage only a single point.

"We got absolutely no breaks," said Frieder, whose club finished the season 7-20. "We had a chance for three three-point plays and got only one point out of it all."

Paxson's baseline jumper with 21 seconds left wrapped it up, as the Irish wisely used their remaining common fouls to eat up the clock.

"We had our chances and we let it get away," said Frieder. "It's about as simple as that."

IRISH ITEMS—A surprising crowd of 14,445 packed the Silverdome's lower concourse for the game. A problem with the clock in the final 11 seconds caused heated discussion from both sides. "That's what happens when you get a veteran coach against a rookie," said Frieder, who lost both arguments. Notre Dame was plagued by 21 turnovers.

Wolverines shot just 38 percent from the floor in the second half and went 6-12 without a point in one stretch. Severe bronchitis prevented Marc Kelly from making the final career. Former Irish stars Kelly Tripucka and Bill Laimbeer, both with the NBA's Detroit Pistons now, were at courtside.

. . . after loss to Flyers, 79-72

DAYTON, Ohio — On Friday night here at UD Arena, Archbishop Alter High School of nearby Kettering, the No. 1 team in the state, was eliminated from the state championship playoffs.

Perhaps it was an omen. The next afternoon, former Alter standout and now Notre Dame All-American John Paxson had just about as much success in his homecoming. A unique defensive arrangement by Dayton held Paxson in check for over half the game, which was more than enough time to allow the Flyers to breeze to a 79-72 victory over the Irish before a sellout crowd of 13,455 at UD Arena. Both the final margin of victory and Paxson's total of 23 points were, to say the least, deceiving.

"Dayton's a very good team," said Irish guard Digger Phelps, whose team dropped to 9-17 with the Michigan contest still to play (see related story page 8). "I like their outside shooting. I can't see why they won't get an NCAA bid, because they deserve one." All season long, Dayton has lived and died by its outside shooting. On Saturday, the Flyers couldn't miss, hitting 68 percent from the floor in streaking to a 40-24 halftime advantage.

In the second half, Dayton extended its lead to as much as 22 points (62-40) before ND came back against the UD second-stringers to make the final score look respectable. For the game, Dayton (19-8 on the season) hit on 61 percent of its field goal attempts.

"They were very hot from the outside," said Phelps, "and we couldn't crack their outside shooting. Once you get in one of those grooves, you can't do anything wrong."

Paxson was given a standing ovation when he was introduced, and from the outset was looking to make good for the home folks. But Paxson, who has seen just about every conceivable defense thrown at him this year — box-and-one, 1-3-1, a "chaser," and even a blatant double-team at Indiana — couldn't solve UD Coach Don Doncher's attempt to control him, at least not until it was too late. "A 'chaser' always bothers me," said Paxson. "But I'm not even sure what their defense was today. (Paul) Hawkins would be with me (as the 'chaser'), but then he would drop off into a zone when I'd come off a screen. We haven't seen anything like it this year."

Irish guard Mike Mitchell, who finished with 12 points, had a better view, but was equally confused. "I think what they did," said the Irish captain, "was switch into a man-to-man, and then a box-and-one, and then back. It really threw us off."

Before Paxson finally got his game going — scoring 12 of his points in the last 7:30 of the contest — Notre Dame kept within shooting distance only because of a solid effort by forward Bill Varner. The 6-7 junior had his best game of the season, pumping in 16 points and grabbing a game-high 14 rebounds. Center Tim Andree chipped in 12 points on 6-for-8 shooting to aid the cause.

But, eventually, it was
