Cluster bomb Marine dies in Lebanon explosion

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An unexploded part of a cluster bomb blew up at Beirut airport yesterday, killing one U.S. Marine and wounding three others who tripped on it, U.S. military spokesmen said.

The casualties were reported after several hundred Marines waded ashore to help guard the field just reopened by President Amin Gemayel.

One of the survivors was in serious condition with groin injuries and the other two were slightly wounded, the spokesmen said.

The casualties were the first suffered by the Marines since they were deployed in Beirut this summer to help oversee the evacuation of Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas from the Israeli-ringed city. The Marines returned Wednesday on their second peacekeeping mission.

President Reagan reacted with "shock and sorrow," but said the casualties would have no effect on the U.S. commitment to remain in Lebanon until Israeli and Syrian troops are out and the government is in control, White House Deputy Press Secretary Larry Speakes said in Washington.

Gemayel officially opened the airport after a nearly four-month shutdown following a ceremony before U.S., Italian and French peacekeeping forces in which he proclaimed Lebanon's capital a "unified city," free of Israeli troops in both the Moslem western sector and the Christian east.

A red and white Middle East Airlines jet, with Lebanon's flag flying from the cockpit window, landed at the airport to the applause and cheers of about 300 bystanders, who tearfully embraced relatives setting foot on their native soil for the first time since Israel invaded June 6.

Hours after the jet touched down, an explosion rocked the southwest end of the runway nearest the Mediterranean. The blast occurred at about 4:45 p.m. (10:45 a.m. EDT).

Marine Lt. Gregory van Houten said the explosion occurred when the men tripped on part or parts of a cluster bomb, an anti-personnel weapon. He said each part thrown out by the cluster bomb is "pressure sensitive. If you jar it, or hit it, or in any way disturb it, it will explode."

Cluster bombs supplied to Israel by the Reagan administration were dropped on west Beirut by Israeli jets this summer, causing a public uproar in the United States, which then temporarily suspended shipment of the bombs to Israel.

Army Lt. Col. Lee Delorme, a Pentagon spokesman in Beirut, said in a written statement that one Marine was killed and three were injured, one seriously, "when some unexploded ordnance was accidentally detonated ... The incident was not the result of hostile action."

Cyanide poisoning

Tainted Tylenol kills three

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, Ill. (AP) — Three people in two Chicago suburbs died of cyanide poisoning after swallowing tainted capsules of Extra-Strength Tylenol, and a search began yesterday for the source and extent of the contamination. Nearly 4.7 million pills were promptly recalled by the manufacturer.

A fourth person was hospitalized in extremely critical condition, apparently after taking one of the capsules.

Robert Kniffen, a spokesman for McNeil Consumer Products Co., the manufacturer of Tylenol, said the company had been notified that two bottles of Extra-Strength Tylenol Capsules "have been tampered with and cyanide poison added to some of the capsules."

In a statement, Kniffen said no product from lot MC2880 should be bought or consumed until further notice, adding that the company has no evidence any other product was contaminated.

He said the recalled lot contained 93,400 bottles of 50 capsules each and that they had been distributed east of the Mississippi as well as in North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska and in part of Wyoming. The expiration date was April 1987.

Two large drug chains, Jewel Food-Osco Drugs and Walgreens, announced an immediate halt in sales of the product in their Midwest stores. State officials said they would decide later in the day whether to order Extra-Strength Tylenol off store shelves.

Food and Drug Administration spokeswoman Faye Peterson said in Washington that investigators had been sent to the Pennsylvania plant where Tylenol is made. "We are still gathering information," she said.

Dr. Edmund R. Donoghue, deputy assistant medical examiner of Cook County, said two brothers in Arlington Heights and a 12-year-old girl in neighboring Elk Grove Village died within 11 hours of each other Wednesday from cardio-pulmonary collapse after taking Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules. He said an investigation "definitely confirmed the presence of cyanide" in the over-the-counter pain reliever.

Donoghue identified the tainted Tylenol as lot number MC2880 in 50-capsule containers, and added, "We don't know the extent of the contamination, but we don't think anybody should be taking Extra-Strength (Tylenol) at all."

The two brothers died at 3:15 p.m. and 8:15 p.m. (CDT) Wednesday as a result of cyanide poisoning. The child died at approximately 10 a.m. Wednesday. The neighboring suburbs where they lived are both about 25 miles northwest of downtown Chicago.

"There is no relation between the households and that's why we find this so disturbing," Donoghue said. He added, "It would be foolish to assume that the bottles were tampered with in the home."

"It is impossible to tell when the tampering occurred," said Dr. Michael Schaffer, chief toxicologist with the medical examiner's office. "We tested three capsules from each container of 50 and one of the three from each contained cyanide."

Arlington Heights Police Chief Rodney L. Kath said his department's investigation was pointing toward contamination of individual bottles of Tylenol rather than whole batches. He refused to elaborate.

Kath recruited village firefighters to join his officers in contacting merchants selling Tylenol. He said the officers were waiting at stores when they opened yesterday morning and that merchants were told to take Extra-Strength Tylenol off their shelves.

The investigation began Wednesday following the death of 12-year-old Mary Kellerman, who had been taking Extra-Strength Tylenol because of a cold. She was found unconscious in her home and died after being taken by paramedics to Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village.

"All we know is that she had a cold and a sore throat," said Shirley Garrison, a spokeswoman for the hospital.

The brothers were identified by a spokeswoman at Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights as Adam Janus, 27, and Stanley Janus, 25.

Roy Dames, a spokesman for the Cook County coroner's office, said autopsies would be performed. The presence of cyanide was determined through blood tests.

Seven other members of the Janus family were rushed to the hospital, but six were being kept "for observation" and apparently were not poisoned, hospital officials said.

Stopgap spending bill passed before deadline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opting instead for an evening of political partying, Congress abandoned its race against the clock yesterday to keep the government from going broke upon the midnight start of the new fiscal year.

But negotiators for the House and Senate reached agreement on a compromise spending measure they said would win swift approval today, and a Reagan administration spokesman said there probably would be no interruption of regular government operations.

Although agreement on the compromise bill came several hours before the midnight deadline, congressional leaders decided against a late-night session to pass the measure on an evening when major social events were scheduled for both Democrats and Republicans.

The Democratic Party had a $1,000-per-person fundraising dinner that many members of Congress were expected to attend. And President Reagan invited the entire Congress to a barbecue at the White House in what amounted to a counter-event dominated by Republicans.

The stopgap spending plan will keep the entire government in business until Dec. 17, thereby assuring a post-election session of Congress in which lawmakers will debate the regular money bills that have not yet

Student burned in London accident

By TIM VERCELLOTTI

A student in Notre Dame's Arts and Letters London Program is presently hospitalized for burns suffered in an accident that occurred earlier this week, according to a university official.

Isabel Charles, assistant provost and director of Notre Dame's foreign study programs, said last night that Lynn Malooly, a junior from Chicago, Ill., received burns early Tuesday morning when her nightgown caught fire from a gas heater in her room at the Hotel Vienna, the student residence in London.

Malooly is now in the burn unit in Mt. Vernon Hospital, in Northwood Middlesex, an area northwest of London, Charles said.

Sister Jane Pitz, the rector in the women's building at the hotel complex, was next door at the time of the accident and heard Malooly's cries. "She came in and wrapped Lynn in bedclothes. The fire was put out very quickly," Charles said.

Pitz and Prof. Richard Foley, director of the London program, took Malooly to a London hospital. She was later transferred to the burn unit at Mt. Vernon, Charles explained.

"She has been in excellent care there," Charles said.

Though the extent of Malooly's injuries is as yet undetermined, "she has passed through the 48-hour critical period very well," Charles noted.

According to Charles, Malooly has spoken to her parents by telephone, and her parents plan to fly to London this weekend to be with her.

Charles said that it is too early to tell whether Malooly will return to her studies in London. "There has been no decision by the doctors as to the time of recuperation," she explained.

The assistant provost praised Pitz's quick action in putting out the fire. "It was extraordinarily good that Sister Jane was so close. She performed her duties very well," Charles said.

The condition of Kerin Mannion has improved to fair, according to a St. Joseph Medical Center spokeswoman. Mannion was removed from the intensive care unit of the hospital yesterday after his condition had improved from serious. Another student, Elizabeth McInerney, remains in serious condition in Memorial Hospital. McInerney was removed from the intensive care unit yesterday a hospital spokeswoman said. Both students were hospitalized Sunday morning after being hit by a car in the 1400 block of South Bend Avenue. The Observer

Jewelry once owned by convicted pornographer Mike Thevis will be sold to help pay $16 million in back taxes, the Internal Revenue Service says. Les Whitmer, IRS regional spokesman in Atlanta, said the rings, necklaces and wristwatches will be sold at auction Oct. 13 in New York City to help pay taxes owed by Thevis, his former wife, Joan, and a Thevis company. The jewelry's appraised value is $179,000. The jewelry, originally a gift from Thevis to his former wife, was returned to him six years ago for legal fees. The IRS seized the jewelry when Thevis was captured in 1978 after escaping from prison. Thevis is imprisoned on racketeering and murder conspiracy convictions. — AP

American Motors Corporation will close an assembly line at its Toledo, Ohio, Jeep assembly plant next week, temporarily idling 1,000 of 4,000 hourly workers there, a company spokesman said yesterday in Detroit. Lloyd Northard said the one-week shutdown of one assembly line will help the No. 5 U.S. automaker adjust inventories of its CJ Jeep line. AMC sales of Jeeps in the United States so far this year through August total 42,109, down 1.6 percent from 42,794 the year earlier. Some 1,350 hourly workers at the Toledo plant already are on indefinite layoff, Northard said. — AP

The arrest of a man who allegedly used Doberman pinschers to burglarize houses in Mineola, New York, has closed the books on more than 80 crimes, police said yesterday. Daniel Sardagna, 27, of Massapequa, was arrested Wednesday. He faces two charges in two house burglaries on Long Island, but officials say the arrest has closed more than 80 similar burglaries. Police said Sardagna would break into a house with two dogs and send one to determine whether it was safe for him to proceed. He would then station the dogs outside so they would bark if anyone approached, officers said. — AP

Five people, including a former Bolivian consul, have been charged with smuggling $7 million worth of cocaine in what police said yesterday was an international operation headed by a Bolivian army colonel. Detective Paulo Gustavo Magalhaes Pinto said police armed with machine guns burst into a farmhouse in Sao Paulo, Brazil and made the arrests Tuesday. The smugglers had rented a remote landing strip from a farmer, who tipped police, and had just unloaded 220 pounds of cocaine from a small airplane, Magalhaes said. Magalhaes identified the gang leader as Ruben Julio Saucedo, 33, who was a consul in Brazil and whose father, Ruben Julio Castro, had been president of the Senate in La Paz, Bolivia. The others arrested were identified as Alcides Arzadum Suarez, 51, and Carlos Alberto Roca Franco, 31, both from Bolivia; and Francisco de Souza Farias, 39, and Carlos Antonio Marques, 28, both from Brazil. The name of the Bolivian colonel allegedly heading the international operation was not given. — AP

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher will visit the Falkland Islands in February to celebrate 150 years of British rule of the South Atlantic islands, press reports said yesterday. Thatcher's office said only that she "hopes" to go. It would be her first trip to the Falklands, which Britain and Argentina waged war over this spring. The Foreign Office said Minister of State Cranley Onslow, a deputy to Foreign Secretary Francis Pym, will leave for the Falkland Islands this weekend on a fact-finding tour. — AP

Actress Brooke Shields says her work for the American Lung Association's anti-smoking campaign is personal, not professional. "I am participating as myself. But when I'm playing a part in a movie, it's my profession. They are totally two different areas," she said Wednesday night at a gathering sponsored by the lung association of Connecticut. Shields, 17, who wore cigarettes in her ears for one anti-smoking poster, said two of her grandparents died of smoking. She said she has received fan mail from teenagers saying they have quit smoking because of the ad campaign in which she took part, adding, "It's all been very positive." After her appearance, Shields and her mother, Teri, climbed into a van for the three-hour trip to their New Jersey home. "She has school tomorrow," her mother said. — AP

Daydream Believers

He was an old man, and he'd been drinking too long. Not that he was obnoxious; on the contrary, he was quite well-behaved, especially in comparison to the rest of the clientele at Senior Bar.

Still, his comments had acquired that syrupy, nostalgic tone that alcohol seems to induce in the reminiscences of old men.

On this Friday night, the eve of the reunion ceremony honoring the 1977 National Championship football team, such sentimentality was, I suppose, excusable — even if fluid-based.

Besides, the old man was generous enough to grab two cups from my hand as I struggled through the line to the taps, and to buy a round for me and a friend (a member of the championship team, no less).

Appreciative of the kindness, I handed my friend his brew and paused to share tales of the glory of Notre Dame with the old gent. He was perched at the end of the bar with an apparently long-time friend also under the mellowing influence of barley and hops, recalling a never-quite-real Irish past.

He spoke in glowing phrases of the legends he had followed since 1928. He recalled the magical days when, as an impressionable teenager, he had first been drawn by the heroes of gridiron past.

Now, as a 65-year-old subway alum, he had made the trek to South Bend to catch a glimpse of future heroes.

He had taken his friend to the Grotto to give the friend a feel for that "other-worldness" of Notre Dame that transcends the football field. As luck or the brothers Grimm might have it, Coach Gerry Faust was there, taking time out from his pressure-packed day to meet quietly with his Maker.

And so the legends grow.

The old man might have been my father, with his lack of "higher" education and his "this-one's-on-me" state of inebriation — and his simple belief in a dream-perfect University located in South Bend. It's funny how the faults and delusions of fatherly men can become lovable to a son.

I could not bring myself to point out flaws in the old man's perception of this place. I was in the midst of too many heroes: members of that championship team were everywhere; two of them were even staying at my apartment. They were all walking around, bigger than life, telling how their hearts skipped a beat as they drove by the Dome as they arrived for this special weekend.

While I stood in the midst of heroes pondering my inability to believe in the splendor of the old man's image of my second home, our conversation was interrupted by a recent graduate.

He was a young man, and he'd been drinking too long. And he was obnoxious. His comments had that animalistic stupidity that alcohol seems to induce in the offerings of young men.

Such behavior, even though fluid-based, was inexcusable.

Inside Friday

He announced himself with drunken pride as a member of the class of '82, and introduced the young woman at his side as a student at Saint Mary's.

He quickly misinterpreted the old man as saying he was a member of the class of '28, and began shouting something to his drunken friends about "this guy played for us in 1928."

And, for every memory the old man made into words, the young man had an under-the-breath comment for the smiling woman at his arm.

For the most part, the old man was too lost in his misty, marvelous recollections of an impossible place to catch most of the young man's disrespect.

But I caught every intimation of arrogance issuing from this brash simpleton who received his degree from my alma mater. I found myself wanting to grab the young man and prop him up in front of the old man, in order that I might say to the old man: "This is the part of your view of Notre Dame that is missing! This happens every weekend, to far too many of us."

I wanted to take the young fool to the Dome, in order that I might shout from that Olympus: "This man is not a member of the minority at Notre Dame. He is not one of the few bad eggs; he is one of the many drunken, arrogant children who destroy dormitory property and Northeast Neighborhood lawns every weekend."

I wanted to take the young man and the old man and put them in a room together and make them talk to each other. I wanted the young man to absorb some of the old man's love for the University.

And I wished the young man's condition would impress upon the old man that some of the Dome's glitter is just artificial light.

As I was trying to arrive at a synthesis of the true nature of my alma mater, the old man mentioned that he did not yet have tickets for the game.

I told him my friend, one of those championship players, had a pair of tickets he didn't need. My friend sold the old fellow the tickets at face value.

And so legends grow.

I left Senior Bar that night wondering why I ever wanted to change the ways of daydream believers, and thinking of two drunken men — one a Domer without the piece of paper to prove it, and the other a disgrace to his sheepskin.

Back home, I slept comfortably, without dreams.

Academics, tickets New transfers adapt easily

By MIKE LEPRE
Staff Reporter

Transfer students at Notre Dame are adapting to life at the University more easily in 1982 than in past years.

"In the past, transfers have been treated as second-class students, but lately things are beginning to change for the better," remarked Annie Bodoh, director of transfer student operation.

Bodoh, herself a transfer student as a sophomore, admits that in some cases being a transfer has its shortcomings. One example of this is in housing.

Current University policy on housing, as stated in this year's DuLac, states, "Transfer students are asked to live off-campus unless special permission is provided to live on campus by the Director of Housing." As a result, transfers are required to seek their own housing until an on-campus room becomes available.

While Bodoh feels that "this problem is certainly understandable," she also thinks that as a result of the housing dilemma, many transfers "miss out on the community aspect of living in a dorm, an aspect which is so vital at Notre Dame."

Another issue raised by Bodoh concerns distribution of football tickets to transfers. Bodoh cites that in the past most transfers went the entire season without tickets, but current policy allows transfers to obtain tickets with relative ease.

Another flaw in the transfer system results in what Bodoh calls "the anxiety of waiting. Most students do not learn of their acceptance as transfers until very late in June," said Bodoh. "This obviously creates problems with other colleges that the applicant might be considering as well."

Bodoh agrees that "the University is making a diligent attempt to let the transfer know their decision as soon as possible," and believes that the slow transfer of transcripts between schools contributes to this delay.

These drawbacks are slowly being alleviated, but the academic struggle of transfers still remains.

Admission to the University as a transfer is a very selective process. Students must apply for transfer to the particular college which contains their major. The final decision on the applicant is then made by the dean of that college.

Requirements for acceptance include 27 to 30 transferable credits from an accredited college or "B" academic average. The number of students then accepted depends entirely on the number of spaces available in that college.

In the fall semester of this year 286 students were chosen from a field of 692 applicants. According to admissions office figures, the average GPA of this year's class was 3.4.

Admissions counselor Liz Weber readily admits that "although these students come here with relatively high academic averages, in general, they do have a little struggle in this area at first. However, these problems are very comparable to those of a freshman, who must learn to adapt to a new academic system."

Concurring with this opinion, Cathy Hogan, a sophomore transfer stated, "At Notre Dame there is a huge difference in the intellectual level as compared to my first school. As a result of this," she continued, "the competition here is much greater."

"All things considered, I don't really feel like I'm new here," stated Hogan, who also said that even after being here for only a short period of time, she feels "just like any other sophomore."

In the same way that Notre Dame has much to offer the transfer, a transfer has something to offer to the university as well. "Very often transfers can give the university some unique viewpoints," said Bodoh. "After all, they have the advantage of being able to evaluate this University in light of their experiences at another college."

SMC clubs receive allocated monies

By MARY ANN POTTER
News Staff

A total of $4400 will be allocated to the 20 Saint Mary's clubs that took part in Saint Mary's Allocation Night last night.

The money, which comes from student government funds, is granted to the clubs by the allocation committee. A representative from each club met with the committee during Allocation Night to discuss the financial needs of their club.

The allocation committee bases their decision on such things as the purpose of the club, the population of students they work with, individual student government goals, and the funds that the clubs have been allocated in previous years.

As in the past, each club had to fill out an allocation form in order to participate in Allocation Night. This included, among other things, the club's constitution, past financial statements, and projected budget.

In addition to the allocation form, the club had to fill out a registration form, a new procedure this year. The registration form is used to keep current of the club.

The number of organizations that applied for student government funds this year was about the same as past years. "We lost a couple from last year, but we did pick up four new clubs," commented Micheline Santello, student government treasurer.

Each club or organization that participated in Allocation Night will be notified within a week of their exact allocation for the school year. The clubs have the right to appeal the committee's decision to Student Body President Kathleen Murphy within ten days.

U.S. officials said about 300 Marines came ashore in the amphibious landing yesterday, bringing to 1,200 the strength of the U.S. force guarding the airport and surrounding areas.

The Marines waded, rifles held overhead, to the shore from a landing ship. Then 14 amphibious assault vehicles with machine guns snaked their way through the sea about one mile from Sixth Fleet vessels to the shoreline.

The tracked vehicles slammed into the shore, dubbed "Black Beach" by the leathernecks, climbed up to the road and headed to the airport.

Jeeps and trucks also rolled off the landing ship, and two big landing assault recovery craft, also amphibious vehicles, climbed from the sea and headed to the airport, where the Marines are deployed in a five-square-mile area.

The Marines are serving in Beirut with 1,552 French troops and 1,170 Italians whose presence was requested by Gemayel in the wake of the Sept. 14 assassination of his brother, President-elect Bashir Gemayel, and the massacre of hundreds of Palestinians in two refugee camps Sept. 16-18.

Civil defense workers said two more bodies, those of a dismembered woman and her slaughtered unborn child, were recovered from a shallow grave yesterday. The International Red Cross stopped counting at 320 bodies. Since then, civil defense workers have found six, and hospitals have reported receiving 12 dead, for a total of 338. Lebanese officials put the death toll at 597.

The mission of the multinational force is to help Gemayel and the Lebanese army restore government order in a country that has been embroiled in civil conflict and partly controlled by the PLO, Syria and Israel in the past seven years.

The Marines were evacuated by helicopter to the amphibious ship Guam, where one died in surgery, the statement said. It added that one of the survivors was seriously injured in the groin, another was slightly injured in the arm and shoulder, and another in the leg.

Pentagon officials in Washington said the Marines hit were part of a team clearing mines at the airport. He said all were enlisted men.

Campus View Apartments

Roemer issues alcohol plea

By TIM VERCELLOTTI
News Editor

Campus View Apartments student-residents have been asked to be "more prudent and temperate in the use of alcohol" on their premises, in a letter sent by Dean of Students James Roemer earlier this week.

The letter, sent out on Monday, said, "Several serious incidents have arisen from the abuse of alcohol at the Campus View Apartments. Kegging and large parties... drinking and large chugging contests... have attracted the attention and consequently the attendance of many campus residents, most of them underage.

"We appeal to your sense of Christian dignity and decency to be more prudent and temperate in the use of alcohol on your premises."

"There have been a number of serious alcohol abuse cases coming out of Campus View," Roemer said yesterday.

Roemer said he sent 100 copies of the letter to John Wilson, manager of the apartments, who distributed them among the over 300 students living at the complex.

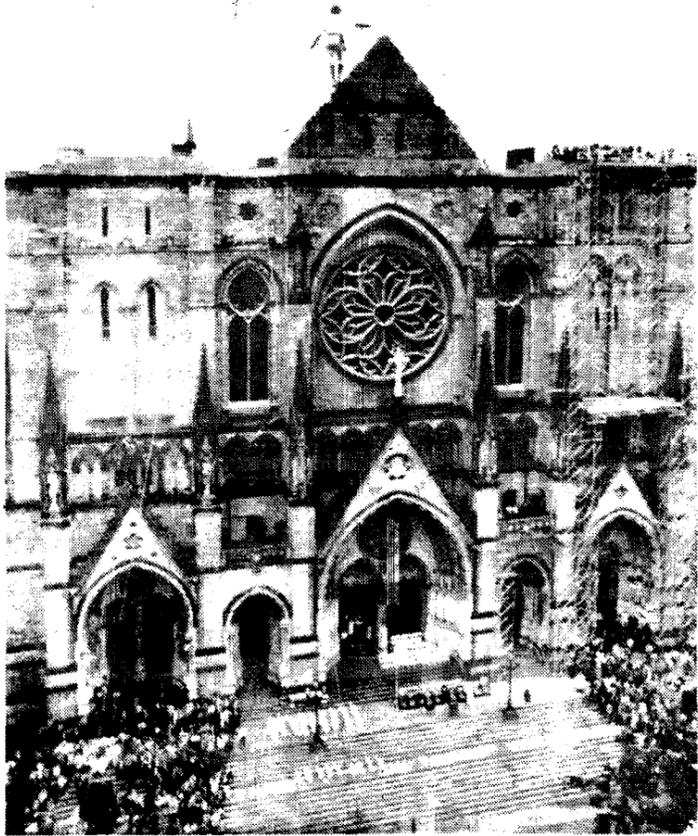

In mid-September two on-campus residents were apprehended by South Bend police after allegedly broke a window at a service station near Campus View. The two students, charged with criminal mischief and public intoxication, reportedly were coming from a party at Campus View at the time of the incident. "You can have your life altered drastically as a result of this behavior," Roemer said in reference to alcohol abuse.

In the letter, Roemer suggested that students observe the following guidelines:

- Limit the size of parties to a reasonable number;

- Serve plenty of food, such as chips, pretzels, dips and vegetables;
- Have soft drinks available for those who prefer such;
- Conclude parties at reasonable hours so that people do not drink to excess; and
- Avoid the large kegger party, which can easily result in someone drinking excessively.

Shultz asks support for Reagan Mideast plan

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz called on Israel and Arab nations yesterday to accept President Reagan's proposal to join in peace negotiations and end the Middle East conflict that is "a searing wound on our consciousness."

He also told the General Assembly the Palestinian people have an "undeniable" claim to a homeland, "a place with which they can truly identify."

Shultz did not directly criticize Israel, which rejected the Reagan initiative. But he said there can be no peace for Israel until the "legitimate rights" of the Palestinians are met.

"Of the nations in the world which need and deserve peace, Israel surely holds a pre-eminent place," Shultz said. "Of the peoples of the world who need and deserve a place with which they can truly identify, the Palestinian claim is undeniable."

The secretary said there is "no contradiction between permanent peace for Israel and the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people. Neither can be achieved without the other."

Shultz devoted a major part of his first speech to the General Assembly to the Middle East crisis. He spoke after Israel's foreign minister, Yitzhak Shamir, voiced new criticism of the Reagan plan.

Shultz interrupted his prepared remarks to announce to the world body that he had just learned a U.S. Marine had been killed, and several others injured, in Beirut earlier in the day.

He said U.S. troops "are there to speed the moment when all foreign forces depart from Lebanon." He called for an early agreement on a timetable for a withdrawal of foreign troops and the restoration of Lebanon's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity.

Shultz wants to meet in the day with the foreign ministers of Egypt, Jordan and Syria to push Reagan's peace initiative.

In his address, Shultz criticized Soviet behavior in Afghanistan and Poland but said the Soviets have joined the United States "in a serious, businesslike effort at arms control" in talks in Geneva, Switzerland.

He said it is "a global imperative to halt, and reverse, the global arms buildup," and he asserted that the United States is doing its part.

"I can report that we are fulfilling our responsibility to seek to limit and reduce conventional and nuclear arms to the lowest possible levels," he said.

Tougher laws proposed Drunk driving bill nears passage

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate yesterday neared final passage of a bill designed to prompt states to toughen their laws against drunken driving, the leading cause of highway deaths.

The legislation, passed Wednesday by the House on a voice vote, offered $125 million over the next three years to states that adopt strict laws against drunken drivers.

The Senate was expected to adopt the House measure in order to get the bill to the White House for President Reagan's signature before Congress recesses today.

Earlier this year, the Senate passed similar drunken driving legislation, but the measure did not incorporate all the details of the House version.

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., the chief sponsor of the Senate bill, predicted the Senate would adopt the more comprehensive House measure in order to speed the legislation along to the president.

Pell and the House sponsors, Reps. James J. Howard, D-N.J., and Michael D. Barnes, D-Md., argue the legislation is needed because drunken driving is responsible for nearly half the 50,000 highway deaths each year, as well as 125,000 permanent injuries.

Both the president and the independent National Transportation Safety Board have expressed support for the fight against drunken drivers.

"Americans are outraged that such slaughter can take place on our highways," Reagan said last spring when he created a commission to study the issue. "The mood of the nation is ripe to make headway to solving the problem."

Under the legislation, the states would be eligible for highway safety grants if they satisfy four basic criteria.

The states must approve an automatic 90-day license suspension for a first offense and a one-year license suspension for any repeat offense; a mandatory 48-hour jail sentence or 10 days of community service for a second offense within a five-year period; the establishment of 0.10 percent blood alcohol content (BAC) level as "per se" evidence of intoxication; and increased enforcement of the state's drunken driving laws.

A house aide said only Iowa and West Virginia now are eligible for the grants since they meet the criteria, but Delaware is very close to that point.

Eight others — Alaska, Arizona, Florida, Illinois, Maine, Minnesota,

Utah and Washington — also are nearing eligibility, the aide said.

The bill also authorizes $2 million to put the National Driver Registry in computers so states can determine whether an applicant's license has been revoked elsewhere. This would prevent anyone who lost a license on drunk driving charges in one state from obtaining a license in another state.

The legislation does not require the states to cooperate, but provides the financial grants to those that do.

Bikers raise money for cancer research

By BOB JOHNSON
News Staff

Bike riders will be pumping their pedals for cancer research at the Notre Dame Stadium on Saturday, Oct. 2. The "Wheels For Life" bike-athon is being sponsored by the Alpha Phi Omega chapter of Notre Dame.

Riders will start bicycling around the outside of the stadium at 9:00 Saturday morning and continue for three hours. John Clements, president of the fraternity, said that Saturday "promises to be a nice day, so there should be a nice turnout." He expects about 25 riders. The participants will try to complete as many laps as possible since pledges are made per lap.

Money raised by the fraternity is donated to St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, Tenn., for cancer research.

This will be the second year that Alpha Phi Omega has sponsored the bike-athon. Because of scheduling conflicts with other activities, the event was not held last year.

The fraternity sponsors several other events on campus throughout the year, such as Ugly Man On Campus (UMOC) and the blood drive. Alpha Phi Omega is a service fraternity with open membership.

been approved. Only one of 13 regular bills has cleared Congress, and it is still awaiting Reagan's signature.

For domestic programs, the catch-all measure generally is within the budget that Congress set for itself several months ago, meaning many programs will be frozen at roughly the 1982 levels.

The interim measure temporarily prohibits purchase of the first five MX missiles, which the administration wants to buy, and blocks any spending on the second of two new nuclear aircraft carriers Reagan wants to build. Construction of the B-1 bomber may proceed, however.

The interim measure also calls for substantially less in foreign aid than either Reagan or the Republican-controlled Senate voted for, about $9.7 billion. The Senate recommended $11.1 billion, while Reagan asked for $11.6 billion.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., did not mention either social function when he told reporters that negotiators for the two houses estimated that no compromise bill would be ready for floor action until shortly after the midnight deadline.

However, Stanley Janus' wife, Theresa, 19, was reported in extremely critical and unstable condition. She also suffered cardio-pulmonary collapse and was unconscious, said hospital spokeswoman Margaret McDonald.

McDonald said tests determined that she had cyanide in her body.

Adam's wife, Teresa, 28, his two young children and the brothers' parents were among those admitted to the hospital for observation, McDonald said.

Schaffer said the Tylenol capsules found to contain cyanide "were moist on the inside and smelled like almonds... some people would say like an old locker room."

He added that the material inside the capsule was "wet and gray, while normally, Tylenol is granular, dry and white."

Hofman organizes freshman council

By PAT BROWNE and SCOTT WILLIAMS
News Staff

The Freshman Advisory Council (FAC) for 1982-1983 has organized under the auspices of Dr. Emil T. Hofman, dean of the Freshman Year of Studies.

The first meeting of the FAC was held Wednesday night at the University Club. Topics discussed included arrangements for the Parents' Breakfast, a food concession stand at the Arizona game, the next Freshman's Other Choice, and plans for the next meeting.

The Parents' Breakfast will be held at the Stepen Center, the morning of October 9th for all freshman, parents and families. The FAC will serve on various committees involved in the organization, service, set-up and clean-up of the breakfast.

A freshman food concession stand is planned for the Arizona game. This stand will raise money for the freshman class treasury.

At the next Freshman's Other Choice dance, to be held November 5th, six of the freshman dormitories will prepare acts to be performed prior to polka dancing. Instruction in the polka will be provided.

Each hall president chose one freshman from his/her dorm to represent the freshmen of the hall. The freshmen were chosen on the basis of leadership and service potential to their class. Each hall is represented in the council and can be contacted through the hall presidents.

The next meeting of the FAC will be held at Keenan Hall on Wednesday at 9:30 p.m.

Economic indicators show some decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Flying in the face of President Reagan's predictions of recovery, the government's main economic forecasting gauge has nosed down for the first time since March and a record number of Americans have lined up for unemployment benefits, officials said yesterday.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige insisted the economy was still heading for an upturn. Some private analysts agreed, though cautioning the improvement would be relatively weak, but the chief economist for the National Association of Manufacturers said the new figures mean "we will not see meaningful recovery until 1983."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., said "the worst may be ahead" and raised the possibility of an economic depression.

In the specific reports, the Commerce Department said its Index of Leading Indicators, designed to show future national economic trends, dropped 0.9 percent in August after rising for four straight months, and the Labor Department said initial claims for state jobless benefits soared to 703,000 in the week ended Sept. 18, the highest recorded since he department began its current form of tabulation in 1967.

Another Commerce measure of current economic conditions continued to decline in August, hitting its low point of the recession and thereby signaling strongly that the downturn was not over.

Also, Commerce and the Department of Housing and Urban Development reported that sales of new single-family houses rose a slight 2 percent in August but remained 1.4 percent below the level for the same month one year earlier.

Reagan had said in advance that the expected decline in the leading indicators was no more than a "glitch" or "blip" in the overall pattern of recovery.

And Baldrige told reporters that "at this point we are in the interim period between a recession and a recovery. The signs of recovery will be more clear as the fourth quarter unfolds." He also predicted September's leading indicators index would be up, reversing the August decline.

Jerry Jasinowski, senior vice president and chief economist for the association of manufacturers, said "The renewed decline in leading indicators, particularly the decline in building permits, suggests that we will not see meaningful economic recovery until 1983. Although we can expect some pickup in retail sales later this year, this will be largely offset by further declines in construction and heavy industry activity."

But Albert Cox, chairman of Merrill Lynch Economics, said the index "is still signaling recovery" will arrive before long.

Nuclear weapons research at Notre Dame

Questioning the silence . . .

In recent weeks rumors have surfaced regarding a controversial research project undertaken by Associate Professor A. Murty Kanury from the College of Engineering. Several questions have arisen concerning the individual responsibilities of the persons involved as well as the collective responsibilities we share as members of this community. There are no easy answers to these questions. An explication of the facts, however, may render perspicuous an issue thus far beclouded by both bureaucratic doubletalk and anti-nuke sensationalism. An objective account of Kanury's research will allow the reader to consider — and hopefully discuss with others — the possible implications of the project.

Patrick Mulligan

In a document released August 10, 1982 the Department of Information Services describes Kanury's work in the following way:

"A University of Notre Dame engineer is conducting feasibility studies to find out if the test blast of a scale model city built in a western desert is the most effective means of studying how a nuclear explosion would affect a modern city."

The project, underwritten by a $49,730 grant from the Department of Defense entails extensive research into the "unknown effects" which would follow a nuclear exchange.

The document continues:

"We know now that the flow around an isolated, single body is predictable. But what if we have a structure, such as a cylinder, in the wind? And what if a child is standing next to, or in back of it? Will the wind effect be different?"

Ostensibly, the research is intent on "augmenting quantitative knowledge" of urban conditions in the aftermath of a nuclear explosion. Yet the possibility exists that the Department of Defense could use the "reciprocal information" implicit in Kanury's research. Could this study be used to enhance the effectiveness of offensive nuclear warheads? Consider this excerpt from the September 30, 1982 edition of the National Catholic Reporter:

"When asked if the information could also be used to heighten the destructiveness of nuclear weapons, or learn how better to place them within a city for maximum damage, Kanury said, 'When you learn how to duck, you learn how to hit.

'Will they (the Defense Department) use the information my research provides? Yes,' Kanury said, 'but how they will use it - I don't know.'"

Professor Robert Gordon, Vice-President for Advanced Study, deems Kanury "... an expert in fluid dynamics." Gordon's office has final say in accepting or rejecting proposals by faculty to do research at the University. According to Gordon, approval of research projects is contingent upon "... appropriateness intellectually and in terms of values the University stands for."

Is Kanury's project consistent with this definition?

Again the press release from Information Services:

"... in the event of a nuclear explosion,' Kanury assessed, 'We know things would be bad — intuitively, qualitatively and psychologically. But how bad is bad? There is no information, so we need a quantitative measure. We need to know what the proper concerns are.'"

At Notre Dame we are given the impression that "the proper concern" should be the prevention of nuclear war. Fr. Hesburgh underscores this belief: he has just returned from a visit to Rome, where he outlined his proposed scientific symposium on nuclear disarmament at the Vatican. Yet, while Hesburgh organizes conferences to oppose nuclear proliferation, research continues at the University which could possibly lead toward more accurate and efficient nuclear weapons.

Professor Roger Schmitz, Dean of the College of Engineering, claims that Kanury's project deals with "nothing classified ... (it) could be published in any technical journal."

Yet, while Schmitz claims the research is nothing out of the ordinary, a veil of secrecy inconsistent with the University's ideals has been wrapped around Kanury's project.

. . . debating the purpose

In accordance with rising anti-nuclear weapons sentiment in this country, one campus coalition is actively calling to question the research about to be conducted by Dr. A. Murty Kanury concerning effects of a nuclear test blast on a scale model of a modern city.

Gregory Swiercz

After Class

The Coalition For Peace, a group comprised of campus professors, administrators and interested persons, has discussed the possible conflict of interest between the strong Catholic traditions of the University and the emotional incongruity of testing nuclear blast effects here.

The CFP is looking into Kanury's research, questioning what Fr. James Ferguson, coordinator of the coalition, terms the "moral theology" of the plans. At the Sept. 8 CFP meeting, the possibility of the coalition taking some type of action in venting their disapproval of the research came up for discussion. At next Wednesday's meeting, the coalition will decide whether it would be appropriate for the group to send a letter to Fr. Theodore Hesburgh questioning the Department of Defense's funding of the nuclear explosion research, and, if so, what the letter will say.

Since its inception, the CFP has concentrated on making the campus aware of the nuclear weapons question. Ground Zero Week last semester and the mass demonstrations across the country this summer have fueled the anti-nuke movement in such a way that the issue is gaining serious support from several corners.

Ferguson himself is not new to the nuclear movement. While working on his master's degree in Washington, D.C., last year, he witnessed growing public sentiment in conversational circles. Politicians soon followed suit, speaking of the logistics in "winning a nuclear exchange," the evacuation plans, and the campaign-safe statements which reinforced the nuclear "shroud of uncertainty."

"What was a plot to scare the Soviets has ended up terrifying us," Ferguson contends.

He sees the public view of the nuclear war situation as parallel to the stages of dying explained in Elizabeth Kubler-Ross' book On Death and Dying.

"The thought of a war (like death) for the past ten years or so has been so frightening, we have refused to think about it," Ferguson said. "The Reagan administration has brought it into consciousness."

But does a coalition have the right to question the scientific research of a professor who has chosen to tackle a controversial issue?

The CFP must grasp the whole spectrum of issues raised by the prospect of nuclear war. It is unclear how the information gained by Kanury's research will be used by the Defense Department. Any speculation that the findings will be used as evidence for ways to increase the immense power of nuclear warheads is only speculation. To persecute a scientist trying to do his work hardly embodies the Christian attitude the Notre Dame community constantly tries to achieve.

Kanury's research will have an effect on the University's reputation — research at the Lobund Laboratory and Fr. Julius Nieuwland's discovery of synthetic rubber serve as examples of work enhancing the University's reputation. While Kanury ultimately is responsible for the information he provides to the Defense Department, he also must be able to justify the repercussions of his work to himself and the University community.

Many groups wrestling with the nuclear arms question demand a simple answer: 'Take away the bombs, and the world will be safe,' or 'limit the number of arms and each side will keep the other in check.' There is no simple answer — only more questions.

Feeling emotionally driven to oppose Kanury's research will not be sufficient reason to actively denounce his work. What the public must accept is the complexity of the problem — the social, medical, psychological and environmental implications of nuclear war. While public outcries play an important role in formulating a world policy in this regard, emotional appeals need to be reinforced with rational arguments.

The Lunacy of It All

Have you ever had the feeling of deja vu? With the professional football players on strike, it all seems like a throwback to the baseball strike of 1981. I guess the great tragedy of history is that it repeats itself. One has to wonder why the complete lunacy of the baseball strike could not have prevented the football players from also taking to the picket lines.

Randy Fahs

Friday Analysis

Personally, I find it absurd that any professional athlete, who is playing a child's game for a large sum of money, could put himself into the category of a laborer. They have even set up their own union to represent themselves in disputes with management. Doesn't the Player's Union seem to be like any other labor union in the United States?

The comparison becomes absurd if you really take a close look at an average worker and a professional athlete. The American worker is forced to play for keeps because his meager salary must provide the essentials for himself and his family; there is usually little left over for a rainy day. The American worker is also faced with the prospects that his job might cease to exist due to production curtailments, plant closings, or the increased use of automation which could make his skills obsolete.

Many workers are forced to take cuts in their pay to help keep faltering companies afloat. Economic conditions in the nation have really taken their toll on the average American worker. Though they may grumble about their jobs, those that have them are thankful because they know how many others are unemployed.

Professional athletes are able to escape most of the economic and employment problems which are faced by the average worker. They are paid quite handsomely. Even the lowest paid athletes make far more than your typical factory worker. One might ask: What about the possibility of being cut by a team or suffering a career-ending injury? I have two replies to this: an athlete who expects his entire life's income to be made in professional sports is not merely a fool, but a freeloader; most athletes were given a free ride through college. If they didn't receive a degree, or if their degree is as useful as a piece of toilet paper, whose fault is it?

Part of the blame must be shouldered by colleges that fail to make their athletes meet certain academic standards, but there is no real reason why they failed to get an education. It may be hard to do, but there are plenty of people who can be both a student and an athlete. Maybe I seem cold, but I cannot bring myself to feel sorry for someone who throws away a chance for a college education because of football.

An even more assinine situation than a professional athlete on strike is a professional athlete who holds out for more money. For example, let's take Joe Cribbs who failed to report to the Buffalo Bills because his $135,000 salary was not enough. He thinks he deserves $400,000 a year and he will not play until he gets it. How can a mere entertainer say that $135,000 a year is not enough in a blue collar town where 12 percent of the work force is unemployed? It is no small wonder that most people are shocked and annoyed by such a turn of events.

Right now player and management representatives are discussing ways to divide up the large sum of money which was provided by that enormous TV contract. Each side feels that it deserves a certain share of the amount, but one has to wonder if they ever thought of giving it back to the fans in the form of lower ticket prices. I guess everybody forgot about all of those people who fight off snow or rain, put up with warm beer and cold hot dogs, and who willingly pay to sit through losing seasons. These are the people who are now deprived of their sporting events. I wonder if anyone will ever take into account what they think and want.

Tougher than it looks

Faust knows Michigan State is better than the record shows

By CHRIS NEEDLES
Sports Editor

EAST LANSING, Mich. — His team is 2-0, and is on a roll. The opponent is 0-3, after suffering three narrow defeats.

But as undefeated Notre Dame prepares to take on winless Michigan State at Spartan Stadium here tomorrow, Irish Coach Gerry Faust is worried.

"They scare me," Faust says. "This is going to be one of the toughest games all year for us."

"Their record is not indicative of how good they are. They're well-coached and they could easily be 3-0 with a couple of breaks."

No, Gerry Faust has not gone crazy. The Spartans are indeed the best 0-3 football team in the nation. Their main problem, though, has been not offensive or defensive maladies.

You see, MSU plays a schedule that only the Marquis de Sade could love. So far, the Spartans have lost to nationally-ranked Illinois (23-16), Ohio State (31-10) and Miami, Fla. (25-22). And after the Irish come to town this week, Michigan State must travel to Ann Arbor to face Michigan.

By then, Coach Muddy Waters will no doubt have lost all of his already-white hair.

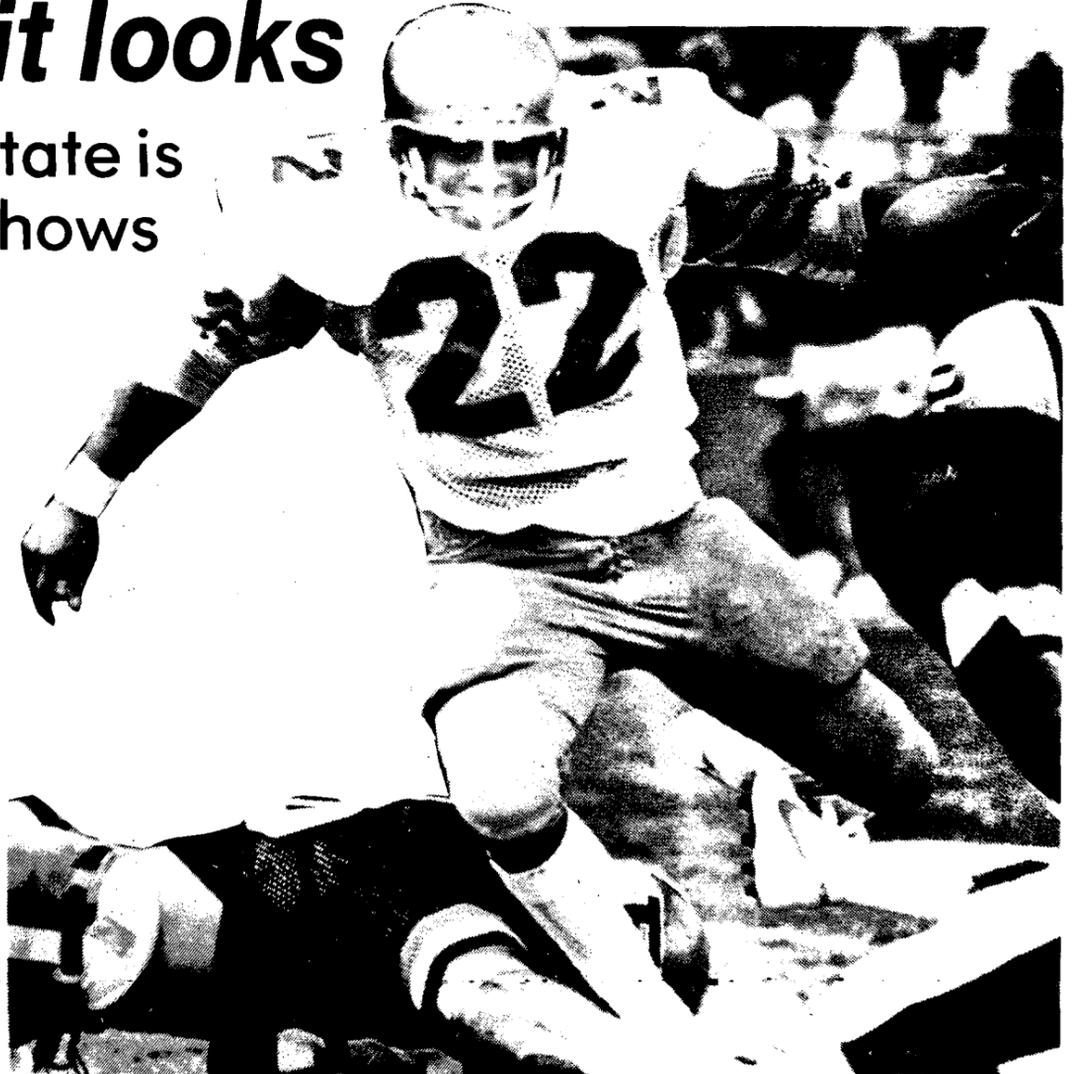

"If we can live through the first five games of our schedule," said Waters before the season, "we can be a tough team. But we will have to be very good very early to survive them."

The Spartans have been good, but not quite good enough, in their first three games. Against Illinois, MSU was stalled inside the ten within 1:18 to go en route to a tying touchdown. The Spartans and Ohio State were tied 10-10 in the fourth quarter before a fumbled punt return opened the floodgates for three late Buckeye scores. And last week, Miami scored on a fourth down, one-yard plunge in the final minute to win, after the Spartan defense kept the Hurricanes out of the end zone on three previous first-and-goal situations.

So, what can we expect of the Spartans tomorrow? Will they come out on fire to atone for the last three weeks, or will the effects of three heartbreaking defeats drain them of every ounce of spirit?

It is this unknown that scares Gerry Faust.

Struggling with himself

John Leister tries to regain the winning ways he used to know

By DAVE DYE

The State News

"John Leister can be his own worst enemy."
— teammate Tom Piette.

EAST LANSING, Mich. — He could put 20 cents in a phone, dial up a number, hear a busy signal, then turn around in a disgusted way, putting all the blame on himself. He would say that he should have called two minutes earlier or maybe three minutes later.

But it would be his fault. That is just John Leister's nature.

He has a tendency to be Vince Lombardi to himself. Or, better yet, the Great Santini. When John Leister makes a mistake — anything even resembling one — he must answer to a most vile figure.

Himself.

"Yeah, I've seen that," says MSU offensive coordinator Steve Schottel, who worked closely with Leister last season as the quarterback coach. "John gets on himself a lot. If our offense fails, John Leister will never blame anybody but himself."

His year of 1981 was by all tokens a disappointment. The one who MSU coach Muddy Waters "wouldn't trade for any quarterback in the country" suddenly found himself traded for the one who had been playing backup to him. Not John Elway. Not Dan Marino. Not Art Schlichter. But Bryan Clark.

Leister, a 6-2, 187-pound senior, was dealt a season of hardship. He bruised a thigh muscle in the opening game, and hobbled for weeks. Later in the year, he separated his shoulder. But what had to hurt most was that he was clearly the inferior of the Leister-Clark combo.

Even with a talent level which had shocked people the year before — when often he was the best player on the field.

"Very disappointing season," says Leister. "At times I thought I did really well and at times I thought I shouldn't even be playing high school. I tried to force the big play every time I got my hands on the ball."

"I didn't really lose my confidence but there sure were times when I really wondered. I'd search for answers. The answers were right there. I just had to settle down."

Leister's past is such that it is hard for him to settle down when every time he looks up at the scoreboard, his team is behind. Since third grade, he has played football — almost always

Joe Rudzinski is going home this weekend. But, unlike his sophomore year two seasons ago when he started regularly as a linebacker, the Farmington, Mich., native may be wondering if he will play at all against Michigan State. It all began in the spring. You see, Rudzinski missed the entire spring practice with a shoulder injury. Enter Rick Naylor.

Rudzinski's injury allowed Naylor a chance to step in at the strongside linebacker position. Naylor jumped on the opportunity, impressing Linebacker Coach George Kelly enough to earn the starting spot.

"With the shoulder injury, I missed all of this spring," says Rudzinski. "That's what hurt me the most as far as my starting role is concerned."

"Because I missed the spring, Rick excelled and that's where things turned around. He won the spot and I just didn't win it back from him this year."

It has been a difficult season so far for Rudzinski, adapting to a new role as a substitute. He failed to appear in the Michigan game and was called in to the Purdue game only after Naylor was shaken up.

Against Purdue, Rudzinski obviously showed his desire to avoid the bench as much as possible. He blitzed with animal-like intensity and helped shut down Purdue's passing game in the second half.

"I was fired up to get in but Rick got hurt," adds the linebacker. "You have to be ready to jump in because they (the coaches) might call on me at any time. I was happy to play but it's a shame Rick got hurt."

He especially would like to play against Michigan State. Paul Rudzinski, Joe's older brother, starred at linebacker for the Spartans and played for the Green Bay Packers until being cut this season.

"When my brother played there," says Rudzinski, "I went there (Spartan Stadium) every Saturday for the home games. A lot of Michigan State is in my blood. I came very close to going there."

"My brother played there all the time and as a kid, visualizing myself playing in the same turf that he did always stuck in my mind. This may be the biggest game of the year for me."

Whether Rudzinski, a senior, can take back his starting slot from Naylor, a junior, remains to be seen. Rudzinski knows it will not be an easy task.

"Rick's an excellent athlete," he acknowledges. "The only way I could get my position back is to play twice as hard as I've ever played."

The question of whether to play Rudzinski or Naylor is baffling the coaches, but no one is complaining.

"Practices are half of what a game is as far as physical and mental effort," says the 6-3, 224-pound Rudzinski. "If you perform well in the game, they (the coaches) will look at that much more closely, and will take that more into consideration than practices."

"Being a Sam Linebacker (a trade name for an outside linebacker), the biggest thing is holding up the tight end because we're lined up on the tight end most of the time. The biggest thing they (the coaches) look at is how we can handle the tight end one-on-one in blocking situations."

It is a difficult chore for Rudzinski to wait around for his chance to prove his ability once again.

As an example, senior fullback John Sweeney started thirty games in his first three Irish seasons. Now Sweeney is a reserve and has tried to help the team out by moving to the tight end position.

In other words, when playing for Notre Dame, losing a starting job often comes with the territory.

For Rudzinski, however, the determination to win back the starting slot is intense.

"After last week's game," says Rudzinski, "maybe the coaches will re-evaluate things and I'll get to start."

As the daily dogfight on the practice field continues, one must feel that the competition between Rudzinski and Naylor is making each player much more aggressive.

Besides, a little depth never hurt anyway.

... Leister

for a champion, almost always the hero.

His father, James, is a retired Colonel from the U.S. Army which may explain even more so the strictness John places on himself.

"Last year I got frustrated, mad at myself," he says. "If the team couldn't do it, I was going to. I didn't have a good time. I pressed myself, worried so much about everything. Heck with that."

After a sophomore year of throwing for 1,559 yards and 10 touchdowns, and being named honorable mention All-Big Ten, what happened in 1981 caught most by surprise.

He still threw for more than 1,000 yards and completed nearly half of the passes. However, it was far from convincing one to turn down a snap with Stanford, Pitt or Ohio State. Simply, a lot more was expected out of No. 18 from Great Falls, Mont., than was received.

Now, he says he is wiser. A busy signal will not deem the end of sunrises. An interception won't mean the end of mankind. Leister, who nearly transferred after Darryl Rogers left for Arizona State, is ready to hop up and not fall down this time around.

"I've always been the type that nine times out of ten, I'd get on myself more than the coach," Leister says. "I've got to be more calm and keep my wits on. I'm not going to be able to just change it, I'm just going to try and let some of it run off my back."

"I'm looking at this year like I'm going to have fun. Do everything to win, but have fun."

"He's a perfectionist," said Waters. "When things go wrong he really gets upset. But I think he's outgrown it."

How important that factor is to MSU cannot be measured — no ruler reaches that far.

"He's our No. 1 man," says Otis Grant, one of his top receivers. "If he has a great season, so will we. Our offense is based on how the quarterback does."

"I've got the best receivers in the nation," Leister says. "What our offense needs is for me to stay in the pocket more and not roll out and panic like I did.

"It seemed like when the pocket crumbled, I'd try to break out. That's not how our passing game works. I've got to sit back there and maybe take a sack once in a while. But not panic and give an interception."

"And if I throw an interception, it won't be the end of the world. What I'll do is go tackle the guy and take the ball right back."

Meet the new John Leister. Busy signals now get laughs.

The words of Otis Jones could not have been more prophetic.

Leister moved over the 3,000-yard career passing mark, and into second place — behind Ed Smith — on the all-time leading Spartan passer list. But things have not been as rosy as the stats make it seem.

In the first three games of 1982, John Leister has completed just 41 percent of his passes, has thrown only two touchdowns while tossing six interceptions.

Michigan State, meanwhile, is 0-3.

It's almost a sure bet that the performance of John Leister tomorrow afternoon will determine whether the Spartans are 0-4 or 1-3 by nightfall. And that worries Muddy Waters.

"If John has a fault, it's that he tries too hard," says Waters. "He thinks he has to carry the weight of the world on his shoulders, and he tends to press. We have been working with him — with some success — on waiting for the play to develop, then throwing."

"Notre Dame has a respectable secondary, but it's vulnerable. We will have to go to the air, because they shut down the run so well. That puts even more pressure on John."

"But I think he'll be all right."

If he is all right, Leister and his teammates may have cause for a big celebration.

Dave Duerson

... Tough

Aaron Roberts

"They really concern us," he says. "They're a well-coached team and they're very quick and very strong. Their schedule has been unbelievable, but they always get ready for Notre Dame."

"They're going to yell — hopefully after our game."

The key to the Michigan State attack is, without a doubt, senior quarterback John Leister. The 6-2, 187-pound Leister has had a rollercoaster career at MSU, and even in his career against Notre Dame.

It was Leister who, two seasons ago, nearly single-handedly beat Dan Devine's Sugar Bowl-bound Irish at Spartan Stadium. The Great Falls, Mont., native filled the air that day with 32 passes (out of only 62 total offensive plays) and, although he completed only 11, he covered 204 yards and was only intercepted once in the tension-filled 26-21 Irish victory. The Notre Dame secondary was beat on deep patterns often that October afternoon.

But Leister came down to earth in the 1981 rematch. He completed just 4-of-10 passes for only 41 yards before he was benched in favor of Bryan Clark.

So far this season, Leister has been a disappointment. But his stats — 41 percent completions, six interceptions and only two touchdowns — don't tell the whole story. The Spartans have been outscored 31-0 in the fourth quarter in three games this year, and each time it has been Leister's inability to make the big play or lead the big drive that has contributed to their demise.

Faust, not one to hurt anybody's feelings however, still speaks highly of Leister.

"Leister is an excellent quarterback," says Faust. "We remember what he did to Notre Dame two years ago. He has tremendous wide receivers, the best we've faced this year. He also has an excellent veteran line to give him protection."

The Spartan receivers certainly are top-notch. Two of them, seniors Otis Grant and Ted Jones, combined to catch five passes for 81 yards in the 1980 game. Grant is without question Leister's No. 1 target, as he's caught 14 passes for 268 yards (nearly 20 yards a catch) this year. In addition, he's snared Leister's only two touchdown tosses.

On defense, the Spartans are led by linebacker James Neely, a South Bend native who has recorded 42 tackles in three contests. The MSU defensive front line is no slouch either, and will be tough to run against — just ask Miami, which needed four rushing plays to gain one yard for the winning touchdown to beat the Spartans last week.

Notre Dame will counter this defense with tailback Phil Carter (210 yards in two games), who figures to see much more playing time because of the injury to backup Greg Bell in last week's 28-14 victory over Purdue. Faust says that he will move freshman Allen Pinkett into Bell's reserve role, but that Pinkett will not see the same amount of action as Bell did.

The other half of Notre Dame's two-pronged backfield attack is fullback Larry Moriarty, who has surprised many so far by leading the team in rushing with an average of 111 yards a game.

The passing game also is in good shape, with quarterback Blair Kiel calling the shots. The junior has completed 62 percent of his passes without an interception. His favorite receiver has been tight end Tony Hunter, who has caught 11 passes for 148 yards in the two Irish victories.

So, on the surface, it looks like a mismatch. But Spartan Stadium has not exactly been Disneyland for Notre Dame teams in the past. In their last two visits, the Irish have won twice against outmatched Spartan opponents but by a grand total of only nine points, making this place a veritable chamber of horrors for Notre Dame.

Now you know why Gerry Faust is scared.
IRISH ITEMS: Game time is 1 p.m. EDT, which is 12 noon in South Bend... For those of you not making the road trip, the game will be televised on Channel 16... Cavernous Spartan Stadium is sold out for this one, and a crowd of over 76,000 is expected... The Irish will return to campus by bus immediately after the game. Arrival time will be about 7:30.

Shaking down thunder Cheerleaders stay 'behind the Irish'

It is said that the toughest job in athletics is being the head football coach at Notre Dame. This is mainly due to the much-heralded and impressive past of Notre Dame football. Rich with unsurpassed tradition and lore, football at Notre Dame has for years embodied the wholesome spirit of competition in intercollegiate athletics. The people responsible for the perpetuation and manifestation of this unique spirit are the Notre Dame cheerleaders.

This might seem like a tough task for 15 students, but with the help of fellow students and alumni, it is a job well done. In speaking with co-captain Jojo Bautista one gets the distinct impression that it is also a job much-enjoyed. Frequent smiles come to her face as she remembers tryouts and her first year on the squad. Bautista, together with co-captain Paul Pineda organize and lead the squad.

Unlike most schools, the Notre Dame cheerleaders come from all over the country and world (Lynette Boggs is from West Germany), thus practices over the summer are impossible. So they return to campus early, practicing up to six hours a day.

Once classes start there is a marked difference in the practice atmosphere. "During the year we practice two hours a day, except on Sundays. And once the reality of classes and workloads sets in there is a definite build up of tension at our practices," explains Bautista. As a pre-med major, she has had to budget her time around cheerleading very carefully. "At times it isn't easy. Things will go along smoothly and then you will be hit with a couple of tests. Then that panicky feeling sets in and you think 'What am I doing!'"

A typical football weekend for the squad begins with the pep rally on Friday night and ends with the game on Saturday. The weekend can be both physically and emotionally draining. They get in uniform at about 10:30 in the morning and try to get the fans psyched up by performing on the quad. Then they go to the stadium and cheer at the game which lasts until 5 o'clock.

The Michigan weekend was especially draining on the squad, due to the inclement weather and the long drawn-out build up to the game. "Our squad is in really bad shape right now after that Michigan weekend. Some of us have strep throat and a cold. I think that after that night game we all prefer the afternoon ones. We literally went all day — until about 12:30 at night," Bautista states. Bautista herself is nursing a foot injury, acquired during practice, which will take about two more weeks to heal.

Being a cheerleader for Notre Dame involves more than dance routines and mounts. With appearances at alumni pep rallies and other schools, the cheerleaders are very important for the public relations of the University. As representatives of the school they have the enormous responsibility of presenting a positive image of Notre Dame to the country. "A lot of people draw their conclusions about the Notre Dame student body from us. I know that when we went to an alumni pep rally in Michigan we were really impressed with the Michigan State cheerleaders, and thus with the student body as a whole, because via the cheerleaders one can get a glimpse of what the student body is like," Bautista states.

In the past these interactions with other schools were limited due to a lack of funds for travel. But for the first time the cheerleaders are receiving trip money from the Athletic Department, though they are still not considered a varsity sport. They also receive a small allowance from student activities and St. Mary's. They will be travelling this year to Michigan State, Pittsburgh, the Meadowlands for the Navy game, and nine of them will be going to the USC and Oregon games. The Oregon trip was somewhat of a surprise to the squad, but when the Oregon alumni club discovered that the cheerleaders were not coming, the club insisted on funding the flight out for the group. And of course a trip to a bowl game, any bowl game, is a trip that they all hope to make this January.

Faust, Irish all set for Michigan

By KELLY SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

Notre Dame marketing majors have made a small fortune selling T-shirts this week that read "The Irish do it in the dark." No question about it, the lights around Notre Dame's Stadium tomorrow night will be the focus of attention — until kick-off. Then it will be time for Gerry Faust and his team to show everyone just how much they've learned since they last took the field.

"In some ways, I'm a little bit more at ease than I was before our first game last year," says the second-year head coach, "because I know the whole scope of college football much better now."

"But on the other hand, I'm more nervous because we're going up against a highly-ranked team right off the bat. Either way, I'm just anxious to get started again. We're a better football team, but there's no way to prove that until we play."

But according to the Irish coaching staff, Michigan, too, is a better football team than the one that drubbed Notre Dame 25-7 a year ago. "Jay Robertson (defensive line coach) coached at Wisconsin last year when they beat Michigan," Faust says. "We sent him up to watch those two play last week. He felt that Wisconsin had a better team this year, but Michigan really handled them. They have all the ingredients to be great this season."

Tale of two quarterbacks

By LOUIE SOMOGYI
Sports Writer

"Junior quarterback Blair Kiel won the job in spring practice, but Kiel hasn't been an effective passer . . . and Faust wants to pass a lot this fall . . . Nobody is saying so, but there's an underlying feeling that if should Kiel falter — even a little — it might be an excuse for replacing him with heralded sophomore, Ken Karcher." — Sports Illustrated

"This year Michigan's trigger man is under the gun. As a sophomore a year ago, quarterback Steve Smith got off to a rocky start . . . Smith gained 2,335 yards, but not the Michigan fans' favor. He scored often — 27 times against the enemy — but seldom with the fans." — Phil Richards, South Bend Tribune

Somewhere in the college football world a great talent is always waiting to be displayed. Before attaining glory, though, the talented individual invariably has to "pay his dues." Marcus Allen did it — as a blocking fullback for Charles White — before he went on to win the Heisman Trophy himself. Scott Zetek had to live through two years off with major knee surgery before attaining All-America honors in his senior season.

This weekend at Notre Dame Stadium, two junior quarterbacks — each of whom has been paying dues — get a chance to display the talent and gain the glory. On national television, no less. Blair Kiel and Steve Smith have not overcome the disadvantages of inglorious positions or physical injuries. But the two have had to overcome the mental anguish of trying to gain acceptance and respect from the press, as well as over-zealous fans and alumni.

Respect and acceptance were the least of the quarterbacks' problems when they arrived at their respective schools in the fall of 1980. Just about every scout in the business listed the youngsters as the top two blue-chip prospects at their position. Honor and glory at tradition-laden football schools seemed certain.

Kiel completed his three-year career at Columbus (Ind.) East High with 4,977 yards of total offense and 54 touchdowns (passing and running) to his credit. In his senior year he led East to a 13-0 slate and the Class-AAA state championship.

Smith led his team into the playoffs in Michigan — throwing for 1,926 yards and 26 touchdowns in his senior campaign. His 4.5 speed in the 40-yard dash was an extra bonus.

Their freshman collegiate seasons contrasted sharply. While Smith saw very little action as a third-string quarterback, Kiel had begun making a name for himself by the second game of the season (ironically, against Michigan). By the fourth game of the season, Kiel was Notre Dame's starting quarterback — the first freshman to do so since Ralph Gugliemi in the 1950s. "I was thrown into the fire a little quicker than I expected, and I had to do a lot of growing up real quick," reflects Kiel. "But it was one of my goals as a freshman and I wouldn't have traded it for anything."

After starting off 7-0 and being ranked No. 1, though, Notre Dame closed the season with a 2-2-1 record. Kiel's final passing statistics (a 38.7 percent completion rate and no touchdowns) drew the first questions and criticisms about his competence.

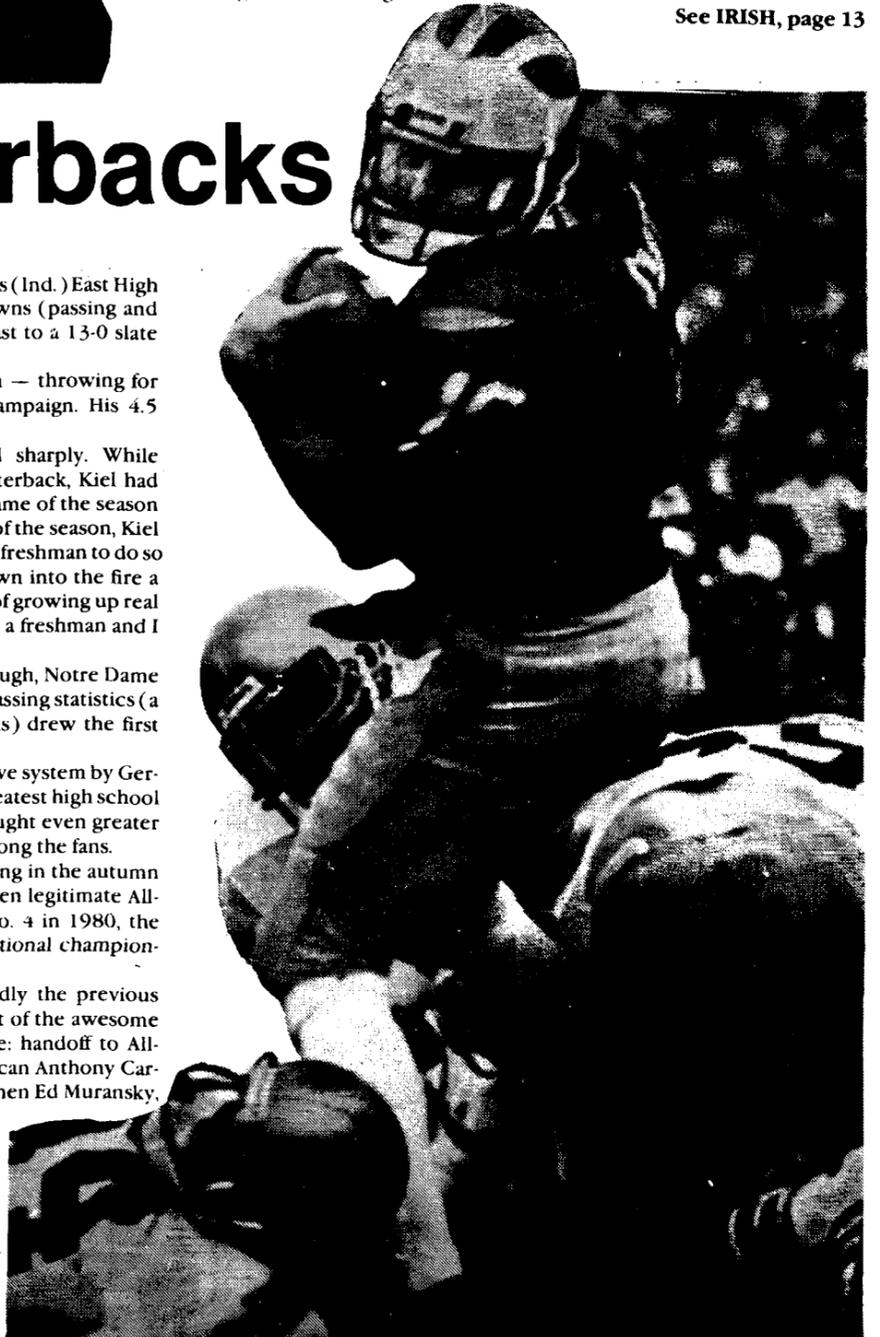

With the implementation of a totally new offensive system by Gerry Faust in 1981, and the return of one of Faust's greatest high school stars — Tim Koegel — Kiel's sophomore year brought even greater obstacles. Nevertheless, optimism ran rampant among the fans.

Meanwhile, spirits in Ann Arbor were also peaking in the autumn of 1981. With 16 starters returning (including seven legitimate All-America candidates) from a team that finished No. 4 in 1980, the Wolverines were the odds-on favorites for the national championship.

John Wangler, who had performed so splendidly the previous year, had graduated, but Smith still had the benefit of the awesome Michigan offensive unit. His job would be simple: handoff to All-American Butch Woolfolk, and throw to All-American Anthony Carter, while being protected by the All-America linemen Ed Muransky, Bubba Paris and Kurt Becker.

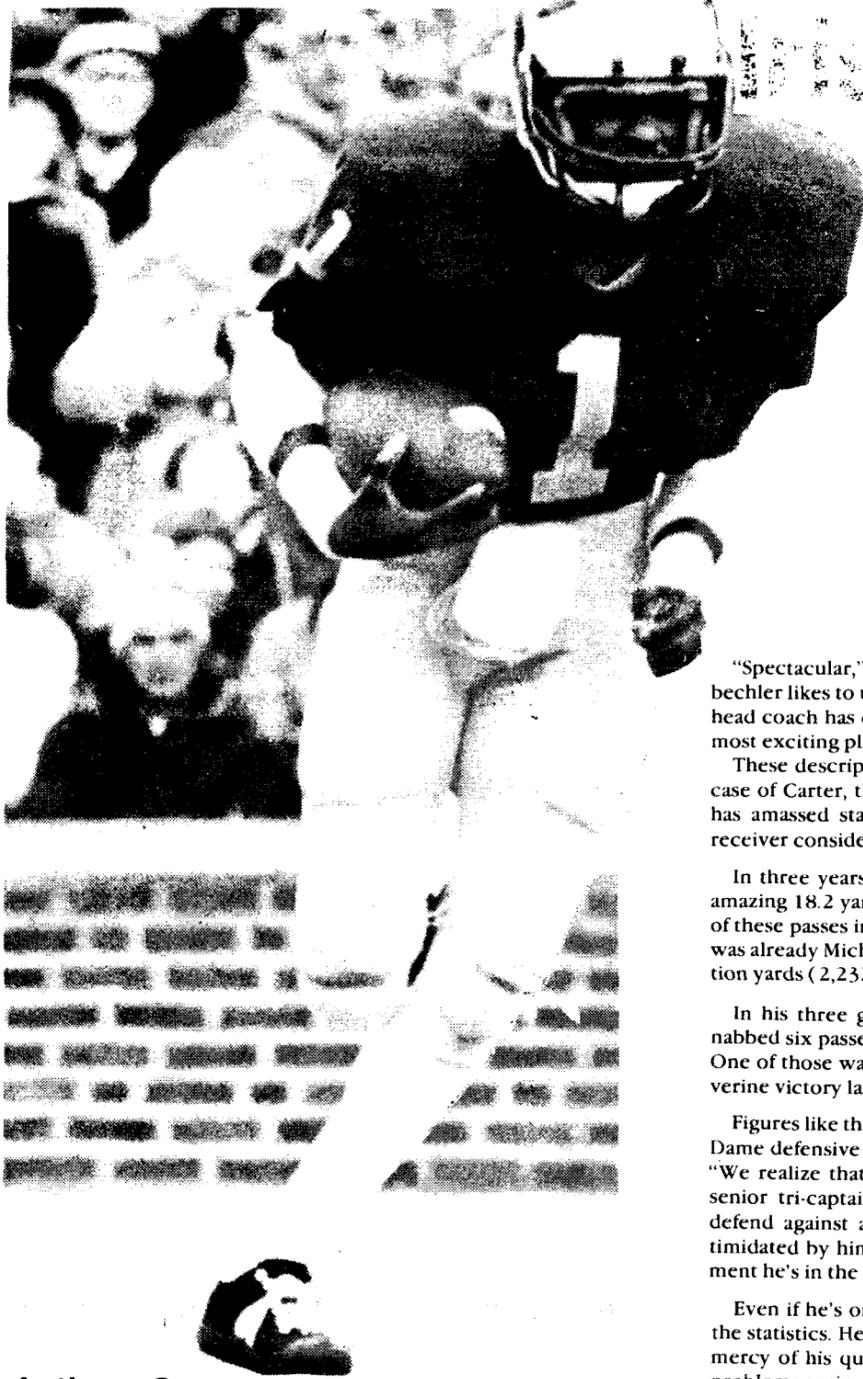

In the year of promise for the young sophomore field generals, however, autumn literally became the "fall" of 1981. The season divided into three very similar parts for both of them.

The first part was the nightmare start. In the opening-game loss to Wisconsin for then-No. 1-ranked Wolverines, Smith managed to complete only three of 18 passes and was intercepted three more times. Five weeks later, nothing had improved. Against eventual Big-

Anthony Carter

By DAPHNE BAILLE
Sports Writer

"This Anthony Carter is something else! Nobody in the United States of America could have stopped that pass from getting into Carter's hands! . . ."

This was the commentary of an exuberant Michigan announcer two years ago after the little sophomore receiver made a spectacular catch for the Wolverines.

Now in his senior year, Anthony "The Darter" Carter is still stopping hearts and electrifying crowds with his dazzling play. He has been called everything from "the human torpedo" to "the 161-pound touchdown machine," and Sports Illustrated says he "runs so fast it's tough to catch him even on film."

"Spectacular," "explosive," and "dynamic" are terms Bo Schembechler likes to use when describing his star receiver. The Michigan head coach has even said, "Anthony Carter is without question the most exciting player in college football."

These descriptions may sound biased or exaggerated, but in the case of Carter, they are well deserved. The two-time All-American has amassed statistics impressive enough to make him the only receiver considered in line for the Heisman Trophy this year.

In three years at Michigan, Carter has caught 118 passes for an amazing 18.2 yards per reception, and he has taken fully one-fourth of these passes into the end zone. Before the 1982 season began, he was already Michigan's leader in touchdown receptions (29), reception yards (2,232), and kickoff return yards (1,246).

In his three games against Notre Dame, the wide receiver has nabbed six passes for 152 yards — an average of 25 yards per catch. One of those was a 71-yard touchdown play that aided in the Wolverine victory last fall.

Figures like these are enough to frighten any secondary, but Notre Dame defensive backs feel prepared to handle the human dynamo. "We realize that Carter is a great receiver," notes free safety and senior tri-captain Dave Duerson. "It's a challenge to be able to defend against a receiver like him — but in no way are we intimidated by him. We will have to be very conscious of every moment he's in the game."

Even if he's on the field, a receiver cannot automatically pile up the statistics. He often faces double coverage, and he's always at the mercy of his quarterback. Carter will have to contend with these problems against the Irish.

Duerson explains, "Carter is a great one, but to be great somebody's got to put the ball in his hands. We're going to put a strong pass rush on (Michigan quarterback) Steve Smith so his passing won't be as effective."

"We're going to be a more offensive defense. We're not going to sit back and see what they do — we'll be more explosive."

The Irish defensive backs are ready to explode, especially when they recall last year's humiliating 25-7 defeat at Ann Arbor. In that contest, Carter grabbed three passes and scored on two of them, accounting for 99 of Michigan's 103 passing yards.

"Last year was an embarrassment," remembers Duerson. "We've put all that behind us now, but that feeling is still in the back of our minds. The Michigan loss was the start of the turmoil."

Although the Irish will have their hands full with the likes of Carter and Smith, the going won't exactly be easy for the Wolverines either. The Irish secondary was ranked in the top twenty last season, and it boasts some stars of its own.

Duerson has started 27 games in three years and has played at every spot in the secondary. The All-America candidate led the team in minutes-played last year while delivering 55 tackles. In his career at Notre Dame, the hard-hitting Duerson has recovered three fumbles, intercepted five passes, and broken up ten passes.

Strong safety Joe Johnson is also a very physical player, and one of the most versatile backs in the secondary. He is backed by veteran Rod Bone, who will be used frequently in nickel defense situations.

At the corners, Stacey Toran and Chris Brown are ready to defend against whatever comes their way. Toran has been a starter since his freshman year and was third among the Irish in playing time last year. The junior is especially skilled as a one-on-one pass defender. Brown, a smart and physical player, also returns as a starter. He'll play weak corner while Toran plays strong.

So there you have it — Anthony Carter and associates versus the defensive backs of Notre Dame. It should be quite a match-up.

MUSCO: a bright idea for football

By LOUIE SOMOGYI
Sports Writer

The next time you hear what you think is the most idiotic, outlandish suggestion for your career advancement, listen closely.

Joe Crookham, president of Musco Sports Lighting, Inc., can tell you as well as anyone that sometimes it's what seems to be an absurd thought that leads to prosperity. Back in 1979, when his company was just getting by in the business world, someone suggested a portable that would be mounted on trucks.

"It was all a big joke at the time," recalls Crookham.

But the joke eventually began to intrigue Crookham and Myron Gordin, a mechanical engineer for the company. Preliminary plans were drawn up — and received with enthusiasm by network television executives in New York, who quickly saw a major profit possibility for the future.

The big moment for the Oskaloosa, Iowa, firm came in 1980, when a major test at the University of Iowa was successful. With that, Crookham, the networks, and colleges across the country adopted a phrase made popular ages ago: "Let there be light!"

Today, the laughter that was so prevalent three years ago at the Musco Corporation has been replaced with smiles of sweet success — for huge profits.

The company, with its new portable lighting system, has been transformed from an industry that had annual sales of $972 in 1968 into a $10 million bonanza.

Of course, without a quality product, there would have been no dramatic rise in profits. In the 1980 test at Iowa, ABC-TV engineers needed only one look at the Musco lighting system — and were totally convinced that a new wave of television coverage was on the horizon.

"It was somewhere between sensational and above," says Crookham of that test run.

The sturdiness of the portable lights, which are placed at heights of 120-140 feet, has also raised some questions — not to mention fear — on the parts of skeptics. But "wind-tunnel tests have shown the poles to be very sturdy," says Crookham. "They could stand through a hurricane if they had to."

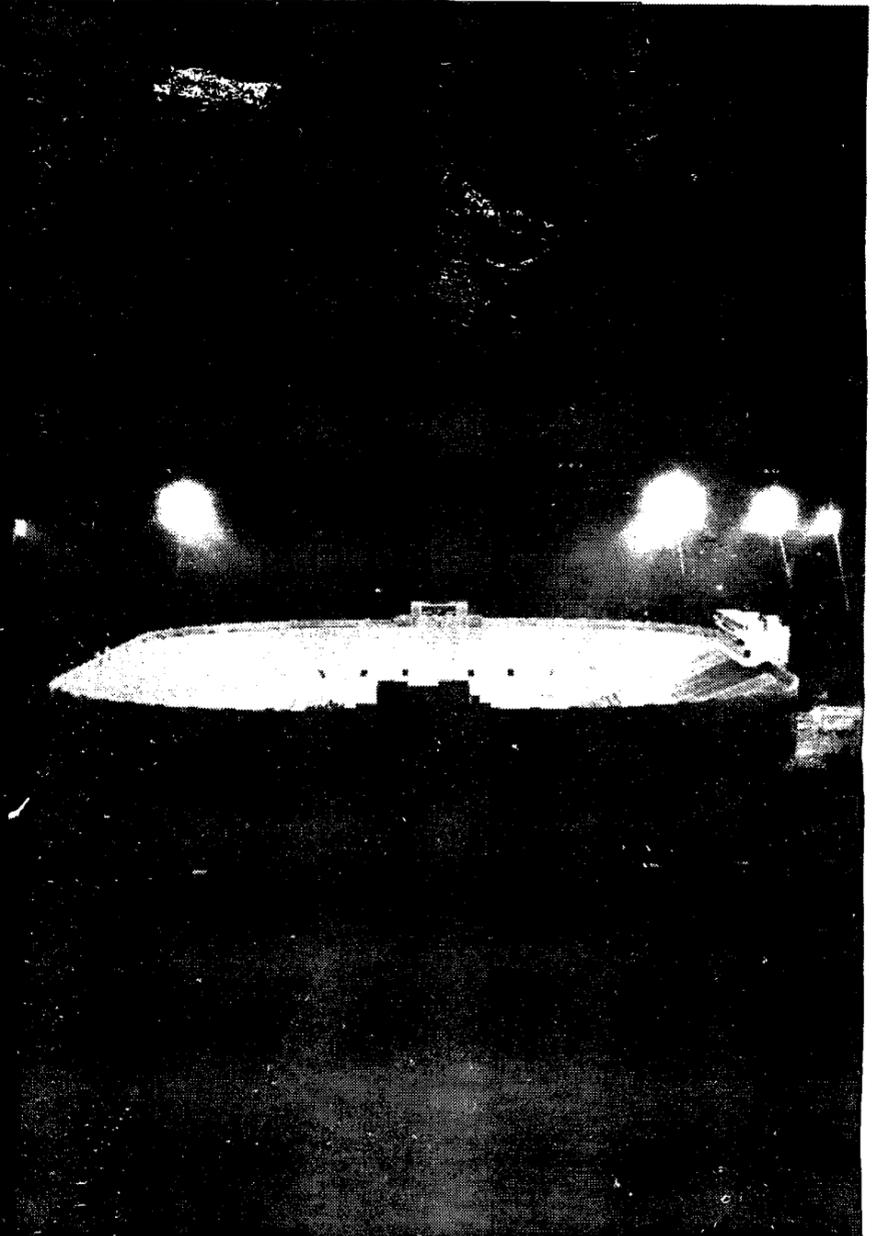

The brightness of the resulting light was questioned by many as well. But Crookham laughs off those doubts.

"To put it in perspective," he says, "these lights are so strong that if we placed each of four trucks around a softball field, but one mile away, it would still be bright enough to play a game." With negotiations complete among the NCAA and several networks, college football has entered a new era. "Love Boat" and "Fantasy Island" will soon have strong competition, as there are plans for college doubleheaders almost every Saturday this fall on CBS and ABC, as well as night games on Ted Turner's super-station in Atlanta. Fourteen Saturday night games and five Thursday night games will be featured on WTBS during the next two years.

Even the National Football League has made some inquiries of Musco. There has been some talk of playing the 1985 Super Bowl in unlit 85,000-seat Stanford Stadium in Palo Alto, Calif.

It just goes to show how one dumb suggestion has been able to light up the lives of a lot of people.

Big-Ten Champs Iowa, Smith was 6-for-20, and threw a key interception deep in Hawkeye territory. Michigan lost 9-7.

Kiel had difficulties as well, while alternating at quarterback with Koegel. Of his first 21 passes, Kiel completed only 7, and five were intercepted. The Irish started off 2-3.

The second part of the season was better for both men. After Iowa, Smith went on a four-game tear, averaging 11.4 yards per pass attempt. He racked up 340 yards of total offense and six touchdowns against Illinois, and earned the AP's "Midwestern Offensive Player of the Week" award.

Kiel improved his statistics as well, averaging 16 yards per completion, and throwing six scoring strikes. "So what" became an all-too-frequently-heard expression among fans of both teams, however.

First of all, the opposition was not the most formidable for either team. Secondly, more credit was given to the two small but explosive split ends, Joe Howard and Carter, for having made their quarterbacks seem better.

The final chapter for both quarterbacks featured season-ending, nationally-televised embarrassments.

The dues have been paid.

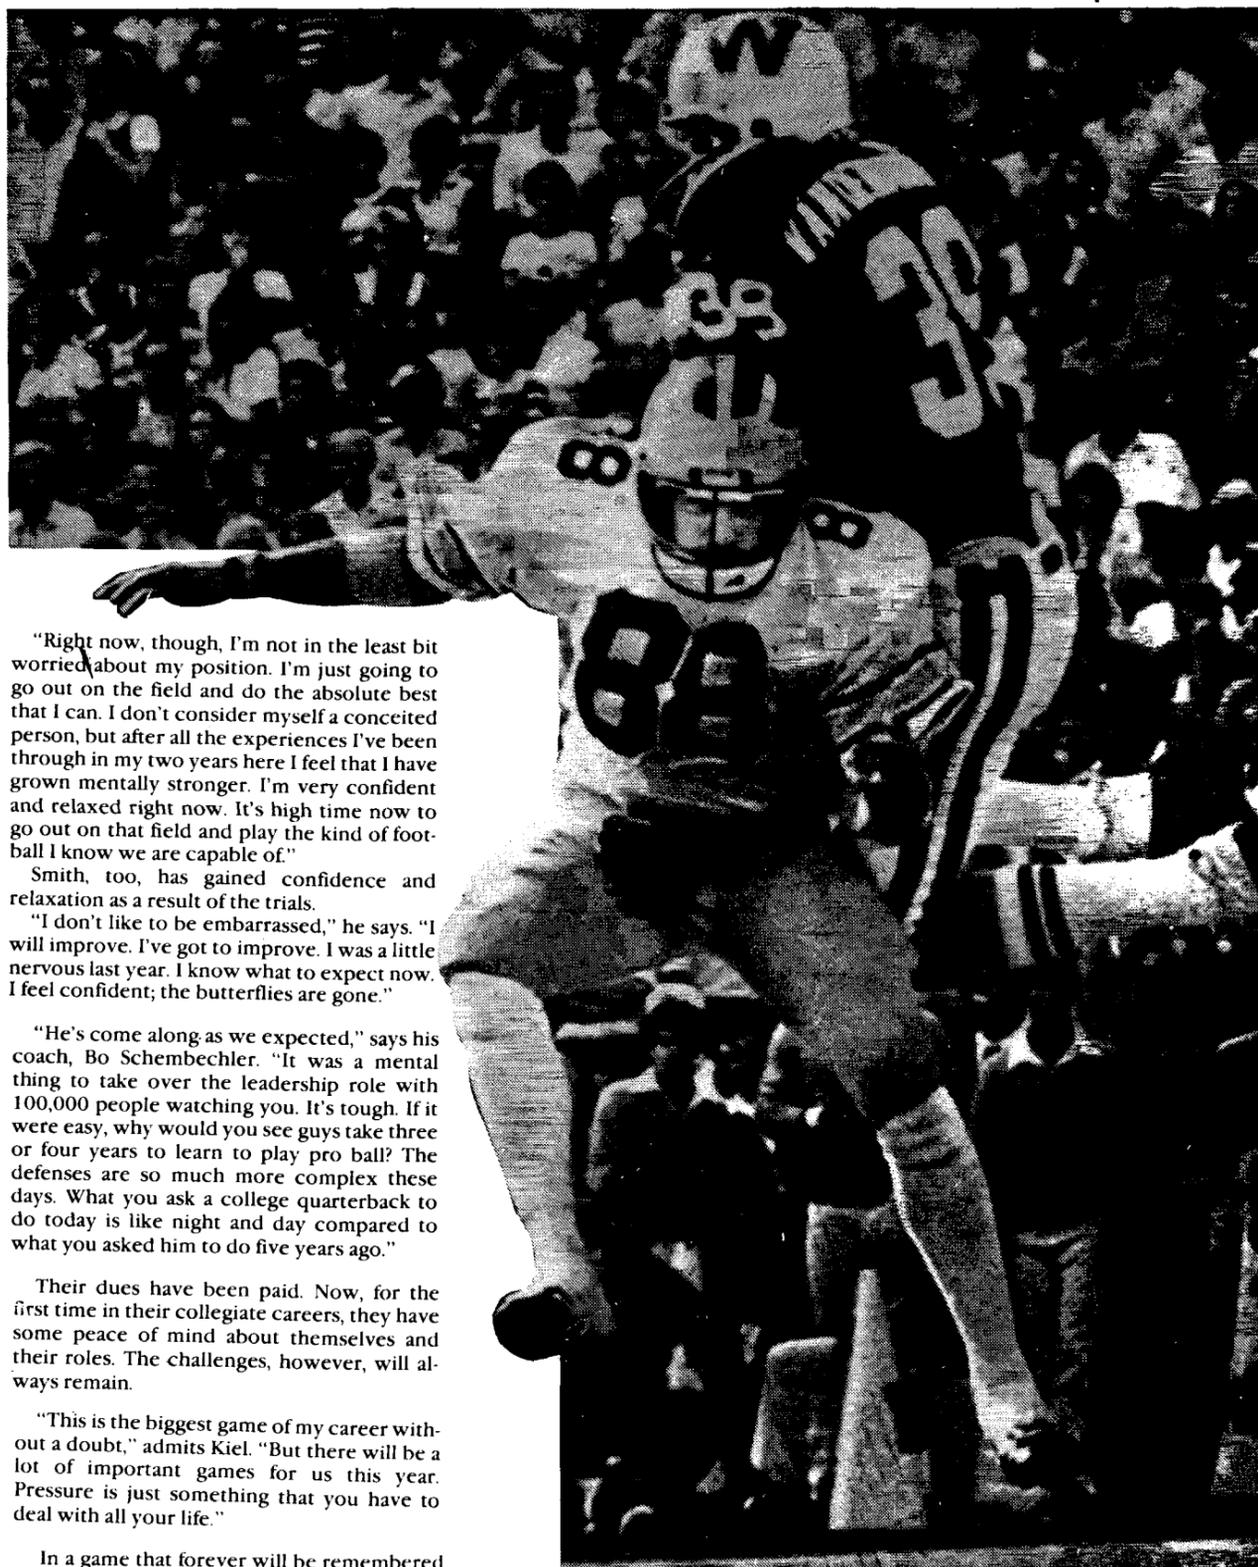

The challenges, however, will always remain.

Smith was 9-for-26 and had three passes picked off in a 14-9 home loss to bitter rival Ohio State. Six days later Kiel was suffering through a 10-for-25, two interception performance in a 37-15 loss to Miami (Fla.)

The disappointments of 1981 remain with them. The criticisms come back to haunt them.

Through it all, Kiel has been able to hang on to his dignity, politeness, and sanity.

"I can't be concerned with what people say or write about me anymore," he admits. "Everything that can possibly be said about me — the good and the bad — has been said. I have reached the point now where I believe that if I can't get the job done, I want the coaches to get me out of there and put somebody else in there — for good — who can.

Craig Dunaway

"Right now, though, I'm not in the least bit worried about my position. I'm just going to go out on the field and do the absolute best that I can. I don't consider myself a conceited person, but after all the experiences I've been through in my two years here I feel that I have grown mentally stronger. I'm very confident and relaxed right now. It's high time now to go out on that field and play the kind of football I know we are capable of."

Smith, too, has gained confidence and relaxation as a result of the trials.

"I don't like to be embarrassed," he says. "I will improve. I've got to improve. I was a little nervous last year. I know what to expect now. I feel confident; the butterflies are gone."

"He's come along as we expected," says his coach, Bo Schembechler. "It was a mental thing to take over the leadership role with 100,000 people watching you. It's tough. If it were easy, why would you see guys take three or four years to learn to play pro ball? The defenses are so much more complex these days. What you ask a college quarterback to do today is like night and day compared to what you asked him to do five years ago."

Their dues have been paid. Now, for the first time in their collegiate careers, they have some peace of mind about themselves and their roles. The challenges, however, will always remain.

"This is the biggest game of my career without a doubt," admits Kiel. "But there will be a lot of important games for us this year. Pressure is just something that you have to deal with all your life."

In a game that forever will be remembered as the one when the lights shined brightly in Notre Dame Stadium, two quarterbacks who have been in the dark are hoping to shine even more.

Wide receiver Anthony Carter is the Wolverines' star, but he's certainly not the whole show. Quarterback Steve Smith is what Faust calls "a double threat — he runs a quick option and he's developed into a top passer." Lawrence Ricks is another in the long line of quality Michigan tailbacks — he's coming off a 153-yard performance against Wisconsin. On defense, the Wolves return their top two tacklers in linebackers Mike Boren and Paul Girgash.

"Maybe Michigan did lose some names from last year," Faust says, "but they always have people who get the job done, that's the bottom line."

"We have 18 starters back, but that's not real significant when it comes from a 5-6 team," he joked. "Michigan's got all the advantages on us — they've played a game, tested new things and gained momentum from a win. We just have to go out and execute better than they do tomorrow."

Much of the expected improvement in the Irish should come from a slightly revamped offense — one which emphasizes the short passing game and eliminates the wingback position. That will afford quarterback Blair Kiel and Co. a better chance to move the football.

"The most encouraging thing about our offense this fall has been the play of Blair Kiel at quarterback," confirms Faust. "He knows he's the man and he believes we all have confidence in his ability to be our starter."

Having Tony Hunter set at tight end figures to be another plus for the Notre Dame air attack. "We think he can really be a consistent threat at that position," says Faust. "And we'll also involve our running backs a little more in the short passing game — our philosophy will be based on the high-percentage completion."

Kiel has plenty of targets to aim at — the decision on who the wide-outs will be was still in the evaluation stage this week, though it's a sure bet sophomore Joe Howard will be one. Freshmen Milt Jackson and Van Percy are the top names for the open slot, but Mike Haywood and Chris Stone are still contending.

Senior tri-captain Phil Carter and junior Greg Bell still are just about even at tailback — with freshman speedster Allen Pinkett on their heels. "I wouldn't hesitate to put Pinkett in," Faust says. "He's really shown us a lot this fall, and he's made Phil and Greg both better tailbacks."

Senior Larry Moriarty will get the nod at fullback, but expect senior John Sweeney and sophomore Mark Brooks to see duty, too. Sweeney may play some tight end in short-yardage or goal-line situations also.

Whoever carries or catches the ball Saturday will do so behind what Faust expects to be a faster and stronger line. "Anytime you put a couple of solid teams like Michigan and Notre Dame out there, what happens in the trenches makes a big difference. Michigan just dominated the line of scrimmage all day long last year in Ann Arbor, and they never let us establish anything."

"We've got to become more dominant up front or we'll have problems moving the football, that's all there is to it. We didn't control the line often enough last year, and that's been a major focus point for us ever since the season ended."

The offensive line will list Mike Kelley and Larry Williams at the tackle positions, regulars Tom Thayer and Randy Ellis at the two guard spots and Mark Fischer at center.

Defensively, the Irish are solid up front with returnees Kevin Griffith, Jon Autry, Bob Clasby and sophomore Mike Gann on the line. Tri-captain Mark Zavagnin joins Mike Larkin and Rick Naylor in the linebacking corp, and Dave Duerson, Joe Johnson, Chris Brown and Stacey Toran will start in the secondary.

Faust has split kicking chores between senior walk-on Mike Johnston and freshman Hal Von Wyl. "Mike will handle kick-offs, extra points and field goals inside the 25 yard line," he explains, "and Hal will probably kick any field goals longer than that."

The Irish are in good shape physically — offensive tackle Mike Shiner and split end Mike Favorite are the only regulars who won't dress — and mentally as well. Faust says the team won't use the revenge factor to motivate itself for Michigan.

"We'd really be riding an emotional roller coaster all season if we looked at opponents that way. Last year was last year — it's over. We just want to attack each game one at a time and play the best football we can."

Emporium: woodwork and more

Restaurant reviews are always difficult. I'm torn between delivering a keen, cold analysis of the dynamics of the baked potato or a wonderfully trite and terribly cliché treatment of "Oh, the wonderful woodwork!" It's a tough decision. I like something in the middle.

John Higgins

restaurants

The restaurant of the hour is the East Bank Emporium located on the Saint Joseph River at Niles and Jefferson. The Emporium seems to try to be a variety of things to all people, particularly in terms of its menu. On the one page is a fine selection of seafood and steak with prices ranging from $6.95 to $12.95. Turning to the other page, however, one finds a lighter section with quiche, crepes and burgers ranging from $2.95 to $5.45. It is also has a nice bar area with a jazz band playing each night except Tuesday.

Actually, your first reaction upon entering is indeed, "Oh, the wonderful woodwork." The Emporium is tastefully decorated and designed with a lot of wood — pillars, beams and railing are prominent on both the lower and upper levels. Seated by a window with a view of downtown across the river, I heard the comment, "It's hard to believe your in South Bend."

My dining partner and I (My favorite cliché!) started off with a margarita and pina colada at the waitress' prompting. Neither drink was well blended and the pina colada had large chunks of ice and tasted more of pineapple juice than anything else. The rich flavor of coconut was missing. The other drinks were large and well-made. The wine list was impressive offering inexpensive California wines from $4.95, fine burgandies from $7 to $18 and champagne up to $85. My favorite is a particular Alsatian white at $12.95.

The french onion soup ($1.75) is the first I've had with which I didn't have to do battle against a pound of mozzarella cheese. There was just enough cheese to cover the bowl and not nearly enough to strangle you, unlike the soup at most restaurants. As an appetizer, the broiled potato skins thick with cheese and real bacon bits ($2.95) were very good.

The table-side salad was served with condiments brought to the table. There was a choice of four dressings, two cheeses, almonds, sunflower seeds, croutons and rasins. All containers were filled to the top which is pretty good considering the late hour of our arrival. I loved the arrangement, but then I dislike salad bars. The plate of lettuce I was served, however, could have stood some sort of garnish, at least peppers or cucumbers if not tomatoes.

The variety of entrees is very good featuring polynesian boneless breast of chicken ($6.95), 12-ounce prime rib ($11.50), quiche lorraine ($3.45) and a turkey, broccoli and cheese crepe ($4.25). We had the Florida grouper ($6.95) and the coconut shrimp ($9.45). The grouper was tender and well-seasoned. Obvious care had been taken in its preparation. The shrimp literally made my mouth water. Unlike many restaurants which bury their shrimp in batter, the coconut breading on these shrimp was thin and crisp and the flavor of both was wonderful. The mixed vegetables were crisp and flavorful. The baked potato, however, was a little undercooked.

The offer of dessert pained us, we were so full (12 hours later I still can't eat anything else.) I'll go back sometime for the strawberry cheesecake or Bourbon Street Pie (no guesses on that one.)

The Emporium is one of the few opportunities for live jazz entertainment in town. The quiet music with our dinner was a pleasant accompaniment. They got louder and louder with each course, however, and by the end of dinner my ever-present but elusive partner and I were reduced to merely gazing into each others eyes.

On the whole, I loved the Emporium. If music and atmosphere aren't enough to bring you in, the food is. The bar is open until 1 a.m., so at least take a break from Eddy Street.

TEMPEST blows itself out

Has "interesting failure" become too trite a phrase to use anymore? Sorry. But what can I say about a motion picture that attempts to update Shakespeare's The Tempest into a contemporary examination of the mid-life crisis. At the very least, I've got to admit that Paul Mazursky had a lot of guts to make

movie review

Tempest. But while I must admire the intensity that Mazursky has put into the film, I'm not so sure if his story line wasn't doomed to failure in the first place.

So come if you've heard this before: Philip Dimitrius (John Cassavetes) is a disillusioned architect who has become sick of the world he has built around himself. Not only that, but his wife (Gene Rowlands) has run off with his boss (Vittorio Gassman). What's left for Philip to do but reject the corruption of Manhattan and seek out a purer more elemental life on a desert island off the coast of Greece? Keeping house with Philip are his sexually frustrated lover Aretha (Susan Sarandon) and his daughter Miranda (Molly Ringwald) who feels destined to die a virgin as she blooms into womanhood without the benefit of a boyfriend. Also on the island is Kalibanos (Raul Julia), goat-herder and comic-relief, who feels destined to prevent Miranda from dying a virgin.

If all of this is beginning to sound a lot like a soap opera, don't think you're alone. What Mazursky and co-writer Leon Capetanos have done is strip Shakespeare bare of all his poetry in an attempt to make their dialogue more contemporary sounding. Colloquialisms and vulgar language have replaced iambic pentameter. Name-dropping runs amuck. Miranda goes out of her way to refer to whatever pop rock band she can think of. After a while, this whole sense of being consciously "in" begins to wear on the nerves. The inside jokes don't even come close to the Shakespearian spirit. All that's left are the trashy sub-plots.

Yet even with his shortcomings in preproduction, Mazursky is able to pull off a few good moments. Whenever we move into the psyche of Philip, the movie becomes alive. There is a certain electricity that bursts forth in glory whenever Dimitrius whispers "show me the magic" and conducts the heavens in the magnificently orchestrated tempests that erupt throughout the movie. Cassavetes gives his most frustratingly intense performances since DePalma's The Fury. He becomes a personification of the tempest, going beyond the self-consciousness of the script, concentrating more on the motivations that inspired the original Prospero.

The acting throughout the entire motion picture is top-notch with Raul Julia standing out as the bizarrely comic goat-lover. Kalibanos becomes a representation of just how unjust the world can be. After all, Philip has two women while he has none at all. The knock-out scene of the entire movie is an incongruous little divertissement featuring Kalibanos dancing with a number of goats to the tune of Liza Minelli singing New York, New York. It's all very pleasant but I'm still not quite certain what it has to do with the rest of the film. This is the problem that haunts the whole movie. Inconsistency has prevented the parts from gelling into a whole.

So why attempt an updated Shakespeare at all? This is a vital question, especially in light of the fact that this is the second movie with a Shakespearean mood to come out this season. Woody Allen's equally inconsistent Midsummer Night's Sex Comedy suffered from many of the same problems. There seems to be a consensus among former TV writers (Mazursky used to write gags for the "Monkees" TV series) that the only way to legitimize themselves is to adapt Shakespeare. Neil Simon has been wallowing in this particular limbo for years.

The question remains whether or not Tempest's slow and uneven pacing is worth treading for the inside Shakespeare jokes and a handful of incongruously interesting moments. I say no. Hip references to the Bard will never legitimize poor filmmaking.

For the time being

I could always tell when Luke had been drinking beer because he turned philosophical. I played the game with him, not always sure what either one of us was talking about. One Saturday night, wearing his new Notre Dame ring, he was full of reflections on how quickly his college years were passing.

When he asked the unexpected question: "What is life?", I knew he had been tapping the Molson's. I could tell he was in the talkative state of intoxication by the way he lectured me with inquiries: "What is this experience that divides the quick from the dead?"

Rev. Robert Griffin

letters to a lonely god

I shook my head. I had been reading Hemingway. Hemingway leaves me with a distrust of philosophy.

"Life is absolutely dependent on time," Luke said triumphantly, as though he were announcing a breakthrough. "If you tell me what time is, I can tell you what life is."

I shrugged my shoulders helplessly. "Don't ask me," I said. "I don't even have a watch. Whatever time is, it passes too quickly."

"You disappoint me," he said. "I'll have to lend you some books." He cleared his throat, and I felt I should be taking notes. "Life is the way I participate in the existence of the universe. Heaven will be all time — past, present, future — meeting simultaneously; theologians call the experience eternal life. Right now, what I am enjoying is for the time being. I can lose it, separate myself from it, or be altogether irresponsible in how I treat it."

I felt as though someone had painted me into the corner of a Picasso canvas. "Luke," I said sympathetically, "you must have had a hard week. Maybe you're taking too many courses."

He was flying too hard for me to flag him down. "Did you ever think," he said, "that when you were born, you became the member of a conspiracy? You grow up, go to school, wonder about God. All of a sudden, one day it hits you that you have this secret identity as a co-conspirator."

"Once, when I was your age, I thought I had stumbled onto some secret of the gods," I said. "I had probably been drinking at the time. I got sober, and older, and I forgot what the secret was."

"Age, the idea of growing older, is a heresy." It sounded nice, but I didn't believe him. He went on: "Teen-agers think that theirs is the only game in town. After twenty, they say, it's down hill all the way. Their parents express their agreement by being jealous of the young."

I gave a sigh for all the faded energies. I enjoyed being young, but I never thought it was a special time. Old people in nursing homes get treated like folk heroes on their one hundredth birthdays, as though there were a certifiable greatness in keeping the cholesterol count low and the undertaker unemployed. I wonder how special I'll feel on my hundredth birthday? I'll probably just be grumpy because I want a nap.

"What is the Saturday night secret that makes you feel like a co-conspirator?" I asked out of curiosity.

"Existence," he said obscurely. "Nothing is promised except for the time being. Everything is best in its own place. The grass is as important as the trees. The valleys are as praiseworthy as the sky. What would happen, in a symphony, if the orchestra tried to content itself with playing every other note of the score?"

I nodded my head as though I were a disciple hearing riddles from the lips of Buddha. Luke lapsed into silence with his eyes closed. I thought: the guru is falling asleep. I went back to reading Hemingway.

Fifteen minutes later, Luke sat up suddenly. "What time is it?"

"Time you were in bed," I said.

"I've got to go back to a party," he said. He was less mellow now, no longer the young Camus. He was plainly a little tight, without euphoria.

"I wish you would forget the party, and go home to bed," I said.

"I've got a date to take a girl back to St. Mary's," he said. "She's in no shape to drive. I have her car keys. I promised I would see her home. A girl drunk in a guy's dorm is asking for trouble."

"Guys get in trouble too," I said. "Why don't you leave the keys with me?"

"Don't worry," he said. "My roommate is taking us, and he's on the wagon." He laughed in a pleased way. "It's nice of you to worry," he said. "Thanks alot."

He made me feel very virtuous for my concern. "Call me when you get back to your room," I said. When he inquired why, I explained: "Worrying is a habit I get from a slightly Jewish mother."

He forgot to call. By the time I walked down to his dorm to inquire for him at four o'clock, I had given him up for dead. After our talk, I had given up on Hemingway. During the three and a half hours of waiting for a phone call, I thought my way back over thirty years, trying to remember the secret of the gods that was so important to me one evening when I was young. I couldn't put myself in the mood where I was positive I had it. Yet, I discovered a memory of myself, standing under the stars, full of realization: Life is more valuable than the fire stolen by Prometheus from under the deities' noses. The gods watch tirelessly for a chance to snatch it away. I must always live in watchfulness of their jealousy.

It's cornball enough for Luke to like it, I thought, if he's been drinking. Elders, or old farts, or Jewish mothers, feel they must protect the younger members of the tribe, as they protect themselves, from the malice of the gods.

Luke would have thought I was drinking Molson's myself if I woke him from sleep at four o'clock. He would never understand the chaplain's spinning philosophical fantasies as though he were the young Camus.

What's happening...

It's the weekend again, that favorite time of the week that all industrious students, staff and faculty look forward to. As is the university's habit at this particular point in the year, there is a football game Saturday afternoon.

Not to interfere with, but rather to enhance, your weekend, below is listed a serious of events with which you may choose to vary your activities, should partying, footballing and general fun-making wear you out.

•THEATRE

Local theatrical talent presents the only piece of stage entertainment this weekend. Loose Ends by Michael Weller, will be performed at South Bend Civic Theatre. A play of mature subject matter, it deals with two married people and their views of themselves, their friends and their lives. Structured much like Same Time, Next Year, it traces the difficulties that the couple encounter at various times in their married life. Weller creates characters that an audience understands and identifies with. The show will run October 1, 2, 7, 8, 9, 14, 15 and 16 at South Bend Civic Theatre, located at 701 Portage Avenue in South Bend. Tickets can be purchased by calling 234-5696. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m.

•MOVIES

The takeover of our film screen by foreign directors continues this weekend with Michelangelo Antonioni's 1975 film, The Passenger. As mainstay of Italian cinema, Antonioni consistently presents stark films characterized by definitive contrasts. In this film, a burned-out reporter, played by Jack Nicholson, escapes his own identity and adopts a new one only to find that he is in as risky a situation as before. Antonioni takes alienation to its logical conclusion, offering his viewers a thought-provoking look. This film, unlike the others in the Friday Night Film Series, will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Annenberg Auditorium. Tickets are $2.

Living on campus, most of us know the feeling of having neighbors. With the territory come loud parties, hordes of people and tedious interruptions. With Neighbors, the film industry proves that college students "ain't seen nothin' yet!" Starring Dan Ackroyd and the late John Belushi, Neighbors serves as the final film effort of the "dynamic duo" of Saturday Night Live. Like most campus flicks, it can be viewed at the Engineering Auditorium at 7, 9 or 11 p.m. tonight and Saturday night. Despite these showtimes, a word of warning to Ackroyd/Belushi followers. Lines will be forming early so plan accordingly.

•MUSIC

As is traditional in most schools of music, performance-oriented students present recitals of original compositions for judging and exposure to a public audience. At Indiana University at South Bend tonight, senior Daniel F. Swanson will present a program of his works in the Northside Recital Hall at 8:15 p.m. Seven of his works will be featured, two on four-channel tape and five in live performance. Other student musicians will be participating. There is no admission charge.

For a variation on a theme of music and celebration, visit Pierre Moran Mall Saturday night at 9:15 p.m. The popping of champagne corks and an evening of all-time favorite "Golden Oldies" will usher in the Elkhart County Symphony Association's 35th season in the Pierre Moran Mall. The concert will feature Dr. Michael Esselstrom and the Elkhart County Symphony Orchestra in Broadway selections from Showboat to Annie and such popular classics as Gershwin's An American in Paris, Grofe's "On the Trail" from Grand Canyon Suite, Der Rosenkavalier Waltz, Johann Strauss' Chit-Chat Polka and Tchaikovsky's 1812 Overture. Champagne, beer, soft drinks and several kinds of snacks will be provided throughout the evening for guests' enjoyment. Cabaret seating (by reservation only) and open seating are available at $4 per person. For more information call 293-1087.

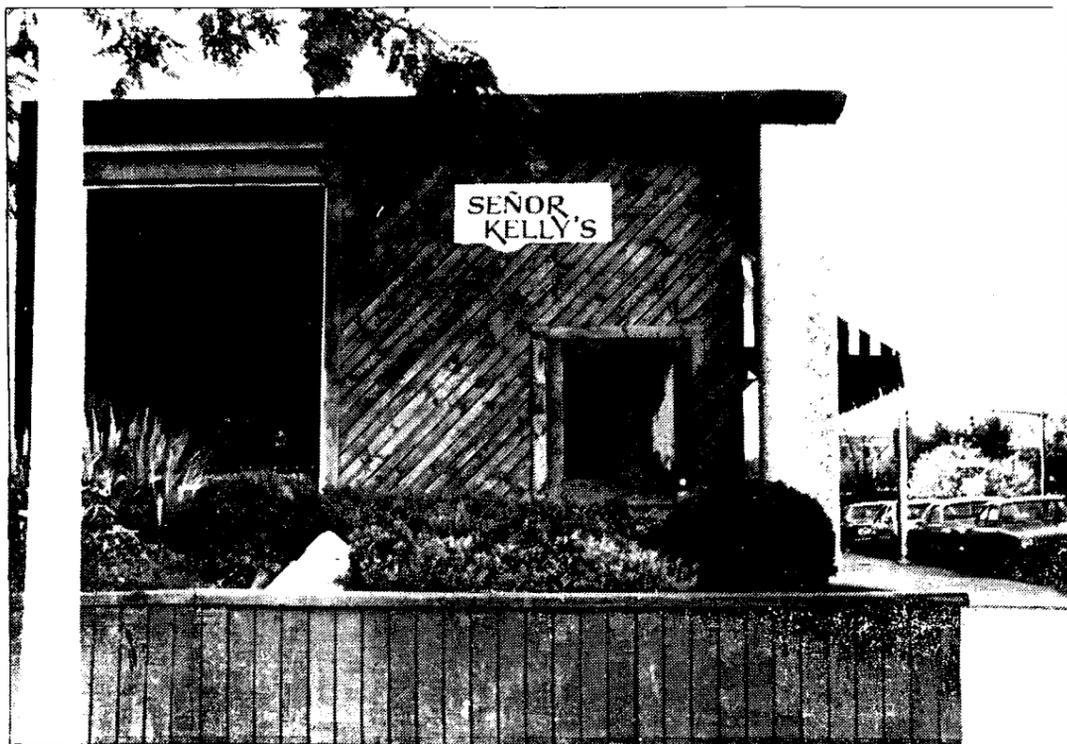

•NAZZ

Tonight, check out Bob Marovich downstairs in LaFortune Center. Bob plays with a country style and is reputedly quite talented. Then, tomorrow, head over to the Nazz and show off a little yourself. Saturday is open stage night at the Nazz, and any and all who wish to try their musical talents in a relaxed atmosphere are welcome.

•OUTLOOK

Our old friends in the Communication and Theatre Department will be presenting two films this coming Monday evening as a part of the Monday Night Film Series, I and II. First up is Howard Hawks' His Girl Friday starring the stunning Rosalind Russell as the star reporter that gets hooked on a lead and can't let go. Ralph Bellamy as the super-dull man she loves and Cary Grant as her editor-boss and ex-husband turn this into the screwball comedy that has put this film on the list of all-time greats. This one starts at 7 p.m. to be followed at 9 p.m. by Alfred Hitchcock's Psycho. At Notre Dame, it has become traditional to eagerly wait for the infamous shower scene with Janet Leigh and then scream even though we know the outcome. Psycho reigns as one of the most significant film artifacts and should not be missed. Both films are in Annenberg Auditorium and are $2.

They became the Irish's first shutout victim of the year.

They seemed mesmerized by everything Notre Dame did. Karen Bauters was especially successful as she began her service at 2-0 and served out the game.

The second game started out much like the first as the Irish jumped out to a 7-1 lead, including Bauters' fourteenth and fifteenth consecutive points.

Suddenly, however, the momentum swung in St. Francis' favor. They began returning everything Notre Dame hit at them and took advantage of poor blocking by the Irish.

It did not take them long to catch up. Caught by surprise, Notre Dame began making costly mistakes, finally dropping its first game since September 14.

Nevertheless, the momentum swung once again in the third game as the Irish moved out to a good lead and would not let the Cougars make a comeback.

The fourth game was a classic example of how important emotions are in volleyball.

Riding the momentum of their victory, the Irish jumped out to a 6-0 lead. Then the Cougars gained momentum and took control of the match. They served for the game, but failed.

This swung the momentum back to the Irish who made a tremendous comeback. The teams traded chances to win, with Notre Dame finally winning the game and match. ("St. Francis' defense was very good," said Anderson. "They adjusted their defense to where we were hitting."

"Our girls also stopped passing the ball," added Coach Sandy Vanslager. "The passing was unbelievably terrible."

"Some of the sets weren't smart. They took chances when they shouldn't have. They didn't go with the sure hit."

There were some good points to the evening, however. The coaches agreed that the fact that the team didn't fall apart completely when the momentum went against them showed some improvement psychologically.

The coaches were also pleased with the play of Bauters, Jackie Pagley, and Robin Israel.

"Karen played consistently the whole evening," said Anderson of the team's most effective scorer.

"Jackie Pagley also played well again," he added. "As usual she didn't make many mental errors and she didn't try to overhit the ball."

Israel, who has played very sparingly this year, made a major contribution in her first start.

"Robin needs to work on her passing, but she hit the ball very well," said Vanslager.

The victories improve the Irish record this year to 10-3.

There will not be much rest for the team, however, as they play in the Saint Mary's Invitational on Saturday. The first match will begin at 10:00 a.m. in the Angela Athletic Facility.

Royals' game against the A's last night in the start of a four-game series at Kansas City, the Angels will carry a lead of two or three games over the Royals starting the final three games of the regular season.

"All this means," said Mauch after a bitter 6-5 loss to the Royals Wednesday night, "is we have a little more work to do." The Angels held a 5-2 lead before Kansas City came back to win in the late innings.

"The race should be over but that's baseball," Angels designated hitter Don Baylor said after Wednesday night's game, in which he hit his 24th homer, producing two runs. "Now we've got to go home and do what any club does at home, win two out of three."

The Angels have won two of three of their previous home field games against Texas but over the season are a bit short of that pace, winning 49 at home and losing 29.

In Wednesday night's loss, California also had a home run from Reggie Jackson, his 37th.

Jackson said concerning losing two straight to the Royals, "Right now ... But I don't like the idea of flying home and hearing people say, 'You'll get them tomorrow. You'll get them tomorrow.' I'm 36. I don't want to hear about tomorrow."

In the Rangers' series, the Angels have the top of their pitching rotation ready, if all are needed. Geoff Zahn, 17-8, will hurl tonight against the Rangers' Charlie Hough, who shut out California in a game in Texas last Sunday.

Ken Forsch, 13-11, would pitch Saturday afternoon and Tommy John, 14-12, would hurl for the Angels Sunday afternoon if the pennant isn't clinched by then. Both would be held back for the American League playoffs if the Angels wrap things up tonight or Saturday.

ings. The new standard breaks Bill Campbell's mark of 167 2-3 for Minnesota in 1976.

Milwaukee starter Jim Slaton, 10-6, lasted less than four innings in taking the loss. The AL east-leading Brewers started the day four games ahead of second-place Baltimore.

The Red Sox tied a major league record by grounding into their 170th double play of the season, tying the 1950 Philadelphia Athletics.

Tri-Captain Jay Schwartz's dedication leads team

By SAM SHERRILL
Sports Writer

Although the Notre Dame soccer team got off to a somewhat shaky start this season, things seem to be looking up now for the squad as they head into several big matches against regional competition.

One of the key factors in the team's holding together through this period has been the composed leadership of tri-captain Jay Schwartz.

One quality about Schwartz which immediately comes through is his dedication to the soccer program. "This year, whenever soccer calls," he said, "I drop what I'm doing and go."

Schwartz is no stranger to prominence on the soccer field. As a senior at Blanchet High School in Seattle, he led his team to the Metro AAA title and a championship in their district.

Since coming to Notre Dame, Schwartz has been a regular in midfield, playing in 58 games over three years. He has won monograms all three years.

As with all the players, though, soccer is not the only thing in Schwartz's life. "I came here for the academics," he said, "but I tried out and was lucky enough to make varsity freshman year. I've always liked soccer, and after graduation I'll probably coach and referee. But I don't think about going professional or anything. I just want to get a job and work."

Many players might not be able to handle the pressure of being a captain. But to Schwartz, it's a challenge. "Sure, it adds pressure. You have to perform and lead by your actions. It's also your responsibility to sort of push the guys, but not get carried away with it. We're all still friends out there."

This year, Schwartz has taken on the role of a creative midfielder, starting the scoring chances rather than finishing them. "My first thought has always been to pass the ball, which I probably do too much. I have a pretty good shot, so I should use it more.

"My biggest strength would probably be my experience. I know the game. Also, though I'm not a great skilled player, I think I do a lot of things pretty well. The toughest thing is maintaining concentration, with all the different pressures, academic and so forth.

"What's hurt us this year is losing Mike Sullivan (center halfback). We basically had to start over and look for the right mix. But I think we may have found that mix now.

"Every game is a must win situation. But I think we can go undefeated the rest of the way; I know we can. It starts with Dayton tonight. There would be nothing better than to have a big crowd there for that game."

Perhaps tonight will be the spark for the Irish. With leaders like Jay Schwartz, the team is bound to succeed.

Irish Invitational Race starts this afternoon

By NAT RICH
Sports Writer

The nation's oldest and largest intercollegiate cross country race takes place this afternoon, and Notre Dame will be hosting it. Forty-nine teams with over three hundred and fifty runners open an exciting afternoon of competition at 2:00 on the golf course.

The eighteen most competitive teams, including Notre Dame, open the Notre Dame Invitational with the first race. A second race, at 3:00, includes the other thirty-one teams. The first division includes such cross country powerhouses as Purdue and Michigan. Also competing is defending champion Illinois State, led by last year's meet winner, Bill Shuey, who covered the five mile course in 24:09.

Irish coach Joe Piane admits that the competition will be intense. He offered, "It's by far the toughest field we've faced this year. If we can finish in the top five I'll be satisfied. I think that if our times are comparable to last week's, we should be able to do that."

He was referring to last week's second place finish to Marquette in the National Catholic Cross Country Meet. In that race, four Irish runners finished with the fastest times of their lives.

As has been the case all season, Marc Wozniak, Tim Bartrand, Tim Cannon, and Andy Dillon will be regarded as runners who should carry most of the weight for Notre Dame. Jim Tyler, who ran his best time last week, has been steadily improving and may break into that front four at any time.

Piane explained, "we've had consistently solid performances so far this season and we'd like to maintain it for the rest of the year. This meet will be a good test."

A good test it definitely will be, and also a good chance to see some excellent runners. The crowd is expected to be the largest of the season and it will be the last chance for local fans to see the Irish at home.

ND field hockey team drops second straight

By TOM ANTONINI
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame field hockey team lost only its second game of the season yesterday at Alumni Field. The Irish were defeated 2-1 in a hard fought game with Houghton College of New York. It was the second year in a row that Notre Dame has lost to Houghton by a 2-1 score.

Houghton got off to a quick start, scoring its first goal just six minutes into the game. They dominated play for most of the first half and limited the Irish offense to mostly long range shots. However, although outshot by the visitors Notre Dame was only down 1-0 at half.

The Irish played much better in the second half and controlled possession most of the time. After three shots just missed for N.D., Claire Henry finally tied it up at the 20-minute mark of the second half. It was Henry's 15th goal of the season, a high for the team.

It looked as though the Irish would pull it out, but Houghton came right back just five minutes later to score what proved to be the winning goal. Down 2-1, Notre Dame kept the pressure on until the very end, but failed to capitalize on three corner shots in the last three minutes of the game.

Last year, the Irish travelled to New York, only to lose to Houghton in the last minute of a highly emotional game. N.D. coach Jan Bishop hoped that the loss would be incentive enough to insure a victory in this year's game. She voiced her optimism prior to the game, "When they won last year, you would have thought they had just won the National Championship. We hope we can perform well, we're expecting a clean victory." However, the Irish will have to wait at least another year for their revenge.

Houghton improved its record to 5-2 with the victory. Notre Dame's record is still impressive at 8-2 despite the loss.

Notre Dame entertains Flyers

By AL GNOZA
Sports Writer

After Tuesday's 3-1 victory at Loyola of Chicago, the Notre Dame soccer team will be at home tonight as they entertain the Flyers from Dayton. The Irish are hoping to improve upon their 5-3-1 record.

Despite their less than torrid start, all hope is not lost for an NCAA tournament bid, according to Irish tri-captain Mark Luetkehans.

"The bids are handed out regionally," Luetkehans said. "The only loss we have so far in the region is to Ohio St. and the rain may have lessened the importance of that game."

Since Dayton is in the same region that the Irish are in — the Midwest — the upcoming clash will be very important for Notre Dame, who hope to get their first shot at post-season play.

"It will be a difficult game because they always consider Notre Dame their biggest game of the year," Luetkehans noted. "The last time we played down there, two or three thousand fans showed up. I spent a half hour after the game signing autographs."

The Irish will hope to continue with the type of play that staked them to a 3-0 lead at halftime of Tuesday's game at Loyola. Dave Miles, Joey Hohl, and Joe Herdegen were the goal scorers for Notre Dame with the latter two scorers being the recipients of some slick passing.

"That first goal was a quick one," commented Luetkehans, "but the other two were a result of some very good buildups."

The Irish could probably have blown Loyola right out of the state if they had wanted to, but skipper Rich Hunter took the opportunity to give many Notre Dame reserves some playing time. Consequently, the Loyola converted a critical defensive error into a meaningless second half goal.

"In the second half we didn't control the ball," Luetkehans said. "But in the first half we burned them pretty bad."

Tuesday night's game was probably doubly rewarding for the Irish as they experienced the oddity of a rain-free ballgame. Friday's game at Indiana was delayed a full hour because of rain and lightning and the Wheaton game was highlighted by a pesky downpour.

Tonight's game has an 8 p.m. starting time and will be played on the carpet of Cartier Field. The Irish are one of the few teams that have an astro-turf playing surface and they therefore sport a slight advantage over their visiting opponents. Look for the Irish to wear down the Flyers in the second half because of the turf and the effect it has on visiting players legs.

After tonight's match, the Irish will not have a game until next Friday.

AL baseball roundup; Division races tighten

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Willie Aikens hit a grand slam homer and a three-run shot last night to power the Kansas City Royals past Oakland 11-4 and further tighten the American League West race.

The victory shaved first-place California's lead to two games with three left to play. The Angels finish with a three-game series at home against Texas while the Royals complete the season at home against Oakland.

With the score tied 2-2 in the fifth, Mike Norris, 7-11, walked George Brett and Hal McRae with two out. Aikens drilled his 15th homer, deep into the right-field water display.

U.L. Washington singled and stole second with one in the seventh, and Brett walked. Dave Lopes misplayed a grounder to load the bases for Aikens, who smashed reliever Bob Owchinko's first pitch over the center field fence.

Aikens' seven RBI tied him with Jerry Grote for the club record.

McRae and Frank White also had solo homers for Kansas City, and McRae also drove in his league-leading 128th RBI with a double in the third. McRae's homer was his 26th.

Fred Stanley hit a two-run homer in the third for Oakland, off winner Paul Splitteroff, 10-10, who went six innings for the win. Dwayne Murphy hit a two-run shot in the eighth for Oakland, his 26th.

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — After two straight losses at Kansas City, when just one victory would have given them the American League West title, the California Angels had a welcome rest from pennant pressure yesterday.

The first Angel off day since Sept. 9 will be followed by a season-ending three-game series at Anaheim Stadium against the Texas Rangers. Victories in two of the three games, tonight, Saturday afternoon and Sunday afternoon, would assure the Angels of their second AL west pennant and the first for Manager Gene Mauch in 23 seasons in the major leagues.

The Angels also could back into the pennant if Kansas City falters in a four-game series against Oakland.

Saint Mary's defeats Purdue-Cal.

By CORINNE FLORES
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's volleyball team was victorious last night in their first home game. All 12 players saw action in at least one of the three games that it took the Belles to defeat Purdue-Calumet in this best of five game match.

The game scores were 15-5, 15-10, and 15-5. Veteran players Loret Haney, Marianne Viola, and Ann Boutton set the pace for the match which ended in a short 50 minutes. Boutton's quick attack thrilled the crowd and scored frequently for the Belles. Strong hitting by the Saint Mary's team dominated the game.

Following the victory, Coach Erin Murphy remarked, "I was pleased with our team's performance tonight. We drilled and worked hard all week for this match, rebounding from our loss to Northwestern on Friday. We were able to run a quick offense and our passing was impeccable. But we could have been a little stonger on serves."

Women's volleyball

Notre Dame wins tournament

By MIKE SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's volleyball team expected some easy wins last night when it hosted a four-team tournament, but a combination of poor play and some surprisingly tough competition forced the Irish to work hard for their victories.

In the opener of the evening, Notre Dame routed Bethel College by scores of 15-6, 15-8, and 15-3.

However, the difference in talent was so great that the scores should not have been as close as they were.

The second and final match against St. Francis College began as a slaughter, but turned out to be a vicious struggle as it took the Irish four games (15-0, 11-15, 15-6, 19-17) to win.

The team was without the services of one of its best players, Mary McLaughlin, who missed the tournament due to an injury. Her height, serving, and blocking were sorely missed. Her absence also forced her teammates into positions that they were not used to.

The effect of the position-switching was most evident in the Bethel match. The team appeared confused as Bethel moved ahead 5-4 in the first game, but it settled down and won 11 of the last 12 points.

It appeared that Notre Dame had straightened out its problems when it jumped to a quick 6-0 lead in the second game. But sloppy play allowed Bethel to come back and tie the score at eight. However, Mary Jo Hensler served seven straight points to bail out her team.

The last game was no contest as the Irish finally put it together and ran away from their helpless opponents.

"The problem was that they knew they would win, but didn't know how to do it," explained Assistant Coach Dan Anderson. "They just don't get in the game unless it's a pressure situation. They need motivation. They have to have a coach yelling at them all the time."

Motivation did not appear to be lacking in their second game against St. Francis — at least not early in the match.

The Cougars had won their first match easily, but they did not look ready for the Notre Dame offense.

Notre Dame ruggers win 2 from Purdue

The Notre Dame Rugby Club played host to Purdue last weekend and squeaked by with two victories. The A-side kept intact their undefeated season by walking away with a 9-7 performance thanks to Brian Moynihan who scored a try and Steve Schneider who scored five points on kicks. Sean Sullivan and Mike Cooney both played well for the scrum.

The B-side played the best out of the three sides, but were on South Bend's field playing Battle Creek. They were not as fortunate as they were beaten by the experienced A-side club, 22-10. Matt Zaph's and John Reid scored tries and Tom Reidy scored the two point conversion for the Irish ruggers while the Irish pack dominated the entire game.

The C-side had a real cliff-hanger as rookie John Tusk kicked two penalty kicks home for six points and Tom O'Brian scored a try to outscore Purdue 10-8.

The club travels to Milwaukee this weekend to revenge a 1980 drubbing to the Marquette Warriors.
