Sophomore officers fulfill pledge: Capt'n Crunch arrives in October

By AMY STEPHAN
Copy Editor

He's become a sort of campus hero. Columns are written to praise him. Students stage sit-down strikes in his honor. And, on Oct. 17, Capt'n Crunch is coming to Notre Dame.

From Oct. 17-21, Capt'n Crunch will be under the Golden Dome, distributing T-shirts, free trips to Ft. Lauderdale over spring break, and, of course, Capt'n Crunch cereal.

The Quaker Oats Company is spending a reported $60,000 to sponsor Capt'n Crunch Week at Notre Dame. The week "could be one of the most exciting events on campus this year," said Sophomore Class President Lee Broussard.

The chain of events leading to Capt'n Crunch week began when this year's sophomore class officers ran on a platform which included a Capt'n Crunch party. "We wanted something different that would attract people," said Broussard.

Upon winning the election, the sophomore class officers "realized this would cost some money," said Broussard. The officers approached Bill Hickey, director of Notre Dame food services, who gave them the name of someone to contact at Quaker Oats.

The sophomore officers wrote to Quaker, asking for a few cases of free cereal for their promised Capt'n Crunch party. Quaker Oats turned the letter over to their advertising agency, "which was very excited about it," said Jim McDonnell, director of student activities.

Two advertising consultants for Quaker met with McDonnell and Hickey on campus last June. The consultants then submitted a proposal for a Capt'n Crunch week to take place the week before the USC Game.

"When I read the proposal, I just couldn't get over it," said Hickey. In addition to 12 trips to Florida, prizes include tickets and transportation to the Notre Dame-Penn State game, tickets and transportation to any Notre Dame away basketball game, and a video-cassette recorder for a winning dorm.

With a few alterations, the proposal was approved by Father John Van Wolvlear, vice president for student affairs.

Originally, the Capt'n Crunch eating contest, where the trips to Florida will be awarded, was slated for Saturday. Quaker also proposed that Capt'n Crunch say good-bye to Notre Dame by parading inside of the stadium before the game in a boat-shaped float.

"We had to draw a line between that kind of commercialism at a football game," said McDonnell. Van Wolvlear specified that no Capt'n Crunch week events could take place on Saturday or in the stadium.

Van Wolvlear requested that the Capt'n Crunch eating contest be moved to Friday, and, according to McDonnell, asked "it be around dinner to prove Capt'n Crunch is good any time. And if this becomes a slogan, I want my cut."

According to McDonnell, there was a concern about students going the selves on Capt'n Crunch at a time when there are people starving. Quaker responded by promising to donate $1000 of food to a charity named by the sophomore class. In addition to this $1000, an entry fee of $1 per participant will also be donated to charity.

Although the details of the contest have not been finalized, the contest will probably be held around 4:30 or 5 p.m. Friday on South Quad, said Broussard. Teams composed of four men and two women will compete, and each member of the winning team will receive a trip for two to Ft. Lauderdale.

There is a possibility of a separate competition for sophomores only, since the event is being sponsored by the sophomore class, said Broussard. This would mean a total of 24 trips to Florida.

A treasure hunt is also planned. This will involve 500 certificates for a specially designed Notre Dame-Capt'n Crunch T-shirt hidden around campus. Also hidden will be two treasure chests, one for an individual and one for a dorm. The individual treasure chest will contain a miniature television, a cassette player, a calculator, and other prizes, while the dorm chest will contain a videocassette recorder.

One T-shirt winner will be selected at the Capt'n Crunch eating contest to receive a free trip for two to any Notre Dame away basketball game. The winner must be present and wearing his or her T-shirt at the Capt'n Crunch eating contest.

A trip for two to the Notre Dame-Penn State game will be awarded to the winner of a Capt'n Crunch costume contest.

Capt'n Crunch will appear on campus at least once each day and give away T-shirts and cereal, and, according to the proposal, will be available to visit hospitals and charities and attend the pep rally on Friday.

"It's not your typical class-sponsored event," said McDonnell. "It's a very expensive PR effort by Quaker Oats.... This is a college market and cereals are geared towards little kids."

According to McDonnell, this is the first corporate-sponsored campus event that the University has approved. McDonnell said that part of the reason the event was approved was because the idea was initiated by the sophomore class, adding that in order for any corporate-sponsored event to be approved, it would have to be sponsored by an inside group.

Commercials have not been discussed, said McDonnell. The Quaker Oats consultants have, however, been in contact with "Good Morning, America" and have written to "Charles Kuralt on the Road" and Ted Koppel's "Nightline", according to Broussard.

The sophomore class officers are being requested to send a letter, drafted by the Quaker Oats consultants, to "Real People" and "That's Incredible", said Broussard. The consultants are also working for coverage in the Chicago Tribune Sunday paper.

Transmission revised; warning shot was fired

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States yesterday revised its version of a Soviet pilot's radio transmissions to indicate he fired his cannon — possibly the warning shots the Soviets insist were fired — nearly six minutes before he used a missile to down an airliner with 269 people aboard.

A minute and a half later the attacking Soviet pilot noticed the Korean Air Lines Boeing 747 jetliner was decreasing speed, but there is no indication that was meant as a signal to Soviet interceptors or that the Korean crew was considering making a forced landing.

The State Department issued a written statement without elaboration that contained its reinterpretation of the Soviets' air-to-ground communications "reinforces our belief that the totality of the events remains exactly as stated by the U.S. and Japan." Japan monitored the radio transmissions when the plane was shot down Sept. 1.

"The evidence indicates that the (Korean Air Lines) pilot was totally unaware of the fact he was off course, that he was intercepted by

Catholic church repressed in Chile

Editor's note: This is the second of a three part series examining Chile and the effects of the coup ten years ago in which Augusto Pinochet rose to power.

By VIC SCIULLI
Assistant News Editor

Much has happened in Chile since that day 10 years ago when Augusto Pinochet took power through a military coup. Violence and repression have become a way of life for the majority of Chileans. Few have been spared, including the many Catholic priests in the country.

Last month, Liam Holahan, a young Irish priest, was brutally beaten by Chilean riot police after the funeral of a protest victim. Though most priests have not been victims of physical violence in Chile, the military junta of Pinochet has made it difficult for them to carry out their duties as well as before the coup.

Father Tim Scully recently returned to Notre Dame after almost four years in Chile. In his years there, Scully saw a great deal of repression of the church by the government and rightists. One example of this was the government's intervention into the operations of St. George's College, a Holy Cross school that teaches nuns from kindergarten to the first year of college.

The government took over operations of the school in 1976. Lay teachers were fired and the school's theology department was dissolved. Many priests were named communists by the government. Prior to the coup, one-third of the school's students were on some form of financial aid; afterward, almost all of the school's students came from rich families.

The school's provincial officer at the time refused to accept the legitimacy of government power over a church school and ordered the priests to leave rather than accept government intervention.

Scully said that the government used other tactics to interfere with the Holy Cross, including the imprisonment and beatings of priests.

Many foreign priests had their visas suspended and were forced to return to the minister of the interior.

One obvious tactic which Scully said the government used as part of their campaign to get rid of the church in the country was the rezoning of neighborhoods. The government would learn where leaders intended to build another church, plan something else for that area and then tell them that there was no longer any land available.

The Holy Cross order has had close ties with Chile since 1943 when Cardinal Caro asked the priests to take over St. George's College. At the time, there were no excellent Catholic schools in the country and Caro wanted Catholic education to be as good in Chile as Protestant education. The school has grown steadily since then and has graduated many of Chile's leaders.

Notre Dame, which was founded by the Holy Cross order, has

A 1983 graduate from Notre Dame, Thomas Parrill, has received a graduate fellowship from the Office of Naval Research. Parrill, one of 41 recent graduates to receive the honor, will attend Northwestern University's graduate program in material science and engineering. A native of Grand Prairie, Tex., Parrill received a bachelor's degree in metallurgical engineering and materials science. He was elected to two engineering honor societies, and received Notre Dame's Rev. Thomas A. Steiner Prize, which recognizes leadership qualities in engineering students. — The Observer

Peter Lombardo and Ann A. Porowski have been named to posts in Notre Dame's continuing education department. Lombardo becomes assistant director, and Porowski will be assistant professional specialist and coordinator. Lombardo came to Notre Dame in 1971 as an instructor in history after teaching several years in Connecticut, his home state. He was awarded a William Randolph Hearst fellowship while completing study for a doctoral degree. He was assistant archivist for the University from 1976 to 1980. He succeeds James H. Powell who was recently named director of graduate admissions. Porowski, of South Bend, has been director of alumni and parent services at Drury College in Springfield, Mo. — The Observer

Dean Bernard Dobranski from the University of Detroit School of Law has joined the editorial board of the American Journal of Jurisprudence, an annual publication of the Natural Law Institute sponsored by Notre Dame's Law School. A former member of the law faculty here, Dobranski received his professional degree from the University of Virginia and is a specialist in philosophy and labor-law practice. The Natural Law Institute was founded at Notre Dame in 1947 to explore the principles of the natural law and their application to today's problems. — The Observer

The controversial addition on Bridget McGuire's Filling Station will not be torn down until the owners' appeal is heard by the city Board of Zoning Appeals. The owners, State Rep. B. Patrick Bauer and his sister Teresa Bauer, met a petition deadline so the matter can be heard at the Sept. 22 session of the board. The petition asks the board for relief from an Aug. 11 stop-work order and an Aug. 15 demolition order. The Bauers plan to file a state suit concerning the history of the addition. — The Observer

The gift makes the fifth endowed collection in the library. — The Observer

A relationship with Christ is the most important equipment for a Catholic priest today, according to Notre Dame president Father Theodore Hesburgh. In remarks prepared for the communion exercises at Immaculate Conception Seminary in Darlington, New Jersey, yesterday, Hesburgh reflected on his forty years as a Catholic priest, describing the priest as a man in the middle who has to be close to both God and humans. With Christ, Father Hesburgh said, the priest has all he needs, all the courage, all the love, all the compassion, all the consecration, all the faith and hope, all the perseverance. Not that any of us have anything eternally valuable in and of ourselves to make us dare to share Christ's priesthood, but with Him as our nearest companion and friend, all will go well, despite our weaknesses, inadequacies, faults and sins. — The Observer

Equal parties for all

Once upon a time Father Edward Sorin founded the University of Notre Dame, a college for men. Then, in 1970, women were admitted. Although women are for the most part accepted as equals in the classroom and on campus, there is at least one area of life at ND in which the men's school atmosphere pervades.

Last April, at the final meeting of the Hall President's Council, an attempt was made to clear that stale air. Gary Strickland, President of St. Edward's Hall, presented a proposal to the council. Summarized, this proposal advocates the charge of "a $1 admission fee at parties in hall party rooms" to be paid by all people entering any party. The question of whether students of one dorm will be allowed to attend a party at a dorm housing students of the same sex must be decided on an individual hall basis.

The HPC unanimously approved this resolution at the April 26 meeting. The council is now waiting for a decision from the rectors before the plan can be brought before the Administration.

Although there may exist flaws in this proposal, it is important that it be followed through and not shelved. This resolution is one of the most drastic steps taken in recent years to establish a social atmosphere of true co-education at ND. It also could be one of the most successful at reaching its goal. It must be passed.

Most obviously, the passage of this proposal would relieve the men of this university of some of the financial burden of providing a social life for the rest of the student body. Their summer and work-study savings would not be drained by the hall party fund in order to meet women.

Consequently, parties in women's dorms should become a more common sight. With such an economic incentive as the $1 admission charge, women should be more likely to reach into their wallets. For women who feel inferior at Notre Dame, this proposal would alleviate these feelings by shutting some of the social responsibility into their laps.

The resolution's purpose is "to improve the quality of parties." One such improvement is the expected discouragement of party hoppers. For the hosts and hostesses who dish out the bucks and assume the responsibility, only to see men and women drink their alcohol and move on, this proposal should be a welcome addition to the University party regulations. If people attend parties to enjoy the company and music, and to drink rather than the latter alone, the quality of Notre Dame parties will be improved.

Another aspect of parties this resolution hopes to improve is to increase the money spent on food and non-alcoholic beverages. Although this school does sponsor many activities and events which do not involve alcohol, the centers for most interaction between men and women are the Notre Dame parties, dripping with beer, assorted punches and mixed drinks. Case in point: the Polish Wedding/Chance to Dance did not exactly pack 'em in at Stepan Center and neither did it serve alcoholic beverages. A sad commentary on the students.

The $1 admission fee is designed to furnish more funds for the purchase of these non-alcoholic groceries. "Designed" is the key word in that sentence because there is no way that this provision of the proposal can be enforced. The proposal also states that "there should be no profit making intention." This too is unenforceable and therefore also very optimistic.

It is quite trusting of the HPC to believe that the individual halls will in fact purchase more (or in most cases any) food and non-alcoholic beverages. Does the HPC believe that at all? I hope they do, and I hope that the halls prove deserving of this trust and respect those students who do not like the taste and/or effect of alcohol by following this provision of the proposal if it passes. As a reminder, one third of all party funds are already supposed to be spent on non-alcoholic beverages and too has specified by University party regulations.

As mentioned earlier, there may be flaws with this proposal. First among these has to be the proposal's questionable overall effectiveness. The admission fee will surely soften the blow to the men's wallets. But will more women's dorms really throw more parties? Will more money be devoted to food and non-alcoholic beverages? It seems that more than a proposal is needed: the students need to come to a sense of shared responsibility and respect for all students.

Nicaragua air attacks new method for rebels

Associated Press

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — Rebels fighting the left-wing Sandinista government have escalated their attacks by launching air raids, but the new tactic doesn't appear to pose an immediate threat to the government and could backfire.

Sandinista anti-aircraft fire, never tested before in combat, brought down one of two planes that attacked Managua and its airport on Thursday. Another plane that was backing rebel troops near the Costa Rican border was shot down Friday.

Also on Friday, two vintage T-28 fighters attacked the port facility and a key bridge at Corinto on Nicaragua's north Pacific coast, damaging a chemical storage tank.

Nicaragua said its anti-aircraft batteries drove off another three-plane attack on an army compound near the Costa Rican border Friday evening.

The raids killed one person, a Managua airport customs employee, and caused considerable but repairable damage.

It appears probable the raiding planes departed from secret airstrips in Costa Rica, which borders Nicaragua on the south and is the base for the Democratic Revolutionary Alliance — ARDE. It is one of two rebel organizations trying to topple the government.

Costa Rica has denied, however, that the planes used Costa Rican airfields. ARDE leaders claimed they flew out of rebel airstrips inside Nicaragua.

A foreign diplomat who requested anonymity described the raids as a "publicity coup" for ARDE and its co-leader, Eden Pastora, a hero of the 1979 Sandinista revolution who defected 18 months ago.

But the impact of the raids appears limited and might even gain support for the government.

The attacks were condemned by all five Central American foreign ministers, some of whom would like to see the Sandinistas out of power.

The air strikes were seen as part of a change in rebel tactics to direct attacks at Nicaragua's weak economy rather than at the military, one of the strongest in the region.

U.S. and British jets buzz Beirut in Lebanon as fighting spreads

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — U.S. and British jet fighters roared over Beirut in a show of force Sunday as mortar shells struck Marine positions near the airport. Christian-Druse fighting was reported spreading south from the Chouf mountains.

The Lebanese army said there were fierce overnight battles for the key mountain town of Souk el Gharb, some five miles southeast of Beirut in an area where Druse and Christian militias have been locked in fighting for more than a week.

The Christian militia said it turned over several captured villages to the Lebanese army, which failed to enter the region when Israeli troops withdrew two weeks ago. As soon as the Israelis pulled back to southern Lebanon, intense fighting broke out between the Christians and Druse.

British Buccaneer fighter jets roared low over the capital to support the British, French, Italian and American peacekeeping forces, while a Marine spokesman said U.S. F-14 Tomcat fighters flew "reconnaissance missions" over the capital and the nearby mountains.

The 1,200-man Marine contingent scrambled into bunkers when two mortar rounds struck, but the shelling eased after an hour. No injuries were reported.

At least a dozen shells fell between the U.S. bunkers and a nearby Lebanese army replacement, which began returning fire.

Lebanon's state-run radio reported intense artillery exchanges between militia men in several villages south of the Chouf — indicating a possible Druse plan to sweep south of the Lebanese army and Christian militia positions along the Souk el Gharb mountain ridge to the Mediterranean Sea.

A Druse spokesman in Beirut said Druse militia units had reached villages only 400 yards east of the coast.

As the fighting spread south, hundreds of Christian and Muslim refugees fled into Israeli-occupied southern Lebanon, saying they were trying to escape bombardments from the Chouf ranges.

A Lebanese army spokesman said two Lebanese soldiers and at least two Palestinian guerrillas were killed in the fighting around Souk el Gharb.

But Western military sources said a U.S.-trained Lebanese unit, considered the best in the Lebanese army, was overrun in the battle. Fourteen Lebanese soldiers were killed, 28 wounded and 28 others were missing in the fierce hand-to-hand fighting, they added.

Israeli radio quoted Defense Minister Moshe Arens as telling a Cabinet meeting Sunday that Israeli soldiers could push forward from their defense line to strike at Palestinian guerrillas.

provided Chile with many graduates working as Holy Cross associates.

Despite the intense government repression in the country, the church has remained strong in the country. Many there, however, believe that the church has softened its position on human rights since Cardinal Raul Henriquez Silva's retirement and replacement by Archbishop Juan Francisco Fresno last year.

Scully disagrees with this, though he does see a difference in personal style between the two men. He believes that Fresno is more a personalist than was Silva, who he thinks had a "firm, broad understanding of where the violence came from." He also believes that Fresno has not been in office long enough to gain the antipathy of his predecessor.

Scully also sees Fresno as being more open to dialogue with the regime than Silva. He is skeptical, however, that the dialogue will be fruitful. "The time for dialogue was eight years ago. Any dialogue can't take place without the presence of those who suffered."

Scully received both his undergraduate degree and his Master's of Divinity from Notre Dame. During his four years in Chile, he had a research job as a staff economist for the CCIPE, an educational institute for the church. He was also involved in pastoral ministry and taught at St. George's College.

World recovery hinges on developed nations

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The world's economic picture remains murky because of the severe debt crisis among poorer countries and threats of restrictive trade actions by industrial nations enjoying economic recovery, the International Monetary Fund said yesterday.

The IMF also said in its annual report that "the most pressing task" facing world leaders is to ensure that the recovery continues at a low-inflation pace and spreads to the poorer countries.

But, the report warned, the strength and durability of the economic upturn are threatened by enormous budget deficits in the United States, which can put upward pressure on interest rates.

"It will be vital to bring fiscal situations in the larger industrial countries, and particularly in the United States, into better balance," the study by the 146-member IMF said.

Many economists are concerned that the government's heavy demands for credit to finance the U.S. budget deficits — projected to reach a record $209.8 billion this year — will collide with the needs of businesses and consumers. The result, they say, will be higher long-term interest rates, which could eventually stall the recovery.

Some Reagan officials, however, disagree about the effect of the deficits on the recovery. And Treasury Secretary Donald Regan recently blamed financial institutions for keeping interest rates up.

In its study, the IMF dealt at length with the conditions in the developing world, particularly the debt troubles of poorer countries.

"For all developing countries, economic prospects now depend crucially on the progress of recovery in the industrial world," the IMF said.

Right denounces Korean response

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Prominent conservatives, denouncing President Reagan's response to the shooting down of a Korean airliner as "incredibly inadequate," appear sharply divided on whether to abandon their support of him as the 1984 campaign approaches.

Some leaders of the New Right — notably Richard Viguerie and Howard Phillips — say they want to dump Reagan in favor of a more conservative presidential candidate, even though they acknowledge such a campaign is futile.

But there are indications that the president's political right flank is holding, despite the conservatives' spoken disappointment.

Not a single conservative Republican in the House or Senate, many of whom favor stronger anti-Soviet steps in response to the downing of the plane, has broken with Reagan politically over the issue. Any challenger to Reagan would likely come from Congress, and aides to the Republican leadership in both the House and Senate say they have not heard any talk along those lines.

And many conservatives point out that a challenge to Reagan would increase the election chances of the Democratic candidate next year, and that all contenders for the party's nomination are more liberal than Reagan. The National Conservative Political Action Committee is proceeding with its planned multi-million dollar campaign to secure Reagan's re-election.

"He is the most articulate, most charming, most aggressive conservative we've had, possibly since Theodore Roosevelt," said Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., one of the more conservative members of the House. "There's no reason to waste our energies on an internal civil war." Gingrich is one of many Republicans who say they wish Reagan had taken stronger action against the Soviets.

Rep. Phil Crane, R-Ill., a veteran conservative, is on record for tough sanctions against Russia. Even so, says a spokesman, "He hopes he'll (Reagan) run for re-election and he'll support him."

So far, Reagan has demanded an explanation and reparation payments, but his main action against the Soviet government has been to severely curtail operations of Aeroflot, the Russian airline.

The anti-Reagan rhetoric is roughest among conservatives who are not elected politicians.

"It's clear that just about every conservative I know thinks that Reagan's response is incredibly inadequate to the challenge," says Phillips, head of the Conservative Caucus. "It's less than we would expect from Jimmy Carter."

But when Viguerie raised the idea of supporting another conservative against Reagan, the response was lukewarm. Several people said Viguerie raised the idea last week at a breakfast at his house.

"I was asked to join in that effort and I declined," said Paul Weyrich, a prominent New Right leader and head of the Committee for the Survival of a Free Congress.

Soviet fighters or that any warnings — visual, radio, gunfire — were given," the State Department said.

At the White House, where an earlier translation of the Soviet communications was released on Tuesday, President Reagan's principal spokesman Larry Speakes could not be reached for comment. The press duty officer, Kevin Haggard, said, "The White House doesn't have anything to add to it or clarify it with."

Senate Republican leader Howard H. Baker Jr. said, "Even if you accept the idea that these were warning shots, it is still no justification by any stretch of the imagination for downing a civilian airliner."

"But in all fairness, from that conversation I can't tell whether those were tracer bullets," Baker, R-Tenn. said on CBS-TV's Face the Nation. "I really don't think there's any point in trying to determine that. I do not think it changes the gruesome nature of the Soviet assault on the plane."

Asked if he suspected the South Korean plane was on an intelligence mission, as the Soviets have charged, Baker said, "I have no such information, no such suspicion." He added he has received "absolute assurances" from U.S. officials that the plane was not spying.

The Soviet Union has insisted that its pilots tried, first by radio and then by firing warning cannon bursts with tracer shells, to signal the aircraft that had intruded into Soviet airspace. The Kremlin contends the plane was on a spy mission.

In a rare two-hour news conference Friday, Soviet Marshal Nikolai Ogarkov said four bursts of warning shots with 120 tracer rounds were fired at 18:20 Greenwich Mean Time (GMT), which coincides with the time on the new State Department transcript. The transcript quotes the interceptor pilot, identified only as "805," as reporting to his ground controllers, "I have broken off lock-on. I am firing cannon bursts."

The earlier transcript had quoted him only as saying he was switching off his missile lock-on, a device used to select a heat-seeking missile's target.

Shooting down the human

Suddenly, as with a lightening flash, an event reveals in all its starkness the nature of a regime and its military and political mentality. That happened with the Soviet act in the fatal destruction of the Korean passenger jet.

Max Lerner

The Max Lerner Column

By any logic of law, politics or power it was an idiotic act. By any logic in humanity it was a debased one.

But adjectives won't bring the 269 dead back to life nor affect the cast of mind that shot the plane down. We lack a Zola to hurl a searing j'accuse at the Soviet Politburo. The Russians who might do it - Solzhenitsyn, Sakharov, Anatoly, Shcharansky - are in exile or prison.

Yuri Andropov may well be dismayed at the widespread sense of outrage which may leave his skillfully wrought propaganda structure in shambles. If he is upbraiding his generals he must reflect that he is in power through their support and will hold it ultimately at their sufferance. Both Soviet external rhetoric and its defense policies are part of an overall grand strategy. It is not only the military mentality of Soviet leadership which is involved but its basic mentality.

It is this consistency of the Soviet fabric that Western and Third World intellectuals miss. The hard evidence of the Soviet ground control directing the fighter pilot to destroy the "target" will also leave them unmoved.

There is much talk of "punishing" the Russians, and of a whole punitive agenda, including cancellation of the grain deal and exclusion of Soviet planes from American airports.

But this is panic nonsense. The real punishment, if it ever comes, will come from a shift in the world perception of Russian "peace and friendship" rhetoric.

American policy has too often swung between extremes of detente and confrontation, depending on whether honeyed words or brutal actions were foremost in the news. The Jimmy Carter who declared himself shocked by the Afghanistan takeover was the Jimmy Carter who had come into office determined on military disengagement in South Korea. The leaders who became disillusioned about the Soviet mentality are those who start with illusions.

In the 1950's and 1960's there was talk of a new "Soviet man" - disciplined, committed, unalienated. Marx himself in his early writings had foreseen a more "humanist" man who would come out of the revolutions.

It hasn't happened. What has emerged instead is a disciplined, dehumanized automaton. In cases where the human impulse sought to assert itself it has been quelled. A knowledgeable American intelligence expert speaks of six air defense colonels in the Soviet Far East who were "shot for failure to shoot down American aircraft."

It is a chilling thing to reflect on what this might mean in the event of a nuclear accident. The Soviet Union has not yet joined in a world community of human values. We shall have to come to terms with this reality and not permit it to destroy the necessary East-West relations - and especially the arms reduction talks.

They rest not on illusions about the Soviet reality but on the imperatives of the human in all of us.

U.N. worthless

Dear Editor,

Although C. Maxwell Stanley is correct in his assertion that the U.S. response to the most recent events in Chad is the wrong one, his alternative of allowing the hopes of peace-starved Chadians to rest in the earphones of the U.N. Security Council is value-less. Too many conflicts of the past have simply become the stage on which diplomats exercise rhetorical devices. Chad deserves better than this.

Having spent two years as a Peace Corps Volunteer in Chad, I know the suffering and heartache with which most Chadians share their meagre quarters. But international bodies - by their very nature of being grandiose forums - have no solace to offer. They have merely speeches and resolutions which, sad to admit, ultimately have no bearing on what takes place in these quarters.

The Chadian problem will only be solved by Chadian and other African states, when the reason for considering this landlocked tract as one sovereign nation shines forth in the eyes of those tribes who live there. Nothing else will work.

Neither U.S. AWACS nor French paratroopers, nor even well-intentioned U.N. bureaucrats have anything to offer Chad but more suffering, heartache, and death. This is one country where international intervention (least of all, of the military variety) is clearly not helpful and - given mounting lists of casualties - doubtlessly harmful.

Stone throwers

Dear Editor,

This past Saturday as I was walking towards the Memorial Library Building I came past the Administration Building. At the front entrance I found a piece of cardboard lying in the sidewalk. The inscription read: SOVIET UNI-

ON - KILLER OF INNOCENT PEOPLE. After people are sincerely mourning the deaths of the airplane passengers. The majority of American people - and certainly America's leading politicians - are using this incident to ring-in yet another round in the Cold War fighting.

What would have been an appropriate sign of mourning? How about some introspection. How often has the United States purposely killed innocent people? How often has the United States murdered?

What did Jesus say - and I don't think that it is inappropriate to remind the University of Notre Dame community of Jesus's words - to those who caught the woman in adultery? Jesus said: "Whichever one of you has committed no sin may throw the first stone at the Soviet Union." (Paraphrase of John 8:7)

Who is that lady with the paint brush?

by Nick Laflamme

Drifting across campus, one often comes across people recording their impressions of Notre Dame in forms more permanent than their memories. Some are alumni snapping pictures of their families on the old stomping grounds, while others are artists trying to capture the beauty of the scenery on canvas. Many of the artists, and photographers fall short of their goals simply because of a lack of skill or dedication. Others, however, experience artistic success which often brings them financial reward.

Mrs. Helene Pike is one such artist. The wife of a Notre Dame history professor, Mrs. Pike is quietly building a reputation on campus as a talented artist despite having painted for only four years. Often seen occupying the same spot for days on end during the late afternoon hours, Mrs. Pike started painting after retiring as a music teacher in the local school system. She took an art class as a way of getting out of the house, and soon discovered a hidden talent. Her painting ability was especially surprising to her, because she has no "visual memory," no remembrance of what she sees.

Mrs. Pike especially tries to emphasize the soft coloring of the buildings in her paintings, creating a muted effect. Because of this style, many have described her work as being impressionistic in nature.

Mrs. Pike's muted colors have brought her a degree of both financial artistic and financial success. She does accept commissions, and has no qualms about painting whatever building is wanted. Recently the Law School chose two of her paintings to be displayed in the new law center in London, which was dedicated this past summer. Still, she doesn't consider that to be the greatest honor the University could confer upon her. She would love to have the Notre Dame magazine publish one of her paintings in color, but even that would not be her idea of the ultimate honor. To this fan of Notre Dame, having one of her paintings reproduced in a football program would be her greatest triumph.

Capturing the campus's color on canvas, Mrs. Helene Pike paints the law building among other Notre Dame buildings.

Fine acting and techniques take risk out of business

by Stephen Thomas

With so many recent "teen-age" comedies following a traditional formula of shallow plots, slapstick humor and meaningless sex, writer-director Paul Brickman saw a need for something in this genre. This summer, Brickman has given us Risky Business, a flashy satire about a high school senior who turns his house into a neighborhood party center when his parents leave for a weekend vacation.

Tom Cruise plays Joel Goodson (good son), a "nice guy" who works hard in school and is not known for being party-oriented. When Joel's parents tell him they're leaving for a weekend, he thinks nothing of it. His friends, however, encourage him to take advantage of the empty house and put his books aside for awhile. Vulnerable Joel gives in.

While such a story line may seem all too familiar, "Risky Business" puts forth an extra effort that makes it a little less usual and a little more creative. At times, it seems almost artsy or new wave, like a musical video disc.

Much credit must be given to the film's stars, a very impressive collection of fresh talent. Tom Cruise, whom the film's ad describes as a model son, does an excellent job of conveying his fears, confusion and guilt over the events that take place during his weekend spree. Rebecca de Mornay plays a prostitute who visits Joel on his first night alone, but soon drags him into her red-light district world. Her character portrayal, like most of prostitutes, was not stale and impared. de Mornay prevents her character from dropping to a one dimensional level. Throughout the film she changes in her role from being Joel's "call girl," to his business woman, and then finally his friend.

Camera artist Bruce Surtees makes effective use of certain techniques to emphasize specific qualities of the film's characters, such as using close-up shots to emphasize the dominance of Joel's parents.

Selected songs from groups such as Bob Seger, the Police and a riveting theme from Tangerine Dream are a definite plus for the film.

Risky Business, a combination of fine acting and superior technical quality, is well worth the high price of admission.

M*A*S*H: the secret to college survival

by Chris Fraser

We have been in school two weeks already. We have added classes (tentatively). We have dropped classes (ker-plunk). We have meticulously manicured our new rooms. We have maliciously messed up the same. We are reacquainted with acquaintances and once again are straight about everyone's names. Most certainly, the excitement of being home again in Indiana has begun to fade and I for one am ready to settle into something resembling a routine.

Toward this end, I now know when and where my new classes are. I know when and where my new roommates like to sleep. And I still remember when and where there are long lines at the dining hall. Indeed, there's only one more thing I need to know in order to face the bulk of school year 1983-84. When is MASH on?

Of course, I'm not talking about premiere episodes. We all know that the network series officially ended last winter. (What was that last date trivia buff? Hint: February 28.)

Besides, those prime time shows weren't the staples of my MASH diet anyway. And surely I'm not talking about After MASH, that potentially dreadful new series that CBS is producing in an effort to cash in on the good name of MASH. A rehash of MASH one might call it, and an unfortunate one at that. I'm afraid it might even be bad enough to get me over to the library.

Obviously, what I'm referring to are those delightful previously-aired MASH episodes that grace the airwaves twice or thrice daily around the country. Yes, these episodes are previously-aired but the degrading and insulting label re-run is hardly appropriate for such classics of the electronic medium. Re-run suggests old, unwanted, cancelled, and endlessly redundant. The Brady Bunch (another family crisis in paradise) and Gilligan's Island (not another near rescue) have re-runs. And even those older classics like The Honey Mooners and Leave It to Beaver which may be entertaining to a new generation are re-runs. Black and white transmission, dated clothes, and hunky-dory themes makes us laugh at these shows as often as we laugh with them.

"Previously-aired," on the other hand, is a term that fits MASH well. It at once suggests the appealing cockiness of a Hawkeye Pierce and the downright stuffiness of a Charles Winchester.

Anyway, back to my original question: when is MASH on? Clearly, my lack of knowledge in this area indicates a sad delinquency in my school preparations but things have been pretty hectic lately. Yes, yes I know the legions of loyal MASH watchers will claim that such disloyalty is inexcusable or even treasonous and to these people I humbly apologize.

For the past three years, my dinner, studying, and social schedules have depended on those two crucial half-hours when MASH is shown. Alas, the abnormalities of our borderline time zone (are we on Chicago time or New York time, wait does that mean it's 4 o'clock in Michigan or 6?) causes MASH to move around anywhere between 4 and 7, forever dodging the local and national news. Thus, from week to week, one can never be quite sure if a quick bite at 4:30 or a leisurely supper at 5:30 is the most prudent of dinner plans.

Is watching MASH really all that important? While certainly it won't save the world or your GPA, there are other benefits of loyal MASH watching that cannot be ignored. For instance, who can argue with schlumping on the couch for a couple of half hours? Indeed, a bit of procrastination is a highly practical argument for the watching of MASH. And as Bill Cosby's Fat Albert used to say: if you're not careful you might learn something. Through the humor, a glimpse of war's horrors does, at times, emerge. And we all may even learn to surpass the Frank Burns in each of us. After all, no one wants to be selfish, petty, materialistic, and a ferret face. Finally regular MASH viewing gives us that invaluable sense of schedule and routine that Dean Emil reminds us is so important for we college types. Which of course brings me once again to my problem: when is MASH on? I suspect I'll find out soon enough.

College Football roundup

Penn State drops second straight

(AP) — College football's first full weekend produced few surprises — except for Penn State's 14-3 loss to Cincinnati — but there was lots of nostalgia.

After a moment of silence and an invocation in the memory of the legendary Bear Bryant, 14th-ranked Alabama, under Ray Perkins for the first time, scored at 1:35 and went on to defeat Georgia Tech 20-7.

"I felt the same way I felt on the bus coming here Friday night," Perkins said. "As in HIS seat. I felt like I was walking on HIS field. I wanted to win this game more than any I've ever been associated with."

Meanwhile, No. 5 Notre Dame got four touchdowns from Greg Bell, two scoring passes from Blair Kiel, and forced seven Purdue turnovers in thrashing the Boiler makers 52-7.

Penn State's embarrassment by Cincinnati gave Joe Paterno an 0-2 record for the first time in his 18 seasons as coach of the Nittany Lions and left him so speechless that he failed to appear for his customary post-game radio interview.

The only other member of The Associated Press Top Twenty to lose over the weekend was No. 13 LSU, which blew a 14-0 first-quarter lead and bowed to No. 12 Florida State 40-35. Meanwhile, ninth-ranked Southern California and No. 18 Florida played to a 19-19 tie. The game marked Ted Tollner's debut as Southern Cal coach.

In other games, top-rated Nebraska pounded Wyoming 56-20, runner-up Oklahoma beat Stanford 27-14, No. 4 Auburn downed Southern Mississippi 24-3, sixth-ranked Michigan edged Washington State 20-17, No. 7 Ohio State trounced Oregon 31-6, and No. 8 North Carolina beat Memphis State 24-10. Third-ranked Texas and No. 10 Georgia were not scheduled.

In the Second Ten, 11th-ranked Arizona walloped Utah 38-0, No. 15 Southern Methodist held off Grambling 20-13, No. 16 Iowa blitzed Iowa State 51-10, No. 17 Maryland defeated Vanderbilt 21-17, and No. 19 Washington breezed over Northwestern 34-0.

Alabama recovered a fumble at the Georgia Tech 20-yard line on the game's third play, and three plays later, Walter Lewis whipped a 15-yard touchdown pass to Joe Carter to get Perkins and the Crimson Tide rolling.

Walk-on freshman Van Tiffin kicked two field goals, while Stan Gay returned a blocked punt 32 yards for Alabama's other touchdown.

In handing Purdue its worst loss in 13 years, Notre Dame got off quickly when Bell caught a 9-yard touchdown pass from Kiel on the Irish's first possession and scored on a 1-yard run later in the opening period. Bell also had touchdown runs of 2 and 5 yards, while alternate tailback Allen Pinkett rushed for 115 yards on 15 carries.

Cincinnati's Troy Bodine completed 25 of 36 passes for 261 yards against Penn State and took advantage of two fumbles by the Lions' Kevin Baugh. Early in the second period, Bodine threw an 11-yard touchdown pass to Bill Booze after Baugh fumbled on a punt return. Baugh fumbled following a 27-yard return of the kickoff, and less than two minutes later, Cincinnati scored on Don Gooden's 8-yard run.

Mike Rozier scored four touchdowns and carried 19 times for 191 yards against Wyoming to set a Nebraska career rushing record of 2,894 yards as the Cornhuskers extended the nation's longest winning streak to 12 games.

Oklahoma's Marcus Dupree rushed for 138 yards and backup tailback Earl Johnson scored on runs of 16 and 33 yards as the Sooners downed Stanford.

Lionel James rushed for 172 yards, including an 8-yard touchdown, and Bo Jackson scored twice, leading Auburn past Southern Mississippi.

With quarterback Steve Smith sidelined, Michigan's Dave Hall filled in and passed 6 yards to Eddie Garrett for a first-period touchdown and ran 4 yards at the 6:10 mark of the final quarter, lifting the heavily favored Wolverines over Washington State.

Ohio State's Mike Toczak completed 21 of 25 passes for a career-high 276 yards and four touchdowns.

sca nper by tailback Allen Pinkett through a massive hole opened up by Shiner and guard Tim Scannell.

One play later, Greg Bell, Pinkett's replacement, caught a pass in the flat from Blair Kiel, made a sharp cut at the five-yard line, leaving a Boiler-maker defender grasping air, and scooted into the end zone for a nine-yard score. It was the first of four touchdowns for the junior Bell, who, after gaining 95 yards in 20 carries last year against Michigan, had to sit out the rest of the season because of an ankle injury suffered against Purdue the next week.

"I wanted to redeem myself," said Bell, who gave high marks to the offensive line for helping make it possible.

Bell also scored Notre Dame's second touchdown in the first quarter on a two-yard dive, capping a seven-play, 41-yard drive. Kiel's clutch 18-yard pass to Mike Favorite on a third-and-eight situation was the key play of the drive.

A 31-yard field goal by Mike Johnston ended the first quarter scoring.

The turning point of the game, if there is such a thing in a 46-point rout, may have come in Purdue's first possession in the second quarter. Scott Campbell drove the Boiler-makers 65 yards in 11 plays to the Notre Dame 15-yard line. Like last year, it looked like Campbell would be able to rally his troops before halftime. But on a fourth and inches situation, the defensive line stuffed Campbell's quarterback-sneak attempt, and, with that, Purdue's only momentum of the game.

With 1:42 left in the half, Bell scored his third touchdown on a two-yard sweep. The 52-yard, seven play drive featured an 18-yard burst up the middle by fullback Chris

Smith. The drive was set up by tackle Greg Dingens' interception of a Campbell pass.

The final first-half tally came on a 17-yard Kiel pass to tight end Mark Bavaro in the end zone with 33 seconds left. It was Bavaro's first ever Notre Dame reception.

Linebacker Tony Furjanic set up the drive with a spectacular diving interception of a Campbell pass at the Notre Dame 48-yard line.

Kiel, who completed 9-of-14 passes for 166 yards and two touchdowns, showed that complacency with a 31-0 lead would not be Notre Dame's style this year as he launched a 61-yard rainbow to flanker Milt Jackson on the fourth play of the second half. Pinkett, who led all rushers with 115 yards in 15 carries dove over from the one on the next play.

Sophomore defensive back Pat Ballage was one of the most people remember Ballage as the kick returner who accidentally downed a kickoff on the one against Penn State, but it will not be long before that incident is forgotten.

Ballage had been warned all week long that he was going to be a target of Scott Campbell's passing — and he was ready.

"I was anticipating that they'd be coming at me," said Ballage, "but I wasn't scared. Players like Kovaleski and myself are anxious to do real well."

There was not as much action his way as was expected, but he was able to come up with an interception off a tip by Kovaleski.

"We're coming together real well," Ballage said. "We're starting to know what everyone is doing on defense."

What two more new starters, Mike Golic and Greg Dingens, were doing on defense was making life difficult for Campbell and his replacement, Jim Everett.

Dingens, making his first start at contain tackle, and Golic, holding down the end spot after filling in for Kevin Griffith last year, teamed up for two turnovers. Dingens sacked campbell twice, and Golic intercepted a Campbell pass. The two linemen also played

... Purdue

A Tim Marshall fumble recovery set up Notre Dame's sixth touchdown. The six-play, 39-yard drive was capped up by Bell's five-yard touchdown run in which he somehow managed to weave through four Boiler naker defenders.

The final Notre Dame touchdown came on a three-yard run by freshman Byron Abraham which concluded a seven-play, 80-yard drive. Fellow freshman tailback Hiawatha Francisco picked up 33 yards on one run while Groons picked up 25 yards on a bootleg. It was on this play that Groons fractured his collarbone.

Purdue avoided the shutout when crowd favorite Jim Everett marched the Boiler makers 70 yards in 11 plays. It was a long day for Campbell as he completed only seven of his 18 tosses for 89 yards and three interceptions.

"You have to give credit to the defensive line and linebackers for the way they put the pressure on the quarterback," said free safety Chris Brown, who combined with Pat Ballage for two interceptions.

"We set a goal of scoring 40 or more points in this game," said Pinkett. "It was like an unattainable goal and I didn't dream that we'd reach it, but you set high goals so that you will strive to reach them."

If the Irish can keep improving like Faust wants them too, no goal may be out of reach for them this year.

major role in a good pass rush that forced Campbell to hurry his passes early in the game and made it a very forgettable day for the unfairly-maligned quarterback.

There may not have been as many new faces on offense as there were on defense, but two of the newest played a big part in the offense.

Tim Scannell, a sophomore who is taking over at left guard for Mike Kelley who has moved to center, let his presence be felt early as he and Mike Shiner took out the Purdue line on the first offensive series of the game. Allen Pinkett walked through the canyon they had created for 35 yards.

In all, Irish backs rushed for 349 yards, a testament to the effectiveness of their blockers.

Then there was Mark Bavaro, the heir apparent to Tony Hunter at tight end. While he did not make the number of catches that Hunter used to make, he did one thing Hunter could not do at all last year — catch a touchdown pass.

So, obviously, things look bright for the future. If the new guard continues to improve like it should, there will not be any weaknesses for the opponents to exploit.

Faust gets tougher as Irish destroy Purdue

By LOUIE SOMOGYI

WEST LAFYETTE, Ind. — It was a changed Gerry Faust that greeted the press after Saturday's 52-6 drubbing of old nemesis Purdue, a game which was one of the greatest displays of all-around football in Faust's coaching regime. After last year's opening game win over Michigan — a contest not decided until the final minutes of the game — Faust's post-game interview included such statements as, "Oh didn't our young men play fantastically," and, "I don't think we could have done anything better than we did tonight."

Faust was not as complacent of his team this time around despite the near shutout and 522 yards of total offense against a Purdue team that, after the game, he called "a good team."

The killer instinct philosophy which Faust stressed so much to his players last spring and this fall was also evident in Faust during the post-game press conference.

"It was a good victory, but we made a lot of mistakes and have to get ourselves in better shape," said Faust. "We've got to do better than that. We were just fortunate with the breaks (seven Purdue turnovers)."

Faust then listed the three dreaded elements that the team must avoid the rest of the year in order to be the best it can be — injuries, overconfidence, and complacency resulting in a lack of improvement.

Injury, unfortunately, is not as easy to avoid as the other two. In what was the lone sad news for the Irish on Saturday, second-string quarterback Scott Groons fractured his right collarbone and will be out of action for several weeks. Offensive tackle Mike Shiner also suffered a knee injury, but is expected to be in better shape later in the week.

On this day, though, it was Purdue that suffered almost all the pain.

"It was just a total shock," said Purdue Head Coach Leon Burnett. "Our whole staff can't believe it. We really thought this team was ready to play. We covered everything with the team and they just didn't execute."

It took Purdue five possessions and one quarter before registering its first first down without the aid of a penalty. By that time Notre Dame was sitting on a 17-0 advantage.

The tone of the game was set in the opening possessions when the Irish offensive and defensive lines simply dominated the opposing Boilermaker units.

The domination was perhaps best reflected in terms of field position. Of the eight Purdue possessions in the first half, six of them began at or inside its own 20-yard line. Meanwhile, Notre Dame began four of its seven first half possessions at or beyond its own 48-yard line.

It took Notre Dame less than two minutes and seven plays to travel 57 yards in its opening possession. Highlighting the drive was a 35-yard

Soccer team gets first win of year

By JEFF BLUMB

It wasn't, by any stretch of the imagination, your ordinary soccer game. That is, unless one considers 9-0 to be a normal soccer score. And the full house at Cartier Field Friday night saw a less than usual Notre Dame win over St. Francis (Ind.).

At the outset, this game looked to be another one of those match-ups where one team has most of their players settle in for a game-long conversation with their own goalie, never really bothering to attack.

It appeared that the Cougars of St. Francis didn't really care if they ever scored, but only wanted to make it through the game alive.

"We've seen this so many times," commented Irish coach Rich Hunter, "where the other team will just take all of their guys and push the way back."

"We just told our guys to spread the game out more. We told the wings to play outside of the white lines. And as you saw, we had so many beautiful crosses because of this."

By game's end, Hunter's strategy was working perfect. After working themselves out to a 2-0 halftime lead on goals by Mark Bidinger and Steve Ryan, the Irish stormed for seven second half goals.

Eight minutes into the second half, senior Ken Harkenrider tallied the first of his two goals, taking a Bill Beasley cross 25 yards out and driving a shot into the lower right corner.

Less than a minute later, St. Francis mounted their only real threat of the night when it appeared they had scored to bring the score to 3-1. That goal, however, was taken away a moment later when it was decided by the referees that a Cougar player had been blatantly offside on the play.

Junior Rich Herdegen came back with a tap-in goal five minutes later to start a Notre Dame scoring spree.

Harkenrider and Beasley then teamed up again to bring the Irish lead to 5-1. Beasley barely saved the ball from going over the end line, in the same motion sending a nifty pass out front to Harkenrider, who promptly slammed it home.

Harkenrider then got the second of his two assists four minutes later, dishing off to senior Mark Luetkehans, who drilled it in from the top right corner of the box.

At this point, Hunter began freely substituting his players, giving a number of the squad's younger members a chance to see some action.

Hunter's only restraint in making these substitutions was a standard limitation of using 18 players in a game. This limitation, however, can be waived if both of the opposing coaches agree to do so. For some unknown reason, the St. Francis coach decided that he did not want to waive the limitation, but rather have much of the Notre Dame first-string play the entire game.

One of the reserves who did happen to get into the game, freshman Pat Szanto, went on to have the biggest night of any Irish player. Szanto, a forward out of Poughkeepsie, N.Y., notched the hat trick, three goals, in the game's final 13 1/2 minutes.

Meeting the challenge

New faces fare surprisingly well

By MIKE SULLIVAN

When the 1983 Notre Dame football team took the field on Saturday, there were many familiar faces missing. Hunter, Zavanin, Clabby, Duerson, Griffith, and Larkin were just some of the players who were not in the starting lineup against the usually-tough Boilermakers.

In their stead were names like Kovaleski, Furjanic, Bavaro, Ballage, Dingens, Golic, and Scannell. And there was not any question about whose inexperience Purdue was going to try to exploit.

In the wake of a 52-6 slaughter, though, Purdue must be thinking that Larkin, Duerson, and company were back in Notre Dame uniforms.

Freshman Mike Kovaleski, replacing the injured Mike Larkin, the player who was expected to lead the team in tackles this year, was the most impressive.

Not only did Kovaleski make up for Larkin's absence by making a team-leading 10 tackles (Rick Naylor also had 10), but he also tipped two passes, which resulted in one interception and another near-interception.

"I made some mistakes," said Kovaleski after his first college game, "and I have a lot to work on, but I'm pretty well pleased."

He was not the only one pleased with his performance. Coach George Kelly, who coaches Kovaleski, was understandably happy. Losing a player like Larkin can cause one to lose some sleep.

"I told Mike he became 21 in a hurry," said Kelly. "He's got lots of physical talent, but it's important for him to mature extremely rapidly."

"He's a pretty cool kid," said Gerry Faust. "He's a competitor. He had to come through for us and he did."

Kovaleski was not the only player that had to come through for the Irish, however. Sophomore Middle Linebacker Tony Furjanic has some big shoes to fill also. His job is to pick up where Bob Crable and Mark Zavanin left off. No easy task considering that Crable and Zavanin led the team in tackles over the last four years.

But, like Kovaleski, he came through when needed, collecting six tackles and making a tremendous diving interception that led to a touchdown.

"It was really important for the two of them to be successful," said Kelly of his young linebackers. "Both of them have the ability, so it was nothing I did with them."

Kelly does deserve much credit despite what he says. Defensive coordinator Jim Johnson also played a major role in their rapid growth, but perhaps the most important contribution was by the rest of the squad who were encouraging the new linebackers.

"The kids were a great help," said Kelly. "They encouraged the guys real hard and were always patting them on the back."

While most of the attention centered around the play of Kovaleski and Furjanic, however, there were a number of other players who were starting for the first time.
