Fall Festival planned, to become yearly event

By JACK AMARO
News Staff

Will Fall Fest become a Notre Dame tradition?

The Fall Festival, replacing the homecoming day as a fall campus activity, will become an annual event beginning this year the week before the Notre Dame-Pitt football game.

Tina Persson and Liza Salvador, co-chairmen of the festival predict the event will be a success and as a result it will be continued every fall.

The Student Senate first suggested last year having a fall counterpart to An Tostal. Persson said, "homecoming the last two years have been failures." Students were to attend the football game and then attend a concert or eat dinner afterwards. However, "not too many people went to the concert or dinner," according to Persson. The festival will differ from the homecoming day because "instead of being one activity in one specific day this is going to be a whole week of activities. We believe that different kinds of people will participate in different kinds of activities," Persson commented.

Salvador said even though the activities will resemble the spring festival format, "We did not want to mimic An Tostal. Our activities are totally different."

One of those activities which the Fall Festival will introduce is a tug-of-war contest in which one dorm may challenge any other dorm. Another new event will be a New

Senate crushes Helms' attempt to block holiday honoring King

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate, in a bitter revival of the civil rights debates of the 1960s, crushed 76 to 12 on Tuesday efforts by Republican Jesse Helms to block establishment of a federal holiday honoring the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Leading a small group of conservatives, the North Carolina Senator said King's affiliations with "far left elements and elements of the Communist Party USA" disqualified him for status as a national hero.

Supporters of a holiday to celebrate the civil rights leader's birthday denounced Helms for running a "smear campaign."

Even as Helms argued on the Senate floor, a federal judge considered his appeal for release of sealed FBI files. Helms said those documents would further his case that King was influenced by top aides in the civil rights movement who were communists.

U.S. District Judge John Lewis Smith Jr. heard arguments from lawyers for Helms who said the Senate should be given access to wiretap files from 1963 to 1968 before Congress decides whether King, a Nobel Prize winner, should be honored with a holiday.

King was assassinated on the balcony of a Memphis, Tenn., motel April 4, 1968.

The Senate was scheduled to vote Wednesday on the holiday legislation itself, and Republican officials said it is expected to be approved by a wide margin.

Before the Senate voted against sending the bill back to committee, Helms sparked a personal exchange with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., when he recalled that Kennedy's own brothers were concerned with King's alleged link to communists.

Helms said the late President John F. Kennedy, cautioned King about the communist background of his advisers, and that the late Robert F. Kennedy, approved FBI wiretaps on King's residences and hotel rooms when Robert was attorney general.

"His argument is not with me," said Helms, peering across the chamber at Kennedy. "His argument is with his own dead brother who was the president, and with his dead brother, who was the attorney general."

Later, Kennedy, his face flushed and his voice quivering with emotion, replied, "I am appalled at the attempt of some to misappropriate the memory of my brother Robert Kennedy and misuse it as part of a smear campaign."

Kennedy said his brother Robert would have been among the first to support a holiday in honor of King "whom he regarded as the greatest prophet of our time and one of the greatest Americans of all time."

"At no time did the FBI have any evidence that he (King) was a communist or was controlled by communists," Kennedy said.

He said a special Senate committee set up in the 1970s to investigate CIA and FBI abuses of the 1960s had found that the late FBI director J. Edgar Hoover had run a "reckless campaign" against King, but turned up nothing to show any foreign control or influence over the Southern Christian Leadership Conference which King headed.

The House voted 338 to 90 on Aug. 2 to set aside the third Monday in January as a paid federal holiday by a vote of 338 to 90.

Students claim Marriott bar raid tied to upcoming mayoral election

By JOSEPH MURPHY
News Staff

Some of the students issued citations for underage drinking at the South Bend Marriott Hotel have said they believe the recent raids are politically motivated.

The raid occurred last Thursday night at the South Bend Marriott's "Tankard" night. Eleven Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students were issued citations for underage drinking.

"The raid was because the elections are coming up," said one of the students involved.

Another student who was also issued a citation took this statement a step further commenting, "It makes sense because the Marriott's has never been raided before and the elections coming up. The mayor wants to say he's cutting down on underage drinking."

"That's a fairly serious allegation," responded city attorney Richard Hill. He added, "(South Bend Mayor Roger Parent) is never aware of raids before they occur. He at no time had any contact with the South Bend Police and the excise officers (who conducted the raid)."

Parent was unavailable for comment.

Sgt. J. Keene, one of the excise officers who participated in the raid stated, "We initiated the raid, not the South Bend Police. We received anonymous complaints, checked their validity, and conducted the raid. The result was citations for 13 minors."

Not all of the students given citations see any connection between the raid and the election. "If the police thought there was a lot of underage drinking, they would raid. Isn't that motive enough?"

"Maybe it's because it was at the Marriott that it's gotten so much press," said another student issued a

SMC Board seeks shuttle solution

By SARAH WRIGHT
News Staff

The Saint Mary's Board of Governance met earlier this week to discuss, among other topics, the shuttle-University Village controversy.

It was agreed that representatives from both the housing area and Saint Mary's will meet after break to decide upon a workable solution to the current shuttle route problems.

Also covered at the meeting was Saint Mary's Womens' Opportunity Week, scheduled to begin on Nov. 14. The week will feature the opportunity for all Saint Mary's and Notre Dame women to learn about current available careers and choices they will be making when entering the working world. Guest speakers, to be announced later, will also be featured, and all students are encouraged to attend.

The Ad Hoc Housing Committee will be discussing the possibility of interclass housing in which seniors, juniors, sophomores and freshmen would all share the same dorms. Many students, and especially upperclassmen, have complained to the Board because this proposal would mean the possibility of living in Regina Hall for more than one year.

The Saint Mary's Oxfam fast, scheduled for Nov. 17, will be conducting sign-ups the week prior to the event. The fast will be held from Nov. 16 at 9:00 P.M. until Nov. 17 at 9:00 P.M., and the money raised will go to Oxfam, a non-profit organization concerned with helping needy people. It was mentioned that it is important to sign up for the fast early so the cost can be estimated.

An oral survey will be taken Nov. 9-10 in the SMC dining hall. This survey has been proposed in order to obtain student feedback on a variety of topics including their opinions of the monthly events calendar, movies, and other activities, and those that they would like to see more often.

Another Five-Hall dance has been planned for Jan. 21 at the Haggard College Center. The last dance was reported to have been very successful.

Also on the agenda was Halloween, the first weeknight back from break. Everyone at Saint Mary's is reminded to bring back candy from break, because underprivileged children will be trick-or-treating in the dorms from 6-8 P.M.

The meeting concluded with Dr. Mary Ellen DePauw, director of Saint Mary's counseling and career development, speaking on "stress management."

DePauw suggested that students planning a busy academic week should try to get into a vigorous exercise routine and should also leave some spare time for leisure, meditation, prayer, and sleep.

She concluded by advising students looking to alleviate stress to try to make positive life choices and account for her own needs, desires and idiosyncracies. Above all, she emphasized the need to keep a sense of humor and to keep things in perspective.

Astronomer Carl Sagan says that earthlings now have 8.4 million radio channels to scan in the search for sounds from life on other worlds. Sagan, a Cornell University professor and president of the Planetary Society, said Monday that a "universe-scanning system" called META (Megachannel Extra-Terrestrial Assay) has been established at Harvard. It can search millions of frequencies, monitoring 1 to 20 billion hertz, by sweeping a small band of sky near Polaris, the north star. Because of the vast distances involved, "there would be no dialogue, only monologue," Sagan said. "They talk, and we listen." With a grant from the Planetary Society, users of the program now can monitor about 8.4 million frequencies the next four years using cheap, lightweight microchip technology, he said. The Los Angeles Herald Examiner interviewed Sagan by telephone from Ithaca, N.Y., where he spoke on META to the Division of Planetary Sciences of the American Astronomical Society. AP

Pope John Paul II held a historic meeting Tuesday with Prime Minister Olof Palme of Sweden, which restored relations with the Holy See in 1982 after a lapse of 455 years. "It was very fascinating to speak to the pope about the problems of peace, democracy and social justice," Palme said. He said he believed he was the first Swedish prime minister ever to meet a pope. Sweden broke with Rome in 1527 during the Protestant Reformation. The pope, meanwhile, told a group of bishops from Quebec that he will visit Canada, probably next September. AP

Monaco's Princess Caroline, daughter of the late Princess Grace, on Tuesday visited patients at the Princess Grace Hospital, which was opened by her mother in 1977. The 26-year-old princess opened a new intensive care unit and was officially named patron of the 130-bed private hospital, succeeding her mother, who died last year. "I am delighted to be here and follow my mother's interest in the hospital," she told Terry Miles, an American patient. AP

Former "Saturday Night Live" comedian Garrett Morris cut short his appearance at a college homecoming after 100 patrons walked out and a dean interrupted his act to tell him it was too obscene. "The trip wasn't lost. I certainly learned a lot," Morris said later. Morris was telling jokes about college, parties and the differences between the sexes Friday night before about 600 people at East Tennessee State University in Johnson City. Carl Purvis, president of the Student Government Association, said sponsors were looking for an entertainer who "would appeal to an entire audience; who would uphold an exciting, wholesome atmosphere for homecoming." But people started walking out on Morris and Dorman Stout, the dean of student affairs, interrupted him in the middle of his act and told him to "tone down" his material. Morris returned to the stage a few minutes later and told the audience, "You're going to get a much shorter show than planned." After the show, a group of students went backstage to apologize to Morris. Despite the flap, Morris said he was willing to return someday to entertain at the college. — AP

Last call for ND?

Is the tap finally going to be turned off at Notre Dame?

After many years without having university regulations forbidding alcohol on campus, the Administration is beginning a process which will probably lead to much stricter rules concerning alcohol, possibly even to forbidding underage drinking anywhere on campus.

A dry campus? At Notre Dame? No, how could it be? Well, it's been that way before and it can be that way again. Even now, underage drinking is not authorized on campus (surprise!), and the comments of leading administrators indicate that they are seriously considering taking the bottle from the students.

Many students (myself, until recently, included) believe that Father Hesburgh is able to overrule Indiana state law and eliminate the drinking age at Notre Dame. He cannot; Dean of Students James Roemer emphasizes that the University does not authorize drinking by persons under 21 years of age.

Legally, the Indiana State Police or the St. Joseph County Sheriff's Department or the State Excise Officers could raid any dorm party room at any time and arrest anyone drinking there. Ditto for private rooms. So why haven't they? Perhaps because they feel that on-campus drinkers pose less of a threat to others than people at Corby's or the Marriott. Another reason could be that the Notre Dame party system is intended to promote responsible drinking, with adequate supervision in case things get out of hand.

This assumes, however, that adequate supervision is in fact provided. The Provost, in response to the Priorities and Commitments for Excellence Report (PACE), has formed a committee whose guiding principle is that an alcohol problem exists on campus.

The committee is supposed to decide whether the present university rules and their enforcement encourage responsible drinking when students choose to drink. Father William Beauchamp, administrative assistant to the executive vice president and member of this committee, says "Quite obviously, no." But it is not clear that any changes they may want to make would actually help solve the problem they see.

This year several dorms have cracked down on hall rules regarding alcohol, including imposing the mandatory $25 fine for having beers in the corridors. Some even have banned transporting closed containers through the hallways, which might make one wonder how you get it to the rooms in the first place...

There isn't any justification for complaining about this; the rules are rules, although the amazing inconsistency in their enforcement might be unfair. If, however, the long-range plan is to steadily tighten restrictions on alcohol, the committee — and the Board of Trustees, who hear their comments this weekend — might want to consider what good will be done by this.

Prohibition would face great opposition from the student body. It would be violated, and the drinking that occurred would not be supervised by anyone, this would not be responsible by anyone's definition.

But any lesser changes would not be effective, either. Beauchamp sees nothing wrong with a student having a beer while watching the football game on TV. But if one student, why not a couple of his friends? And is two beers any worse than one? And so we return to the same situation that exists today.

Drinking is only allowed — not authorized or approved — because administrators feel that students will drink. If they don't drink on campus, they will go elsewhere, leading to problems with safety and control. It is almost guaranteed that next year's edition of Du Lac will include tougher rules, and tougher enforcement.

Alcohol will only be banned if the committee feels it is the only choice, but Beauchamp is already on record saying, "If solving the problem requires a toughening of the rules, such as a dry campus, so be it." But a dry campus would only make the problem worse, and most rules changes would be even harder to justify than some of the other university rules. If consistent enforcement — which includes issuing warnings, not just mandatory fines — of the present rules can be achieved, rather than the inconsistency of today, then there might be improvement in what Beauchamp and his committee see as the Notre Dame alcohol problem.

Van Wolvlear outlines priorities for Placement and Career Services

By JANE KRAVCIK
News Staff

Father John Van Wolvlear, vice-president of student affairs, identified the improvement of the Placement and Career Services office situation as the major objective of his office this year.

The matter was discussed at the Hall President's Council meeting held last night at Pangborn Hall.

Van Wolvlear cited the present situation of the Career and Placement offices as "abominable" and observed that many students who now interview for jobs on the second floor of LaFortune feel like "they are donating blood" because of the screens used to provide privacy in the ballroom.

One solution that was brought up was moving the Career and Placement Services to the basement of the library. This space is presently used for faculty offices, but will be vacated when the faculty office building is completed.

Van Wolvlear's office is also working on the problem of nurses at the student health center. "There seems to be some difficulty with keeping nurses. It may be because our rate of pay is lower than that of a hospital," he said. One proposed solution is eliminating in-patient services during the summer.

Robert Johnson, president of Zahm Hall, asked Van Wolvlear what he thought about the alcohol problem recently discussed on campus. Van Wolvlear replied, "One rector I talked to said that freshmen are drinking less this year. He said that he actually had beer left after a party."

Stanford President Joe Lynch agreed with Van Wolvlear's observation. "Freshmen seem to be socializing more while drinking less."

Tim Conolly, coordinator of Chance to Dance, announced that the first dance will be held on Nov. 18. He speculated that two to three more of the dances will be held this semester.

Chance to Dance is organized by a member of student government but is under the jurisdiction of HPC. The funds raised by the dances, usually $400-500 per dance, goes to HPC. Connolly urged the hall presidents to attend the dances. "It is a good time, relaxing, and lots of fun," he said.

Diane Kozak and Roger Wilke, members of the campus organization Circle K, presented a plan for a 24-hour basketball game to be played for the benefit of the Muscular Dystrophy Association on Nov. 18. The game will include 48 teams, each playing for an hour, representing dorms and other campus organizations. Each team will have to pay a $30 entry fee which will be given to the MDA.

Also discussed at the meeting was the Trojan horse being built for the University of Southern California football game on Saturday. Adjunct Accounting Professor James Ward is in charge of this project. In addition to building the horse, those involved in the project are chalking "The Spirit is here to Stay" on sidewalks and buildings, and encouraging the dorms to hang banners for Saturday's game.

OXFAM fast to help those in need

By JENNIFER BIGOTT
News Staff

More than one thousand Saint Mary's students are expected to participate in the third annual OXFAM America fast.

Students and faculty at Saint Mary's will have the opportunity to help those in need by participating in the Oxford Committee for Famine Relief fast on November 17.

The Social Justice Commission and the World Hunger Coalition will OXFAM America is a non-profit agency that funds self-help development projects and provides aid in poverty stricken areas of the world. The organization, based in Boston, was established in 1970.

Turgi states "The purpose of the fast is really two-fold." The primary purpose is to raise awareness concerning hunger around the world, she continued. The fast also serves to raise funds for the needy. The money is distributed worldwide as well as nationally and locally. A large portion of the funds is sent to OXFAM America.

The dining hall donates a flat rate for each student who makes the decision to fast. Over one-half of the cost of the meals is contributed. Students can break the fast if they so desire, "but very few did last year," said Turgi.

Approximately 800 students signed up for the fast last year, raising $1100. This year, the goal is to have at least 1,000 students participating.

According to Anne Gallagher, OXFAM activities such as speakers, filmstrips, and prayer services during during the fast day.

Sign-ups will be in the Saint Mary's dining hall from Nov. 1-8, and also at the Campus Ministry office. Door-to-door sign-ups will also be conducted, to ensure that all students have the opportunity to participate in the event, said Gallagher.

National reconciliation meeting planned while violence continues

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Snipers killed two Lebanese soldiers and wounded an Italian member of the multinational force Tuesday, and the government said Lebanon's warring sects will hold their long-delayed national reconciliation conference at Beirut airport.

A statement on state-run Beirut radio said President Amin Gemayel will participate in the meeting Thursday of Moslem, Druze and Christian leaders, aimed at ending eight years of turmoil. It said U.S. Marines and other members of the multinational force patrolling the capital will guard them.

The conference was called for in the Sept. 26 cease-fire that reduced but did not halt three weeks of civil war. Bickering over where and when to hold the conference has delayed the conference.

It is unclear why the airport site was chosen. Anti-government gunners have been shelling and sniping at the 1,600 Marines deployed at the airport for weeks. Two Marines have been killed and six wounded since last Friday.

Violations of the cease-fire persisted Tuesday. State radio said two Lebanese army soldiers were killed at positions near Chiyah, a stronghold of Shiite Moslem militiamen. It also reported gunfights between army positions at Souk el-Gharb overlooking the airport and surrounding Druze areas.

An Italian soldier suffered a gunshot wound in the right shoulder on the road linking Beirut to the airport, a spokesman for the Italian contingent said. He said the man did not require hospital treatment.

The Lebanese army closed a section of the major airport highway to traffic for several hours after police warned of heavy sniping along the road.

The U.S. Embassy had no immediate comment on the reconciliation meeting announcement, and Marine spokesman Maj. Robert Jordan, asked about the choice of the airport, said he was unaware it had been named as the meeting site.

Earlier in Damascus, leftist opposition leader Walid Jumblatt said he would prefer to meet at the airport under guard of the multinational force, rather than at Gemayel's earlier choice, the presidential palace.

"The primary purpose is to raise awareness concerning hunger around the world. The fast also serves to raise funds for the needy."

co-sponsor the event. Students will forego their three daily meals at the Saint Mary's dining hall to raise funds for the poorest regions of the world.

The fast began three years ago on campus due to the combined efforts of Sister Mary Turgi, Volunteer Service Coordinator, and Tom Reid, Director of Campus Ministry.

Indiana priest sparks IRS probe

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Members of a church council are "seeking guidance of the Holy Spirit" in deciding how to deal with an Internal Revenue Service demand for taxes it claims are owed by their parish priest, the group's president said Tuesday.

Kathleen S. Wallace, president of the Holy Cross Catholic Church Council, said the group will meet Sunday to try and decide if it will pay the more than $600 in taxes and interest the IRS wants.

However, she said the announcement of the church's decision will be announced to church members before it is made public. She did not know when that would be.

The Rev. Cosmas Raimondi began withholding half his federal income taxes in 1982 to protest military spending. In paying his taxes, Raimondi included a note explaining his reasons for not paying the full tax and said the withheld portion was being donated to human service agencies. The IRS has now asked the parish council, which acts as the priest's employee, to pay the money.

"I'm perplexed in the sense that the IRS would know that I'm self-employed and not an employee of the parish," Raimondi said Tuesday.

Mrs. Wallace says the council was notified of the priest's tax decision on Aug. 5.

"He said he was withholding 50 percent of his taxes in protest of vast increases in defense spending by the federal government, in particular escalation of the nuclear arms race and increased military intervention in Central America," Mrs. Wallace said.

In a prepared statement, Mrs. Wallace said council members have had several meetings concerning the matter and have also informed members of the parish from the pulpit at masses and in writing.

"The Council has agreed to seek guidance of the Holy Spirit in its decision," she said.

Mrs. Wallace said the council was told by Raimondi that he had donated the withheld tax money to various social service agencies.

In August, the IRS served notice to the church that it had put a lien of $593.26 against the priest's salary. Mrs. Wallace said the council had not acted on the demand for payment by the Aug. 30 deadline set by the IRS.

An IRS representative appeared at her home on Sept. 16 and presented a demand for $604.18, Mrs. Wallace said.

Mrs. Wallace said council members met with an attorney and an "outside facilitator" the next day to decide on their next step. It was after that meeting that input from members of the parish was requested.

Raimondi says he knows of another priest in Ohio who has made a similar protest and that he has heard of others around the nation who have also withheld tax payments in protest of government spending.

"I have no idea how many priests are making this type of protest," he said, "but I know there are several."

The IRS says it is only trying to collect taxes owed.

"This whole action — I almost feel like it's incredible," says Raimondi, 32, who has become known as a social activist priest in the city where he grew up. "I want the IRS to carry out their process against me. I did not expect them to get my parish involved."

The priest said he began thinking about a protest after the killing of three American nuns in El Salvador in 1980 caused him to examine "the real meaning of my ministry."

"Christian theology has always held that there are times when it is necessary to break the law in order to uphold the principles of Christian faith," he said.

An IRS spokeswoman in Indianapolis, Deborah Moore, said it is common for the agency to "go to the employer of record" to put a levy on the salary of a delinquent taxpayer.

Mrs. Wallace says the issue has divided the opinion of the congregation on the correctness of the actions of Father Cos, as many parishioners call their pastor. "We've heard a supportive response, and we've heard some fears."

Indianapolis Archbishop Edward T. O'Meara has "reserved some judgments" on the matter, says Raimondi, who conferred with the archbishop before starting the tax protest. "He is allowing us the freedom to discern what is best for our community."

Chuck Schisla, a spokesman for the Indianapolis Archdiocese, said that "to the best of my knowledge the archbishop is not directly involved in the dispute and it is between the IRS and the individual church."

Raimondi hopes the 13-member council will not pay the levy.

"I have told them I will abide by their decision and will not apply pressure, but I intend to give them my opinion," he said.

Beverly Crone, a South Bend city council member, offered another explanation for the raid. "Maybe with school starting the police wanted to avoid a larger problem down the road" by making a point against underage drinking. Further, she does not "see the problem of underage drinking as an issue in the mayoral race at this time."

"The mayor wants to show he's trying," said one student, "and the Marriott raid was something out of the ordinary to show that."

Robert R. Huckfelt, assistant professor of government and international relations, is familiar with South Bend politics. He responded, "It does not fit into Mayor Parent's past behavior in politics. I cannot see how it would benefit him. In the primary, the issue was raised by McGann, not Parent." Parent defeated McGann in the Democratic primary.

Howard Goodhew, Parent's Republican challenger in the November general election said, "I am not a tavern campaigner. I'm not planning to make it an issue."

Attempts to reach the South Bend Police Chief were unsuccessful. His office directed The Observer to other personnel who would not comment on the reason for the raid or its timing.

Joblessness rate drops in majority of states

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Only 15 states had higher August unemployment rates than the 9.1 percent rate of Indiana in August, according to figures announced Tuesday by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Indiana was one of 40 states recording a lower unemployment rate in August than a year earlier and joblessness in a half-dozen Eastern states registered sharp declines over the same period, the Labor Department said.

Indiana's seasonally unadjusted rate represented a drop of nearly 2 percent from the 10.9 figure recorded in August 1982, officials said. Four other states also had 9.1 unemployment rates. West Virginia, with 16.7 percent joblessness, continued to suffer the highest unemployment in the nation, although its rate receded from July's 17.4 percent level. However, the new rate represented a sharp jump from the 13.7 rate of August 1982.

Michigan had the nation's second highest rate at 13.4, a decline from 14.5 in August 1982.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics said the labor market deteriorated in 10 sates and the District of Columbia. The declining unemployment was most apparent in Rhode Island, whose rate fell 3.1 percentage points, and Alabama, where joblessness plunged by 2.8 percentage points.

In August, 15 states and the District of Columbia had rates higher than the national rate, and 35 states came in below the national figure of 9.2 percent.

On Oct. 7, the department reported that the national civilian unemployment rate, adjusted for seasonal factors, dipped from 9.5 percent to 9.3 percent from August to September as some 400,000 Americans found work.

The labor market statistics for all but the 10 largest industrial states are reported about six weeks behind release of national figures, due largely to a more intricate data-gathering system.

States with the lowest unemployment rates were: New Hampshire, 4.1 percent; North Dakota, 4.2; South Dakota, 4.3; Nebraska, 4.9; and Virginia and Connecticut, 5.3.

Laetare Medal winners honored

Special to The Observer

A chapel in Sacred Heart Church will commemorate American Catholics who have received the Laetare Medal, the University's highest honor, in observance of the award's centennial anniversary.

Notre Dame President Father Theodore Hesburgh will be the principal celebrant of a Mass dedicating the apsidal chapel Friday (October 21) at 5:15 pm.

It will contain three bronze plaques listing the names of the 104 Laetare Medal recipients, as well as a leather-bound album providing biographical notes on each of them. First awarded in 1883, the Laetare Medal was conceived by James F. Edwards, a lay faculty member who believed that American Catholics needed some tangible recognition of their various achievements.

It was awarded exclusively to lay persons until 1973, after which priests and religious became eligible. The recipient of the medal is announced each year on Laetare Sunday, a liturgical celebration which anticipates Easter and an occasion of joy during the otherwise penitential season of Lent. ("Laetare" means "to rejoice" in Latin.) The award is modeled on the "Golden Rose," a papal honor bestowed on Catholic nobles and aristocrats since before the eleventh century.

This year's Laetare Medal was awarded to Edmund and Evelyn Stephan of Chicago for their service to the University while he was chairman of Notre Dame's Board of Trustees. Past medalists include presidential candidate Al Smith; singer John McCormack; actress

Orleans-style Death March. Students will be led to a bon fire at White Field (the location of the An Tostal mudpits). The Pitt Mascot will be the firestarter of the bonfire.

Discussing the problems that the festival committee has encountered, Persson commented, "At the beginning not everybody thought that we would be successful. Now the feedback is more positive." Persson elaborated on the support given the committee by stating "most of the response has been individual. The support that we have had comes from the people in the hall not from the hall per se".

The administration has kept the committee informed on the possible changes of the starting time of the Notre Dame-Pitt game. According to Persson, the administration has assured the committee the game will start at 4:00 p.m. at the latest. "Nobody knows the definite time yet" she added.

Salvador commented "if it snows it won't affect us at all because we took the weather condition into consideration when we were working out the different activities."

The Fall Festival begins October 31 with a Halloween dinner in the dining halls and will conclude with a Mass at Sacred Heart, to be celebrated by University President Theodore Hesburgh.

Cap'n Crunch: Go back to Chicago

Dear Cap'n,

Rarely do I complain about a student event to which the administration has given its nihil obstat. Nevertheless, many of us wish you'd pack up your bags and leave.

Nobody blames you for being here. You're out to make a buck and garner some publicity. What company wouldn't jump at the chance.

Keith Picher

Profundity's demise

It's not the students' fault either. The sophomore class officers needed an issue for their platform. Though their campaign promise was a bit silly, it made more sense than most. The sophomores will all make fine politicians some day.

And nobody really blames the administration either. The Church has yet to issue a proclamation denouncing Cap'n Crunch (though there's talk in Rome of condemning Honey-nut Cheerios).

The administration, contrary to popular belief, doesn't hate Notre Dame students, in fact they even like to see them have fun once in a while. Administrators seem to be listening to students more and more these days.

Unfortunately, they listened this time. None of them were real keen on your visit, but to placate everyone involved they decided to turn the week into a charity event, or at least they seemed to think so.

I hear you'll be making some visits to the hospital and some money will go to the needy, thanks to you. That's good, right?

Wrong. You'd never have gone to the hospital or donated $1000 had the University not insisted. And the "charity money" students will pay comes not from their hearts, but as a necessary evil to enter the contest (with hopes of winning a trip to Florida). I suppose the University could sponsor public stonings on the South Quad (like the ones in Montey Python's Life of Brian), charge admission, and give the money to charity. I'm not sure everybody would like the idea, though.

The real damage you've caused, Mr. Crunch, goes far beyond the trivialities of everyday campus life. I refer to the articles in The Wall Street Journal and on the Associated Press wire.

You see, the media coverage your product desires is quite different from what the University stresses.

Notre Dame's press release begins, "Area charities are expected to receive $2,000 in food and cash gifts as a result of a weeklong festival honoring Captain Crunch of breakfast food fame."

But the WSJ article begins with a headline identifying Cap'n Crunch in the "Issues of the '80s Dept." The article mentions charity in one sentence in the ninth of 10 paragraphs, and begins with "After a sit-down strike, students have won their demand: an unimpeded supply of Cap'n Crunch, their favorite cereal."

The AP article is not as bad, though it too attributes the fest to a campus-wide struggle with sit-down strikes and student unrest.

The Journal article pokes fun at student involvement in campus issues. Somehow they think the yuppies and hippies of the '60s have been replaced by anti-intellectual apathetic students.

You see, Mr. Crunch, many students here are concerned with volunteer activities, campus protest and social concerns — most students just don't give a damn about you. Notre Dame's image was hurt by the article, which appeared on the desks of every major businessperson in the world.

This whole event reminds me of an incident in a Florida bar last spring. In yielding to peer pressure, someone used poor judgement, the University was embarrassed, and the national media exploited the story.

No, it's not your fault, Mr. Crunch — but you'd save us a lot of headaches if you'd pack up and leave.

Series finale

Dear Editor:

Sunday night's fifth and final World Series game between the Baltimore Orioles and the Philadelphia Phillies resulted in perhaps the most entertaining live television display in recent memory. Following an overwhelming Oriole victory, the Baltimore locker room became the familiar stage for post-victory excitement and player commentary.

An apparently unprepared ABC film crew led by "Mr. October" himself, Reggie Jackson, set forth covering the ceremonial trophy presentation to the victorious Orioles, and then announcing that the President of the United States was on the telephone wishing to congratulate the winners.

After five minutes of audio and video difficulties, verbal fumbblings by Reggie, and muffled cheers from an exuberant yet confused Oriole team, T.V. viewers could faintly hear the President's voice as he spoke with Rick Dempsey, the series MVP.

Dempsey was not without political comment, stating excitedly before passing the receiver down a long line of Oriole executives, that Mr. Reagan should "tell the Russians that all we're doing over here is having fun playing baseball." We were unable to hear the President's reply. I wonder if he recognized the irony of Dempsey's cheerful statement.

After some time, the phone was in the hand of Joe Altobelli, the charming manager of the World Champions. He and Reagan exchanged a few inaudible and apparently trivial words before Altobelli held out the receiver, faced Commissioner of Baseball Bowie Kuhn and asked, "You wanna talk to the President?"

Kuhn, probably the most intelligent person involved in the charade, thanked President Reagan (with some embarrassment) and ended the conversation.

The folly of the post-series locker room scene was just the trick ABC needed to liven things up after a World Series which fell far short of entertaining. Casting Jackson and Reagan side-by-side was a stroke of genius on the part of producer Boone Arledge.

Although the event subdued the traditionally raucous victory celebration for the Orioles, and poisoned the credibility of two distinctively American institutions, Major League Baseball and the Presidency, it still managed to amuse a few of us entertainment-starved television viewers.

Nuke editorials

Dear Editor:

A time comes when the citizens of the world community must confront the most serious moral evil of our age and cry "Enough!" I refer, of course, to the horrific proliferation of nuclear weapons editorials. The people of this planet must no longer be held hostage by columnists, pundits and coalitions throughout the world who bombard us with essays, articles and letters exhorting us to think about the "unthinkable." The article by Mike Skelly (Oct. 14) may finally stimulate the quiet majority of this country to form a grassroots movement to Freeze Nuclear Weapons Editorials.

After fourteen paragraphs of unthinking about the unthinkable, Mr. Skelly can conclude, "Nuclear annihilation is not a pleasant thought." Now that was quite a revelation to me. But there was more to learn: "Man now has the means of completely destroying all civilization, and the destructive potentials grow daily." I must have been one of the many who "fail to realize this is precisely the situation every individual in the US and USSR faces today."

I am convinced that it is time to mobilize world public opinion in the struggle to halt the hideous, uncontrolled spread of nuclear weapons editorials. These editorials can be unleashed at any time, and are capable of burying the world in the rubble of clichés and platitudes. We will be under constant threat of brain meltdown if we stand idly by as the leaders of society deploy more and more banal truisms, and construct bigger and utterly inane propositions.

Reports show that there are at least twelve tons of trite, repetitive articles about the arms race for every man, woman and child on the Earth. This sickening overkill capability appalls me! We must stop this madness now!! As

Mr. Skelly so originally put it, "Ignoring the prospect...will not make the threat go away."

ND investments

Dear Editor:

Michael L. Brennan's recent editorial on Notre Dame's investments was filled with rash inferences and inconsistent presumptions.

Does Mr. Brennan truly believe the trustees of this university are engaged in a vast conspiracy to promote unethical causes and make as much money as possible? Does he have any proof of the University's investment in defense industries producing nuclear weapons? Does he have any facts whatsoever that the endowment money is being used for immoral practices in South Africa? One cannot just buy stocks in apartheid.

The University of Notre Dame's primary interest is not "profit maximization" as Mr. Brennan says. Its reason for being is to provide a Catholic education of the highest caliber possible.

Notre Dame is a private institution which receives monetary gifts to its endowment for the purpose of continuing its services to the students. It has no responsibility to release documentation of how the trustees appropriate or invest endowment money. When a gift is made, it is made with no strings attached; it is made trusting in the judgement of those who administer this university. So far, such judgement has not needed to be questioned in the least. Until he comes up with documentation, Mr. Brennan should presume innocence until proven guilty.

Why does he think officials of the university are named "trustees" anyway?

Miss Manners

When creatures crawl in the rice bowl

by Judith Martin

Dear Miss Manners — Halfway through supper tonight, I noticed a worm about a fourth of an inch long in my rice. Several more were found in the rice bowl. Having lived overseas, we just picked them out and continued eating.

Then I began to wonder what we should have done if we had been so unfortunate as to have guests present. Should I have apologized and offered to pick through the remaining rice, or feigned ignorance and tried to distract their attention from the food with lively conversation?

Gentle Reader — Where overseas did you live? Never mind, Miss Manners would actually prefer not to know.

In any case, you will find people here slightly more fastidious than you have become. Miss Manners herself was roundly chastized for admitting the possibility that cooks sometimes taste what they are cooking without sterilizing the spoon between tastes, and is not about to condone serving worms to guests. Not that she doesn't admire your sang-froid.

You must treat such an occurrence as an emergency, whether it is or not. On first sighting, get up, remove the rice bowl, and inform your guests that you saw "something, probably just a speck, in the rice, but I don't want to take any chances," and give them fresh plates. Of course, you will then get a great deal of lively conversation, as they express their curiosity about what you found, but you must insist that it was merely a suspicion, and remove the evidence. Picking through the rice for animal life, making jokes such as, "How much can a little thing like that eat?" or serving worms to guests are not considered to be in the best of taste.

Dear Miss Manners — Please advise this Gentle Reader about the etiquette of travel for couples who are unmarried to each other. The main questions concern hotels.

How does one make discreet reservations? How do the parties register? How is information shown on the registration form, and ultimately on the bill? What other complications are there?

All of this assumes a mature, well behaved couple.

Gentle Reader — It is widely assumed that hotel clerks are ferociously interested in the morals of the guests, and that waiters are fiercely involved in judging the table manners of their clients. Somehow, Miss Manners tends to doubt that these people are either so emotionally committed to maintaining public standards, or so hopelessly bored as to have nothing better to think about.

In any case, it is not necessary for you to explain your living arrangements to strangers. Many married women now use their own names, and the clerk who is asked to take a reservation, room assignment or bill for Henrietta Popover and Monty Chatsworth cannot safely assume that they are not a married couple, brother and sister, parent and child or other conventional combination, if there are others that have slipped Miss Manners' mind.

One of you may register for a room for two, or you may both put your names on the register. The bill is properly made out to the person who plans to pay it.

Dear Miss Manners — I recently accepted a lunch invitation from a business acquaintance whom I had not seen in some time. We were having a pleasant table conversation, chiefly related to business matters, when he suddenly asked, "How would you like to have an affair with me?"

I was startled, but rather than create a scene, I politely but firmly declined, reminded him that he was married, and turned the conversation back to other matters.

When I related this incident to a close friend later, my friend remarked that my acquaintance's boldface proposition was an insult and merited a stronger reaction, e.g. I should have left the restaurant at once. Only with more decisive responses, my friend maintains, will men be discouraged from such effrontery. By responding in such a low-key manner, did I implicitly condone his behavior?

Gentle Reader — No doubt, your business acquaintance considers his request to be within prevailing social conventions, and may be able to buttress this belief by citing the number of acceptances he has received.

Miss Manners, however, like your friend, considers such a proposition to be an insult. If this man had been a gentleman, he would have used the proper form which is, "I have something to confess to you. I hope it doesn't upset you. I've become obsessed by the thought of you — I think I'm in love with you. I have no right to say this — you know, I'm married — but I throw myself on your mercy."

The proper form only suggests that you are irresistible; the improper one, which he used, assumes that you are available for sexual advances bereft of emotional or moral conditions. The strictest proper response is, "How dare you?" and the slightly more conciliatory one is, "If this is a joke, I find it in poor taste. I am a respectable woman, and I expect to be treated as one."

Stalking out is all right, too, but you run the risk of his following you, followed in turn by the waiter with the bill; or of his assuming that you are merely leading the way to your place.

Feeling incorrect? Address your etiquette questions (in black or blue-black ink on white writing paper) to Miss Manners, in care of this newspaper.

Eddie and his Cruisers

Movies

A Springsteen sound in the '60s

by Kerry Kearney
features staff writer

"Eddie and The Cruisers" focuses on a colorful group of up and coming young musicians who capture a great following of fans by playing small roadhouses along the Jersey shore. Meanwhile they are striving to change the Buddy Holly and Bill Haley styles of the early 1960s to their own unique form of musical artistry.

The film opens with an investigation of the unexplained death of the leader of the Cruisers led by a reporter for a rock news publication. The death occurred twenty years earlier in 1963. Her probe inspires a sudden resurgence in popularity of the original music of the Cruisers. A new generation gets caught up in the Springsteen-like sound and the story of Eddie and his Cruisers.

The film very successfully employs the flashback to illustrate how, over the span of 20 years, the remaining members of the band dealt with the powerful emotions that cracked the group's spirit following the tragic, mysterious death of their leader, the intense and talented composer of the group's trend setting songs. Strangely, Eddie's body was never recovered from the southern New Jersey river into which Eddie's turquoise convertible plunged the night that Eddie was demanded to compromise his reflective lyrics and sound or forfeit the financial backing that had launched him on his way to the top of the rock scene. The result of this compromise would surely mean a less Eddie Wilson musical tone and one less innovative.

Michael Pare, who plays the lead role of Eddie Wilson, the head of the Cruisers, has enjoyed a brief but sporadic acting career. He performed in a made for television movie, and in ABC's "Greatest American Hero" in a supporting role. Pare was immediately signed to the "Cruisers" project foregoing the usual mandatory screen test when producers recognized him to be a natural for the Springsteen sound alike role.

Helen Schneider costars with Pare, as his "girl" and lead female vocalist of the Cruisers. Though Schneider is also a newcomer to the film acting scene, her career has been well established for a number of years. Schneider holds the honor of being the first foreign rock star to be invited to perform her Brooklyn sound in East Germany. She adds not only her fresh, natural style to the film, but also gives the movie's sound track a polished quality by having performed all her musical numbers live during the shooting of the film. This proves to be a notable and welcome change from most other film scores which are cut, dubbed, and manufactured in an editing room.

Two weeks prior to the shooting of "Eddie and The Cruisers" the film's director, Martin Davidson, who in "The Lords of Flatbush" introduced such stars as Henry "The Fonz" Winkler and Sylvester Stallone, encouraged his players to in effect become their "Cruiser" characters. On that request the cast lived, talked and were the members of this vibrant rock group of the early '60s. In keeping with their characters, the film's male stars dressed themselves in sleeveless T's and leather bombers. Helen Schneider sported Laura Petrie peddalphushers, the popular dress of female rockers of the movie's setting. This two week transformation into character may well have been the tool which lead to the strong, natural acting that graced this flick.

Overall, "Eddie and The Cruisers" combines the elements of a good, artistic feature film. The movie contains strong scenes of suspense, romance, success and failure, and a powerful portrayal of camaraderie.

middle," Gallo said explaining the errors.

But Gallo stressed that the Notre Dame defensive play must improve. "We just did not play good defense," said Gallo.

The Irish fielding percentage of .940 this fall is equal to that of last spring's squad, which went 19-28, in part due to the poor defense.

Nonetheless, other aspects of the team have improved. The team batting average increased dramatically from .243 last spring to this fall's .275. Granted that ten games is not a season, Gallo was pleased with the hitting, calling it "very adequate."

There were also many individual bright spots in the Notre Dame batting order. Catchers Brian Gibbons and Mike Dornig hit .444 and .375, respectively. Infielders Shields, Jack Moran, and Jim Dee all hit over .350. Moran led the team in hits with nine and Dee led in home runs with two and RBI's with eight. Vuono, despite hitting .182, scored a team-high nine runs, mainly due to his eight walks, also a team-high. Freshman Mike Angelina provided more reason for optimism, hitting .364 and driving in three runs.

Newcomers also aided the pitching corps. Freshman Dan Sacchini posted a 2-0 record and a 3.24 E.R.A., but he led the staff in walks with ten.

Junior Joe Dobosh had some of the best statistics on the squad with a 2.89 E.R.A., a record of 2-0, and no base-on-balls.

Senior Mark Clementz had a fair fall, leading the team in innings pitched, strikeouts, and saves.

As a whole, the pitching staff did well. The Irish staff E.R.A. was a decent 3.97, compared to last spring's 4.80. In addition, only 32 free passes were issued by Irish pitchers, while opposing pitching staffs gave up 49 walks.

Keeping men off the basepaths is important to Gallo.

"When you walk a man, he usually ends up scoring," says the Notre Dame skipper. "I thought our pitching and our hitting were very adequate," said Gallo, but he later emphasized the importance of fielding.

"We'll be fine if we play good, consistent defense," Gallo continued. "When you get good pitching and defense you're going to win some ball games."

This fall provided Gallo with the opportunity to find players who will help the Irish win, as he saw many different players in intra-squad games and in fall season play.

"I would have liked to play more games, to see more, but the weather did not cooperate," said Gallo.

Five games were rained out during the fall, but nonetheless, Gallo said, "We found out exactly who could help us."

Gallo's new players along with his veterans will start practice again in January for the regular spring season. In the meantime, the squad will lift weights and work on conditioning.

Gallo hopes that this off-season work will lead to improved defense and, consequently, an improved won-loss record.

Corporate money provides foundation for auto racing

By MIKE HARRIS
Associated Press

Money is supposedly the root of all evil. It is without question the foundation of auto racing.

Without a steady flow of cash — big money from corporate sponsors or wealthy individual — the only auto racing going on would be on the amateur level.

Everybody who ever has seen a race car, a driver in uniform, or any of the world's racetracks can see immediately the hold that sponsors have on the speed sport.

The cars are the world's fastest moving billboards, with a decal of one sort or another covering nearly every inch of available space. The driving uniforms are much the same from the waist up, and the tracks are filled with billboards, signs, banners, and giant product-shaped balloons.

In Europe, the top Formula One teams have budgets ranging from $2 million to $3 million, while the top Indy-car and NASCAR Grand National teams in the United States are spending more than $1 million each year to campaign for a full season.

The money goes for equipment, salaries, travel expenses and, perhaps most important, car development and testing.

Duerson the main attraction

Lions-Bears set for fireworks

Associated Press

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — The stage is set for fireworks when the Detroit Lions and Bears meet Oct. 30 in Chicago, and Dave Duerson figures he'll be a main attraction.

It was Duerson, the rookie from Notre Dame, whom Bear coach Mike Ditka ordered to "Go block the kicker" after the Lions faked a field goal and scored a touchdown with 1:18 left in last Sunday's 31-17 triumph over the Bears.

Ditka issued the command when he felt the Lions were rubbing it in by faking the field goal instead of taking the almost-certain three points.

The Lions claim it was all a mistake — that kicker Eddie Murray misunderstood a call for a fake field goal and that holder Eric Hipple was shocked for a moment before running around left end for the eight-yard touchdown.

As Murray and Hipple were walking off the field after the touchdown, they seemed to be snickering, which incensed Ditka.

When the Lions lined up for the subsequent kickoff, Ditka told Duerson, "Go block the kicker."

After getting his instructions, Duerson returned to Ditka's side and double-checked them. "I was baffled," he said, "but I didn't argue."

On Monday, after reviewing the films, Duerson said Murray "put on a Hollywood act" when he collapsed to the ground after being hit on the ensuing kickoff. The Lions said the hit knocked Murray's shoulder out of joint; it was popped back in moments later.

"I can't believe what he (Murray) is saying. There was no way I was trying to hurt him," said Duerson.

He then revealed that when the game was over, Detroit's Rick Kane "came up to me and said, 'We'll be looking for you in two weeks.' I told him, 'You've got a date.'"

Most of the furor Monday came from the Lions' den, with owner William Clay Ford labeling the Bears, "dirty b-----s, nasty fellows. I think it was a lousy piece of officiating. It was a malicious, deliberate attempt to injure a player."

Lions coach Monte Clark said, "The rule states that a kicker must be under control before you can hit him. Eddie had taken two steps after kicking off and was about to take a third when Duerson nailed him."

Ditka was still seething Monday and said during his press conference: "Three points would have iced it for them. Murray faked it. I don't care what they say, he fake it. Period."

As for ordering Duerson to block Murray, Ditka said: "What was the matter with that? He wears pads. That's the way football was played from Day One."

"Duerson hardly touched him," added Ditka. "Murray should have won an Academy Award for acting."

... Feeling

ping away from the Irish at this point, as the Saints, led by Dawn Buchanan, a tall front-row player who was very effective all night long, began to regain some momentum. They won five straight points to move back into a 10-10 deadlock.

Notre Dame once again looked like it might pull away, as co-captain Mary Jo Hensler served them to a 12-10 lead. But the Saints once again came back, taking a 13-12 lead, before the Irish tied it at 13.

At this point, though, Terese Henken, who had served the Irish back into a tie, saw her next serve go just wide. The service error put the game in the Saints' hands.

The Saints did not let the match slip away this time as they scored the last two points, the last on a tip by Buchanan.

The marathon fifth game was a fitting conclusion to a long, hard-fought match that saw both teams go through periods of sloppy play and smooth play.

Both teams started out sloppily in the first game and exchanged numerous serves. Gradually, the teams worked their way up to a 6-6 tie. Then, St. Francis began executing a little better, while the Irish continued to have some problems, especially on defense. The Saints won nine of the last 12 points, consistently finding gaps in the Irish defense with easy tips.

"The players gave in too easily on the tips," said Vanslager. "You need to give more effort on tips than on hard-driven shots."

"The problem comes down to footwork. Everybody just turned and watched the balls hit the floor. They knew mentally what to do, but they didn't do it physically."

The second game was very similar to the first as the Saints took advantage of some carelessness on the part of their opponents to take an early lead. However, the Irish fought back and the advantage went back and forth. Leading 8-7, St. Francis took control once again, winning eight of the last 10 points and the game.

Facing a quick three-game elimination, Notre Dame fought hard in the next two games. Overcoming a large number of service errors and net violations, the Irish showed brief periods of excellent play, especially at the net.

The comeback effort fell one game short, however.

If you are thinking that far ahead, we may have a job for you.

W.R. Grace & Co. is looking for outstanding undergraduates to join us in a summer intern program between junior and senior years.

We are looking for especially talented:

ACCOUNTING AND ENGINEERING MAJORS

Students with outstanding academic records and with a demonstrated interest in outside activities... Men and women with a genuine interest in business and with that special mix of imagination, ability and foresight necessary for success... Individuals of inordinate curiosity, and the willingness to learn in an unstructured environment.

In a recent summer, one of our recruits spent her two months in Belgium doing marketing research. One came to New York for a special project in our Corporate Finance Department and

The Notre Dame volleyball team is still trying to figure out what has gone wrong this season. Last night they lost again, this time to St. Francis-Joliet. See Mike Sullivan's story below for the details.

Volleyball team feels terrible as they lose five-game heartbreaker

By MIKE SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

Have you ever waited in the dining hall lines for ages before finally reaching the card-check desk — and found that you forgot your ID card?

You know that terrible feeling of having inched your way up the line for naught, especially if the entree is Russian Vegetable Pie.

Well, the Notre Dame volleyball team certainly got that feeling last night as it climbed out of danger only to slip up at the end and lose a heartbreaking match to St. Francis-Joliet in five long games, 15-9, 15-9, 7-15, 11-15, and 15-13, in the ACC Pit.

The loss to the Saints just put another wound in what is turning out to be a very disappointing season for Sandy Vanslager's squad.

The match came down to the fifth and final game, but, for a while, it looked like it would not last past three games as the Irish dropped the first two by identical scores. However, they did not lay down and die, and, despite numerous service errors and a little inconsistent play, managed to fight back into the match, coming from behind late in the fourth game to even the score at two games apiece.

The mistakes of earlier in the match proved to be too much to overcome, however, as the Irish played well enough to win two of the last three games, but needed to win all three because of its failure in the first two.

"We just let too many shots hit the floor early in the match," said a dejected Vanslager, "and we really didn't start passing well and picking up their tips until the fourth or fifth game."

Despite the problems early, though, Notre Dame did have the chance to win the match in the last game. It had the momentum after winning the previous two games. And it appeared early on in the last game that Notre Dame's momentum would gain it the victory.

After losing the coin flip to see which team would serve in the tiebreaker, the Irish capitalized on a service error and net violation by the Saints, and the outstanding play of sophomore Tracy Bennington at the net, moving out to a 2-1 lead. However, a service error and net violation by Notre Dame allowed St. Francis to regain the lead, 4-3.

Bennington then began her service and continued to play a major role in the game, serving five consecutive points and putting the Irish on top, 8-4. The score increased to 9-4, and then 10-5, as Notre Dame appeared ready to take total control.

However, things just started slip-

Baseball team finishes fall season with split

By SEAN CALLAHAN
Sports Writer

Baseball, like in the big leagues, is over at Notre Dame for the present. A twinbill scheduled for last Sunday with Valparaiso was rained out. On Saturday, the Irish played what became their final two games of the fall season, splitting a doubleheader with Bethel College to end their fall term with a 6-4 record.

In the first game with Bethel, which the Irish won 4-1, Steve Powell, John Gleeson, and Tom Collins combined to toss a four-hitter. Powell received credit for the victory, despite yielding the Irish pitching staff's only three walks of the game. Another runner reached base on senior Dan Harrington's error, which resulted in an unearned run. Bethel left six other runners on base.

On the other hand, Notre Dame took advantage of five hits, two walks, and three Bethel errors to score four runs, two of which were unearned. The Irish offense was aided by Brian Gibbons' two-run double.

In the second game the Irish did not use their base runners as effectively as they did in the opener, as they lost, 7-4. Nine men were left on base, despite a combination of eight hits, five walks, and two fielding miscues by Bethel.

"We did not get timely hitting, that's for sure," said Coach Larry Gallo. "The so-called veterans didn't come through when they had the opportunity."

A three-hit day for infielder Tom Shields, two RBIs by infielder Rich Vanthornout, and first baseman Carl Vuono's double and sacrifice fly were wasted in the loss.

The Irish used some younger pitchers in the game, pitching freshmen Bob Lee and Kevin Rudge, sophomores Mark Watzke and Jon Johansson, and Jason Schomer, a junior who pitched only one inning last spring.

Despite the relative inexperience of these hurlers, no walks were issued and only two of Bethel's seven runs were earned.

"We threw strikes, didn't walk many, and didn't get hit too hard," commented Gallo. "That's what we've been doing all fall."

The defense, however, and especially in the second Bethel game, was disappointing. The first five Bethel runs in that second game were the result of four Notre Dame errors.

"We had a lot of different combinations at shortstop and second base, and different players up the

Irish to renew memorable rivalry

Irish Items

Hello again, everybody!

By Saturday afternoon, midterms will be over, Captain Crunch will have sailed away in search of more golden nuggets, and everybody will be ready for THE GAME of every season — Notre Dame vs. Southern Cal. Personally, this great rivalry brings back many memories — Joe Theismann putting on an incredible passing display in the Coliseum, Eric Penick, Anthony Davis, green jerseys running out of a Trojan Horse, Traveler, questionable calls in the final minutes, and much more. Never mind that there won't be a national championship at stake when these two teams clash at the stadium on Saturday — both squads will be fired up for the 55th renewal of the Trojan Wars.

1982 and the Phantom Touchdown . . . If you have forgotten last year's USC game (and I guarantee you Gerry Faust and the Fighting Irish have not), let me refresh your memory. Blair Kiel returned to the lineup from a shoulder ailment to lead the Irish in one of their best efforts of the season. Notre Dame led the Trojans, 13-10, as USC took the ball on their own 49 with 1:50 remaining. Quarterback Scott Tinsley drove the Trojans down to the Irish one-yard line with 48 seconds left on the Coliseum clock. Tinsley handed off to Michael Harper, who vaulted over the goal line, but Irish end Kevin Griffith came up with the football on the two-yard line. Nevertheless, referee Charles Moffett ruled Harper had the ball when he crossed the goal line (despite what photographic evidence would show later) and gave the Trojans a controversial 17-13 victory.

Mission Impossible: Finding a Ticket . . . As you probably know by now, getting a ticket for this game is about as easy as getting a seven on a "Double Em." Thanks to Southern Cal's probation, (cheaters never prosper), there will be no live telecast of Saturday's game. If you don't have a ticket, the only way you can see the game live will be on closed-circuit television in the ACC for five dollars. If you want a stadium ticket, be prepared to pay the piper. Scalpers have been deflating wallets for as much as $150 a ticket.

Trojan Troubles . . . First-year USC coach Ted Tollner can sympathize with the problems Gerry Faust had in his first two years at Notre Dame. With a record of 2-3-1, Trojan faithful are upset to say the least. According to Sports Illustrated, one Los Angeles Times reader asked, "When did USC de-emphasize football? The Trojans are playing like a bunch of walk-ons."

Be that as it may, those "walk-ons" have plenty of horses to send at the Irish. While USC lacks an O.J. Simpson or Charles White at tailback, Fred Crutcher, Michael Harper, and Todd Spencer have compiled nearly 800 yards while splitting time at the position this season. Quarterback Sean (I like my steak) Salisbury has been a glimmering bright spot for the Trojans, throwing for over 1100 yards in six games. He'll be looking for a variety of targets on Saturday, as Southern Cal has four receivers with more than ten receptions.

On defense, the Trojans sport a pair of all-Americans at linebacker in Jack Del Rio and Keith Browner (younger brother of former Notre Dame star Ross Browner). USC's defense has shown a susceptibility to the pass this year, as they displayed when they allowed 397 passing yards in last week's 34-14 loss to Arizona State. The Trojans have been giving up lots of points this year, but they can put them on the board quickly, too. Look for lots of big plays in this game.

Irish Update . . . This will be the biggest Saturday for the Irish since the Miami game. It doesn't take a genius to realize the Irish want to keep the ball in the hands of Allen Pinkett. The sophomore tailback is averaging 109 yards rushing per game, making him the 11th best rusher in the nation. Steve Beuerlein will face his most important test of the season (with the possible exception of his Earth Science midterm) on Saturday. A shoulder ailment that bothered Beuerlein last week is behind him, and he will be ready to go against his fellow Californians.

The defense will have its hands full with the huge Trojan line and a multi-faceted Southern Cal attack. While the defense played its best game of the year against Army last week, one must realize that the Cadets hardly possess the firepower of USC. This is the biggest game of the year for the Trojans, so Jim Johnson's defensive unit had better be ready for anything.

Fair Catches . . . Former Irish Items columnist Bill Marquard points out that the first point scored by the Irish on Saturday will be their 1000th against USC. For the record, the Trojans have scored 859 points against the Irish . . . Hope this isn't a bad omen, but the last time Southern Cal came to Notre Dame with a losing record was in 1971, and the Trojans picked up a 28-14 victory at the expense of the Irish . . . Notre Dame is as healthy as they have been all season, with Stacey Toran the only starter listed as questionable for Saturday.

Pick of the Week . . . This week's pick gives you four choices: car, train, bus, or plane. In other words, my pick this week is to get away from campus and enjoy your fall break. However, please be careful out on the highways, because I don't want to lose any friends over break due to a car accident. Take your time and remember this safe driving tip: Drive like a musician — C-sharp or B-flat!

Paxson to sign with Spurs

Reports have indicated that former Notre Dame guard John Paxson will sign a pro contract today with the San Antonio Spurs.

Paxson, who has been involved in a contract struggle with the Spurs since the NBA draft last June, told WNDU-TV yesterday that the only problem left to work out was getting from his home in Kettering, Ohio, to San Antonio for a press conference today at which the signing will be announced.

It is thought that Paxson, the Spurs' first-round draft choice, will report to the Spurs' training camp immediately. The Spurs have been in camp since September 29.
