University orders Observer to join budget or lose funds

By JEFF HARRINGTON

Assistant News Editor

(c) 1983, The Observer

The University administration has asked The Observer to join the University budget program by Jan. 1 or face the cutoff of approximately $70,000 in ND student fees.

The University request is a result of a University-conducted audit of the student newspaper last summer which revealed a $7,000 deficit from last year's Observer operation and several cases of financial mismanagement by members of the '82-'83 Observer general board. (See sidebar below).

The Observer board yesterday submitted a counter-proposal to the University plan. The proposal calls for the hiring of an independent accountant to perform an annual audit Fosmoe, who supervises newspaper content, echoed this concern with editorial power over The Observer: "Financial decisions made in a paper determine its editorial content. It would always be threatening... if the financial aspect and editorial aspect are connected."

The University does not plan on exercising any editorial control of the content of the paper, according to Father John Van Wolvlear, vice president for student affairs.

"Father Hesburgh insists that they have complete editorial freedom. Otherwise it's not an independent newspaper," Van Wolvlear said. "Number one, they are editorially free (under the University budget system); number two, they will have financial accountability."

The University request would place The Observer under Notre Dame's Unit Budget Control System. The newspaper would be required to issue monthly accountability statements to the University, and the University would have the right to review The Observer's annual budget.

The Observer is the only student organization that currently does not have any type of University accountability, according to Tom Mason, vice president for business affairs and supervisor of the unit budget system.

Mason said that transferral to the University system would be "far more organized" for The Observer, and he added that he feels the move is long overdue.

The Observer proposal of keeping financial accountability in the hands of the paper "is not accountability at all," Mason said.

"You need to be accountable for your decisions, and you must be accountable to someone outside, not just yourself."

Fosmoe agreed that The Observer has "an obligation to provide the University with accountability" since the paper does receive student activities funds. She added, however, that the accountability "has to come from a third party outside the administration."

Fosmoe said hiring an outside auditor to look at the books would clear up the accountability problem while avoiding University control at the same time. "If (the University) handles the money, it would deserve to have some say. 'We're under their jurisdiction with the unit budget system... we would be technically part of the University.'"

Not all members of The Observer general board agreed with the counter-proposal sent to the administration. Observer Business Manager Dan O'Hare and Controller Alex Szilvas both questioned the wisdom of The Observer's decision.

"It was a business decision made by the editorial board and not a wise one from a financial standpoint," O'Hare said. "Without the student activity money Jan. 1, we will not publish for all of next semester... we cannot make it through. You can't have news without money."

Szilvas also said he doubted the paper could survive without help from the administration. "With 35 and the establishment of an alumni board of directors to act as the ultimate governing body of the newspaper.

According to the Observer proposal, which was sent to University President Father Theodore Hesburgh, the board would meet twice annually to approve the annual budget and review monthly income statements, among other duties.

In submitting the plan, Editor-in-Chief David Dziedzic said he "never had the intention of going along with the (University) proposal. I've always been opposed to anyone but The Observer handling the Observer's money."

"The feeling was and still is... whoever controls the money controls the business. If the University can refuse to sign our checks, then it can dictate our policy."

Audit shows deficit last year

By JEFF HARRINGTON

Assistant News Editor

An internal audit of The Observer operational revenues last summer reflected a deficit of $7,206 for the year's operation from July 1, 1982 to May 31, 1983.

Louis Cohen and William McKinney, both in the University's internal audit department, said in their report that the audit also showed several "discrepancies" in the financial operation of the newspaper and made recommendations to correct the problems.

Observer Editor-in-Chief Dave Dziedzic said the University asked The Observer to undergo an audit after last year's general board requested a fee increase from $5 to $6 per student in March to be used as Observer funds.

Father John Van Wolvlear, vice president for student affairs, said the audit was also conducted because of "indications of irregularities" in Observer finances. "We were tipped off by a member of student government that there was something awry," Van Wolvlear said. "He mentioned incidents later brought out by the report."

Among the questionable items and suggestions for correction listed in the audit by Cohen and McKinney:

- No budget had been prepared for the fiscal year through May 31, 1983. The report suggests The Observer draw up a budget for next year.

- No actual set of books for all statements was compiled; the report recommends implementation of a double entry bookkeeping system "maintaining appropriate journals and ledgers."

- A personal loan of $1,000 was issued to Bruce Oakley, systems manager, for the '82-'83 fiscal year, with interest free repayment.

- Forty-one checks totalling $13,274 were signed by only one management employee, conflicting with Observer policy of having two management signatures on each check issued by The Observer.

- More than $1,430 was paid in bonuses to the top three management personnel — the editor-in-chief, the business manager, and the controller — for painting the newsroom in May, 1982.

Dziedzic said The Observer has "always had a deficit and never made money. The Observer's accounting system has been lacking in the past... There were plenty of abuses. There's no denying that."

Observer Managing Editor Margaret Fosmoe questioned the fairness of the audit, however, since the auditors released the report July 1 without talking to the auditees or anyone implicated in the report.

In their report, Cohen and McKinney admit that the usual practice is to allow the auditee to review the findings of the audit before the report is officially released to make for "a clean report without any am-

ND organizers decide to pay $50 for senior Bahamas trip

By JOE INCARDONA

Staff Reporter

The four Notre Dame organizers of next week's senior class trip to the Bahamas have decided to pay $50 each for the package after class officers questioned the organizers' plans to send some of the seven-member group for free.

Senior class officers called a meeting with the Bahamas committee last week to discuss what Senior Class Treasurer Bill Kirk called "a serious error in judgment."

According to members of the Bahamas committee, First Source Travel of South Bend, the agency handling the trip, offered as part of its bid compensation which amounted to free accommodations for each committee member and two free airfares.

Kirk said the class officers "don't think the committee has done anything ethically wrong.... We'd like to see it corrected. If they feel like they have done that by each paying $50, then they're going to have to answer for it. We've just brought it to the attention of the Senior Class because we think it's an important issue."

Kirk, who said he was speaking for the other class officers, argued that the Bahamas committee's failed to conform to the way other student groups in the past have handled compensation. Kirk said it has been precedent for gifts or discounts to be distributed evenly to the entire class.

The Bahamas committee was appointed by last year's junior class president Mark Ruehlmann and consists of four Notre Dame students (including Ruehlmann) and three Saint Mary's students.

"We said at the meeting with the committee that we felt that this was not consistent with what's been done in the past — not just with the senior class trip but also with other committees like the one which handles Junior Parents' Weekend," Kirk said.

"We didn't know exactly what was being given, so we asked them that first," said Kirk. "They said there were seven people involved in the committee — five of them were going entirely free, and two of them were going for a reduced rate of $89.50. That was a big surprise to us, because we thought at most there were five on the committee."

Ruehlmann, speaking on behalf of the committee, denied Kirk's assessment of the situation. "That wasn't accurate," he said. "At the time of the meeting, the four of us (the students representing Notre Dame on the committee) would have been going for free, and the Saint Mary's students would have each actually been paying I think around $110."

Much of the controversy centers on a $12 "administrative" fee attached to the original trip price of $398 — a standard practice according to the Office of Student Activities.

The committee members said $2.50 from each student's $12 fee went to cover partial compensation for each committee member's airfare. Committee member Tom Grojean said the total amount of compensation came from only the number of Notre Dame students going on the trip (39 of the 200 are Saint Mary's students), and came out to be around $400.

Ruehlmann said that before meeting with the senior class officers, the committee planned to use $600 out of the total money collected from the administrative fee.

"We were told by the class officers that past class trip committees had only received $400 in total compensation from student-donated funds, so the four of us agreed to pay $50 a piece to conform to that past figure," Ruehlmann said.

But Kirk said last night that where the compensation came from is "not our contention." He said that total compensation to the committee this year — four trips at $410 minus the $50 the members are paying — comes to $1,440.

"That's far in excess of what has been given (to the committee) in the past," Kirk said.

Kirk also complained that unlike past years the trip committee didn't hold a raffle in which a senior could win a free trip. "In the past, there's always been a free trip raffled off, and that didn't happen this year," said Kirk.

Members of the committee, however, said

One Cap'n Crunch treasure chest was found Tuesday by Bob Kempf, a senior from St. Ed's, and Kathleen Johansen, a senior from Saint Mary's. The treasure chest was hidden behind a book titled Breakfast Table Autocrat in Memorial Library. The book describes the founding of the Quaker Oats Co., makers of Cap'n Crunch. The second treasure chest remains to be found. — The Observer

The Notre Dame Board of Trustees meets in committee today, with a daylong session of the entire board set for tomorrow. The Student Affairs Committee of the board, a 15-member panel chaired by New York alumnus Anthony Earley, meets all day today. The committee visited Counseling and Psychological Services and the Placement Bureau this morning, and will meet with a group of minority students for lunch. A meeting with student government officials is set for 2 this afternoon. Much of tomorrow's meeting of the full board will deal with reports from the trustees' seven committees. American scientists won the 1983 Nobel prizes in physics and chemistry yesterday, completing the first U.S. sweep since 1976 of all the prestigious science awards. The announcements by the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences in Stockholm, Sweden, continued an American dominance of the science prizes since World War II. Laureates announced yesterday were astrophysicists Subrahmanyan Chandrasekhar of the University of Chicago and William A. Fowler of the California Institute of Technology, who shared the physics prize, and Henry Taube of Stanford University. Chandrasekhar and Fowler, the second pair of astrophysicists ever to win the Nobel Prize, were honored for pioneering work on the evolution of stars. Taube won for identifying the process through which ions jump between molecules, helping to explain how plants make food, how batteries work and other common chemical reactions. — AP

Safe, routine ultrasound exams given as early as the fourth month of pregnancy will accurately reveal whether a fetus is a boy or a girl, two studies show. Ultrasound, which uses sound waves to take pictures of the unborn child, is often used to check the fetus for birth defects and monitor growth. Although the test has been available for several years, improved equipment provides such clear images that doctors frequently can see the fetus' sex organs to determine sex. — AP

James Lewis' attorney acknowledged yesterday that his client wrote a letter demanding $1 million to "stop the killing" of Chicago-area residents by cyanide-laced Tylenol, but denied that Lewis intended to carry out an extortion threat. Instead, defense lawyer Michael Monico told a federal jury in his opening statement, Lewis intended to expose financial misdeeds by his wife's former employer. Lewis, 37, is on trial for attempted extortion stemming from a letter received last fall by Johnson & Johnson, makers of Tylenol, during a wave of random killings that left seven dead. Slow Death humor magazine brings life to grave campus

A comedian can only last till he either takes himself serious or his audience takes him serious.

Will Rogers

It's refreshing to read good humor — especially at the expense of academicians, clerics and politicians. Slow Death, a humor magazine just published by five Notre Dame seniors, who call themselves the Ad Hominem Club, have put together a challenge to the mediocre comedy of bathroom stalls and alumni clad in bright green pants.

Cap'n Crunch swings over six alligators on the front cover; nuns pray next to a group of eating utensils on the back cover — Slow Death revels in what Bill Cavanaugh, one of the magazine's editors, calls "complete absurdism."

Brian Stanley, another one of the *Ad Hominem*s, says the idea for the magazine came to the group when the five were in London last semester with the Arts and Letters junior year program. Discussions during weekly meetings at a local pub produced the germ for the magazine.

"Since Notre Dame doesn't have a humor magazine and since there is definitely a need for one, we decided to get together," says Stanley.

The challenge facing the five is not so much a challenge of having to spend their own money for the free magazine — they published and distributed the 1,200 copies of the first issue, to men's dorms only, for approximately $100 — but the sense of humor of the Notre Dame community, which Stanley says ranges from "poor at the administration level to scatological at the student level."

So why the name Slow Death? Cavanaugh says the title "means absolutely nothing." The reason for Slow Death however, is far from meaningless. According to an editorial note on the last page of this issue, Slow Death "was born out of the appalling lack of a genuine major-university type humor magazine (not to mention lack of humor) on this insulated and womb-like campus..."

A condensation of Luke's Gospel is one of the ways in which Slow Death hopes to raise Notre Dame's humor quotient:

Okay, there's this guy Jesus, right? And he gets born over in Israel, only he goes to Egypt for a while because they want to get him and because he was born in this barn. And he grows up and it turns out he's the Son of God, so he says a bunch of really wise things and they start capitalizing His pronouns. And then these guys get really mad and they kill Him, only He doesn't die, see? Except for three days, and then He comes back and saves the world.

But the *Ad Hominem*s also parody the ways in which many hypocritical students, who treat every controversy as a moral issue, sermonize newspaper readers through "Letters to the Editor":

Sir, dear:

I am writing in response to the article "How to Name Your Baby," which appears in this issue. I am appalled at your insensitive treatment of this very delicate time in a couple's life together. The naming of a baby will affect it throughout its entire life, and it is simply irresponsible to suggest naming it "Xrtnf." I am reminded of the 'No Fat Chicks' incident of a few years ago. This is a disgrace.

Name withheld

Response to the magazine has been "very positive," says Cavanaugh, who terms the issue "a good first effort."

Is Slow Death a one-time deal? "No way," says Stanley, who wants to get more underclassmen involved in the next issue which he expects will appear before Christmas. The magazine runs on no timetable — Slow Death's publication schedule is "spasmodic," he says.

While some of the stories and poems in Slow Death are by no means acceptable to prudes, each piece is in its own way tastefully done.

Notre Dame students take themselves too seriously — between studying for tests, writing term papers, and reading The Observer, there isn't much time to laugh. Slow Death, then, is a welcome change. After all, Notre Dame needs a good laugh every once in a while, even if that laugh is at itself.

The views expressed in the Inside column are the views of the author, and do not necessarily reflect the views of the editorial board or staff.

Students, prof. join to build Trojan horse

By TRIPP BALTZ
News Staff

When USC comes to Notre Dame Stadium this Saturday, they may find themselves looking a gift horse in the mouth.

A group of spirited students, with the assistance of Business Professor James Ward, are building a Trojan horse which they feel may be one of the keys to promoting spirit within the student body for the Southern California game.

The horse will appear on Saturday before the game in a reenactment of the disputed referee call that resulted in the Trojan victory over Notre Dame last year.

The players in the skit will be hidden inside the Trojan horse, dressed in white football jerseys contributed by Football Coach Gerry Faust.

The students working on the horse, headed by Cathy David and Dan O'Hare, are also promoting the display of over 1200 banners placed on all sides of the dorms to warmly welcome the Trojans to Notre Dame. The Student Union is contributing $75 as an award for the best banner, to be judged on Friday from Noon to 4:30 p.m.

Two meetings were held for students who wished to start a spirit campaign for the game, and the idea of building the Trojan Horse was presented to the Hall Presidents Council. "Everybody was behind it 100 percent," said Ward.

Dean Roemer was pleased with the idea, said Ward, and when the group went to Coach Faust, Ward told him, "You give us eleven fine players, and we'll supply the twelfth."

Ward found generous donations from the community in making the project.

The South Bend Tribune contributed paper for the banners and the Student Union gave $75 for the production of posters to be spread around campus. Hardware supplies as well as food and drinks for those working on the spirit project were offered by many other local establishments.

Ward wanted to stress that the students get involved in the promotion of spirit for the football team.

"Our slogan is, 'The Spirit is Back,'" he said. "We've got to bring back the spirit that has existed throughout the last 100 years here at Notre Dame."

Those who are helping to reconstruct the reproduction of the ancient war machine are confident that history will repeat itself. This time, however, instead of a Greek victory, it will be the Irish who overcome the Trojans.

Orientation begins today for regents

By REBECCA HETLAND
News Staff

An orientation program for newly inducted members of the Saint Mary's Board of Regents will begin today, and will kick off a weekend of meetings and scheduled activities.

The program includes presentations on the history of St. Mary's as well as a presentation on student government by Student Body President Elaine Hocter.

Hocter, also a second year member of the Committee on Student Life, estimated that ten students are directly involved in the board's various committees on investments, education and student life.

Last year's board meeting revolved around changing the parietals on the St. Mary's campus. Hocter maintained that nothing of this sort of caliber will be discussed during the first meeting of the Board.

Katy Whelahan, this year's student regent, serves as primary mediator between the students and the Board. As a student regent, she is required to participate in all regent activities which range from a series of meetings and dinners, and concluding with the football game on Saturday.

Whelahan noted the topic of discussion for the student life committee will be the Catholic character of St. Mary's, while the committee for education will concentrate on the foreign studies program.

Since the orientation program is the first of the two meetings which will be held in the course of the year, Whelahan and the rest of the student committee members could not predict all topics to be discussed.

Faculty Senate voices displeasure, confusion about new medical plan

By PATRICIA CARROLL
News Staff

The Faculty Senate is confused about the University's newly instituted medical coverage plan, and at the senate meeting Tuesday night they discussed their dissatisfaction with the plan's lack of clarity and consistency.

The main points of confusion are whether medicinal costs are covered in the plan, what limits exist in financial coverage, and how the University's medical insurance policies are related to Blue Cross and Blue Shield.

Exasperated by outdated pamphlets and conflicting verbal reports and figures, the senate members unanimously called for the University personnel office to produce a detailed synopsis of the health policy in layman's language.

In addition, the senate moved that as soon as such a report was available it should be sent to all faculty members.

"As a group, we are very disillusioned by the personnel office," said Professor Jay Dolan. "They seem to have fallen down on things. The faculty shouldn't be doing this work, they (the Personnel office) should be responsible for it."

However, Mario Borelli, president of the Faculty Senate, noted that progress is being made towards contacting other companies and considering bids regarding health benefit plans. A report on such a plan will be presented at next month's meeting.

Professor Donald Barrett, chairman of the senate committee on faculty affairs, also read a committee report on faculty compensation, and said he believed it "imperative to recognize what... has been done in the area of raising faculty salaries" on the part of the Administration.

According to his report, the pay for full professorship has gone from $28,000 to over $50,000. Barrett stated that, although the increase is somewhat overshadowed by the high concentration of assistant professorships ranked among the faculty, it should be appreciated by the faculty as a "signal accomplishment."

Barrett's report also stated that ten percent of Notre Dame's research and teaching staff of five hundred are women - a figure which Barrett thought was poor when compared to peer institutions.

"Though this difference may be explained by length of tenure and status," said Barrett, "it is one which must be further investigated."

Lack of adequate social space and the use of refrigerators for alcoholic beverages were suggested reasons among the faculty for the campus alcohol problem. The issue was briefly discussed in the student affairs committee report given by chairman Theresa Phelps.

Phelps said she is currently correlating the results of a faculty questionnaire concerning the problem.

Borelli approximated figures from the Psychological Services Center which he said concluded that "75% of Notre Dame students use alcohol and 30% abuse it." Borelli compared these to the national average of 50% use and 20% abuse.

The senate seemed to agree that the problem was acute at Notre Dame.

Phelps mentioned the Admissions survey of the faculty on the "ideal student," the results of which she said should spur the senate and all faculty to question, "what uniform profile do we encourage of students, what things do we value," and "are we rewarding the people meeting these goals?"

Borelli expressed his appreciation of University President Father Theodore Hesburgh's attendance at the meeting and hoped that both the Administration and the student body would continue to take an interest in the activities of the Faculty Senate.

Football fever

Students are getting fired up for Saturday's game with Southern Cal, as this vengeful banner above the door of Alumni Hall indicates. Irish fans hope to make up for last year's loss to USC, which many believe was due to a referee error.

percent of the money in student fees, it would be impossible (to publish) without a large donation from someone.

"We can't raise revenue and cut circulation at the same time. We can't run the same number of ads in a smaller paper. To increase ads, we'd have to increase space and increase costs."

Van Wolvlear said The Observer would retain "complete control" over its own financial operations under the unit budget plan, adding that formulation of the budget and decisions on how to spend money would remain under the newspaper's realm.

He said, however, that last summer's audit indicates that the paper opens itself up to "free embezzlement" when the top three management personnel are only responsible to themselves.

"Any outfit that can take in practically $250,000 and does not have a budget does not have control over where money goes," he said. "No department in the University has free reign of the money given to it."

Van Wolvlear said hiring an outside firm to audit the books of

The Observer would be "impractical" since it might cost approximately $30,000 while the University would conduct the audit for free.

Dziedzic, who estimated the cost of an annual independent audit at $800, said the use of an outside auditor is financially feasible and "definitely worth it if we are to establish ourselves as not just another student-run organization."

The latest exchange of proposals between The Observer and the University is only part of a series of negotiations begun after the audit was released July 1.

Van Wolvlear initially suggested that the newspaper be placed on the unit budget system in an Aug. 4 letter to Dziedzic. The letter states that the changeover would include "the preparation of a yearly budget, monthly printouts of all activity, deposits for each type of advertising, all receivables, all expenditures, including payroll..."

Dziedzic, after meeting with The Observer general board, sent a reply to Van Wolvlear Aug. 29 indicating that the board decided not to place The Observer on the unit budget system because "the costs and implications of such a move far outweigh the benefits.

"The financial controls necessary for rectifying our problems must come from within our own organization," the letter continues. "Even if we accepted your proposal, we would still implement our own controls."

Van Wolvlear, in turn, responded Sept. 2 that the decision of The Observer board "really disappointed me."

"You and your staff evidently did not consider being of assistance to The Observer staffs who will succeed you. In no way will your people be able to regularize an accounting system for future staffs."

In a follow-up meeting Sept. 29 with Van Wolvlear and Director of Student Activities James McDonnell, Dziedzic said he was told student fees would definitely be cut if The Observer was not on the unit budget system by Jan. 1. The student fees in question totalled approximately $90,000 — with $70,993 in Notre Dame student fees and $17,660 in St. Mary's fees collected last year.

"It was an ultimatum," Dziedzic said. "But we remained steadfast in our belief that a newspaper cannot be independent if it's not running its own finances."

Dziedzic said details of the audit and University unit budget proposal were not released to the public earlier because "we decided it was necessary to check on a compromise first... to see what the proposal would imply."

The Observer general board decided to release the findings now "because it is apparent there will be some change in The Observer. We have realized that things will no longer be running at The Observer the way they have been running. That's why it's news," he said.

Fosmoe also defended the board's decision to hold information until this week: "We thought we could negotiate before we went public. We thought it was in the students' best interest."

Fosmoe said she talked to 14 former editors-in-chief of The Observer and to representatives of independent student newspapers at 10 major universities while checking into the issue.

biguous statements... or unresolved differences of opinions."

The auditors said they were "unable to carry this procedure out without incurring unknown delays."

Dziedzic said The Observer has taken steps to correct the abuses by implementing or agreeing to implement all the suggestions outlined in the audit.

Three new student workers were hired this fall to help in the accounting department in an attempt to provide some continuity to the paper's operation, according to Observer Controller Alex Szilvas.

The newspaper has also begun double-entry bookkeeping as the audit suggested, Szilvas said.

The major financial change this year is the shift from a cash-basis to an accrual-basis accounting system, according to Szilvas and Business Manager Dan O'Hare.

In the past, the business department of The Observer had trouble matching long-term expenses with revenues since the revenues did not always show up in monthly accounts in a cash-basis system.

With an accrual-basis system, one can "match revenues as they're earned to expenses as they're expended," Szilvas said. The new system will be more complex and more work, he said, but it will be easier now "to show the proper amount of income each year."

they didn't learn of the precedent until a few weeks ago because they said they had begun the project working as a group of individuals without the University's assistance.

"We didn't purposely forego holding a raffle this year for any certain reason," said committee member Stella Ossello. "When it was brought up to us two weeks ago, everyone who's going on the trip had already paid for it, and it wouldn't really have been fair to hold a raffle at that point."

Ruehlmann stressed that the Office of Student Activities was not a sponsor of the trip when planning began last December. He said the committee had no way of knowing how student government committees usually distribute compensation.

"First Source Travel offered us a package of benefits in the beginning that were designated to be used by the committee," Ruehlmann said.

"This was before the University was even working with us," Grojean added. "So there was no precedent from the past — we had not been told of one."

Assistant Director of Student Activities Joni Neal said previous class trips had not been successful enough to merit the time involved in planning the trip.

"The size of the trips had dwindled in numbers, and the Student Activities people felt like they had gotten too expensive for the students to afford," said Neal.

The Bahamas committee members were told last year they had to demonstrate enough student interest to warrant the University's sponsorship, Neal said. By March, she said, enough people had signed up for the trip, and the committee had sought bids from travel agencies.

Bill on King holiday sits on Reagan's desk

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate sent President Reagan a bill yesterday establishing a national holiday in memory of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. That supreme honor has been accorded only one other American — George Washington.

Reagan has promised to sign the bill, which designates the third Monday in January, starting in 1986, as a legal holiday in King's name. Final congressional action, sought for years, came more than 15 years after the civil rights leader was assassinated.

King's widow, Coretta, and his son, Martin III, watched from the Senate gallery as the climactic roll call was taken. The family was accompanied by singer Stevie Wonder; Benjamin Hooks, president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; and Joseph Lowry, head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference that King founded.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., told the Senate that King "deserves the place which this legislation gives him beside Washington and Columbus. In a very real sense, he was the second father of our country, the second founder of a new world that is not only a place, a piece of geography, but a noble set of ideals."

Earlier yesterday, the Senate, shrugged off a number of bitter-end attempts by conservatives to derail the legislation.

But among those who supported the measure were some Southern senators, such as Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., and Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., who vehemently opposed King's crusade for civil rights legislation two decades ago.

King, a Baptist preacher who emulated Mohandas K. Ghandi's creed of non-violence, won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1964. He was slain in Memphis, Tenn., on April 4, 1968.

President Reagan initially opposed the measure, complaining about the cost of creating a 10th paid federal holiday. The Congressional Budget Office has estimated the cost at $18 million annually in premium time for essential federal employees.

Before the final vote, Jesse Helms, R-N.C., persisted in peppering the Senate with proposed alternatives to a King holiday. On Tuesday, Helms lost a major attempt to recommit the bill for further study of Helms' allegations that King was influenced by communists.

"If we are going into this business of picking out heroes, then I think my No. 1 hero of all time deserves some consideration," Helms said during the final hours of debate in urging a holiday to observe the April 13 birthday of Thomas Jefferson.

The Senate defeated, 82-10, that Helms proposal, which would have specified that there be no more than the present nine paid federal holidays, and that there be no King holiday unless Jefferson were similarly honored.

Helms later told reporters: "I'm not a racist. I'm not a bigot. Just ask any black who knows me whether I am."

Unlearning 'truths' in Chile

Editor's note: This is the first in a two-part series concerning the Holy Cross Associates program in Chile. The columns are excerpts from letters written by Associates serving in or about to go to Chile for the two and one-half year program. Applications for this year's program in Chile are due November 1 (the deadline for the domestic program is February 3.)

The Associates

Chile

Life here among the poor — the working class — is urgent. It demands a tremendous capacity for emotion. We never pass a day (at least not yet in a half year) without running the full gamut of emotions... from tragedy and heartache to ecstasy and celebration... every day. The Christian community I live in is truly a Christian community. It is the base of my life here. I live with three women now.

An astonishing depth of sensitivity exists within our community — sensitivity to the person, to communication, to the Gospel. In the context of the community and the reality here, I'm coming to a rich understanding of the wholeness of Jesus' message. His living testimony is an amazing challenge and invitation. Try to live the truth, try to live love. His testimony certainly is the truth.

One of the very strong developments I'm experiencing is the force of Jesus' truth stripping down the truths I was raised on, so to speak. It's been going on since my second year at ND and it continues with fervor. Sometimes I'm scared of where it will all take me.

The process is painful since I have yet to find much truth in the scheme of my society (or any society). I feel a kind of rage inside when I reflect on how a society raises its own. When I think of the basic truths of our society — the protestant work ethic, the charity mentality, the contemporary Christian rhetoric, the progress of mankind, the good conscientious citizen, national security, consumerism, and capitalism — I get a strong feeling in my gut.

It's a powerful, powerful scheme of formation and orientation of people in their world. It's a suffocating scheme in which a person rarely fulfills him or herself except within the invisible boundaries set up by the society.

The development of society in Latin America is a sad history. The image of abortion, or the conquest of man/woman in slavery would not be too strong. For the most part, the society is the fruit of a ruthless domination (one well rooted in the U.S. society), it's truths and values.

Like all Latin American societies, Chile's own cultural and societal development has been aborted; aborted also in the sense that it never really got a good chance to get started. It's more or less the same story in all the land south of the Rio Grande. And it's all in the name of the basic truths that the dominant society lays down.

It's all so well hidden (or skillfully represented) to the citizens that it provokes very little within the hearts of even we Christians. For the most part the citizens continue their own personal way of life while the conscious ones lament that things must be this way. We assimilate the charity mentality along with all the rest of the truths and settle into our contemporary Christianity.

We leave far behind Jesus' antagonistic denunciation of hypocrisy, his burning love of humanity, his uncompromising denial of the crown — the assimilation into the values of this world. We leave in the dust of ancient history the Way of the Cross.

AnTostal audit

Dear Editor:

Fabricated quotes and quotes out of context compel me to address Mike Millen's article on the An Tostal audit. The article neglects to mention the major points I made during the interview, in addition to the misquotes.

First, I never said "(Jim) McDonnell didn't keep tabs on the funds." McDonnell was not the reason An Tostal went over budget. Due to a decision made by Student Government four years ago, An Tostal had its own private account. Thus, they could write their own checks without the signatures of the Student Body Treasurer and James McDonnell. These signatures are required on all other Student Government and Student Union checks. McDonnell had no way of knowing what An Tostal was doing with their money. For those who maintain that McDonnell is at fault, I suggest that Student Body Presidents Lloyd Burke and Brian Callaghan should share equal responsibility.

Secondly, I never said, "There was a general lack of control and a definite laxity regarding money." The reporter asked several questions inviting me to say just this, and when I did not, he made up a quote to that effect. In fact, I made sure to point out to him that, although the control on money was less than most SG/SU projects, it was not nonexistent. I told the reporter that this was not the problem, but rather it was the Heatwave concert.

I explained to the reporter (a freshman who never has seen an An Tostal) the problems with the "Irish Wake." In 1981, the "Irish Wake" was very successful, but problems arose from the excessive and blatant use of alcohol in Stepan Center. The administration almost cancelled the event for 1982, but it was saved. Unfortunately, a required name change, late planning due to late approval, and the negative publicity caused the event to have a low turnout.

One of Jay Reidy's (1983 An Tostal Chairman) top priorities was to return the "Irish Wake" to the success it enjoyed in 1981. Jay felt that a band with previous Top Ten hits would give the event good publicity and credibility needed for a good turnout. Heatwave was the best band available at what Jay felt was an available price. Plans for the concert were made in conjunction with Steve Strake, Student Union Director and Laurene Powers, SU Social Commissioner. So a number of other SU/SG officials were involved in the decision making process.

The great error of An Tostal '83 was Jay's planning on 3,000 students attending the concert/dance. While turnout was good, it was well under 3,000 and hence the concert lost more money than planned, approximately $3500.

The other source of loss was an accident with one of the rented vehicles used by An Tostal. This accident cost about $800. These two factors are why An Tostal came in over budget.

I mentioned both of these to the reporter. If your reporters would not think of themselves as junior Woodward and Bernsteins and concentrate on the facts rather than coming into an interview with preconceived notions, I believe the quality and accuracy of the articles would improve.

Mark Rolfes

Editor's note: Although Mr. Millen may have incorrectly quoted Mr. Rolfes referral to "tabs on funds," Mr. Rolfes did suggest that funds were not watched closely by James McDonnell, director, of student activities. The Observer regrets any misunderstanding caused by the article.

Bahamas trip

Dear Editor:

In response to the letter written earlier this week on the Bahamas trip, I feel that the committee has done an injustice in adding the twelve extra dollars to each senior's fare while seven students are permitted to go for only a small fraction of the package price.

Although advertising, "group incurred liabilities" and the Bahamas fee (?) obviously cost money, this added fee could have been avoided if the travel bonuses had been more equitably and judiciously distributed.

While it appears questionable that even the original committee member should receive such a lucrative reward for their efforts when others in campus leadership positions do considerably more work and expect no such consideration, more could be overlooked were it not for the fact that the committee has grown to seven members (could there be that much work when going through a travel agency?). Neither the trip participants nor the senior class president were informed. Moreover, because of these covert actions, there will be no suitcase raffle of the complimentary trips as has been traditional.

What has transpired to this point has apparently been an error in judgement on the part of a few; however, the error needs to be rectified before all involved seniors must pay for the mistakes of the committee members. I, for one, cannot afford to do so.

Mara Erkins

Shoot or no?

Dear Editor:

Imagine the scene! The weak light of a pre-dawn sun illuminates the sky but keeps the forest in shadow. You are a hunter in pursuit of your prey. Tirelessly, stubbornly you pursue your quarry but to no avail. For half a mile the chase quickens, and suddenly, you see a movement, a flicker of action behind a bush. Is this the hunted animal, the goal of the morning's pursuits? Should you raise the gun, fire into the bush and finish the hunt? Slowly, you raise the gun, and finger the trigger but suddenly stop. What exactly is moving behind the bush? Is it your hunted prey, or is it a bird or perhaps even a man? Yes, maybe it's a man. What then will you do? Morally speaking, you must not shoot, for possibly you would kill a man.

Now, let's dismiss this story temporarily and talk about a more serious issue — abortion. Let's take this stale topic and present it in a different light.

The major controversy concerning abortion is the question of the fetus's humanity. Is the fetus human at the moment of conception, at birth or at some nebulous time in between? Some pro-life people believe that the fetus is human from the moment of conception. Therefore, it follows that all abortions are acts of murder.

Many pro-choice people, however, insist that life and humanity do not begin at conception. Rather, they explain that a fetus is not human until actual birth or a short time before. It follows that abortion could be justified under certain circumstances.

Whether abortion is right or wrong seems to depend on individual opinion. But no one really knows when a fetus becomes human. Scientists, philosophers and medical doctors do not agree, hence the confusion.

Now, pretend once again that you are a hunter. No, you aren't climbing the hills of a desolate countryside, and no, you aren't in a dark forest. Further, you are not pursuing an animal or a bird. Rather, you are thinking about the question of abortion. Like the disconcerted hunter in the wood, should you fire with the belief that your target is not human? Or perhaps, should you wait and see? If you do shoot, you may kill a person.

USC pre-game

Dear Editor:

Well, it is the week leading up to the classic college football game, USC vs. Notre Dame, at Notre Dame Stadium. While everyone endures papers, quizzes and exams, the senior class is looking forward to what it hopes will be a most memorable moment, a victory over the Trojans of Southern Cal. The Class of '84 will seek to avert the misfortune of the last two graduating classes who never knew the sweet taste of victory over USC. It's been five long years but this time hopefully it will be different.

It should be different from the last game in Notre Dame Stadium. The crowd was timid and weak throughout the whole game. The tone was set before the game even started when the student body wasn't waiting for the team at the goalposts. The sight of bobbing gold helmets slowly moving through a mob of fanatic Domers is one of the most awe-inspiring moments in sport.

Let's make sure USC knows everyone is together in our desire to win on Saturday. The students should be extremely loud before the game and be on the field when the team comes firing out of the lockerroom. Take a look at the nearest football player's door. They are ready. Securely please let us on the field to honor one of college football's best traditions and the example par excellence of Notre Dame spirit. See you on the field!

Pangborn team

Dear Editor:

In his article on interhall football (Oct. 13), Mr. Antonini refers to the Pangborn football team as "lowly." Obviously Antonini does not know what he is talking about. At the time the article appeared Pangborn had tied division leading Howard, and lost to Carroll on a last minute drive aided by a very questionable pass-interference call. On top of this, Pangborn thrashed St. Ed's on Sunday. If Antonini would like to bring his lowly face to Pangborn, he can see a good football team.

The politics of friendship

In his surprise move of appointing William P. Clark in James Watt's place Ronald Reagan acted to keep the New Right from being totally miserable. He picked a deep and hard conservative to follow a deep and hard conservative, thus serving notice that the Interior post is of prime importance to him, and that Watt's land and resources policies were also Reagan's own.

Max Lerner

The Max Lerner Column

There is no one in the President's whole political family closer to him than Clark. He is a moving symbol of Reagan's sense of concern. When Reagan was worried about Alexander Haig and the State Department he made Clark deputy secretary of state to keep watch on Haig. When he was worried about the chaos in the National Security Council he made Clark his chief security adviser. When he wanted to heal the wound left by James Watt's ouster under public pressure he again shifted Clark, this time to Interior.

This could go on endlessly. With three posts, and Reagan's term still some 15 months to go, think of how many he will have held by the end of his friend's second term — if Reagan wins it.

Reagan took a lead from his presidential model, Franklin Roosevelt. Like FDR, Reagan loves baiting the press with surprises, and showing his glee when he has pulled a fast one on the media men.

There is another parallel with FDR, who made his best friend, Harry Hopkins, the No. 2 man in his administration. Hopkins wasn't particularly trained for any big government job. He was a social worker. Roosevelt put him in charge of the Work Progress Administration (WPA), which was a leverage point for getting people back to work, using the state as employer of last resort.

Later Roosevelt shifted Hopkins and sent him around the world, wherever his own palsied legs couldn't carry him, to serve as his alter ego. He was at once a traveling and formal portmanteau secretary of state and defense, and personal ambassador extraordinaire. As the president's intimate he could speak for him, and he carried half the war on his invalid shoulders. Next to FDR, he was easily the most powerful man in the administration.

William Clark had the same role as head of the National Security Council. His new post is of a lesser power but a crucial one for a president who wants to avoid deep trouble as his reelection campaign gets under way. Reagan described Clark, to a fundamentalist women's religious group, as a "God-fearing Westerner." He might have added that he is also a good soldier.

Reagan's critics say Clark knows little about the Interior job. But he knew even less about foreign policy, as his Senate confirmation hearings revealed. He learns fast and has the trust of the right person. When President John Kennedy made his brother attorney general the critics noted he was barely out of law school. "I can't see it's wrong," the president answered, "to give him a little legal experience before he goes out to practice law." And it did.

Every president has a political family, which is close to nepotism but not as close as Kennedy's was. Kennedy had his whole clan to rely on. Harding and Truman had a cluster of "cronies" who did the White House harm. Reagan has Bill Clark.

Engineering 101: a course in religion?

This young Catholic engineer wonders why the teaching philosophy of Notre Dame's College of Engineering lacks depth. It seems knowledge is taught, but wisdom is not. Specifically, the overwhelming majority of engineering courses are taught in no broader context. At the Catholic university the teaching of our Church is never recognized or brought into the teaching of engineering.

engineers who are caring individuals, but the two concepts never seem to be connected in the classroom. I dare say this lack of association in engineering schools on the whole is greatly responsible for the presence in this country of the "opposing faces of engineering," as Dean Schmitz describes it, the mutual mistrust and misunderstanding between scientists and engineers on the one hand, and the technologically-unknowing on the other. One cannot discredit the vast amount of good done by engineers who don't recognize any greater motivation than engineering itself. Perhaps, however, an engineer puts himself in a position to do greater good, and not necessarily material or tangible good, if he works from the context of faith.

Direct reference to the Catholic Church is not necessary and cannot really be expected. Many of our outstanding faculty members are from other countries and are nonchristian. But is it impossible to bring the teaching of the Church into the classroom? Confining faith to religious terminology alone belittles it.

Imagine a student walking into the opening class of Engineering 101 and hearing this introductory lecture:

"The first thing we should do, class, is decide why you are taking this course. Let's take a bit of a tangent. Why am I here? Since we're here at Notre Dame, we can safely start from this assumption: I am here to love, and happiness is the fruit of my effort to do what I can to make others happy.

"Practically, this means using our God-given talents and abilities to do what we can for others. Each of us has an aptitude for math and science. And so, at a deeper level we are here honing our skills, preparing ourselves to give the world those talents with which we are blessed."

The present classroom separation between wisdom and knowledge could be mended with the help of the founders of this University, the priests and brothers of the Congregation of Holy Cross. Perhaps the CSC's could sponsor faculty workshops and inter-college colloquia. Refresher courses in theology and philosophy could be offered to the faculty. These would be especially helpful to noncatholics seeking more exposure to Catholic ideology.

The imparting of wisdom should be a benefit made available to students at Notre Dame in each and every classroom, and should involve a common mission among all faculty to present their subjects in a broader context.

Even more frustrating, the engineering faculty (besides being good engineers) are also good human beings. We have competent

The Flying Fathers, known as "the Harlem Globetrotters of ice hockey," will play a game on Wednesday, Nov. 9 at the ACC for the benefit of Phoenix House, the halfway house for recovering alcoholic women in South Bend. The Fathers, an internationally-known group of priests, have all at one time played either amateur or pro hockey prior to entering the seminary. They will play 20-minute periods against the Notre Dame club hockey team, the St. Joseph's High School hockey team, and the Ice Boxers of the Michiana Senior League. — The Observer

Oliver Robinson and placed guard Roger Phegley on the injured reserve list with tendinitis. Head coach Morris McHone said he's just glad Paxson finally showed up for camp. "Even though he's behind our other guards at this time, there are still 10 days before regular season and that's much better than if the season already had begun," McHone said. Paxson's brother, Jim, is a guard with the Portland Trail Blazers.

Refuses part-time

Rose released by Phillies

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Veteran first baseman Pete Rose refused an offer to be retained as a part-time player, and was released yesterday by the Philadelphia Phillies.

"I don't like to play part-time," Rose said during a press conference called by Phillies' owner Bill Giles to announce the veteran player had been released.

"I've been an everyday player for so many years it's hard for me to play three days a week. I'm sure there are some teams out there who want me."

Giles said, "I admire him more than anybody who has ever been in uniform."

In turn, Rose said he wanted to wish the Phillies "nothing but success in the future" and added he had fond memories of his years in Philadelphia.

Rose, 42, insisted he can play on a regular basis and said he would even be willing to consider switching from the National League to the American League as a designated hitter.

"It's major league baseball," he said. "It's easier to DH a few days a week and then play a few days a week."

Rose said he turned down a part-time role with the Phillies because he wanted to break Ty Cobb's all-time major league career hit record of 4,191. Rose has 3,990 hits and needs only 10 hits to become the second player in major league history to reach the 4,000 milestone.

His goal, he added, also is one of his major selling points as a free agent.

"I'm going after Ty Cobb's record and they're (another team) going to cash in on that reward, too," Rose said.

The Phillies released Rose, who hit only .245 with 17 extra base hits in 1983, because they plan to go with rookie Len Matuszek next season.

There were rumors that Rose might sign with the Atlanta Braves, and play left field. When asked about that, Rose turned to his agent, Reuven Katz, for an answer.

"Any rumor is a false rumor," Katz said. "We haven't had any conversations with anyone. We didn't know until an hour ago what the Phillies had in mind."

Rose added that league rules prohibit such "conversations."

Rose was signed by the Phillies on Dec. 5, 1978, as a free agent. He had played out his option with the Cincinnati Reds.

The Phillies signed him to a four-year contract estimated at $3.3 million over four years.

When the contract ran out last season, Rose was signed to a one-year deal with a $300,000 buyout clause, which the Phillies could invoke if they decided not to renew the contract by Nov. 15, 1983. Rose collected the $300,000 yesterday.

Rose played in the recent National League playoffs and World Series only because Matuszek was brought up from the Phillies' Portland farm team in the Pacific Coast League Sept. 1.

Tournament finals

Novice boxing concludes today

By MIKE SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

It's not Madison Square Garden. It's not even the ACC Main Arena. It's the ACC Boxing Room, the site of the Boxing Club's novice tournament. First-time boxers get to show their ability in this tournament which opened Tuesday and will conclude today.

The semifinals, which were fought on Tuesday, involved 30 boxers competing in 14 three-round fights (two boxers received byes). While the fighters will not be confused with Sugar Ray Leonard or Boom Boom Mancini, they know how to punch. In fact, six of the 14 fights ended on TKO's.

The first fight set the tone for a rough set of matches as Paul Ngo advanced to the semis by knocking out Steve Slaughter at 1:25 of the first round. Ngo was joined by Steve Badyna who had a tougher time with Tim Roe but won a unanimous decision.

Pat Collins and Tony Rodriguez were also winners, advancing to the finals. Collins outlasted Dave Simon for the decision, while Rodriguez won a very close fight with Jack D'Ambrosia.

Rip Graf became the fifth boxer to reserve a bout today as he gradually got the better of Mike O'Toole after a close first round.

Mark St. Amand and Ed Bornemann will be fighting each other in the 150-lb. finals. St. Amand showed accurate aim as he found Bill O'Malley's face often. O'Malley stood up to his punches until the referee decided that he had taken enough. The fight ended with a TKO at 1:30 of the third round.

In Bornemann's fight with Frank Pimental, he did everything but knock Pimental out. Bornemann chased his opponent all over the ring, constantly landing punches and forcing three standing eight counts.

The boxers at 160 pounds reached the finals in slightly different ways. Jim Kelly, using his height and reach advantage, got the better of a slugfest with Andy Deem. Shortly into the second round, Kelly caught Deem with a hard right and put him out on the floor.

Kelly's opponent in the finals will be Jeff Parlina, who held off a tough Al Leonard before winning the decision. Leonard had to take three standing eight counts, but came on strong in the final round. It was too little too late.

In what may have been the best bout of the day, Tim Dahlen beat Pat Bauer in the 165-lb. class in a split decision. Dahlen, using his height and reach to his advantage, took the first round, but Bauer was able to get inside in the second. Dahlen clinched the fight with a strong third round.

Three of the last four fights ended in TKO's as the bigger boxers took to the ring. Peter Riley scored a knockout as he pounded Chris Vargas before the fight was stopped at 2:00 of the second round.

Dave Gaus won the twelfth spot in the finals as the referee decided that Mike Renaud had been hit too many times and stopped the fight at 1:45 of the second round.

Tom Burger, who may be the strongest boxer in the tournament, stopped a good boxer in Jim Ackerson, who, nevertheless, was unable to protect himself from Burger. The bout was stopped at 1:50 of the second round.

The final eight bouts will begin at 4 p.m. today in the Boxing Room, which is located inside the North Dome near Gate 3. The winners in each weight group may or may not fight in the regular tournament that everyone knows about, but they have gotten off to a good start.

... Defense

Wilson recovered a fumble. Throughout the day he provided good coverage. On the last defensive play of the game he returned an interception 73 yards for a touch-down, although it was called back due to a penalty.

The Frederick, Maryland native was a two-way starter in high school. He led his team to the state championship his senior year. In his senior year, he gained 996 yards rushing on 92 carries playing quarterback. On defense, he had nine interceptions as a senior.

"When I came here in August," Wilson says, "my goal was to make the traveling squad and place well on the depth chart."

As a freshman many people accept the so-called freshmen mistakes. However, Wilson has avoided these mistakes thus far. He does acknowledge a need for improvement.

"My best attribute is my quickness," he says. "But I need to work on coming up and stopping the run."

The other youngster in the secondary is Pat Ballage. At 6-2, 197 lbs., he possesses good size and outstanding quickness.

Ballage has started every game this year at the weak cornerback slot. He is fifth on the team in total tackles with 26. He also has caused one fumble and intercepted one pass.

Like Wilson, Ballage was a two-way starter in high school. As a senior he gained 1,100 yards in the tailback slot. On defense he recorded 26 tackles and one interception. He was an honorable mention choice on Adidas' Scholastic Coach prep All-America team.

From the Purdue game through the Army game, Ballage has continued to improve. The main reason is not a physical adjustment, but rather a good frame of mind. Ballage says his confidence has improved.

Ballage says, "Chris Brown and Joe Johnson have helped me by just having confidence in me. They're not worried about having to come over and back me up. That has really helped."

"Coach Johnson has also helped by coaching his confidence in me."

Facing USC quarterback Sean Salisbury does not seem to bother Ballage.

Ballage says, "I anticipate them to throw a lot, and probably at me. However, I feel I'm due for something to happen, maybe a big interception."

If the coaching staff decides that Toran cannot play, the cornerback positions will be manned by two young players. But from what has been demonstrated so far, Irish fans need not worry about Pat Ballage and Troy Wilson being in the lineup. The future looks very bright.

Midterms take toll

Women's football winds down

By MARY SIEGER
Sports Writer

The playoffs are almost here and the competition for playoff spots is getting tougher. When we all return from October Break, there will be only one week remaining in the regular season for women's interhall football making each game an important step toward the playoffs.

Last night, Walsh defeated Lyons 25-7 and in another contest, Breen-Phillips closed their season with a 26-0 victory over Badin.

"We tried to have fun, we were relaxed and we played well," explained Walsh team captain Mary Langer. Walsh, 4-2 on the season, has a chance to make the playoffs. "If we beat Farley, then I'm sure we will," said Langer. She anticipates a competitive game against Farley and said last night's game put her team "in the right frame of mind for Farley."

Yesterday's game officially closed Lyons' season and gave the team a 1-6 final record. "We had fun, the team got close and that's all we wanted to do," said Lyons team captain Martha Burns.

Burns was not disappointed with last night's final score and said the game was closer than the final score indicated. "Walsh scored in the last 10 seconds, so it's a lot closer than it appears," she said.

B-P's win last night gives the team a 4-2 record and a good chance to see some action in the playoffs. "We figured if we won we were in, and if we lost our chances were slim," explained B-P captain Lisa Erhardt.

Erhardt was pleased with last evening's performance and praised the offensive line for an excellent game. "They were executing well and had good momentum," she said.

With two consecutive wins at the end of the season, B-P would have momentum in the playoffs. Erhardt said the most important achievement for the team this season is regained spirit in the team. "I hope we'll make it all the way ... we still want it (the championship) back," she said.

Badin's loss last night can be partially attributed to midterms. According to Badin team captain Sally Esposto, only 10 players arrived for the game. Those 10 players ended up covering unfamiliar offensive and defensive positions. "We were all playing positions we usually don't," said Esposto.

She was not disappointed with last night's performance and the game gave Badin an 0-5 record. "It was a fun game; we were just really disorganized," she said.

On Sunday, Badin dropped a game to Lewis, 9-0. Esposto described the game as Badin's best of the season. "Our defense looked good and our offense is improving with every game," said Esposto.

In a close contest earlier this week, Pasquerilla West lost to B-P, 16-14. P.W. athletic commissioner Mary Jane Lorton said the team "didn't react well under pressure." Although the offense has improved in recent weeks, Lorton said the offense is "too predictable." She plans to add more variety and to mix up plays more often.

In another game last Sunday, Pasquerilla East defeated Lyons 20-0. The game improved P.E.'s record to 4-1 and continues the tie for first place in the league between P.E. and Lewis.

Dupree returns to South

Associated Press

HATTIESBURG, Miss. — Marcus Dupree, the talented running back who suddenly left Oklahoma University last week, registered for classes yesterday at the University of Southern Mississippi.

"I like Southern and I think it's an upcoming school and I want to be part of it," Dupree, 19, told a group of reporters waiting in the USM registrar's office. He will receive a full scholarship to attend the school.

Dupree had talked to Georgia about playing there but said his real choice was between Southern Mississippi and Mississippi State. "I wanted to stay in Mississippi and play close to home," he said. His mother stood at his side as he registered and answered questions.

Dupree said he looked at the future football schedules of both Southern Mississippi and Mississippi State, and at the players on each team before making his choice. "I think Southern has the better players and the better people," he said.

NCAA rules prohibit Dupree from playing next season. But Dupree, who will have two years of eligibility remaining, said yesterday he thought he could still be a candidate for the Heisman Trophy. "If you perform well on the field, it really doesn't matter what school you're at," he said.

Flanner, Dillon halls clinch spots in interhall postseason playoffs

By TOM ANTONINI
Sports Writer

Flanner Hall clinched a spot in the men's interhall playoffs and Dillon extended its win streak to nineteen games in action Tuesday under the lights at Cartier Field. Both teams will advance from the Parseghian Division to the playoffs while the Rockne and Leahy Division playoff teams are as yet undecided.

Flanner defeated Off-Campus 15-0 over the weekend before facing Grace on Tuesday night. It was a game of big plays and Flanner came up with most of them en route to a 22-7 victory. Quarterback Jack Seiler led the way early by tossing two long touchdown passes as Flanner jumped to a 13-0 halftime lead. Grace came back at the beginning of the third quarter to make it 13-7 and was moving in for the tying touchdown in the fourth. However, the Flanner defense stiffened and came up with one of its five interceptions on the night, this one returned all the way for the game clinching score. Flanner added a late field goal to finish up the scoring.

The game was closer than the score indicated. "Grace was tough," Seiler said. "They have a good offense." Seiler is looking forward to the November playoffs. "We're ready. We had a tough game with Dillon last time, but we're ready."

In other action, Dillon stopped Morrissey, 10-0, before a large and vocal crowd. With a 5-0 record, Dillon will receive one of the two byes for the first round of the playoffs. Morrissey ends its season with a 0-3-2 record.

The Leahy and Rockne Division playoff spots are still up for grabs as the regular season winds down tonight at Cartier. Alumni played Zahm, 9-7, over the weekend to stay close to undefeated Stanford. The two teams will meet at 6:30 tonight in what should be a hard-fought game. The second game will feature Holy Cross, the third team in the division seeking a playoff bid. Holy Cross, which shut out Cavanaugh, 6-0, on Sunday, will face Zahm.

The Rockne Division involves the closest race. Howard sits in first place at 2-0-1 but St. Ed's, Sorin, and Pangborn are all right behind with 1-1-1 records. Howard and St. Ed's are scheduled to play at 8:30 with Pangborn taking on Sorin in tonight's final game.

Able underclassmen bolster Irish defense

Some things in college football are accepted as matters of fact. One of these is that the University of Southern California likes to run the football. USC has a habit of producing Heisman Trophy winners at the tailback position, and opponents' game plans usually revolve around the idea that successfully stopping the run will likely result in a victory.

As usual the key for Notre Dame to win Saturday is to stop USC's back. That is, USC's quarterback. Hard to believe, isn't it?

One of the few bright spots for the 2-3-1 Trojans has been the play of Sean Salisbury. This season the junior signal caller has completed 86 of 154 passes for 1,120 yards, nine touchdowns, and four interceptions. He is ranked 18th in the nation in passing at 131.9 yards per game. Two weeks ago against Washington State Salisbury was 19 of 25 for 256 yards and three touchdowns.

With the task of stopping a top quarterback, the pressure will be on Notre Dame's defensive secondary. In the past few weeks this group's improvement has been a key to the improvement of the overall team.

Last week against Army, the Irish started one freshman, one sophomore, one junior, and one senior. No one questions the abilities of junior Joe Johnson or senior Chris Brown. However, people do tend to wonder when freshmen and sophomores start.

Due to the injury to senior co-captain Stacey Toran, freshman Troy Wilson started at the strong cornerback position. Sophomore Pat Ballage has been the starter at the weak cornerback position all season.

Toran, 6-4, 205 pounds, is listed as questionable for Saturday. He did not practice Monday or Tuesday. He practiced yesterday wearing a knee brace.

Defensive coordinator and defensive secondary coach Jim Johnson said there "is an 85 percent chance that Stacey will play Saturday."

"If he cannot play, Troy Wilson will definitely be his replacement." Wilson, 5-11, 170 pounds, replaced Toran in the South Carolina game. He started last week against Army and turned in a fine performance.

Ends holdout

Paxson signs contract with Spurs

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — The San Antonio Spurs' No. 1 draft pick, guard John Paxson of Notre Dame, ended his lengthy holdout yesterday and signed a two-year contract with the National Basketball Association club.

Paxson was the 19th selection overall in the 1983 collegiate draft.

He joined other San Antonio players at a workout yesterday afternoon and said he had "no regrets" about not signing a contract earlier.

"I have no second thoughts," he said.

Spurs General Manager Bob Bass said Paxson flew into town from his Kettering, Ohio, home yesterday morning to sign the contract.

"We are all happy that the negotiations are finally completed," Bass said. "Now we can take John and get him onto the basketball floor. Hopefully, we still have time to evaluate him properly before regular season begins."

San Antonio reportedly gave Paxson $85,000 the first season, jumping to $95,000 the second year.

The San Antonio Express-News said the 6-2, 185-pound guard also could earn up to $100,000 a year with the incentives in the contract.

To make room for Paxson, the Spurs waived second-year guard

Let's try to use some imagination

Ever since the Miami game and the stories and columns that followed, there have been a number of letters addressed to the sports department. These letters have been both negative and positive, with, of course, the negative letters being unsigned. The only thing that seems to be consistent about the letters is that they discuss one topic: the Notre Dame students.

Some of the discussion is pretty abusive. One obviously knowledgeable fan (I'm being sarcastic) complained that the students, especially the one who wrote the negative column ("degrading rhetoric") after the game, were "embarrassing the people of the community." The person, who naturally refused to sign the letter, also felt that "the students are a poor example of school spirit" and can't hold a match to the Miami students when it comes to helping the team to win.

Most of the other letters weren't so humorous, though, and made the point that, whether or not the students feel disappointed about the way things have gone, their importance to the success of the team is great, and their support is vital if the team is going to recover.

Even the letter that I quoted, however, talked about the need for creativity and wit among the students. At first, I didn't pay much attention to this. After all, despite the small size of the student body, you won't find many louder. The number of students that leave before the end of the game is very small, unlike student bodies of South Carolina, Colorado, and Miami. And there is still nothing like a Notre Dame home football weekend.

The fact that the letter-writers attacked the students was bothersome, however. It was like a personal attack because Notre Dame students have a huge amount of pride in their team and in their own support of that team.

But they were right in saying that there is a lack of creativity among the students.

You can look at the day-to-day life at Notre Dame and see the lack of creativity. Why else would something so trivial as Cap'n Crunch cause such a stir? It's not really the students' fault, because the university seems to like deciding for itself when the students can or can't do something unique. All this blandness carries into the ultimate Notre Dame social event — the home football weekend.

Think about a home football weekend. Everyone gets up in the morning to the sound of the Victory March, gathers together, and heads out to the tailgaters in Green Field. The students may move from tailgater to tailgater, but by about one o'clock, they begin to march toward the stadium.

Once in the seats, the students stand up, one of the few original actions. A small number may stand around the goal posts and create a tunnel for the team, but then it's back to the same old cheers and crowd participation where the cheerleaders actually do lead the cheers.

The only exception is a nationally televised game where people bring big banners and flood the field in hopes of getting in the picture.

Except for the efforts of a small number of people, this is as far as the creativity goes. It is almost always the same thing day in and day out.

This Southern Cal game gives the students a great opportunity to be creative. There are some who realize this, and that is why you see T-shirts about last year's game and the creation of a Trojan Horse. The problem is that the ones who are showing this uniqueness are just a small minority of the student body.

Midterms were a good excuse earlier in the week, but most students are just about finished with them and yet, the creativity level is low.

Why is this game such a great opportunity? Well, if you know anything about Notre Dame football, you'd know that Southern Cal has given Notre Dame teams a hard time for the past decade, and has ruined many promising Notre Dame seasons. No present student, except for some grad students, has ever seen the Irish beat the Trojans. This year, the Irish have a good chance to get revenge on the Trojans, on behalf of themselves and all the students who have seen USC beat the Irish time and again.

Another reason is last year's game in which the referees gave the Trojans the game. The T-shirt people and the Trojan Horse people are playing this up (an article on the Trojan Horse appears in the news section today).

The best reason of all is that we are Notre Dame students who take great pride in our team and in our support of the team. We hate to be shown up by any other student body. When we read an article in Sports Illustrated praising the Texas A&M students, it hurts.

I will not pretend to be a creative person, so I don't really have a lot of great suggestions. It would be great if there were banners all over campus tomorrow. It'd be great if most of the students went out on the field to greet the team.

Maybe the old newspaper trick would be effective. It would be neat to see the entire student section holding up newspapers when USC comes out on the field.

Another possibility could be that everyone wears green jerseys or shirts just like the football team did when it last beat Southern Cal in 1977.

These are only suggestions. I'm sure that there are more creative people around than me. After all, somebody came up with the idea to paint No. 1 Moses' fingernails.

Sure, the football team hasn't lived up to expectations. But, this makes the test even more important. Now is the chance to show the other spectators, the alumni, and the critics that Notre Dame students are the wittiest, the loudest, the most creative — in short, the best — students in the country.

So, even if the team is not always a source of great pride, the support of the team is.
