ND-SMC Amnesty International to hold petition drive for bill

By JOHN-JOHN AMORES
News Staff

The Notre Dame-Saint Mary's Amnesty International organization will hold a petition drive for a universal amnesty bill in the North and South Dining Halls on Nov. 9 and 10.

The proposal will call for a universal amnesty for all "prisoners of conscience," people who are incarcerated because of their political and religious beliefs and ethnic background.

The drive is part of a world-wide effort coordinated by Amnesty International to help gain support for the resolution, which will be presented to the General Assembly of the United Nations Dec. 10, 1983. The date marks the 34th anniversary of the signing of the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

One of the requirements of a prisoner of conscience is that he or she has never "used or advocated violence."

Amnesty International was founded in 1961 with the belief that every person has the right to hold and express his convictions and has an obligation to extend that same freedom to others. It has since grown into a world-wide human rights movement that is independent of any government or religion. Today, there are 1,600 Amnesty groups in 33 countries in Africa, Asia, Europe, the Middle East, North America, and South America; there are individual members in 65 countries. All these groups work for the release of prisoners of conscience.

In 1977, Amnesty International won the Nobel Peace Prize.

The leader of Notre Dame's Amnesty group, John Dardis, believes that the Notre Dame-Saint Mary's contribution to Amnesty International is vital. "The petition drive goes to the root of AI, which is the prisoner of conscience," he said.

"People throughout the world are being arrested and punished solely for their origins or beliefs. Amnesty International wants to draw attention to these injustices and put an end to it," Dardis said.

Dardis believes that the petition drive will be a success. "Last year we had a petition drive for the International Women's Day. We collected signatures for the release of six female prisoners of conscience, and in a few days we had close to two thousand signatures. This year, our goal is to reach two thousand signatures, and I think that we can do it."

Observer editor-in-chief, Student Senate hold open forum meeting

By ELIZABETH FLOR
News Staff

The Student Senate held an open forum meeting last evening between student government members and Observer Editor-in-Chief David Dziedzic. Dziedzic answered questions concerning the University's demand that the The Observer join the University Unit Budget Control System.

"The reason I'm here is to find out what everyone thinks," Dziedzic said.

"The major problem of going under the University budget system is that the independence of The Observer would be under question," Brian Callaghan, student body president, said.

"As the situation stands right now, we were given an ultimatum," Dziedzic said, "to deposit all money in the University bank account by January 1st."

Dziedzic stressed that The Observer wants the University to have the ability to review the books at the end of the year, but not to allot the money during the year. "They could choose, at any time, not to allot it. If so, we have absolutely no recourse," Dziedzic said.

The Observer has proposed third-party accountability through the hiring of a professional accountant to conduct an annual audit. Dziedzic estimates this cost at $1,000 or less. The University has estimated that this would cost approximately $30,000 a year.

"A newspaper must control its own finances to be independent. If others are signing our checks and doing our payroll, then we do not have independence," Dziedzic said again.

Currently, The Observer receives nearly one-third of its revenue from a $5 a semester student fee collected by the University. This amounts to approximately $70,000 a year from Notre Dame students.

Mark Rolfes, Student Union Commissioner, remarked that the amount is more than the Student Union budget. Rolfes said the "Observer should be accountable to students for their budget."

Citing that the 1982-1983 editor-in-chief made approximately $3,100 last year, Rolfes said "Is The Observer a student organization or a job?"

Although all students pay a mandatory fee for the newspaper, they have no control over what is done with their money, Rolfes said.

Dziedzic agreed that students have a right to know where their money is being spent. "It's a student

Alumni Association van to serve as center for info in Florida

By TOM MOWLE
Assistant News Editor

An Alumni Association van will serve as an information center on the beach at Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., during Spring Break.

The purpose of the center, to be located next to the Sheraton Yankee Trader Hotel, is to "provide a service to the students," says Charles Lennon, executive director of the Alumni Association. Services will include a message exchange board, locator cards, and a hospitality center.

Lennon added that another purpose of the center, which will be staffed by Notre Dame and Saint Mary's alumni from the area, students, and two Alumni Association professionals, is to try to "prevent an occurrence similar to the Button incident" during last year's spring break.

Last year, a Notre Dame senior was involved in a stripping contest at the Button Bar in Ft. Lauderdale. He was fined for his actions, and a letter was sent by Student Body President Brian Callaghan to the bar, informing them that Notre Dame students would no longer participate in activities there.

According to the Broward Review and Business Record, Ft. Lauderdale officials are "concerned about the image of the city being created by topless tavern shows and wet T-shirt contests." So, as Lennon put it, "the city was 100 per cent behind" the idea to set up an "ND headquarters."

In an attempt to "change their image," Lennon said, the city "will provide a stage and professional entertainment for the entire six-week spring break period," as well as "sponsoring competitive events on the beach." He expects these events to include tennis, swimming, volleyball, and other beach games.

Other events which Lennon has tentatively planned for the week include concerts by the Shenanigans in Ft. Lauderdale, Miami and Palm Beach; a Notre Dame-St. Patrick's Day Parade on the first Saturday of the vacation; and Mass on the last Saturday for students before they leave for school. The Alumni Association also plans to distribute sandwiches and soft drinks for the trip back.

Callaghan said he "probably will send a letter to 25-30 other schools" to try to set up interschool competitions and happy hours. He also intends to "try to get some students to help out with the van," which will be manned from noon to 8 each day.

About 1500 students are expected by Callaghan in Ft. Lauderdale during break. Part of this number will be the estimated 250 students who will take the Student Union-sponsored trip there, rather than to Daytona, as they have in the past.

The change to Ft. Lauderdale, according to Tony Deccanne, a member of the trip's planning committee, was "initially coincidental," but word of the Alumni Association's plans "helped confirm our decision." He encourages the students' support of what he calls "a

Dean Witter president opens lecture series

Special to The Observer

Philip Purcell, president and chief operating officer of Dean Witter Financial Services Group of New York, and a Notre Dame graduate, opened the annual Financial Institution Series last evening with a lecture on "The Continuing Evolution of Financial Services" last evening in the Center For Social Concerns dining room.

Amy Search, vice president of the Finance Club and chairman of the Financial Institution Series, says that the speeches are very useful to the students. "The financial aspect and economic aspect is very relevant. The financial industry is constantly changing and these men are very knowledgeable. They will talk about the services of banks and can make the students aware of certain trends. The student can also get general employment outlooks and become aware of different opportunities," she said.

The series, sponsored by the Notre Dame Finance Club, will continue tonight and tomorrow. Robert Wilmoth will lecture on "Financial Futures — the Newest Player in U.S. Financial Markets" tonight at 8 in the CCE Auditorium. A reception will follow in the Notre Dame room in the Morris Inn. Wilmoth is the president and chief executive officer of the National Futures Association in Chicago. Wilmoth has served as president of the Chicago Board of Trade and the Crocker National Bank of San Francisco.

Philip Purcell

Richard Dalrymple, the executive vice president of the European American Bank in New York will conclude the lecture series tomorrow night. The topic of his speech will be "Survival in the World of Financial Service Giants." The speech will start at 8 in the CCE auditorium. A reception will follow in the Notre Dame Room at the Morris Inn.

Each speaker will receive a plaque from the Finance Club for their participation.

In Brief

South Bend elections are being held today until 6 p.m. Registered voters are asked to choose a mayor, nine city council representatives and other city officials. In the mayoral race, incumbent Democrat Roger Parent is being challenged by Republican Howard Goodhew and American Party candidate Kathryn Brookins. The mayor serves a four-year term. In the race for a council at-large seat, Notre Dame junior Douglas Regan is running against two other Republicans and three Democrats. The council has three at-large members. — The Observer

A woman attending the Notre Dame-Pittsburgh football game Saturday reported an assault by two youths, one wearing a Frankenstein monster mask, in the stadium concourse near the student section. The woman, an Ohio resident, told police she was returning to her seat around 5 p.m. The youths were both approximately 5 feet 9 inches, 150 pounds and wearing blue jeans. One had a grey sweatshirt while the other wore a red and blue jacket. In other weekend action, campus police arrested a member of a religious sect and confiscated "Irish" stickers that he allegedly was attempting to sell without permission. A float prepared by the Freshman Class was heavily damaged by vandals at the Friday night pep rally. Other vandals attempted to build a bonfire with boards taken from a fence enclosing the patio of the Alumni-Senior club, said Notre Dame security officials. — The Observer

A budding tradition

The first Fall Festival in Notre Dame history concluded Sunday. This is news to a few people. The fact that there was a Fall Festival is news to a few more.

The Fall Festival got a slow start because it fell on the same day everyone returned from fall break. Students weren't back in Domer-mode yet. Three days of rain at the beginning of the week didn't lend a festive atmosphere to the activities either. In fact, the real spirit the festival was designed to rally did not emerge until the weekend.

While hardly a booming success, the Fall Festival was far from a failure. The results weren't bad for the first year. Liza Salvador and Tina Persson, the chairwomen for the Fall Festival, agree. A few activities, such as the Fun Run and the Tug-O-Wars, were cancelled due to inclement weather, said Salvador. Others, like the Banner Contest and the dress days failed because of late publicity, she said.

If Notre Dame decides to make the Fall Festival an annual event, a great deal can be learned from the successes and failures of last week.

First, Notre Dame must decide whether or not the Fall Festival is a Homecoming — the organizers are even unsure of this. This year's event was a quasi-Homecoming. The floats and banners were there, but alumni activities were absent.

The traditional collegiate homecoming, complete with the election of a court, would probably not work now at Notre Dame. In fact, the University used to celebrate such an event and it died out in the late 1970s.

Because of this failure, a completely different approach is necessary. The festival needs a real name and a real identity. The spring An Tostal festival is the most successful and eagerly anticipated event of the year on campus. The majority of the students don't have the vaguest idea what the name An Tostal means, but they certainly know what it implies.

A fall event could never rely on student enthusiasm and collegiate antics like An Tostal. The spring fever that makes the mud pits desirable is absent now. The event must be planned accordingly.

In addition, An Tostal is successful because it is designed to reach and involve the individual. This is what a fall festival must do. Many of last week's events were not successful simply because the students did not know about them.

Salvador and Persson agree that scheduling the event

Margaret Fosmoe

Managing Editor

the week after fall break was a mistake. It was planned to coincide with one of the biggest games of the year, explains Salvador. But the Pitt game was the wrong week. Organizers need at least an unbroken week of publicity beforehand. The festival should be earlier in the season when warmer, drier weather can be expected. If the event is not to be a homecoming, perhaps a non-football weekend would be better. One of the four weeks prior to the USC game might have been a better choice.

Publicity this year was handled primarily through the Hall Presidents Council. It was done this way "because dorm spirit is the most successful thing at Notre Dame," according to Persson. This is undoubtedly true. But the publicity that filtered back to the halls was slow in some dorms and non-existent in others.

Organization is the key to arranging a really successful fall festival. The posters and table tents that publicized the festival lacked information concerning times, places, and entry deadlines. The variety show, for example, deserved much better attendance, but it was impossible to find out when or where it was by glancing at one of the publicity sheets.

The posters also contained only the Monday to Thursday schedule. The weekend events, which weren't included on the original posters, were the most successful. Sending a complete schedule to every student would have worked better.

The scheduled events, like the fireworks, the special dinners, the dance and the bonfire were the most successful. If more students had been aware of the banner contest deadline and the Saturday parade, these would have been successful too.

For its first year, the fall festival showed much potential. The idea of some sort of autumn event to parallel the spring An Tostal is certainly desirable. With a new name, some additional organization and more student involvement, this year's fall festival may prove to have been the seed from which a meaningful autumn student event will grow.

ND observing quincentenary of Martin Luther's birth with events

Special to The Observer

Notre Dame will observe the quincentenary of Martin Luther's birth today through Thursday with a series of celebration events entitled "Martin Luther: 500 years."

The quincentenary celebration, sponsored by Notre Dame's Department of Theology, will include: a lecture, a symposium, an ecumenical prayer service, an organ recital, and a special biographical exhibit in the east concourse of the Memorial Library.

According to Notre Dame president, Father Theodore Hesburgh, the celebration is "in the spirit of the Second Vatican Council, which urged Catholics to acquire a better understanding of the history, doctrine, spiritual and liturgical life, religious psychology, and cultural roots of other Christian faiths."

"Since recent theological dialogues have brought Catholics and Lutherans closer to agreement on many issues, it is even more fitting that a Church that admits it is ever in need of renewal take a second and more benign look at the leader of the Reformation," Hesburgh added.

Martin Luther broke from the Church in the 1500's. His criticism of the church formed the basis of the Protestant Reformation. Luther's activities evolved into the Lutheran Church.

Father Richard P. McBrien, chairman of Notre Dame's Department of Theology, said, "The differences between Catholics and Lutherans, once thought to be irreconcilable, are now perceived to be less than imposing. One might even suggest that if Luther were alive in today's Catholic Church, he would not feel compelled to break communion with it."

"It is appropriate, therefore, that Notre Dame should mark the 500th anniversary of Martin Luther's birth with these scholarly events as well as a liturgical service which reaffirms a fundamental principle of Vatican II, that the most effective ecumenism is a spiritual ecumenism."

... Amnesty

Dardis points out that the effect of the world-wide petition drive and the resulting amnesty bill will be two-fold. First, the project will raise consciousness about the issue of human rights, reinforcing the general human rights movement that has grown in the last few years. Secondly, the bill is a genuine attempt to address and solve the problem of human rights violations throughout the world.

"The best thing about the U.N. proposal," Dardis says, "is that even if it does not accomplish all of its goals, it will still draw people's attention to the problem of human rights violations. In that way, our effort will always be a success."

Dardis also stresses the full importance of a petition signature. "If you sign the petition, you will be contributing to the formation of a U.N. resolution. I hope that everyone will consider the significance of the bill, as well as the potential effect that it could have to help many of the world's prisoners of conscience." Another activity planned for the week is to have placement interviews with several Ft. Lauderdale companies. Callaghan believes that newspaper. If we don't have the support of the students for an independent newspaper, we might as well pack up and leave," Dziedzic said.

Dziedzic recognized the need for a superior to the editor-in-chief, to insure continuity from year to year. He was uncertain, however, whether a publisher or a board would be most beneficial.

Jim Ganther, Editor of Scholastic magazine, said that as far as "how the University budget system works, everyone seems to be operating under a faulty premise". Ganther said he believes it is "not the University's intention to say how the money will be spent". Ganther said that, "the University stands behind the Scholastic, and if we default, they've got to make it up".

Callaghan proposed two committees to handle the situation. One, made up of three people, most likely faculty, would decide any disagreements between the administration and the newspaper. Callaghan suggested faculty because he thought they were neutral while retaining some degree of involvement in labor relations.

A second committee, of seven to nine students, having no connection with The Observer, student government or any other organization that would cause them to be biased, would make a fiscal policy and give approval to the Observer budget.

"Having students giving fiscal policy and budgetary approval keeps it a newspaper primarily of the students," Callaghan said. Dziedzic responded with, "It's a very good place to start, but we still dispute the University's budget control idea".

Student government is concerned with the number of student tickets given to the student body for away football games. Student government has discussed this issue in the past, realizing that student complaints about the unfairness of the distribution and the lack of tickets, are true. For example, the student body received 40 tickets for the Penn St. game, but Penn St. gave Notre Dame 5,000 tickets. "We received 0.8% of all tickets, and I think that's a major problem," Callaghan said. "If it's our team, and they're our peers, I think we should get a justified number of tickets".

Student government passed a resolution urging "that a simple ice rink be installed on the Stepan courts during the winter months," according to the resolution, Rob Bertino, Senator for District 1, said that the plan has been estimated as feasible, but the only problem is maintenance. "Right now, interhall hockey teams have to rent space at the ACC for $60 an hour," Callaghan said.

There is an "interest in increased opportunities for ice-skating", the resolution says. The rink would consist of a wooden container and a polyethylene base, costing approximately $200 and ranging 2 courts in length.

Pressure of perfectionism in Grenada

Watching the Grenada invasion as it unfolded, I can't help concluding that the crucial problem was not the Cubans on the island — they were pretty effectively overpowered. When the tumult and the shouting have died down it will be clear that the American media have had more clout than the Cubans. It will also be clear that the whole operation was carried out in the teeth of the American foreign policy syndrome.

If you ask what the elements of that syndrome are, the answers can be summarily ticked off.

We have been undone by a passion for perfectionism which cannot brook any flaws in any policy. But the truth is that man is an imperfect political animal in an imperfect society in an imperfect world.

We have been undone by a passion for virtue and morality over the power and viability of the civilization. This has come largely from the half-life of the post-Vietnam and post-Watergate climates. You would think they would be ended by now. They are not.

We have been undone by the goldfish bowl mentality of the media elite, especially the New York and Washington print and TV media. It is a mentality that tries to use the First Amendment as the sole pivot of military and foreign policy. This media wants not only freedom of information; it also wants equal access with the government to everything the government knows and does in launching a covert military operation. This doesn't belong with the sober politics of a democracy. It belongs with an Alice-in-Wonderland politics of the absurd, and makes any war operation a theater of the absurd.

We have been undone by a larger intellectual elite, which includes the media, and which dominates the op-ed pages and book review sections, and shapes the climate at the top which seeps down to the media and most of the politicians. This elite has largely cut itself off from the people, yet it remains true that any president who tries to defy it and its climate usually ends up broken on the wheel of history.

We have been undone by the deep and open hostility to the American military, which often is asymmetrical and doesn't reach to what the Soviet military does. This asymmetry may derive either from an intellectual Left orientation or from the self-hatred of American intellectuals, or both. As a result we believe that only economic aid can prevent guerrilla revolts, that all use of power is inherently evil and especially the use of military power.

We have been undone by the ritualist repetition of the "right to know" which results in the application of the "sunshine laws" to covert military operations — an effect which goes far beyond anything just, as Brandeis intended by that concept.

We have been undone by the intrusions of a ritual legalism into areas where it can only be destructive. We have been undone by the conviction that if we use force against an enemy we become that enemy by the constant adversary relation of the leading media figures to whatever government is in power. We have been undone finally by the feeling that in its foreign policy America can never do anything right.

Since the Grenada operation had to run the gauntlet of all these undercuts the wonder is that it succeeded at all.

Is President Reagan testing the waters?

Popular American opinion of the invasion of Grenada sees it as "a success." Unfortunately, this short term accomplishment will result in long-term political repercussions for the United States, with both our adversaries and our allies. Additionally, if Reagan is allowed to get away with such an atrocity without suffering political backlash from the American public, Grenada could become simply the preamble of a declaration of war on Nicaragua.

Michael L. Brennan

And so it goes

Even those who still buy the "saving the students" justification must concede that Reagan's military muscle-flexing has hurt the United States. In violating international law and the charter of the United Nations, the U.S. invasion of tiny Grenada, a country whose entire population would fit into the University of Michigan's football stadium, has turned world opinion against us.

Voting 108 to 9, the United Nations General Assembly has condemned the action, and the U.S. had to exercise its veto power in the Security Council to avoid further condemnation.

The invasion, a manifestation of Reagan's militaristic foreign policy, has shifted global criticism away from the Soviets for their shooting down of the Korean jetliner. It has also given U.S. "outrage" over the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan a rather hollow ring.

In the struggle for moral high ground, Reagan complains that the Soviets have shot women and children in Afghanistan. Is that worse than bombing a civilian mental hospital?

The fact that our closest West European allies (even red, white, and blue Maggie) have condemned our action should tell us something. We have made a mistake.

The political fallout in Europe over the invasion will continue to grow as deployment of U.S. Pershing and cruise missiles draws closer. The peace movement's claim that Reagan is "trigger happy" has gained sudden credibility. And in the long run, the invasion could mark a watershed in our NATO relationships, as European public opinion has acquired a growing anti-American tone.

World opinion aside, the most frightening aspect of Grenada, and of our gunboat diplomacy approach to Central America in general, is that we are contemplating all-out war on Nicaragua. Counterrevolutionaries are already fighting, not-so-covertly funded and trained by the CIA.

The scenario for war is that the CIA's terrorist attacks will eventually provoke the Nicaraguans to strike back, possibly into Honduras where 4,000 U.S. troops are stationed for "maneuvers." This will give Reagan all the justification he needs to wage war, telling the American people that it is necessary to secure "peace and freedom," and so begins the Vietnam of the 80s.

Why does Reagan want war with Nicaragua? Because Nicaragua serves as an example to other Central American countries of the successful overthrow of a ruthless dictator, Anastasio Somoza, who owned most of Nicaragua before the Sandinista's revolution in 1979. Despite all our rhetoric about self-determination, we would prefer it if Nicaragua were once again a client state, or "puppet" of the U.S., as it was under Somoza.

As a means of justification, Reagan's myopic world view has placed Nicaragua in the context of East-West hostilities, allowing him to ignore that the very popular Sandinista government has provided Nicaraguans with land, education, health care, and political liberties they never knew under the U.S.-backed Somoza dictatorship.

Why is it that some of our "friends," like South Africa and Chile, are two of the worst non-democratic abusers of human rights, while our "enemy" (Nicaragua) is a popular government that does not have to employ repression for its support?

As supposed intelligent and informed students, we should be concerned about what our government is doing in Central America. Unless we speak out in opposition to Reagan's policies now, we will have only ourselves to blame for the war against Nicaragua.

Students on this campus should be outraged over Reagan's Central American policies. If we fail to voice our dissent, we can only blame ourselves for the escalating violence in Nicaragua.

As supposedly intelligent and informed students, we should be concerned over what our government is doing in Central America. Unless we speak out in opposition to Reagan's policies now, we will have only ourselves to blame for the war against Nicaragua.

Close to home

Dear Editor:

As the people of this country watch the military events now occurring throughout the world, many families await news about their sons. People do not fully realize the seriousness of these actions, nor do they care, unless these actions have become personalized.

I am one such individual. I constantly became upset when a news brief would interrupt "All My Children." Then during fall break I visited my grade school. I was told that three weeks ago, one of my best friends had been stationed in Beirut. His name is not important, for others were also there.

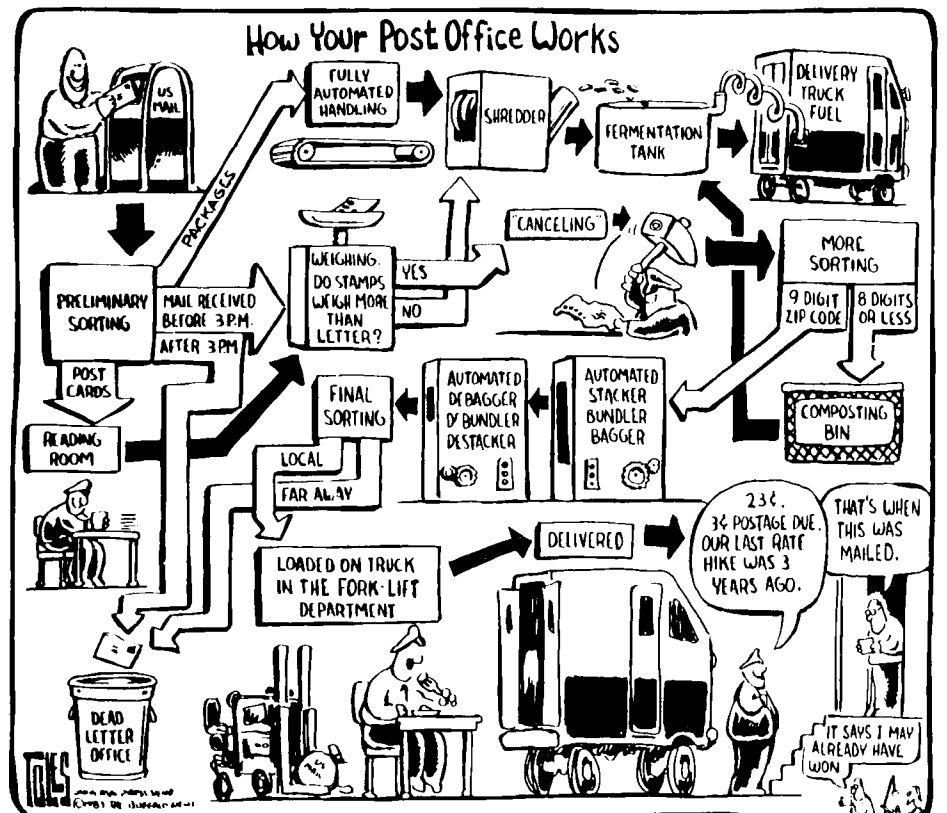

But in case Mr. Reagan gets a chance to read this, I would like the name of Milton Reddick firmly etched on his mind. Milton was the best athlete I have ever seen. He was also one of the most intelligent and articulate people to ever live. He achieved all of this against great adversity. Milton was never blessed with the best athletic or academic facilities, but he did have one of the most loving and supporting families available. He also faced the most obvious prejudice present in this country, for Milton was black.

Then one day an injury ended his successful wrestling career. He finished at Bremen High School, and enlisted in the Marines. He talked with great pride whenever he called. I never knew Milton to express fear. That is until I heard what he said at our grade school.

"See you when you get back," they said. "I might not come back," he replied. Because of the events of Sunday, October 23, 1983, we will probably never kick any more field goals, shoot any more baskets or run any more laps. After this unthinkable horror, the president sent troops to Grenada. Will the horror ever stop? So the next time your favorite TV show is interrupted by a news brief, think of Milton's family. I know I will. Milton, would you please call?

Giants overrun by Sims

Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. — Billy Sims rushed for 86 yards and the game's only touchdown, and the Detroit defense forced four turnovers and a safety as the Lions earned a 15-9 National Football League victory over the New York Giants last night.

The victory evened the Lions' record at 5-5 and pulled them into a second-place tie with Green Bay in the NFC Central Division, one game behind Minnesota.

Sims' two-yard touchdown tied a club record of 38 held by former Lion great Terry Barr.

Sims scored the touchdown at 13:44 of the first quarter, giving the Lions a 7-3 lead. He set up the score with a 37-yard run on a third-and-five situation from the New York 39.

On a second-and-eight on the Giants 10 in the second quarter, running back Butch Woolfolk fumbled the ball into the end zone when his arm was hit by defensive tackle Doug English. Giants center Rich Umphrey fell on the ball in the end zone and was tackled by Mike Fanning for the safety, giving Detroit a 12-3 lead.

The Giants, who are last in the NFC East and winless in six games, fell to 2-7-1. They got field goals of 27, 56 and 35 yards from Ali Haji-Sheikh. The 56-yarder tied the club record.

The Lions' Eddie Murray kicked field goals of 35 and 32 yards to complete the scoring.

freeze. They move on the court, but it's a scared kind of movement. They become afraid to go all out on their blocks and approaches. They become a little hesitant."

The DePaul match on Saturday was marked by more of the same. Losing a tough first game, and not being used to playing in the Arena, Notre Dame played poorly and hesitatingly in the last two games. It could not control the DePaul height advantage at the net and was caught a number of times by soft "dinks."

The highlight of the weekend was the first game of the DePaul match. The Irish eventually lost, 15-13, but both teams played well. The lead changed hands a number of times as both teams traded spikes in a game marked by competitive net play.

Notre Dame fell behind early, but regained the lead largely on the play of Terese Henken, who scored on several shots. The Blue Demons took advantage of some slow movement by the Irish to regain the lead, eventually extending it to 14-11. The Irish fought back, but a bad pass halted their charge and DePaul finished the game off.

That game seemed to take a lot of wind out of the Irish as they became sloppy on serves, and sets and passes began to go awry. DePaul had to work for it, but eventually they took the final two games to gain a sweep.

"We weren't concentrating," Vanslager said. "No matter what the score is, whether it's 13-13 or 0-0, the concentration has to be there and it has to be consistent on every play."

Although there will be no more home games, the Notre Dame season still has a fair amount of action remaining. The regular season will end tomorrow when the team travels to IUPUI — Ft. Wayne. After that, the team will take a break as it readies for the North Star Conference tournament, which will take place on November 18-19. It will also participate in a tournament over Thanksgiving Break in Louisiana.

In the meantime, the injury-plagued Irish will try to rebuild and play better than their 10-21 record indicates.

Knight tells students of Olympic politics

Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — United States basketball players who make it to the 1984 Olympic Games must remember that they will be involved not only in a sport but also in politics, Indiana Coach Bob Knight said yesterday.

"Anything that's international first of all is political," said Knight, who will coach the U.S. men for the Olympic Games in Los Angeles next summer. "The Olympics are as political as they are athletic."

"My guess is that the Russian team that comes to the United States and loses might never be known about in the Soviet Union. But you can sure bet the farm that if they come to the U.S., compete in the Olympics and win, everybody in the Soviet Union will know about it," Knight told about 800 people who attended his lecture at IU's Alumni Hall.

During the hour-long lecture, Knight dispelled rumors that he might take a coaching job in the National Basketball Association.

STRETCH YOUR MIND WHILE YOU STRETCH YOUR COLLEGE DOLLARS.

The Army College Fund way to get the money for college makes a lot of sense.

To qualify, you must be a high school graduate, make good marks on the Armed Services qualification test, and enlist and train in one of several selected skills that will challenge and stretch your mind.

You can start immediately putting the money for college. And for every $1 you save out of your salary (over $570 a month), the government will add more than $5. If you put up $100 a month, in a 2-year enlistment, you'll have $15,200 for college. And you'll have a technical skill that might help you decide what to take in college. Your ARMY Recruiter has a booklet that explains all about the ARMY College Fund. Pick one up.

Volleyball team loses two over weekend

By MIKE SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

The 1983 season has not been as productive for the Notre Dame volleyball team as it was expected to be, as injuries, mental and physical mistakes, and a much tougher schedule took their toll. Thus, it was only fitting that these problems led Notre Dame to a pair of losses as its home season came to a close.

The losses, to DePaul (15-13, 15-8, and 15-5) on Saturday and Evansville (15-7, 15-12, 11-15, and 15-11) on Sunday were the first games that the volleyball team had played in the ACC Main Arena, but the bad luck that has plagued the team still did not change. Last year, the Irish never lost at home, which is usually the ACC Pit, but this year they have lost both at home and on the road as their play has been inconsistent.

"There are just so many inconsistencies," said Notre Dame coach Sandy Vanslager. "The passing is inconsistent, as well as the movement around the court, the defense, the blocking, the hitting, and other things. If we can do it on the several occasions when we win, we should be able to do it all the time."

The Irish were able to perform well for periods of time over the weekend, but those periods were too few to allow them to keep up with the good DePaul and Evansville teams.

Against Evansville, Notre Dame did not start the game with its best play and the Aces were able to take early control of the match. They took advantage of Irish mistakes to win the first game easily. Things got tougher in the second game as the Irish began to play better; however, the Aces still took another win to put Notre Dame deep in the hole.

"We just were not able to execute our skills properly," said Vanslager. "It was one of the key things we focused on going into the third game — just work on execution."

The execution did improve in that game as the Irish held off an Evansville bid for a sweep. The momentum continued early in the fourth game as the Irish took an early lead. However, the Aces fought back to take the lead. Notre Dame then lost its serve when there was some confusion about who was supposed to serve. The Irish lost some momentum and the Aces won the game and match.

"When we get ourselves under pressure, we kind of freak out on the court," explained Vanslager. "Emotions take control and the girls

Carew not selected Evans picked first in re-entry draft

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Darrell Evans, the San Francisco Giants free-agent infielder, was the No. 1 pick yesterday in baseball's re-entry draft, being chosen by 17 teams in a selection process that several clubs said was becoming less important to building a winner.

"The Baltimore Orioles had a lot to do with this," New York Yankees' General Manager Murray Cook said. "Their winning the American League pennant had a profound effect on the approach of a lot of teams. They're going more with their farm system and away from free agency."

The Yankees, a recent big-dealer in the free-agent market, made only one selection in the free-agent draft. That was Evans, whom they picked in the second round.

In fact, 29 of the 45 available free agents were picked by fewer than four teams, meaning they can negotiate with any team they want.

"We are approaching the free-agent market no differently than we have in the past," said Orioles General Manager Hank Peters, who won the World Series with their time-proven mix of homegrown talent and parsimonious trade acquisitions. "We will adhere to our policy, which has been very consistent. We have no magic formula."

The Orioles selected negotiating rights to seven players, including Evans.

The New York Mets and Minnesota Twins did not pick anyone, passing in the first two rounds, which automatically eliminated them from the draft.

"People have had bad experiences with free agents," said Mets General Manager Frank Cashen. "I guess overall only the Yankees have prospered. Our fans have suffered with us while we were developing a team for years. I see no reason to make cosmetic changes now."

After Evans, the next two most popular picks in the draft were relief pitchers. Kent Tekulve of the Pittsburgh Pirates was chosen by 12 teams, and Rich Gossage of the Yankees was selected 11 times. The Pirates and Yankees each retained the right to negotiate with Tekulve and Gossage, respectively, as did San Francisco with Evans.

Agent Jerry Kapstein of San Diego represents two of the top three picks, Evans and Gossage. Kapstein said neither player had expressed a desire to be with a specific club, and neither had ruled out the possibility of returning to his former club.

Kapstein and Cook each said reports that Gossage would not return to the Yankees unless owner George Steinbrenner fired Manager Billy Martin were untrue.

"In our meeting a week ago Monday in San Diego," Kapstein said, "the first thing Steinbrenner said before our discussion was, 'I want you to know that I have told everyone that at no time has either Gossage or Kapstein demanded the firing of Martin and, as a matter of fact, at no time has Kapstein ever criticized Martin.'"

Cook said, "Sure they (Gossage and Martin) have had their disagreements, but we're hoping they can be resolved. Neither Goose (Gossage) nor his agent has ever asked that Billy be fired."

Two players, pitcher Dan Schatzeder of Montreal and first baseman-outfielder Dennis Walling of Houston, were chosen by eight teams. Six players — pitcher Jerry Koosman of the Chicago White Sox, Frank LaCorte of Houston, Larry Sorensen of Cleveland, and Milt Wilcox of Detroit; outfielder Oscar Gamble of the Yankees, and utilityman Derrell Thomas of Los Angeles — were chosen by seven teams.

Thomas was one of only two players whose negotiating rights were not retained by his former club. The other was outfielder Gene Richards of San Diego.

In a move that might signal the breaking of another precedent, the California Angels retained the rights to their free agent, Rod Carew. And, it appeared, the Angels might be the only club interested in the 38-year-old seven-time American League batting champion since he was not selected by any club in the draft.

Some other top names also received little attention. Infielder Manny Trillo of Montreal was selected only once, and outfielder Dave Parker of Pittsburgh and catcher Ted Simmons of Milwaukee were picked by only two teams each.

"I think clubs are getting more selective," San Diego General Manager Jack McKeon said. "They're looking for players who fit specific needs. They're not drafting a Carew for Carew's sake. They're looking deeper into their plans and finding the one or two guys that can make them a winner."

"It's not a grab bag anymore."

Developing a bad habit

Here we go again.

In case you haven't noticed, a very disturbing pattern has begun to develop with the Notre Dame football team. The pattern began after the 1980 Notre Dame team, driving toward a national championship, traveled to Alabama and won a clutch game, 7-0, on national television.

The Irish, whose chances for a national title were in great jeopardy following a tie the previous week, moved to No. 2 in the country and earned a bid to the Sugar Bowl. Only the seniors would remember the incredible feeling of having won that big game, of having won that game that meant so much.

Ever since that win on Nov. 15, 1980, the Notre Dame football team has failed to win a game that it had to win. Included in this list is Southern Cal in 1980, Georgia in 1980, Michigan in 1981, Penn State in 1982, Miami in 1981 and 1983, and Pitt last Saturday.

Each of these games was a "must-win" game, not like the Pitt game last year when Pitt was No. 1 and the Irish were coming off three poor showings in a row. Notre Dame really had nothing to lose when it traveled to Pittsburgh. Granted it was a great win that will live in my memory when I graduate, but it was not a "must" win.

The Michigan game last year was another big win, but, once again, it was not a game that had to be won. After all, it was the first game of the year and Michigan was favored.

Almost every other game I mention was on national or regional television, but that is not the only reason they were "must-win" games. USC and Georgia in 1980 cost the Irish a national championship, Michigan in 1981 cost Notre Dame a No. 1 ranking and sent it rolling downhill, and Penn State last year cost Notre Dame a Sugar Bowl bid. The loss to Miami in 1981 gave Notre Dame its first losing record in 17 years, and the loss this year cost the Irish a great deal of respect. Finally, the Pitt game lost Notre Dame a sure major bowl bid and even more respect.

There is more. Since 1980, Notre Dame has a terrible 2-8 record over the last three games of the season. Because the stretch run is so important in college football, this is another alarming statistic.

What does all of this mean?

Well, let's look at the team's performance in many of these games, especially the last two games.

The major characteristic of each game is a subpar performance by Notre Dame. The Irish usually were not the weaker team, but they played like a weaker team. There were countless costly turnovers and, frequently, a normally-strong Notre Dame line was manhandled. It was not always the case of the best team winning.

Saturday's game is a good example. Notre Dame had a better team, but it did not make the big play happen when it needed to, turned the ball over many times, and couldn't capitalize when the Panthers made their few mistakes. The Irish missed numerous tackles, dropped numerous passes, and played like a very nervous, very hesitant team. (The players even admitted as much.) They didn't deserve to win.

In fact, when was the last time Notre Dame made a successful goal-line stand in any game, or came from far behind to win a game?

There is only one way to describe how the Irish performed against Pitt and against the other teams I mentioned.

They choked.

The question is, "Why?" I mean, hasn't it been the mark of Notre Dame to win the big ones?

I wish I knew the answer, but it seems to me that the problem doesn't reflect the characters of the individuals on the team. Rather, the character of the team as a whole is poor. The team cannot win a game when it has to — at least not yet, anyway.

A lot of the blame has to rest on the coach who is responsible for his squad's performance on the field. There is some reason that the team gets uptight and loses confidence on the field. The fact that the coach becomes uptight, emotional, and indecisive on the sidelines is probably the reason. Therefore, unless some player can come along and bring the decisiveness and confidence on to the field, there will continue to be problems. Right now, there is nobody who can do this.

Something has got to change.

For the last three years, we have been told by experts that Notre Dame should be among the top teams in the nation. But it hasn't happened. It's not like the team hasn't had the chance. Each year, there has been at least one game that could turn things around. Each time, the team has failed.

One day Notre Dame will win the game that turns things around, but it's hard to say when that will happen. Maybe this week at Penn State. Now that a Fiesta Bowl bid is allegedly riding on the outcome, it is a "must-win" game.

Most Notre Dame football history is marked by big wins and great respect. That is beginning to change. The students have been disappointed many times and bounced back. One day, though, they will not rebound. Hopefully, it will not come to that point.
