WSND acquires new recording equipment

By JOHN NEBLO
News Staff

WSND radio, Notre Dame's student run radio station, has acquired new sophisticated recording equipment in an attempt to upgrade its programming quality. The device, a digital recording processor, allows the station to make near perfect recordings of live musical performances.

The digital recorder, manufactured by the Nakamichi Corp. of Japan, is on loan to WSND from Audio Specialists, an audio equipment outlet in South Bend. WSND is currently looking for a grant with which to purchase the $2000 device.

Paul Matwiy, an unofficial WSND recording producer, said the digital recorder will allow the station to "make recordings of a quality unsurpassed anywhere in the country using state-of-the-art recording technology." WSND has already used the recorder to record the Glee

Computer purchase set for the near future

By STEPHEN REIDY

The University will acquire a large number of personal computers from the Apple Computer Company in the near future, according to Assistant Provost for Computing Richard Spencer.

While the details of the settlement remain under a non-disclosure clause in the University's contract with the firm, the agreement represents a culmination of several years of planning and negotiations for a campus-wide computer networking system, explained Spencer.

He continued that the personal computers are only part of a plan involving a new IBM 3033 mainframe computer for the Computing Center and the new touch-tone dormitory telephones. Both are to be installed during Christmas break.

The touch-tone phones will enable individuals with personal computers to plug into the mainframe system through the use of a modem.

"The equipment here is not large enough to handle the load at present," explained Director of the Computing Center James Wruck in an interview with the The Observer earlier this semester. "The system is five years old, and we are faced with the problem that many constituencies on campus will want personal computers in the future," he added.

Parietals violations punishment being studied by Judicial Council

By JOSEPH MURPHY
News Staff

Parietal regulations should be examined by the Judicial Council rather than the Student Senate according to Bob Gleason, Judicial Council Coordinator.

Following Student Body President Briar Callaghan's statement at a Student Senate meeting that the university's present policy of expulsion for parietal violations is too strict, Gleason created a committee to study the matter.

At last night's council meeting, Gleason explained the council's decision to assume jurisdiction and address the "hot" issue of parietals. Gleason said, "Brian's position is that the present punishment is too drastic. Callaghan suggested the students involved be moved off campus instead of expelled. I told him that if anyone is going to look into parietals I think it's the Judicial Council. I said we'll handle it. We'll study the issue, but he should not expect miracles.

"We're only going to examine the present policy, not necessarily attempt to change it," Gleason added. "Brian Callaghan doesn't tell us what to do. If this committee decides there's a better alternative, then we'll pursue it. I agree, though, with Brian that parietal regulations have to be looked at."

Gleason said the committee will proceed with caution because "we might be opening a can of worms. This whole thing might backfire. We might end up getting more students kicked out of school."

Some rector's, Gleason indicated, don't report all parietal violations. He said last year only a small number of these violations resulted in expulsion. "If we raise the issue, the rector's might be less willing to use their own discretion," Gleason said.

The creation of the Special Committee on Parietals is viewed by Gleason as the latest step in restoring credibility to the Judicial Council.

"I think the fact that we're handling the parietal issue is a boost to the council's credibility. Last year we would not have been able to handle such an issue because we lacked the organization."

Gleason also cited the Judicial Council's Workshop early in November and the increase in attendance at council meetings as evidence of the council's new lease on life. The workshop was attended by about 100 people.

Dave McAvoy, student senator from the third district, attended last night's meeting and gave the council his support. "I'm interested in making the judicial council the third branch of student government with equal power," he said.

Gleason also said, "Some people believe in confrontation, but I don't. We'll examine the present punishment for parietals and recommend possible alternatives to the administration."

Heineken rescued from kidnappers

Associated Press

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands — Police rescued kidnapped millionaire brewer Alfred Heineken and his chauffeur in a pre-dawn raid on an isolated warehouse Wednesday, and arrested 24 suspects in three cities.

A ransom reported to be as high as $11.6 million was paid Monday, but police said at least part of it was recovered from the homes of suspects.

The 60-year-old chairman of the Heineken Brewery and his chauffeur Ab Doderer, 57, were found alone, manacled to a wall and clad only in pajamas in an unheated building in an industrial park near the harbor. They were cold but unharmed, officers said.

Police, who had kept watch on the park after receiving an anonymous tip two weeks ago, raided it when they had no word from the kidnappers for two days after the ransom was delivered.

At a news conference, police said the two victims had been imprisoned in separate cells hidden behind a false wall in the warehouse.

Police said the rescued men were given clean clothes and immediately taken to Heineken's heavily guarded villa in the seaside town of Noordwijk, about 20 miles from Amsterdam, for a reunion with their families.

Doderer, long-time personal chauffeur to Heineken, has worked for the family brewery for 40 years. He was grabbed by three gunmen when he tried to help Heineken during the Nov. 9 abduction outside the brewery headquarters.

A statement issued by the brewery and families of the two men said, "There is enormous joy that Heineken and Doderer have been freed in a perfectly executed operation last night."

The 5 a.m. rescue raid on the warehouse climaxed three weeks of negotiations with the abductors, that began with a written ransom demand dropped on the steps of The Hague central police station the night of the kidnapping.

Authorities ultimately paid the ransom via complicated instructions given by telephone, and cassette recording and notes dropped at sites scattered around the Netherlands.

Police refused to say how much ransom was involved, but Dutch newspapers have widely reported it amounted to the equivalent of $10 million to $11.6 million.

Simultaneous police raids in the suburban village of Zwanenburg, the port city of Den Helder and elsewhere in Amsterdam netted police 24 kidnap suspects — all related to each other.

Herbert T. Juliano, research assistant in Notre Dame's Sports Information Office, has been selected by the executive board of the United States Olympic Committee to serve on the public relations-public information committee. The selection was announced by William E. Simon, committee president. Juliano also serves as vice chairman of the Olympic committee's education council with specific responsibility to plan, initiate and develop a National Olympic Information and Research Center, complete with a museum and hall of fame at Colorado Springs, CO. Earlier this year, Juliano attended the International Olympic Academy in Greece where he discussed violence in sports before representatives of 36 nations. He was invited to join the International Committee for Fair Play with headquarters in Paris. Spacelab's astronauts created brilliant flashes of blue light yesterday by sending bursts of ionized gas and powerful electron beams streaking out into the blackness of space. Earlier, the crew turned the laboratory, carried in the shuttle Columbia's cargo bay, into a mini-factory by firing up three powerful furnaces to melt and mix metal samples and create exotic alloys impossible to make on Earth. And in a test to see how humans adapt to weightlessness, mission specialist Robert Parker endured the torture of having warm air blown into his ears while a television camera took pictures of his eyes. The series of blue flashes came from an experiment developed by Tatsuzo Obayashi, a University of Tokyo researcher. The device sends out ionized argon gas at the same time it discharges beams of electrons. This produces a reaction seen as light. Researchers said the experiment will provide clues to the envelope of magnetic fields and charged particles that exists around the Earth. — AP

The Louisiana attorney general's office, which once ruled that roosters are not animals, now maintains that alligators are domesticated fish. Biology textbooks classify alligators as reptiles. However, in Louisiana, they come under the legal definition of fish, according to an opinion made public yesterday. Agriculture Commissioner Bob Odom had asked Attorney General William Guste whether the state Market Commission can lend money to a farmer for processing alligator meat and hides. Yes, said the opinion by staff attorney Kenneth O. Ortego. The commission can lend money to plants that process farm products, including livestock, Ortego's ruling said, which went on to say the definition of livestock included "domesticated fish." The law defines domesticated fish as those raised on fish farms, and further defines fish as "all finfish, crustaceans, frogs, turtles and other living aquatic resources which have a sort or other economic value." — AP

Young men who hitchhike at night on major highways between Indianapolis and Chicago are more likely the prey in a string of homosexual-related murders than are homosexuals, Indianapolis police say. Initially, police thought the link between the slayer and the 13 victims found in Illinois and Indiana was the gay community because many of the victims were known homosexuals or hustlers. However, police developed the new profile because some of the highway killer's victims were not homosexuals, an investigator told the Indianapolis Star. Police also now theorize the slayer lured his victims with a sexual proposition, offering them either $100 in cash or placidyl, a hypnotic sleep-inducing depressant prescribed for insomnia, said the investigator who asked not to be identified. Police said people ingesting placidyl become physically weak through loss of muscle response, which would explain why the victims have shown a lack of defensive wounds. — AP

Inside Thursday

The acceptance of the Liberty Bowl bid last week is an all-time low in the history of college sports. The decision affected not only Notre Dame football, but all college programs because the the idyllic crusader for intercollegiate honesty is a hypocrite.

No longer is Notre Dame a shining example of fairplay and honesty. Instead, because of a closed door meeting of the Faculty Board in Control of Athletics, Notre Dame now sits at the same table as N.C.A.A. recruiting violators Clemson, S.M.U. and Arizona State.

In his Observer editorial Tuesday, James Carberry, a former member of the Faculty Board, said that in accepting the bid, "We, at Notre Dame, are now about to lose our innocence in intercollegiate football. We've entered the bordello. Patently, we'll now be assigned to play anyone, anywhere, in any money-making post-season 'circus.'"

In the fullest sense of the term, Notre Dame has "sold out."

Some argue the bowl bid should be accepted because minority students will benefit from the proceeds. Such thinking, however, is racist indeed.

The University has put itself in quite an awkward situation if it truly supports minority scholarships. Are minorities, then, only to receive help if Notre Dame football teams go to a bowl? What kind of a commitment is that to minority students?

Actual bowl proceeds will total little more than $650,000. And Athletic Director Gene Corrigan admits much of that will go to travel and lodging expenses for the team and band.

Is lily-white Notre Dame helping minority students when it sits atop a $200 million endowment?

Another sad product of the bowl bid is the way in which died-in-the-wool Notre Dame fans are literally caught in the all too familiar game of the "fair-weather fan."

With high held Catholic guilt, fans are cast into the ultimate dilemma — if they do not support Notre Dame football when it falls flat on its face, they consider themselves only "sunshine patriots." Many feel they should in good conscience celebrate the supposed joy of the Liberty Bowl bid.

In this case, however, the true fan of Notre Dame must cry out against such a perversion of principles.

Notre Dame has manipulated such guilt to the point where many concerned persons will not speak out against the bowl bid, because Gerry Faust is wrapped in a veil of Marian devotion. For many, to criticize Faust is to attack the Mother of God.

While Faust did not make the final decision to go to the bowl, he didn't exactly say he'd rather stay in South Bend for the holidays.

Neither Corrigan nor executive vice president Edmund Joyce have shouldered the blame — instead, they point to a 14-11 vote by seniors to accept the bid as the ultimate consideration. With few exceptions, Notre Dame administrators have never cared about what students said before this incident. Why then do administrators fall back upon a student vote now? Are they trying to hide something?

The Liberty Bowl does not give a damn about Notre Dame's now-tarnished commitment to its principles or its record.

It only wants Notre Dame because of the University's football tradition, and the money its fans will bring to Memphis.

In referring to Notre Dame's decision to accept the bid, a Liberty Bowl representative told Ray Sons of the Chicago Sun-Times last week, "They are a great attraction at 6-5, or whatever they are."

Indeed, whatever are we?

Survey reveals desires for campus changes

By JIM STONE
News Staff

Improved student facilities in the LaFortune Center and more diversified campus activities were among the most requested campus improvements by students in a survey conducted by the the Student Union.

"Our one objective, is to make people more involved in Student Union commissions and more aware of them," explained survey organizer Jim Hennigan. Another goal of the poll was to come up with some ideas for a proposed Student Union night which is being planned for Dec. 8, he continued.

The survey, which was contrived and distributed by the senior commissioners of the Student Union, received more than 400 hundred responses, Hennigan explained. The Ombudsman office compiled written requests as well as phone surveys.

Other ideas from the survey included; a campus restaraunt, a north quad laundry, more recent films, and career days.

Hennigan reported that the responses revealed "a general ignorance" about current Student Union commissions. "I suppose what we're involved in is more of an awareness campaign of what the committees do," Hennigan said.

The committee will be presenting the Student Union's operations to interested students on student Union night, which Hennigan said will be a "recruiting night" to garner interest for the commissions. He added that commissioners will have to "set goals to use more people and to take a more active role in delegating authority."

As a follow-up, January 18 has been designated the preliminary date for a leadership workshop intended to "overhaul" the commissions, Hennigan added

Bus strikers consider new contract proposal

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Assisted by government mediators, a union representing striking Greyhound Bus Lines workers considered making a contract counter-proposal yesterday in a quest to end a 28-day walkout.

Meanwhile, a Greyhound spokeswoman said the company would resume bus service in nine more states by the end of the year. Greyhound, which served 48 states before the strike began Nov. 2, resumed limited service in 27 states on Nov. 17.

One day after Greyhound managers in Phoenix, Ariz., vowed to "go forward full bore" with hiring replacements for the some 12,700 strikers, the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions was secluded in a downtown hotel here reassessing its position in the labor dispute.

There was no early indication whether the strategy session, attended by federal mediator Sam Franklin, would lead to a revised union negotiating stance or new direct talks between union and Greyhound representatives.

Later, Kay McMurray, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, conferred with union leaders. As he left the hotel, reporters asked him whether the strike was going to end soon. He replied: "there's always room for optimism," but the mediator refused to elaborate on that remark.

One union official said members of the ATU bargaining council were continuing to meet among themselves late in the day "to find out where we stand, and to find out what it's going to take to get them (Greyhound negotiators) back to the bargaining table."

The strategy sessions were likely to continue today, said the official, who cited the union's self-imposed news blackout as the reason for his speaking anonymously.

Sources familiar with the strike, who also declined to be identified publicly, said it was unlikely that federal mediators would summon Greyhound officials to the nation's capital for new negotiations in the absence of a new proposal by the union.

John W. Teets, Greyhound's chairman, had said Tuesday that "we have absolutely no optimism that a settlement will be reached."

Teets, speaking to reporters at Greyhound's corporate headquarters in Phoenix, said the company might sell parts of the bus line as individual franchises if it failed to make sufficient profit.

The union's overwhelming rejection of the company's latest offer — a modified wage giveback proposal lowering pay cuts from 9.5 percent to 7.8 percent — left Greyhound with no choice but to hire replacements for the strikers, Teets said.

The Amalgamated Transit Union called the strike of its 12,700 members on Nov. 2, and there have been no negotiations to settle the dispute since Nov. 17.

Striking Greyhound workers buddle around a makeshift stove in Cincinnati, Ohio. Members of the Amalgamated Transit Union rejected Greyhound's lastest contract offer by an overwhelming margin. See related story at left.

Mardi Gras to feature jazz band

By MARY PACE
News Staff

A live jazz band and New Orleans-style food will be featured at this year's campus-wide Mardi Gras celebration, according to event coordinator Karen Klocke.

This is in addition to the twelve-hour dance-a-thon which has been a part of the celebration for the past two years. Klocke said she hopes these changes will bring back some of the Mardi Gras spirit that has been lost over the past two years.

The event is scheduled to begin on Friday, March 2. Also being planned in the Stepan Center is a facsimile of famous dixieland jazz showcase, Preservation Hall, which will feature a live jazz band and New Orleans-style cuisine.

Some of the events being considered include hall-sponsored booths in Stepan Center which would be decorated to depict scenes from Bourbon Street in the French Quarter of New Orleans, home of the original Mardi Gras.

The dance-a-thon is scheduled to be held on the following Saturday from 1 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Up until two years ago, the Mardi Gras celebration featured a casino in Stepan Center which included roulette wheels, craps, blackjack, and other games. In 1981, however, the bishop of Fort Wayne-South Bend banned gambling in this diocese. The dance-a-thon replaced the casino following this decision. The proceeds of both events have gone to charity.

The first organizational meeting of this year's Mardi Gras committee will be held on Thursday, December 8 at 7 p.m. in the Little Theatre in LaFortune. Students interested in helping out with any aspect of the event are invited to the meeting.

Bazaar to aid Christmas shoppers

BY EDWARD NOLAN

Saint Mary's annual Christmas bazaar might be the answer for the worried students who wonder how they will ever complete their Christmas shopping while preparing for semester finals.

Finalized plans for the bazaar were reported at last night's Saint Mary's Programming board meeting by event chairperson Mary Sue Dunn.

The bazaar will run from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. Monday through Friday next week in the Le Mans hall lobby, according to Dunn. She continued that there will be approximately 80 booths at this year's event which is almost double the number of booths last year. Many Saint Mary's halls, classes and clubs will operate booths and sell gift items. A five-dollar registration fee per booth will be collected and donated to the United Way Drive. A portion of the each booth's profits is customarily given to the campaign as well, she concluded.

Other topics discussed during the meeting included the children of Saint Mary's faculty, who will be treated by the board to an afternoon at the movies. Invitations for this event were incorrectly dated December 14, but the event will be held this Sunday.

The board decided that a last class day celebration on Dec. 14 was in order. Following classes on that day the College's students are welcome to stop in the Haggar Student Center, where Christmas cookies will be served. The event is designed to provide a break before the start of final exams.

Also announced at the meeting were plans for the second five-hall dance, which is scheduled for Jan. 21. Saint Mary's will also host a Keenan Review Party on Feb. 3.

Gemayel expected to ask Reagan to modify Lebanese-Israeli pact

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Six months after the troop withdrawal agreement between Israel and Lebanon was signed, the Reagan administration's single foreign policy "success" in the Middle East this year has become an obstacle in attempts to end the bloodshed in Lebanon.

"We are at an impasse," said one senior Lebanese official last week. "We negotiated the agreement in good faith and with good intentions, (but) it cannot be implemented in its present form."

The May 17 agreement provides for an Israeli troop withdrawal from Lebanon if Syrian forces also leave. So far, they have not.

"It's a race between politics and total collapse," the Lebanese official said. "I'm beginning to panic, beginning to think we haven't mitted to positions in the mountains."

Lebanese President Amin Gemayel meets today with President Reagan in Washington, and it is expected that Gemayel will plead for modifications in the agreement.

Gemayel is hoping that the new U.S. chief Middle East negotiator, Donald Rumsfeld, has come up with some new ideas on his just completed swing around the region, and that Reagan can be persuaded that some accommodation with Syria is essential. But he's unlikely to get any encouragement.

Reagan and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who concluded a Washington visit on Tuesday, reaffirmed their support for the May 17 pact.

"The only basis for a settlement of the Lebanese problem is the full implementation of the May 17, 1983 agreement in all its parts," Shamir said before leaving Washington.

The pact has become a liability for Lebanon — a major problem in reconciliation talks among this country's warring factions and a blockade to even beginning talks with Syria on the eventual removal of 30,000 Syrian soldiers from north Lebanon and the eastern Bakka Valley.

The agreement calls for Israel to withdraw its occupation army from the south in return for security and political concessions from Lebanon. Israel would get joint patrols in the south to guard against reinfiltration of Palestinian guerrillas there, limits on the size of the Lebanese army in the region, and a "liaison" office in Beirut.

In a separate, private agreement with the United States, however, Israel said it would not implement the withdrawal unless Syria agreed to pull out at the same time.

That is not happening. Syrian President Hafez Assad condemned the Lebanese-Israeli pact, claiming it threatens his country and makes Lebanon a virtual Israeli puppet.

Lebanese leftist and opposition groups rallied behind the Syrians. They and Assad are insisting that Israel withdraw without conditions and before the Syrians.

Israeli officials have warned they might further cut off the already isolated south from the rest of the country and settle in for a long stay if the pact is canceled. The United States, in turn, maintains it stands behind the pact as the best either side can get, and with advantages for both.

There are some small signs of change.

Caught between the fundamentalist Shiites, Christians and Palestinians in the south and taking casualties almost every day, Israel has already been forced to unilaterally withdraw from the central mountains to a line beginning at the port of Sidon. There are strong indications, as the attacks and ambushes continue, that Israel will withdraw another step to the south in the spring.

With political opposition to the occupation of southern Lebanon growing in Israel, many Lebanese and Americans believe it would be too costly for the Israelis to stay very long.

Syria, which refused to even talk about the pact or a possible withdrawal from Lebanon for six months, sent its foreign minister, Abdul-Halim Khaddam, to Beirut earlier in November. It still adamantly opposes the pact, but seems to be giving hints that some compromise might be reached.

But the threats of renewed violence are multiplying.

The mountain civil war that erupted in September still simmers, with shelling exchanges every day.

Andropov illness slows Soviet political scene

Associated Press

MOSCOW — The usual autumn government and party meetings have not been scheduled yet this year — evidently because President Yuri V. Andropov is too ill to officiate. The strangely quiet political scene has led to speculation about who is running the Soviet Union.

Soviet sources have indicated in past weeks that the country is on a kind of automatic pilot.

Western diplomats, asking to remain anonymous, say they think day-to-day foreign policy decisions have been taken over by the military, led by Marshal Dmitri F. Ustinov.

The 69-year-old Andropov, his health a question mark since last spring, has not been seen in public since Aug. 18.

With so many uncertainties, the focus of attention now is on the failure of authorities here to announce a meeting of the rubber stamp national parliament, the Supreme Soviet.

This is a country where things tend to happen according to plan and tradition, and the Parliament session and meeting of the Communist Party Central Committee are always scheduled by mid-November.

The Soviet constitution says the legislature must meet twice a year. So far this year it has met only once, in June, when Andropov was named president, consolidating his absolute hold on power.

Tradition holds that its meetings are announced 30 days in advance, and Associated Press records dating back two decades show that every session has been preceded by a 30-day notice.

Those records also show that since 1962 no regular parliamentary session has ever been held later than Dec. 18. That was in 1974. Last year the Parliament met on Dec. 22, but that was a special occasion to mark the 60th anniversary of the founding of the Soviet Union.

Soviets insist that a meeting of the Parliament will come in the second half of December. The country still has no formally adopted economic plan or budget for the coming year and those documents are the business of the Parliament.

Andropov should attend the parliamentary session as head of state. He reportedly is suffering from a heart and kidney condition and the latest rumors in Moscow say he has lost the ability to walk. Nothing, however, is known for certain about the state of his health.

Tradition holds that the parliamentary sessions are preceded by a plenary session of the party Central Committee.

At those sessions the ruling Politburo makes top personnel changes and dictates the course of foreign and domestic policy.

Unofficial records show Andropov's predecessor, Leonid I. Brezhnev, was never absent from public view for such a long period despite serious questions about his health dating from the mid-1970s.

Andropov failed Nov. 5 to attend the Kremlin meeting marking the Bolshevik Revolution, or the Nov. 7 military parade to celebrate the event. Brezhnev, despite poor health, was at last year's parade and stood two hours in freezing weather three days before he died of a heart attack.

Reagan eliminates human rights from El Salvador aid consideration

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, ignoring appeals from the State Department, yesterday killed legislation that would have tied continued military aid for El Salvador to its progress on human rights and land reform.

Reagan doomed the bill through a "pocket veto" — allowing a midnight deadline for his signature to lapse.

Even so, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the administration was "firmly committed to the protection of human rights, economic and political reforms, the holding of elections and progress in prosecuting the cases of murdered American citizens in El Salvador."

Speakes said that even without the law, the administration would provide periodic reports to Congress on the "political, economic and military situation in El Salvador." But he did not say that such reports would specifically incorporate the human rights issue.

Earlier, officials who spoke on condition they not be identified said Reagan's objections stemmed from his opposition to congressional constraints on his authority to conduct foreign policy and from concern that the legislation would undercut the U.S. commitment to help El Salvador in its fight against leftist guerrillas.

The bill, sent to Reagan by the Senate on a virtually unanimous voice vote Nov. 17, would revive a law that tied continued military aid to El Salvador to a presidential finding every six months that the Salvadoran government was making a "concerted" effort to respect human rights, achieving progress on political and land reforms, trying to bring to justice the killers of eight Americans, and seeking an end to the civil war.

Under that law, which expired Sept. 30, the administration certified four times over the past two years that the Salvadoran government met the requirements for military aid. Congress has approved $64 million in military aid for El Salvador in fiscal 1984, which began Oct. 1.

Club Fall Concert, the music faculty recital series, and the South Bend Symphony. Matwiy also plans to use the recorder this week at the University Orchestra and Chorale's performance of Handel's "Messiah."

The digital recorder is a computer which analyzes sound waves, translates them into a series of binary numbers, and then records them on a digital video tape. During playback, the computer re-translates the numbers into the original sound waves, thus providing a near-perfect musical reproduction. As a result, distortion levels on digital recordings are an astonishing 200 times lower than traditional analog recordings. According to Audio Specialist manager Tom Spink, digital recording is the first successful sound reproduction not to use the magnetic recording method pioneered by Marconi.

Digital recording techniques are now being used to produce small ultra-thin laser disks which carry the musical content of a long playing record album. A laser beam "reads" the digitally encoded disk, thus eliminating all the static, scratches, dust, and hiss which plague the traditional record album.

What does this mean to the listeners of the ND-SMC community? According to Matwiy, "digital recording will allow the listeners to hear recorded music as if it were a live performance. These recordings should be of a quality higher than any record a listener could play on his stereo."

Students interested in these specially recorded performances should tune in to WSND Saturday nights at 7 p.m. or check their WSND program guides.

Murderer executed after 10 years in prison

Associated Press

STARKE, Fla. — Robert Sullivan, a convicted murderer who spent ten years on death row, was executed in Florida's electric chair Wednesday after reciting a psalm in tears and thanking Pope John Paul II for trying to save his life.

Sullivan, 36, his blue eyes watering, sat in the oaken death chair, took a microphone and read in a clear voice from Psalm 62 written on a legal pad: "and in God alone is my soul at rest, because my hope comes from within."

A black hood was placed over his head and the executioner, also wearing a black hood, threw a switch sending 2,000 volts of electricity through Sullivan's body for two minutes.

Sullivan twitched, then was still. He was pronounced dead at 10:16 a.m., six minutes after Gov. Bob Graham gave the go-ahead for the execution, ending a week of frantic legal maneuvering that reached to the U.S. Supreme Court and won the condemned man a brief stay.

Eight other Americans, all men, have been executed since the landmark decision by the Supreme Court to renew the death penalty.

Sullivan, a Roman Catholic, spent ten years on death row and attempts by lawyers and death penalty foes, and ultimately the pope, carried on until the last moments of his life.

"To all my peers on death row, despite what is about to happen to me, do not quit," Sullivan said. He also thanked the pope for "his personal intervention asking that my life be spared."

"I hold malice to none. May God bless us all," were his last words.

Sullivan was sentenced to death for the April 9, 1973 robbery and murder of Donald Schmidt, an assistant manager at a Howard Johnson's restaurant in Homestead, south of Miami.

Schmidt's credit cards and watch were found on Sullivan when he was arrested. Sullivan contended he was at a homosexual bar 40 miles away at the time of the murder and had witnesses to prove it.

The body was shipped to Nashua, N.H. The whereabouts of his adoptive father, a Harvard-educated surgeon, and his mother, was unknown. The couple is divorced.

Late Monday, a federal appeals court and later the Supreme Court, refused to spare Sullivan's life. A final appeal to the Florida Supreme Court and the federal appeals court, claiming electrocution constituted cruel and unusual punishment, was rejected in the morning.

Graham, on an open telephone line with the prison, told Superintendent Richard Dugger that the last appeal had failed at 10:10 a.m. "There are no stays. God save us all," Graham said, as quoted by his general counsel, Sydney McKenzie.

Vatican Radio reported the execution without comment.

Rita Lavelle, former environmental protection agency official, walks toward U.S. District Court in Washington with her attorney, James Bierbower. Information about her trial is in related article below.

Jury begins deliberation in perjury trial of former EPA Chief Lavelle

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Rita Lavelle was accused of being a "victimizer" and defended as a "scapegoat" yesterday as a federal jury began deliberating criminal charges against the former Environmental Protection Agency official after an eight-day trial.

Lavelle, former chief of the EPA's $1.6 billion hazardous waste cleanup program, was indicted last August on charges of perjury and obstructing a congressional investigation.

If convicted on all five counts, she faces a maximum penalty of 25 years in prison.

After hearing closing arguments and receiving instructions on the law, the jury began its deliberations. Jurors were sent home after more than an hour, and will resume their efforts to reach a verdict today.

Government prosecutors said Lavelle was trying to protect her "big meal ticket" back to California when she allegedly lied repeatedly to Congress last February.

They said she was not a victim but a "victimizer" who used her EPA position secretly to tip off her former employer, Aerojet-General Corp., and to help Republican politicians.

Defense attorney James Bierbower said Ms. Lavelle, the only EPA official to face criminal charges, had been made a "scapegoat" in a controversy surrounding the toxic waste program that eventually led to the resignation of former EPA administrator Anne M. Burford.

While Lavelle dabbed tears from her eyes, Bierbower said she might have made some inaccurate statements, but he blamed them on a faulty memory and not on any willful attempt to lie to Congress.

She is charged with lying when she denied helping Republican candidates and of lying about the date she first learned that Aerojet had dumped wastes at the Stringfellow Acid Pits in California.

In his closing argument, prosecutor William Hendricks said Lavelle continued to handle the Stringfellow case because she wanted to "ingratiate" herself with her former company.

Bierbower, in closing, said Lavelle's only crime was trying too hard to do her job.

"Her work was her life and she cared about cleaning up America and helping the people," he said. "She came in and got things done and some of these longtime career people (at EPA) were not too happy with this hard-driving woman."

Euromissile deployment: upping the ante

Editor's note: This is the second in a two-part series examining the deployment of U.S. missiles in Western Europe.

Despite their provocative and threatening qualities, the new U.S. missiles being deployed in Europe are militarily superfluous. The United States has already targeted everything worth targeting in the Soviet Union with our 30,000 or so other warheads.

Michael L. Brennan

And so it goes

Then why deploy? To calm European fears of the United States "decoupling" from the defense of Europe, and to exhibit to the Soviet Union the political unity and resolve of the Atlantic Alliance. The issue has become a battle between the superpowers for the hearts and minds of Europeans.

The Alliance has held up under strain remarkably well thus far, but the consensus is disintegrating rapidly in the face of domestic political opposition in Europe. Nowhere is this more evident than in West Germany, the linchpin country.

The opposition party, the Social-Democrats, voted overwhelmingly (383 to 14) against deployment last week, and polls indicate that 70 percent of West Germans are opposed to deployment. The final vote in the Bundestag followed party lines (286 to 226) in favor of deployment, but came after an embittered 13-hour debate. Thinking ahead, what happens if the Social-Democrats come into power after deployment? Will the missiles be sent back with no return address?

Both Kohl and Thatcher were elected more on the basis of their domestic economic policies than on their pro-missile stances, and both are meeting stiff anti-missile opposition. The European peace movement, which may turn violent, has scheduled major demonstrations for December 12, the fourth anniversary of NATO's "dual-track" decision.

In the now-defunct INF Talks, both sides were guilty of intransigence and propaganda ploys. It appears that the final Soviet offer, dismantling down to 120 SS-20s, was the most magnanimous and realistically acceptable proposal, yet it was rejected by the United States.

Some Reagan critics have charged that the United States wanted deployment all along in order to regain nuclear superiority in Europe. Many think we used the INF Talks as a means of placating public opposition, and to make the Soviets appear as the villains.

In deploying 572 new missiles, NATO will be committing itself to dependence upon this nuclear crutch in the event of a westward conventional attack by the Soviet Union. Cheaper than conventional forces, nuclear weapons provide "more bang for the buck."

The West European governments are happy to accept the missiles free of charge since they hesitate to increase defense expenditures in the face of high unemployment and economic recession. Short-term economic considerations and expediency could have the gravest of consequences.

Contrary to what many Americans believe, it is the United States expressed policy to use nuclear weapons first, to initiate nuclear war, in the defense of Western Europe. By increasing our dependence upon nuclear weapons, we are lowering this "nuclear threshold."

Prominent defense specialists such as Robert MacNamara (former Secretary of Defense), McGeorge Bundy (former National Security Advisor), George Kennan (former Ambassador to the Soviet Union), and Gerald Smith (Salt II negotiator) have repeatedly argued for a conventional build-up of forces in Western Europe, rather than a nuclear one. Pursuing such a policy would enable the United States to declare a "No First Use" of nuclear weapons policy, as the Soviet Union did in June of 1982 before the United Nations General Assembly. Their recommendations have been refuted by the Reagan Administration.

The primary dilemma we face in this age of nuclear overkill is that more missiles no longer ensure greater security, or buy greater political influence. Locked within the framework of nuclear deterrence, we have come to base our military strategy on perceptions, rather than reality. We deploy more missiles as a statement of "resolve" or "will," rather than out of military necessity.

The NATO deployment decision was flawed from the start, as we put ourselves to the test in a virtual "no-win" situation. Hopes for arms control look dismal. There is mounting opposition in Europe to deployment, and the Soviets are preparing counter-deployment sites. The situation will get much worse before it gets better. It is frightening that Reagan and others are viewing the recent Soviet walkout as some sort of U.S. "victory."

In the face of a crisis situation developing in Europe, we must avoid the smug complacency of viewing deployment as a political victory for the West, and realize that the Soviets are not about to buckle under.

The true outcome has been unnecessary political damage to the Alliance (the full effects of which have yet to be seen), a growing European distrust of American motives, a further escalation of the arms race, increased U.S.-Soviet tensions, and therefore, an increased likelihood of nuclear conflict.

In that respect, we are all losers.

Does God deserve God's own pronoun?

Seated at the dinner table with a Thanksgiving meal spread before him, my father began a traditional (if not outdated) blessing with the words, "Lord God, King of the Universe . . ."

"And Queen," my mother interrupted, unwilling to let the sexist reference pass.

Keith Picher

Profundity's demise

"What?" my father asked, temporarily forgetting that he was in the middle of a blessing.

"God is no more a king than a queen," she added.

"Lord God, King and Queen of the Universe," he continued awkwardly, having lost his original train of thought.

Many have criticized recent attempts to remove sexist language from prayer and scripture. Some right-wingers think these efforts are frivolous feminist ploys, and dismiss them with a "much ado about nothing" attitude.

Even left-wingers were upset by a recent "non-sexist" lectionary, published by a group of would-be theologians. Sifting through their versions of well-known passages of the Bible is like walking through a minefield. It's almost as if they typed the old lectionary into a computer and had the machine replace every "His" with "God's" and every "Son" with "Child" (as if Jesus were some sort of androgynous creature.)

Feminists should be concerned about exclusive language, whether in everyday conversation or liturgy.

But the crime in exclusive "God talk" is not that it is unfair to women, rather it promotes an incredibly narrow vision of God.

Everyone realizes that God is neither male or female in the same sense humans are (God has little need to reproduce.) Calling God a

"he" is at best a metaphor, if not merely a weakness in human language.

Some believe we arbitrarily assign the pronoun "he" to God in the same way ships and nature are seen as feminine. Of course there's nothing wrong with referring to a ship or nature as "it," though treating God as an "it" seems silly.

Traditionalists who think God must be a "he" evidently understand "he" as the proper pronoun for the antecedent "Father." Since "Father" is only a metaphor, why should all other descriptions be inappropriate. Would Homer have wanted all literature from The Odyssey onward to refer to dawn as rosy-fingered?

The point is, we shouldn't fool ourselves into thinking the pronoun "he" or the noun "Father" is anything more than a metaphor which stresses similarities, but is by nature quite incomplete, as any idea we have of God must be. In fact, many of the images Jesus offers for "The Father" gain strength from their differences, not similarities, to humans.

So what pronoun should we use for God, or does God deserve an exclusive one?

Many who teach theology at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's avoid the whole mess by referring to God not as a he, she or it, but God: "God loved the world so much God sent God's only son." Proponents note that such language treats God differently than men, women and things — elevating God properly.

Which is more important — avoiding a narrow vision of God or avoiding pronouns completely? The only compromise would be to invent a new pronoun which means "God's." Perhaps we could use "Az" as the pronoun form for God (the alpha and the omega) and "Azs" as the possessive pronoun.

Perhaps this formulation seems a bit forced. But after thousands of years of calling God "He," how could one avoid sounding strange and different.

When we stop referring to God exclusively as "He," we will make more of a statement about ourselves than God.

Dear Editor:

Perhaps "Campus comments," would become less of a lunchtime laughter and gain some respect if you would represent more different kinds of people here. For instance, when you asked, "If Notre Dame went dry, would you move off-campus?" you asked two engineers and two pre-meds (four throats). I am a business major and I would sooner live in a tent in lot D-6 than live on a dry campus.

Academic slums

Dear Editor:

In James Carberry's editorial, "There's no business like bowl business," he refers to two State universities, the University of Nebraska and the University of Oklahoma, as "academic slums." The remark is an insult to the Regents, the professors, the students and the graduates of the two schools, and it smacks of elitism.

While I have not attended the University of Nebraska, I can say that my relatives and friends who have graduated from the University show no signs of deprivation from spending four years in an academic slum. On the contrary, they have been well-educated and are very successful in professional occupations.

The administrators of state universities attempt to provide a good education which is available and affordable to all those who wish to attend — something that Notre Dame cannot do. State universities provide a valuable public service and should not be derided because they have priorities and limitations different from Notre Dame's. People inside Notre Dame are fond of calling the University great. Do they arrive at this conclusion by sneering at state schools? I hope not.

Good show

Dear Editor:

I cannot recall a page of The Observer with more incisive commentary than page six of the November 29 issue, which contained the columns of Max Lerner and James Carberry and Professor Norling's letter to the editor.

Edward J. Murphy

Kennedy article

Dear Editor:

I was surprised and somewhat disappointed with Max Lerner's assessment of John F. Kennedy's presidency in his article of November 22 (John F. Kennedy's Camelot Legend). Lerner refers to Kennedy's assassination as the death of the sorcerer and depicts the Kennedy character as one ruled by fun and playfulness.

This is clearly a shortsighted analysis of a man shown to be America's favorite President by a latest Newsweek poll. It is unlikely that the American public could be so easily misled. There was obviously something behind the Kennedy mystique. Even Richard Nixon, after having been defeated by Kennedy in the 1960 presidential election, pointed out that no one can steal an election.

Kennedy raised the nation's hopes like no other. The temptation for many historians is to blame him for not following through. Professor Lerner writes, "The reality about Kennedy is that all his life seemed to be a preparation for something that never came off." However, we cannot afford to overlook Kennedy's own words that although we are "rejoicing in hope," we must also be "patient in tribulation." I would suggest that Lerner reassesses Kennedy and see him as he saw himself, "an Idealist without illusions."

Fourth-ranked tigers breeze to victory

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Keith Lee scored 24 points and pulled down 15 rebounds while teammates Bobby Parks and Phil Haynes each added 16 points as the fourth-ranked Memphis State Tigers defeated Middle Tennessee State 74-47 in a nonconference college basketball game last night.

The Tigers are now 3-0 while Middle Tennessee fell to 1-2.

Lee and Haynes broke open the game in the first half when, with the Tigers leading 18-12, the two accounted for the game's next 10 points and their team's next 16 points.

In a stretch of six minutes, Memphis State increased its margin to 36-18 on the strength of four baskets by Lee and five by Haynes.

With 9:29 remaining, the Blue Raiders cut the margin to 15. However, three baskets by Parks and two by Lee gave Memphis State a 21-point advantage and put the game out of reach.

The victory was the 200th in Memphis State Coach's Dana Kirk's collegiate coaching career.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Tim Hasely scored six of his 14 points in a ten-minute burst in the third quarter that spurred Butler to defeat Valparaiso 56-44 last night in a non-conference college basketball game.

The Bulldogs' Tim McRoberts also hit for 14 points, and Darrin Fitzgerald scored eight during the third quarter drive that put Butler ahead 40-28.

Butler, 2-1, led 20-18 after a cold-shooting first half in which the Bulldogs hit only 28 percent from the floor and Valparaiso, 1-1, managed 31 percent.

John Mene was high scorer for Valparaiso with 18.

RENSELAER, Ind. (AP) — Greg Martin scored 16 points and Brad Connor hit 13 as St. Joseph's defeated Grace 74-62 last night in a non-conference college basketball game. Mark Moody added 12 points for St. Joseph's, 2-1.

Worth Packard and John Boal scored 15 points apiece for Grace, 6-3.

Frazier in Manila.

The only heavyweight champion to retire undefeated was the late Rocky Marciano, who left the ring with a 49-0 record.

King, who promoted many of Holmes' fights, greeted the news of the possible retirement optimistically.

"It will allow others in the shadows to gain fame, acclaim and affluence," King said. "It will be like the retirement of the legendary Muhammad Ali. That did not cause the demise of boxing. Boxing will continue to flourish and I will be a part of it."

King said he thought the WBC rules for mandatory defenses against No. 1 contenders would continue to operate and create an elimination bout between Page and No. 2 Tim Witherspoon for the crown.

"I am a stickler for the rules," he said. "The mandatory rule enabled Larry Holmes and I to gain the championship."

"It's wonderful that Larry Holmes has the finances and sustenance to retire. It is better for him to quit one punch too soon than one punch too late."

Page said he would not be surprised or disappointed by a Holmes' retirement.

"I already established he's a coward," he said. "He's afraid of me. He's yellow. He's been ducking me."

Page said the public would accept the winner of an elimination bout between him and Witherspoon as champion.

"I've been guaranteed this shot and I'm gonna get this shot," he said, "with or without Larry Holmes."

But both Page and his attorney, Miller, insisted there will be no tournament of top contenders to replace Holmes should the champ retire.

"We're looking at one fight for the title," Miller said. "The top two guys should fight. If Holmes and Page don't fight, then it should be Greg and Witherspoon."

Kansas put on probation

Associated Press

MISSION, Kan. — The NCAA ended a 19-month investigation of the University of Kansas yesterday by handing the Jayhawks a two-year football probation, which includes one year of sanctions.

The NCAA said in a release that Kansas will not be eligible for a postseason football appearance following the 1984 football season and that the Jayhawks may not appear on television that year.

The NCAA noted none of the athletic department staff members involved in what it called "significant violations" remained at the university. However, it said a former assistant football coach — who was not named — must remain separated "from any involvement in the university's intercollegiate athletics program for a period of three years beginning Nov. 21, 1983."

Violations cited in the release included offering large amounts of money and benefits to prospective players; providing prospects with expense-paid visits to the campus; providing employment to athletes and filing false statements that Kansas was in compliance with NCAA rules.

Houston, Georgetown win Cards upset by surprising Purdue

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Guard Ricky Hall scored a career-high 24 points last night, and teammate Steve Reid had 11 of his 17 points in overtime as Purdue beat Louisville 90-83 in NCAA college basketball competition.

Hall, a 6-foot-1 senior, also had seven assists and seven steals, including two in the overtime period after the Cardinals went ahead by two points. The first steal led to two free throws by the 5-9 Reid, putting Purdue back on top for good at 75-73.

Hall's next steal followed a layup by Reid that gave the Boilermakers a five-point advantage. Hall swiped the inbounds pass under the Purdue basket and put the ball back in for a seven-point lead the Boilermakers never lost. Seven of Purdue's final nine points came on free throws.

Jim Bullock added 14 points and Curt Clawson 13 for Purdue, now 3-0 for the season. Louisville, 0-2, was led by sophomore forward Billy Thompson with a career-high 27 points and guard Milt Wagner with 22.

The lead changed 15 times in the second half of regulation play. The Cardinals held a four-point advantage with just over two minutes to go, but a basket by Jim Rowinski and a fast-break slam by Bullock tied the game at 71-71.

Purdue got the ball back again with 1:25 to go and stalled for a final shot, but the game went into overtime after Hall missed with three seconds remaining.

There were six ties in the first half, and Louisville's biggest lead was four points, 12-8, after two straight baskets by center Charles Jones.

Reserve Mark Atkinson, who came in after Rowinski got his second foul, scored six points in the next four minutes as the boilermakers regained the lead at 20-19.

A 3-point play by Thompson put the Cardinals ahead again, but another basket by Atkinson tied the game and two straight steals and layups by Hall started a 12-5 spurt that gave Purdue the lead the rest of the half.

The Boilermakers' biggest advantage was five points. Louisville cut it to one point two minutes before the intermission, but a basket by Clawson with 31 seconds to go gave Purdue a 40-37 lead at halftime.

Purdue managed two more three-point leads early in the second half, but consecutive baskets by Manuel Forrest and Jones put Louisville back on top at 45-44 with 16 minutes remaining, starting the long string of lead changes.

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Michael Young and Alvin Franklin combined for 35 points last night to lead the eighth-ranked Houston Cougars to a 68-62 non-conference college basketball victory over Mississippi State.

Mississippi State took the early lead before Houston went ahead for good at 6:46 of the first half, when Franklin scored to give the Cougars a 22-21 lead. The Cougars made the halftime score 32-25 when Derek Giles swished a 30-footer at the buzzer.

In the second half, Houston outscored the Bulldogs 17-6 during an eight-minute span to take control of the game. The Cougars largest lead was 18 points at the 7:43 mark, when the score was 53-35.

The Bulldogs made a rally late in the game, led by a couple of reserves. But Houston, 2-1, converted on seven straight free throws to hold off Mississippi State.

The Bulldogs, 1-1, despite giving away height at every position, out-rebounded the Cougars 31-24.

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Freshman Reggie Williams scored 20 points as third-ranked Georgetown crushed Division II opponent Morgan State 91-38 in a non-conference basketball game last night.

Georgetown, which enjoyed a 44-18 lead at halftime, outscored Morgan State 14-0 and 19-1 over six-minute stretches in the first half in racing to their third victory in as many outings.

Williams led the first-half rout with 12 points.

Morgan State, 1-3, was led by Jesse Jackson with 12 points and Eddie Stevens with 11.

Any hopes of a comeback by the Bears were quickly put to rest as they missed their first four shots after intermission and did not put a point on the board until six minutes were gone in the second half.

David Wingate, with 11 points, and Patrick Ewing, with 10, joined Williams in double figures with the Hoyas as Coach John Thompson substituted freely throughout the contest.

Philadelphia 76ers center Moses Malone finds himself the center of attention as he is guarded by Indiana Pacers guard Jerry Sichting during first quarter action of their NBA game in Indianapolis Tuesday night.

New method to select track Hall of Famers

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — New procedures for selecting inductees into the relocated U.S. Track and Field Hall of Fame were approved by a committee of The Athletics Congress as the organization began its annual convention yesterday.

The Hall of Fame is scheduled to be moved to Indianapolis from Charleston, W.Va., next fall. It will be housed in the new Hoosier Dome.

"We want to create a Hall of Fame of the athletics community, not just TAC," said TAC Executive Director Ollan Cassell.

The selection procedures approved yesterday by the TAC Hall of Fame Committee will be used for the first time in 1984 and are not subject to approval by delegates to the organization's five-day convention which ends Sunday.

The selection procedure will begin with submission of nominations from January through March 1.

The nominations would include three categories — athletes, coaches and contributors.

TAC members, the Track and Field Writers of America, and TAC affiliate members such as the NCAA and the National Coaches Association would be able to submit nominations.

Individuals would have to be out of senior competition for at least three years to be eligible for nomination.

An athlete would also need to have met specific criteria, such as having set a world or American record, won a world championship or Olympic gold medal, have led world or American competition in an event for three years, won at least four national championships and achieved some other outstanding accomplishment at the national or international level.

A committee of 14 that would include athletes, coaches, officials, media representatives and TAC would then review nominations to select candidates for consideration by a national panel of approximately 550-575 voters.

The four nominees receiving the most votes each year and any others receiving at least 51 percent of the vote would be inducted.

Cassell said he anticipated growing interest in the new facility and said it might obtain national sponsorship. There was also a possibility traveling exhibits would be moved around the nation.

About 550 delegates are meeting at the convention. Most major legislation, on topics such as drug testing and awarding of sites for future national competitions, is expected to be voted on Sunday.

The lengthy process of selecting track and field officials for the 1984 Summer Olympics also was completed yesterday, but selections are not scheduled to be announced until January.

As the host nation for the Los Angeles Olympic Games, TAC selects officials for the sport because it is the national governing body.

"We began with some 600 applicants who had to meet specific criteria of experience," said Frank Greenberg, chairman of the officials selection committee. "That group 200. This is a once-in-a-lifetime experience for most and we created a selection process that we think has produced the most experienced group of officials ever assembled."

Greenberg said applicants had to make their desire to officiate in Los Angeles known in December 1981.

"We then rated them during 1982 and had directors of every major meet in the nation, plus our own observers, evaluate the officials," he said.

"This year we've held meetings to decide the selections," said Greenberg. "I'd estimate the six members on the committee spent about 100 hours in meetings to make the selections. I know we're going to hurt some feelings and some people will feel dejected but I believe we've come up with a group the country can be proud of in Los Angeles."

Sports Emmys awarded

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Dick Enberg, John Madden and the coverage of the 1983 World Series were among the winners last night when the National Sports Emmy Awards for excellence in sports television were announced.

Enberg, one of the top announcers at NBC who has handled such events as the Super Bowl and the Wimbledon tennis tournament, received the award of "Outstanding Sports Personality: Host."

Madden, a former coach with the Oakland Raiders of the National Football League, who has turned TV color man for CBS football games, was the recipient of the award of the "Outstanding Sports Personality: analyst."

The 79th World Series between the Baltimore Orioles and Philadelphia Phillies, meanwhile, was voted the "Outstanding Live Sports Special" for its performance on NBC.

The awards, presented by the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences, represented outstanding achievement by producers and individuals in national network and syndicated sports programming during the period 1982-83.

Among the other program winners were: CBS Sports Presents The National Football League as the "Outstanding Live Sports Series"; Wimbledon '83 as the "Outstanding Edited Sports Special" and The American Sportsman as the "Outstanding Edited Sports Series-Anthologies." In addition, ABC's Wide World Of Sports, PBS' Football In America, ABC's The American Sportsman and ABC Sportsbeat were cited in a "special classification of outstanding achievement."

Also, ABC was given an award for "innovative technical achievement" for a microwave transmission from the summit of Mt. Everest on The American Sportsman.

Among the individual winners for writing were George Bell, Jr., for ABC's "The American Sportsman - A retrospective of William Holden's Africa" and Steve Sabol and Phil Tuckett for "Wake Up The Echoes: The History of Notre Dame Football" on an independent network.

Top-notch competition delivers Irish volleyball team five losses

By JANE HEALEY
Assistant Sports Editor

While most people were at home or on campus celebrating the Thanksgiving weekend, the Notre Dame volleyball team was in Baton Rouge, Louisiana battling some of the biggest names in women's volleyball.

The team's weekend was not as relaxing or enjoying as most, either. They played five matches and lost all five in three games straight. LSU was the first holiday spoiler beating the Irish 15-5, 15-1, and 15-3. Arizona State was next, topping Notre Dame 15-4, 15-5, and 15-5. The University of Houston scores were 15-7, 15-4, and 15-11. Nebraska made it four straight with a 15-4, 15-7, and 15-1 trouncing, and Texas A&M added injury to insult with a 15-5, 15-3, and 15-7 victory.

Of the five teams, Arizona State and Nebraska provided the stiffest competition. The two are ranked 13th and 9th respectively in NCAA Division polls.

Because of this high level of skill and talent, Coach Sandy Vanslager was not as disappointed as might be expected. The poise her team displayed was a pleasant surprise.

"We represented the University well in our first four matches," she said. "We did not play frightened or scared to death of those teams. We played aggressively. The matches were not quick. They were long, hard games."

The rankings were not the only assets the opposition possessed. The average height on Notre Dame's team is about 5-8. The other teams towered at an average of 5-11 to 6-0. Also, Notre Dame only travelled with eight players — six on the court and only two substitutes. The other teams brought 12 members with them.

Though the Irish could not come away with any victories, Vanslager still thinks their performance was good under the circumstances.

"We scored points against ranked teams," she said. "All the teams we played have experience. Their programs are not four years old (as the Irish are). They have history to the programs."

The exposure Notre Dame received is valuable. The matches were not televised as previously contracted. But, simply coming in contact with that type of competition can only help Notre Dame build its own history.

The drawback Vanslager focused on was the tense play Notre Dame displayed several times throughout the weekend.

"The only disappointment I feel is when the girls put too much pressure on themselves," Vanslager said. "It's been a drawback all season. We haven't learned to deal with pressure situations well at all."

With a record of 10-28, it seems that the Irish have had problems dealing with more than just the pressure. The jump from AIAW Division II competition to NCAA Division I has taken its toll on the team's record. But an optimistic Vanslager will not dwell on the bad. Instead, she picked out the lessons both she and the players have learned this season.

"I've learned a lot about the psychological preparation of the team," she said. "I think I understand the girls better now, and I'll be able to prepare them better for the type of competitive situations we'll be in."

As for the team members, she said, rather than lamenting the losses, they must concentrate and put more effort into staying together as a team.

"It's too easy to split apart when you're losing," Vanslager said. "When you're winning it's easy to be together, to be happy, and to unite for the team effort."

"When you lose, though, when the chips are down, it's a different story. Then it's easy to crawl into your own hole and find a scapegoat for why things are going rough. It takes more concentration and effort, and that's what we've learned this year."

Notre Dame will have time to think about those lessons. For the next month the team will loosely work out and spend some time in the weightroom. In January, it's back into the gym for spring volleyball in the different leagues around the area.

The Notre Dame volleyball squad ended its 1983 campaign on a losing note at the Thanksgiving Volleyball Festival in Baton Rouge, La., losing consecutive matches to Nebraska, Arizona State, Houston, LSU, and Texas A&M. The team finished the season with a mark of 10-28. For more on the Festival, see Jane Healey's story.

Recovered Chargers face streaking Raiders

SAN DIEGO — There's no doubt San Diego Chargers Coach Don Coryell is feeling a bit more confident heading into tonight's National to tonight. "Next is the home field (advantage in the playoffs). We're not going to pull in our horns."

"The Raiders have the best record in the AFC and possibly are the best to we'll have our us," said Coryell, Raiders alongside Dallas, each 11-2.

Considers retirement

Holmes to fight only for top purse

Associated Press

NEW YORK — An aide to Larry Holmes said yesterday the undefeated World Boxing Council heavyweight champion is considering retiring but has not ruled out another fight for the right money.

"It is premature to say he's retiring," said Dick Lovell, one of Holmes' publicity men. "He's thinking about it, but he's also thinking about (No. 1 contender) Greg Page and (World Boxing Association champion) Gerrie Coetzee."

Holmes faces a mandatory defense with Page in February or March but said last Saturday that he would only consider fighting once more, against Coetzee, and then only for a record purse.

J. Bruce Miller, Page's attorney, said he had wired Charles Lomax, attorney for promoter Don King, saying that Canadian interests were prepared to bid for a Holmes-Page fight.

Asked if he thought Holmes might fight Page if it paid more than the $2.5 million King has offered, Miller said, "If that's the problem, we can do something about that."

Then, on Tuesday night, Holmes told The Associated Press that he could announce his retirement as early as next week. He had scheduled a press conference at his hotel in Phillipsburg, N.J., for next Wednesday, but then called it off.

Originally, the champion had planned to criticize WBC officials for threatening to withdraw title recognition from him if he refused to fight Page, but then it appeared he might use the occasion to announce his retirement.

"It's not definite I will announce it next week, but if not, it will be in the very near future," Holmes told the AP. "I told my wife in the ring (after his one-round knockout of Marvis Frazier last Friday night) that I was through. I told her again tonight (Tuesday) and she smiled."

Holmes, 34, is undefeated in 45 professional fights and has defended the heavyweight title 17 times since beating Ken Norton for the crown June 9, 1978.

He has talked about retirement on and off for some time but that is not unusual for boxers. Muhammad Ali announced his retirement several times, once one week before a title defense against Joe Bugner, when, according to promoter Bob Arum, he already had a signed contract for a championship fight against Joe streak, hoping to use this game to clinch the championship of the American Football Conference's Western Division.

A victory or tie tonight would eliminate second-place Seattle, 7-6, and give the Raiders their ninth Western Division title in 12 years.

Los Angeles comes into the game from a 27-12 romp over the New York Giants.

"We've got some momentum going and we want to keep winning," said Raiders Coach Tom Flores, who has a simple list of goals for the remaining three weeks of the season.

"The first thing is to win the division championship," he said, looking
