McBrien re-appointed to theology post after receiving concessions

By JOHN NEBLO
News Staff

A new theology building and an increased theology department budget are among concessions Father Richard P. McBrien has received from the University in exchange for agreeing to stay on as theology department chairman for three more years.

McBrien joined the University as department chairman in the fall of 1980 after being heavily recruited by the University administration and by University President Father Theodore Hesburgh. His appointment three years ago was a major part of the University's effort to improve the theology department.

According to William Storey, director of the department's Master's program, the hiring of McBrien was "a tremendous coup" because "he knows personally every significant Catholic theologian in the United States and Canada and has a genius for recruiting. That is the most important thing he can do for us. It can be very difficult to get top scholars to come to South Bend."

Storey also praised McBrien's administrative skills. "This place was primitive organizationally," he said.

"He recognized that, sized things up; he's the best administrator I've ever worked for."

When first offered the position of department chairman, McBrien was not interested. "I was very happy back at Boston College running the Institute there. I wasn't interested in just another department chairmanship." That was before Father Hesburgh prevailed upon McBrien to come out and visit the campus himself. "I came out to Notre Dame, met with the Provost and the Dean of the College, and interviewed some of the people in the theology department. By the time I left, they had convinced me that they really wanted me and were serious about improving the theology department. The University promised to make the necessary resources available so I accepted."

The resources to which McBrien referred included five additional endowed chairs giving the department a total of six, more than any other department in the University; three more teaching positions; several full-time secretaries and more office space. McBrien said

Organizers call a halt to the Nestle boycott

Special to the Observer

Leaders of a seven-year-old American boycott against Nestle, the world's principal supplier of infant formula, announced Friday, in a report published in New York Times, that they had suspended their protest after reaching an accord with the company over its marketing practices in developing countries.

Members of the international boycott committee will meet in Mexico City on Feb. 2 to ratify the agreement with the Swiss-based company.

Douglas A. Johnson, executive chairman of the Infant Formula Action Coalition, which organized both American and international boycotts of Nestle chocolate and other products, said it was almost certain the other American groups that endorsed the boycott would now end their sanctions.

There are many ways of spending a Sunday afternoon, but waiting in line for hours and still not getting Keenan Revue tickets, like the students above, is probably not one of the most enjoyable. Most of those in Chautauqua Ballroom did get tickets, but not without at least a three-hour wait. Cathy Roller said of the waits, "It's a tradition. It's not so bad if you bring something to do."

Lines a Keenan Revue tradition

By JOHN DREW

The crowd of about 2,000, many of whom had been waiting for hours, rose to its feet when he entered LaFortune Student Center yesterday.

It was not, however, the short guy wearing the pinstriped suit and dark glasses that the crowd was after. They were more interested in the contents of the heavily guarded suitcase he was carrying.

What were the precious contents, you ask? Well, inside the suitcase were approximately 1,000 tickets for the Wednesday, Friday and Saturday showings of the ever-popular Keenan Revue.

The first student on the scene was David Zoldak.

Zoldak, a senior, arrived at the record store at 10:30 a.m. Apparently Zoldak had no sooner rolled out of bed when he was headed for LaFortune. Zoldak said, "I made up my mind that I was going to get tickets no matter what it took, but I came prepared with computer games, homework and a newspaper." Despite his plans, these activities were exhausted before the tickets arrived, leaving Zoldak patiently waiting.

Although Zoldak arrived first, it was senior Joe Jehring who managed to acquire the first ticket to the show. Jehring admitted he knowingly maneuvered into the number one spot. After receiving the first ticket Jehring said, "This can only

Problems nonexistent at mother's weekend

By MARY JACOBY

The Junior Mother's Weekend at Saint Mary's, held this past weekend, was successful despite earlier fears that it would be overcrowded.

Those fears were mostly rumors, according to co-chairpersons Patti Drabick and Lorrie Clark. "We were a little apprehensive at first," said Clark. "But it turned out fine."

Response was enthusiastic to all of the planned events, and Drabick and Clark were "very pleased" with the weekend overall. "I think it went great," said Drabick.

The most popular event seemed to be Saturday night's dinner at the Americana Hotel, with approximately 450 persons in attendance. The Shenanigans provided entertainment, performing in each of the two rooms holding diners.

The dinner was expected to be one of the more crowded events, but help from the Americana staff along with numbered tables and a seating chart averted any problems.

Other events included a welcome reception Friday night, a panel of women speaking on the subject of alternative lifestyles Saturday morning, and a fashion and beauty show Saturday evening at the Americana.

Saturday's panel consisted of four women who told the Carroll Hall audience of 75 about their lives and professions while offering their own advice. Those speaking included Dr. Mid DePauw, director of the career counseling department; Sister Basil Anthony, assistant to the vice president; Leslie Wilson, director of the alumni office; and Dr. Karilee Watson, a professor in the education department.

The fashion and beauty show was

In Brief

The Notre Dame Victory March, written almost 80 years ago, has since been used for football, basketball, drinking, singing, and even for waking up the echoes. But rarely for catching criminals. Milton and Laverne Reiterman of San Francisco were returning from a Mexican dinner when they saw what appeared to be a mugging. "My wife yelled, 'Don't do that,'" Reiterman told the San Francisco Examiner. The Reitermans gave chase with the Notre Dame fight song blaring out on the car's musical horn to attract attention. When Reiterman caught up with the suspect, he "jumped out, grabbed him and punched him in the ribs." Other passers-by helped corner the suspect who police believe had robbed a woman while she was making a night deposit of receipts. Todd Johnson faces two felony counts of robbery. As for Reiterman, he has been recommended for a citation by the San Francisco police. "It was a natural reaction," said Reiterman, a non-alumnus of Notre Dame who owns the special car horn. "I didn't think whether he had a gun; I was just outraged." — The Observer

Should student government officials get paid? This question — along with questions about the upcoming report on alcohol — are on the agenda for tonight's meeting of the Student Senate. The Senate, led by Student Body President Brian Callaghan, will meet tonight at 6 in Room 118, Hayes-Healy. — The Observer

Candidates for student body president and vice president will be meeting tonight at 7 in the Little Theatre of LaFortune Student Center to discuss election rules. Senate candidates will meet at 8 p.m. Petitions for office will be due on Feb. 6, and the elections take place on Feb. 14. — The Observer

The LaFortune Student Center has begun using a computerized scheduling system. All requests for space and room reservations are now handled in the Student Activities office, 1st floor, between 8 a.m. and noon, and between 1 p.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. For meetings, reservations should be made at least three days in advance; for events in Chautauqua and the Nazz, at least two weeks are required. The Little Theatre can seat 88 people, and the newly remodeled New Orleans Room (the South Alcove) is equipped to handle small group meetings, seminars and receptions. — The Observer

The national president of Women Exploited by Abortion, Lori Jo Nerad, will speak about the organization tonight at 8 in the auditorium of the Memorial Library. WEBA is a group of women who have had abortions and have come to regret their decision. Nerad's address kicks off the fund-raising campaign for the Women's Care Center of South Bend. — The Observer

Father William Beauchamp, assistant to the University executive vice president, will speak tonight at 7 in Cavanaugh Hall about possible changes in the University alcohol policy. The talk is sponsored by the hall's academic commission. — The Observer

Serving its readers

Did you know that the seven-year-old boycott against Nestle was suspended by its leaders Jan. 26? Or that prominent American Jews asked Pope John Paul II to investigate allegations that the Catholic hierarchy played a role in the emigration of Nazis after World War II? Or that in Ann Arbor, Mich., the trial of a family accused of enslaving two retarded men for more than ten years on a Michigan farm began Jan. 26? If you read The New York Times last Friday you do.

Rather, if you read The Observer on that same day, you know the Notre Dame Food Service won the Ivy award, an outline of the University's Mexico program, and that the managing editor of the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel pulled "The Far Side" from the paper because it showed "the humor of violence."

The New York Times contains "all the news that's fit to print." On weekdays it averages 40-50 pages. The Observer is "the independent student newspaper serving Notre Dame and Saint Mary's." Its length averages 12 pages.

Often it is questioned whether The Observer adequately covers the news. Should this student newspaper devote itself completely to local, on-campus news, or should the meat of the paper be national and international news as reported by the Associated Press? With its readership in mind the management of The Observer has decided on a policy somewhere between the two extremes.

Some major Notre Dame publications include Notre Dame Magazine, The Dome, Scholastic, The Juggler and The Observer. Of all of these, only The Observer provides students, faculty and staff with daily coverage of local news and sports, editorials, a space for letters to the editor, and features. Neither does The Observer ignore national and world happenings. As a member of the Associated Press, The Observer does include what its news and sports editors consider most pertinent to the paper's readership.

For many students, The Observer is the only newspaper they read, and, besides the five-minute news spots in the morning on the radio, the only news they receive all day. It is these people that request more AP in The Observer. However, it is not the responsibility of the student daily publication of ND and SMC to hand-hold the student body through such a complex world. Besides the fact that it is impossible to fit the world's happenings of a single day on 12 pages, there are several hundred if not thousand reputable papers nationwide that do report on the world. No other publication reports on either of these two institutions of higher education with such depth and breadth as The Observer.

At the other end of the spectrum are those who think The Observer should not include any AP articles. In their opinion The Observer is a campus newspaper and therefore should only report on-campus happenings. In its masthead The Observer claims to be serving ND and SMC. It realizes that even if students do subscribe to The New York Times, U.S. News and World Report as well as The Wall Street Journal they do not get time every day to delve into these publications. For this reason The Observer does include some outside news depending on space and news available. On Friday, for example, The Observer did report the downing of a French fighter jet in Chad, the Soviet Union's delivery of a frigate and submarine to Cuba and that the president of Lebanon reinstated "Druse soldiers who refused to fight in civil warfare in September."

The Observer is proud of its reporting of campus news and is always working to improve that reporting. There is more campus coverage now than in past years. Financial limitations are the main reason for the restrictions on the number of AP stories that appear in The Observer. If the budget allowed for four more pages, more space could and would be allocated for national and international news. But until an alumnus donates several thousand dollars to the daily student newspaper of ND and SMC The Observer stands firm with its position that it provides thorough coverage of campus news and adequate AP news for those interested in getting the world's top stories. The newspaper's management sees this as the best way in which to serve its readers.

D-6 parking permits issued to all applicants

Special to The Observer

Temporary parking stickers for Lot D-6 have been issued to 40 South Quad students.

Sign-ups were held last week with the intention of holding a lottery, said Dave McAvoy, student senator for the district containing D-6. But there ended up being enough spaces to accommodate all those who signed up.

The students, from four men's dorms, need to pick up their permits at the Security Office behind Haggard Hall.

The 40 spaces became available when the golf shop closed for the winter. The permits are valid until April 19 when golf opens for the summer.

Here is the list:

Care center drive begins tonight

By BILL KRAIS
News Staff

The national president of Women Exploited by Abortion, Lori Jo Nerad, will kick off a fundraising campaign for a women's care center by speaking tonight at 8 in the Memorial Library Auditorium.

The campaign, sponsored by Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Right to Life, is designed to help the newly-formed Women's Care Center/Pregnancy Help Center. Members will go door to door on campus within the next week in the hope of collecting more than $6,000 for the new center. The center, to be located near St. Joseph's Hospital, will open this March. The center will provide free pregnancy testing and professional counseling. A full staff of volunteers will work with the director, who has yet to be named.

The Care Center, an idea of the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Right to Life, has become a reality only of late. According to Right to Life Vice President John May, the organization, in conjunction with faculty advisor Janet Smith, other Notre Dame and Saint Mary's faculty, and South Bend citizens, contrived the idea of a new center last spring. The need for a new center was felt once Birth Right of South Bend was closed last summer.

Funds and other necessities have not been much of a problem, according to May. Father Theodore Hesburgh, University president, has donated $2000. The house which will be used as the center was a gift from an unnamed donor. The idea behind the upcoming fund raiser is to enable N.D./S.M.C. students to donate a gift to the center. May pointed out that off-campus students could donate as well by sending all contributions to P.O. Box 664, Notre Dame, Indiana.

Following this fund raiser the group will continue to seek contributions. In late March or early April the center will hold a phone-a-thon, calling 10,000 South Bend residents. They will also publish advertisements in national Catholic and Right to Life publications. They have set a goal of $100,000 for this fund raiser. With these added funds the center hopes to add more salaried staff members and another house for single mothers. The center has received enthusiastic support by the local diocese and Bishop McManus.

he had known for some time about the administration's intention to reappoint him and was prepared not to accept the job if the University would not support his plans for the future. "Administration is so time-consuming that it can ruin you as a theologian. I wanted to continue writing and there just wasn't enough time to do both."

According to McBrien, however, the University administration continues to be very supportive of his plans. The biggest and most costly of his plans, a new theology building, has been placed on the University

Jenky named to Campus Ministry post

Special to the Observer

Father Daniel R. Jenky, rector of Sacred Heart Church, has been appointed director of Notre Dame's Office of Campus Ministry by Prof. Timothy O'Meara, University provost.

"Father Jenky's experience of Notre Dame student life is extensive and intimate," said O'Meara, "and suits him for this very important position."

Jenky graduated from Notre Dame in 1970 and completed his Master's degree in theology while residing at Moreau Seminary. Following his ordination in 1974, he spent a year teaching social studies at Bourgade Catholic High School in Phoenix, Ariz. He has served in several positions in Notre Dame's Office of Campus Ministry since 1975 and was rector of Dillon Hall from that year to 1982, when he took up residence in Alumni Hall.

According to Father John Van Wolvlear, University vice president for student affairs, Jenky "will administer a program through which Notre Dame students are touched by the Catholic faith. It's difficult to conceive of a more crucial responsibility and a more competent person to meet it."

Campus Ministry supervises the liturgical life and pastoral care of the University community. It schedules the 159 Masses celebrated each week in the University's residence hall chapels, administers marriage preparation programs, sponsors student retreats and religious education seminars, and provides a variety of counseling services.

Jenky will succeed Father David Schlaver, who left the position to become editor and publisher at Ave Maria Press.

building list and funding for it is now being sought. In the interim, McBrien has been promised double the current administrative space for the department and a student-faculty lounge for the next semester. A larger operating budget, including funds for more secretaries and staff and special scholarship money for M.A. students has also been promised by the administration.

According to McBrien, "Notre Dame is the only place I know that has the resources to become better than it is now... We have an opportunity here to serve the Church in a capacity that doesn't exist anywhere else in the U.S. The support is there."

McBrien has agreed to stay for another three-year term with a one-semester sabbatical. If he stays a fourth year, he may extend his sabbatical to a full year.

Students wandered into LaFortune throughout the day, adding to the ever-growing line. The string of bodies meandered its way from the record store upstairs into the Chautauqua Ballroom, past Student Government offices and on up to the third floor by the Observer office.

The wait was a long one for most, but those who were determined to get tickets were willing to endure the wait. Senior Marty Ellis said, "My friends and I are prepared to wait a couple of days if we have to. I've seen the show before and it's worth the wait."

After the fashion show a talk was given on the history of Saint Mary's at Carroll Hall by Sister Mary Jane Honan.

Planning of the weekend began last year with selection of Drabick and Clark as co-chairpersons. Committees, formed in September for the event, consisted of 10-12 members.

attended by approximately 220 people. Hudson's Department Store provided spring fashions and three male models for the show. Juniors Betsy Burke, Jodie Spitali, Carolyn George, and Beth Muller also served as models.

Junior Jackie Taggart had a slightly different reason for waiting. "I saw someone taking pictures of scrambled eggs and shoes in the dining hall and he said it was for the Keenan Revue. I'm dying to see how they incorporate the two in the show."

One group of students found board games were the answer to passing the time. Sheila Higgings, speaking as spokesperson for a group playing Trivial Pursuit, commented, "The crowd was really good. Everyone was playing cards, board games, or doing homework. It was a lot better than waiting for Billy Joel tickets."

One reason for this may have been that students, this time, did not have to wait outside. Said senior Steve Abowd, who has been involved with the show for the past three years, "The original plan was to have the line extend outside the front door, but the first guy that had to stand in the cold didn't like it so much so we brought the line back inside."

It took only 20 minutes to hand out more than 900 tickets to the three shows, leaving many students out in the cold as far as tickets went. The lucky recipient of the last ticket was sophomore Joan Cahill. Cahill saw the show last year and said it was excellent. As far as being the last to get a ticket her only comment was, "Awesome."

Abowd added, "We knew there was a limit to the number of tickets we could distribute. We even posted signs to make everyone aware of this." Many students, however, expressed the same feelings as junior Debbie Stephan. "I know my chances of getting a ticket are slim, but I'm going to wait anyway."

Reagan confirms re-election plans

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Ronald Wilson Reagan, 39th president of the United States, said in a paid political advertisement last night that he will stand for re-election.

His long-expected campaign announcement came as 1,000 Republican officials gathered in a nearby hotel ballroom to cheer a candidate who is riding high in the polls and has already amassed a $4 million re-election war chest.

Eight men are chasing the Democratic nomination to oppose Reagan.

In a statement, first lady Nancy

Reagan said: "it was a mutual decision. I support him fully. I'm very proud of him, and all he's accomplished in a very short space of time."

Reagan, who took office vowing to stem the tide of ever-increasing government spending and to rebuild the nation's military, was coy to the last, telling GOP officials early in the evening: "We'll trust that everything comes together before the night is over."

The former actor and governor, who will be 73 Feb. 6, announced his fourth bid for the presidency in a TV broadcast from the Oval Office.

The Reagan-Bush campaign committee paid about $400,000 to air Reagan's 10:55 p.m. EST announcement, but the money couldn't buy suspense.

Though Reagan refused for months to declare his intentions, arguing that early disclosure would prompt speculation that his decisions were colored by politics, he dropped many hints that he would run.

He made countless jokes about his age, defusing what has been a perennial non-issue. He lit into his Democratic opponents, focusing on frontrunner Walter Mondale.

He said George Bush again would be his running mate.

CSC class will visit Washington

By PAT SAIN

Senior Staff Reporter

The way to solve a problem is to go straight to the top, and students going on the Social Concerns Seminar in Washington, D.C., will be doing just that.

During spring break, from March 17-24, nearly 20 students will travel to the nation's capital to investigate the disarmament issue, urban poverty, and the problems in Central America.

Orientation for the group will be given by Congressman Romano L. Mazzoli, D-Ky., who will talk about the professional and personal aspects of a politician's life at the Capitol. A Notre Dame alumnus, Mazzoli was instrumental in setting up the first Washington Seminar.

The students will tour the Pentagon and will be briefed by a public relations officer about the government's position on arms and Central America when they look into the disarmament issue. They will also attend a seminar on Central America, and go to a training session for 2,000 people who will be working in Latin American countries.

The housing problem in Washington, D.C., will also be a subject of the seminar. "There is tremendous contrast between the federal district and the city itself," said Marcia LeMay, coordinator of the seminar.

Last year, the weeklong seminar included a personal session with Congressman Henry Hyde, R-Ill., on the Central American arms issue, and a talk with Peter Henriot, Director of the Center of Concern in Washington D.C. "Henriot is a very intelligent man who knows his material," said LeMay. "He has an inspiring way of talking directly to each person."

An informational meeting for the Seminar will be held tomorrow at 7 p.m. in the coffee house at the Center for Social Concerns. The deadline for applying is 5 p.m. on February 6. Applications are available at the Center for Social Concerns.

The program is geared toward sophomores, juniors and seniors of any major. "You do not have to be a political science major to go on the seminar," said LeMay. Students should have some interest in social issues, however.

The seminar is sponsored by the Center for Social Concerns and Student Government, and requires three preparation sessions with faculty members before it begins. The seminar is worth one credit in theology, and requires a five-page paper and an evaluation at the end of the course.

Top 10 albums

1. Michael Jackson, Thriller — There are not many instances of an album that has appealed so successfully to blacks and whites, and that's why this album might be the biggest seller of the decade. Besides that, this lp is a solid effort with good songs everywhere like "Beat It," "Billie Jean," and "Wanna Be Startin' Something."
2. The Police, Synchronicity — An album which is as sound as Thriller. The Police's Synchronicity accomplishes what many albums can't; a switch to a very serious approach without sounding fake or boring. Sting apparently hasn't lost a bit of his charisma this time out, and the group hasn't lost their hit making ability as seen by "Every Breath You Take," and "King of Pain."
3. The Rolling Stones, Undercover — With Undercover, the Stones can still make a valid claim as being the world's greatest rock band. "Too Tough" and "Undercover of the Night" have as much power as their early material, and other songs like "Wanna Hold You" and "She Was Hot" strengthen this lp. Even though Keith Richard's heroin decades are over and most of the Stones have settled their pace down, Jagger's restlessness should spark a few more good lp's in the future.
4. Prince, 1999 — Prince may not be the type of guy that girls should take home to their family, but his perverted antics proved genius with the release of 1999. It's got enough creative funk to drive "1999," "Little Red Corvette," and "Delirious" to the Top Ten. The rest of the album has just as much potential.
5. David Bowie, Let's Dance — "Modern Love," "China Girl," and the title cut make this album one of the year's best. Bowie has reasserted himself as a frontrunner of the music scene and once again, he's letting the music speak for itself, which it does nicely.

6. U2, War — One of the few new bands that know what they're doing, U2 has finally started reaching the success they deserve with this album. "Sunday Bloody Sunday" is truly powerful, while "New Year's Day" and "Two Hearts Beat As One" drive furiously. This band should be watched in the near future. With a couple more albums like this, U2 will find their place right beside The Who in the annals of rock history.
7. The Kinks, State of Confusion — Maybe "Come Dancing" isn't a classic like The Kinks last Top Ten hit, "Lola", but their State of Confusion album contains plenty of great rock tunes. "Young Conservatives" is as scathing and accurate a portrait of today's youth as possible. It proves Ray Davies still has his knack as a social critic, first widely seen in "Well Respected Man." He also still has his ability for writing catchy songs like "Don't Forget to Dance," "Definite Maybe," and the title cut, which keeps the Kinks revival going full speed.
8. Various Artists, Flashdance — The movie is about as exciting as watching your grandmother knit socks, but the soundtrack is a different story. Songs like Irene Cara's "What a Feeling" and Michael Sembello's "Maniac" dominated the charts, but they are only the tip of the iceberg of this good release.
9. Bob Seger, The Distance — If you can ignore "Shame on the Moon," this is a very solid album that exhibits more emotional breadth than he's shown in years. The energy in "Roll Me Away," "Making Thunderbirds," and "Even Now" would make any album proud.
10. Def Leppard, Pyromania — Def Leppard has always been a cut above the rest of the schlock-rock, heavy metal bands. Pyromania proves they're even better than that. "Photograph" is the best song they've ever recorded, and compared to most of the synthesizer garbage released today, it deserves recommendation.

Top 10 singles

1. Michael Jackson, "Billie Jean" — This is the song that more or less kicked off the phenomenal success of Thriller. It's moment didn't come on the radio; however, it came on the Motown anniversary show when Jackson sang it to a frenzied audience, and showed how much power a good song has.
2. The Police, "King of Pain" — This song clearly showed the band's break from any lightheartedness of the past. Special because of the message itself, "King of Pain" is also memorable because it emphasizes the Police's dedication and skill in making good, danceable music.
3. The Pretenders, "Back on the Chain Gang" — When the band's future looked its dimmest, The Pretenders removed all doubt of breakup when they released this smash. Chrissie Hynde's charisma is present on every line and keeps her at the top of all female vocalists. The lyrics keep this song a favorite of

There can be no confusion, the Kinks are back in full force as they made Pat's top album chart.

4. Prince, "Little Red Corvette" — A truly masterful pop song. "Little Red Corvette" illustrates Prince's versatility - as versatile as his own sexuality.
5. David Bowie, "Let's Dance" — The pumping bass line and Bowie's charismatic voice make this song a winner in 1983. He's smoothly made the transition from an overindulgent Ziggy Stardust to an all-around nice guy, and the music has come around just as well.
6. Michael Jackson, "Beat It" — The kind of song that comes once in a lifetime, if at all, for most artists. "Beat It" was the most heard (and overplayed) song last summer. It has something for everyone and cannot be dismissed as just a silly pop song.
7. Men at Work, "It's a Mistake" — Men at Work is not just your average group from Australia. Although most of their material is empty lyrically, "It's a Mistake" shows they're something more. It's the first time they've combined Colin Hay's great vocals, good music, and good lyrics. It was a combination that made this song a smash hit.

8. Eddy Grant, "Electric Avenue" — Even though Grant could definitely pass for a rasta-man, you won't find him sporting foot long ganja spliffs onstage. Instead, he concentrates on making good music and "Electric Avenue" supports that idea.
9. Bob Seger, "Even Now" — Bob Seger has already made a handful of classics ranging from "Ramblin' Gamblin' Man" to "Night Moves," and "Even Now" might just fit along with those others. It's about the best stuff he's done since Against the Wind.
10. Modern English, "Melt With You" — One of the best "new music" songs ever made. When people talk about the new music era it would be necessary to bring up this one because it shows much more emotion and talent than songs by such trash groups as Duran Duran, for example.

Top five disappointments

1. Stayin' Alive soundtrack — The only thing this album did was discredit an already lousy movie, which is a definite shame. The original, Saturday Night Fever, was one of the all time biggest selling albums and clearly a trendsetter, even though the Bee Gees aren't a college favorite. Hopefully, Frank Stallone will find another career, or just climb under a rock.
2. The Hollie's reunion — A truly botched attempt, this reunion is a true failure from the band that recorded "Long Cool Woman in a Black Dress." Their newest single, "Stop in the Name of Love" is a soupy remake that creates the feeling that their breakup wasn't such a bad idea.
3. Asia's Alpha — Some of these songs sound like Barry Manilow with a synthesizer, and that's a compliment. Even "Don't Cry" can't come close to anything on their debut, and although that song went Top Ten, the first supergroup of the eighties is running out of luck.
4. Michael Jackson's Thriller Mini-Movie — It was sincerely a great idea, but to sit through it more than once takes twenty No-Doze. The creatures from the dead couldn't frighten my puppy. About the only thing this drudging video has going for it is the magic of Jackson, but then again, his magic starts to wear thin after such constant airplay.
5. Simon and Garfunkel's "Reunion" — It's really a shame that this reunion never came about in album form. According to Simon, Gar-funkel's vocals didn't quite sound right on their album Think Too Much, so he dropped them and switched the title to Hearts and Bones. A truly friendly move, his action disappointed their fans, but who knows, it might be better than blundering a reunion like the Hollies' did.

Vic's picks

Top 10 albums

1. Tears For Fears, The Hurting — The year's most stunning debut, this LP fused elements of Eurodisco and pop with painfully emotional lyrics. Many will associate The Hurting's clean uncomplicated arrangements with other bands but this is not an album of borrowed themes and melodies. This band will be a leader of the new sound in the 80s.
2. U2, War — Yet another example that proves excellent lyrics do not have to be compromised at the expense of fine music. The band has been autobiographical since its beginning, with the war in the band's native Ireland a popular theme. You can't help being affected by this one. This, their third, is by far their best.
3. Big Country, The Crossing — The album that marks the return of the guitar. In a year that was dominated by the synthesizer, Big Country revived the guitar sound and used it as an integral part of the total sound. "In A Big Country" was one of the year's catchiest pop tunes, with a bag-pipe like riff throughout the song. The band's lead singer said it best: "Big Country is music to move mountains by."
4. Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers, Long After Dark — This one was a return to the sound of the band's earlier days. Except for some scattering of synthesizer throughout (most notably on "You Got Lucky"), the LP showed the band at its rock-n-roll best.

5. Michael Jackson, Thriller — What else can be said about this LP that hasn't already been said? Powered by six Top Ten tracks (and three more songs which could probably do the same), Thriller crossed all cultural boundaries like no album since Stevie Wonder's Songs in the Key of Life. Twenty million albums later and it's still showing no sign of letting up.

...y with a dozen or so American Music ...nking. Two of Thriller's singles

6. Billy Joel, An Innocent Man — After a brief sojourn in seriousness on last year's The Nylon Curtain, Joel returned with an LP dedicated to the music of the 60s with which he grew up. Songs like "The Longest Time," "Christie Lee" and "Tell Her About It" sound like updated versions by Frankie Valli and the Four Seasons. It's a fun romp through the 60s.

7. Culture Club, Colour By Number — The follow up to last year's Kissing to be Clever, this LP firmly establishes the band as the latest sweethearts of pop. The band's catchy mix of reggae and Motown and lead singer Boy George's mesmerizing voice make this LP irresistible.

8. The Police, Synchronicity — "Every Breath You Take", the band's tribute to an Orwellian vision of society in 1984 was a huge hit for the band but far from the LP's best track. Fortunately, audiences did not shy away from the LP's serious themes, which was good since this was the band's tightest performance to date.

9. The Moody Blues, The Present — For some unknown reason, this LP died a quick death. A shame, considering the fact that their last LP was a No. 1 smash. This LP, with its fine combination of the classic Moodies sound and a newer, more pop oriented sound, deserved more respect.

10. Missing Persons, Spring Session M — Former Playboy bunny and the band's lead singer Dale Bozio's quirky voice may annoy some but it's just perfect for the band's undisciplined new wave, bouncy sound. This one's for the fun of it.

Top 10 singles

1. Tears for Fears, "Pale Shelter" — The best track on the year's best LP. Haunting lyrics and a fine performance on acoustic guitar framed the lyrics to this paranoid love song. MTV played this for a while but this was the extent of this song's popularity here in the states.

2. U2, "Sunday Bloody Sunday" — One of the band's hardest rockers on their War LP, this song is a reflection on the turmoil in the band's native country.

3. Big Country, "In a Big Country" — If you think that's a chorus of bagpipes you're hearing throughout this song, listen again. The first single from one of the year's surprise debuts spotlights the guitar in one of the most effective ways in a long time. A good party tune, too.

4. The Pretenders, "Back on the Chain Gang" — The band could have fallen apart after the death of their guitarist but Chrissie Hynde and The Pretenders surprised everyone with this moving tribute to their departed band member.

5. Culture Club, "Karma Chameleon" — Transvestism aside, Boy George has the smoothest, bluesiest vocals around. This song even has a funky, danceable bass line to boot.

6. Michael Jackson, "Beat It" — I doubt producer Quincy Jones knew how significant Eddie Van Halen's guitar solo on this song would be, but it helped the song become one of the first by a black artist to crack FM airplay. One of the year's most significant singles.

7. Men at Work, "Down Under" — The calypso beat of this song was too irresistible to pass up. And to think that the record company almost passed up this group because they thought audiences weren't ready.

8. Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers, "Change of Heart" — Tom Petty doesn't have the strongest vocals in rock but so what? One of the most appealing things about TP and the band is their unpretentiousness. This one is pure rock-n-roll, the way only they can play it.

9. Carly Simon, "Hello Big Man" — I've always liked Carly Simon's voice; hearing this only helped confirm my belief that she was and still is one of the best around. This one's a tribute to her father. A video that accompanies the song is like a trip through her family album. This song hits the heart.

10. Journey, "Separate Ways" — I never thought I'd see the day that I'd like a Journey song but there's a first for everything. The band didn't wimp out with a bevy of mushy love songs; they showed critics that, at least for awhile, corporate rock bands can jam.

Top three disappointments

1. Asia's Alpha — A classic case of the sophomore jinx. Vocalist John Wetton took the group too far in the pop direction this time around and the results show in one of the stickiest efforts in recent memory. There is hope for the future, however: Wetton is no longer with the band and has been replaced by Greg Lake, who has played with King Crimson and Emerson, Lake and Palmer.

Girl School is one of the groups of 1983 that did not make the grade as far as Vic was concerned.

2. Stevie Nicks — What happened on The Wild Heart is a real mystery. After the semi-autobiographical Beladonna, Nicks took off in a completely different direction. Arrangements were much more complicated this time out — from the extensive use of synthesizers on the LP to the pretentious string section on "Beauty and the Beast." In addition, her lyrics were at their most abstruse ever. Granted, Nicks has always lived in a fairy-world and at times has made sense to no one but her self, but she may have been too obscure this time around.

3. Female lead singers — They may try to sound like Pat Benatar but ladies like Darby Mills and the lead singers of Toronto and Girlschool can't hold a note to save their life. There's a difference between screaming and singing — these women need a lesson.

It may be a new year, but if 1984 proves as successful as 1983, U2 will once again be high in Vic's albums and singles selections.

The national champion Miami Hurricanes and third-ranked Auburn will open the 1984 college football season when they meet in the second Kickoff Classic Aug. 27 at Giants Stadium. Miami Coach Howard Schnellenberger and Auburn Coach Pat Dye will be at Giants Stadium Wednesday for the formal announcement of the game, sources at Auburn University said Friday. — AP

Les Steckel was formally announced yesterday as the new coach of the Minnesota Vikings. Steckel, boyish-looking at 37, replaces Bud Grant, who said Friday he was resigning to "pursue some other interests in life." On the Vikings' staff as a receivers coach since 1979, he becomes only the third head coach in the club's history. Norm Van Brocklin was the first, from 1961-1966, and Grant held the job 17 years. — AP

Wayne Gretzky, bothered by a bruised left shoulder, considered sitting out Saturday night's game against the Los Angeles Kings. But the magnificent Edmonton Oilers' center also was nursing a National Hockey League record 51-game consecutive point-scoring streak, and so he decided to play. The Kings rose to the occasion, ending the amazing streak, which dated to the opening game of the season, and won the game 4-2. — AP

Second-seeded John McEnroe defeated top-seeded Ivan Lendl 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, 7-6 yesterday to win the $375,000 U.S. Pro Indoor title for the third consecutive year. McEnroe clinched the $54,000 purse winning a fourth-set tiebreaker 7-3 as he beat Lendl in the finals for the second straight year. — AP

Billy Sims testifies about pact

Associated Press

DETROIT — Running back Billy Sims testified Friday he signed a contract with the Houston Gamblers of the United States Football League because he believed that negotiations with his present team, the Detroit Lions, had broken off.

Sims also said he would not have allowed his former agent, Jerry Argovitz, to negotiate contracts for him had he known that Argovitz had gotten a $3,800 finders fee for investing Sims' money. Argovitz is now co-owner and president of the Gamblers.

The running back filed suit against Argovitz in federal court, claiming the Gamblers contract should be voided because Argovitz misrepresented him.

Sims said he signed the Gamblers contract last July because he was not aware until mid-November that the National Football League Lions had made an offer.

score 11 of the Belles' first 13 points, and thereby ignites a rally that fell all too short. The Marauders used many late trips to the free-throw line to widen the margin of victory, and advanced to the championship with the win.

"We just didn't have our heads in the game," said Rouse of the loss. "If we're not in complete control of our game like that, we're not going to win."

Saint Mary's advances its overall season record to 4-9 with the win and the loss. The Belles will travel to Fort Wayne tonight to play an early evening contest against St. Francis College, returning to face a powerful team from Goshen College Wednesday night in Angela Athletic Facility.

seconds later but could convert only one of the two shots.

The Irish held the ball until Sluby saw the whole right side of the court open and made his break to the basket. He got the layup, was fouled by Veal, and sank the free throw to complete the three point play.

"We were just trying to milk the clock," said Sluby of Notre Dame's strategy in the final minute. "I really wanted to hold the ball a little longer so that if I missed they wouldn't have a chance to score, but once I saw the whole side open, I had to go to the basket.

"They probably thought we were going to slow it down and wait for the last shot with three seconds left."

"They outsmarted us at the end," lamented a disgruntled Maryland coach Lefty Driesell afterward.

"They cleared out a side and Sluby drove to the basket on a one-on-one and our other four guys just stood there and looked at him.

"When you clear out a side like that you know he's going to the hoop. We've seen that in the films. The whole team should have gone after him."

Barlow, who had 16 points in the game on perfect shooting (5-5 from the field and 6-6 from the line), and Tim Kempton each hit on both ends of a one-and-one situation as Maryland was forced to foul after Adkins missed a jumper. Adkins' uncontested layup at the buzzer was of little significance as the Irish took away the 52-47 upset.

Notre Dame outsmarted Maryland more than just at the end. Throughout the game, the Terps saw a wide variety of defenses from the Irish, including their own triangle-and-two. The Irish played the triangle-and-two after not having worked on it all week until late in practice on Friday.

The Irish win centered around two things — defense and rebounding. Simply put, Notre Dame did both well.

"Their (Maryland) strong suit is getting the second shots on the offensive end," said a jubilant Irish coach Digger Phelps, "and I thought we didn't allow too many shots off the offensive boards.

"And when Maryland comes in and shoots 44 percent from the field (their average was 55 percent beforehand), I think it's because of our defense. I thought we mixed defenses well."

Notre Dame did well because it never let any of Maryland's five starters reach their point averages and because they were able to keep the Terps out of their up-tempo game.

"It's obvious that we didn't want to run and shoot with them," says Phelps.

The win should do much to help the team's confidence as they head into the meaty part of their schedule.

"We've been working all year toward meeting a Top 20, Top 5 team," says Dolan. "We came out to play in the second half. We just tightened up on the boards and played good defense."

"Now we know that we can play against the good teams," says Sluby. We kept our poise, even after we lost the lead in the second half. Hopefully, this win will keep us on the up-beat."

Besides knowing that they were playing Maryland, the very vocal "sixth man" also helped out the Irish mentally.

"It helped us out a lot," said Barlow. It (the support) has given us the confidence to get things done the last couple of weeks." Notre Dame would like to hold its momentum as they face the school where Phelps got his collegiate coaching start, Fordham, Wednesday night at 8 p.m. in the ACC.

Earlier this year, Phelps predicted that his then sluggish squad would break out they way they have of late when he said, "Our respect will come in March, and that's when it all counts."

Although many critics would have laughed at such a comment when with the Irish struggling, it is beginning to look more and more like the Irish coach will have the last laugh.

College basketball roundup

Upsetting weekend for top teams

Associated Press

It was an upsetting weekend for fifth-ranked Maryland and 14th-ranked Louisville. Larry Farmer was pretty upset, too, after his UCLA basketball team got blown away at Pauley Pavilion.

"We had a rough time," Farmer said Saturday after his 15th-ranked Bruins were crushed 84-68 by second-ranked DePaul. "But you can't have a situation where the guys across the way play harder than you do. I only ask one thing — that the players play as hard as they can. Today they didn't do that."

The loss was only the 18th in the 19-year history of Pauley Pavilion for the Bruins. Farmer's teams have suffered five of those defeats.

Meanwhile, Maryland was beaten by Notre Dame 52-47, and Louisville lost 65-60 to Marquette in a pair of upsets.

In yesterday's games, top-ranked North Carolina, which beat Georgia Tech 73-61 Saturday, pulled away in the second half to beat No. 10 Louisiana State 90-79, while Villanova upset No. 16 Arkansas 58-54.

In other college basketball action involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 3 Kentucky beat No. 18 Georgia 64-40; No. 4 Georgetown beat Pittsburgh 63-52; sixth-ranked Nevada-

Las Vegas beat Fullerton State 82-75 in overtime; seventh-ranked Houston beat Baylor 84-58; No. 8 Texas-El Paso beat New Mexico 60-59; No. 9. Illinois beat Michigan 75-66 in four overtimes; No. 11 Oklahoma lost to No. 13 Memphis State 69-65; No. 17 Wake Forest beat No. 19 Virginia 84-76, and No. 20 Syracuse beat St. John's 78-74 in overtime.

Michael Jordan scored 23 of his 29 points in the second half for the Tar Heels, who now have won 17 straight games. Sam Perkins added 19 points and a career-high 17 rebounds for North Carolina.

For LSU, it was the second straight loss. The Tigers dropped an 80-78 decision to unranked Auburn Friday night.

Arkansas also lost for the second straight game. Dwayne McClain scored 20 points, including a tip-in with three seconds left, to pace Villanova over LSU, which dropped a 65-62 game to unheralded Rice Friday night.

Tyrone Corbin scored 18 points and Kevin Holmes had 17 and keyed a second-half burst for DePaul against UCLA. With the score 61-52, DePaul went on a 15-4 blitz to take a 20-point lead, its biggest advantage of the game. Kenny Fields had 16 points for UCLA.

Frank James hit two free throws in overtime to help Nevada-Las Vegas beat Fullerton State.

Efrem Winters scored 23 points and keyed a flurry of free throws in the fourth overtime period, carrying Illinois to its marathon victory over Michigan. The four overtimes were two short of the Big Ten Conference's record of six overtime periods set by Minnesota and Purdue in 1955.

Kerry Trotter's three-point play capped a Marquette comeback and the Warriors hit 10 of 12 free throws in the final minutes to upset Louisville. Trotter's play gave Marquette its first lead of the second half at 53-50 with 3:50 left in the game, and the Cardinals couldn't catch up.

"When the game is on the line, you have to stop the other team and we didn't," Louisville Coach Denny Crum said.

Melvin Turpin scored 18 points and grabbed nine rebounds, leading Kentucky past Georgia. The Wildcats scored 18 straight points in the second half, holding off Georgia for 10 and a half minutes with a tough zone defense.

Keith Lee broke out of a scoring slump with 22 points and grabbed 18 rebounds, leading Memphis State over Oklahoma. Lee, a 6-foot-10 junior who had scored only four points in each of his last two games, outplayed Oklahoma All-American Wayman Tisdale, who was limited to 12 points.

team's performance declined, suddenly found a groove. Taking advantage of her height — Evansville's tallest player was 5-9 — she pulled down a team-high nine rebounds and scored 16 points, also leading the team. Her six rebounds and 13 points in the second half alone was a major factor as the Irish pulled away.

The second-half surge came at exactly the time Notre Dame needed it. The pesky Aces had used the outside shooting and speed of their excellent guards, Shelly Brand and Barb Dykstra, to stay even, 35-35, with the much taller Irish in the first half. Brand poured in 16 and Dykstra added seven as Evansville forced Notre Dame into a fast-paced tempo that the Irish are not accustomed to.

"If you're Evansville, you need to get the ball into Brand's hand at least 50 percent of the time," explained DiStanislao. "She does whatever she has to to get open. She runs off picks, drives, anything. The person who was guarding her didn't get any help so she got some easy baskets."

Nothing came easy for the Aces in the second half. After the teams traded baskets for a few minutes, DiStanislao inserted some new people into the game. The Irish lead quickly extended from four points to 16 points as they outscored Evansville, 13-1, in a six-minute span.

"When we were on the bench, we were watching what we needed to do," said junior Ruth Kaiser, one of the players who turned the game around. "Once the subs started going in, we were able to do what we saw."

Besides running a very effective offense, Notre Dame also was able to control the Evansville offense, especially Brand and Dykstra. The Aces could only make nine shots from the field in the half and never got closer than 14 points after the Irish ran off their streak.

It is hard to tell at this point if the team has ended its sometimes inconsistent play, but the performance is a good sign. Players who were slumping along with the team seem to be breaking out of the doldrums. Tonight's rematch with DePaul (see related story) at the ACC should tell a great deal.

The players are optimistic, though. "The chemistry seemed to be there tonight," said Kaiser after the game.

Maryland becomes a Notre Dame moment

By JEFF BLUMB
Assistant Sports Editor

Call it a "Notre Dame moment." Call it an upset. Call it whatever you will. But most of all, call it the game that finally gave the 1983-84 Notre Dame basketball team some credibility.

"It" is the 52-47 triumph over Maryland Saturday, and the respectability that goes hand in hand with beating a No. 5 ranked team like the Terrapins is unmeasurable.

However, it's not time for joy in Mudville or talk of the NCAA Tournament — yet. Notre Dame, 13-5, still must face the likes of South Carolina, DePaul, Pitt, BYU, Marquette, and Dayton, and win at least a couple to have any hope of reaching the goal that has eluded them each of the last two years. Saturday's win is a step in the right direction, though.

Right now the Irish are playing their best basketball of the year, having won 11 of their last 13, and seem to have worked out many early season problems, including free throw shooting (they shot 85 percent from the line Saturday) and offensive production.

The key to solving many of these problems has been Irish captain Tom Sluby. Sluby, himself only a 41 percent foul shooter at Christmas, now hits at a 59 percent rate from the charity stripe. More importantly, the senior swingman has emerged as the team's star and leader, someone who will get a basket when the team needs one, the same way John Paxson did last year.

That leadership was evident Saturday when Sluby's driving layup with 18 seconds to play gave the Irish a 47-45 lead and essentially the win after he made a free throw to complete the three point play.

Although 6-17 may not have been one of Sluby's best shooting performances this season, he and sophomore forward Ken Barlow were the keys in the 25-point Notre Dame first half that saw the Irish down 26-25 at the intermission.

Sluby and Barlow combined to score the first 15 Notre Dame points as the Irish jumped out to leads of 10-4 and 12-5 before Maryland came back to tie at 13. Barlow hit a 12-foot jumper from the left baseline to move the Irish back out in front by two but the Terps rattled off six straight points to grab a 19-15 advantage.

The Irish eventually took a 25-24 lead with under 30 seconds left in the half but Herman Veal's layup off a loose ball in the lane with two seconds left gave the Terps their halftime lead.

Maryland, 13-3, jumped out to its largest lead of the second half at 32-29 as Jeff Adkins drove the length of the court for an uncontested layup less than four minutes in. That was the last lead the Terps would know until there was just over three minutes left in the game, though.

Jim Dolan got a layup for the Irish, then followed his own miss of a Sluby misfire, and the Irish were back in the game at 33-32. Joseph Price grabbed the rebound of a Ben Coleman missed shot and took it down court to hit a jumper and widen the Notre Dame lead to three points.

From that point on, the two teams traded baskets until Sluby hit a key 18 foot jumper with 1:48 to play to give the Irish a narrow 45-44 margin. Len Bias of the Terps was fouled in the act of shooting by Sluby 34

Saint Mary's takes third place

Women's basketball

Notre Dame ends losing streak

By MIKE SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

For about a half and four minutes of Friday night's game against Evansville, the Notre Dame women's basketball team kept coming close to breaking out of its four-game slump, but could not quite get things going.

For the final 16 minutes, however, the Irish played nearly flawless basketball as they blew away from the Aces, 77-56, in the ACC to break their losing streak.

The victory was an important one for Coach Mary DiStanislao's team. The team had been struggling badly heading into the game, forcing DiStanislao to juggle the lineup constantly. But, by the time the Irish had put the finishing touches on the second half — a half in which Notre Dame doubled Evansville's score, 42-21 — the slump seemed to be a thing of the past.

"As long as you can identify your problems, you can solve them," said DiStanislao. "We weren't playing productive defense, we weren't taking good shots, we were turning the ball over too much, and the opponents were allowed to score. For the most part, we improved on these things."

What really improved was the overall execution of the team in the second half. Nearly the entire team contributed, a pleasant change from the losing streak which saw some key players play ineffectively.

Most noticeable was the sudden resurgence of junior center Mary Beth Schueth. Schueth, who was not seeing much playing time as the

Paced by a season-high 19 points from senior forward Cyndy Short, the Belles avenged Friday night's 88-61 setback to Moraine Valley Junior College in the tournament's opening round. Purdue-Calumet, the tournament's final entrant, claimed the championship trophy with a close 61-58 triumph over Moraine Valley on Saturday.

"We really needed the win", said a pleased Mike Rouse, SMC head coach. "I guess the best part of the victory was in our ability to come back after Friday night's loss. To me, that's the mark of a successful team."

The Belles, who will compete against both Dearborn and Purdue again this season, finally produced the team effort they have been looking for this season. Capitalizing on sloppy play by the opposing Lady Wolves, the Belles opened up an eight-point lead midway through the second quarter, and were ahead 33-26 at halftime.

"Our turnovers were not nearly the problem they usually are for us", commented assistant coach Jeff Roberts. "The other difference was in our shooting. More shots, and smarter shots too. The team was really up for this one."

Dearborn threatened in the second half, as they closed the gap to 45-40 with a full twelve minutes remaining, but their efforts only proved that Saint Mary's was the more determined of the two teams. The Belles took advantage of two technical foul calls on the Dearborn bench as Elaine Suess, who had ten points, converted three of the four free throws.

Even when Suess fouled out with nine minutes remaining, on some questionable calling by the referees, Saint Mary's found strong bench support from forward Teresa McGinnis. McGinnis provided three key corner baskets late in the game to maintain the lead.

The Lady Wolves were forced to foul in the final minutes, allowing the Belles to drop the shots and extend the lead to as much as fourteen (65-51). SMC shot 61.5 percent from the line on 16 of 26 attempts while Dearborn shot a miserable 6 of 24 attempts for 25 percent.

"I think you have to give Kris (Pantelleria) and Betsy (Ebert) some credit for the win too," continued Rouse. "They both gave us the offensive support we need from all the players."

Pantelleria turned in an impressive 17-point effort, while Ebert contributed eight points and a strong game under the boards. Lori White and Carla Sebasty came off the bench to provide further offensive support with three and two points, respectively, while junior guard Mary McQuillan provided three points. For the Lady Wolves, Diane Convery tied Short for scoring honors with 19 points, while Colleen Laurel had 15 points.

"Cyndy (Short) had a terrific all-around performance tonight," concluded Rouse. "We've been counting on that kind of effort from her all season."

Friday night's contest against Moraine Valley, unfortunately, was not as up to par. The Belles spotted the Marauders a twelve-point lead midway through the first half, and were forced to play catch-up for the remainder of the game. A combination of foul trouble by SMC (six players with four or more fouls) and talented free-throw shooting by Moraine Valley (32 of 44) robbed the Belles of the victory. The home team was not without impressive performance however. Suess turned in a superb scoring effort with 25 points, including 13 of 15 free-throw attempts. The 5-5 center came alive in the second half to

Irish ready to face DePaul

The Notre Dame women's basketball team faces a major rival tonight when the Blue Demons from DePaul visit the ACC at 7:30 p.m. The contest should prove to be a grudge match as the Irish try to avenge a 62-46 loss at DePaul on January 21.

It was that loss that marked the low point of the Notre Dame season. The defeat extended the Irish losing streak to four, a streak which was broken in Friday night's 77-56 thrashing of Evansville (see related story).

Mary DiStanislao's team would like to show DePaul that its easy win was a fluke. In order to do that, however, the Irish will have to shut down Demon guard Barb Atsaves, who scored 20 points in the first game, and forward Janine Douglas, who has been very effective in the last two games between the two teams.

The game is also very important in the conference standings for both teams as they try to catch conference leader Loyola
