Candidates for Senate disagree on alcohol, agree on finals policy

By BARBARA HARDIN
News Staff

The two opponents for the District 1 Senate seat hold differing opinions about the administration's proposal to ban alcohol from campus.

St. Ed's junior Paul Healy states there definitely should not be a dry campus. "Students at the University of Notre Dame should be responsible," he says. "The University shouldn't have to hold the hands" of students and make their decision for them not to drink, he continues.

Freshman Doug Wurth states, "there is not enough information" to take a position now. He says he hopes, however, that the student body will make the necessary adjustments whatever the decision is and that the decision will not defer from the social aspects already present on campus.

With regards to the proposed final exam policy change, Healy asserts his feelings that "after four years seniors deserve to and should be exempt" from exams.

As a member of the Special Committee for Academic Affairs, Wurth is an opponent of a final exam policy change also, protesting specifically the proposal that exams will comprise one-half to two-thirds of the final grade.

Service to the students is a primary concern for both Wurth and Healy in their campaigns, which will culminate in the election next Tuesday. Both candidates agree that availability and responsibility are important in serving their district.

Healy has served on a wide range of committees this year, including the Student Senate Committee for Teacher's Evaluations, the Student Transfer Committee and the Mardi Gras Committee.

A government/ALPA major, he says he would work hard to provide the students with what they want to see happen. A native of Daytona Beach, Fla., he is sponsoring a spring break trip there this year which he claims is $100 cheaper than the Student Union sponsored trip to Fort Lauderdale.

Wurth is President of the Freshman Advisory Council, a position which earns him a place on the Student Senate this year.

Being a member of the senate, Wurth said he is "aware of the issues faced this year" as well as ones upcoming; thus, if elected senator, he will already be well-informed.

An economics major, Wurth has this year instigated a nursing home visitation program for his class in which there are approximately 100 freshmen participants.

Campaign

Wurth would like to involve his district in more service projects and improve some of the already existing ones himself.

The expansion of social space is something Wurth would like to help coordinate. He would like to see LaFortune Student Center renovated and the environment changed from a study area to one of student social interaction. He suggests transporting the television to the main area of LaFortune.

He would also like to establish a "dorm olympics" within his district and he would like to get a student or recent graduate on the board of trustees.

Wurth feels that too often senators complain of lack of power when they actually "fail to realize where the power is."

Room lottery next week at SMC

By CAROLYN GILLESPIE
News Staff

The room lottery for Saint Mary's students who are planning to live on campus next semester will take place next week. The procedure will not differ dramatically from last year's lottery even though freshmen will now be allowed to live in all but one of the dorms, according to the College's Director of Resident Life and Housing Pat Rissmeyer.

"There are only a few changes involving the blocking of certain rooms and hopefully this entire system will be computerized by next year," Rissmeyer said.

But there is still speculation as to the effect Regina's desegregation will have on this year's lottery. Regina Hall next year will have sophomore as well as freshman residents. The hall presently houses exclusively freshmen. Next year, freshmen will also be housed in all of the other dormitories except Augusta Hall.

The lottery is a simple procedure.

However, because of the number of people involved and the desire to get a good pick, it often results in chaos.

Saint Mary's students will report to their designated areas in LeMans Hall at 6:30 p.m., Thursday, Feb. 16. After the customary wait in line, they will pick a number from the official "Housing Box." You are required to bring your student I.D.

The lottery completed, the actual room selection will then take place Monday, Feb. 20, for juniors, Tuesday, Feb. 21, for sophomores, Wednesday, Feb. 22, for freshmen with lottery numbers 1-200, and Thursday, Feb. 23, for the remaining freshmen.

Everyone must have their I.D., lottery slip number and room deposit receipt.

There will be floor plans for each dorm with rooms that are already taken clearly marked. This is the only major change involved in the lottery. Prior to allowing anyone to make their selection, certain rooms will have already been put on reserve, or blocked, for the incoming freshmen next fall. Rooms have already been blocked in LeMans, Holy Cross, McCandles, and Regina, with the fewest being in LeMans and the most in Regina.

The only hall which will not house freshmen is Augusta. This hall will remain open only to juniors and seniors, not just twenty-one year olds as it had been in the past. The lottery for Augusta will take place on Monday, Feb. 13, with room selection on Tuesday, Feb. 14.

Other changes caused by the new desegregation are that approximate-

SMC votes tomorrow

The Saint Mary's class of 1986 will choose between two class officer tickets running in the elections being held tomorrow at the Haggard Center.

Julie Harmon, president; Janet Biegel, vice president; Suzy Welsh, secretary; and Beth Steber, treasurer, comprise the first ticket. Harmon commented, "Junior year can be a very memorable year." They are stressing class unity; academically, socially, and spiritually. Harmon emphasized that they want to have quality events and not just a lot of them. Some of their ideas include horseback outings, a spring trip to the dunes, and prayer services.

The second ticket consists of Mary Beth Lavezzorio, president; Linda Cascio, vice president; Chris Jack, secretary; and Bethany Hoke, treasurer. Lavezzorio commented that the class has great potential but the problem in the past has been communication. They feel they can unify the class. Lavezzorio pointed out, "we want everyone involved, not just a select few." Some activities they want to include as juniors are a Junior Welcome Back Week, a river float, and class barbecues.

Lebowitz leaves crowd entertained

By JAMES JANSEN

Best-selling author Fran Lebowitz opened her humorous talk last night at Saint Mary's College by saying, "after being expelled from high school I decided to pass up both college and medical school."

Some of her targets included adolescence, algebra, smoking, and household pets. The talk included anecdotes from her latest book and a question and answer session with an enthusiastic audience.

Speaking about adolescence she said, "there is much misery in it, you go through 12 straight years of cuteness and now you are a big fat girl or a boy who is short." In regard to algebra she noted, "in real life there is no such thing as algebra" while later noting, "football in her eyes is algebra in motion." "Smoking if not my life, it's my hobby. It makes growing up more worthwhile." She also said, "smoking is hazardous, downright dangerous, it leads to a fatal disease but at least they don't brag about it in the end."

"In some hospitals smoking is banned, why? Everybody there is already sick. Smoking is part of being in public. The public is putting up with people's bad habits."

Some of her favorite anecdotes dealt with people themselves. Lebowitz observed, "today the average Joe is now like the average Jennifer, in more ways than one."

In regard to people's careers Lebowitz advised law school. "Then you can take people's money like mine without even being funny." She then went on to explain that her lawyer charges over $200 per hour and has no time clock as proof.

Concluding the informal talk Lebowitz opened it up to questions from the audience. In response to a question about her childhood, "I liked it but my parents didn't. I've spent my entire adulthood trying to get back to that state."

When questioned about President Reagan she said, "I wouldn't use think and Reagan in the same sentence. You can't hate him though, he looks so much like Howdy Doody."

In Brief

The restructuring of Student Union was discussed in a private meeting between Student Union commissioners and Joni Neal, assistant director of Student Activities, last night. A comprehensive proposal calling for the reorganization of the current art, social, academic, publicity, business and service commissions was presented to the Student Senate on Monday. Neal, the author of the proposal, could not be reached for comment. The proposal will be discussed at a meeting of the Student Union Steering Committee today at 3:30 p.m. in the Student Union office. — The Observer

The execution of a man sentenced to death for killing a U.S. Army chaplain shoveling his walk was halted Tuesday by a Marion County, Indiana, Criminal Court judge. Michael Daniels, 25, was scheduled to be executed Monday in the electric chair at the Indiana State Prison. Judge Patricia Gifford granted a defense motion for a stay after a motion for post-conviction relief was filed. The judge also granted a defense motion for a change of judge and named three judges, one of whom will be selected to hear the post-conviction relief. Daniels was sentenced to death by electrocution by Gifford earlier for the Jan. 16, 1978 shooting death of Maj. Allen Streett. Street was shot while shoveling snow during a robbery that authorities said netted Daniels $1. — AP

Most bars and liquor stores would be prohibited from selling alcoholic beverages to anyone under 21 under a bill which has passed the House Energy and Commerce Committee yesterday. The bill uses the federal power to regulate interstate commerce to forbid an establishment which sells anything made in another state from selling alcohol to those under age. Presently 31 states have drinking ages lower than 21. The bill would not affect those bars and liquor stores which serve liquor made in the same state. During hearings on the idea, the Reagan administration opposed the bill. The White House prefers that states deal with the drinking age. A similar measure has been introduced in the Senate, but no hearings have been held. — AP

Ray Kroc and his Big Mac dream

Dinner at Notre Dame is a 4:30 phenomenon, and if those Ivy Award winners ever began serving supper at 3, people probably would start lining up at 2:50 just to beat the crowds.

Ray Kroc never won an Ivy Award, but that didn't stop the high school dropout from realizing that people hate waiting. And before Kroc died last month, he had turned his dream of quick food into an $8 billion business known as McDonald's.

His death was honored with little more than an obituary on the inside pages of local newspapers, which some McDonald's managers tore out to hang next to the french-fry machine.

But Kroc's impact on American dining deserves much more attention. Perhaps more than any one person, Kroc changed what America — and much of the world — considers good qualities in restauranting. With the golden arches boasting 45 billion served, theoretically every person in the world has eaten at McDonald's at least 10 times.

Kroc's empire began in 1937 when he obtained the exclusive rights to the Prince Castle Multimixer, a contraption that could make up to six milk shakes at the same time.

Seventeen years later, Richard and Maurice McDonald of San Bernardino, Calif. — operators of a clean, well-lit place, topped with golden arches — ordered eight Prince Castles to serve the "hundreds of people clamoring for hamburgers and milk shakes."

Kroc persuaded the brothers to let him merchandise their operation nationwide, and on April 15, 1955, Des Plaines, Ill., became host to the first of what would become one of 7,500 McDonald's in 32 nations. In 1961, Kroc bought out the brothers' interest for $2.7 million, borrowing the money at interest rates that eventually cost him $14 million.

McDonald's became a staple of American life in the 1970s, promising the so-called Me Generation that at least one restaurant did it all for you. Fast food had become a way of life; "slow" food in sit-down diners that sported jukeboxes had gone the way of the dinosaur.

Kroc was successful because he saw McDonald's as a rare art form.

"It requires a certain kind of mind to see beauty in a hamburger bun," Kroc writes in his autobiography, Grinding It Out. "Yet is it any more unusual to find grace in the texture and softly curved silhouette of a bun than to reflect lovingly on the arrangement of textures and colors in a butterfly's wing?"

Bob Vonderheide

Kroc promised clean, quality service at maximum speed. His restaurants would have no waitresses, and customers would have to stand to get their food. (Drive-through windows were not part of Kroc's original dream.) There were no pay-phones or cigarette-machines in the first McDonald's to discourage teenagers from hanging out.

Before anyone was able to buy a McDonald's store or become manager of a company-owned outlet, the person had to graduate from Kroc's Hamburger University in Elk Grove, Ill. A corporate manual spelled out just how long to cook french fries and when to flip a cheeseburger. The basic recipe was cleanliness and speed; the goal was quality.

It is a bit of a chicken-and-egg proposition whether Kroc forced us into the fast-food culture, or whether the age was ripe for hamburgers cooked before they're ordered. But one thing is for sure: either good or bad, Ray Kroc helped speed up the American metabolism.

We have a become a nation that is losing its patience for life. We devour fast food; we despise long bank lines. Traffic jams, long homilies and slow-down basketball all give us headaches. And now President Reagan is seeking more time from a country that measures political achievement with a four-year yardstick.

With the death of Kroc, America has proven Shakespeare right: brevity is the soul of wit. One can only wonder how long America will continue to be this funny, and how long it will insist on starting one thing before it finishes another.

Glenn switches Lebanon position just in time for Marines' pullout

Associated Press

Sen. John Glenn switched positions yesterday and called for the immediate withdrawal of U.S. Marines from Lebanon and Sen. Gary Hart attacked Walter F. Mondale for taking "too long" to make up his mind on important foreign policy questions.

Both Democratic presidential candidates made their statements shortly before President Reagan announced the Marines were being taken to safety on U.S. Navy ships off the coast of Beirut.

Hart said Mondale was "one of the very last public figures in our party to oppose" the Vietnam War, and added that more recently, he has outlined a series of Carter administration actions he disagreed with privately.

Mondale, vice president under

Carter, came under attack earlier in the campaign for taking too long to state a position on the American invasion of Grenada, and for his position on the Marine force in Beirut. He called late last year for Reagan to withdraw the Marines.

Hart attacked the Democratic front-runner while campaigning in Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Glenn was in Concord, N.H., when he announced he was switching positions on Lebanon and demanded that Reagan withdraw the troops "immediately."

Glenn said Lebanon is a country in the midst of a civil war, and "there is little to be accomplished by our continued presence and a great deal to be lost."

Jesse Jackson, meanwhile, courted votes in Selma, Ala., where "freedom songs" rang out a generation ago in the struggle for greater voting rights for blacks.

"Because of the courage of the people of Selma, America and the world will never be the same again," Jackson said at a breakfast rally replete with chants and songs evoking the days of voting rights protests.

Another Democratic presidential candidate, Sen. Ernest "Fritz" Hollings of South Carolina, opened his Alabama state headquarters in Wetumpka, an Elmore County city that has a tradition of picking winners on Election Day.

"Past elections have shown that the state of Alabama goes the way Elmore County goes, particularly Beat Fourteen," said Hollings. "I am taking my message to the people of Alabama — they are the ones that make the ultimate decision

Morton Fuchs, biology professor, appointed department chairman

By BUD LUEPKE
News Staff

Dr. Morton Fuchs, biology professor and chairman of the Department of Microbiology, has been appointed chairman of the Department of Biology.

Dr. Fuchs graduated from Michigan State University where he received a bachelor's degree in microbiology, a master's degree in zoology and a Ph.D. in biochemistry. He studied genetics for three years at the University of Wisconsin at Madison.

He joined the Notre Dame faculty in 1966 and was appointed microbiology chairman in 1981.

In 1969, Fuchs and Dr. George Craig, who is now director of the Vector Biology Laboratory, were awarded a patent for research leading to the purification of Matrone, a hormone derived from male mosquitoes and capable of sterilizing female mosquitoes.

Currently, Fuchs' research is directed toward molecular biology.

Effective this August, the appointment will place Fuchs in charge of two departments, both Microbiology and Biology. Each department will be administered independently. "The main difficulty," said Fuchs, "is physical. Obviously, I can't be in two places at the same time." As a result, Fuchs plans to delegate more responsibility.

As head of both departments, Fuchs sees a merger as a possibility.

"One of the reasons I was appointed," said Fuchs, "is to explore the possibility of a merger." He said a merger will allow both departments to "utilize their human resources more efficiently." However, he also noted that curricular difficulties might develop and that he would not recommend a merger unless both departments assented.

Fuchs praised the work of both departments, such as insect biology in conjunction with the Vector Biology Laboratory, aquatic ecology, and parasitology.

Upcoming improvement can be found in what Fuchs said is a new animal housing facility. Construction on this facility begins in March.

Fuchs replaces Dr. Theodore Crovello who ends his third three year term in August. Dr. Crovello will remain as a professor in the department.

Theologian begins lecture series

By FRANK LIPO
News Staff

A new lecture series to be conducted by nationally renowned theologian Martin E. Marty will begin tomorrow night in the library auditorium.

Martin E. Marty, "perhaps the most preeminent authority on religion in the United States," is coming to Notre Dame to launch a new lecture series on religion and public life, said Professor Jay Dolan, director of the Cushwa Center for the Study of American Catholicism.

Marty's lecture, "Public, Political and Private Faith: Options for America" will be given tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the library auditorium.

Marty is a Lutheran minister with a national reputation as an ecumenist and historian of American religion. He is the author of several books, one of which, Righteous Empire won the National Book Award in 1972.

He is presently the Fairfax M. Cone Distinguished Service Professor of the History of Modern Christianity at the University of Chicago, where he earned his Ph.D. in 1956. He is also working on a four volume history entitled Modern American Religion.

Dolan said the new lecture series will examine the role of religion in public life. It will consist of approximately one lecture a year. He said that Marty, "a recognized, nationally known scholar and lecturer," will open the series by examining the public and political issues of our society, such as poverty, unemployment and nuclear weaponry. He will relate these issues to American private faith. Marty will also examine American religious trends in both public and private life. He will discuss the religious options we possess as Americans in our public, political and private lives. Marty will also look at purely private and individual religion versus religion in the sphere of public life.

The lecture is open to the public and admission is free. A reception with Marty will follow the lecture.

ly 163 freshmen will end up back in Regina next year, and approximately 70 more juniors will be living in McCandles.

The group affected the most by the changes is that of the present freshmen class. According to Rismeier, "there may be certain options open to those who do get put back into Regina to compensate for getting a rather bad room pick, but nothing can be promised." There have been rumors of people wanting to build lofts, however, this has not been discussed yet.

In addition to blocking rooms for the incoming freshmen, rooms are also being reserved for sophomores in LeMans and Holy Cross. The blocking of rooms will limit the options open to the class of '87 and class of '86, however the class of '85 will not be affected. Many freshmen have apparently resigned themselves to the fact that they may end up living in Regina again. It seems that the new policies and ideas being brought forth that were so shocking at first, have now settled.

Notre Dame traditionally waits until later in the semester to conduct their room selection process.

Saint Mary's has had a lottery for the past few years to decide which students will be allowed to live on campus and which will be forced to live off campus.

Lent offers SMC a chance to fast

By KEITH E. HARRISON
Staff Reporter

Many Saint Mary's students will skip lunch once a week for the six weeks of Lent this year as part of Saint Mary's World Hunger Coalition's Wednesday Luncheon Fast.

"We don't eat lunch on Wednesdays during Lent," said Jacques Meluch, head coordinator of the group. "Then Saga Food Services donates a certain amount of money for each person participating in the fast."

This is the second year for the Wednesday Luncheon Fast. "Last year, we were able to raise $1,000, and we hope to top that this year," said Meluch.

Although formal permission and specific dollar figures have yet to be announced by the food service, the hunger coalition has announced sign-up days for the fast. Registration for the fast will take place Monday, Feb. 27, through Wednesday, Feb. 29 in the cafeteria.

Lenten Fast coordinator Rosie

Drake said, "last year we sent money to a Bangladesh hunger collection, the Emergency Relief Fund in South Bend, and several projects sponsored by the Sisters of the Holy Cross." The allotment of this year's funds will be decided after Easter, according to Drake.

The Wednesday Luncheon Fast is the second major project of the year for the Saint Mary's World Hunger Coalition. Last November they sponsored Saint Mary's participation in the International Oxfam Fast.

Defois lectures to study religion

By JOHN NEBLO
Staff Reporter

"We need to build a strategy for peace together," concluded Father Gerard Defois in his lecture "Peace Movements and U. S. Nuclear Policy in Europe."

Defois, professor of sociology at the Institute Catholique de Paris, was one of the main authors of the of the French Bishop's recent declaration on nuclear war and disarmament.

According to Defois, the peace movement cannot be examined accurately outside the context of the socio-economic conditions in which it was born. He maintained that Europe has undergone a series of crises which have left the European communities dispirited and confused. Defois stated that the economic recession of the 1980's had a particularly severe effect on a European society which had come to identify itself with economic prosperity.

In addition, Europe faces every day the reality of a huge Soviet army just miles away. According to Defois, the imminence of the Soviet threat puts East-West conflict in a different perspective for Europeans. They feel that Soviet-American relations determine their fate, and that they have no control over the decisions which will affect their lives.

Defois said that the European peace movements are a reaction to this fear and confusion. He referred to many of the movements as a manifestation of "moral indignation" and suggested that many offer no alternative programs.

Defois concluded by saying that Europe must first decide "what they want to defend and what kind of peace they want to establish."

Defois will give a lecture today at noon at the Center for Social Concerns discussing the differences between the American Bishop's Pastoral letter and that of the French Bishop's.

A Lebanese rescue worker runs among destroyed cars in West Beirut yesterday morning looking for victims of heavy shelling in the morning during fighting between the Lebanese army and leftist gunmen in the city. President Reagan decided yesterday to pull the U.S. marines from their sentry position near the Beirut airport to safety aboard the Navy's ships, which were on call nearby.

Marines to redeploy from airport to ships

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Triumphant Moslem rebels in command of west Beirut declared a cease-fire yesterday in their six-day war with the Lebanese army and said they were withdrawing from the city's devastated streets.

President Reagan, vacationing in California, announced that U.S. Marines would be moved from their beleaguered positions at Beirut's international airport to warships operating along the Lebanese coast. He said the redeployment of the 1,600 Marines "will begin shortly and proceed in stages."

A Christian militia commander, Fadi Frem, called on his fighters to confront the Moslem-leftist challenge, declaring, "We will see them at the battlefield." But no major new clashes were reported.

The future of Lebanon's Christian president, the U.S.-backed Amin Gemayel, hung in the balance, his army weakened by Moslem defections.

Off Beirut, the five-inch guns of the mighty U.S. battleship New Jersey thundered to life at midday yesterday, shelling what was believed to be a rebel position after the U.S. Marine base at the airport again came under fire. One Marine was wounded.

In west Beirut, 39 employees and dependents of the U.S. Embassy were airlifted out by helicopter because of "the current unstable situation," a Marine spokesman said.

State Department officials in Washington said the evacuees, considered non-essential for the embassy's operation, were taken to a 6th Fleet ship for later transfer to Cyprus. Thirty-six U.S. Embassy personnel remained in Beirut, they said.

Two U.S. warships — the carrier Independence and destroyer Rick- etts — cut short a port call in Turkey and were steaming back to rejoin the flotilla off Lebanon.

The new explosion of fighting, which began last Thursday and climaxed Monday with the rebel takeover of Moslem west Beirut, has put the multinational Beirut peacekeeping troops in a difficult position — cut off from the Lebanese government they are here to support.

One French soldier was killed and at least 15 other members of the multinational force were wounded — including two Marines — in the fighting Monday and yesterday. About 200 Lebanese were reported killed and more than 300 wounded in the six days of fighting, police said.

Reagan on Monday reaffirmed U.S. support for Gemayel and blamed the violence on Syria, which backs anti-Gemayel forces. Western governments represented in the Beirut peacekeeping force — the United States, France, Italy and Britain — were consulting urgently yesterday on "what our mission should be," U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz told reporters traveling with him from Brazil to Grenada.

Public pressure was mounting in Britain and Italy for a withdrawal of those countries' forces from Lebanon, and in Washington House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. called again for a pullout of the Marines.

Premiers Francois Mitterrand of France and Bettino Craxi of Italy suggested that UN. peacekeepers take over the Beirut duties.

The sound of small arms fire and rocket-propelled grenades could be heard coming from the port area yesterday. The army and Shiite militiamen also still fought near a crossing point between east and west Beirut. But artillery shelling from both sides broke off in mid-afternoon, amid a heavy rain, a Western military source reported.

Berri and Jumblatt called on their forces to observe a 2:15 p.m. cease-fire, and the Lebanese army command said it would join in the truce. But gunfire continued beyond the deadline, though it was less intense.

Phalangist militiamen had fought alongside army troops as they were routed from west Beirut Monday.

At Beirut airport, Marine spokesman Maj. Dennis Brooks said the Marines came under fire before noon from mortars, and the battleship New Jersey fired its five-inch guns at the source of fire — he did not specify whether the attackers were Druse or Shiites.

The Marines came under fire again at 1:15 p.m., he said, and one was wounded, seriously enough to be taken by helicopter for treatment aboard the amphibious assault ship Guam. Another Marine had been wounded Monday.

An Italian communique said three Italian soldiers were wounded by stray bullets at their base in south Beirut Monday, bringing to 11 the number of Italians wounded in two days.

The U.S. special Mideast envoy, Donald Rumsfeld, met with Gemayel for two hours yesterday.

"Get them while they last"

? for Saint Mary's student body president

This is the space in which The Observer planned to endorse a candidate for student body president at Saint Mary's.

Unfortunately, The Observer cannot give its approval to either the Lee Ann Franks or the Michelle Manion ticket this year.

And that's a shame, since the endorsement could have been a little more effective than in years past. Tomorrow's election is the first in three years to feature more than one ticket.

Eileen Murphy was elected in 1982, after carrying 90 percent of the student vote.

Last spring, The Observer endorsed Elaine Hocter and her vice presidents, but not without reservations. Her platform was not specific, and her ideas were less than innovative — then again, they didn't need to be. Hocter managed to get 87 percent of the vote.

The Observer was looking forward to this year's contest. After all, recommending a candidate to its readers is one of the more important duties of a newspaper.

Traditionally, candidates at both Saint Mary's and Notre Dame meet for a short question-and-answer session with The Observer editorial board.

It is an opportunity for the entire board to meet the candidates and discuss the issues of the campaign. An Observer endorsement represents the opinion of a majority of the editorial board. A meeting is the best way to reach an endorsement decision, unless the paper wants to rely on second-hand impressions and the aesthetic value of campaign posters.

Such a meeting is essential at the College, where the campaign is limited to less than four days.

When The Observer called the candidates Sunday (the day the tickets were announced), the paper was told that Monday's "Meet the Candidates Night" at Haggard College Center would be the only opportunity for the editorial board to listen to the aspiring student leaders.

Observer Editor in Chief David Dziedzic received an invitation to the meeting. Monday's meeting would be "an ideal forum for The Observer to meet the candidates and to discuss pertinent issues with them," read the letter. The letter never mentioned that Monday's forum was designed to replace the traditional meeting of the candidates and the board.

If this was the intention, why wasn't a mutuallyconvenient time arranged? Evening deadlines make it impossible for the 10 members of the editorial board to attend a 9 p.m. meeting.

Perhaps the candidates do not consider an Observer endorsement worth their time. The two opponents say they "reached a mutual decision" not to seek an Observer endorsement.

The Observer has made great efforts the last few years to involve Saint Mary's in their campus newspaper. Thus, the decision by Franks and Manion not to talk to the board is an affront to Saint Mary's readers as well as to the Saint Mary's students who work for the newspaper.

Hocter, who also serves as election commissioner, informed the newspaper that the candidates might reconsider if The Observer planned to print an editorial on the matter.

Perhaps their decision placed more importance on protecting their images than informing their constituents.

Having only this dubious impression of the candidates, The Observer cannot in good faith support either ticket. Saint Mary's students: vote for whomever you please.

Abortion choice

Dear Editor:

This letter is in response to the letter written by Brian Crouth on Feb. 2, 1984.

Since the Roe v. Wade decision, abortion is a choice women can make. In certain cases, such as rape or incest, the trauma and shame contributes to the choice to abort. The fetus inside the woman is not a result of her promiscuity, but it is a direct result of a violent, degrading action taken against her.

How can any woman want to love a child brought about by such unloving circumstances? The trauma of a rape or an incestuous experience is enough to live with, without carrying a fetus, a constant reminder of the episode, to full term.

If a woman were to carry such a fetus to full term, does she give it up for adoption and wonder if the child will want to find its natural mother someday and show up on her doorstep?

In the event of an accidental pregnancy either by the absence of birth control or by a birth control method failure, the choice to abort or not to abort is the choice of the woman. The woman should be informed of all the options: keeping the baby, putting the baby up for adoption, or abortion. Once informed, the woman can weigh the options in her mind and arrive at the most acceptable solution.

The only person who must defend the action is the woman. She alone has the choice, and she alone has the responsibility for her actions.

If others feel she is morally wrong and will burn in hell, they are entitled to their opinion, but shouldn't dictate their beliefs upon her.

Those people can and will opt for no abortion. That is their choice. Roe v. Wade gives women a choice. That choice should not be revoked.

Miss Manners

Tacky is as tacky does

by Judith Martin

Dear Miss Manners — I have been divorced for two years and have not lived with my former husband for four years. We are not close and have communicated infrequently.

In October, he called to ask if I wanted the dog and cat, since he planned to get married and his intended is allergic to both. I declined the offer, gently reminding him that he had kept the pets against my wishes and that apartment living would not be suitable for suburban pets.

Last week, I received a printed announcement of his marriage. I believe sending such an announcement to a former spouse is a social faux pas, displaying a near-total absence of sensitivity or much repressed anger.

How should I respond? Certainly not with a gift. I considered writing "tacky, tacky, tacky" across the announcement and returning it. Silence may be most appropriate but hardly emotionally satisfying. You might be interested to know that I was wife trois, and she is wife quatre.

Gentle Reader — Miss Manners can think of lots of emotionally satisfying things for you to do, much more imaginative, if she may say so, than writing rude comments on their wedding announcement. (Yes, it was an error for them to send it, but it is as likely to be from an excess of let's-be friends nonsense as hostility.) You could send them a basket of kittens with a big white bow on it, or a letter in which you, speaking also on behalf of wives une and deux, if you must put it that way, wish them a long and happy life together ever after.

But you should know that anything that you do, other than silence (and Miss Manners means anything, probably including a perfectly proper letter wishing them joy) will be interpreted as repressed anger. Practically everything is interpreted as repressed anger these days. What a bore, but that's the way it is.

Dear Miss Manners — Last night I had the unfortunate experience of dining with a gentleman who had absolutely no experience at "finer dining." When the maitre d' brought out wine, he poured a small amount into my date's glass waiting, of course, for his approval of the wine. My date embarrassingly told the waiter, "Don't be stingy, fill it up." I then had to tell him (in front of the waiter) that he was supposed to taste it and give his approval.

Did I do the right thing? I was totally embarrassed, as was the waiter. What would you have done in my place?

Gentle Reader — Not died of embarrassment, that is for sure. Neither would Miss Manners have committed the gross error of telling a gentleman what he was "supposed" to do (although she might have said pleasantly, "I think he wants to make sure the wine hasn't gone bad before he pours the rest.") Miss Manners is far more interested in the feelings of gentlemen friends than she is in what impression they make upon waiters, which may explain why she has so much experience with "finer dining."

Dear Miss Manners — You may remember the letter I wrote about the lunch I had with my old flame Richard, 12 years after we parted (I've been happily married for 8 years) and the mental gymnastics I went through deciding how to respond to Richard's greeting, a mannerly kiss.

You called my bluff on that one, Miss Manners. It's true that the confusion I felt came not from the etiquette problem of social kissing, but a moral one: Am I going to act on the way that I feel?

I thought about it long and hard, Miss Manners. But then I did act. The friendship that Richard and I took up again has since matured and blossomed into love. Things are still going great with my husband. And so I have made the unoriginal discovery that you can love two people at once.

I haven't told anyone about this. I broke a moral code and must live with my conscience. However, I was surprised to discover the role that etiquette plays in an affair. (By etiquette, I mean consideration for other people; morality, to me, means do unto others as you would have them do unto you.)

Having forfeited one of these principles, I am grateful for the other one. For example, I'm more considerate of my husband than I was before. Also, Richard accepts the limits of our relationship. "I have the greatest respect for your husband," he said. Richard also introduced me to his sister, who accepted me with grace.

I suppose the implication of what I'm saying is that immoral acts are justified if one remains polite. I don't know about that. I do have a more personal idea what people mean when they talk about "society going downhill."

I'm prepared to face the consequences of my actions; I was raised in a solid monogamous family and am surprised that I've taken this step.

My husband and I are happier than ever. I love him a lot. Do you have any comments?

Gentle Reader — Please remember that Miss Manners is your etiquette advisor, not your morality counselor. She cannot possibly agree that polite behavior justifies immoral acts — but neither does she believe that a moral life entitles one to get away with being rude to others. The two spheres are quite independent, and one should do one's best in both. She will only go so far as to agree with you that if one breaks down, it is a comfort to know one is doing well in the other. And she will admit that the polite, immoral person has all the advantage over the rude, moral one, at least in this life.

Some brilliant bits of legislation

by Chip Block
features columnist

I subscribed to cable TV last week. Most people wouldn't look at this as a major event, but after struggling through my first off-campus semester with fuzzy-faced reporters on channel 16 and no sound on channel 28, I decided to splurge. I also got tired of fifteen minutes of weather with Dick Addis. It sure takes him a long time to say "snow tomorrow." After I had the cable hooked up I started organizing a routine so that I wouldn't miss my favorite shows. Unfortunately, The Munsters are on at the same time I have class (and the registrar didn't think that watching Herman and Lily warranted a schedule change). Surprisingly, one channel that caught my interest was the coverage of the United States Congress. I love the formality in which they try to pass bills. I can imagine that the laws of Notre Dame have undergone the same scrutiny and debate as the laws of our country.

In the past few years the Notre Dame lawmakers have passed some great pieces of legislation. Hours of litigation must have been consumed to draft the rules that have been so important to the University. Most of the freshman and sophomores weren't around to witness the birth of these laws, but I will try and describe them the best way I know how.

The North and South Quad Boycott of 1982 — the Administration deemed it illegal to play football, frisbee, baseball, or any type of energetic activity on the North or South Quad. This was the school's first indication that they believed the grass of the world should be preserved, and that Notre Dame would take the first step. The law included an amendment that suggested students play on the fields surrounding the campus. Realizing that if a student wanted to get some physical activity he would have to walk across the quad, past the basketball courts, around Stepan Center and then fight with interhall football players for a space of grass, the Administration could of course, any type of fun desired by the students. Without physical activity students would study more and be less restless while standing in line at the dining halls. The Boycott of '82 is a truly brilliant piece of work.

The Stampede Act — this bill reaffirmed the University's commitment to protecting the endangered species known as grass. The bill made running onto the football field before a game a punishable act. The Administration ruled that the tradition of students pouring onto the field to greet the team put the grass in severe peril. Therefore, it had to be stopped. In the United States Congress men stand up and talk for hours trying to drive a point into their constituents. I am sure that the same painstaking process took place when the Notre Dame Administration passed the Stampede Act. The original draft included banning the other twenty-two men and their dangerous cleats from entering the field, but a few high-ranking conservatives axed the provision by veto. Although this law has been pushed onto the back burner and is now seldom enforced, it remains on the books for use in the future.

The "I'll Shoot You Before You Shoot Me" Act of 1980 — only the seniors and a few graduate students will remember this law, but it will always be my favorite. Since I came in close contact with the conditions of this rule, I like to consider it the Administration's finest piece of work. The law came about because of a new An Tostal event that caused a large number of students to have fun. "Mass Assassin" involved over five hundred students playing James Bond and trying to shoot one another with toy dart guns. The game ran smoothly with no physical harm to students — although a few students reportedly improved their social lives. There were stories of people being shot in the nude, and students jumping out of third story windows trying to escape an oncoming dart; but the stories were all blown up for better publicity. However, five hundred people did have fun and the Administration called a special session to ban the game from ever happening again at Notre Dame. Ruling that the game was "un-Christian" and didn't belong on a Catholic campus, the lawmakers silenced the darts forever. Just in the nick of time, all sorts of "un-Christianlike" activities had been springing up during the spring of 1980 and the Administration jumped in and rescued the morality of the Notre Dame community.

These are just a few of my favorite pieces of legislation sent down from the halls of the Golden Dome. I am secure in knowing that right now the intricate workings of debate and protocol on the Administration's part are protecting our hallowed way of life at Notre Dame.

AWARD OF THE WEEK: this weeks award, the first of a long line of treasured awards, goes to the student who ripped off a doorhandle to the Engineering Building. It was a valiant attempt to stop classes, but the University fixed the handle before any disaster could result.

Yentl: saturated with Streisand

by Stephen Thomas
features staff writer

Advertised as a film with music, Barbra Streisand's "Yentl" is a 1983 year-end release that is still doing a respectable business at the box office. Yentl is a story of a girl who dared to ask 'why' in a time when the world of studying belonged to men.

Streisand plays "Yentl," a young Jewish girl who is displeased with the position that women are expected to take in her society. She has a desire to study the Talmud like her Rabbi father and her male counterparts in society do. Her father, however, feels that it is not Yentl's place to be concerned with studying. After her father's death, however, Yentl decides that she must fulfill her need to study.

Yentl disguises herself as a male and is accepted into the Yeshiva schools. At the school, Yentl becomes friends with Avigdor (Mandy Patinkin — Che in Broadway's Evita) and falls in love with him. Yentl's conflict with Avigdor's present girlfriend (Amy Irving) advances the film to the eventual revealing of Yentl as a female.

Streisand creatively incorporates music into the film at the different points of Yentl's student life. Her This is One of Those Moments is an excellent piece where Streisand gives it her all. No Matter What Happens, a song that comments on the actions of Avigdor's girlfriend, is also entertaining.

Yentl is genuinely concerned with making itself visually pleasing to the audience. The photography is unique in that it is always looking for different ways to look at it's characters and their settings. It is interesting to note the authentic details of the character's clothes, and the use of materials that were common to the period.

Unfortunately, the film suffers from an overabundance of Streisand. Her voice should receive top billing, but the film suffers from not letting the other actors develop their characters. The film's pacing also works against itself. Yentl drags slowly, often lending itself to boredom. Streisand builds complications into the story line that take much too long to resolve themselves.

A crisp soundtrack and the close attention to detail help to balance out the problems of Yentl, making it an above average film. Although it is not the year's best movie, by any means, this reviewer gives it an overall thumb's-up rating.

DePaul loses to St. Joe's

Just think of it. This Saturday, the second-ranked and undefeated DePaul Blue Demons would visit the ACC where the Irish would give them their first loss of the season and jump into the Top 20.

If that is what you had been imagining, forget it. St. Joseph's (Pa.) beat the Irish to the punch last night by knocking off DePaul, 58-45, in the Palestra in Philadelphia.

Whether or not Ray Meyer's squad was looking ahead to Notre Dame is unknown, but the loss means that an angry DePaul team will visit the ACC, making Digger Phelps' job that much harder.

Meanwhile, Phelps can only hope the same fate does not lie in store for his team as it travels to the Meadowlands in East Rutherford, N.J. tomorrow to face Rutgers. More details on both games will follow later this week.

Record now 12-0

Fencers take three over weekend

By MICHAEL J. CHMIEL
Sports Writer

Over the past weekend, the Notre Dame men's fencing team increased its record to 12-0 and the women's team improved its record to 9-2 as both teams went undefeated in Angola.

The men, who kept a winning streak alive that currently has them undefeated in their last 19 meets, downed Wisconsin-Parkside, 25-2, Tri-State, 24-3, and Cleveland State, 21-6.

In the sabre, the Irish have boosted their record to 101-14. Junior captain Mike Janis, who went 5-0 on Saturday (26-1 on the season), improved his lifetime record to 101-22 (.821 winning percentage) which places him fifth on the all-time Irish sabre list.

Sophomore John Edwards continued his unbeaten streak over the weekend as he improved his season mark to 20-0.

Presently, all sabre men on the Irish squad have records at or above the .500 mark (Don Johnson, 17-4, Kevin Stoutermire, 15-5, Tony Consoli, 13-2, Mike Bathon, 8-1, and Sean Reardon, 2-1).

Junior captain Andy Quaroni (23-1 on the season) led the epee squad to a 22-5 trouncing of the three Irish opponents on Saturday. Quaroni, who is 86-15 lifetime (.851) is currently fourth on the all-time Irish epee list.

The young epeeists have been gaining confidence and notability while winning consistently. Led by sophomore Brian St. Clair (18-5, 4-0 over the weekend) and freshman John Haugh (16-2, 4-1 over the weekend), the squad has improved its record to 92-23.

"Our young fencers have made us a good team," commented Irish head coach Mike DeCicco. "Brian St. Clair and John Haugh have been pleasant surprises."

Another young and impressive group is the foil squad led by freshman Charles Higgs-Coulthard (6-0 on Saturday). Higgs-Coulthard is undefeated in his last 30 bouts and is 32-1 on the season (with the most victories on the team). Sophomore Mike VanderVelden was 3-0 on Saturday, boosting his record to 20-3, and senior captain Chris Grady scored an impressive 8-0 mark to move his record over .500 at 11-8.

"Charles Higgs-Coulthard has been spectacular in the foil (and) Mike VanderVelden has been consistent," commented DeCicco. "I can't say enough about the sabre squad. We have talented starters and tremendous depth. The sabre squad could be as good as any in the country."

The women's squad, undefeated in its last 5 meets, downed Wisconsin-Parkside with more touches scored. They also beat Tri-State, 13-3, and Cleveland State, 9-7.

Freshman Pia Albertson leads the squad with a 19-2 record (5-1 over the weekend).

Also impressive have been senior co-captains Sharon DiNicola (16-11, 4-2) and Mary Shilts (14-9, 3-2), sophomore Janet Sullivan (14-7, 2-2), and freshman Cindy Weeks (10-4, 3-1).

Saturday, the Irish men will return home after three consecutive meets on the road to face Chicago, Detroit, Ohio State, Purdue, Case Western Reserve, Washington, and the defending national champs, Wayne State.

"We've been building all season long toward this meet with Wayne State," commented DeCicco. "We're fencing well right now and I believe that we'll give them all the competition they want."

The meet will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday in the Fieldhouse at the Notre Dame Athletic and Convocation Center.

Fleming (118-pounds) shutting out his opponent, 6-0.

At 126, the Irish were forced to wrestle freshman Carl Hildinger up a class from his usual 118 since regular starter Mark Fischer was ineligible because he was overweight. Hildinger lost the bout, 13-5.

Notre Dame also suffered losses in the 134, 142, 150, and 167 weight classes, with the losses in the 150 and 167 divisions coming as surprises to Toth-Fejel.

Kevin Stavely-O'Carroll wrestled for the Irish at 150. He will finish out the season for junior John Carnesale, who is out for the season. Stavely-O'Carroll held his match close until the third period, but finally lost, 8-4.

"He didn't have the spark tonight," commented Toth-Fejel. "He just didn't believe in his ability. He also needs to get in shape for the third period."

Sophomore John Krug wrestled at 167 and lost 6-2. Krug's two points came in the third period after he was shut out in the first two periods.

Two other Irish wins came from juniors Baty and Louis Carnesale. Baty, with a perfect 12-0 dual meet record, edged his Miami opponent, 8-5.

"I was really surprised that Phil had such a tough time with his opponent," said Toth-Fejel.

Louis Carnesale, 10-2 in dual meets, provided the three other Notre Dame points with an 8-3 win after leading at the end of each period.

A weekend trip is in store for the Irish, who will travel to Illinois to compete in the Wheaton Invitational Tournament on Friday and Saturday.

The Notre Dame hockey team will be counting on a strong performance tonight from Bob Thebeau as the Irish try to avenge the only loss of their season against Lake Forest. For more on the game, which will start at 7:30 in the ACC, see Ed Domansky's story below.

The Observer/Paul Cifarelli

Hockey team looks for revenge as Lake Forest comes to ACC tonight

By ED DOMANSKY
Sports Writer

Tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the ACC, the Notre Dame hockey team will seek to avenge its only defeat this season. The Irish play host to Division II varsity opponent Lake Forest, the team that, on January 25, brought an end to the impressive 15-game winning streak by taking a 9-6 decision.

In that last encounter, the Foresters took advantage of Notre Dame's lack of intensity to grab a quick 3-0 lead in the early going. An Irish rally gave them a 6-5 lead after two periods, but four unanswered Lake Forest goals in the final stanza led to the Notre Dame demise.

Now 19-1-0 overall, the Notre Dame team has started a new winning streak which now stands at four games. The Irish swept series with two Central States Collegiate Hockey League opponents since the loss, routing Marquette this past weekend and Iowa State the weekend before. In the last four games, Notre Dame has outscored its opposition by a 29-13 margin.

"Since the loss we've realized that we must always be ready to play," says co-captain Brent Chapman. "We're really looking forward to playing Lake Forest again so that we can show them who is the better team."

Lake Forest comes into tonight's contest with a somewhat deceiving 9-8-1 record. The Foresters are a respected Division II power with an aggressive style of play that makes them a tough obstacle for any opponent.

Back in December, the Irish took two 5-2 victories from Lake Forest in a home-and-home series.

Notre Dame currently holds a 6-1 advantage in the string of meetings between the schools that dates back to the 1969 season.

"Lake Forest has a fine team," says Head Coach Lefty Smith. "Sometimes we become a bit too lackadaisical so we've been working on forechecking and on solidifying our defensive play."

In a lineup change for Notre Dame, Tim Reilly moves up to play right wing on the first line with Chapman and Adam Parsons. Mike Metzler is now at right wing on the second line with Jeff Badalich and Steve Ely.

In a defensive switch, Mark Benning and Tony Bonadio will now make one pair, while Greg Duncan will skate with Rob Ricci.

Tim Lukenda is listed as the probable starter in the Irish goal. He has a 2.50 goals against average and a 10-1-0 record on the season.

Illinois State tonight

Women look to turn year around

By MIKE SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

If there was one game that could be described as a turning point for the Notre Dame women's basketball team last season, it was Notre Dame's exciting 48-47 win over Illinois State at Normal, Ill.

When Laura Dougherty hit a jumper from the foul line with less than ten seconds remaining in the game, the Irish got the big boost that allowed them to win their last seven games and come close to gaining a post-season tournament bid.

Tournament bids are out of the question for this year's team, which has stumbled to an 8-11 record, but the season is not lost yet. A hot streak at the end of the year would help out next year's team immensely and would win back a good deal of respect for this year's squad.

With Illinois State visiting the ACC tonight at 7:30, Mary DiStanislao is hoping that her players can once again gain some momentum and close out the year in a good manner.

"I'm not totally unhappy with the way things are going now, but this week is a good chance to put it together," says DiStanislao. "We play very good Illinois State and Villanova teams this week so it's a very important week."

The Irish would like to get back on the winning track after losing a tough game at Michigan State, 73-

Injuries a factor

Miami romps over ND wrestlers

By JOE BRUNETTI
Sports Writer

Captain Phil Baty said they would be very good. Coach Tihamer Toth-Fejel said after the dual meet that he had expected them to be very good. Were they good? Yes, Miami of Ohio was very good.

The score wasn't even close, as Miami swamped the Irish wrestlers last night, 29-9, at Notre Dame. However, twelve of Miami's points came by default.

In the 190-pound class, junior Matt Stamm reinjured a knee in the first period of his match and was forced to discontinue. Stamm was filling in for George Logsdon, who has pneumonia and will be out for the season.

"Right now I hope we can patch up Matt for the rest of the season," said Toth-Fejel.

Six Miami points came because the Irish could not enter Mike Golic in the heavyweight class. The junior has torn ligaments in his shoulder, which have been bothering him since football season. He hopes to wrestle next Tuesday against Illinois State at home, but he is more concerned about being ready for the NCAA Regionals.

"I just need to try to get in shape for Regionals," said Golic. "I haven't been able to wrestle, so I'm running every day."

The night started on a bright note for the Irish with freshman Greg

Irish Items

Hello again, everybody!

This week is "showtime" for Digger Phelps and the Fighting Irish, as they will play two games before important audiences. Tomorrow night, the Irish make the first of two visits to the New York area when they take on Rutgers at the Meadowlands. Then, on Saturday afternoon, CBS will televise to a nationwide audience the clash between the Irish and Ray Meyer's second-ranked DePaul Blue Demons.

How important is this week for the Irish cagers? Well, while the trip to the New York area may not carry as much weight as it did in the era before college basketball inundated the networks, an impressive win over Rutgers in front of the New York writers could not hurt the Irish in their search for an NCAA bid. Of course, with the nation's eyes focused on Notre Dame on Saturday, a win over the Blue Demons would really impress the tournament committee. So, in answer to the question, this week is extremely important, and Phelps will have the Irish ready.

"The Coach" Bids Adieu... Unless you have been out of the country for a while, you have undoubtedly heard this will be the final year of coaching for DePaul mentor Ray Meyer. The 70-year old Meyer holds close ties to Notre Dame, where he captained George Keogan's basketball squads during the 1936-37 and 1937-38 campaigns.

In 1942, Meyer became head coach at DePaul, and he has been there ever since. In his 42nd season at the helm of the Blue Demons, Meyer has compiled a 714-352 record, giving him more wins than any other major college coach.

Countless tributes to Meyer have already been made, and they have been composed much better than anything that could be said here. Let it suffice to say college basketball will miss Ray Meyer, and it would be appropriate to bid him a fond farewell when his name is announced Saturday afternoon.

Regarding Rutgers... Coach Tom Young's Scarlet Knights are a small and young club — two factors which don't help much when you play teams such as St. John's, Michigan, and Notre Dame. Last year, the Knights compiled a 23-8 mark, but the record has dipped to 8-11 this season.

Nevertheless, Rutgers could give the Irish some problems. Junior guard John Battle is a dangerous player, averaging 21.1 points a contest, and could give Notre Dame fits. Backcourt mate Brian Ellerbe and forward Chris Remley also hover near the double figure plateau and will have to be controlled.

Overall, the size and depth of Notre Dame should prevail, but the Irish proved last weekend that anytime they go on the road, it's an adventure. A key factor to note: Digger Phelps is 0-3 in the Meadowlands, and he badly wants to break that string this year. Hopefully, the Irish will not be outdueled by the Scarlet Knights and fall to 0-4.

Demon Doings... This is stop number three in what Meyer calls "Holy Week" for his DePaul team, as they play St. John's, St. Joseph's (Pa.), Notre Dame, and Loyola in an 11-day stretch. With the talent on his team, though, Meyer hasn't had to spend a lot of time at the Grotto. True, DePaul has not played well every time they've taken the floor, but they have just lost their first game last night to St. Joe's.

The 17-1 Blue Demons love to run, and the man who makes them go is Kenny Patterson. Patterson, whose 30-foot bucket at the buzzer beat the Irish last year, runs the attack from the point and has plenty of fine folks to whom he can dish off his assists. One of those players is 6-6 forward Tyrone Corbin, who leads the team in scoring with a 14.0 average. Other Demons to watch are explosive forward Kevin Holmes, and talented freshman Dallas Comegys, who comes off the bench to swat shots into pep band tubas.

This team also plays great defense, so look for a game with the score in the 40's or 50's. The Irish will have to play a great game, but maybe Digger can find one more "moment" to give the fans.

Irish Ache... Skip Meyer's straining room looks like he took out a branch office of the infirmary. The Irish are feeling some of the aches and pains of a long season, as two starters missed Monday's game against Vermont. Tim Kempton has an injury to his fibia (that's a bone in the lower leg for those of us who aren't pre-med), and the Irish staff is being careful not to have him turn it into a stress fracture. Meanwhile, JoJo Buchanan continues to be plagued by tendonitis, and Jim Dolan is hampered by bursitis in his big toe.

Pick of the Week... Engarde! Yes, folks, this week's pick involves the hottest team on campus in its biggest meet of the year. Coach Mike DeGcco's Irish fencers will play host to six teams including defending national champion Wayne State in a meet beginning at 9:00 a.m. in the north dome of the ACC.

For those of you who have never seen a fencing meet, it will not involve a bunch of folks who look like Errol Flynn running around and jumping on furniture. This is a sport that involves great precision, and the Wayne State Tartars (that's what they're called) and the Irish are two of the best squads in collegiate fencing.

As mentioned earlier, the action starts at 9:00 a.m., but if you want to see the Irish put their 19-meet winning streak on the line against Wayne State, that matchup will take place at 7:30 p.m., after the DePaul game. Come on out to the ACC Fieldhouse and (are you ready for this?) watch the Irish try to make Tartar sauce.
