Franks victorious in SMC elections

By PAM RICHARDSON
Staff Reporter

In the race for Saint Mary's student body leaders, the ticket of Lee Ann Franks, president; Julie T Strazabosco, vice president of student affairs; and Ann Marie Collman, vice president of academic affairs, defeated the ticket of Michelle Manion, Maureen Karnatz and Chris Hart. After hearing the results, Franks said, "We're looking forward to a great '84-'85."

A total of 62 percent of the student body at Saint Mary's turned out to vote yesterday in the student body and class officer election. Franks received 60 percent of the vote and Manion received 36 percent.

The ticket of Debbie Pascente, president; Mary Sue Dunn, vice president; Regina Pinotti, treasurer; and Tracy Bringardner, secretary, narrowly defeated the opposing ticket of Maureen Galligan, Ann Bowler, Marty Bonich, and Jane Rauh for senior class officers. Pascente received 57 percent of the vote to Galligan's 41 percent. Sixty percent of next year's senior class voted in the election. Pascente said, "We're a roomful of smiles," when she realized she was the president of next year's senior class.

In the junior class officer election a total of 71.6 percent of this year's sophomores turned out to vote. They elected Julie Harmon, president; Janet Biegel, vice president; Suzy Welsh, secretary; and Beth Steber, treasurer over the ticket of Mary Beth Lavezzorio, Linda Cascio, Chris Jack, and Bethany Hoke who ended up with 37 percent of the vote. Harmon said she hopes they accomplish everything next year's junior class wants.

There will be a runoff between the ticket of Michelle Collman, president; Jenny Blantz, vice president; Sara Honningford, secretary; and Patty Curran, treasurer and that of Jeanne Heller, president; Angie Hundman, vice president; Betsy Burke, secretary; and Jill Gillig, treasurer. Collman accumulated 38 percent of the votes to Heller's 44 percent. The ticket of Mary Flynn, Erin Mullarkey, B.A. Otto, and Dee Dee Shary came in third. The runoff between the Collman ticket and the Heller ticket will take place Monday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Haggart College Center.

Black cultural festival to kick off this month

By TERRY BLAND
News Staff

This year's Black Cultural Arts Festival, with a theme of "From Dream to Reality: Directions for Black America," once again will offer a wide variety of speakers and activities to interest everyone as it kicks off this month.

"We have events that interest everybody," says senior Ruby Anderson, chairman of the festival. "We have a lot of newsworthy speakers coming to talk to the students this year."

The event will celebrate the 20th anniversary of the civil rights march at Washington, D.C., and the 30th anniversary of the well-known Brown vs. Board of Education decision. The festival also coincides with Black History Month.

Among the speakers this year are the husband and wife acting team, Ossie Davis and Ruby Dee, authors

Accounting students go to Virginia for business case-analysis contest

By MIKE MILLEN
News Staff

Yesterday, four Notre Dame students left in the early morning for Charlottesville, Va. Their destination? The Third Annual McIntire Commerce Invitational at the University of Virginia. Dubbed as the country's only undergraduate business case-analysis competition, the tournament promises to be a showcase for some of the brightest business bachelor's degree candidates in the nation.

Leaving with high hopes and a taste for prestige was the team of Kelly Frank, Brian Ledley, Greg Testerman, and Steve Wilkie. They are coached by Professor David Norburn, who is optimistic about the contest.

According to the rules, each school sends a four-member student team to the competition. After being introduced to a complex business problem, the teams are given 15 hours to analyze it and prepare a written solution and an oral defense of their solution.

According to Testerman, the contest is not as easy as it sounds. He describes the schedule as being "grueling." Initially, the team is given the case history of an almost bankrupt company. After taking a brief overview of the 50-page document, which is loaded with charts, figures, and all necessary financial and managerial information, the team meets with the case's author. After clearing up any ambiguous information in the allotted two hours, the team is then literally locked in a room for fifteen more. During this time, they are preparing a plan to save the company. When they emerge at about 11 p.m., they breathe a sigh of relief and give the plan to the typists, who prepare it for the judges.

Their job is not over, however, as they still must prepare their oral defense. After working until the wee hours of the morning, they are finally given a chance to rest. Of course they must be up rather early, for at 8 a.m. they must convince a panel that their plan would be the optimum way to take the company out of the red and into the black. It is after this that their task is over; the rest is up to the judges.

The members of the Notre Dame team are all fourth-year business students who were selected by the faculty. Although this is the first year that Notre Dame has been invited to the competition, the team has a wealth of experience. They have

Communication, alcohol key issues in Student Senate races

Promoting better communication is the key campaign issue for District 2 senate candidates Mark Rolincik and Dan McNamara.

Morrissey freshman Rolincik is presently a member of the Student Senate Committee for Teacher Evaluations. Through teacher evaluations, he has "learned what people want;" however, he says there should still be more communication between students and their teachers.

"Students should feel free to voice their opinions," says Rolincik, "and teachers should know where students are coming from."

Rolincik also says that students should take more advantage of their senators. He says if he is elected he will try to promote more communication between his constituents and himself so that he can relay what they want.

Rolincik says he would like to see the students "more aware of proposals the senators are voting on" and says he would work to inform his district of the issues at hand.

McNamara, a Morrissey junior, spent his sophomore year in Ireland where he participated in the Right to Life Movement. He was also a member of Amnesty International, a worldwide organization which focuses on helping and releasing political prisoners.

McNamara would also like to see more student/senator communication. Says McNamara, "I would like to see a senate aid or contact from each dorm in my district whom I could call weekly or biweekly to see what the people in that dorm want."

He says he would like to see more student input. "I'm not afraid to take ideas from others and give credit where credit's due," says McNamara. He would also send out a weekly or biweekly newsletter to keep his district members informed on senate activities.

McNamara says he would see SENATE, page 8

"A fresh new look into student government" is the campaign motto of District 4's unopposed candidate Tom Abood. A Flanner junior, Abood says he has never been involved in student government at Notre Dame but is ready to start now by getting involved in campus issues. Abood says he was quite surprised to discover he was unopposed and felt it exemplified apathy among his district.

As a senator, Abood would like to see a few changes made, including easier accessibility for drivers who need to load or unload to get past security. He says "You shouldn't have to be interrogated every time."

He says he would like to extend the hours for use of the women's laundry facilities, and would like to lengthen parietals on weekends for "at least an hour."

Abood says there has been good progress in teacher evaluations but says they "should have a greater impact on hiring, firing, and tenure."

Abood is opposed to both a dry campus and a change in final exam policy that could make exams account for a large percentage of one's final grade.

According to Abood, "a good senator should be accessible and able to get things out of the talk stage." He says "the Student Senate and government could be more effective in getting students to vocalize what they want, and people should know that their opinions count."

In Brief

The Board of Trustees' Executive Committee will meet with officers of the University this weekend in Key Biscayne, Fla. An agenda was not made public for the annual winter conference, but discussion of an alcohol policy for Notre Dame likely will take place. The group will meet this afternoon, tonight and tomorrow morning in the Key Biscayne Hotel. Father Theodore Hesburgh, University president, will preside over the meetings. — The Observer

Accounting students at Notre Dame will take their sharpened pencils to nine locations starting tomorrow in the annual effort to help area low income families in preparing tax returns. The students have generated thousands of dollars in refunds over the years through the community assistance program. Principal wage earners in the homes will receive free assistance with their tax returns during stated hours at neighborhood centers or downtown libraries in South Bend and Mishawaka. The students, all accounting majors, will be accompanied by faculty of the Notre Dame Department of Accountancy and certified public accountants. Special SWAT teams (Students Working At Taxation) have been formed to assist where needed and to help residents of neighboring areas where disasters have caused continuing problems. The assistance will continue through the April 15 filing date. — The Observer

Sixteen-inch shells fired by the U.S. battleship New Jersey smashed a Syrian command and control center and killed some Syrian commanders in Lebanon, administration sources said yesterday. The command post was one of about 15 targets which the Pentagon said was struck during the barrage of fire from 16- and 5-inch guns from the New Jersey and a destroyer. The sources, who spoke on condition that they not be identified, did not disclose how the United States learned of the deaths of the Syrian officers. Officials have been saying bad weather has prevented damage assessment which usually is made by reconnaissance aircraft. It is known that the United States is capable of monitoring communications. — AP

Is LaFortune going to become too used?

Amy Stephan
 Assistant News Editor

Inside Friday

You may have noticed a great improvement inside LaFortune Student Center lately.

LaFortune, where cockroaches formerly outnumbered students nine to one, is beginning to become more of the student center its name implies.

Since last summer's renovations, cries for a new student center have died down considerably, and students seem content to have a building that is at least usable.

"The building is being used more and more because it's a nicer building," said Jim McDonnell, director of student activities. For example, an average of seven to eight groups now meet in LaFortune each day, as compared to only two or three per day last year.

And, if current plans are implemented, the building will continue to be used more and more.

Renovations have brought about increased usage of the main lobby, the Dooley room and Karon court, but according to McDonnell, there is still much "dead space."

A top-to-bottom redistribution of space in LaFortune is being considered by McDonnell, a Student Senate committee, and others. McDonnell hopes to have some definite plans within a month.

Current ideas run something like this:

Beginning on the third floor, WVFI-FM and WSND-FM stations would move into what are now the Scholastic offices. Scholastic would then migrate down the hall to The Dome offices.

The Dome in turn would move either to the nebulous one-and-a-half story, where the Center for Social Concerns once resided, or to the basement rooms formerly occupied by Campus Press.

The second floor office area, with its two wide, empty corridors, would be redesigned and space would be allotted for the class offices now housed on the one-and-a-half floor. An office/meeting room for University clubs and organizations might also be added.

Since Career and Placement Services will no longer be using LaFortune next year (they are rumored to be moving to the library basement), the long-planned undergraduate club in Chautauqua may become a reality.

A pizzeria might be housed in room 2D, thus offering an alternative to the Huddle. The pizzeria, however, would probably be run by Notre Dame Food Services.

The basement could become the new home for University Hair Stylists, the barbershop, and First Source Travel. A much-needed laundry room might be established in the old Campus Press rooms.

This complicated series of moves would make use of wasted space and would group more businesses and services in a central location — a great convenience for many students — without significantly reducing the amount of "social" space in the building.

But will all this new activity cause the building to burst at its seams?

McDonnell estimates the computer store alone attracts 100-200 people to the building each day. The addition of two radio stations, several businesses, a pizzeria, and a laundry room would increase traffic considerably. Although the businesses themselves may not take up much room, the people they attract will.

It could be argued that people will merely use the new services and not necessarily "hang out" in the building, thus preventing excess crowding. But this summer's renovations show that an improved building will naturally attract more students. Besides, such improvements as an undergraduate club and a pizzeria are meant to attract more than just through traffic.

Crowding is already apparent at peak hours, especially in the dining areas. In fact, an expansion to the Huddle also is being considered.

Yet, a student center should contain not only businesses, services and offices, but also ample room for students to socialize, study or just "hang out." If even some of the proposed changes go through, crowding might make an addition a necessity.

A student center worth using should have enough room for all students who wish to use it. If such a center becomes a reality, the demand for space could exceed the supply, requiring an expansion to more than just the Huddle. A three-story addition — which has been discussed in the Student Activities Office — would provide for both dining space and room for future growth.

After all, if the administration is going continue pouring money into an old building, that building should be useful for more than a year or two. An overstuffed student center can produce cries for change just as easily as an empty one.

Budget deficit

CBS describes sports program techniques

By LESLIEANNE WADE
News Staff

Many sports fans find themselves dreaming of doing the play-by-play for a national broadcast, but it's not all front row seats and stardom in the big leagues, according to the CBS Sports production crew.

Students attending yesterday's lecture titled "The Anatomy of a Sports Broadcast" learned just what it takes to produce a game like tomorrow's battle between Notre Dame and DePaul.

The CBS crew, in conjunction with Notre Dame Sports Information Director Roger Valdiserri and the Department of American Studies, sponsored the seminar held at the Center for Social Concerns.

Len DeLuca, director of program planning and development, began by outlining CBS Sports programming. "After acquiring an event, we delegate to produce it," DeLuca explained. "Then we sell it to our advertisers, distribute it to our affiliates and promote it like any product."

"It's a business," said Executive Producer Kevin O'Malley. "Today it is a spotlight industry. Everyone is interested in it. And we are more than just Cronkite. We are one of the largest corporations in the country."

As a corporation, CBS has many different divisions. Producer Rick Sharp explained the importance of "not stepping on the other guy's foot." He said the crew "will have two hours on Saturday to broadcast a game that takes an hour and 53 minutes. So we do a lot of planning during the week. We create a storyline. We set up our cameras and we build our opening." Sharp continued, "It is all carefully orchestrated in advance so we don't cut into local or news time."

Play-by-Play Announcer Gary Bender told of his own early fascination with sports. "When I was in the seventh grade, I lived on a farm in Western Kansas. . . . If you haven't been there you haven't missed anything," Bender joked. "Sitting on the plow, I'd make up ball games. And if I had to go another round then I'd make up extra innings." Bender said, "You can't be in this business for your ego or for the money. You really have to be a sports fanatic."

All three speakers stressed the importance of the final product. Sharp explained, "In producing a sports show we have to be all things to all people. We have to be explanatory enough for those who don't know a great deal about sports while satisfying the hard-core fan." The final challenge was presented by Bender — "I challenge you because this business can be the most exciting business in the world. But remember: there is a fine line between excitement and panic."

Russians land on orbiting space station

Associated Press

MOSCOW — Three cosmonauts guided their spacecraft to a successful docking with the Salyut-7 space station yesterday to become the fifth crew to visit the Soviet Union's orbiting research complex.

The official news agency Tass said the Soyuz T-10 docked with Salyut-7 at 5:43 p.m. (9:43 a.m. EST) — 26 hours and 36 minutes after their lift-off Wednesday from the Baikonur cosmodrome in Soviet central Asia.

Pilot Leonid Kizim, engineer Vladimir Soloyev and cardiologist Oleg Atkov restarted the space station's life support systems, removed their space suits and entered the orbiting laboratory, Tass said.

There now are a record eight men in space — the three Soviets and five Americans aboard the Challenger space shuttle.

The main Soviet television evening news program showed film of the three cosmonauts floating in Salyut-7's brightly lit interior.

"We will start unpacking what our predecessors left for us to work with, and we'd like to thank them for cleaning up the space station," said Kizim, the mission commander.

He held up two red carnations, presumably artificial, that he said were a housewarming gift left behind by the Salyut-7's last crew, cosmonauts Vladimir Lyakhov and Alexander Alexandrov.

Lyakhov and Alexandrov spent 150 days aboard Salyut-7 in a mission marred by a fuel leak and a launching pad accident that aborted a planned relief flight. Three other crews have visited Salyut-7 since it was placed in orbit April 19, 1982 — including the record-setting 211-day mission of Anatoly Berezovoy and Valentin Lebedev.

Nine Saint Mary's students granted private audience with Indira Gandhi

By MARY HEILMANN
News Staff

Nine Saint Mary's students were granted a private interview with Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi earlier this year to discuss social conditions in India and the role of women in the political arena.

The audience took place Sept. 5 in Gandhi's office, as part of a semester in India program, sponsored by Saint Mary's College and directed by Dr. Cyriac Pullapilly.

According to senior Beth Valenti, who participated in the program, the meeting with Gandhi was one of the highlights of her trip.

"I had thought that, since she's one of the only women in the male-dominated political world, Mrs. Gandhi might be ignored by the men leaders," said Valenti. "But she said she gets a fair shake in everything, which really surprised me."

Valenti also expressed surprise at Gandhi's political adeptness during the interview. "She said starvation is not a problem in India, which is obviously untrue. She also denied the existence of a paid sterilization program in the Indian villages several times. She has a very politically agile mind."

Senior Beth Walsh, who also made the trip, agreed with Valenti, but noted that Gandhi's reserve did not surprise her.

"She glossed over some issues, but I was not surprised by that. She's still a politician, and I expected her to be somewhat noncommittal."

Walsh added that Gandhi skirted the women's rights issue in India, but was optimistic about a woman's potential for success. "She said with the proper motivation and education, women can realize all their goals."

As part of the program, the students spent 25 days on a study tour through Japan, China, Hong Kong, and Nepal. Upon arriving in India they attended a women's college in Madras, a city on the southeastern coast of India. After touring India and Asia, the students returned to the United States Dec. 5.

When asked what lasting impressions her experiences in India have given her, Walsh responded, "I really appreciate the role of the women's movement in the United States. It still has a long way to go, but at least it has a direction. In India the movement lacks a direction in the form of leaders and lobbyists, which is one of the reasons it's so ineffective."

Valenti said she regards the entire trip as "the best experience of my life. There are so many misconceptions about India which should not stop people from going. There are difficult things to adjust to, but in light of the people, the education, and the many opportunities for learning, I would go again in a minute if I had the chance."

Library Auditorium. The talk is being sponsored by Student Government in conjunction with the festival.

Berry, who was a former U.S. civil rights commissioner under the Carter administration, was recently fired by President Reagan. Congress appealed to the administration that the commission was in an independent position and that the president had no justification for firing Berry. Berry was later reinstated as Civil Rights Commissioner.

Anderson has a committee of 12 students working on the different events for the festival. One such student is senior Sandra Hodge, who wrote a stage play to be performed on Saturday, Feb. 11.

"I wrote the play because I wanted to leave a mark before I left Notre Dame," said Hodge, a finance major. "I love acting and I think I have some important things to say before I leave."

The play, titled "Living Memories," is about a girl who is about to graduate from college who looks back on all the special moments she had while attending.

"Although most of the memories could be anyone's," says Hodge, "a few of them are Black-oriented."

The festival will also put on a talent show on Feb. 25 and a fashion show on March 5.

Challenger spacewalkers enjoy ride despite recent series of problems

Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Bundled in their bulky suits, Challenger's exuberant spacewalkers performed an impromptu rescue yesterday, snatching back a piece of equipment as it drifted toward the junkyard of space.

They flew free and joyously, propelled by bursts of nitrogen gas from their backpacks. But the day was not without its disappointment — the latest in a long series for this shuttle crew. The "wrist" on the shuttle's robot arm refused to respond to commands, canceling a docking rehearsal with a rotating object.

"The view is simply spectacular and panoramic," astronaut Bruce McCandless told President Reagan when he made his customary once-a-mission call to the shuttle.

McCandless was showing restraint with his commander-in-chief. Earlier he had exulted: "Up, up in the bay." His partner, Robert Stewart, said, "Boy, it's awful pretty."

Earlier pessimism that bad weather would again delay or cancel a first landing tomorrow at Florida's Kennedy Space Center turned to optimism as an expected weather front stalled over Texas. "Right now it's looking real good for KSC," the astronauts were told.

From mission control came applause when McCandless reached over the side of the spaceship, retrieved a foot restraint that had broken loose and was floating away. He was on his safety line at the time.

He had help from commander Vance Brand, who gently pulsed Challenger's small steering rockets to move 30 feet closer to the restraint — "just as he would do if he had to rescue a stranded astronaut in a maneuvering unit," mission control said.

McCandless, referring to an earlier flight crew's boast, said "We deliver' may have been the STS-5 crew motto, but we pick up also."

McCandless clearly enjoyed the freedom of moving about in his flying machine. One memorable view was of him, feet toward the Earth above, head down to the shuttle cargo bay, suspended in space.

Contest

worked on mock cases for over 40 hours.

"We've put more time into this than all our other classes," quips Testerman.

All of this training will be needed, however, because the students will be facing some stiff competition. The other four schools include the Universities of North Carolina, Wisconsin, California at Berkeley, and the reigning champion, Washington University of St. Louis. The competition will be judged by a number of prominent businessmen, including an editor from Business Week, a vice president of General Electric, and the C.O. of the Mead Corporation.

According to Professor Norburn, all expenses, except for airfare, are being handled by the University of Virginia. Although there are no cash prizes offered, Testerman feels that the "trophy and prestige would be enough."

The directors of the tourney feel this is a problem-solving experience which offers the students an opportunity to demonstrate their potential both as independent thinkers and business analysts. The competition involves an actual "real life" business problem and is intended to be a powerful and effective learning experience. According to Testerman, this is "just like being a management consultant."

Like any team, each member has his specialty. Ledley is in charge of the charts and financial figures, while Frank specializes in the marketing decisions. Testerman will actually write the case, while Wilkie will be in charge of its oral defense. All the members, however, will agree on the final presentation.

The competition lasts two days, and the team should be back by Sunday. Moreover, at least according to some of its more optimistic members, the team will be back by Sunday with trophy in hand.

Health of Andropov disputed

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Soviet television unexpectedly changed its scheduled programming to classical music last night followed by similar changes in state radio broadcasts. The Washington Post reported in today's editions.

The reported changes come amid the extended illness of Soviet leader Yuri Andropov and the Post reported in a Moscow-dated story that they appear to indicate the country is being placed on an emergency footing.

In Washington, State Department analysts who spoke on condition they remain anonymous said they have heard the reports of classical music played on Moscow radio.

They said, however, that the U.S. embassy in Moscow reports that the music was not funeral dirges. The embassy also had no information to indicate that Andropov or anyone as prominent has died, the analysts reported.

The analysts pointed out that the most recent indication of a seriously ill person in the Moscow hierarchy was Defense Minister Marshal Dmitri Ustinov, 75, who canceled a trip to India last week for unexplained reasons.

'Bubble Boy' leaves chamber for operation

Associated Press

HOUSTON — David, the 12-year-old "bubble boy" forced by illness from the sterile chamber which protected him from infection since birth, was doing "much better" yesterday after treatment for vomiting, diarrhea and fever, doctors said.

Baylor College of Medicine spokeswoman Susannah Griffin said tests were continuing to determine what was wrong with the child, who was born without resistance to disease and grew up in a bubble-like plastic chamber to protect him from germs.

She said physicians had ruled out infection as the source of the symptoms.

Some of the tests were "probably" intended to learn whether David is suffering from graft-vs.-host disease, which often attacks patients who undergo bone marrow transplants, she said. David received such a transplant Oct. 20 to give him an immune system.

David, whose last name has never been revealed to protect the privacy of his family, was removed Tuesday from the bubble and kissed his mother for the first time. Doctors said they moved the boy because they feared he would be severely dehydrated by vomiting, diarrhea and fever.

Ms. Griffin said David needed to receive liquids intravenously for several hours and it was impossible to get an intravenous unit into the bubble.

"There was more of a danger leaving him inside" than in bringing David into the outside world, she said.

The boy, being kept in a sterile, windowless room, remained on a diet of clear liquids, said Ms. Griffin. He was in good spirits yesterday and doctors hoped he soon would be able to eat soft foods such as gelatin and pudding, she said.

"He's doing much better today," she said. "His symptoms have lessened although they have not completely gone away."

Ms. Griffin said it is not known yet whether David is suffering from graft-vs.-host disease, an ailment which attacks the gastrointestinal tract, the skin and liver.

But Dr. Joel Rappaport, clinical director of the bone marrow transplant program at Boston's Brigham and Women's Hospital, said the disease is a "relatively common problem" in bone marrow transplant patients.

Rappaport, who is not directly connected with David's case but is a pioneer in the transplant field, said David was one of about 100 patients who have received bone marrow transplants from less than perfect donors. That means the 12.3 ounces of tissue from his 15-year-old sister, Katherine, did not perfectly match David's tissue.

The donor marrow had been treated with monoclonal antibodies, which are designed to kill mature T-cells. T-cells are key antibodies in the body's defense against disease, but doctors said such transplanted cells might attack their new body.

Rappaport said the treatment is designed to leave immature T-cells, which should develop into cells accustomed to their new environment and form an immune system.

Dr. William Shearer explains the bone marrow transplant procedure to David, the "Bubble Boy," in Houston in this 1983 file photo. Looking on is Mary Murphy, Ph.D. David, 12, who lacks immunity from disease, was removed for the first time Wednesday from a germ-free isolation unit.

Prankster, 14, stabbed accidentally

Associated Press

CRYSTAL LAKE, Ill. — A 14-year-old girl who disguised herself as a prowler lurking outside the house to scare her baby-sitting friend paid for her practical joke with a knife in her chest.

Karen Geske, who earlier had made ominous telephone calls to the friend, was stabbed to death by the baby-sitter's boyfriend, a high school honor student.

"The whole thing was shocking to us here because neither was the type you would think to get involved in something like this," said Walter Forsyth, principal of Crystal Lake Central High School.

Police Chief Samuel Johns said, "It started out to be a prank and turned out to be a tragedy."

The young man, whose name has not been released, has been charged with voluntary manslaughter in the Jan. 28 slaying. He is free on $25,000 bond pending a preliminary hearing Feb. 15 in McHenry County Circuit Court.

Johns said the prank apparently began when Karen made several anonymous phone calls to her friend, breathing heavily each time. Then she donned men's clothing, drew a beard on her chin, pulled a nylon stocking over her head and went to show the disguise to her 20-year-old sister, Lori.

After she rattled the doors and windows of the house, the boyfriend opened the door to investigate.

As Karen jumped out of the bushes — apparently intending to shout, "Boo!" — the young man lunged forward with a double-edged knife and stabbed her once in the chest.

US Navy and Druse-Moslem forces continue barrage of war-torn Beirut

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The U.S. 6th Fleet bombarded the rebel-held ridges outside Beirut for a second day yesterday, after government and rebel gunners traded deadly artillery barrages around the divided and devastated city.

Lebanese and Syrian reports claimed U.S. Navy jets also went into action over the mountain area yesterday, but a U.S. military spokesman denied it.

Syria, whose troops occupy the mountains with the Druse-Moslem anti-government forces, issued an ominous warning to the United States.

"Syria cannot stand neutral watching the barbaric bombardment practiced by the 6th Fleet against Lebanese civilians," the Damascus government radio said. It said the Syrians "may be compelled to react."

The U.S. Embassy here said, meanwhile, it was not yet considering a general evacuation of the estimated 1,500 U.S. citizens in Beirut. About 50 more U.S. Embassy employees and dependents were airlifted out by helicopter yesterday to 6th Fleet ships offshore, U.S. Marine spokesman Maj. Dennis Brooks reported. That brought to about 140 the number of American civilians pulled out thus far, for transfer to the safety of Cyprus.

Lebanon's embattled Christian president, U.S.-supported Amin Gemayel, remained out of sight yesterday. Gemayel, whose Moslem-Christian Cabinet resigned last weekend, is trying to patch together a new "national coalition" government. But his Syrian-backed Lebanese enemies demand that he resign.

The president's position suffered a major blow early this week when Shiite Moslem and Druse militiamen took control of west Beirut, driving out army troops and Christian militiamen. Thousands of army soldiers have defected to the anti-Gemayel side.

Along the "Green Line" separating Moslem West from Christian East Beirut, sporadic small arms and shell fire was heard yesterday. Local radio reports said army troops also clashed with militiamen in the port area and the Shiite-populated southern suburbs.

Later yesterday, as night fell, Christian neighborhoods in East Beirut came under sustained bombardment, apparently from artillerymen in Syrian-occupied Druse areas.

Artillery of the Lebanese army and Christian militia, meanwhile, pounded population centers in the Druse-controlled hills southeast of the city and in the Shiite suburbs, the Druse-controlled radio said. The Christian militia is an arm of the right-wing Phalange Party, headed by the president's father, Pierre Gemayel.

The 6th Fleet destroyer Moosbrugger, in response to the shelling of East Beirut, opened up with its five-inch guns, U.S. spokesman Brooks said. "It fired on artillery positions in the mountains east of Beirut, approximately 150 rounds," he said.

President Reagan, in a policy statement Tuesday announcing that the 1,400 U.S. Marines in Beirut would be withdrawn in the coming weeks, also said 6th Fleet ships would retaliate against anyone firing on Beirut "from parts of Lebanon controlled by Syria."

It was a forceful show of support for Gemayel. On Wednesday, the battleship New Jersey and destroyer Caron hammered military targets in Syrian-controlled areas in a half-day-long barrage, more than 550 shells. Lebanese government sources said both Druse and Syrian military positions were destroyed.

But yesterday, as uneasiness mounted in U.S. Congress over the expanded American role in the Lebanese conflict, White House spokesman Larry Speakes restated the U.S. policy on use of the 6th Fleet guns.

He said the Reagan administration had worked out an agreement with Congress authorizing shelling only to protect U.S. servicemen and other troops in the four-nation peacekeeping force here.

There were no reports yesterday that the 1,400 U.S. Marines dug in at the airport on Beirut's southern edge had come under renewed fire. But Speakes told Washington reporters that any firing into Beirut endangers the U.S. troops.

The Lebanese state radio said warplanes also struck long-range artillery batteries and rocket launchers yesterday in the mountains at Tars Hish, 20 miles northeast of Beirut.

The Phalangist radio said the planes were U.S. Navy jets, and a Syrian military spokesman in Damascus said U.S. F-14 jets had "interfered" in the area and were driven off by Syrian air defense crews. But Brooks said "there have been no air raids" by U.S. planes.

The identity of the reported air attackers could not be independently determined. American, Israeli and Syrian jets all made reconnaissance runs over the area earlier yesterday.

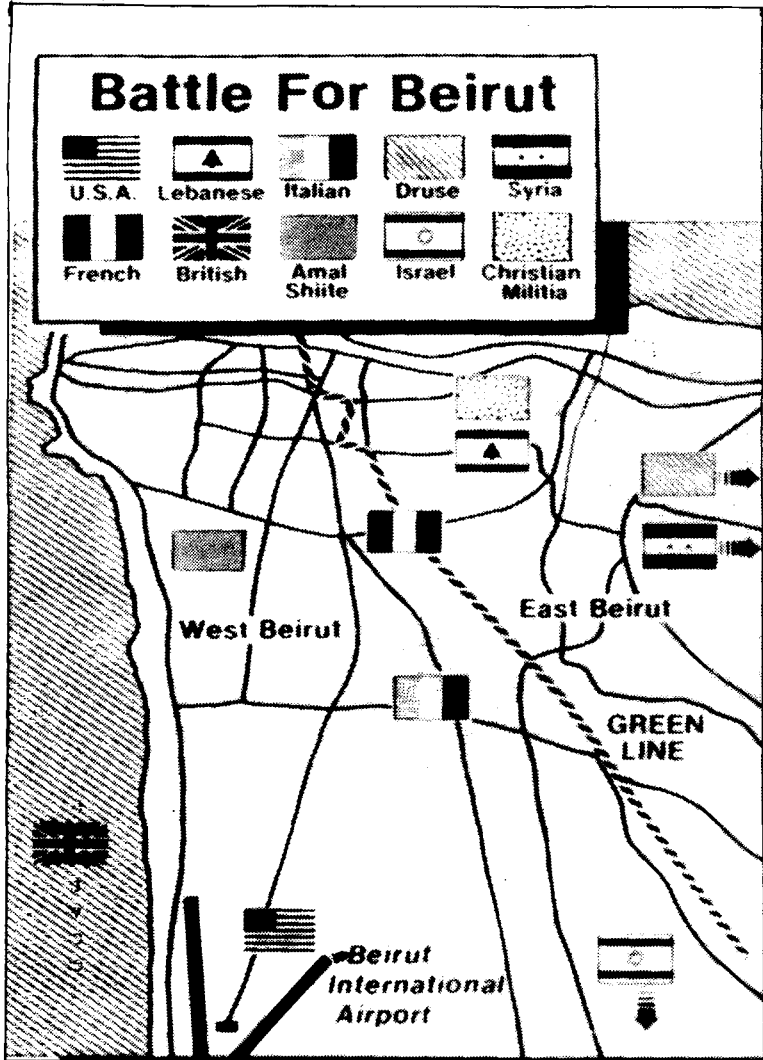

The hostilities trapped thousand of Lebanese civilians in basements and other shelters along the Green Line and in the densely populated Shiite suburb of Hay Madi without food, water or medicine, said a Swiss spokesman for the International Red Cross, Serge Caccia.

Police said the Lebanese civilian and rebel death toll could reach 400, with 1,000 wounded, as a result of the past week's fighting. The army said 60 of its soldiers had been killed and 200 wounded.

Foreigners of several nationalities were fleeing Beirut. U.S. helicopters are to airlift about 150 British citizens out of west Beirut today, British officials said.

The 115-man British contingent in the international peacekeeping force was flown out to a British navy vessel Wednesday. The Italian news agency ANSA said three private ferries might leave Italy this weekend to pick up the 1,400 Italian soldiers in Beirut and bring them home. France, the fourth nation in the peacekeeping force, has not announced withdrawal plans.

Brooks said 150 Marines would return to ships by today, but he said this had been planned before Reagan's redeployment announcement.

The war for control of Beirut and Lebanon involves forces from several different nations and different ethnic and religious groups. This graphic indicates where various factions are in control in Beirut after Moslem forces took over West Beirut.

Heart patient still alive after rare operation

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — A retired clerk whose failing heart stopped more than 400 times within five days is leading an almost normal life after a rare operation, and said yesterday he feels "wonderful."

"I look at myself now and I feel much like I did before the problem ever occurred," George Derrick, 65, said in an interview after his daily 30-minute workout at his Pittsburgh home.

His heart had been producing abnormal electrical impulses resulting in rapid heartbeat, a disorder known as ventricular tachycardia. Doctors blamed the problem on a heart attack in 1982 which produced scar tissue that disrupted the organ's electrical system.

In an unusual operation last October, surgeons pinpointed the trouble with an electrical monitor and removed the scar tissue.

Doctors said Derrick's heart stopped an "extraordinarily unusual" number of times, but they are confident he can lead a long, normal life.

"I think this is a beautiful example illustrating what can be done," said Dr. Robert C. Schlant, vice chairman of the American Heart Association's Council on Clinical Cardiology.

Last Oct. 23, Derrick awoke "gibbering unintelligibly."

"My wife thought I was having a bad dream," he recalled.

Within seconds, Derrick went into a coma and was taken to Jefferson Center Hospital in suburban Jefferson. Two days later, he was transferred to Pittsburgh's West Penn Hospital.

After drugs failed to regulate Derrick's heartbeat, surgeons decided to try a complicated, costly procedure known as electrophysiology.

promote "more interplay with HPC because "HPC and the senate are too separate now." According to McNamara, hall presidents and senators should be working together in making adjustments and improvements.

McNamara says he would like to see more use made of the the Campus Life Council because, he says, "it is the perfect forum to generate ideas or important concerns." The council, composed of HPC, the Student Senate, student body president, administration and faculty allows "everyone to listen to everyone and understand each other." McNamara would like to see the council used in discussing the possible change in alcohol policy.

Rolincik, a Mathematics major, says there is a definite need to provide a party room for Lyons residents, who are presently without one. He says this could be worked out if "the people in the basement of Lyons move to the basement of Badin and the business in Badin be moved to LaFortune where it belongs."

McNamara, a government major, says he would like to see some physical changes, both district and campus-wide. He says he wants some copy machines on South Quad and has already checked into the feasibility of putting two machines in the South Dining Hall and maybe one in the Architecture Building.

With the agreement of Lyons and Morrissey residents, he would like to install lights on the basketball courts by Lyons.

Campus-wide, McNamara says he would like to simplify the concert ticket lottery process by making it a mail lottery.

"I would like to see the academic year moved up a week," says McNamara. He says he would rather start a week earlier in August, get out a week earlier in May and be able to spend more time before Christmas at home." He says he is certain other students feel the same way.

McNamara added that he would also like to work on changing the library from its "generic state" to one more conducive to relaxed studying. He says this could be done with some redecorating and installation of new lights.

Regarding a change in alcohol policy, Rolincik and McNamara are against a dry campus. Rolincik says he would like to "look into how the whole alcohol problem came to be." He says part of the problem may be "the smallness of party rooms" and the fact that all some students do at parties is drink. He says the existing alcohol policy should be re-emphasized and if necessary, some slight changes made in these policies.

McNamara says a dry campus would be "impractical and demeaning" because it would make students feel irresponsible. He does, however, see alcohol abuse as a problem but feels "the focus should be on parties and happy hours because that's where the abuse is."

Both Rolincik and McNamara reject a change in final exam policy that would demand an exam to make up one-third to two-thirds of a final grade.

A few last words on the Keenan Revue

The Keenan Revue has come and gone for the eighth straight year. Like the legendary Camelot, it came together for a few brief shining moments. Now all that remains are some worn out props, a few tattered programs, bills and the lingering memories.

Randy Fahs

Friday analysis

Keenan Hall is returning to normalcy as it tries to avoid academic probation.

As for me, after two years as the show's producer, it's time to close the books and pass them on to someone else. Like all things, the show itself is changing and developing. If the Revue founders, Rick Thomas and Tom Lenz, were to return today, they would find it quite different from its humble beginnings.

In the fall of 1976, Keenan Hall members put on the first Keenan Revue in Washington Hall to conquer their own boredom more than any other reason. Tickets were given away because that was the only way an audience could be attracted. The show went over so well that another performance took place the following weekend.

The Revue is still put together in two weeks time by the members of Keenan, and tickets are still free. But the show's scope, complexity and popularity have grown tremendously. Tickets have become a hot commodity for a show that has begun to operate more like a well-oiled machine than at anytime in its history.

After six straight years of financial losses, the show has managed to break even during the last two years because of fundraisers and donations. In a few years the show will have evolved beyond what it is today, but I hope it never loses sight of its basic goals.

The show is designed to bring together the talents and efforts of the hall members. It is as fun for them as for the audience. It must never become a "job" for its participants and it must remain free of charge. It is Keenan's gift to the community and it should never be used as a moneymaker. But, costs of production are tremendous and someday an imbecile will charge for Revue tickets.

If that day arrives, the show as we know it will cease to exist. If admission is charged, the Revue expenses will also rise because people will expect us to pay for things they have been giving us gratis or at reduced prices. More importantly, the mood and attitude of the audience will change. They will be more critical, and not as likely to go to the show in the spirit of fun and as our guests.

Notre Dame Student Activities doesn't seem to understand this point very well. For the last two years they gave the Revue a $1,000 grant, but they are threatening to stop this unless we charge admission.

That breaks down to about 24 cents a person (attendance for the three shows was about 4,200). How else can they expect to entertain so many at so small a cost?

I was misquoted in The Observer a week ago about whether or not Saint Mary's likes the Keenan Revue. To set the record straight, I said, "The ND/SMC theater department hates us because we can fill houses so easily and they cannot."

Saint Mary's College and O'Laughlin Auditorium have bent over backwards to help us put on the show. Through the efforts of their theater manager, Randy Brown, and their director of student activities, Mary Anne O'Donnell, they have either saved or spent the equivalent of $ 1,800 on the Keenan Revue.

We are all very grateful for what they have done. We wish their enthusiasm could be transferred to certain offices and departments at Notre Dame. It does seem odd that a college one quarter of the size of Notre Dame could be so much more supportive of a show which comes from this side of U.S. 31.

On behalf of Keenan Hall, I would like to thank all of you who helped to put on the show. It was a big job that could only have come off as well as it did because of each person's contribution, no matter how large or small.

We would also like to thank the audiences for their tremendous response; without them, there would be no reason to have a show. And lastly, on behalf of Director David Magana and myself, I would like to thank the members of Keenan for their hard work and dedication to making Revue Magic happen once again.

We'll miss being a part of it after we graduate.

P . O . Box Q

Meyer salute

Dear Editor:

Over the years the students at Notre Dame have proven to be very proficient at razzing opposing teams and their coaches. However tomorrow we will witness the last coaching visit of Ray Meyer at his alma mater.

Not only have his teams provided us with plenty of thrilling games, Ray Meyer has been a credit to the sport. So when Meyer is introduced before the game we should give him a standing ovation. And it really wouldn't hurt to end the game that way either.

Fritz Heinzen

Church v . state

Dear Editor:

President Reagan signed a proclamation that 1983 was to be the "Year of the Bible" and a law suit was filed against it in the City of Los Angeles, on the basis of separation of church and state. The U.S. Supreme Court outlawed school prayer on this same premise and deliberated whether nativity scenes can be displayed on public property.

The Supreme Court was formed to interpret the application of our Constitution, but nowhere in the Constitution is any mention made of separation of church and state (incidentally, it is spelled out quite clearly in the constitution of the Soviet Union).

Where did this concept originate in this country? It apparently came from a letter written by Thomas Jefferson in which he was voicing concern about protecting the church from the state — not vice versa!

If we truly believe in the separation of church and state, then we had better clean up our act. Let's strike down our national motto "In God We Trust" because that is a flagrant violation for our government to endorse any belief in God.

What right does our government have to require that court testimonies be sworn in the name of God and oaths of public office be sworn on a Holy Bible? Our government overstepped its bounds once again by declaring Thanksgiving and Christmas to be national holidays (the latter even suggests that Christianity is our national religion).

Those among you, who do not wish to see "separation of church and state" carried to such ridiculous extremes, need to reverse the pendulum by organizing to take action now. We must demand freedom "of" religion — not freedom "from" religion!

Milton F. Cragg

Beerless bus

Dear Editor:

In the midst of all of the current concern about the University's policies next year regarding the consumption of alcohol, may it be emphasized that the bus trip to Purdue by the student body next year should not feature alcohol consumption.

Five to seven thousand students will travel back and forth to Indianapolis for that game on Sept. 8, 1984. The University will prohibit any possession of alcohol on the busses to and from the game. We will be working in concert with the bus carriers and the drivers with regard to this issue.

During the Purdue weekend at Lafayette last semester, six Notre Dame students were arrested and spent the night in jail. A great deal of pain and expense was experienced by them.

There has been a great deal of discussion this year regarding the policies which will apply next year for the entire campus with regard to the use of alcohol. All of these policies are currently being discussed by the PACE Committee on Alcohol with the Board of Trustees. I hope appropriate decisions and policies will be formulated with the appropriate representatives prior to summer break.

Rape and incest

Dear Editor:

This letter is in response to one written by Melanie Bomberger on Feb. 8, 1984.

Despite its inherent weaknesses, the argument for abortion in cases of rape and incest is relied upon frequently. Bomberger's letter addresses the issue in a manner suggesting that pregnancy often ensues such cases.

Statistics, however, indicate the number of rapes resulting in pregnancy is well below 1 percent. Of course this does not imply we can simply dismiss those situations on the bases of their rarity, but compounding the shock and trauma of rape with another act of violence and destruction as some sort of panacea presents a disturbing paradox.

True, the trauma of rape or an incestuous experience runs long and deep, but how much greater the tragedy if we should victimize another human life in an attempt to alleviate the violation of our person.

Bomberger is accurate in that the fetus is not a "product of promiscuity," but neither is he the culpable manifestation of an abhorrent act — the unborn child is an individual, independent and sanctified human life — not the mere extension of any act or another being. It is sadly ironic that some feel the woman "alone has the choice" concerning abortion, when not only is she carrying another human life, but is also only a partner in the procreation of that life.

In a greivous display of double standards, the rights of the father have been overlooked during recent court cases entailing abortions desired solely by the mother.

We must avoid the easy and even somewhat understandable propensity to attach economic and emotional price tags to the life of the unborn. A fine veneer of altruism and sincerity too easily masks a modern morality which cringes at inconvenience, strength and self-sacrifice.

Finally, Bomberger's allusion to "others" who feel a woman "will burn in hell" is not only irrelevant but unfounded. Such ostensibly personal assaults on the pro-life movement are unnecessary and out of place in a sound and adult argument involving abortion.

Letters to a Lonely God

The last frontier

by Rev. Robert Griffin
features columnist

Two bullies were bouncing snowballs off the Sacred Heart statue. I wanted to tell them, "Pick on someone your own size," but it seemed inappropriate as a defense of God. I also considered: "Would you do that if you knew He would fight back? He has ten thousand guardian angels on his team." It was only a statue, but I'm very fond of it. I said a prayer of reparation, adding the divine excuse: "They didn't know what they were doing."

Holden Caufield, in "Catcher in the Rye," spent a day in New York worrying about what happens in winter to the ducks in Central Park. The groundskeepers take care of the ducks. Who keeps an eye on the Central Park squirrels? Mother Nature takes care of them; that is why you find some of them frozen to death. An old priest spent his last years fretting over the Dutch elms on campus. Disease finally got a lot of them. Nature can be mean, and people take pleasure in being destructive. Wonderful old windows have to be taken out of their frames and become museum pieces, to protect them from the weather or human senselessness. There aren't enough catchers in the rye to go around, defending old, sacred beauty from the iconoclasts. Holden Caufield, by himself, couldn't have done much to save the ducks.

The snow brings out the best in me if it is feathery, virginal, and playful. My dog, Darby O'Gill II, is at home in the snow. He is able, some days, to walk on top of it, as our Saviour's dog, if He had one, might have scampered across the waves of Galilee. He plunges into the drifts as though he were an Olympic swimmer navigating the length of a pool, and emerges with his muzzle covered with fine little crystals of powdered snow. His coat is thick enough to protect him; otherwise he would end up with a frost-bitten tush. He rolls on his back in the whiteness and buries his nose in the piles left by the plow where a lunch may be buried. It's only bread left out for the birds that he's hunting for. He thinks it's his treat, and it's a waste of time to argue with him. I hit him with a handful of snow, to get his attention. He is patient, like a statue, when I attack him. At night in winter, coming back from a walk to Darby's Place, he snores like a longshoreman.

He is worn out like a child exhausted from a day at Disneyland.

You have to have a sense of humor to enjoy the winter. It's the season of indignities. A tree may unload its branches as you're passing underneath, sending snow showers sifting down your neck. You can take pratfalls on the sidewalk where grownup children, by their sliding, have turned the snow into ice as treacherous as glass. Domers as gamesome as street urchins use a sneak attack to challenge you to a snow battle. When you're fired on by snipers, you can either fight or run. In the guerilla warfare of winter, you're either a coward or a hero. Pacifism is not allowed as an excuse for going home.

Two readers wrote to tell me I'm suffering from a Peter Pan syndrome. I know I'm not Peter Pan; he still has his first teeth. I don't have all of my second teeth. In the winter wonderland, I'm Peter Pan, the boy who doesn't want to grow up. You have to face many frontiers on your way to the country where you are finally old. Eyesight dims; passion fails; the appetite becomes feeble. Winter is the last frontier. When winter has lost its appeal, you know your fire has gone out. There's no place left to go after crossing that final frontier. A February blizzard separates the men from the boys. When the wind chill factor is 23 degrees below zero, I'm Peter Pan, the youngest male on campus.

South Bend winters can be merely nasty; rain changing to sleet or freezing rain. I grew up in Maine, where you developed your character by surviving the winter. Francois Villon asks: "Where are the snows of yesteryear?" I feel lucky when the kind of snows I remember come to Notre Dame, bringing high excitement to the quads.

People waste a lot of space in newspapers scolding each other. I encourage you to play the games of winter. Fortunately, the fighting Irish don't have an arm strong enough to land a snowball at the feet of Our Lady on the Dome. If you tried it, the snowball would fall apart before it landed. A snowball is only temporary, not permanent and vicious like a rock. You would aim a snowball at such a symbol because it's a target you can't resist. People are more sacred than symbols, but symbols have a dignity that deserve respect. It doesn't cost anything to be kind to landmarks. In places as vandalized as Fort Apache, the Bronx, the landmarks survive from winter to winter.

Pursuing a vision; 'Heat Seeking Chairs' open

by Robert Mackie
guest features writer

Art is essentially a poetic justice. An aerobic consumption of the known to the edge of knowledge. It is a fulcrum between the vision and the image. With this quality of intention, 23 artists from the Cranbrook Academy of Art have banded together to form an exhibition titled "Heat Seeking Chairs."

Though the group represents four different departments, all works of art in this show are sculptural. As diverse as personalities and training may be, a subtle dichotomy seeks its level in each of the works. Using the cultural values of our time, can the debate between a formal pursuit of material beauty and the work of art as a service vehicle to other means be successfully resolved? It's paradoxical and may on the surface seem mute, easily delegated to a minor category of art criticism, but insistently it returns. Can the vision of the art in the act of its making sustain a virtuosity equal to that of the object and its image? The point of departure is the meaning of art made in the '80s for the culture of the '80s.

If one can resist the conservative notions permeating our society, of a return to the good old days, clear cut definitions, institutionalized standards and imported values, what remains apparent is a society confronting its cultural stratifications and pluralization. An America critical and acceptant of itself but in need of getting beyond its own promotional campaign.

The artists and their work presented in "Heat Seeking Chairs" challenge themselves with this same critical acceptance. Most of the works are successful. The range of interpretations include very tight, highly skilled objects of technique as in "Sometimes I Feel like a Jerk" by Mary Mock, "Miracle of the Holy Tortilla" by Mack Christianson and "Stick House" by Lee Tate. Where the concern is not with the isolated beautiful object, but in an interactive, self-interpretative experience, the graffiti chamber of Ann Treadwell's "Fair is Fair," and Leslie Ansteth in "Pipe Fittings" and Beth Gerstein's "Touch Me II" test the point of reaction. William McKee has a tenacious I-beam and lead sheet sculpture, who with Peter Favier's "Muting the Morning," hold a meditative serenity. Sherie Simons' "Problems at Home" has created a gift for the nuclear family, satirical humor matched by "Harness Aggression," where Jim Buonaccorsi takes us into the medieval future.

What makes this exhibition a valuable experience is its invitation to dialogue and debate over what is and what should be art. These 23 artists are in pursuit of the vision of our age with the images of our time.

...than videos and albums —

Perhaps still only a 'second rate Skynyrd'

by Pat Beaudine
features staff writer

For ZZ Top fans, last night's concert was eagerly awaited. The group was still enjoying the commercial success of their surprisingly solid album, Eliminator, along with a string of entertaining videos. It seemed that the band had taken a refreshing, contemporary direction in the 1980s. (This has not always been the case for a group once labeled as "second rate Lynyrd Skynyrd.") Even last year's tour seemed special only because of the addition of 38 Special as the opening group, not because of any recent contributions on ZZ Top's part. But, once again, this year was different.

And so was the warm up group, The Eric Martin Band. A group of musicians from California, The Eric Martin Band, assaulted the stage at 8 o'clock, and immediately one sensed that something was wrong. First of all, Eric Martin sported a Notre Dame t-shirt which only alienated the band from the domer-less crowd. And second, the band promised to deliver "kick-ass rock-n-roll," but instead gave the audience a predictable unoriginal, and boring set of roughly ten songs. Such routine song titles as "Action and Adventure," "Take No For an Answer," and "Don't Stop Baby" give a quick tip off that this band has nothing new to offer.

The band's power chord approach showed that the band was ultimately conservative, which is never part of true rock-n-roll. However, when they could rise above the slick routine, they proved to be an earnest band, and did succeed in warming up the audience. But, a half hour more inside the cars with steamed-up windows in the A.C.C parking lot, the audience would have probably been warmed up anyway.

Mark Miotto/The Observer

In the interim the excitement increased. Finally, over a half hour later, ZZ Top took the stage and pounded out "Under Pressure" from the Eliminator album. It was a favorable start to the evening, and its first class delivery exhibited a revitalized ZZ Top. The song that followed, "I Got The Six," was again expertly delivered, including an extended guitar solo which deserved, and received good response. Billy Gibbons, the lead singer/guitarist, then introduced "Gimme All Your Lovin." One of the best songs from Eliminator, it drew rousing applause, and the concert seemed well on its way to success.

However, the night soon went sour. By the time "I'm Nationwide" was performed three songs later, the group's mere guitar solos turned into excessive jams, and all the fun likewise disappeared. The danceable beat was unfortunately substituted by a heavy metal drone that even a good song like "Sharp Dressed Man," the follower, couldn't overcome.

An incomprehensible "Ten Foot Pole" and "TV Dinners" continued the evening's demise. Both were better left on vinyl and even though they yielded generous applause, all the dancing in the aisles had stopped, which is never a good sign for a Southern boogie band. Later in the set, Gibbons tried to resuscitate the crowd during "Pearl Necklace" by thrice shouting, "Are you with us tonight?" The answer was almost too evident. The audience stuck it out, while the concert surprisingly gained momentum toward intermission with "Cheap Sunglasses" and "Party on the Patio." However, it wasn't the music that gained intensified — it stayed the same heavy metal drudge — this time it was the phenomenal laser show that came to the rescue.

During the intermission, the excitement once again increased. And by the time ZZ Top returned, the fervor was at such a level that the crowd didn't seem to mind that "Tube Snake Boogie" was only mediocre. "La Grange" and "Tush," the final two encores, received the same excessive treatment, which is a shame because these are otherwise good songs.

Such an end to the concert was very fitting. Not only did it emphasize the overall tone of the evening, but it also showed that a band must be more than just videos and albums. In other words, with outings such as these, ZZ Top may never be more than a "second rate Skynyrd."

Numbers in bold type indicate the position the single held on last week's Top 10. You can hear Kurt Shinn countdown the Top 10 Sunday nights at 7.

WSND is giving away almost $1,000 in merchandise next week, Feb. 12-18. It is called Rip Off Week. Free pizzas, free movie tickets, free hair styling, free flowers, and more! All you do is call in to win. Tune in to AM64 from 4-10 p.m. There is a rip off every hour.

What's happening...

•MUSIC

In recognition of Black History Week (Feb. 11-18), The Colfax Cultural Center will be presenting "Black Music; Sacred and Secular" by Reginald Gammon and a jazz combo by Lawrence Dwyer at 7 p.m. tomorrow. The center is located at 914 Lincolnway West, South Bend.

On Sunday in Moreau Hall's Little Theatre at Saint Mary's, the Wabash Men's Choir and SMC Women's Choir will be performing at 8 p.m.

Also on Sunday, Janet Kitts will present her graduate clarinet recital at 8 p.m. in the Annenburg.

•ART

Two new exhibits will be opening at noon on Sunday in the Warner Gallery at The Art Center, 120 S. St. Joseph St., South Bend. "Two Summers: Gardens/Islands: Recent Paintings by Yves Lifton," will highlight the influence of abstract landscapists Claude Monet and Joseph William Mallord Turner upon the artist. The paintings were produced as a result of summers spent in France and Maine. The second exhibit, "Making It In Paper: An Indiana Mill," focuses upon the accomplishments of Twinrocker Inc., a handmade paper studio in Brookston, Indiana.

•MOVIES

"48 HRS." will be shown tonight and tomorrow night in the Engineering auditorium. The movie depicts the story of a policeman, Nick Nolte, who is pursuing three criminals, one of which is a known cop killer. Convict Eddie Murphy, who was formerly associated with the threesome assists Nolte. The film will be shown at 7, 9, and 11 p.m. and admission is $1.50.

The Friday Night Film Series will be presenting "La Nuit de Varennes" at 7:30 tonight. This French film depicts the story of three men, Thomas Paine, Casanova, and Restif de la Bretonne who are attempting to leave the country during the the French reign of terror. Admission is $2.50.

The Monday Night Film Series will present "Law and Order". This 1969 Emmy Award-winning film depicts a portrait of the working lives of Kansas City policemen. The movie will be shown at 7 in the Annenburg. Monday's second feature will be "Miracle in Milan". Vittorio De Sica reflects his debt to surrealistic comedy in this 1950 film. This fairy tale is a parable of the rich and poor which concludes not with a proletarian revolution, but with the poor flying over the Cathedral of Milan on broomsticks. It will be shown at 9.

•MASS

The Masses this Sunday in Sacred Heart Church will have the following celebrants:

- Father Charles Corso, at 5:15 p.m. (Saturday night vigil)
- Father John Van Wolvlear, at 9 a.m.
- Father Michael McCafferty, at 10:30 a.m.
- Father Stephen Gibson at 12:15 p.m.

•THEATRE

Tomorrow night, The Black Cultural Arts Festival will be presenting "Living Memories — The Achievement of a Dream," a one act play by Sandra Hodge. The play will begin at 8 in the Annenburg and admission is free.

The South Bend Civic Theatre will continue its presentation of "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" this weekend. The play, written by Edward Albee and directed by Jim Coppens, will be at 8:30 in the Firehouse theatre, 701 Portage Ave., South Bend. For reservations call 291-8923.

•NAZZ

Tonight, John Kennedy and Joe Dolan will present a Nazz favorite — Songs and Stories from the pubs of Ireland, starting at 9. Tomorrow night, Jim Bustamente and Scott Major will perform from 9:30-?

•DANCE

There will be a dance tomorrow night from 9-1 in the LaFortune Ballroom. The event is being sponsored by the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Ground Zero and will feature Reggae music. Admission is 1 $.

•MISCELLANEOUS

The Ground Zero organization is sponsoring "Three Minutes to Midnight — An Exploration of the Nuclear Dilemma" this weekend. The program will feature a series of lectures on Saturday. The lectures will be held in rooms 116, 117, and 118 of O'Shag, at 10 a.m., 11, 1 p.m., and 2. They will cover various topics in relation to the arms race and nuclear weapons. On Sunday, the program continues with a special discussion game in which the audience will be asked to participate. This will be held in the library auditorium at 3 p.m. Also on Sunday, the "Three Minutes to Midnight Debate: Do More ... Buy More Security?" will be held. The debate will feature Congressman John Gilligan (Law School) and Bernard Norling (History Dept.) and will begin at 7 in The Center for Social Concerns. Show movies on the nuclear dilemma will be shown today from 2-5 and tomorrow from 12:30-5 in the LaFortune Little Theatre.

Returning alumna breathes new life into Abiogenesis

by Steve Blaha
guest features writer

In keeping with its goal to showcase dance expertise to the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's community, the Abiogenesis Dance Collective will host guest artist Angela Allyn for a teaching and performing residency at Notre Dame starting today through Feb. 20.

Allyn, currently a dancer, teacher and choreographer in New York City, received her B.F.A. from ND in 1983 and is presently working on a Master of Arts degree in dance at Columbia University. She also teaches ballet, jazz and movement for athletes, at Columbia and directs "A Quo," a performance art collaborative of dancers, writers, composers and visual artists.

Allyn founded and directed the Abiogenesis Dance Collective prior to moving to New York. Since her departure from ND, She has danced under Hanya Holm, Don Redlich, Nancy Hauser, Alwin Nikolais, Gus Giordano, Greg Begley, Tara Mitton and Holly Searer, and has studied kinesiology and physiology.

While in residence, Allyn will give lectures, demonstrations and classes in jazz and modern dance as well as in related disciplines. Her jazz class will cover the simple movements that combine to create the more complex routines characteristic of shows such as "All that Jazz." The class is recommended for both experienced and novice dancers.

Allyn will also give a lecture titled "How to Watch Modern Dance." The presentation will include videos of the work of famous dancers and choreographers.

Also included is a lecture/demonstration on stretching which will cover everything from simple warm-up stretching to extensive workouts. The lecture will be directed towards anyone with an active lifestyle and especially to athletes who are concerned with preventing injury.

Another lecture/demonstration titled "Movement for Stress Management" will focus on relaxation and deep breathing exercises aimed at relieving tension in stressful situations or in every day life.

For more information call Steve Blaha at 283-828 or Mitch Werner at 283-3119.

Angela Allyn returns to Notre Dame for a teaching and performing residency. Allyn is hosted by Abiogenesis.

Big Country makes successful 'Crossing' with electric guitar

by Vic Sciulli
features staff writer

The electric guitar is back and Big Country has it.

The Crossing, the debut album from Britain's Big Country is one of the most significant LPs produced in the past several years. Released in late 1983, the album marks the return of the electric guitar as the main sound in contemporary music. With its three-pronged guitar threat, Big Country erases any doubt that the electric guitar is dead in today's world of Moog synthesizer and Synares domog pop.

If you have any doubts, just listen to "In A Big Country," the band's debut American single which cracked into the Top 20. Not since Boston's debut LP almost eight years ago has the guitar been used so effectively in a pop album. You'll swear that you're hearing bagpipes in the background but that's only one of the many sounds the guitar makes.

The same thing goes for "Fields of Fire," which sounds suspiciously like a cross between the themes from "Bonanza" and "The Lone Ranger." (The song was a big hit for the band in the U.K. and is almost certain to become one in the states.) Listening to it, one realizes that it is not as easy to break up the band's sound into components as is often the case with other bands; the three guitars, one drum and four vocals form a very unified sound.

Admittedly, the lyrics in The Crossing are a bit abstruse at times but at least Big Country didn't cop out with a bunch of sappy love songs. The LP's title suggests a theme of journey or discovery in "the frontier." Songs like the "The Storm," "Fields of Fire" and "Harvest Home," though not written by Americans, do reflect the time when pioneers crossed the U.S. in search of the unknown West. The morose "Lost Patrol," the strongest of these, deals with the unhappy aspects of this crossing.

*We can do nothing more than move Headlong through the gloom
The thorn between our lips is the Missionaries tune*

*Men with open arms
Turn their faces half away
Observe as we approach
That we have not come to save
We stand as thick as vines
Though the fruit is torn away
There is no beauty here friends
Just death and r. ank decay*

Big Country formed in late 1982 when vocalist/guitarist/keyboardist Stuart Adamson, who first gained prominence with The Skids and Bruce Weston teamed up with Tony Butler and Mark Brzezicki who had already gained a good reputation as studio musicians with Pete Townshend and The Pretenders.

The band's fresh sound is hard to categorize. According to Adamson, "Big Country (sic) are not punk, new wave, heavy metal, progressive or pop. If you really want me to tell you what we're about, then I'd say Big Country plays stirring, spirited stuff. Music to move mountains by." More power to them.

The Notre Dame men's swimming team beat Wayne St., 73-47, yesterday. The men will take their 7-2 record into a meet with St. Bonaventure tomorrow at 1 p.m. in the Rockne Memorial. The Irish have beat the Bonnies each of the last four years. — The Observer

Interhall wrestling tournament entries are due today, Feb. 10, at the NVA office. Halls may register as teams, and contestants will be notified of date and time of tourney. Weight classes will be 123, 130, 137, 145, 152, 160, 167, 177, and unlimited. — The Observer

The off-campus hockey team will have practice this Sunday, Feb. 12, at 10:15. The next game is Feb. 13 at 10:30. — The Observer

The Notre Dame-Detroit women's basketball game on Tuesday, February 14, has been designated as "Dorm Night" by the athletic department. The dorm which has the greatest turnout (by percentage of students in the dorm) will be awarded $100.00 worth of Godfather's Pizza for a dorm pizza party. If you want to see more information, ask your R.A. who should have received a flyer in the mail. — The Observer

Gerry Faust will be speaking at an organizational meeting for potential freshmen managers on Monday, Feb. 13, at 6:45 p.m. in the ACC Football Auditorium. Anyone interested in the Student Managers Organization is invited to attend. Also, we will be showing the 1983 football highlight film. Those with questions should call 239-6482. — The Observer

Because of good reputation

Castaneda chose to fence at SMC

By MARY BETH KERGER
Sports Writer

Two years ago Mary Ann Castaneda came to Saint Mary's to fence. She chose Saint Mary's because of its good reputation in the fencing world. The Belles had won the prestigious Great Lakes Championship the year before.

This reputation is a bit ironic because Castaneda would be the team's first member with prior fencing experience. The other team members had never seen a fencing blade before coming to Saint Mary's.

For those who don't know about the Saint Mary's fencing program, the team practices with the Notre Dame fencing teams in the ACC. This gives the Belles a unique position. They have the benefits of the coaching experience that only a school the size of Notre Dame can provide (Mike DeCicco has been coaching fencing at Notre Dame for 21 years), as well as the benefit that, being a small team, they can really work together.

This concept of working together is what attracted Castaneda.

What Castaneda found when she came was typical of the Saint Mary's team. There were a total of five people on the team, with the minimum for a women's fencing team being four. When she realized that no one had ever fenced before college, she knew why they formed such a close-knit group.

Saint Mary's competes against schools that offer fencing scholarships to American and European fencers. The competition originally was tough, and Saint Mary's was definitely an underdog.

Cohesion and hard work are what the Saint Mary's fencing reputation was built on, not experience. To date, the Belles' accomplishments include five winning seasons in their seven year history, three invitations to national competitions, and one Great Lakes Championship win.

Castaneda liked the challenge. Even though she had four years of prior fencing experience, she had a lot to learn, as she will attest.

"After that first practice," says Castaneda, "I was really scared. Practices were not that intense in high school."

But Castaneda fenced well at the beginning of that first season. She started out fourth on the team and quickly rose to the number two position.

A third of the way through the season, Castaneda qualified for the Junior Olympics and left for Los Angeles on Feb. 13. She never returned for the rest of the season.

After the competition that weekend, she went horseback riding and had a serious fall. She needed immediate brain surgery to remove a blood clot that almost cost her her life. The doctors said she would probably regain only 80 percent of her faculties.

But the doctors were wrong. Castaneda was out of the hospital within two months. After a few more months of rest, she received a clean bill of health and began the slow process of getting back in shape.

Last year she came back looking as good as when she left, although noticeably thinner. She was disappointed with her performance last season (a .420 win/loss record) but she never used her accident as an excuse.

But this year Castaneda will not be disappointed. She has the drive and the ability to make this a great season. As captain, she'll be leading two second year fencers, Mary Frances Wilkin and Teresa Shilts, and the second Saint Mary's recruit with previous fencing experience, freshman Mary Jean Sully. She is also in the process of bringing up several novice fencers.

This fencing team is a typical Saint Mary's team, and Castaneda would like to carry on the Saint Mary's tradition of making it the best it can be.

Meanwhile, John Battle, who could be the best pure shooting guard in the East (St. John's Chris Mullin included), was scorching the nets for 23 points, 13 in the second half while his backcourt counterpart, Brian Ellerbe, was shadow-dancing with Sluby. For Notre Dame, it was a total breakdown against another inferior team, a loss which may come back to haunt the Irish come tournament selection time.

But forgive Phelps if he has more pressing matters on his mind this morning. Like facing No. 2 DePaul tomorrow without his two starting forwards.

Tim Kempton was taken to New York's Roosevelt Hospital after the game with a possible stress fracture of his leg, one which will probably sideline him for the rest of the year.

"He's in a lot of pain," said Phelps. "He's getting x-rays right now, but if it's a stress fracture, he's done for the season."

Meanwhile, the bursitis in Jim Dolan's toe has reappeared, and one day of rest may not be enough for it to heal in time for DePaul. "He'll be sore Friday," Phelps said. "I don't know if he'll be able to go Saturday."

So, once again, Notre Dame leaves here in a state of shock and with its post-season hopes up in the air. The Irish are now 15-7 and face a must-win situation against the Blue Demons tomorrow — with 18 points and 14 rebounds possibly missing from the lineup.

But as long as that game is played at Notre Dame — or Puerto Rico, or Bangladesh, anywhere but East Rutherford, N.J. — Digger Phelps will have no complaints.

IRISH ITEMS — Attendance was announced as 9,143, which hardly made a dent in this 21,000-seat palace . . . Notre Dame shot 55 percent from the floor, while Rutgers countered with 54 percent . . . In a scheduling quirk, the Irish return to the metro New York City area on the 22nd of February as they play in Madison Square Garden for the first time in four years. They will face Manhattan.

After avenging their only loss of the year by beating Lake Forest on Wednesday, the Notre Dame hockey team travels to Penn State for a weekend series with the Nittany Lions. Ed Domansky previews the two games in his story on page 17.

Hockey medal hopes snuffed by Czech team

Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia — Czechoslovakia snuffed out U.S. hopes for another ice hockey miracle by defeating the Americans, 4-1, yesterday, a day in which a world record was set in speed skating and the first gold medals were handed out at the Winter Olympics.

Bad weather on Mount Bjelasnica meant Bill Johnson of California had to wait at least another day for his attempt at a gold medal in the downhill. Heavy winds and blowing snow forced postponement of the men's event until today.

And in a different hockey wrinkle, Soviet star goalie Vladislav Tretiak, playing in his fourth Olympics, received a contract offer from the Montreal Canadiens.

It was not known how close Tretiak was to signing, if close at all, but it would be a feat of major proportions if a Soviet star athlete was given permission to play in the West.

The U.S. hockey team, for all intents and purposes, finished its Olympic season with its loss to the bigger, stronger, second-seeded Czechoslovakian team.

The lights went out in the arena with 7:37 remaining in the first period just after the Czechoslovaks scored their first goal. About two minutes after they came back on, the United States tied the score on a goal by Mark Kumpel.

But the flickering flame of a second consecutive Olympic gold medal went out for good on the Americans about three minutes later when Victor Lukatch of Czechoslovakia scored what proved to be the winning goal on a power play.

Canada beat the United States 4-2 in their opener on Tuesday, and — with both of their conquerors now 2-0 — it is all but impossible for the Americans to make the medal round.

If the early demise of U.S. hockey medal hopes was a shock, it came as no surprise that the first speed-skating gold went to Karin Enke, whose first love was figure skating before she injured an arm in 1977 and switched to speed skating.

Enke, of East Germany, won the women's 1,500-meter event in a world-record time of 2 minutes, 3.42 seconds. The 22-year-old student has a fine chance to win three gold medals, and said after winning her first that she may even try for four by entering the 3,000-meter.

Eric Heiden of the United States swept all five of the men's speed-skating events in 1980, an unprecedented feat. The most gold medals ever for a woman in a single Winter Games is four, by Russian speed skater Lydia Skoblikova in 1964.

Winning the 10-kilometer gold medal in women's cross-country brought tears to the eyes and a smile to the face of Marja-Liisa Hamalainen of Finland.

"I worked for many years on this," said Hamalainen, so overcome with emotion from the victory that she could only reply when asked how she felt, "It is hard for me to say."

Later, they were the first to have gold medals, hanging from red ribbons, placed around their necks in outdoor ceremonies at Skenderjia, as snow fell lazily and laced the stage.

American speed-skater Mary Docter of Madison, Wis., finished 14th in 2:12.14, while Janet Goldman of Glenview, Ill., was 17th in 2:12.94 and Nancy Swider of Park Ridge, Ill., was 18th in 2:13.74.

In the cross-country, the top U.S. finisher was Judy Rabinowitz-Endestad, of Fairbanks, Alaska, 27th with a time of 34:35.1.

Victor Nechaev, a lesser-ranked Soviet hockey player, played briefly for the Los Angeles Kings and finished out the season in the minor leagues. And Tretiak, often considered the world's premier goalie, may soon join him.

Jacques Olivier, Canada's Minister of Fitness in Amateur Sports, said Jerry Grundman, a representative of the National Hockey League team, had given the contract to Marat Gramov, chairman of the Soviet Sports Committee.

Olivier said Gramov told him he had delivered the contract to the 31-year-old Tretiak.

"If Mr. Gramov transmitted the contract to Mr. Tretiak," Olivier said, "it means he must have taken a look at it. We assured Mr. Gramov we don't want to interfere with the internal policies of the Soviet Union."

Serge Savard, general manager of the Canadiens, said it was up to the Soviets to say yes or no to the proposal, but that no details had been discussed.

In the first of four women's luge runs, heavily favored Steffi Martin of East Germany took first place ahead of two other East Germans.

Martin's time was 41.63 seconds followed Bettina Schmidt at 41.66 and Ute Weiss at 41.90. American Bonny Warner of Mount Baldy, Calif., was eighth in 42.63.

Italians finished in two of the top three spots after the first of four men's luge runs. Ernst Haspinger led with 46.157, followed by Torsten Guerlitzer of East Germany in 46.177 and Paul Hildgartner of Italy in 46.182. Frank Masley of Newark, Del., who carried the flag for the U.S. contingent in the opening ceremonies, was 15th in 46.890.

In hockey, Canada, the Soviet Union, West Germany, and Finland won their second games.

Canada defeated Austria, 8-1, West Germany beat Poland, 8-5, the Soviet Union easily handled Italy, 5-1, and Finland whipped Norway, 16-2.

Scott Hamilton, the leading American contender for a gold medal in men's figure skating, dropped a surprise yesterday when he announced that he may not turn pro after the Olympics but continue as an amateur for two more years.

"I'm a good amateur. I'm not sure I'd be a good professional," Hamilton said. "I will definitely go to Ottawa (for the 1984 world championships)."

"I'm considering staying in skating two more years. It would be like giving something back to the sport."

Practice at ACC

Saint Mary's fencers now 3-6

By KATHY MURPHY
Saint Mary's Sports Editor

The Saint Mary's fencing team would not be seen practicing in Angela Athletic Facility. The Belles practice in the ACC with the Notre Dame fencing team.

This arrangement gives the Saint Mary's fencers the benefit of good coaching and the excellent facilities.

This year the Belles are coached by Marc DeJong, a former all-American fencer at Notre Dame, who is now attending graduate school there.

"This is a very young team," commented DeJong. "Most of the girls have had very little or no previous fencing experience before entering college."

The team, which now stands at 3-6, is a member of the National Intercollegiate Women's Fencing Association. The NIWFA consists of about 30 private schools, many of which come from the East.

The Belles are improving with each meet. After dropping their first six contests, the team has come back to win its last three meets. The Belles defeated North Carolina State by a 9-7 mark, and then went on to beat Tri-State University and Wisconsin-Parkside by identical 10-6 scores.

"The girls are on a hot streak now with three wins in a row," says DeJong. "Each of them has improved greatly since the first bouts of the season."

taneda leads the Belles this year with a personal record of 17-17. She is the team's first member with prior fencing experience.

The Belles hope to improve their record in this weekend's round-robin tournament at the ACC tomorrow. They will face strong competition from Ohio State University and Wayne State University.

"I'm looking forward to this weekend's competition," says DeJong. "The girls have been continuously improving and therefore I'm very enthusiastic."

coaching, excellent depth, and, most importantly, a winning attitude have also kept the Irish at a consistent level.

This brings us back to tomorrow's crucial meeting with Wayne State. The battle will probably produce the 1984 NCAA champion, but its importance will be overshadowed by the DePaul basketball game.

It's just as well. The basketball team needs fan support and media support if it hopes to come close to the top teams in the country. The fencing team has proven that it will win no matter what. There are no unpleasant surprises. The Irish don't lose much, especially to inferior teams. Too bad we can't say the same about some other teams on campus.

After Lake Forest win

Hockey team visits Penn State

By ED DOMANSKY
 Sports Writer

JOHNSTOWN, Pa. — After a 6-4 victory over Lake Forest on Wednesday at the ACC, which enabled the Notre Dame hockey team to reach the 20-win mark, the Irish return to the road this weekend, where they will be the guests of the Penn State Nittany Lions.

Now holding an impressive 20-1-0 record, Notre Dame enters the non-conference weekend series riding a five-game winning streak.

The games will be played tonight and tomorrow at the War Memorial Arena here in Johnstown. The facility is somewhat of a neutral site since the Penn State campus, located in State College, Pa., is roughly a one hour drive away.

The Lions bring a 17-11 mark into the series. Gaining specific information about them is difficult because they, like Notre Dame, are a club team.

"We're not sure just how good they are," said Irish head coach Lefty Smith. "We keep getting conflicting reports. But we are anxious to play them."

From the information that was available, the Lions have split a series with Notre Dame's Central States Collegiate Hockey League opponent Alabama-Huntsville. Alabama, like Notre Dame, is undefeated in CSHL play. Penn State also has beaten the University of Arizona, the Naval Academy, and Canton ATC, a highly regarded club from upstate New York.

Adam Parsons and Bob Thebeau have been the two hot players in the Notre Dame offense over the last three games. Parsons has scored a hat trick in two consecutive outings, as well as adding another goal and five assists.

Thebeau scored a goal and had three assists in each game of the Marquette series. He then knocked home two of the six Irish goals Wednesday against Lake Forest.

Co-captain and leading scorer Brent Chapman has not been turning on the red light as much lately, scoring just three goals. But over the same three games, he has dished out eight assists. Four of those assists came in last Saturday's 11-2 routing of Marquette.

"We've been told that they're doing a lot of promotion for the games," said Thebeau. "They're supposed to have a good team, so we're pretty pumped to play them. It should be a good weekend."

The games this weekend will be the first ever meeting between the two schools in hockey competition.

"Penn State is a fine institution," says Smith. "There is a good rivalry between the schools, so it should make for an interesting series."

Al Haverkamp will get the starting assignment in the Notre Dame goal tonight. He has a 5-0-0 record and a 3.00 goals against average.

Marc Guay is listed as the probable starter on Saturday. He is 3-0-0 and owns a 2.75 goals against.

Just six games remain on the 1983-84 schedule, and with the Irish hoping to complete all six without another loss, aggressive, exciting hockey should be in store over the next three weeks.

Women face Villanova

When the Notre Dame women's basketball team faces the Villanova Wildcats tomorrow night at 7:30 in the ACC, it will be a matchup of two teams whose seasons have headed in opposite directions. While the Irish have dropped to 8-12 on the season after finishing last year at 20-7, the Wildcats of Harry Perretta have improved last year's 14-15 record to 15-5 this year.

Four blue-chip freshman recruits have been most responsible for the resurgence of Villanova. The bluest of the blue-chips is 6-0 forward Shelly Pennefather. Pennefather was one of the most highly-recruited high school players in the country last year, and she has lived up to all of Perretta's expectations. With an average of 20 points a game, she is probably the highest scoring freshman in the nation.

However, a large chunk of the offensive production comes from Pennefather and senior guard Nancy Bernhardt, who adds more than 21 points a game to go along with Pennefather's high output. Bernhardt scored 20 points in last season's 72-68 loss to Notre Dame, and will keep the Irish from sagging on Pennefather.

The Irish, on the other hand, are getting most of their offense from junior guard Laura Dougherty and junior center Mary Beth Schueth. Those two players are going to need a lot more help than they have been receiving of late if Mary DiStanislaio is going to get her team back into a groove.

Embry is another tough situation (to guard against)."

DePaul will at times go with three guards. Those three, Tony Jackson, Jerry McMillan, and Kenny Patterson, collectively average 27.2 points a game.

Jackson is a 6-5 sophomore, who as a freshman scored 272 points, the most ever by a DePaul freshman. McMillan is a 6-4 senior co-captain who shoots well from outside. Patterson, of course, is the player who hit a 16-foot jumper at the buzzer last Feb. 26 in the Rosemont Horizon to give the Demons a 55-53 win over the Irish.

"McMillan has great success against zones with his outside shooting," evaluates Phelps, "and Patterson has always been 'Mr. Clutch' for them. He hits the shot against St. John's (last Saturday in overtime to give DePaul a 59-57 win) and he hits the shot against us last year."

Off the bench for DePaul is freshman sensation Dallas Comegys, a player thought to be the best high schooler out of Philadelphia since Gene Banks. Comegys (pronounced COMMA-gee-z) was a consensus high school all-American last year as a senior while averaging 21.6 points and 11.5 rebounds.

This year, usually as the Demons' sixth man, Comegys is the team's third leading scorer with a 9.4 point average. In addition, Comegys nets 5.5 rebounds a game and is an excellent shot blocker.

"The way Comegys has come off the bench for them this year when they didn't really know how good he was going to be as a freshman," says Phelps, "is obviously a big plus for DePaul."

Others coming off DePaul's bench are 6-11 Lemone Lampley, freshman Lawrence West, and senior Raymond McCoy.

Yet, tomorrow's game will involve more than just personnel. Emotion and state of mind will play heavily into the final result.

DePaul, of course, is coming off its first loss of the season and will be looking to get back on the winning track. Meyer feels that the loss will likely be beneficial to the Demons in the long run.

"The loss doesn't mean much at this point," says the retiring DePaul coach. "Overall, it's probably a good thing. It kinds of wakes them up a little and makes them work that much harder in practice. They're hungry again."

Notre Dame, similarly, should be hungry. The Irish would really like to beat another highly ranked team on national television, as they did Maryland, since the pay off could be an NCAA tournament bid. This is because such a win would tend to stick in the mind of the selection committee come March 11.

The Irish, though, have the disadvantage of having played just last night, while the Demons haven't been in action since Tuesday. Fatigue won't enter into the game, however, at least according to Phelps.

"Saturday's game will be a game of adrenalin," says the Irish coach. "You don't worry about sleep. The thing that scares me is how they just walked into Pauley Pavillion and blew out UCLA, so they're capable of that."

"That's something we can't let happen. If it goes down to the last minute, that's when Notre Dame is at its best. We've just got to get it to the last minute and make it happen."

Meyer knows the Irish will do many things to try and stay close, one of them being keeping DePaul out of its running game.

"Notre Dame will try to slow it down and play a half-court game," says Meyer. "We don't want to do that."

While this game will be special for everyone involved, it will be quite a battle, which is a thought echoed by both coaches.

"It will be very sentimental for me," says Meyer. "I'll enter the game with mixed emotions. It'll be wonderful down there until the whistle blows, then it'll be a war, then afterward it'll be wonderful again."

Phelps perhaps sums up the character of tomorrow's game best, saying, "Come game time it'll be a war, but after the game I'll hug him and give him a kiss."

Second-half Rutgers rally gives Notre Dame another costly loss

By CHRIS NEEDLES
Observer Special Writer

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — For 364 days a year, the Brendan Byrne Meadowlands Arena really is a nice place to visit. A great place to take the family. It's everything you always wanted in a basketball arena — easy access, lots of parking . . .

But for one night each year — usually the same night Notre Dame makes its annual visit — it becomes a veritable chamber of horrors. In the last two seasons, the Irish have played arguably their worst basketball at this suburban mecca: an ignominious thirteen-point loss to Seton Hall in 1982, and an equally bad six-pointer to Fordham last year.

Sure enough, this place reared its ugly head last night as Notre Dame lost to Rutgers, 61-59, on Chris Remley's 22-foot bomb with two seconds left. It was the Scarlet Knights' first lead in the game since they led 6-5 2:34 into the game, and capped a gutsy second-half performance that saw the physically-weaker Knights outrebound Notre Dame, 20-8.

Although Irish coach Digger Phelps discounted the presence of a jinx against his team, you really have to wonder. Just how bad has the Byrne Arena treated Notre Dame over the years? Consider the following:

February 18, 1982 — John Paxson has his worst game as a collegian (six points, four of them in the final minute) as the Irish lose to Seton Hall, the Big East doormat, 71-58.

February 10, 1983 — Notre Dame trails throughout and loses to Fordham, 75-69, effectively knocking the Irish out of NCAA Tournament contention. After the game, the team flies to Raleigh, N.C. — in the middle of the worst blizzard on the East Coast in this century.

DePaul Pep Rally cancelled

Somehow, one had the feeling last night that the string of bad luck would continue. Notre Dame arrived here Wednesday night; its uniforms and warm-ups, however, didn't show up until a few hours before game time, having been lost somewhere in the maze that is New York's LaGuardia Airport.

But, if the Irish ever were going to break their Meadowlands jinx, Rutgers seemed to be the perfect victim. Its stick-figure front line of Remley, Aundra Bell, and Steve Perry, reads 6-9, 200 pounds, 6-9, 185 pounds, and 6-6, 195 pounds, respectively — perfect fall guys for Notre Dame's half-court, bang-it-inside offense. True to form, the Irish used a 19-7 rebounding edge to jump to a 32-24 halftime advantage behind Tom Sluby's 15 points, and Tim Kempton's 12 points and eight rebounds.

So what happened in the second half?

"We didn't do a good job on the boards," said a perturbed Phelps in a very brief post-game press conference. "That was the difference, nothing else."

No argument here. The Scarlet Knights, malnourished as they were, grabbed 12 offensive rebounds en route to a 20-8 second-half edge on the boards. All of this against a team which entered the game ranked fourth in the nation in rebounding margin, averaging nearly nine more rebounds per game than its opponents.

But for Rutgers' coach Tom Young, the difference was defense. Namely, a box-and-one that held Sluby scoreless in the second half.

"We waited until the second half to put that defense in," Young said, "because we didn't want to give it away and give Notre Dame the chance to adjust to it at halftime. You can't blame Sluby. A box-and-one takes him out of the offense, but his teammates didn't adjust."

see JINX, page 14

After a heartbreaking 61-59 loss to Rutgers last night, the Notre Dame basketball team now must turn its sights to second ranked DePaul. For more on Blue Demon forward Kevin Holmes and his teammates, as well as a recap of last night's loss, see the two related stories on this page.

Should be emotional

Irish play host to No. 2 DePaul

By JEFF BLUMB
Assistant Sports Editor

Any rational bettor would put his money on second-ranked DePaul tomorrow when the Blue Demons invade the ACC (4 p.m., CBS-TV) to play the unranked Irish. Statistically speaking, DePaul has the upper hand. But, when a game is as full of emotion as tomorrow's will be, just about anything can happen — as it has before.

February 27, 1980 . . . DePaul comes to the ACC with a 25-0 record and holding the nation's number-one ranking. DePaul leaves the ACC with a 25-1 record after falling to Notre Dame, 76-74, in two overtimes.

That game, likely one of the biggest upsets in the history of modern college basketball, would have been on the mind of probably every person in the ACC tomorrow had the Blue Demons still been undefeated.

DePaul, of course, lost their first game of the year Tuesday night to St. Joseph's (Pa.), 58-45, and stands at 17-1 instead of the 18-0 which most everyone at Notre Dame had hoped for. That defeat, however, will barely tarnish the significance of tomorrow's game.

In large part, tomorrow's meeting of the Demons and Irish will be a tribute to "Coach." Needless to say, "Coach" is Ray Meyer, the veteran DePaul mentor of 42 years, who, after graduating from Notre Dame in 1938 and coaching at his alma mater for two years as an assistant, took the reigns of the Blue Demon program and has never relinquished them.

Next year, though, Meyer's son Joey will guide the DePaul fortunes as he retires after 42 years of dedicated service to the metropolitan Chicago university.

"It'll be hard on him leaving, it really will," says Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps. "It's going to be a struggle for him when he leaves it because he's done it for so long, and that's all he's done."

And Meyer has done a lot. He's presently the winningest coach among active coaches with 714 victories, and fifth on the list for most career wins by a Division I coach.

This year's DePaul team is one of Meyer's best, if not his most closely knit.

"This is the closest team I've ever worked with," says Meyer. "The players are very close to one another and very close to me. They really enjoy working with one another."

"There is no selfishness on the team," Phelps says. "Ray does not have any ego problems. They're not public if there are. They are really conscious of what they can be right now."

Although it may rank among DePaul's best teams, this year's squad is not the prototypical DePaul team.

"This is an unusual team at DePaul," Meyer says. "There are no superstars and everyone can play. When we put our subs in, the scoring continues to mount."

Leading that scoring is 6-6 junior co-captain Tyrone Corbin. Averaging 13.6 points from his forward position through last Saturday's game with St. John's, Corbin had paced the DePaul attack in nine of their games, in addition to being their leading rebounder with an average of 7.4 boards a game.

An all-America candidate who was selected to the NIT All-Tournament team a year ago, the report on Corbin says that he is an explosive player who is generally at his best in nationally televised games.

"Corbin can explode anytime," assesses Phelps. "He's playing very well along the baseline. He hits the boards really hard. I like what he does."

Up front with Corbin is a pair of sophomores, center Marty Embry and forward Kevin Holmes. Holmes is the second leading scorer for the Demons at 9.8 points per game, along with grabbing 5.3 rebounds a contest.

Embry, the strongest player on the DePaul squad, also has the best field goal percentage on the team. He averages 5.5 points and 5.4 rebounds.

"Embry's the guy that's the bull for them on the boards and makes other things happen," says Phelps. "That combination of Holmes and

ND's most successful program

Probably one of the oldest sports trivia questions at Notre Dame is, "What is the winningest team on campus?"

People who are very familiar with the entire athletic department know the answer right away — it's Mike DeCicco's fencing squad — but there are probably many who read the sports pages that didn't know the answer.

The reason is quite simple. Fencing is not one of the more well-known sports in the country. Because people don't like to read about sports of which they know nothing as they skim the sports pages, papers do not cover the sport as well as it could be covered. And, because papers don't cover the sport, nobody ever learns anything about it. It's a wicked circle.

This problem is evident here at Notre Dame as much as anywhere. Here we have a fencing team that has been No. 1 or 2 in the country for years and it gets the same coverage as most of the so-called "minor sports."

Notre Dame fencing is definitely a big-league program. Its success is unmatched by any sport at Notre Dame or at any other school. How many other teams can claim to have a winning percentage of 88 percent over the last 47 seasons? DeCicco, who is in his 23rd year as Irish coach, has a winning percentage of almost 92 percent. Not bad for a program that doesn't get scholarships and doesn't need them.

Obviously, the program also doesn't need a great deal of publicity to succeed. Not that the fencers wouldn't love to have some loyal supporters show up when they compete, but the country doesn't need to know that the program is strong in order for it to draw some of the best fencers in the nation.

When a high-school fencer or a European fencer who wants to go to school in the United States is looking for a college, he thinks first of Notre Dame and Wayne State, the current defending national champions and one of Notre Dame's opponents tomorrow in the ACC.

Mike Sullivan

Sports Editor

As a result, the battle for the national championship almost always comes down to Notre Dame-Wayne State. Last year, for instance, the Irish won 23 of 25 matches, but finished second in the NCAA after losing two close meets to Wayne State.

This year is no different. Notre Dame, despite the fact that it lost five outstanding fencers, three of them all-Americans, is riding a 19-game win streak. Wayne State seems to be on its way to winning another championship. The only obstacle in its way is Notre Dame.

Meanwhile, it seems Wayne State is the only obstacle to the great success of the Notre Dame fencing program. For a minor sport at Notre Dame, that's incredible. After all, there have always been many obstacles to success for the minor sports. Whether it's incompetent coaches, poor geographical location, lack of financial support, or even lack of fan support, the success of the small programs has been limited.

DeCicco and his fencers have attained a plateau that only the major sports of football and basketball have attained before. They have made a name for themselves by building one of the very top programs in the country. But, while the football and basketball programs have begun to slide back into the pack, the fencing program has remained right near the top.

The lack of consistent competition — not many schools have really developed fencing programs — is one of the reasons for the consistent success. Top-notch
