Other schools look to ND when making own policies

By MARK DILLON
Staff reporter

Notre Dame's alcohol*policy appears to be spreading.

Father David Tyson, vice president for student affairs and Father William Beauchamp, executive vice president, told the Board of Trustees at a meeting held last month that other colleges and universities have expressed an interest in the Notre Dame Alcohol Policy.

Beauchamp said, "Between 15 and 20 schools have inquired about our policy". Adding, "Schools began inquiring last summer before the implementation of the Notre Dame policy".

The University of California at Los Angeles requested a copy of the policy to assist in the formulation of a policy for its fraternaties.

Saint Mary's College of Winona, Minnesota also studied the Notre Dame policy. Phil Shoemaker, vice president for student development

Bitter cold sweeps Indiana and nation

Special to The Observer

It was very, very cold this weekend, and no one who keeps records of such things can remember a more bitter winter storm in Indiana's history.

A blast of arctic air, dubbed an "Alberta Clipper" by the National Weather Service, unleashed severe cold and high winds which teamed up to cause many discomforts but few major injuries across the state.

Yesterday's low in South Bend was 21 degrees below zero, recorded at 9 and 10 a.m. Yesterday's high was 7 below, recorded shortly after midnight and at 10 p.m. last night.

The wind-chill index yesterday morning was about 70 degrees below zero. The wind-chill index shortly after midnight yesterday was about 55 degrees below zero.

In Kokomo, Ind., where it hit 26 below zero at 6:30 a.m. yesterday, it was the coldest recorded temperature since records were started in 1892.

A warming trend is expected this week. Highs today should reach 5 degrees above zero, according to weather service forecaster Tom Arnold of South Bend.

Wind chill temperatures today will be about 30 degrees below zero.

Low tonight is forecast to be zero, and highs tomorrow should be about 20. "It looks like a gradual moderation of temperature day by day," said Indianapolis forecaster Paul Henderickson. "By the middle of the week, about Wednesday, the highs should be back into the mid-20s."

Th:-Alberta Clipper also dumped about six inches of snow on Notre Dame and Saint Mary's. But the winds were mostly from the west, causing the worst lake-effect snow to pass over Michigan.

"If the winds had been from the northwest (directly across and down Lake Michigan), we would have been buried," Arnold said.

There was a 70 percent chance of more snow tonight and tomorrow, but most of the new snow is expected closest to Lake Michigan.

Even with the wind and cold, Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students tried desperately not to let the Alberta Clipper cramp their style.

Ronald Reagan takes oath for 2nd term in White House

Associated Press

WASHINGTON Ronald Wilson Reagan, standing on the landing of the White House grand staircase, swore the presidential oath for a second term yesterday in front of 96 guests and a national television audience. Outside, icy winds foretold the rigors of today's outdoor ceremony when Reagan reenacts his swearing-in with public pomp and a declaration of "American renewal."

The Republic's 50th Inauguration was the sixth to fall on a Sunday. Tradition held that the pageantry would come Monday, and allowed the president to relax and watch the Super Bowl with 100 million other Americans.

It was 9 degrees outside when Reagan took his oath in the redcarpeted elegance of the executive mansion's State Floor. Forecasters were warning parade-goers that today could be the coldest public inaugural in history.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said today's inaugural speech to be delivered from the West Front of the Capitol would look forward to "an American renewal, continuing America's proud and revolutionary tradition."

Vice President George Bush was sworn in a minute before Reagan, with his friend, retired Supreme Court Justice Potter Stewart, returning from New Hampshire to administer the oath.

Chief Justice Warren Burger administered the oath to Reagan, who said: "I, Ronald Reagan, do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the Office of President of the United States, and will to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States, so help me God."

When Reagan finished, Burger said, "Congratulations, sir." The President kissed First Lady Nancy Reagan

It isn't the oath that made Reagan the president; the Constitution dictates that the president's term ends at noon on Jan. 20, when his successor's begins. Thus, Reagan's second term would have begun Sunday even if he had postponed his oath to await the public ceremony today.

The guests listened to the U.S. Army chorus sing the hymn "America" before adjourning to a reception. Reagan and Bush stepped outside, where the wind-chill factor was minus-22 degrees Farenheit, to pose for pictures without overcoats - and answer a few questions from reporters before joining their guests a few moments later.

Asked what he hopes for in a second term, Reagan said, "Well, I hope it's a little warmer."

Asked if it would be different the second time around, Reagan, who is only the 14th American president to have been re-elected, replied: "It always is, isn't it?"

The White House had considered making yesterday's oathtaking a private affair, as Dwight Eisenhower's was in 1957, the last time Inauguration Day fell on a Sunday. But it was decided early last week to admit three reporters, three news photographers and two television camera crews whose pictures were carried live by the four major television networks.

The guest list was put at "965 and one-half' by White House spokeswoman Sheila Tate, who counted Reagan's 20-month-old granddaughter Ashley as the half.

Michael Deaver, a longtime Reagan aide and confidant who planned the four days of inaugural festivities before coming down with the flu, left his sickbed to attend the ceremony.

Thirty-three members of the presidential and vice presidential families sat in the first three rows. Other guests included Reagan's top staff members, the Cabinet, Republican and Democratic congressional leaders and Gen. George Vessey, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Most brought their wives or husbands.

Four years ago, it was 56 degrees on one of the balmiest inaugurals ever.

This time, officials were prepared for a crowd of 140,000 to gather at the Capitol to watch the re-enactment today and perhaps 200,000 more to line the parade route down Pennsylvania Avenue to the White House. However, a forecast of temperatures in the teens, coupled with high winds, threatened to hold down the size of the crowds.

Speakes said Reagan asked the inaugural committee yesterday morning to cancel a scheduled youth pageant outside the Jefferson Memorial "knowing that he would be out there only a few minutes but that others would be out for hours" in the cold.

Healy invited, but skips inaugural

By MIRIAM HILL Senior Staff Reporter

Notre Dame senior Bill Healy could have spent his 21st birthday at President Reagan's inauguration as an invited guest.

As chairman of the Reagan-Bush campaign at Notre Dame, Healy received an invitation to the inauguration of Ronald Reagan and George Bush.

He was unable to attend the gala celebration due to prior commitments and lack of funds.

"I think it was a great honor that I got invited to it. I was real disappointed that I couldn't go," Healy said.

He was also invited to the Youth Leadership Forum, the National Pageant of Young Americans, a concert featuring Jerry Lee Lewis and Kool and the Gang, the Inaugural Ball for Young Americans, and many other events designed to appeal to the young attending the inauguration.

"The best thing for me would have been to be at that ball (for young Americans) because President Reagan has promised he will be there. I would have liked to congratulate him and thank him for all he's done for the country," Healy said.

He gave the invitation to Paul who were fundraising chairmen of the Reagan- Bush campaign at Notre Dame. Because of his activity in the Re-Finamore and Stephanie Mole.

Because of his activity in the Republican party, both CBS News and the Washington Post wanted to interview Healy as part of stories on the strong support President Reagan received from young people during the election.

Healy believes American youth voted for Reagan because "young people today are more ambitious (than in former years). They want to get out of college and get a good job, and Reagan is more in line with these ambitions."

Reagan and the Republicans are "courting youths across the country" in order to build strong support for the Republican Party, Healy told the Washington Post.

As a transfer student to Notre Dame from Northern Illinois University, Healy first became interested in politics when he worked

Indiana state Sen. Edward A. Pease is spreading the word among his colleagues: don't dangle a participle and strike "heretofore." Pease has been known to take a red pencil to offending bills, just as he does to compositions by his freshmen students at Indiana State University. The 33-year-old attorney, who is working on a master's degree in English, has become the unofficial grammarian of the Indiana Senate. He rewrites bills in committee to correct grammatical flaws and occasionally takes the Senate floor to offer amendments that couch bills in clearer terms. Pease said words such as "heretofore" and "hereinafter" - staples of traditional legal writing - should be banished from the legislative vocabulary. "We have a tendency in the Legislature to be verbose. It doesn't need to be that way," said Pease. "It's important in any free society that the electorate understands its own laws. -AP

Noble dream kept alive through federal holiday

The nation will be commemorating the birth of an American who never was elected to public office. Other than Martin Luther King Jr., George Washington is the only American recognized by a federal holiday.

On this sensitive issue, former Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker declared that the Senate vote supporting Martin Luther King day was "proof positive that we intend to acknowledge and celebrate the nobility of our Baker's is an ironic epitaph. Obviously Martin Luther King Jr. was not a member of the noble class. In fact, his life was a campaign against the medieval attitudes and laws of the American nobility. In his fights for civil rights and peace and against poverty; however, King fulfilled Webster's first definition of nobility for he both exhibited a magnaminous spirit and commanded moral worth and excellence.

The execution of his philosophy through his courageous spirit is what this holiday is commemorating, besides honoring a great human being.

King was the force behind the repeal of segregation laws in states across the South, the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Voting Rights Act of 1965, He demonstrated the strength of nonviolent resistance. pinnacle of his career came on Aug. 28, 1963 in his "March on Washington" in which he led 250,000 people of different races and creeds in support of civil rights legislation. In recognition of his work, King received the Nobel Peace Prize in 1964. At age 35 he was the youngest recipient. By proclaiming Jan. 15 Martin Luther King day the U.S. government is commending King as a contemporary representative of the spirit of justice which supposedly founded this nation. His direct cause was the Negro, but on a larger scale he was speaking and marching against injustice in this country, of which the oppression of blacks was, and is, a large part. "Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere," wrote the civil rights leader from the Birmingham jail where he was imprisoned after conducting a rally to desegregate the city's restaurants, hotels and department stores.

In King's case, as praiseworthy as his cause, was the manner in which he fought for it. King modeled his style of protest on the teachings of Christianity, Henry David Thoreau's "Civil Disobedience" and Mohandas Gandhi. In his speech accepting the Nobel Prize King said, "Nonviolence is the answer to the crucial political and moral questions of our time. . . . Man must evolve for all human conflict a method which rejects revenge, aggression and retaliation.

"I refuse to accept the cynical notion that nation after nation must spiral down a militaristic stairway into the hell of nuclear destruction. I believe that unarmed truth and unconditional love will have the final word in

Seventeen years after the civil rights leader's death, leaders of the United States and the Soviet Union are still > (or finally) sitting down to try and find the method to which King referred.

On King's tombstone are the words of a spiritual; "Free at last, free at last, thank God Almighty, I'm free at last." King's dream was that people would find freedom through love and justice before death.

He had a dream that his four children "will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin, but by the content of their character."

Today people carry on that same dream. Others dream that they will not be judged by their gender, or their creed, or their age. In declaring King's birthday a federal holiday the successors of Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln have acknowledged that these are noble

Three microwaves installed at SAGA

By DIANE SCHROEDER News Staff

SAGA Food Services and the Saint Mary's purchasing department have introduced three microwave ovens to warm the College dining experi-

"Microwaves are the product of the eighties," according to Bob Luedtke, director of SAGA at Saint Mary's. He hopes the purchase will enhance the dining room and replace some of the older toasters.

Three microwave ovens with fans and service contracts were purchased during break for $1,000. According to Luedtke, the ovens were a bargain and cost a third of the price of a home microwave.

So far, the response has been positive. Freshman Jennifer Palm said, "I think they're a great invention and I can't wait to get one for my room!" McCandless resident Julie Darnell reported, "It's a great way to warm your stomach during the cold winter." Her roommate Lisa McGowan added, "They made the apple turnovers taste fresh even though they were really stale."

Vigilante's actions stir controversy over crime

The campus-wide opinion concerning Bernard Goetz and his alleged attack upon four youths on a New York subway is decidedly mixed.

According to news reports four black youths approached Goetz on the subway and asked him for five dollars, whereupon he drew a gun and fired at them hitting all four

Two of the youths remain hospitalized, one in a coma.

Upon apprehension by New York City authorities, two of the youths were found to have been carrying sharpened screwdrivers.

Goetz said he acted in selfdefense.

"I don't think the way to end criminal activity is to engage in," said Law Professor Douglas Kmiec.

Several members of the Notre Dame campus community admitted they didn't know all the facts surrounding the Goetz shooting

Father Mario Pedi, rector of St. Edwards Hall, said attitudes and intent should be taken into account. Reportedly Goetz "was talking about gouging eyes out," said Pedi.

Senior Norb Loesing admitted to feeling split on the question. "If Goetz is convicted," he said, "the public at large will feel all the more need to take the law into their own hands when necessary. If not, it may seem that such vigilantism is condoned and even encouraged."

JPW applications due January 31

By MICHAEL O'HAGAN News Staff

Once again the third weekend of February will play host to the annual Iunior Parents' Weekend, and as the January 31 application deadline approaches Chairwoman Julie Schuessler reports that 40 percent of the class have submitted their ticket applications.

Students who have not yet returned their applications and checks may do so at the Student Activities office in LaFortune. Registration packets for those students whose parents have not yet received them are available in the Student Activities office.

The weekend, which begins with registration on Thursday, Febuary 14 in LaFortune and ends with a Sunday brunch, includes a dance on Friday evening and the highlight of Saturday night's President's Dinner.

University president Theodore Hesburgh will be the keynote speaker Saturday evening following the Junior Class Mass which he will celebrate. Don Keough, president and chief operating officer of the Coca-Cola Company will speak at the closing brunch Sunday morning.

Schuessler said Keough, the father of two Notre Dame students, was chosen by the Junior Parents' Weekend executive committee in order to provide a parental perspective.

Seating reservations for the President's Dinner must be made on Febuary 3 or 4 in the Nazz between 7 and 9 p.m. According to Schuessler each table will seat ten people. Students may bring up to six ID's in order to reserve places for eighteen to twenty people.

Schuessler also suggests that students make hotel reservations now in order to avoid any problems accomodating their parents during the weekend.

The schedule for this years JPW includes two new events designed by the committee to increase student involvement. A cabaret show on Friday night will feature singing, dancing, and acting. On Saturday afternoon there will be a Foreign Studies reception in the ACC for those juniors who spent their sophomore year abroad.

Students who require extra tickets for the weekend or have any questions concerning the event may contact Executive Coordinator Mary Richardson at 2206 or Chairwoman Julie Schuessler at 4251.

The doors at Memorial Library glazed over in fantastic snow mosaics, and monitors at the library warned students to bundle up with scarfs before braving the winds.

Space shuttle countdown underway for military mission

Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. - The five astronauts who will fly America's first military man-in-space mission arrived here yesterday, and though the countdown was set to start at 4 a.m. today, the exact shuttle launch time remained a military secret.

The astronauts, all military officers, skipped the usual arrival statements to reporters after flying here from their training base at Johnson Space Center in Houston. They were greeted by relatives and drove quickly to crew quarters.

Officials have said only that liftoff will occur between 1:15 and 4:15 p.m. EST Wednesday. They contend that keeping the precise time classified will make it more difficult for Soviet spy satellites and trawlers sitting offshore to monitor the flight.

NASA reported Saturday that the Defense Department is considering opening up the countdown to reporters when it reaches nine minutes before the intended liftoff, and a decision is expected today. The news media will be permitted to watch the launch from the press site.

Launch time cannot be precisely calculated just by knowing when the countdown starts, because the count includes "hold" periods of unannounced length during which the clock is stopped.

The space shuttle Discovery will be carrying a sophisticated new spy satellite into orbit, sources have reported. They say it will be parked in stationary orbit 22,300 miles above the equator south of the Soviet Union. From this high outpost it will electronically eavesdrop on military and diplomatic communications in much of Europe, Asia and Africa.

Commanding the flight is Navy Capt. Thomas Mattingly, a veteran astronaut who circled the moon on Apollo 16 in 1972 and commanded a shuttle flight in 1982. The other crew members, all first-time space fliers, are Air Force Lt. Col. Loren Shriver, Marine Lt. Col. James Buchli and Air Force Majs. Ellison Onizuka and Gary Payton.

The news media will not be able to monitor space-to-ground communications during the flight, which has been a practice for years, nor has the length of the mission been disonly that they will receive 16 hours notice of Discovery's landing.

Reporters have been informed by the Pentagon that after the satellite is released it will be boosted to higher orbit by a rocket type making its first flight since a similar stage failed two years ago. That failure, which sent a NASA communications satellite into an improper orbit, was traced to the overheating of a flexible seal in a nozzle steering mechanism.

NASA also has announced the astronauts will conduct two nonclassified experiments. One involves the study in weightlessness of diseased blood samples from six closed. Reporters have been told people with illnesses such as cancer, diabetes and hypertension. The > other will see how weightless fluids behave in transit from one tank to another to provide data for satellite refueling missions.

> For NASA the secrecy is a new experience after 24 years of conducting an open information policy through 45 man-in-space missions.

The Defense Department will shift most of its shuttle missions starting in about a year to a more secure launch base the Air Force is constructing at Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif.

Pro-abortion activists hold vigils

Associated Press

BOSTON - Abortion rights supporters picketed a Roman Catholic archbishop's house and kept vigil at clinics for a third day yesterday while opponents held rallies and car caravans in activities building up to the 12th anniversary of the Supreme Court's decision legalizing abortion.

Meanwhile, three men were arrested Saturday in connection with eight anti-abortion bombings in the Washington, D.C., area in the past

At least 24 such attacks have occurred since January 1984, and the National Organization for Women sponsored round-the-clock vigils that continued yesterday at 25 family planning centers and abortion clinics in 18 states to protest the violence. Participants generally reported a quiet weekend without incidents.

Tomorrow is the anniversary of the landmark court ruling.

In Boston, about 40 pro-choice protesters marched outside the home of Catholic Archbishop Bernard Law, who last week offered the support of the Boston Archdiocese including medical and financial aid to any woman of any faith who chose to keep her child rather than have an abortion

Braving 18-degree temperatures, the demonstrators chanted "Safe, legal, on demand - abortion rights across the land" and carried signs that read "Motherhood by choice, not chance.'

Law was not available for comment vesterday because he was on his way to Cuba with a delegation of U.S. bishops, said his secretary, the Rev. Joseh Scorzello.

Across town at Boston's Faneuil Hall, about 1,000 abortion opponents, including Mayor Raymond Flynn, gathered to hear speakers at the 12th annual Assembly for Life. Outside, pro-choice and antiabortion groups marched in separate circles and traded insults.

More than 90 abortion rights supporters who were keeping vigil for a third day at the Fargo, N.D., Women's Health Organization formed a human chain around the building, remaining outside for 45 minutes as wind chills dropped the temperature to 40 below zero, said Lynn Wilson, president of Citizens for a Real Choice.

At the same time, abortion foes drove past the clinic in a "memorial car caravan" several blocks long, led by a hearse carrying a small white coffin. The caravan followed a rally outside the Cass County Courthouse, said Susan Richard, president of the LIFE coalition.

In Washington, federal officials announced Saturday that three men had been arrested in connection with eight bombings of abortion clinics and family planning centers

25 states celebrate holiday, but ND observance criticized

By MIKE MILLEN Senior Staff Reporter

Many hailed the U.S. Senate in its landmark decision to declare a national holiday in honor of Martin Luther King Ir.

According to the Martin Luther King Center in Atlanta, Georgia, 25 states officially celebrated the holiday this year. Some of the states everywhere, citing the fact that "Jesse Jackson chose to honor it on the 15th, while others might not be where he is (today). will observe the holiday today.

brarian Granville Cleveland, honoring King's birthday "is the decent thing for us as Americans to do." He sees the black leader as a man who "brought forth a consciousness of the wrongs being done to human beings. A leader ... who we don't have today, who went above and beyond the call of duty.

Cleveland said King deserves a national holiday, more than just statewide recognition. "He went national, and affected people all over the country. Martin Luther King did much more than any other leader in regards to civil rights," he said.

Although Cleveland praised King, he was unhappy with Notre Dame's recognition of the holiday.

When asked what he thought of the University's observance of the holiday, Cleveland replied, "How much did Notre Dame do for Christmas on the campus, and Notre Dame Can you name another Afro-American given a didn't do much for Martin Luther King."

Cleveland hopes people will spare a moment to reflect on King. "I'd like to see the and they (the U.S. Senate) had to have a fight students understand he came along at a very important time."

Cleveland said King did much for blacks

Chairwoman of the Black Cultural Arts According to Notre Dame Assistant Law Li- Council Marsha Auls agreed, saying the "holiday was a good idea. King was a citizen without a position (in public office) who was able to raise the consciousness of a nation" She added, "He made the non-white culture know they have a voice.

Auls was unhappy with the University's participation in the holiday. "I don't see it (recognition of the event). It's more of a liberal idea, and Notre Dame is conservative." She would like to see "some sort of booth set up, so that students could get some information (about King)."

Aul felt national recognition was necessary because "a lot of states would just think it was yet another person having to have their birthday celebrated."

"It's not just a black student issue," she said. "He changed the social attitudes of an entire

"I'm just sorry it took so long to recognize it Crutchfield was critical of Notre Dame's efforts to recognize King, saying "We give lip service, but when it comes down to it, we're not sincere. You only have to look around. Maybe our intentions are good, although sometimes you preach a lot but don't practice Crutchfield continued, "The average Notre Dame student doesn't know too much about the man. A lot of kids don't really understand... Martin Luther King except through history

"I don't know too much about what the books say, but he (King) raised the consciousness of a nation," Crutchfield said.

Students around campus shared the opinion the day is worthwhile. Junior Dave Thornas said, "It's good to remember the personality that brought about reforms in civil rights. It's more important, however, to look at what he did than at the man himself. He has showed us that it is possible for different races to coexist.'

James Franklin, a freshman engineering student, agreed. "I think he should get a holiday because of what he did for both blacks and whites. I don't feel Notre Dame did much (to commemorate King's birthday), but Notre Dame doesn't do much to celebrate anyone's Born: Jan. 15, 1929, Atlanta, Ga.

White House being built in Jordan

Associated Press

AMMAN, Jordan - A Palestinian businessman's version of the White House is rising on a dusty hillside in the Jordanian capital, overlooking the boxy villas and slender minarets of modern Amman.

From the front and sides, it looks as if the White House has been uprooted from Pennsylvania Avenue and planted on a steep slope above Jordan University Street.

Only the word 'Allah' in Arabic on the portico clearly distinguishes the home of Ghazi Abu Younis from the northern face of President Reagan's house.

"I have visited the United States, and I have seen the White House and I am very proud to do the same," Abu Younis told a reporter, speaking above the rock-cutting saws inside the half-completed building.

Abu Younis, a Palestinian heavy equipment dealer, sent his two sons to study at North Carolina State University. But he said it wasn't admiration for the United States that inspired his house.

"Actually," he said, "I liked the design."

His brother-in-law, Helmi al-Adham, incorporated the White House design in the house's front and sides. But from the rear, Abu Younis' home could be another of the rectangular stone boxes that have spread across the hills of Amman during the economic boom of the past decade.

Administrator, prof visit University of Peace over break

LYNNE R. STRAND News Staff

While students enjoyed their Christmas break, one Notre Dame administrator and one engineering professor attended the University of Peace in San Jose, Costa Rica.

A seminar sponsored by the United Nations University of Peace allowed participants to "1) become familiar with the University of Peace. 2) learn of Costa Rica, an unarmed democracy, and 3) have a series of talks on Central America," said Father Edward Malloy associate provost and officer of Notre Dame.

Malloy and James Taylor, associate dean of the College of Engineering, represented Notre Dame at the seminar.

Fourteen other colleges sent representatives, including Manhattan, St. John's, and Marquette, and all are members of the Association of Catholic Colleges and Universities which sponsored the San Jose seminar.

The seminar's purpose was "different for different people," Taylor noted that the seminar specifically added to his understanding of Latin America, "politically, culturally, and economically."

Taylor was the only engineer in attendance among five priests, four nuns, and five administrators.

From Jan. 6 to 13, these ACCU representatives visited the University for Peace, and the Costa Rican countryside by bus. Malloy and Taylor met scholars of Latin America and church leaders, including the Costa Rican Archbishop.

Malloy and Taylor visited Poas Volcano, a coffee-growing area, and the Pacific coast, a poorer region.

At a Salvadorian refugee camp, they were told what services were provided and why they were necessary. Mainly composed of agricultural workers, the camp sheltered a woman and her three children.

The University of Peace, proposed by the United Nations in 1979, is more like an institute of "think tanks," said Malloy. Taylor called the University an "ideal" and a "grand concept" in a peaceful country surrounded by war.

There were no students, no dorms, and no libraries.

Malloy said it is too early to consider a joint program between Notre Dame and the University of Peace. This Costa Rican university had offered one five-week program, a "field laboratory" where students lived with Costa Rican families.

The University needs one person to implement specific programs for any future joint programs with other

Malloy stated that the University of Peace needs to "define their purpose. They need respectable academic types to focus their energies." The University needs a faculty and better facilities, and "then (the University of Peace) should snowball."

Receiving no financial support from the United Nations, the University is subject to a UN governing board. This board is composed of four UN officials, two Costa Ricans, and ten others, two from each of the five UN zones. One American, Columbia University professor, Betty Reardon is a member.

The University of Peace relies financially on independent sources, such as a large Japan sponsor, and those from Europe, North and South America.

Rodrigo Carazo, former Costa Rican President from 1978-82, is now the University's president. The driving force behind the University, Carazo possesses a world reputation and represents Costa Rica's liberal segment.

Besides Carazo, is faculty member Murray Silberman, who was first appointed by President John Kennedy to the Latin American region. One priest is always on staff, along with two volunteers.

This center to study peace is built on "very attractive grounds, among nature." commented Father Mallov. 20 miles out of San Jose, the University of Peace has approximately 750 acres, with 500 of those being an ecological preserve. A wealthy Costa Rican donated the land.

Costa Rica is "not a typical country, not for an illustrated account" on the Latin American situation, said Taylor. An unarmed democracy, Costa Rica has little poverty and a smaller degree of class separation - a land much unlike the other "oppressive olgarchies" of Latin America, said Taylor.

With only a police force, Costa Rica has neither conflicts nor violence. A small minority does want arms to defend the country, but the government has always relied on the Costa Rican tradition of strong stability, Carazo feels the United States is pressuring Costa Rica to have a military.

Concerning the Latin American poor, "the Catholic Church used to say it was God's will." stated Taylor. But now the Clergy may hold three different views: work through the system, supply more guns, or actively work against the "inequality and injustice" of the poor in what is termed "prejudice for the poor."

Instead of investing in a military or industry, Costa Rica "invested in the future," said Taylor, by putting money into hospitals, roads, and education. When universal grade school was implemented after the 1948 take-over, people initially did not agree since then their children could not work in the fields. Costa Rica has a 90 percent literacy rate.

The Costa Ricans' "biggest resentment is against the economic situation," stated Taylor.

The cost of oil is up and the cost of coffee, its biggest export, is down. With a huge debt to the International Monetary Fund, Costa Rica is getting into a "bigger and bigger hole" like all Latin America, said Taylor. They are "treading this line" between providing for the citizens and being responsive to the bankers.

Costa Rica's industries include coffee, bananas, sugar cane, fishing, and tourism. This Latin democracy has very little natural resourses. Commented Taylor, "as long as there's war, no one will invest.'

Employment is down, but Costa Rica is "not in as desperate shape" as one might imagine a Central American country. Said Taylor, "It's sort of like the U.S. in the 30's, except that it is always warm there.

The Center for Social Concerns wants more "awareness" in each college, said Taylor. Attending the San Jose peace seminar will indirectly effect the engineering department when discussing professional con-

Because Malloy was in Costa Rica, he saw the whole Latin American situation but was in "no danger at all." Said Malloy, "my prime reason was just to learn what the University of Peace is doing." Malloy has visited Latin America many times, but he had never traved in Central America. Despite "severe economic problems" and that the people are "killing each other," Malloy holds hope for Central America.

Taylor sums the seminar by giving Carazo and the University of Peace's position: Stop United States aid. 'They think it ferments the situation more than supressing it. If you give people guns, they will shoot."

Land reform is absolutely necessary said Taylor. "You just can't chop up all the farmland and expect everything to work out for the

Equipment company settles with workers

CHICAGO International Harvester Co. and the United Auto Workers union reached a tentative contract agreement last night, ending a walkout by more than 11,000 workers that had begun less than 48 hours before, a company spokesman

Workers were to return to the job immediately, said Harvester spokesman Bill Greenhill in a statement announcing the proposed three-year contract. He said no further details were available on the pact.

The strike began at midnight Friday, with the union saying it was seeking restoration of benefits it conceded to the ailing farm equipment giant in 1982.

"Normal scheduled operations are expected to resume immediately at all UAW-represented IH facilities, including manufacturing parts-distribution and centers," said Greenhill.

'The company has been informed that the UAW's Harvester Council will meet tomorrow to review the tentative agreement and to make its recommendations to the UAW membership," he said.

Ratification meetings at the 23 UAW local unions included in the negotiations will be held later in the week, the Harvester statement said. It said no details of the tentative agreement would be released until the ratification process was com-mutual agreement, the Harvester statement said.

The weekend strike was the first work stoppage against International Harvester since a 5%-month strike in the winter of 1979-80.

The 1979-80 strike, coupled with a depressed farm equipment market, caused huge losses for the company and it took drastic steps to stay afloat, including consolidation of operations, huge layoffs, and the benefits concessions.

"What we are asking is not at all unreasonable," said Larry Terry, a spokesman for UAW local 98 in Indianapolis. "We stepped forward when they needed concessions, and now we'd like them back."

The company hasn't posted an annual profit since 1979 and does not expect an improvement in the depressed farm-equipment business for at least the next five years, International Harvester chairman Donald Lennox said last October.

The strike involved plants at East Moline, Rock Island and Melrose Park in Illinois; Indianapolis; Springfield, Ohio; Memphis, Tenn.; and Louisville, Ky. It also affects distribution centers in Georgia, Tennessee, Texas, Indiana Minnesota and an International Harvester engineering center in Harvester facilities not affected by the strike included a plant in Waukesha, Wis., and parts distribution centers in California, Kansas City, Kan., and Baltimore.

Riding the drunken driving bandwagon

During the rather frequent and lengthy periods of free time during break, I watched quite a bit of television. Normally, it would be the programs catching one's attention, but this Christmas the trend seemed to be toward drunken driving commercials. Every single time the set was turned on, my family saw no less than five such commercials per hour. Granted, there is growing support for the

What is more, everyone seems to be jumping on the bandwagon. Senators, policemen, grocery store clerks, and my grandmother. Again, this is fine, but why these people and why now? It is all very well and good to be concerned about drunken driving, provided that one has the right intentions. This problem has always existed in our society. There has always been laws against it. Why should everyone realize now that drunken driving is a problem? Is it just a fad? Is it just a means to ride public sympathy into an elected office? Sadly, no one has really shown me otherwise.

Do not misunderstand. In no way, shape or form am I an advocate of drunken driving, but I would like to see genuine progress rather than just stricter laws. It worries me when I see someone arrested for selling liquor to a minor during a sting operation. Such tactics seem to do little more than create crime, and lege of Arts and Letters Honors Program and when police officers are used in connection is a regular Viewpoint columnist.

with the operation it creates a void in the normal law enforcement of the community. What would happen if a bank were being robbed at the same time? I also worry about the recent court cases in which hosts can be sued for providing alcohol to their guests. I can just picture some housewife spooning gin into the unwilling mouth of her husband's best friend.

When will we learn from the past? Prohibition failed years ago. Its skeleton will have little more success. Arrests do not change public opinion. They do not shape society. What the anti-drunken driving advocates have created is a reign of fear. No one can trust another for fear of attack. The entire atmosphere has become a game. Drink. Get drunk. Drive home drunk. Do not get caught. Whoops! Go to jail. Do not pass go. Do not collect $200.

If, indeed, the commercials are serious, then they will try to stop this farce. Change the attitude of society by changing the people from within. Teach that it is fine to drink, but that there are other ways of getting home than driving drunk. Only then can we achieve a so-

Is such a solution likely? I wonder, especially in the case of minors. More often than not, parents are aware their children drink but are willing to overlook this as long as the kids are home in bed by morning. I shudder to think what would happen to most people if they called their parents to say that they had too much to drink and were staying over at a friend's home. Why? It is all part of the unwritten set of rules we pass from generation to generation, rules we seem to value above life itself. Indeed, in the case of drunken driving, we just may pay that price.

world Citizens such as Mohandas Ghandi, Ralphe Bunche, Dag Hammerskjold, Bishop Desmond Tutu, and Martin Luther King Jr.

It is no accident that both Rev. King and Ghandi have been recipients of this distinction. King publicily credited the teachings of Ghandi as having been very influential upon his American brand of non-violent civil disobedience. When Montgomery, policemen took Rosa Parks from a public bus for refusing to move to the back, King responded with a peaceful bus boycott. After the brutal 1964 murder of three civil rights workers in Mississippi, King asked for additional volunteers for the struggle, and when the city of Birmingham was on the brink of race riots after the bombing of a black Baptist Black Studies Program at Notre Dame.

Trying to ensure equality of treatment for church which took the lives of four young black girls attending Sunday school, King persuaded the city to pray.

The campaign at Selma, more than any other event, gave birth to the Voting Rights Act of 1965. By attracting to his movement racial slurs and violence, Americans were forced to recognize just how morally corrupt they could be. But more significantly, by using civil disobedience so effectively at Selma in 1964, King also demonstrated our potential, as a nation, for peaceful change. Brilliantly employing his Ghandian philosophy of nonviolence, King presented the American people with portraits of both our worst and best selves. Martin Luther King, Jr. knew us better than ourselves. And despite those battles left unfinished, no one doubts the lasting impact of a Civil Rights movement that was led by the Atlanta-born son of a school teacher and Baptist minister.

At a time when peace is so rare a commodity for so many people in the world, we remember King because he demonstrated, even when faced with the toughest odds, that peaceful change is possible. In the face of sometimes overwhelming evidence to the contrary, we remember King because he found in his religious faith, a weapon more potent than any his enemies could summon to deter him. We remember King because in a nuclear age, we are left with little choice but to believe and to dedicate ourselves to the memory of a man whose life and teaching were so demonstrative of the power of love.

Astounded by Father Hesburgh's position

During the Civil Rights movement, Father Hesburgh supported only that law which gave all blacks the civil right to vote, but now he would support a law that would give only some unborn babies the civil right to life. Prohibition of abortion during the last three months of pregnancy would save slightly over 12,000 babies annually, but 1,488,000 would still be killed by abortion.

We in the pro-life movement who were taught by Father Hesburgh are astounded by his position and theory of relative civil and moral values. The civil right to life for all unborn deserves the support Father Hesburgh gave to civil rights for all blacks. There was no consensus for black rights then and it took violence, federal troops, federal marshalls and federal court injunctions to enforce this unpopular law. It was enforced because it was morally right, not because it was popular.

Belli's intentions in India are repugnant

Dear Editor:

It is a shame that many thousands of Indian people had to be the victims of a major industrial accident. We can imagine the agony and grief felt by those affected and we sympathize with them.

Clearly, the Union Carbide Corporation is at fault here, and must provide compensation to those affected by this unfortunate accident. Yet, is it not more unfortunate that one San Francisco attorney is trying to capitalize on the misfortune of these victims? Why should one American attorney have the right to appoint himself representative for all of the casualties. What interest, other than profit, does Melvin Belli hold in India or the Indian people? It is clear to us that Belli is merely a glorified ambulance chaser, rushing to the scene of an accident, looking for a lawsuit. Melvin Belli does not belong in India.

Leave the defense of the Indian people to the Indian attorneys. It is our belief that Belli's primary interest is the percentage which he will receive after a settlement has been made. The thought of this sickens us. We can only hope that we are wrong, and that Melvin Belli does have a conscience. But until we find out the truth, our prayers are with the Indian

Thanks to you, it works . . . for me

Marc Ramirez

E very so often it becomes necessary for a person to completely lignore the protests of his dignity, and his pride, and his self-esteem, in order to rectify situations which are utterly more important. This is one of those times.

I know what you're going to tell me. You're gonna say, well, sure this may be a disastrous situation, but it'll only hurt you in the short run, you know. But since my life is a whole series of short runs, it often is a whole series of disasters.

This isn't just a case of my car breaking down — no, I've already had my disaster there. I don't have a car. And it's not something trivial like not being able to get into anywhere but the Commons. I mean, I'll be 21 in less than two weeks, but it won't matter because I have no ID whatsoever; no Notre Dame mug shot, no major bank card, no driver's license, no Playboy Club member's card, and no International Scrabble Players Association identification card. Some cruel, heartless thug ran off with my wallet over Christmas break and I haven't gotten around to sniffing him out of the woodwork and thrashing him yet. But that's not what's bugging me.

No, this is different. I need money, and I need it bad.
I've tried everything. Could MARC RAMIREZ of 301 HOWARD
HALL be the winner of TEN MILLION DOLLARS? I don't know, but I mailed my chance to win to Ed McMahon. Working at the dining hall just isn't something a second-semester senior is willing to undertake. And there's only so much you can borrow, so now even the Morrissey Loan Fund is after me, not to mention Texaco, Sears, the Columbia Record and Tape Club, and what few friends I have left.

Don't ask me how this happened. The phone calls and the credit cards and the Christmas gifts just all caught up with me this time. I've thought of pawning my watch or selling my memoirs, but there are no takers.

I called home and asked for a few dollars, but you know how it is when you've got seven dogs and a cat and two fish and the Malibu is guzzling gas and all that heat is seeping quietly out through the cracks under the door. And my rich uncle has yet to introduce himself to me.

I thought of sending out chain letters threatening people with violent deaths unless they sent me my needed funds and then sent the letters on their way again, but no one takes those seriously, and besides, I can't afford the postage.

And I thought of taking a huge sign to the DePaul game and waving it on national TV, but the cameras never focus on the section I sit in, and even if they did the guys two rows down would always be in the way. Not to mention those yellow pom-poms and Tim Kempton's

But I just couldn't bring myself to do any of that stuff.

However, it's time for me to swallow my pride, and not in the name of love. It's time for the Hail Mary pass. So everybody go out, and I'll throw it long, and somebody catch it, and everything'll be all right, OK? I'm going to do something that, to my knowledge, has only been attempted once before on a major scale. Yes, you guessed it, I'm going to imitate my idol and yours, John Z. DeLorean.

I'm not shy. I'm broke. I need your money, and I need it now. Obviously I have been through numerous rough times, and my confidence stands on shaky ground. I have fallen from the ranks of the mighty, and if you've ever fallen from the ranks of the mighty, you know how much it hurts.

I'm not picky. I'll take anything. I will accept any contribution, no matter how small. Those of you with lots of credit cards can loan your extra ones to me for short periods of time. A few dollars, a few cents — I don't care.

You're open to ideas, I'm sure, so I took the liberty of coming up with a few. Write home and have your relatives send me money. Or the family dog. Be sure to describe me as a wonderful lad who will write every week and is willing to give up his first fathered child as interest. Or look at this as a possible tax ememption. I offer you the opportunity to offer me, tax-free, millions of your hard-earned dollars in the form of donations and gifts, which you can then count off on your tax return at the end of the year.

Checks are accepted. I especially like the ones with the pretty pictures on them, like wildlife scenes, or DeGrazia paintings, or famous American monuments and national parks. If you are afraid of sending money through the mail, don't hesistate to come by my room, any hour of the day or night. No sizable donations will be refused.

Otherwise, send your contributions to me, c/o The Observer, P.O. Box Q, Notre Dame, Indiana, 46556. Or send them to my room, 301 Howard. Or send them to a good friend of mine. Send them anywhere, but just get them to me quick.

I understand that I'm asking a lot, but nothing is too much when we're all destined to be friends for life. Send your donations before Jan. 22 and you'll receive your own special copy of these elegant Phoenix Suns 1984-85 schedules that I have scattered about my room. Certain contributors, selected at my discretion, will receive wallet-size glossies of my yearbook picture.

Thank you all so much. And now that I've worked right through dinner, does anyone have a few bucks I can borrow for some food?

An antidote to 'Fate of the Earth'

Amy Stephan

Book review

A rmageddon in Prime Time" by George Bailey is the sort of book Ronald Reagan would love. Bailey writes of the American media's obsession with bad news, depicts Soviet Communism as a failed experiment from which the nation and its citizens may never recover and endorses the Star Wars program.

For those who suffered nightmares upon reading Jonathan Schell's "Fate of the Earth," Bailey's latest effort could be an effective antidote. There are no "what if' scenarios in this book, no graphic descriptions of nuclear warfare or nuclear weapons. Bailey does not intend to scare the reader nor to tell what might happen. Instead he offers his views on current East-West relations and how the media affects these.

Some of Bailey's views border on the absurd. At one point he connects the excessive use of glass in modern architecture to the rise of terrorism. In Chapter 3, he outlines how the the East/West break in the Christian church initiated current confrontation between the United States and the Soviet Union. He also unceremoniously crowns Herman Melville as America's greatest author.

The book is at its best when Bailey addresses directly the role of the media in world relations. In the Soviet Union, he writes, bad news is rigorously suppressed and the papers are filled with euphemisms and slogans. Westerners, however, seem to be addicted to bad news. Good news doesn't sell, and the picture Americans see on their evening news often is grimmer than the world it supposedly reflects.

Although Bailey addresses the effect of the press, advertising and propaganda on both the East and the West, he seems to brush off the first half of the book's title - Armageddon. He writes that the "war scare is a Soviet ploy," and doesn't seem to consider that the nuclear buildup he briefly describes could tead to nuclear holocaust. He states repeatedly that the coming years will usher in some sort of world government, but gives no indication as to how this might come about.

Bailey is a journalist and the book reads like a series of loosely collected editorials. Each short chapter introduces a new topic. In this 200-page book, Bailey discusses the probability of a united Europe, the health conditions in the Soviet Union, the secularization of the American and Soviet governments and the influence of Melville and Dostoevsky on their respective nations.

The reader is deluged by a potpourri of facts and opinions, but is given few connections or explanations. Both the prose and the ideas tend to be disjointed and repetitive. The reader is left wondering what, if anything, all this means.

"Armageddon in Prime Time" has much to offer; Bailey's views on both the Western and the Soviet press are sometimes insightful and the picture he paints of life in the Soviet Union, although somewhat biased, is interesting to a reader not well acquainted with this subject. These bright spots, however, must be filtered from a jumbled mix of fact and opinion.

"Armageddon in Prime Time" by George Bailey is available in paperback from Avon Books for

'Missing'

Daniel Moran features staff writer

The film "Missing" will be shown Monday and Tuesday night at the Engineering Auditorium. Dealing with events surrounding the 1973 Chilean coup, "Missing" won the coveted Grand Prize at the 1982 Cannes Film Festival and was nominated for the Academy Awards for Best Picture, Best Actor, Best Actor, and Best Director.

The film recounts the true life story of Ed Horman's agonizing search for his son, who has dissappeared during the overthrow of the Socialist government of Salvatore Allende. Jack Lemmon, in what some have called the greatest performance of his career, portrays Ed Horman. Sissy Spacek portrays his daughter-in-law who searches along with him.

Admission will be $1.00. Showings will be at 7:00 and 9:15 p.m.

49er faithful celebrate win in S.F. streets

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO - Proud and excited 49er fans mobbed the city's streets last night, screaming, honking horns and pointing "number one" fingers skyward after San Francisco handed the Miami Dolphins a 38-16 Super Bowl XIX defeat.

In the North Beach area just off downtown, a gleeful Mary Jane Gohde announced, "The 49ers were great and this calls for a massive consumption of fun and indulgence." Thousands of fans followed her wishes.

Amidst a hail of confetti, celebrant Tom Fitz said the game, where the 49ers won almost everything from the opening coin flip to the last touchdown, brought the whole area together.

"Here is an example of perfect strangers partying, just getting together and having a good time and celebrating the Super Bowl championship," Fitz said.

Traffic in the neighborhood was jammed bumper to bumper and convertible tops were down in the cool, foggy night while cruising revelers shouted "We're No. 1!"

Officer Carri Lucas, a spokeswoman for San Francisco police, said most celebrants were peaceful.

"Everything's fine so far," she said about 30 minutes after the game.

About 90 minutes after yester-day's game, just five arrests were reported.

San Francisco rolls over Dolphins, 38-16, in lopsided Super Bowl win

STANFORD, Calif. - Joe Montana, making a shambles of the quarterback showdown with Dan Marino, shattered the Miami Dolphins' defense with his passing and scrambling and led the San Francisco 49ers to a 38-16 victory in Super Bowl XIX vesterday.

Montana passed for three touchdowns, ran for another and set Super Bowl records with 331 yards passing and 59 on scrambles. He kept the 49ers totally in control, leading them to scores on five straight possessions in the second and third quarters to make the Dolphins, who had the National Football League's second-best record at 16-2, look like overmatched losers.

It was the second Super Bowl victory in four years for the 49ers, who finished with an NFL-record 18 victories against one loss.

Montana was voted the game's most valuable player, matching the award he won in San Francisco's 26-20 victory over Cincinnati in Super

He had exemplary help from Coach Bill Walsh's bag-of-tricks offense; from fullback Roger Craig, who caught two TD tosses and ran for a record third score, and from a defense whose pressure on Marino exceeded anything a Dolphin opponent had been able to do in this record-breaking season.

Marino was intercepted twice and sacked four times. In two NFL seasons, Marino had not been sacked more than three times in a game; he had been dumped only 13 times in

Montana scrambles, passes his way into 'Super' history

18 games this season and not at all in against Marino in a season in which two playoff games.

The game was portrayed as a dream contest between the NFL's two best teams, but the 49ers were clearly better.

And for this day at least, so was Walsh in his "genius" match with Miami's Don Shula.

In fact, the game was competitive only in the first period.

Miami took a 3-0 lead on the first of three field goals by Uwe von Schamann, lost it on a 33-yard TD pass from Montana to reserve running back Carl Monroe, then got it back again on a brilliantly executed six-play, 70-yard drive engineered by Marino.

But that 10-7 first quarter lead lasted only until Montana got the ball back. By halftime it was 28-16. by midway through the third period 38-16. That was fine with most of the 84,059 fans in Stanford Stadium, just 30 miles south of the 49ers' home base at Candlestick Park.

But there were other heroes besides Montana.

His offensive line allowed him to be sacked only once and more often than not, he could have been in a rocking chair, looking around for receivers. When there were no receivers open, he simply took off.

The 49er defense, meanwhile, did what few teams could this season he shattered NFL records with 48 touchdown passes and 5,084 yards.

With few exceptions - once on that first-quarter drive in which the Dolphins operated twice without a huddle to keep San Francisco from running its multiple defenses -Marino was forced to dump off rather than throw his customary deep patterns to the Marks Brothers, Clayton and Duper.

Much of the credit went to a secondary that forced Marino out of his quick-release rhythm and forced him to hold the ball a second longer as Fred Dean, Dwaine Board and the rest of the defense poured in on him.

For the 49ers, it was also a victory for balanced offense.

San Franciso picked up 211 yards on the ground, with Wendell Tyler leading the way with 65 yards in 13 carries and Craig adding 58 on 15 runs. The Dolphins, meanwhile, could pick up only 25 against a 49er defense that gave up only one touchdown in three playoff games.

Montana's 59 yards on five rushes broke the record of 37 set in Super Bowl XIII by Dallas' Roger Staubach and his 331 yards, on 24-of-35 passing, broke the record of 318 set by Pittsburgh's Terry Bradshaw in Super Bowl XIV.

Marino finished with 318 yards on 29 of 50.

We just didn't do that.

"We missed too many foul shots, and that was the difference between this game and the Marquette game. We did what we wanted to do, getting the ball inside, and getting the fouls. But where we shot 88 percent from the line last week, we didn't do that this week. We had our shots, but we didn't hit. That was the problem. I think we did a good job defensively."

Rivers finished with a game-high 21 points, including 9-of-10 free throw shooting, and was the major reason Notre Dame was able to stay Barlow had 12 points and six rebounds, but neither had the kind of game that was needed to give the Irish a victory.

For DePaul, Corbin was stopped in the second half, and finished with 18 points, on 9-of-14 shooting, and six rebounds. The senior forward was named the winner of Notre Dame's Wendall Smith award as the outstanding player of the game. The award is named for the late Chicago sportswriter who died in 1972.

Dallas Comegys added 12 points, all in the second half, while Kenny Patterson hit five of seven free throws in the second half to finish with 11. Kevin Holmes added 10 oints and six rebounds for the Blue

Notre Dame drops eighth straight at Forester Classic during weekend

By ED DOMANSKY Sports Writer

LAKE FOREST, Ill. - The Notre Dame hockey team was here in Lake Forest this weekend hoping to rediscover what it takes to get back on a winning path.

The Forester Classic was the event, and unfortunately, the Irish gained little in meeting their goal. Notre Dame dropped a 9-6 decision to Bowdoin College in the first round of the two-day tourney. The Irish then bowed, 5-2, to host Lake Forest in Saturday's consolation game.

Notre Dame (5-13) recently finished fourth in the Phoenix Mutual Hockey Classic in Hartford, Conn., over Christmas break and was looking to finish much better in the Lake Forest event.

"I really thought we could have taken it," said Irish coach Lefty Smith. "But at times we didn't pass well and we didn't convert on scoring chances that we had."

The Irish remain winless in 10 tries away from the ACC and have now lost eight straight games.

Notre Dame played Saturday without the services of co-captain Brent Chapman, Steve Whitmore and Rob Ricci. All three had to miss the game as a result of a fighting incident in Friday's third period which started when Whitmore was speared by a Bowdoin player in a crowd behind the Irish net.

Chapman and Ricci will also miss Wednesday night's rematch with Lake Forest at the ACC due to previous game disqualification penalties.

Notre Dame goalies Marc Guay and Tim Lukenda turned away 31 and 36 shots against the Polar Bears and Foresters respectively.

Mike McNeill led Irish scorers on Friday night with two goals. Bob Thebeau and Tom Mooney tallied for Notre Dame in the 5-2 loss.

Bowdoin scored three times in the last 2:33, including an empty-net goal, to break a 6-6 deadlock in route to its victory.

John Nickodemus got the Irish on the board just 2:07 into the game. But by the first intermission, the Polar Bears had taken a 3-2 lead.

Chapman scored at 13:52 of the same period as he knocked home a loose puck from a crowd in front of Bowdoin goalie Frank Doyle to tie the score at 2-2

Jim Wixtead then converted for the first of his three goals on the night at 16:08 to give the Polar Bears the 3-2 lead.

After a Bowdoin powerplay goal by Hilary Rockett at 3:19 of the against UCLA, on Dec. 11, 1979, with Bill Hanzlik and Rich Branning leading the way down the aisles of the student section. The Irish won that game, 77-74.

Even though we lost this one, however, that doesn't mean that he won't bother about the fans anymore. Phelps has learned over the years how important the students' support can be. He has seen what happened to the football team when the students sat back and wanted the team to prove itself worthy of their support.

Wednesday night the basketball team will be back in the ACC for another important game. Phelps may or may not try some gimmicks to fire up the crowd, but one thing is sure: the fans have the ability to make the ACC a very scary place for opponents. It will be a shame if the student body doesn't play up to its potential.

second period, the Irish scored two beat Lukenda for the first of three powerplay goals of their own to tie the score at 4-4 at the end of the second period

A Thebeau slapshot from the right point made it 4-3 at 6:26. McNeill then capitalized on some nice passes from Thebeau and Tim Reilly to slip the puck past Doyle from the corner of the crease.

Notre Dame nearly scored two more times in the period, but Doyle got help from the post at 12:10 and 17:27 after shots by Chapman and Thebeau had eluded his grasp.

After Bowdoin jumped out to a 6-4 lead before the midway point of the final period, McNeill and Reilly tallied within 1:27 starting at 11:52 to tie the score at 6-6.

The Polar Bears got the first of their final three goals at 17:27.

In Saturday's consolation game, neither team was able to capitalize in the fast-paced, close-checking opening period.

The game remained scoreless until the 11:37 mark of the second period when Lake Forest's Ken Spencer Forester goals in the second period.

'We played well, considering we were missing three of our key people," said winger Rich Sobilo. "The loss of Dave (Waldbillig) also hurt. But the game was closer than the score indicates."

The best Notre Dame scoring chance of the second period came at when Nickodemus stopped on a breakaway by Forester goalie Gary Willett.

Thebeau and Mooney made it 3-2 with goals at 4:42 and 9:47 of the final period.

But two Lake Forest goals by Marty Wittmer at 10:58 and 16:16 helped secure the victory for the Foresters

The Irish fell victim to the post three times in the third period. Nickodemus found the metal 1:30 into the period. McNeill then hit the post near the midway point. Reilly found himself with a nearly empty net behind an outstretched Willett with 7:40 remaining, but again the post saved Willett.

Junior co-captain Bob Thebeau scored, along with freshman Tom Mooney, in last Friday's contest against Bowdoin College, but it was not enough as the Irish fell, 5-2, on the first day of the Forester Classic in Lake Forest, Ill. Ed Domansky profiles the weekend's action at left.

hind by seven at the half (40-33) and never could get closer than five the rest of the way.

"Breaking the press - that was the key," explained Bruce. "We told the kids that if we could execute our half-court offense, we'd be in good shape. Detroit doesn't like playing defense for more than 10 seconds, and they really got frustrated when we made them.'

Once Notre Dame forced the Titans to play at its tempo, the Irish began to pass the ball inside to take advantage of their superior height. Forward Mary Beth Schueth scored four early points on layups and center Carrie Bates added three of her own to help the Irish offset some good shooting by the Titans. Detroit was able to move out in front, 12-11, when Cassandra Pack, averaging 19 points a game, hit a layup for her third and fourth points of the game.

It was at this point, though, that the game became all Notre Dame's. When senior guard Laura Dougherty swished a 15-foot jumper with 13:11 remaining in the half, the Irish took the lead for good at 13-12.

Seconds later, freshman forward Sandy Botham entered the game. A starter during the first several games this year, the 6-2 Botham had moved to the bench as her performance dropped off slightly. Against the Titans, though, she proved that she can contribute to the Notre Dame cause in a big way. In less than 10 minutes in the first half, she dominated the boards on both ends of the court, scoring 12 points and pulling down seven rebounds. Her performance boosted the Irish to a 35-24 lead.

Detroit fought back when Botham sat down, however, and closed the lead to 35-31 with 1:23 left in the half. That was as close as the Titans would get.

Botham picked right up where she left off before she went out, scoring nine more points and picking up seven more rebounds to finish with 21 points and 14 rebounds, both career highs.

"That's the most aggressive she's played all year," said Bruce. "She started out real well this season, then kind of slumped off. She probably just tried to do too many things. But she's been playing better in practice, so it doesn't surprise me that she played so well."

With Botham making her presence felt so much, and with Bates, Schueth and Trena Keys also scoring in double figures, the Titans never had a chance. Pack, who had picked up three quick fouls in the first half, fouled out with only four points and four rebounds. Although Titan guard Regina Pierce led all scorers with 26 points, Detroit never was closer than nine during the final 10 minutes of the game.

"This was really a big win for us," said Bruce, who saw the Irish improve their record to 8-6 1-0 in the North Star. "Supposedly, they were the preseason pick to win the conference, but we beat them by 14 in their own gym.

'We'll have to build off this game. Now the girls can see what happens when they are patient and control the tempo.'

IRISH ITEMS - Notre Dame will not have much time to enjoy the win, though, as it will continue its conference play next weekend with games in Chicago against Loyola (Friday) and DePaul (Sunday).

The Notre Dame game plan worked to near-perfection Saturday, as senior center Carrie Bates and the Irish women upset Detroit, 76-62, this weekend in Caliban Hall. The Irish completely controlled the tempo, with freshman Sandy Botham leading the way with a career-highs 21 points and 14 rebounds. Mike Sullivan details the game on page 16.

The Irish indoor track team may have lost on Saturday, 74-57, to the Iowa Hawkeyes, but it was not without its great moments. Notre Dame jumpers swept all three places in the triple jump, and junior

Belles fall to 2-9 after 69-51 defeat

By KELLY PORTOLESE
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's basketball team lost to fellow NAIA conference member Franklin College Saturday afternoon, 69-51, at the Angela Athletic Facility in the Belles' first home game in almost two months. Saint Mary's' record now stands at 2-9 after a split at the National Catholic Basketball Tournament in Dubuque, Ia. and a loss to Manchester over the semester break.

"They just beat us on the boards and had better execution," said Head Coach Marvin Wood after the Franklin contest. "We hope to turn things around and bounce back."

The Belles stayed with their opponents throughout the first half. Freshman forward Donna Wolf entered the line-up 10 minutes into the game and hit her first three shots while sophomore guard Kris Pantelleria followed suit with a layup to pull the Belles within a basket - 15-

Saint Mary's went to the locker room with a slim 28-27 halftime edge.

Early in the second half, however, Franklin outscored its hosts, 11-2, and the Belles were forced to play catch-up ball the rest of the way, never regaining the momentum.

Wolf finished with 14 points on 7-of-10 shooting from the field. Freshman guard Tammye Radke paced the Belles with 12 points along with six assists. Pantelleria, senior forward Elaine Suess and freshman center Stephanie Duke added six points apiece to aid in the Belles' cause. Senior center Betsy Ebert led Saint Mary's in the rebounding category with five.

Last Tuesday the Belles traveled to North Manchester, In. where according to Wood, the Belles played "a sluggish game." Manchester earned a 64-54 triumph by capitalizing on Saint Mary's' poor free throw shooting coupled with 27 Belle turnovers.

pull the Belles within a basket 15-13. The score then seesawed before bigger than we were and they just beat us at the line," commented Wood.

On Jan. 10-11 Saint Mary's participated in the National Catholic Tourney.

Saint Mary's opened up against a Georgian Court team of New Jersey, who finished third in the tourney last year. The Belles played well and cashed in on 14 of 15 free throw attempts. But it was not enough as the Georgian Court, which featured an all-American, took advantage of the Belles lack of height and simply overpowered the Belles on the boards.

Saint Mary's' opponent the following day was Rosary College of Illinois. After leading, 46-23, at the half, the Belles went on to bury Rosary, 80-51

Irish indoor track team shows promise in meet

By NICK SCHRANTZ
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame indoor track team showed great promise in several events, especially the jumping events and middle length dashes, but weaknesses in other areas allowed the visiting University of lowa Hawkeyes to defeat the Irish, 74-57, Saturday at the ACC.

In the three jumping events (long jump, high jump, and triple jump) the Irish garnered 21 out of 30 possible points and captured first place in all of the events. Notre Dame jumpers swept all three places in the triple jump and also took first and third in the long jump.

Senior co-captain James Patterson won both the long jump and triple jump, as well as demonstrating his versatility by also competing in the high jump and the 60-yard high hurdles. He triple jumped 48 feet, six and three-fourth inches, only a half inch away from the meet record, and leapt 24 feet, six and three-fourth inches in the long jump.

The outstanding individual effort of the meet was turned in by junior high jumper Lloyd Constable. Constable won the high jump with a leap of 7-2, which was a new meet, ACC, and Notre Dame record. He won the meet with his jump of 6-10, and then proceeded to clear the bar at 7-0 and 7-2, which broke his own Notre Dame record of 7-0 set in 1982. Constable barely failed in his three attempts at seven feet, three and one-half inches, which is the NCAA qualifying height.

Van Pearcy had an excellent day in winning both the 300- and 440-yard dashes. He led the field in the 440-yard dash the whole way and won in a time of 48.97. He later captured the 300-yard dash in a time of 31.38, good for seventh place on the all-time Notre Dame list.

Two other Irish competitors scored in two events. Mitch Van Eyken placed third in the 440-yard dash and second in the 300-yard dash. Also, Joel Autry finished third in both the long jump and the triple jump

After the meet Irish head coach Joe Piane was disappointed with the loss, but was pleased with several of his performers.

"James Patterson and Lloyd Constable did terrific in the field events, while Van Pearcy had the best performance on the track," Piane said. "Chris Matteo (pole vault), Tony Ragunas (60-yard dash), Paul Duvair (880-yard run), Dan Garrett (two-mile run), Mitch Van Eyken, and Dan Shannon (600-yard dash) all did nice, respectable jobs for us."

The two biggest surprises for the Irish were the performances of freshmen Duvair and Ragunas. Duvair barely nudged ahead of teammate John McNelis to capture second place in the 880-yard run with a time of 1:58.05. Ragunas sprinted to a time of 6.58 in the 60-yard dash, good enough for second place.

The Hawkeyes were strong in the shot put and 60-yard high hurdles (in which they swept all three scoring places), the pole vault, 60-yard dash, and 1000-yard run. Iowa also won the 600-yard dash, 800-yard run, two-mile run, and the mile relay. The Hawkeyes opened up an early lead and then held on to win by their 17-point margin.

Gary Kostrubala of Iowa set a meet record by winning the shot put with a toss of 55-10. Other fine Hawkeye performances were turned in by Dan Waters, who won the mile run and finished second in the 1000-yard run; Ronnie McCoy, who tied for the win in the 60-yard high hurdles, finished second in the long jump, and was on the victorious mile relay team; and Pat McGhee, who won the 600-yard dash, took third in the 60-yard high hurdles, and anchored the mile relay team.

There will be a mandatory meeting for all Saint Mary's reporters, Tuesday, January 22 at 6:30 at The Observer's SMC office - 3rd floor Haggar College Center. All students interested in working for The Observer should attend.

Corbin leads DePaul in 71-66 victory over Irish

Sophomore Scott Hicks had a bad shooting day yesterday against 10th-ranked DePaul, going only three-of-10 from the field, but he was not alone - as a team the Irish shot only 40 percent for the game as the Blue Demons pulled out a 71-66 triumph at the ACC.

Take advantage of the Detroit

Very rarely does a game plan work exactly as it is supposed to, but it does happen every now and then. One of those times was Saturday when the Irish played a near-perfect game to beat Detroit, 76-62, and start out their conference schedule on the right foot.

"I think this was our best overall performance of the year," said Assistant Coach Greg Bruce who is in his first year on Mary DiStanislao's staff. "The low number of turnovers, our dominance on the boards, our good field-goal percentage and our tough team defense everything really went well."

It was no secret that the Titans were going to try to turn the game into a track meet. Detroit coach Dewayne Jones had built the program around some smaller, quicker players who took advantage of their speed to force a large number of turnovers. The strategy had worked against the Irish last year in Detroit when the Titans had forced a highscoring game that saw Detroit beat Notre Dame, 85-80.

In Saturday's game, however, the Irish never let the Titans get control of the tempo. They handled Detroit's press easily - so easily, in men's basketball team knew exactly fact, that Jones finally decided to what it had to do when it took on pull his team back into a zone defense. Rivers' 21 in vain as Irish fail in bid to upset 10th-ranked Blue Demons on home court

By LARRY BURKE Sports Writer

At a press conference last Thursday, Irish coach Digger Phelps reasoned that his team would have a legitimate chance of upsetting 10thranked DePaul if the score remained in the 60s and 70s, as opposed to the last meeting between the two teams which finished in the 80s and 90s. As it turned out yesterday, Phelps was right - the Irish had the chance to win; in fact, they had several opportunities to pull out a victory, but things never quite fell into place as DePaul came out on top, 71-66.

The Irish tried everything, from distributing yellow pompons to the fans, to a pre-game entrance through the student section, to new gold uniforms, but came up short on the scoreboard.

The Blue Demons, who had lost three straight road games, were struggling coming into yesterday's game but used the ACC as a place to get things started again.

"The team was starting to pull apart and confidence was eroding," only thing that can build up confidence is a big win on the road. It's been a long time since I could smile after a road game. It's hard to win at the ACC, but our guys showed a lot of poise."

DePaul, 12-3, got the big win they needed at Notre Dame's expense, but it didn't come easy. The Blue Demons put Notre Dame in in a big hole early, going up, 23-10, in the first nine minutes, but the Irish battled back to within two, 33-31, on two Donald Royal free throws with 2:32 left in the half. DePaul led, 37-33, at intermission, on the strength of Tyrone Corbin's 16 first-

The Irish kept battling in the second half and finally took the lead, 48-47, midway through the half on a pair of David Rivers free throws. Rivers hit two more free throws a minute later to put the Irish up by three, but Corbin's 18-footer got DePaul going again. The lead then changed hands three more times before Marty Embry hit a tip-in with six minutes left to put DePaul ahead said DePaul coach Joey Meyer. "The to stay, 55-54. Notre Dame had several opportunities to go back on top, but couldn't convert.

Overall, the Irish were hurt by poor free throw shooting in the second half (11 of 17 from the line), inconsistent field shooting all afternoon (40 percent), and lack of rebounding (DePaul had 12 more boards than Notre Dame).

"I think we had plenty of opportunities to win the game," said Phelps. "Especially when we went up by three. And we had plenty of opportunities when we were behind, but we missed a lot of foul shots. But I think DePaul is a very talented team and did a lot of good things that they had to do under pressure. We had spurts to get them but we didn't, especially in the first half when we got back to within four, and also in the second half. I can't be upset with that. The only thing I'm upset with is the missed foul shots and when we had key scoring opportunities and didn't come through. That's something you have to do in big games.

Notre Dame's loss is a disappointment, but there's plenty of basketball left to be played

By PHIL WOLF Assistant Sports Editor

It had all the makings of a great game. Notre Dame, unranked, was going up against a Top 10 team at the ACC. There have been situations like that before, and several big teams have been upset.

After a close victory at Marquette last week, the Irish took advantage of a chance to build up their confidence against Holy Cross on Wednesday. They were ready to play the big boys. They were ready to make another upset happen.

The students were ready, too. All week, they had been looking forward to coming out to be part of the big game. They dressed up in tropical clothes, they made their signs, they yelled, they screamed, they waved their pompons. They did everything they could to help the guys on the court.

But it didn't work. The Top 10 team won, and the thinly clad fans were twice as cold on the way home as they had been on the way to the game. The campus was silent but for the crunch of the dry snow under-

So it wasn't one of those big Notre Dame upsets people have heard so much about. It wasn't one of those unforgettable "Notre Dame Moments." But was the game a total

Sure, the Irish had a good chance to upset the Blue Demons, but the fact is, the better team won yesterday. That fact shouldn't be too hard to swallow. Digger Phelps said he was upset that his team wasn't able to pull off the upset, but he didn't pretend that Notre Dame was the better team.

"DePaul's a very talented team," Phelps pointed out, noting that the Blue Demons performed very well under pressure. "We're just struggling to get to where we should be as far as good enough to play in the NCAA tournament, and you're talking about a team (DePaul) that should be in the Final Four."

Whether or not one agrees with Phelps that DePaul is a Final Four team, it would be hard to argue with his assessment of the Irish. A victory yesterday would have been a great boost for Notre Dame, and it would have improved the team's chances of getting a tournament bid, but the contest was not a "must-win" game for the Irish. Eventually, though, the games will present "must-win" situations. The team will have to get to the point where it is good enough to beat the tough competition if it is to be in the championship tournament.

So yesterday's loss becomes one of those games that coaches like to call "a learning experience." And the lessons the Irish learned from it are not all bad. They learned that they can stay with one of the best teams in the country. They know that they had several opportunities to put the game away, and they know that they worked hard for every chance they had. They also know that there still are 16 games left this season, and there will be other chances to beat some good teams.

Now Digger Phelps and his team have to figure out why they couldn't pull it off yesterday. They have to figure out what they can do differently in future games to come away victorious. They have to make sure they play up to their potential.

One thing Phelps always has had a knack for is getting the crowd fired up. He borrowed Gerry Faust's "come-out-in-green-after-warmingup-in-white trick" for the Indiana game, and he gave it a twist yesterday, when the team also had gold uniforms to wear. He had his players enter the arena through the student section, hoping they might absorb some of the enthusiasm that flooded the ACC. He tried something similar
