Three students believed responsible for assault of ND Security officer

By MARK PANKOWSKI
News Editor

Three Notre Dame students who allegedly assaulted a Security officer and rammed a car into eight parked cars early yesterday morning have been identified by Security and will be referred to Student Affairs, said Security Director Rex Rakow.

An assault on a student and two acts of vandalism also reportedly occurred this weekend.

No criminal charges have been filed against the three students allegedly involved in the officer assault, although charges of assault and battery and malicious destruction of property could potentially be filed, Rakow said.

The officer allegedly assaulted by the students was taken by Security to St. Joseph's Medical Center after the incident, Rakow said. He was released later in the day after being treated for bruises, abrasions and an injured knee.

Approximately eight cars parked in the D-2 parking lot were damaged in the incident, Rakow said.

The names of the three students, which Rakow would not release, will be given to the Office of Student Affairs today, Rakow said.

The students, all male undergraduates, have denied involvement in the incident, Rakow said, but "we think we have enough facts to prove otherwise."

According to Rakow, another officer was assaulted one month ago at the Engineering auditorium. The individual was caught and referred to the University, he said.

Rakow would not say what, if any, punishment the student received. However, he said, "the University looks on assault on any University official, and that includes Security officers, as being serious, and is dealt with very seriously."

The incident yesterday began at approximately 3:30 a.m. when Security received a call about a car running into other parked cars in the D-2 parking lot, Rakow said.

The student who made the call, freshman Andy Gray, said he witnessed the car from his 11th floor Grace Hall room "doing doughnuts . . . and pushing cars around" in the parking lot.

Gray said after two Security guards in separate cars arrived at the parking lot, the reckless car parked and three men appearing intoxicated walked out. They spoke briefly with one of the Security officers and then left, Gray said.

The students walked toward Grace Hall and stopped at a tree, Gray said. According to Rakow, two of the students allegedly climbed the tree, while the other stood at its base.

One of the officers approached the student and apprehended him, Rakow said. The other two students then reportedly assaulted the officer and all three fled, Rakow said.

Security later found the students by using the vehicle registration of the reckless car and identified them by their clothing, Rakow said.

Although Security and the University might not file criminal charges against the students, the officer assaulted still has that right, Rakow said. "But generally we let the University (disciplinary) process take its course," he said.

Several other crime-related incidents also occurred over the weekend.

In an incident occurring early Saturday morning, a male student was assaulted on the first floor of LaFortune Student Center, according to Dave Anzaroot, the LaFortune student manager working at the time.

The student suffered a cut elbow in the attack, said Anzaroot, who helped bandage the student's arm. The student's wallet was stolen, but was left behind apparently because it contained no money, Anzaroot said.

Anzaroot said he believed the student was attacked by two individuals at approximately 12:15 a.m.

In an incident believed to have occurred late Saturday night, a 1983 red BMW parked next to Washington Hall was vandalized. The car's windshield was smashed, the hood was scratched and the air was let out of three of the tires, said Will Neuert, a communications and theater assistant professor and owner of the car.

According to Neuert, Security has found fingerprints, partial handprints, and shoe prints on the car. Security believes that several

Weinberger makes Philippine visit

Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — Defense Secretary Casper Weinberger, yesterday, became the first U.S. cabinet official to visit the Philippines since President Corazon Aquino and rebellious military officers ousted Ferdinand Marcos.

Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and armed forces chief Gen. Fidel Ramos welcomed Weinberger at the Old Manila International Airport at the start of his two-day visit.

Enrile and Ramos led a military revolt that helped drive Marcos from the presidential palace and end his 20 years in power on Feb. 25. Marcos left the Philippines the next day to begin his exile in Honolulu, Hawaii.

U.S. embassy spokesman Allan Croghan declined to say whether Weinberger will discuss a defense aid package for the Philippines or a recent strike in which Filipino workers barricaded the gates of the largest U.S. military outposts overseas.

However, Croghan said the embassy has welcomed Aquino's efforts to reform the Philippine military into a "force that is professional - with professional ethics, good leadership and properly supplied and trained."

Last Tuesday, Aquino dismissed 39 generals and colonels in her first major move to reform a defense force allegedly guilty of widespread corruption and human rights abuses during Marcos' 20-year rule.

During Marcos' final years, the United States repeatedly demanded the retirement of many top military officers. Some U.S. officials said a shakeup in the 250,000-member military would help Manila combat a communist insurgency.

Since Marcos' ouster the Reagan administration has appealed to Congress for an increase in the $100 million in military assistance and $228.5 million in economic assistance approved for the Philippines in 1987.

Assistant Defense Secretary Richard Armitage said in Washington last week, "There is a very high likelihood that we would be increasing in an appropriate way the amount of security assistance" to Manila.

Weinberger's 18-member delegation flew from Tokyo.

Senate gives Clover Awards to Faust, Hurley, Linhart

By JOHN M. COONEY
News Staff

Former head football coach Gerry Faust, injured student Kevin Hurley and student government secretary Margaret Linhart have been selected winners of the Student Senate's annual Irish Clover awards.

"The award goes to the people whom most exemplify the qualities at the University of Notre Dame which are so admired: strength, dedication, love and the traditional Notre Dame fighting spirit," said Bill Healy, former student body president.

Hurley won the student's award, while Linhart and Faust both received administrator's awards.

Hurley, who was injured when struck by a car early last semester, was given the student award because of the great strides he is making in his recovery, said Healy. Hurley's mother said, "Kevin was very excited at receiving the award." She said she attributes much of her son's remarkable recovery to the support of the Notre Dame community.

"If you ever want a statement on the power of prayer, just look at Kevin Hurley," she said.

Hurley, who has been conscious since December, has been "trying hard to be a fighting Irishman," said his mother.

Faust was selected co-winner of the administrator's award, because of "the type of character he displayed while he was at Notre Dame," said Healy.

In a letter to Healy, Faust wrote, "This (award) really means a lot to me and I can't thank you enough for your kindness and this great honor."

Linhart received the award because of her dedication to her job and her love for the students, said Healy. "She goes beyond the call of duty," Healy said.

Linhart has worked as student government secretary for five years.

Linhart said she was honored to receive the award.

"Sometimes you are not aware of how much you are appreciated," she said. "I do my best for them (the students)."

This year marks the second time Linhart has been nominated for the award in the two years the senate has awarded the Irish Clover Awards.

Last year, William Hickey, Director of Food Services and student Doug Wurth won the awards.

This year's winners were chosen from among 20 people nominated by both the senate and cabinet.

The winners will receive a plaque and their names will be placed upon a permanent plaque in the student government offices.

Salt-shaker gag, burnt toast mar dining hall experience

There are a lot of things I like about Notre Dame. None of them spring to mind at the moment, but I'm sure they exist. This is understandable, however, considering that I've just returned from one of the two fine dining establishments of this University - North Dining Hall.

I hate the dining halls. Now Mr. Hickey, don't get hysterical and start flashing your Ivy Award at me. Amazingly enough, it is not the food about which I am complaining. (That was last year's article anyway.) It is instead the ill-mannered boors with whom I share spanikopita.

Everyone knows the scenario. You calmly walk toward the dining hall, to all outward appearances a rational, level-headed individual. However, lurking somewhere deep inside is an animal just waiting to be aroused by the aromatic scents of Italian night.

You enter the dining hall, still assuming the polite facade. Your outward cool begins to break down somewhat when the checkers inform you that your ID needs to be re-magnetized. They are completely unmoved by the various bribes you offer them.

Having gone to the basement of South Dining Hall to get your ID, to once again attest that you do in fact exist, you re-enter the lobby just in time to encounter the 12:15 lunch "line," (a term inaccurately applied to the crushes of humanity which push and elbow their way toward the slop . . . er, the food.)

Once you have actually managed to assemble silverware, napkins, and whichever of the three entrees you find least repulsive, you steal yourself for the next battle - the pop machines.

I have often fantasized about what it would be like to be Tim Kempton or Ken Barlow, who must regard the scuttling crowds jockeying for position below them with a mild sense of contempt as they casually stride through the throng with six easily-filled glasses. As I am one of that throng, however, and since my five-foot frame is not exactly a strategic advantage, I generally emerge from the tangle of arms splashed with Coke and cursing my peers.

My disgruntlement continues through the "meal" (use your imagination) as all sorts of surprises and irritations await. My personal favorite is the old "I-bet-you-thought-that-salt-was-going-to-come-out-of-this-salt-shaker" gag, whose effect is enhanced by the hysterical laughter of my friends as milk tumbles onto my french fries. (I of course, naively expected salt).

Other pet peeves of mine include people who put the peanut butter scoops into the jelly, throw butter pats onto walls from 15 feet away just to see if they stick (they do), steal my bagels from the toaster while I am in search of cream cheese, and stack five trays on top of each other when the conveyor belt is temporarily stalled. (Note their astonishment when the aforementioned trays crash to the floor).

But I really shouldn't exclude myself from the list of etiquette offenders. Even though I am not guilty of any of these crimes, I engage in an ongoing battle with the mechanical devices in the dining hall, which I'm sure causes untold grief to the people unlucky enough to be behind me in line.

The pyromaniac in me emerges as I approach the toaster and casually throw in a hapless piece of bread, which soon becomes an inferno, billowing smoke through the dining hall and defying my frantic efforts to dislodge it from the slot. At this point, I generally slime away, leaving the person behind me to battle the flames unassisted.

Other evidence of my mechanical incompetence is my cluelessness at the cereal dispensers in South Dining Hall, which require a PhD in physics to operate, and the hot chocolate machines in North Dining Hall, which spontaneously continue to spew forth steaming liquid oblivious to the fact that my cup, tray, and all surrounding individuals are covered in it.

Perhaps one day I will master the microwave and control my impatience with the lines and the hassles. But until then I will continue to battle it out three times a day.

Terrorism transforming world into free-fire zone, say experts

Associated Press

LONDON - A wanton war with no rules and little pity is turning the world, bit by bit, into a free-fire zone.

International terrorism is striking in numbing waves. It left at least 926 people dead worldwide in 1985, hundreds more than in any year since the U.S. State Department began compiling statistics in 1968.

So far this year, at least 43 more have died, including five Americans killed in last week's bombings of a TWA jetliner and a West Berlin nightclub.

But terrorism has left another casualty as well: the system of global order, which has been shaken by terrorism assaults that exposed weak spots in international law and the Western alliance, led the United States into military conflict, and made vigilantes out of governments.

A recent series of interviews in the United States, Europe and the Middle East, with security officials and diplomats, scholars and politicians, alleged terrorists and their defenders, found disagreement over how to combat terrorism and even how to define it. But almost all agreed that such "free-form" political violence will spread in the years to come.

"Terrorism is with us now, whether you like it or not. You've got to adjust your way of life to that," said Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist chief, George Churchill-Coleman.

Those interviewed also generally agreed on these other points:

-As governments strengthen defenses of embassies and other official installations, terrorists will become more indiscriminate, attacking "softer" targets like the innocent civilians massacred by Palestinians at Rome and Vienna airports last December.

Terrorists will probably escalate to attacks on computer systems, power grids and other key links of industrial societies.

Terrorist groups often maintain practical ties with each other, but are not joined together in a "grand conspiracy" against the West.

As for defensive strategies, the security experts spoke most often of a need for better intelligence-gathering, particularly from within terror groups, and for closer cooperation among governments.

But many spoke, too, of the need to address the problems that spawn terrorism.

International terrorist incidents, those involving citizens or territory of more than one country, have doubled in number since 1975, to slightly over 800 last year, the State Department reports. Risks International, a U.S. consulting firm that tracks single-country terrorism as well, counted more than 3000 major incidents in 1985.

Last year's TWA hijacking and Achille Lauro "seajacking" were more visible, but 1985's deadliest event was the downing of an Air-India jetliner over the Atlantic, believed to have been the work of Sikh extremist bombers. It killed all 329 aboard.

Terrorism is not new. The French dubbed the 1890s, when anarchists tossed bombs into Parisian cafes, the "Dynamic Decade."

What is new today is terrorism practiced on an international scale, a kind of global guerrilla war that has developed with developing technology.

Jet travel and open borders, particularly in West Europe, enable terrorists to reach far-off targets.

A booming arms trade offers them the latest in compact, relatively cheap weapons in a nuclear age when traditional warfare is too costly. And instant communications, advances in the news media, give their actions a "multiplier effect."

Terrorists' goals can be complex. West European groups, for example, are believed intent on provoking a police repression that will antagonize the public and pave the way for revolution. But, first and foremost, the experts say, terrorists crave attention for their cause. And the causes are proliferating.

The "traditional" groups are well-known: Palestinian militants, Irish Republican Army Provisionals, Basque separatists, anti-Turkish Armenians, Colombia's M-19 guerrillas, Italy's right-wing railway bombers, Lebanon's multi-stripped car-bombers.

But now, ominously, more obscure causes are exploding into the headlines as well - the cause of Tamil separatism, for one, in whose name 150 bystanders were massacred by gunmen at a holy place in Sri Lanka last year.

In the United States, too, new-style terrorists strike: "right-to-life" militants who firebomb abortion clinics, for example, and terrorist bombers, possibly Jewish extremists, who killed an Arab-American activist last year.

Terrorists are also becoming deadlier. Lebanon's anti-Western Shiite Moslem extremists are working with bombs of unparalleled power for a non-military organization.

"The ferocity is escalating," a U.S. Air Force security officer in West Germany said of anti-American terrorists there. They are not getting the kind of attention they used to get, and they apparently feel they have to find new ways to get it.

Arab extremists focus of Berlin bomb probe

Associated Press

BERLIN - Police investigating a nightclub bombing that killed a U.S. army sergeant and a Turkish woman and wounded 191 other people are focusing on Arab extremists who may have entered West Berlin from Communist East Germany, news reports said Sunday.

U.S. diplomats said Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy was suspected of complicity in Saturday's bomb blast that destroyed the La Belle discotheque, which was popular with American soldiers stationed in Berlin.

Of the 191 injured, 63 were Americans.

U.S. military and West Berlin authorities identified the two people killed as Sgt. Kenneth Ford, 21, of Detroit, and Nermine Haney, 28, a Turk.

"The Libyan angle is being explored very vigorously. Khadafy is a very active suspect," said a U.S. diplomatic source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Khadafy called for Arab assaults on American interests worldwide after a U.S.-Libyan naval clash in the Mediterranean two weeks ago.

U.S. officials in West Berlin refused further comment on the investigation launched by a special, 100-member commission of West Berlin and American military police.

Manfred Ganschow, director of West Berlin security police, said Sunday that three separate claims of responsibility telephoned the day of the explosion to news agencies in London and Berlin "cannot be considered authentic." He did not go into detail.

The Berliner Morgenpost daily newspaper said investigators were focusing on anti-Western Arab militants in West Berlin.

It quoted unidentified West Berlin security officials as saying the Libyan Embassy in East Berlin, the capital of East Germany, could have served as headquarters for the bombers.

The Morgenpost quoted Ganschow as saying intelligence reports indicated "fanatical Arabs operating independently of one another" had slipped into West Berlin recently.

Ganschow told a news conference that investigators continued to zero in on leftist and foreign terrorist groups, but "no concrete clues" surfaced to identify the bombers.

Of the three claims of responsibility dismissed by Ganschow on Sunday:

An anonymous caller in London claimed a West German leftist terrorist faction, the Holger Meins Commando, committed the bombing.

A caller in Berlin said a previously unknown radical Arab group, the Anti-American Arab Liberation Front, was responsible.

A second caller in Berlin said it was the work of the Red Army Faction, a West German leftist terrorist group that has waged a bombing and arson campaign against NATO interests.

In Bonn, the West German capital, Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher established a working group of experts to see if foreign governments, not identified, could have been involved in the disco bombing.

U.S. should stick to arms treaty, says House chairman

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration should reaffirm its commitment to the 1972 treaty limiting missile defenses instead of viewing the pact in a way that permits "Star Wars" research, the chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee said yesterday.

Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., termed the administration's view of the treaty "defective and counter-productive" and said it would lead to a new arms race in space.

Also yesterday, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House

Armed Services Committee, asked the Air Force to formally support the single-warhead nuclear missile known as "Midgetman."

Fascell's statement was the latest round in a six-month old fight over whether the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty limits research and development into high-tech defenses against nuclear attack.

The Reagan administration contends that the pact does not ban such research and is going ahead with the Star Wars plan, known formally as the Strategic Defense Initiative.

The Soviets want SDI halted, but the administration says the American program is needed partly to offset a similar Soviet effort.

Administration officials, including Secretary of State George Shultz, said last fall that in their view the administration was legally justified in a loose interpretation of the pact. But they promised to stick by a more strict definition they said would still permit SDI to go ahead.

Both superpowers should reaffirm their commitment to the ABM treaty, said Fascell, who is out of the country and made his views known in a statement issued by his office here.

His is position taken previously by other critics of the administration's build-up of nuclear weapons.

Aspin's letter to Air Force Secretary Russell Rourke noted that the single-warhead missile has been endorsed by a presidential commission, which said it would increase stability in the superpower arms stand-off.

Aspin noted that "there is a small minority" in the Defense Department that wants to cut spending on the Midgetman project and use that money for SDI, while other Pentagon opponents of the missile want to increase its size.

Aspin and other supporters of Midgetman believe it would contribute to stability because they argue it is better to have a large number of missiles with single warheads rather than a smaller number of missiles with larger warheads, such as the triple-warhead Minuteman or 10-warhead MX.

They argue that the MX would make a more inviting target to Soviet war planners considering a first strike because hitting on MX with one missile would knock out 10 warheads while it would take 10 Soviet missiles to destroy the same number of Midgetman weapons.

Jordanian arms deal embarrassing; Saudi proposal will pass, Bush says

Associated Press

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — Vice President George Bush said yesterday the Reagan administration was "somewhat embarrassed" when Congress blocked a big sale of U.S. arms to Jordan, but he predicted that a $354 million purchase of advanced weapons by Saudi Arabia would win approval.

Bush arrived in this eastern provincial city on the Persian Gulf earlier in the evening from Riyadh for an official dinner with King Fahd.

A business meeting, restricted to male guests and excluding Bush's wife, Barbara, was arranged to follow the dinner.

Prospects for congressional approval of the sale of 2,566 missiles to Saudi Arabia improved recently when a major pro-Israel lobby in Washington, the American-Israel Public Affairs Committee, signaled it would not actively oppose the deal.

"I believe that this arms sale will go through. In my view it must go through," Bush told American businessmen at a breakfast meeting in Riyadh. "I think this one is in better shape than some of the other deals that have been aborted by the United States Congress."

"We frankly were somewhat embarrassed," he said, when Congress forced the administration to withdraw a $1.9 billion arms purchase by Jordan's King Hussein because of lack of progress toward Middle East peace talks.

Since then, Bush said, Hussein

"kind of broke off discussions with us. We understand it in a sense because we said we were going to do something as the United States, we meant to do it, we wanted to do it, we felt it was in the interest of peace, and we weren't able to deliver because the U.S. Congress did not see it our way."

At his meeting with businessmen in Riyadh, Bush reaffirmed the U.S. commitment to keep oil flowing through the gulf.

Alluding to the U.S. military strike against Libya, Bush said the United States "is fundamentally, irrevocably committed" to maintain the free flow of oil through the gulf region. "After this past month, no one should doubt the importance we attach to freedom of passage in international waters."

Inflation worse in poor countries

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Inflation rose in poor countries while dropping in the United States and other rich countries last year, the International Monetary Fund reported yesterday on the eve of a semi-annual week of joint sessions with the World Bank.

Financial officials and bankers from 149 member countries will be attending the meetings, which will be held behind closed doors.

One session will bring together U.S. Treasury Secretary James Baker and the finance ministers of Japan, West Germany, France and Britain. This group took the initiative in driving down the price of the dollar and lowering interest rates.

Fund officials calculated the increase of prices to consumers in poor countries at 49.3 percent for 1985, compared with 46.3 percent in 1984. The rate was especially high in Latin America: 164.2 percent, up from 145.3 the year before. There was a small decline in Asia to 6.8 percent and a larger one in the Middle East, to 12.5 percent from 16.3 percent.

In the United States and 20 other industrial countries the average rate of inflation came to 4.2 percent, a steady drop from the 7.5 percent of 1982.

The IMF memorandum, an official monthly publication, said the top rate of inflation was in Argentina, 672.1 percent for the year, followed by Brazil with 227 percent and Peru with 163.4 percent. Israel's inflation was running at an annual rate of nearly 172 percent in January of this year, but it is reported to have dropped sharply since then.

Decreases were noted in Hong Kong, Indonesia, Pakistan, the Philippines, Singapore and Sri Lanka, while sizable increases were shown for Burma, Nepal and Thailand.

Among the industrial countries, the lowest inflation rates were in Japan, 2 percent, and West Germany, 2.2 percent. Inflation in the U.S. dropped to 3.6 percent from 4.3 percent in 1984.

The biggest rise was in New Zealand, to 15.4 percent from 6.2 percent. Iceland continued to have the largest inflation rate among the industrial countries, 32 percent, compared with 30.6 percent in 1984.

on-lookers were involved because of other show prints found in the area, Neuert said.

Shoe prints across the car's hood indicate the windshield was smashed when someone ran across the car, stepping on its windshield, he said. Insurance investigators will estimate the extent of the monetary damages to the car today.

Neuert said he is distributing notices asking that the individual responsible or those with any information about the incident contact him.

In another act of vandalism, this one occurring Friday night, an art student's sculpture was toppled. The 400-pound sculpture, made by senior art design major Mike Hofman, was shaped in the form of a fishhead and located in front of the art building.

Hofman said he had worked periodically since last semester on the sculpture, which was made of clay and decorated with ceramic tiles.

An employee at the Security office declined comment on the incidents last night, referring all questions to Rakow. Rakow, however, said he could not comment on the student assault nor on the two acts of vandalism because he had not read the reports yet.

People, spirit make Notre Dame special place

How many times have you heard someone complain about the Notre Dame administration or the grounds crew or the weather? We hear complaints about the new fountain, Apartheid divestment, parietals and du Lac. The dining halls are never perfect and The Ratio is always unsatisfactory. More often than not, these people wish they were somewhere else; they would rather be at Stanford or Princeton or Duke. Some go so far as to apply for transfers.

William J. Curran

guest column

But it never seems to materialize. These "transfers" appear the following year in your Calculus or Core class. And they will continue to be in your classes until both of you graduate. Of course, there are exceptions, but these are few and far between.

What special intangible attracts people to Notre Dame and what magnetism keeps those people here for the span of their college career? Is it that Notre Dame has a rich history or is it the mystique of the Golden Dome? Some may claim that it is the post-college opportunities that bring potential students here. Other students fall in love with the campus - it becomes the deciding factor for many. While Notre Dame certainly has a beautiful campus, it is not the only campus in the country with ivy or lakes.

Anybody who is presently attending or has graduated from Notre Dame knows that it is not the materialistic things that are the attraction, but rather it is the people and the spirit that make Notre Dame special. Most students could have gone, academically, to a comparable school. I had the opportunity to attend Cornell University in New York. But Cornell lacked that special something; the students walked by without so much as a glance or a smile.

The special feeling is a sense of belonging, the friendly atmosphere, the helpful students who care. People across the country see it at the football and basketball games on television: the comradery and spirit of the student sections. That feeling is not specific to the United States alone. Many students come here from abroad which in turn leads to a diverse student population comparable to none. This diversity allows for a more complete and rounded education. One can learn of foreign countries through personal experiences rather than textbooks. Even closer to home, one learns about the different cultures and heritages in other states or even in one's own home state.

Notre Dame's blend of people and spirit is what makes Notre Dame the unique, special place that it is. It is true that problems do exist here and that people have the right to voice their opinions about the school's policies and other assorted decisions among other things. Yet through all of the complaining and the problems, Notre Dame hasn't lost its glory or its prestige. Notre Dame is still a special place despite its problems. But you probably knew that to begin with.

South Africa 'harmless' compared to Soviets

Dear Editor:

A charming story came across the wire last week, and local papers picked it up. It seems our comrades in Russia are growing ill-humored these days with their pesky Afghan neighbors. And so they have done the only natural thing that they could do.

Last year they systematically brutalized and dispatched off to eternity 35,000 Afghan civilians by means of an imaginative variety of antics. These included pitching old folks out of helicopters and strewing the countryside with booby-trapped children's toys which blow off faces and fingers and generally ruin a kid's day.

Just lovely. Now mind you, this is from the documented findings of a disinterested U.N. commission.

Also last week, on a college campus fixed mid-west in the cosmos, a student body of overall unreflective young people, donning their political garb for a day and displaying the biceps of the democratic method, voted up a measure that would have the movers and the shakers of their college let loose their money-muscled grip on life in South Africa. After all, South Africa is a place where a travesty of justice goes by the name of law, a place where the modicum of peace, order and prosperity that they enjoy is but the trappings concealing poverty, corruption, racism and oppression, and a place where things are not nice.

Doubtless backing of that proposal undoubtedly has brought some joy to some of the otherwise discomfited and malcontent professors at the same college. Up to then no one, not the administration, not the Board, had really been brought round to the fine idea of divestiture about which the cranks have bleated on and on. But that idea has finally found a home and settled for a season in the porous minds of exuberant youths.

In a world of palpable and pervasive evils purveyed Soviet-style, in the real world of major league evils perpetrated by one of the most lurid and menacing policies which has been fabricated in a while, it is strange how so much fire can be misdirected at friendly and relatively harmless nations. So much passion and protest is brought to bear on the wrong people. And the thought behind this feverish passion and protest must be likewise strange, to be sure.

In fact, it is simply ludicrous to think that life in South Africa, and even less our participation in that life, is the premiere object presently deserving our indignation, or to think that located there we find somehow the main moral axis about which our obligations now turn.

Somewhere in the bewildering logic of this, though, something large and obvious has passed unperceived - something like balance or proportion or breadth of judgement.

Islam does not condone terrorism, violence

Dear Editor:

I am writing to comment upon the article about Islam included in the special feature about non-Catholics at Notre Dame. My own background is American Baptist (a non-fundamentalist branch not to be confused with Southern Baptist). I have a great interest in other religions, particularly Islam.

Charles Lobdell's article began by noting the widespread equation of Islam with terrorism in the media, but then did not address this issue any further. My understanding of the Quran is that it supports the concept of a justified war, specifically a defensive war to protect territory or personal rights. Something which is very important to note is that Islam was intended to guide a whole society, including the government. It therefore takes positions on issues which Christianity "leaves to Caesar."

Many courses of action have been taken throughout history by Islamic governments or groups which may seem appalling, but I do not think any more so than some actions of misguided Christian ones; the Crusades, the Inquisition, and Colonialism readily come to mind. Does the religion of Islam especially encourage or allow terrorism? I really do not think so. Lebanese Christians are behaving in much the same fashion as are Lebanese Muslims. The situation itself seems to produce the violence, as a not too dissimilar situation is producing violence in Ireland.

I would like to mention some aspects of Islam which particularly appeal to me. First of all, there are the Muslims themselves whom I have known; they shared with me their personal questionings about the proper response to oppression. Many do argue to meet force with force; some tolerate terrorism as a means; and some argue vehemently against any tactic which knowingly takes innocent lives. Just as Christians are currently debating whether or not there is ever a justified war, so there is debate in Muslim circles about non-violent courses of action. I do not see this as a major trend right now, but it could be nurtured by open-mindedness, and could conversely be stifled by continued expressions of stereotyping and contempt toward all Islamic society.

There is much to be admired in traditional Islamic ideals. The Quran advises regular prayer, mandatory contributions toward the support of the poor, respect for other religions and a great emphasis upon a fair and rational system of justice. The Sufis, a mystical branch of Islam, are particularly committed to peace and spiritual growth. The practice of individuals and government can sometimes leave much to be desired, obviously. The current rise of intolerant fundamentalism, for example, is not attractive in its Islamic or in its Christian manifestations.

The situation in some Islamic countries looks deplorable to us, but I think it is imperative to remember that there are many political and cultural factors operating. There are potentials existing within Islamic religious ideals which could provide a positive force. We should be careful that our attitudes, particularly as expressed in the media, do not contribute to a polarization of differences, to an entrenchment of defensiveness and hostility.

There are many Muslims on campus (more than the 20 estimated by Lobdell); I hope to see some responses to the issues raised by him and by myself. The Observer is an available forum to demonstrate the range of thought within the Islamic community.

Word of Mouth performs at the North Dining Hall Friday night.

Nazz alive and kickin'

MARY JACOBY
features editor

Despite the less-than-crazy atmosphere of the North Dining Hall, the annual Nazz Music Competition was a success Friday night as 14 acts played to a crowded house.

"It was great; there was standing room only," Liz Keys, SAB musical entertainment committee assistant chairperson and the competition's director, said.

Five winners were picked from the competition, and Saturday night was supposed to have been an encore performance for the winners. Two of the winners, however, had previous engagements, causing the encore to be postponed to a later date.

Also, six students were selected at the competition to play with Max Weinberg, the drummer for Bruce Springsteen's band, the following weekend when he will make an appearance at Stepan Center.

Taking the first-place prize of $200 were the Pat Giblin Band, six seniors who play a mixture of original songs and late-60s rock. The audience responded enthusiastically during the band's set, clearing away the tables to make room for dancing.

The Pat Giblin Band, which has been playing together in local bars, consists of Mike Toner, lead vocals; Bill Leonard, guitarist; Scott Johnston, bass; and Chris Smolen, saxophone.

Tom Barry, rhythm guitar; and a South Bend drummer known as Johnny.

Second place and $150 went to the Bill, Bob and Biff Band, which played a mixture of folk and soft rock with covers by Crowby, Stills and Nash, and America. The band consists of Zahm Hall residents Mike McDermott, Jeff Sayre, and Noble Levasque. The Bill, Bob and Biff Band began last year when the members started singing in their hall bathrooms. When their music began sounding good, they decided to make the band public.

Winning third place and $75 was Word of Mouth, a seven-member dance band formed in October, 1985. Word of Mouth is Chuck Amata, alto saxophone, Bill Merkel, bass; Mike Sharkey, guitar; Jim Tyler, vocals; John Beretska, keyboards; Paul Loughridge, drums; and Kelly Harrington, vocals.

The judges awarded the fourth-place prize of $50 to Monarch, a band playing '70s rock and roll. Monarch consists of Peter Grenier, lead guitar; Tom Conforti, bass; Shawn Ryan, drums; and Ryan Powell, vocals and guitar.

The last prize awarded was $25 to T. Cross and the Trappers of Success, an eight-member pop band which performed original songs written by Terry Cross, the lead vocalist. Other members of the band are Joe Brady, drums; Chris Barnabo, keyboards; Ed Sheckler, tenor sax; Mike Myers, trumpet; Mike Peeney, bass; Andy Schlitz, guitar; and Mike Schrimpf, alto sax.

The competition lasted until 2 a.m., much longer than the projected 12 a.m. ending time. Judges were Jim Dolan, a member of the Notre Dame basketball team; Lee Broussard, SAB manager; Mike Switek, Notre Dame's new student body president; and John Van, a published songwriter and Notre Dame graduate student. Dennis Tillman served as emcee and Mike Varlotta and Mike Vere were in charge of sound.

Selected to play with Weinberg were Ryan from Monarch, Smolen, Leonard and Toner from the Pat Giblin Band; Fred Cassel from the band Wicked Shed; Brian Burke and O'Keefe from Four Guys and Pete; and Mike Speranza, a solo act. Judges for the Weinberg competition were Ron Milet, former SAB music entertainment commissioner; J.A. Lacy, current music commissioner; and Don Seymour, WVFI music director.

Although the competition did not take place in the Nazz this year, Keys decided to keep the original name because "upperclassmen will know what it is, even though it's not in the same place." The competition began later than usual this year, because organizers were waiting for Chautauqua to be finished. When no completion date was in sight, it was decided to hold the event in the North Dining Hall. The original Nazz, which has been remodeled in the LaFortune Center renovations, now contains no stage and is no longer being used for musical entertainment.

"We tried to assimilate as much as possible," Keys said. And it was a success. "We really captured the spirit of the Nazz," Keys said.

Out of the lunchbox

I love spring at Notre Dame. After a long winter of hibernation, students flock to the quads to frolic and bask in the Indiana sunshine.

There are those who play Frisbee, those who practice lacrosse, those who play catch, and, of course, those who sunbathe.

While enjoying the beauty of yesterday afternoon, I came across a notoriously appearance-conscious girl that many call Glamorous Pam. She was lying on a blanket in a two-piece bathing suit, reading Cosmopolitan magazine. Her heavily-oiled body glistened in the sunlight.

As I approached, Pam looked up from her magazine and squinted in my direction.

"Hey, how was your break?" she asked me. A very original question. "Mine was great!" she said, before I had a chance to answer. "I went to Fort Lauderdale — the weather was fabulous. I caught some serious rays."

I'd imagine there are more serious things you can catch in Fort Lauderdale.

"I'm not kidding," she said. "The sun was absolutely brutal all week."

I'm sorry to hear that you suffered.

"No, it was great," Pam said. "I really made a lot of progress on my tan."

What kind of progress?

"Well, let me put it this way," she said. "I started spring break at SPF-12 and since then, I've dropped down to SPF-2."

That's funny — it doesn't look like you've lost weight.

"No, SPF stands for sun protection factor," said Pam. "It tells you the strength of suntan lotion. The higher the SPF of the lotion, the more of the sun's ultraviolet rays it blocks out. I'm using SPF-2, which lets almost all of the sun's rays to pass through."

Sort of like cooking oil.

"Well, it allows me to obtain the deepest, darkest tan possible so I can look my very best."

Sounds like you've been watching too many Coppertone commercials, Pam.

I glanced over the array of bottles and tubes lying near Glamorous Pam's blanket. It looked like she was preparing to do a chem lab experiment. There were three different bottles of suntan lotion, a jar of Blistex lip cream, a tube of nose block-out, and a bottle of baby oil.

I picked up a tube of something called For Faces Only.

"That's for your face," she said.

thanks, Pam, I would've never guessed. Why do you need special suntan lotion for your face?

"Where have you been?" she said. "Everyone who has ever spent time in the sun knows that your face tans differently than the rest of your body — that's why you need For Faces Only." Then she showed me a green bottle.

"Do you know what this is?" she asked.

Let me guess — For Kneecaps Only.

"Don't be silly," she said. "It's lemon juice."

Are you making mixed drinks out here?

"No, you put lemon juice in your hair so it'll get lighter in the sun. I think lighter, blonder hair is more attractive."

Well, if you're not careful where you rest your lemon juice-drenched head, a colony of ants just might find your hair attractive, too.

Pam's eyes widened as she sat up nervously, ran her fingers through her hair, and said, "Don't even say that in jest."

Hey Pam, since when did sunbathing become so scientific, anyway? I mean, the earliest American settlers probably didn't worry about sun protection factors. I bet Davy Crockett never put lemon juice in his hair.

"Well, I like to think of tanning as an art," she said. "The sun is the artist and my body is the artwork."

I suppose even Michelangelo had his bad days. Listen, why are you so obsessed with keeping that spring break tan? Don't you realize that you're in South Bend and it's only April? Inevitably, we're going to get hit with another giant snowstorm, the sun will be absent from the skies for weeks, and your beautiful tan will peel off like a snake's skin.

"Well, I was watching Channel 16 Live at Five news," Pam said, "and Dick Addis assured us that we're going to have a beautiful spring."

Like I was saying. . .

Practice

"Beuerlein showed good leadership and moved the ball well, and Terry threw very well today. Steve Belles had an awfully good day. He was a pleasant surprise."

Belles, a freshman, moved his troops upfield in his first drive on passes to freshman tight end Andy Heck and sophomore split end Tony Eason. The drive was capped off with the final touchdown of the day on a 14-yard completion over the middle to Heck. Belles completed seven of his nine passes on the day, as did Andrysiak. Beuerlein connected on eight-of-12. Holtz contends that the offensive line will be one of the main areas to be looked at in the upcoming spring practices.

"Our offensive line is going to hold the key to our success offensively," he said. "The amount of pride and discipline they show will tell the story. That's what we're trying to bring out in them."

"Our quarterbacks are going to play well and our receivers will definitely do the job. Tim Brown and Milt Jackson did some good things today. We know what a Tim Brown can do. We have a young, inexperienced backfield that is making some progress, but the line is the key to our offensive success."

One bright spot for the Irish in the scrimmage was the kicking game. While there were no kickoffs or punts, junior field-goal kicker John Carney was perfect on the day. He connected on three extra points, added a 25-yard field goal, and booted a 46-yarder to end the scrimmage. Holding the ball on all five occasions was junior punter Dan Sorensen. John Grieb handled the snaps.

Rushing yardage was evenly split, as quarterback Belles picked up 36 yards to lead the team. Taylor collected 22 yards, while freshmen Corny Southall and Mark Green ran for 21 and 14 respectively. As has been the case throughout the spring, Holtz used a number of offensive formations, including the wishbone. Receivers Brown and Reggie Ward each had the opportunity to carry the ball out of the wishbone set.

Observer completes sports staff

The Observer sports department has completed its staff for the 1986-87 publishing year.

Marty Burns, a sophomore from Chicago, Ill., will continue in his position as assistant sports editor. Burns, who is enrolled in the College of Arts & Letters, has written for the Observer since his freshman year and has been a sports copy editor before being named an assistant in Oct., 1985.

Marty Strasen has also been named an assistant sports editor. A freshman from Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, Canada, Strasen has held the positions of sports writer and sports copy editor.

The third assistant sports editor is Mike Szymanski, a sophomore from Solon, Ohio. Szymanski, who is majoring in accounting, has previously been a sports writer as well as a sports copy editor.

The new Saint Mary's sports editor is Andrea LaFreniere. A junior with a double major in English writing and English literature, LaFreniere has previously been an Observer sports writer.

These four will assist the sports editor in a variety of tasks, including story development and assignment, staff management, training of new personnel, filing and formulation of sports department policies.

Irish

and a third innings as it went to assault the 7-1 deficit.

The Irish battled back to a 7-5 score at the end of the six innings with the help of some sloppy Wisconsin play. But the sixth inning ended when Rich Vanthournout was caught stealing after he walked with two out.

The Badgers would tack on two more runs in the top of the seventh. Sacchini entered the seventh and surrendered a single, at which point Gallo replaced him with Brad Cross. The Badgers strung together two well-hit doubles, and all of a sudden it was 9-5.

Scott Rogers responded in the bottom of the seventh inning with a leadoff homerun, but that was all the Irish could muster as Badger fireballer Jim Rosplock came in to shut down the Irish and record the save.

Saturday's second game looked much better for the Irish as they took a 6-0 lead after two innings. Centerfielder Ken Soos, who went 5-for-6 on Saturday, provided the big blow with a three-run homer in the second. The Badgers responded in the top of the third with two unearned runs off starter Mark Watzke. Watzke would surrender some of his early-inning control in the fourth, as the Badgers took advantage of two walks and cut the lead to 6-5.

Meanwhile, Badger lefthander Lance Painter settled down to blank the Irish into the seventh inning. Outside of a fourth inning walk, the Irish went down in order until the seventh.

Watzke came in to pitch the fifth inning and served up three singles to Badger hitters to load the bases. Gallo decided that Watzke had had enough and signaled for righthanded reliever John Gleeson. Gleeson's third pitch to Wisconsin's Scott Cepicky was a fat fastball, and the first baseman for the Badgers promptly responded by blasting the pitch over the fence in center.

The Irish entered the seventh inning facing a 9-6 score, but things looked hopeful when Rich Vanthournout and Tom Shields began the inning by reaching base. Ken Soos, who would wind up with 5 RBIs on the game, knocked in Vanthournout with a one-out base hit.

Rosplock again came in to get the final two outs for the Badgers, taking the second game 9-7.

In the first game yesterday, it was the Badgers who took the early lead on Craig Brown's two-run homer in the first inning. Chris Flynn cut the lead in half in the third with a solo shot to left, and after Vanthournout doubled, Shields hit a ground ball that Cepicky couldn't handle, and the game was tied.

Wisconsin came back with two more in the top of the fourth half to retake the lead, but a Mike Moshier single in the bottom half of the same inning cut the lead to 4-3.

The Badgers padded their lead in the sixth when shortstop Mike Noelke hit the Badgers' second homer of the day from Irish starter Kevin Chenail. After Chenail got one out, Gallo played musical pitchers in the inning. Mike Harmon came in to give up the second run of the inning, but Gallo trotted out again to bring in Brad Cross, who got the final out.

In the bottom of the same inning, the Irish exploded for five runs. Pesavento smacked a two-run double, followed quickly by Shields, who hit a two-run single. Scott Rogers picked up Loughran, who hit a triple down the right field line.

Cross recorded the save, coming in to give up a run in the seventh but keeping the Badgers from tying the game, ending in an 8-7 Irish win.

The final game of the series was perhaps the most tense of the four. The lead changed hands four times in the game, and after starter Erik Madsen was knocked out in the third, the Irish relievers came in to shut down the Badgers. Once again it was Cross who came in to get the save, and the win went to Robert Fitz, who hurled 4.1 innings, surrendering one run and three hits.

The hot bat of Ken Soos has surprised Gallo.

"Kenny Soos may be the most hurt of anybody. He's had an ankle problem since the beginning of the season, but the last three weeks he's been hitting the heck out of the ball."

The Irish have a much-needed day off tomorrow before playing a doubleheader Tuesday at Michigan State.

SMC relay sets mark, offsets team's finish

Andrea LaFreniere
Saint Mary's Sports Editor

The Saint Mary's 1600-meter relay team set a new school record for track on Saturday at the Manchester College Invitational, a highly competitive meet in which ten schools participated.

The team of senior Mary Lueneen, sophomore Cathy Kennedy and freshmen Lora Gill and Theresa Rice completed the race with a time of 4:32.6.

The record finish by the four was the highlight of the meet for the Belles, who finished in a disappointing tenth place at the competition.

Several members of the team were not able to attend the meet, and, according to Head Coach Jean Kerich, this may have been a determining factor in the Belles, last place finish.

"We didn't take everyone with us," she said. "A lot of the girls have illnesses, and some weren't back yet from break. That could have made a difference for us."

Other strong finishers for the Belles include junior Mariclaire Driscoll, who ran the 10,000-meter race in 45:33 to capture sixth place, and Rice, who ran the 800-meter race in 2:28.8 to finish in fourth place.

The 400-meter relay team placed at the meet, as well. Sophomore Stephanie Duke and freshmen Missy Bailey, Kelly O'Brien and Gill finished in sixth place with a time of 0:56.2.

The Belles' next competition is on Tuesday at Goshen College with Defiance College. The meet is scheduled to begin at 3:30 p.m.

ND lacrosse edges Wooster, 11-7, with determined 2nd-half effort

By FRANK HUEMMER
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame lacrosse team pushed its record to 3-2 with a hard-fought 11-7 victory over the Fighting Scots of Wooster. Although the team controlled the action early, it was not until the third quarter that they really started rolling.

"In the beginning of the game, we did everything but score," said Head Coach Rich O'Leary. "By the third quarter we did the little things well and really came on strong."

After coming out from a 4-4 halftime deadlock, the Irish took complete control of the game by outscoring the Scots 5-1. Spearheading the attack was senior Tom Grote, who tallied four goals and two assists on the day, as he assisted junior Jim Shields on a goal to break the tie.

Wooster promptly tied the score at five on a goal by Frank Winsor, but that is when the Irish came on strong. With Grote leading the way by scoring the next two goals, the Irish went up to 7-5 and were never really challenged. The lead grew to 9-5 by the end of the quarter and 11-5 before Wooster finished out the scoring.

The game began with the Irish watching Wooster jump out to a 1-0 lead on a goal by Christopher Davis, who also contributed three assists in the losing effort. Shields tied the contest at 5:08 with a goal on an assist by Grote. The quarter ended with Wooster holding a slim 2-1 advantage.

Despite having numerous opportunities to score in the first half, the best Notre Dame could do was go in tied at the half. Coach O'Leary singled out the following key performances.

"Senior Mike Rice and junior Wally Stack played well defensively," remarked O'Leary. "At midfield, junior Dave O'Neill and sophomore John McNicholas created a lot of openings. Attackers Jim Shields, three goals and one assist, Tom Grote and Joe Franklin, one goal and three assists, really worked."

"Overall, we felt we would be further along in our development," said O'Leary. "We need a lot more work to build our confidence up and we will try to do that this weekend."

Bookstore XV 1st round begins with some skill but much more fun

By MICHAEL KEEGAN
Sports Writer

It was a weekend of fast breaks, layups, outside shots and crisp passes as Bookstore Basketball XV began with preliminary games on Friday and Saturday and the opening of the first round yesterday. All games combined basketball skill, or lack of it, with a general attitude for fun.

In the preliminary game between We Never Practiced Even Once and Spewed Chunky and the Technicolor Yawns, Cathy Hill led her team in a blazing hot shooting performance. We Never Practiced Even Once lost the game 21-0 while shooting 0-for-57 from the field/Hill shot a hot 0-for-34 in leading her team. During the game, W.N.P.E.O. game a new meaning to the dunk shot and the drive.

W.N.P.E.O. placed a pail of water underneath the basket. While making a strong move to the basket, a player from this team dunked her head in the pail of water and proceeded to take the shot. This attempted dunk shot was blocked by the rim. Nice try. In addition, W.N.E.P.O. carried car doors onto the court and proceeded to drive down the lane. This attempt to score also failed as did the other national recognized speed limit, 55, shots.

In another preliminary game between the Ghurka Bags and Marauder, Marauder tried a combination of high amps and sloppy basketball to no avail. Finding itself trailing 11-2 at the half, Marauder planned to play a series of "weird, hypnotizing" songs to throw off the strong play of its opponents. But a torrential downpour forced the team to pack up its equipment early. Without its music, Marauder was lost as Sean O'Brien shot 9-of-14 from the field in leading the Ghurka Bags to a 21-7 victory.

Probably the most interesting basketball was played yesterday.

In what can be labeled only as a colossal miss-match, the Lee's BBQ Roundhouse led by Jim Dolan played The Executives. The Executives fielded a team which consisted of four girls and one guy which managed to score only 6 baskets in the losing effort. Chuck Lennon, the Executive Director of the Alumni Association, shot 4-of-5 from the field in the winning effort.

Easily the most colorful team of the day was 5 Guys Who Wear Body Paint. Sporting the new spring fashion line, the team players were painted black, blue, orange, white and green. The team was defeated easily by What the F, 21-8, but Rudy Brandl, painted white, believes 5 Guys Who Wear Body Paint gained recognition which was their only goal.

"Each year we try to come up with some new gimic," said Brandl. "Last year we were the 5 Guys Who Wore Pantyhose Over the Head. What we hope to do is gain recognition and a subsequent cult following. If we can't dazzle them with out basketball, we baffle them with our gimic."

During the game, Brandl was the victim of a vicious steal attempt that shattered his finger. Not wanting to throw the game away, Brandl quickly ran off the court and had his dislocated finger relocated. Brandl saw the game as a war.

"At the end of the game, What The F was covered with paint," said Brandl. "These guys looked as though they had been in a war. Everyone was hacking each other during the game, and, as a result, they wound up with paint all over themselves. Too bad."

In a ridiculously long battle, Team Cheese outdistanced We Eat Meat on Fridays by a score of 21-16. The teams were going for the worst shooting percentage of the tournament award. Team Cheese shot 21-of-104 while We Eat Meat on Fridays shot 16-of-81 for a combined 37-of-185 shooting performance. This highly exciting game dragged on for over an hour, as each team tried its best to throw the game. Team Cheese eventually decided enough was enough and

Second spring scrimmage is 'loud', not pretty

By MARTY STRASEN
Assistant Sports Editor

It certainly wasn't pretty, but the purpose of spring football is not to marvel at flawless performances.

And while a few players had their moments in the Notre Dame football team's second scrimmage of the spring season on Saturday, there were no flawless performances to be seen. For the most part, however, Irish head coach Lou Holtz was pleased with what he saw.

"I saw some good things out there today," said Holtz. "This was probably the loudest day since I've been here.

"The defensive line had some really loud hits. I thought hitting, and the linebackers carried their pads very well."

But Holtz was not pleased with at least on aspect of the scrimmage - penalties. Yellow flags were all over the muddy field inside Notre Dame Stadium as both the offensive and defensive units were guilty of a number of infractions.

"Especially on offense, we've been taking twice as many penalties as the opposition is going to take," Holtz said. "Today it was about 17 times more than the opposition, and that's the most discouraging thing. Every time you looked up there was a penalty, and that's no fun. It's hard to get consistency this early."

No score was kept in the scrimmage, as each quarterback was given the opportunity to drive one of the offensive units downfield beginning from the 25-yard line.

Junior Steve Beuerlein completed his first four passes and looked sharp in his opening drive, which culminated when sophomore receiver Tim Brown snared a sideline pass and shook off a pair of defenders with some quick moves for a 39-yard touchdown.

Sophomore quarterback Terry Andrysiak then stepped in and found senior split end Milt Jackson open in the seam for a 38-yard gain. That pass set the tone for Andrysiak's drive, as Jackson and Brown continued to pull down passes and junior jullback Pernel Defense dominated the next two drives as freshman Lippincott and Taylor plunged through the defense for a two-yard score.

juniors Kleine and Banks made some impressive hits to stop backs for losses. The defensive unit used in the third and fourth drives appeared much more effective than the initial unit, as even Andrysiak, who completed his first seven passes of the day, was not able to move the ball over the goal line.

"Beuerlein and Andrysiak both did a good job," said Holtz.

Irish gain series split after dropping 1st pair

By TERRY LYNCH

The Irish baseball team split its four-game series over the weekend with Wisconsin, as the Badgers took Saturday's doubleheader and the Irish swept yesterday's games at Jake Kline field. With the split, the Irish raised their record to 12-11.

Keying the Irish weekend was the return of co-captain Tom Shields to the Irish lineup. Shields, who was out for the majority of the early-season action with an injured shoulder, returned in full-force yesterday, driving in the game-winning run in a hotly-contested second game in the bottom of the sixth. Shields was unstoppable in the second game, going 4-for-4 at the plate, scoring two runs, stealing a base and driving in three of seven runs for the Irish in a 7-6 win.

"Tom Shields, even though not 100 percent, means so much to this after four years of playing really rubs off on everybody. just his presence on the field means a lot to the team."

Things did not start well for the Irish on Saturday, as onlookers would witness leads in both games quickly disappear. In the first game, the Irish jumped out to a quick 1-0 lead with a pair of singles after Pat Pesavento was hit by a pitch from Badger righthander Tim Roman.

The Badgers would later bat around in the third inning and score seven runs, knocking Irish starter Steve Powell out of the box early. Dan Sacchini came on in relief of Powell, giving the team 3
