Divestment urged by visiting priest in hunger strike

By TRIPP BALTZ
News Editor

Father Basil van Rensburg, a visiting priest from Cape Town, South Africa, said today he would begin a fast calling for the University to divest from companies that do business in his homeland.

Before a group of 60 to 65 people outside the Center for Social Concerns, Peter Walshe, director of African studies, announced Van Rensburg will live indefinitely on water alone.

"I will continue the fast as long as my medical advisors say I am in good health," Van Rensburg said, adding that as a priest he is not at liberty to let his health deteriorate.

As he read from a prepared statement made available to the crowd, Van Rensburg said he was "committing a public and official act of treason as consigned in South African law and will have to account for myself on my return to South Africa." Van Rensburg said his fast is small in comparison to what black South Africans suffer every day.

Van Rensburg said he prays "the Lord will send the Holy Spirit to be present at the meeting of the Board of Trustees on the 9th and 10th of May."

Van Rensburg said he is fasting at Notre Dame "because, unexpectedly, I found myself on this campus." The educator said he had planned to go to Rome or Britain on his sabbatical but decided to come to Notre Dame instead because he was impressed by reports on the University's Center for Continuing Formation in Ministry.

"I was also conscious of Notre Dame's standing in the Catholic world of learning. Moreover, it has become clear to me that Notre Dame's decisions have effects beyond the campus among America's 55 million Roman Catholics.

"Many look to Notre Dame for guidance on difficult issues, including divestment," Van Rensburg said.

Van Rensburg said he did not wish to embarrass the University or the administration by his action, but "Rather, I wish to encourage a

Faculty Senate to petition trustees to stop investment in South Africa

By DAN McCULLOUGH

The Notre Dame Faculty Senate voted last night to petition the university's Board of Trustees to begin divesting its investments in American corporations that do business in South Africa.

The 28 to 2 vote, with 3 abstentions, passed a motion along to the board to announce now a process at divestment. . . . This divestment would begin no later than January, 1988.

"This process would cease only if the South African regime ended apartheid and provided a franchise to South Africans of all races," the motion said.

The motion was written by Associate Professor Frank Connolly, of the mathematics department and was based upon a survey of Notre Dame faculty. The results of the survey, which were released earlier this week, showed 77.1 percent of respondents agreed that the Senate has a responsibility to raise this issue with the Board.

The motion listed three principles upon which the Notre Dame apartheid policy should be based. First, the motion said, "Notre Dame cannot remain indefinitely as an investor in a morally unacceptable order."

It continued, "American corporations in South Africa are comparatively enlightened employers of blacks, and yet they sustain the regime by supplying technology and, most importantly, by lending legitimacy to this unjust economic order."

Finally, "An announcement now of a divestment in the future can have an important symbolic effect. It can move other institutions to action, and it can create pressure against the policies of the South African regime."

The survey, upon which the motion was based, said 72.6 percent of the respondents agreed that Notre Dame should avoid complicity with the "morally unacceptable order" in South Africa. 66.9 per-

Malone suggests application of faith to all areas of life

By BUD LUEPKE
Staff Reporter

"It's clear that for anyone to live faithfully, he or she needs to apply faith to all areas of life," said Bishop James Malone, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops (NCCB).

Malone, the featured speaker at this year's commencement exercises, said he considered addressing Notre Dame's graduating class to be a "distinct privilege."

University President Father Theodore Hesburgh, besides noting Malone's prominent standing in the Catholic Church, said that Malone was chosen because of a speech Malone gave earlier this fall in a seminar held in the law school on religion and politics.

According to Hesburgh, Malone gave "the best talk of the seminar."

Malone, who Hesburgh described as the leader of the American Catholic hierarchy, said that American Catholics should participate in social policy.

"The continuing efforts of a teaching leadership is to show the relevance of Catholic teaching to contemporary issues," said Malone. "Believers, hearing this articulation, can examine ways in which (they) can respond to these issues," he added.

Malone said that the NCCB tries to link the ancient faith to contemporary problems so that faith "comes alive in the personal life" of American Catholics.

The NCCB, for which Malone served as vice-president, has published pastoral letters on such issues as peace and the economy. Malone said these "are examples of ways in which bishops should relate Catholic social teaching to contemporary issues."

Malone said the conference was now preparing a letter on the role of women in the Church which, he said, would not be published until 1988.

Hesburgh, who said he has known Malone for the past 30 years, said the bishop is "a great supporter of Catholic Higher Education."

Speaker process begins in autumn

By BUD LUEPKE
Staff Reporter

The choice of Bishop James Malone for commencement speaker is the result of a process which began early last fall, said University President Father Theodore Hesburgh.

Hesburgh said Malone's name came from a list of about 30 nominations which he considered and then passed on to the Board of Trustees. The board has the final say in selecting the speaker.

The board, the colleges, and the student class offices all played a role in compiling the list of possible speakers. These groups held conferences to discuss possible honorary degree recipients. Final recommendations are submitted on the list to Hesburgh. " . . . I review it and submit their top choice to the Board of Trustees," Hesburgh said.

Hesburgh said comedian Bill Cosby, whose name was submitted by the student offices, had been invited, but Cosby turned it down because of other commitments.

Malone's name came from the board of trustees.

Children joining ranks of homeless in U.S.

By CLIFF STEVENS
Copy Editor

The ranks of the U.S. urban homeless are rapidly expanding to include poor children and their families, according to New York City Homeless Coalition member Robert Hayes.

Hayes said that a "radical repudiation" of government housing policy and a "squeezing out" of urban poor from inner-city neighborhoods by affluent redevelopment is causing the housing shortage responsible for the "explosion of homeless families" during the past 18 months.

"The face of the homeless is literally the face of a child," said Hayes, asserting that the stereotype of the older mentally-ill or handicapped homeless is inaccurate.

According to Hayes, one out of four U.S. children live in poverty. "Poverty is becoming a function of children and often single-parent families," he said.

Notre Dame could advance the cause of the homeless poor through opening a building to area homeless or lobbying for government action, said Hayes, whose lecture was part of Peace With Justice Week.

Hayes said President Reagan's 98-percent cutback of funds for poor housing is "not a conservative shift, but a radical repudiation."

State and local government is also resistant to housing aid, according to Hayes. "Nothing interested New York City officials less than relief for the poor homeless," he said.

Hayes, a lawyer, also recounted his successful court battle for "the right of shelter" with New York State.

Hayes said higher transportation costs started the urban trend called "gentrification" which replaces slums with high-priced "yuppie" housing that slum residents are unable to afford.

Over time, this trend creates a shortage of low-cost housing and promotes homelessness, according to Hayes.

"Somebody once said the only thing worse than slums is having no slum, and there is some truth to that," said Hayes.

Hayes said this redevelopment has been "actually encouraged, aided and abetted by city officials" for higher tax revenues.

Peace With Justice Week coincides with the American Association of Catholic Colleges and Universities' national focus on peace. The Center for Social Concerns is sponsoring the week's events.

Hayes spoke yesterday at the Center for Social Concerns on the plight of the urban homeless.

cent agreed that the threat of divestiture is a tool of moral pressure against South Africa.

Before the vote, Paul Conway, associate professor of finance, voiced concern that the survey did not represent enough faculty opinion. Of the 930 surveys sent out, 281 were returned.

But Professor John Yoder of the theology department noted the poll had been sent with a packet of many enclosure and that no publicity encouraged returns. He said about 30 percent was a rather good response.

A presentation by the Senate's benefits committee followed the discussion and vote on the South African issue.

Freshman lacrosse attacker

Olmstead shows great potential

By PETE SKIKO
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame lacrosse team, now almost midway through its season, is 3-2 and looking forward to the rest of the year with hope for a strong finish. Irish head coach Rich O'Leary can look even farther forward than that, three years farther to be exact, largely due to the presence of John Olmstead.

The freshman has received a good deal of playing time this season and has responded by scoring four goals in five games. O'Leary understands the amount of his young player's potential and says that experience in the form of varsity action is the most effective way to get at it.

"John has a great deal of maturity for a freshman," said the sixth-year head coach. "He's playing out of his high school position because we needed more attackers than midfielders. He's worked hard to improve his game, and it's showed.

John works with a lot of composure in front of the goal, and he always seems to beat the goalie."

Olmstead appreciates the confidence that O'Leary has shown in his ability, and has completely gelled with a team composed of many juniors and seniors.

"So far, my transition from high school lacrosse to Notre Dame's has been pretty smooth," said Olmstead. "The coaches have been totally understanding, and they've shown me a lot of little tricks that I've used to adjust to college play."

"Coach O'Leary doesn't hesitate to put me in during the tight spots, and that's the type of playing time I need to improve. The team is easily the best group of guys I've ever worked with."

"I can see how the upperclassmen might be upset at seeing me play as much as I do, but I've never gotten any indication that they're (not) just trying to help me out as much as they can. A lot of my improvement just comes from doing what I see the more experienced players do."

Olmstead, who has started three of the last five games the Irish have played thus far, attributes part of his success to his early recognition that the college game would be, to say the least, different from his high school career.

"I knew when I got here that the lacrosse would be more physical and much faster than before," said Olmstead, "so I really tried to get myself into shape. But I didn't expect to play as much as I have this early, so my physical condition is more important. I'd like to become quicker and to become better at spotting the open man earlier. I guess those are my personal goals at this point."

Olmstead is happy to be involved with the Irish lacrosse program and hopes the team can put a string of wins together leading up to the postseason play.

"It's been a lot of pressure," said Olmstead, who led the Irish in scoring during last fall's Chicago tournament, "but it's been even more fun. We played pretty well in Virginia (over break), and I think we've got the potential to do some great things this year."

O'Leary is expecting great things from Olmstead for the next three years.

"John will definitely be a vital part of our program in the future," said O'Leary. "All we want is for him to expand his great natural ability into pure lacrosse form."

He could be the man to watch on upcoming Irish lacrosse squads.

Olmstead and the rest of the Irish travel to Ohio for two games this weekend. Notre Dame faces Mount Union at 3:30 p.m. on Friday and Kenyon College at 1 p.m. Saturday. The next Irish game will be Saturday, April 19, against perennial power Denison. The game will be at 1:30 p.m. on Cartier Field.

New breed of golfers at Masters

Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. - Tradition in the Masters, at least as overpowering as the beauty of the setting, is facing a challenge from a band of fiercely competitive young men, some of whom had never even seen the Augusta National Golf Club before.

"We're a new breed," said Dan Forsman, a winner on the PGA tour earlier this season who will make his first Masters start today on a course that once belonged to the likes of Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer, and before them, Sam Snead and Ben Hogan.

"We are not afraid to tee it up with the established players and go head to head," said Forsman, one of a group of young stars who have, over the last few years, begun to supplement some of the game's more familiar names.

He is among those to be considered a contender in the 50th Masters, the first of the year's four major tournaments.

"They've showed they can win," Andy Bean said of the upstarts. "With the level of competition we have on the tour now, with the experience they get from the college programs, they're ready to win when they join the tour."

The select international field includes Scott Verplank and nine other amateurs, along with 78 professionals, including such new breed players as Bob Tway, Donnie Hammond and Kenny Knox, all winners this year and all making their first appearance in golf's annual spring rites.

screamed back "---- the test." Seemingly inspired by this speech, his team, Dave's Heavy Towing, went on to win, 25-23. Lombardi look out, there is a new speech maker in town.

The second instance occurred when Chicks Are Still Dumb faced the Nads. Early in the game, Dave Twohy, playing for Chicks Are Still Dumb, injured his hip. While waiting for the ambulance, Twohy, lying on his back, told the guys not to give up. Following Twohy's removal from the court, the Nads, in a show of sportsmanship, decided to sit one player and continue the game as a four-on-four contest. The Nads eventually won the game, 21-11.

Two more teams were disqualified. One team was disqualified because it had no current Notre Dame alumni. All the players were Notre Dame alumni. The other disqualification came out when a student was caught playing for two different teams. At the present time, only one of the teams has been officially disqualified.

In the Nads victory, Tony Casieri grabbed 22 rebounds and Dan Genreau grabbed 16 for a combined total of 38. The hot shooter of the day was Michael Shim who shot 0-for-12 for Mag and the Nipple Cippers in a losing effort.

Ranked teams playing today are WBBS with Ed Smerciak and Mr. Coffee and the Non-Dairy Creamers. WBBS with Ed Smerciak plays The Children of Earth Dog on Stepan Court 3 at 5:30 p.m. Mr. Coffee and the Non-Dairy Creamers face Horny But Moral on Stepan Court 6 at 6:15 p.m.

Trotters

popularized the fast break, slam dunk, weave pattern and the fancy passing now commonly associated with the NBA. In those early years, the Trotters carried the new pro league, often playing doubleheaders with the fledgling league's teams to boost their attendance.

But now with players like David Rivers abounding in the college ranks and the NBA filled with the likes of Dominique Wilkins, the Trotters aren't as innovative as they once were. But with some of the plays and routines that the Trotter run, Austin says the NBA and the Globetrotters can't be compared.

"We can do anything those guys (in the NBA) can do," says Austin. "In fact, we can do more. It takes a lot of practice to do the things we do. There are things they just can't do, and they'll tell you that. We're professionals on one level, they're on another. There's no comparison."

Austin admits that the Globetrotters schedule of 150 games and the accompanying life on the road can be tough, but he says that he's doing something that he enjoys.

"You know, all my life I dreamed about playing for a team that wins every game, and here I am," Austin notes. "It happened, I love what I do and it fits my personality. I enjoy making people happy and the razzle-dazzle aspect. And I can give them my best game."

Belles track scores big upset, defeats Goshen and Defiance

By ANDREA LaFRENIERE
Saint Mary's Sports Editor

The Saint Mary's track and field captured first place in eight events to solidly defeat Goshen and Defiance Colleges at a meet on Tuesday.

The Belles totaled 80 points at the competition, placing them ahead of both schools, which had 55 and 33 points, respectively.

The team's performance was a definite improvement over last weekend's competition at Manchester College, according to Belles head coach Jean Kerich.

"We beat two teams that had beaten us at the Invitational, so we were very pleased with the results," she said. "That's the first time we've ever beaten both Goshen and Defiance."

Among the first-place finishers for the Belles was Cass Pearl, a junior, who ran the 400-meter hurdles in 1:13.6, a new school record. Pearl also took first place in the 100-meter hurdles with a time of 17.47.

In the 1500-meter run, Cathy Kennedy, a sophomore finished in 5:19.5 for first place, while Patty Morris, a freshman, took fourth.

Freshman Theresa Rice ran the 400-meter dash in 65.3 to capture first place, while junior Anne Bianco finished the race in third place with a time of 70.8.

Saint Mary's claimed first, second and third places in the 800-meter dash. Kennedy ran the race in 2:35.1 for first, followed by senior Mary Luneen with a time of 2:37.7 and Rice with a time of 2:43.7.

Freshman Kelly O'Brien ran the 100-meter dash in 14.2 for second place, and freshman Missy Bailey and sophomore Stephanie Duke took third and fourth places, respectively.

O'Brien also placed second in the 200-meter dash with a time of 30.5. Bailey took fourth place in the same race.

In the 5,000-meter race, Mariclaire Driscoll, a junior, finished in second place with a time of 21:04. Driscoll also placed second in the 3,000-meter race, followed by freshman Lisa Tugman who came in third. The two ran the event in 12:30.4 and 14:30.4, respectively.

The Saint Mary's 400 and 1,600-meter relay teams both captured first place in their respective events. The team of Bailey, Duke, O'Brien and freshman Lora Gill ran the 400 relay in 56.6, while the team of Gill, Kennedy, Luneen and Rice ran the 1,600 relay in 4:33.6.

In the field event competition, freshman Beki Davis captured first place in the shotput with a distance of 29-0, while Jeannette O'Neil, also a freshman, took fourth place.

Davis placed second in the discus with a throw of 13-9, and O'Neil placed fourth in the same event. O'Neil earned second place in the javelin with her 93-10 throw.

In the long jump, Davis took third place with a 13-9 effort, followed by Duke in fourth place. Bianco placed second in the triple jump with a distance of 28-9.

The Belles' next meet is on Saturday when they play host to Hope College. The running events will take place at Clay High School, while the field events will be held at Angela Field. The competition is scheduled to begin at 11 a.m.

Wilson breaks 11th inning tie for Philadelphia

Associated Press

CINCINNATI - Glenn Wilson broke a 1-1 tie with an 11th-inning sacrifice fly and John Russell followed with a two-run homer last night to give the Philadelphia Phillies a 5-3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

The Phillies scored four times in the 11th off Ted Power, 0-1, the third Cincinnati pitcher. Garry Maddox led off with a single and Juan Samuel also singled. Both runners advanced on Mike Schmidt's long fly out, and Wilson snapped the 1-1 tie with his fly ball to center.

ed upon to put out the fire.

Gleeson responded by retiring the final batter, the only man he faced, to preserve the 11-7 win.

"I was very pleased with our hitting attack these past few days," said Gallo. "The return of Shields has helped tremendously."

The Irish notched a whopping 47 hits over the past three games. John Loughran notched nine of these 47 hits in 14 attempts.

In the second game of Tuesday's twinbill, sophomore Mike Harmon yielded three earned runs while going the distance to record the victory.

Yesterday, senior Mark Watzke pitched seven innings, yielding only two runs to pick up the win.

Notre Dame will now travel to Xavier for a twinbill Saturday and Sunday. The Irish record stands at 14-12.

Showboat Gorilla in Bookstore, top-rated teams at Stepan today

By MICHAEL KEEGAN
Sports Writer

Before being captured and returned to his home, the Potawatomi Zoo, Homo Gorillus swung into action on Stepan Court 4 yesterday. Followed by a large crowd of banana-throwing crazes, Homo Gorillus lead 4 Guys in Muppet Shorts and a Gorilla against Sometimes the Best Things in Life Cost $10.

Only moments into action, Homo Gorillus's team scored the first basket. In celebration, yellow torpedos, disguised as bananas, were hurled onto the court in an attempt to appease the gorilla and mame the opposition. Sometimes the Best Things in Life rebounded from this initial set back and went on to demolish the banana-loving ape and his team, 21-6. Homo Gorillus shot a memorable 1-of-7 from the field; the highest shooting percentage of an ape in Bookstore Basketball history. Treemate Pat Murphy said that Homo Gorillus was a direct descendent of King Kong.

"Homo Gorillus is the long-lost offspring of King Kong," said Murphy. "We found him shooting baskets at the Potawatomi Zoo and thought that he would dominate the boards. Today though, there was a problem with the weather. Homo Gorillus was not accustomed to this environment and, as a result, his play suffered."

Jay "Tito" Hizon, disguised as the ape, commented on the loss before being taken to the zoo.

"UGH!!," said Homo Gorillus. That about sums it up.

In other action, probably one of the most impressive efforts in the tournament to date was turned in by Chris "Manute Bol" Wepner in the game between 4 Real Men and the Tongue Virgin and Scintillating Inducements. Even though, Wepner's team, 4 R.M.A.T.T.V., Isot, "Manute" scored a triple double. He had 10 baskets, 11 rebounds, and 14 blocked shots. John Gibbs scored 13 baskets and grabbed 10 rebounds while leading the Scintillating Inducements to a 21-18 victory.

Positive attitudes concerning competition and spirit were highlighted in two games yesterday.

The first instance of the importance of Bookstore Basketball in the life of the average student occurred in the game between One Hung and 4 Dragons and Dave's Heavy Towing. With the score tied at 20-20 at 7:20 p.m., a nagging fan screamed to Brian Moffitt telling him that he had a test in 10 minutes. Moffitt, not willing to sacrifice his team's chances and realizing the importance of school in relation to Bookstore Basketball,

Globetrotters bring new player, basketball antics to the ACC

By DENNIS CORRIGAN
Sports Editor

When the Harlem Globetrotters visit the ACC tomorrow night (tickets are on sale at the ACC) they'll be featuring something new and no, she's not the ball girl. The newest member of the Trotters is Lynette Woodard, the first woman ever to play for the world-famous team.

Woodard, a 6-0 guard, was the captain of the 1984 gold medal-winning women's Olympic basketball team and holds the NCAA record for points in a career with 3,649. After playing a year of professional ball in Italy and coaching at her alma mater, Kansas, she became a Globetrotter after taking part in two tryouts this summer.

"Personally, on a business level, I thought it was a good move," says Clyde "The Glide" Austin, a four-year Harlem veteran. "It's proven to be so, as our crowds have been bigger."

"Lynette was a cut above the rest of the girls at the tryouts. If I had to choose, I would have chosen Lynette."

"Off the court, you have to be more of a gentleman on the bus and all," says Austin, when asked what it's like to suddenly have a woman in a previously all-male environment. "On the court, we're all professionals so we just go out and play."

Austin was a four-year starter at N.C. State. After a tryout with the Philadelphia 76ers when he left the Wolfpack, Austin became a Globetrotter the following year. When he joined his new team, he found he had to put a little more entertainment into his already dazzling style of play.

"It wasn't real hard to learn the entertainment part," says Austin. "I like the razzle-dazzle style. I just had to ease up on the competitive side and not worry about winning. Right now we play about 70 percent basketball and 30 percent of it is skits."

"When we're overseas, we have to put more entertainment into the game. Those people are there for the laughs. When we're in the United States, we have to play more basketball because that's what the people want to see. After all, basketball was founded here."

Yet the question remains, how serious are the Globetrotters about basketball?

"We do try to play to win every night," says Austin. "The Washington Generals (the Trotters' travelling opponents and straight men) try to win every night, too. We have to be prepared."

When the Globetrotters started in 1927, they introduced and

Women's basketball signs 2 prep players

Special to The Observer

The Notre Dame women's basketball team signed two high school seniors to letters of intent yesterday, bringing to three the total of recruits for the 86-87 season.

The first player signed is Anne Schwartz a 6-2 forward from Gabriel Richard High School in Ann Arbor, Mich. Schwartz averaged 21 points and 10 rebounds last year and was named to the all-state first team. In addition the Detroit Free Press and Ann Arbor Journal both named Schwartz to their All-Metor Teams.

"Anne's biggest asset is her ability to rebound well offensively," said Irish head coach Mary DiStanislaio. "She also has the agility and speed to fill the lane and pull up and hit the 17-foot jumper. She complements our total program, and she is an outstanding student-athlete."

The other recruit signed is Julie Garske, a 5-10 swingman from Amherst High School in Amherst, Wis. Garske averaged 25 points and 12 rebounds in her senior campaign and was named to both the UPI and AP all-state first teams.

"Julie is an excellent shooter and a good passer," said DiStanislaio. "She also has the ability to get up and down the floor. She still has a lot to learn, but we think she will grow into our program."

DiStanislaio also said that she got the best player in Wisconsin for the third year in a row (the first two were Sandy Botham and Heidi Bunek) to complete the hat trick.

Schwartz and Garske will join Cathy Emigolz, who signed with the Irish during the November signing period, as next year's freshmen, and Coach DiStanislaio said that all three complement each other as well as the team's style of play.

Harlem Globetrotters

Clyde Austin (above), member of the Harlem Globetrotters, will join in on the antics as his team will visit the ACC tomorrow night. Newest member Lynette Woodward is the first woman Trotter.

Irish baseball splits with MSU, defeats Illinois-Chicago, 11-7

By KEVIN HERBERT
Sports Writer

John Gleeson picked up his third save of the year yesterday to give the Irish an 11-7 win over Illinois-Chicago at cold and windy Jake Kline field.

The win came on the heels of Tuesday doubleheader split with host Michigan State.

"A lack of concentration in the late innings has really plagued us," said Notre Dame head coach Larry Gallo. "We have lacked the killer instinct."

Indeed, Notre Dame has given up a combined total of 14 runs in the final inning of its last three games.

In the opening game Tuesday, the Irish and Spartans were tied at four after five innings of play. Then John Loughran, Mike Moshier and sophomore Pat Pesavento all singled to help give Notre Dame a 7-4 lead.

In the sixth, however, State cut the lead to 7-6 and proceeded to add two more in the seventh to edge the Irish 8-7.

In the second game of the twin-bill, an awesome 22 hit attack sparked Notre Dame past Michigan State 20-11.

Yesterday, the Irish got behind early. After three and a half, Illinois-Chicago led 2-0.

on Ken Soos single to tie the game at two.

Sophomore Chris Flynn then doubled to drive in John Loughran to give Notre Dame a 4-3 lead, a lead it would never relinquish.

The advantage would become 10-2 when Notre Dame scored three more in the fifth and four in the sixth. An insurance run was added in the seventh to make it 11-4 going into the top of the ninth.

The final inning jinx almost plagued the Irish again as the Flames notched five runs and had the bases loaded and the tying run at the plate when Gleeson was called.
