BEIRUT, Lebanon - A terrorist group said yesterday it had killed a kidnapped Briton in retaliation for the U.S. air raids on Libya and urged other factions holding British or American hostages to do the

A videotape accompanying the statement showed a man with a black mask over his eyes, said to be 64-year-old Alec Collett, dangling from a scaffold while a crowd chanted slogans against "American and British arrogance."

Collett, a British journalist on a U.N. assignment, was abducted March 25, 1985, in south Lebanon. The body shown in the videotape bore a strong resemblance to photographs of him released by the United Nations after his abduction.

The Revolutionary Organization of Socialist Moslems, believed linked to renegade Palestinian leader Abu Nidal, provided the fourminute tape to the independent Beirut newspaper An-Nahar. The accompanying typewritten statement in Arabic said Collett was "executed" April 16 in retaliation for Britain's complicity in the U.S. air attacks on Tripoli and Benghazi the day before.

Bodies of two Britons and an American were found last week outside Beirut, and one of them initially was identified as Collett. A statement from their killers said the three were slain in revenge for the raids on Libva and Britain's support of the U.S. action.

A voice heard on the videotape said in Arabic that Collett was hanged at a mass rally, but it did not say where, and the actual hanging was not shown.

The terrorist statement urged all other factions holding American or British hostages to "execute them because the blood of Americans and Britons is now permissible as a result of the criminal acts exercised by murderer Reagan and criminal

The body tentatively identified as Collett's last week proved to be that of Peter Kilburn, 62, an American who was working as a librarian at the American University of Beirut when he disappeared Dec. 3, 1984. The two Britons - Leigh Douglas, 34, and Philip Padfield, 40 - were teachers who were kidnapped March 28.

Their murders were claimed by the Arab Revolutionary Cells, another group believed linked to renegade Abu Nidal, whom the Reagan administration says is supported and harbored by Libya.

The Revolutionary Organization of Socialist Moslems made a claim to An-Nahar last Thursday that it had killed Collett and promised to provide photographs of his hanging later.

Collett was on a writing assignment for the U.N. Relief and Works Agency, which serves Palestinian refugees. His death

Apartheid reforms include scrapping laws says white government Associated Press from living or working in wh

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa - The white government formally announced yesterday that it will make the most sweeping reform in generations of apartheid by scrapping dozens of laws that restrict the movements of blacks.

But it said blacks will still not be permitted to live in white residential areas.

Anti-apartheid leaders complained that the reforms, while welcome, do not address the demands of South Africa's 24 million voteless blacks for a share of political

In another action, Justice Minister Kobie Coetsee announced yesterday that the sentences of at least 20,000 prisoners will be reduced by six months in a general amnesty to be declared May 31.

He said the amnesty, to coincide with the 25th anniversary of the establishment of the Republic of South Africa, will not apply to people imprisoned for offenses related to racial unrest, robbery, rape or from living or working in white areas, was halted yesterday, and the government began releasing prisoners jailed on past offenses. The government said a maximum of 245 prisoners were affected by the move.

Millions of blacks have been arrested under the pass laws.

A policy statement submitted to Parliament in Cape Town described the laws as "a relic of the past." It said the system, called influx control, would be replaced by "planned, positive urbanization" involving a uniform identity document for all races.

Under the reforms, blacks will be free to move from one city or town to another seeking work but will be allowed to live only in authorized residential areas, not with the country's five million whites.

Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu, one of the country's best-known black leaders, cautioned blacks to "be aware of the small print" in the government policy statement.

"Some form of influx control may be brought in through the back door," said Tutu, who won the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize and has just been elected archbishop of Cape Town.

U.S. action in Europe predicted by official

Associated Press

TRIPOLI, Libya - A Libyan official claimed yesterday the United States and Israel are planning terrorist actions in Europe that will be blamed on Moammar Khadafy's government as a pretext for future military attacks on Libya.

The information came from intelligence sources in "friendly nightclub bombing April 5, and 230 states, including European coun-Information Minister Mohammed Sharafeddin told reporters. He gave no further indication of his sources.

Sharafeddin said the attacks would happen "within the next hours," an Arabic phrase that means "in the near future."

"This information stresses that Mossad (Israeli intelligence), together with American intelligence, want to conduct operations in Europe, and they want to put the responsibility upon the Jamahiriya (Libya)," Sharafeddin said.

In Washington, White House spokesman Larry Speaks said, "the CIA is not causing terrorist incidents in Europe."

The Libyan minister said the alleged plot's objectives were "to create a lack of confidence in the European public opinion which is sympathetic with the Jamahiriya. especially after the barbaric American aggression . . . and to create and find a justification for aggression, especially after the failure of the first aggression."

"For this reason, we want to make the public opinion aware of this campaign which is staged by Mossad and American telligence," he said.

When asked what sort of attacks were planned, Sharafeddin replied: "Operations similar to the West Berlin nightclub bombing.'

An American sergeant and a Turkish woman were killed in the people were injured, 63 of them Americans. The United States says the attack on the La Belle disco, a haunt of American soldiers, was planned by Libya.

Sharafeddin was asked how many attacks there would be and replied: "You may ask Mossad and American intelligence. They know the number."

Earlier yesterday evening, the information minister told foreign journalists they must leave the country by the end of the week.

About 250 foreigners were admitted to the North African country after the U.S. air raids April 15 on Tripoli and Benghazi. They were kept in one hotel, taken on carefully guided tours and shown what Khadafy wanted them to see.
"Your mission is over,"

Sharafeddin told the journalists. He said no more tours were scheduled and the government needs the hotel space.

He denied statements by other officials that the expulsions were ordered in retaliation for actions by Western governments against Libya.

In Brief

The results of Saint Mary's hall elections were announced last night. The Kate Brown ticket took the August Hall offices, while the Theresa Bosak ticket won the LeMans Hall positions. Regina Hall office positions were won by the Ann Marie Khan ticket. The unopposed Julie Parrish ticket took the Mc-Candless Hall offices. A run-off election for Holy Cross Hall offices will take place tomorrow between the Halane Young and Julie Bennett tickets. Votes may be cast from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Haggar College Center lobby. - The Observer

Administration, Congress divided over budget-balancing restrictions

Associated Pres

WASHINGTON - The Reagan administration clashed with Congress yesterday in a Supreme Court confrontation over the validity of the law that requires a balanced budget by 1991.

Under brisk questioning from the justices, both sides engaged in a highly technical debate with farreaching practical consequences.

Charles Fried, the administration's top courtroom lawyer, challenged the central provision of the law - the Gramm-Rudman Actthat empowers the comptroller general to determine required levels of deficit reduction.

"Here we have an officer who gives orders to the president," said Fried. "These powers are entirely novel."

He argued that the role of the comptroller general is unlawful because he performs executive functions under Gramm-Rudman but may not be fired by the president.

This grant of authority violates the Constitution," Fried said.

Lawyers for the House, the Senate and the comptroller general defended the law.

Michael Davidson, the Senate's legal counsel, said the comptroller general performs as "a scorekeeper" under Gramm-Rudman, and the real power over deficit reduction is retained by the president and Congress.

"The law, not the comptroller general, determines the desirable limit of deficit financing," Davidson said.

Steven Ross, representing the bipartisan leadership of the House, said the comptroller general's function was the product of painstaking political compromise.

The comptroller general was chosen for his role under Gramm-Rudman because of his independence, Ross said, "in order to insure these calculations were walled off from political considerations."

Several justices suggested the comptroller general is actually a legislative officer, not an independent agent.

The court, expediting consideration of the dispute, is expected to announce its decision by early July.

On Feb. 7, a special three-judge court agreed with the Reagan administration and other challengers to the law and struck down a key provision that would force automatic cuts in the federal deficit.

But the law remains in effect pending the Supreme Court's ruling, and Congress also continues to struggle with balancing the budget.

The first $11.7 billion in spending cuts required by the law took effect March 1, unaffected by the decision of the three-judge panel, which suspended its own ruling pending the Supreme Court review.

The law calls for deeper cuts until all red ink in the federal budget is eliminated by 1991.

The deficit now stands at approximately $208 billion, although some in Congress hope favorable economic developments will reduce it. The Gramm-Rudman law requires the figure to be $144 billion for the next fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

To reach that goal, the law would force across-the-board cuts, with half the money slashed from military spending and half from domestic programs.

Faculty aid.

Macintosh Plus.

Finally, someone has come up with ways to help the faculty get through college.
Our Macintosh™Plus personal computer.

And our Macintosh 512K enhanced personal computer.

Macintosh Plus is designed to give more power to faculty members. It has one full megabyte of RAM. 128K of ROM. And a double-sided, 800K internal disk drive.

Translated, that means it can generate a proposal for a grant faster than you can spend one. Make E. f(x) = f(x+1) as simple as ABC. And store an entire semester's worth of lecture notes on a single $3\frac{1}{2}$ " disk.

As well as help you with extracurricular activities like research, budgeting, administration and publishing.

However, if you're concerned with economics, you might want to consider our Macintosh 512K enhanced with its newly added double-sided 800K internal disk drive. It's considerably more affordable, yet still has enough power to run hundreds of leading software programs.

And should your workload grow, so can your Macintosh 512K. All the way up to Macintosh Plus.

Of course, thanks to our advanced pointand-click mouse technology, both Macintosh computers are incredibly easy to use. So you can immediately do useful things, without spending a useless week in remedial computing class.

Visit your campus microcomputer center for more information and a demonstration.

After all, students aren't the only ones who need a little help getting through college.

President P.W. Botha "still has to answer on the question of political representation for blacks at the decision-making level," Morobe said.

Reaction from white moderates was more enthusiastic. Colin Eglin, leader of the opposition Progressive Federal Party, predicted an economic upturn for the country when it became "free from the restrictions of the past... and imbued with a new positive spirit."

The South African Institute of Race Relations, a private organization, said abolition of the pass laws, along with official recognition of black unions in 1979, was "the most important reform in South Africa since World War II."

The government's policy statement said the government believed "fundamental rights should be protected and that discrimination on the grounds of race or color is not acceptable."

"Maestro's" work reflects spirit

STEPHANIE SIEGEL

What do the Great Hall in O'Shaughnessy, the front of the library, Lewis Hall courtyard and Moreau Seminary, O'Shaughnessy courtvard and many other areas at Notre Same have in common with every major museum in the world? All these locations contain works of the renowned Yugoslavian sculptor Ivan Mestrovic who actually worked and taught at this University for the last eight years of his life. Few students seem aware of the contributions this great man and exceptional artist made to the world and to Notre Dame. From his personal crusade against the evils of communism in his own country, Croatia (later to become Yugoslavia), to the work ethic he taught his dedication to his art, to his inherent spirituality, Mestrovic is an example for all.

Ivan Mestrovic was born in Vrpolje in present-day Yugoslavia on August 15, 1883. His father had been a stone mason as a young man and Ivan first became interested in sculpture by observing his work. From an early age, while tending sheep, Ivan make wood and stone carvings and taught himself to read and write from the Bible, becoming the only literate person in his village. At fifteen he was apprenticed to a stonecutter and less than a year later, through the influence of a Viennese industrialist, was admitted to the Vienna Art Academy despite his lack of formal education.

From his first exhibit in Vienna, Mestrovic became regarded as a revolutionary in art. After four had not changed much. However, succeding exhibits marked Mestrovic as a leading nationalyist chapel, Sacred Heart Church, since his work served to inspire his people in their fight for emancipation from the Austro-Hungarian empire. Although Mestrovic was now indentified as a political figure and had joined the radical Vienna Secessionists, he never neglected his work. Experimenting in a more impressionistic style and creating a large number of portraits, figural groups and nudes, he exhibited throughout Europe and achieved international recognition. In fact, at this time he became acquainted with the world renowned August Rodin who proclaimed Mestrovic "the greatest phenomenon amongst the sculptors!"

> Threatened with imminent arrest at the outbreak of WWI because of his efforts in the fight for a unified and independent Yugoslavia, Mestrovic fled to Italy. At the end of the war the formation of a Yugoslavia ruled by the dictatorial King Alexander I, was not the solution Mestrovic had dreamed of. Consequently he refused election to any office in the new government and continued his work in veritable seclusion.

> By the onset of World War II Mestrovic was so well known that he received a personal summons from Hitler. In refusing it he was reported to have said, "I am a little man in a little studio in a little prohands with a murderer." Whether arrested soon after his refusal and only released as a result of Vatican years at the Academy his images of intervention. He spent the rest of the people and the legendary the war as a refugee in Switzerland, figures of Croatia and the Bible as any return to his homeland was frustrated by the presence of Tito's communism, which had succeeded Fascism in Yugoslavia. Shortly after the war he accepted several religious commissions in Rome but in 1947 moved on to America.

In the United States Mestrovic first accepted a professorship at Syracuse University but as his work at this time was almost entirely devoted to the portrayal of religious figures and portraits he was disappointed in the nonspirtual atmosphere of the school. So when the Rev. Anthony J Lauck, C.S.C suggested that the religious setting of Notre Dame be more conducive to his kind of work, he was extremely ammenable to the idea. In September of 1955, following Fr. Hesburgh's offer of an extensive studio and a Distinguished Professorship, Ivan Mestrovic came to Notre Dame.

The students called him "Maestro" and had a deep admiration for this short, bearded man. He taought in the Old World system, giving critiques of their work as he continued with his own. Professor Robert Leader had joined the staff of the Art Department shortly before Mestrovic's arrival and offered several insights into his role here at Notre Dame. It seems that Mestrovic was adamant in his belief that a successful work of art mèetis no explanation. reiterated this fact to his students on one occasion at the expense of an influential visitor. The woman vince, but I don't have to shake purportedly pointed to a recently completed sculpture and said, "Tell or not this story is correct he was us about this one Maestro." He replied. "Madame, I have spent the last six months telling you about this one!" According to Professor Leader, the greatest contribution he made to this University was hsi instruction, primarily by example, in the success achieved by dedication to the task at hand and neverending hard work. He worked hardre and longer than any student on campus and at age 73 was more than twice their age. In his work he set a standard of excellence for students and professors alike and helped establish art as a respected profession.

Many of Mestrovic's sculptures around the Notre Dame campus have curious histories concerning their construction or acquistion. One such sculpture, Christ and the Samaritan Woman (in the O'Shaughnessy sculpture courtvard) was created in the studio of the Maestro here at Notre Dame, but was shipped to Rome to be bronzed. By explicit directions, on the return trip the well was tied to the bow of the ship so that the new bronze could attain the natural green coloring produced by salt

Another more famous sculpture, the Pieta in Sacred Heart Church was originally conceived after the war in Rome, proceeded to reside in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and finally came to Notre Dame openly exposed on a flatbed to the amazement of other motorists. Mestrovic was once offered $150,000 for this same piece in 1955 by Marshal Tito but preferred not to give any demonstration of support to the communist regime. There are quite a few other interesting examples of his work on campus as well, many of which are consolidated in his old studio (now a gallery of the Snite Museum).

Ivan Mestrovic worked until January 16, 1962 when he fell ill in his studio and died later the same day. However, the spirit of Mestrovic is still alive at Notre Dame, as he once said, "Our works in this world are the impressions left by the wings of our souls, which though they are not eternal are the impress of an eternal being." It is especially important to be aware of this outstanding man as he made a lasting imprint, not only on Notre Dame but on the world, in the words of Amte Tresic, a Croation writer, "Mestrovic is not only a great artist but a very profound thinker. He is Proteus in everlasting evolution, always u.s. same, yet always different, like the time and ambient atmosphere in which he works. He trys to express all the sentiments and aspirations not only of his nation, but of all humanity. He belongs not only to one nation but to all nations and all times."

"I feel very good about the progression of the tight ends so far," said Stewart. "I think Joel has really come on this spring, and I think he has a chance to follow the tradition here and be a great tight end. But Andy Heck could be also with the physical tools he possesses. But there's no question we're in adequate shape right now."

offensive backfield

When record-setting tailback Allen Pinkett made his final carry for the Irish last season, he carried away with him any easy decisions for the Notre Dame coaching staff regarding the position. Things got worse from here.

Leading tailback candidate Hiawatha Francisco's arthritic knees kept him out of action for much of the spring and on the bench where he joined last year's back up, Alonzo Jefferson, who is still recovering from a severe knee injury. Then in the first week of spring workouts, incumbent fullback Frank Stams and freshman tailback D'Juan Francisco both suffered injuries which grounded them for the remainder of the term.

Still, most viewers of the Notre Dame practices could not help but be impressed by the early showing of those called on to fill in the gaps. Included in this group of satisfied observers is Stock.

"The injuries have hurt us and we have a long way to go but if we can stay on track we can be very effective and proficient," he said. "The tailback position has been anchored throughout by Hiawatha Francisco. But his availability is

Whalers win in overtime at home, 2-1

Associated Press

Kevin Dineen scored an unassisted goal 1:07 into overtime, lifting the Hartford Whalers to a 2-1 victory over the Montreal Canadiens last night. The Adams Division series is tied at two games apiece. The fifth game of the series will be played tomorrow night at Montreal.

Dineen picked the puck up in the neutral zone, stepped around defenseman Larry Robinson and lifted a wrist shot over Canadiens goalie Patrick Roy.

Mats Naslund had scored a power-play goal with 7:38 remaining in regulation to tie the game for Montreal.

The Whalers scored first in the first period when a shot by Sylvain Turgeon from close range was partially deflected by Roy and stuffed into the net by Stewart Gavin.

Two other series with surprising results so far continue tonight, with Edmonton at Calgary and St. Louis at Toronto.

day-by-day at this point and we're not yet sure about the fall.

We have three green freshmen in D'Juan, Corny (Southall), and Mark (Green). It's been a good 18 days with these youngsters and Green seems to have stepped out of the pack. He's not quite there yet, but with his talents and instincts he has the potential to be a very good tailback.

For the ex-flanker Green, who has shown breakaway speed along with a good set of hands, the contest for a starting position is unimportant.

"I feel like right now it's just a matter of doing my best and letting things fall together themselves," he said. "It took a while to get used to the new offense but now I feel I and the other backs are starting to make the correct reads and come together. I think we're all going to play. Different people will fill different roles in this offense."

Blocking ahead of the tailbacks will be fullbacks Pernell Taylor and Tom Monahan. Taylor has shown considerable quickness out of the backfield and is the big blocking back needed to clear holes for Green and the tailbacks. The experienced Monahan, meanwhile, has been a consistent performer on virtually every test thrown his way.

While the days of Pinkett's backfield reign may be over, the days of a more balanced attack seem to be looming ahead. And in a Holtz backfield, where one is likely to see a flanker in a wishbone every now and then, one should not take anything for any player for

Irish baseball breaks losing streak

By BOB GORDON Sports Writer

The Irish baseball team entered yesterday's action riding an eightgame losing streak. The most recent loss an 18-0 thrashing, featuring nine Irish errors. Pitcher Mike Passill took his first defeat of the season. Scott Rogers and John Loughran had two hits apiece as Irish bats produced seven total.

An Irish player may have put the Lewis loss best when he said, "Every time we got inside the twenty, we just couldn't punch it in the

But yesterday the Irish got off their endzones and broke their losing streak by splitting a doubleheader with Bowling Green, thus bringing their season record to

After dropping a heart-breaker 4-3 in eleven innings, Notre Dame exploded by abusing Bowling Green, 15-4.

In the first game, Tim Hutson broke a scoreless tie as he nailed his fourth home run of the season over the rightfield wall to give the Irish a 1-0 lead. The lead was short-lived, however, as Bowling Green answered in the top half of the third. The Falcons touched faultless pitcher Kevin Chenail for three unearned runs.

The Falcon rally began with one out when scappy second baseman Mike Moshier committed an error, putting a runner on first who later advanced to third on a blocked pickoff attempt and scored on a single. Then with two out the Falcons got a clutch double and single to post a three-run spot.

The game stayed at 3-1 until the sixth, when Moshier smacked a lead-off double, which kissed the left-field line. Tom Shields reached on a one out walk. Then John Loughran grounded out to the second baseman scoring Moshier from third.

Ken Soos ripped a shot handcuffing the third baseman, which went as an error. Hutson collected his second RBI by singling Shields home. After an inning-strikeout by Rich Vanthournout, the Irish and Falcons were deadlocked at three.

At the top of the seventh. Chenail gave way to relief pitcher Mike Harmon, who was the eventual toughluck loser. Harmon, now 3-3, gave a gutty performance with help from leftfielder Pat Pesavento.

Pesavento gunned down a trying to tag up from third with the goahead run. Pesavento was also a mainstay on the bases with two extra-inning hits, but he did just that stay as Irish bats failed to knock him in.

Harmon's only mistake was a lethal one, a one-out homer to Falcon Rich Welch. Bowling Green pitcher Steve Hiffman got the victory. Harmon's 4 1/3 scoreless innings string ended as did the game.

The loss was especially frustrating to Notre Dame head coach Larry Gallo, who said, "It really hurts because we had our opportunities.'

In the nightcap, the Irish took out ALL that frustration on Bowling Green, pounding them 15-4. Shields and Pesavento led the onslaught with four and three hits respectively, as two of Shields' hits were homers.

Irish pitcher Mark Watzke coasted the distance as Falcon left hander Jeff Hook served up six runs in only one inning. For his one inning of "work", Hook (0-1) earned the loss, before getting the Notre Dame scored early and often with three in the first, four in the second, and five in the third. In these three productive innings, Shields, with five RBI's in the game, wrapped three hits and scored three times. Pesavento and Norm Diebel each had two hits and two runs scored, and Tom Guilfoile also scored twice after being hit by a pitch and then singling.

Tom Shields put a fitting exclamation point in breaking the losing streak with his second homer in the bottom of the sixth, as he and the Irish rolled the Falcons back to Bowling Green. The Slugging Irish are back in action Saturday at home against Bulter in a doubleheader beginning at noon.

Physical play intensifies in Women's Bookstore

By KATHLEEN McKERNAN Sports Writer

Referees started work yesterday in the quarterfinals of the Women's Bookstore Basketball Tournament — and not a round too soon, as moments of physical play increased with the level of competition. Advancing to the semis are We Weren't Cheerleaders in High School, Double Decker Oreo Cookie, Revenge of the Quixotic Quint and The Almosts.

We Weren't Cheerleaders in High School continued its winning string yesterday against Negligence. Fielding a team of freshmen, We Weren't Cheerleaders capitalized on some of Negligence's shooting difficulties to win 15-7. Kathleen McDavid, playing in the low post, dominated Cheerleaders' scoring with six points, while Helen Gilboy paced the rebounding with eight boards. Volleyball player Mary Kay Waller also contributed underneath, and point guard Lauren Romeo honed her defensive skills, holding Negligence's backcourt to a combined 0-of-15 performance.

Challenger and 4 Other Balls of Fire failed to avenge last year's third round loss to Revenge of the Quixotic Quint, losing again this year, 21-10. Last year, the Quint went all the way to the finals with three of its five players. Marilu Almeida, Regi Richter and Kara England. A fourth, Mimi Storen, played against the Quint yesterday on Challenger. Richter led all scorers with nine points. Former varsity guard Denise Basford dropped in eight.

Richter, the Quint's center, expressed her pleasure at playing on the same team with Basford.

"Denise is really good," said Richter. "She's a good all-around athlete. We're really lucky to get

In a minor upset, Double Decker Oreo Cookie defeated Violent Femmes II, the tourney's fourth seed. Oreo Cookie carries its full allowance of varsity athletes with a former basketball player, Lisa Brown, and freshman volleyball players Zanette Bennett and Rochelle Holder. The Femmes, though, kept up with the Cookie. At one point late in the game, Cookie only led 15-13. In the end, however, Double Decker Oreo pulled ahead to win by a final score of 21-15

Oreo Cookie balanced its scoring across the roster. Holder finished with seven, Bennett with six and Brown with five. For the Femmes, dominating center Janet Shander turned in an excellent 9-of-12 performance.

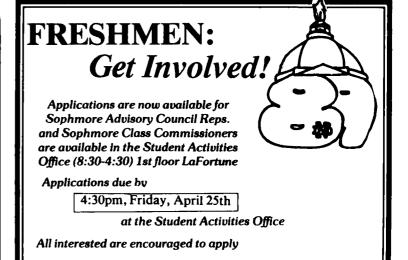

The Almosts, the tourney's third seed, used superior team organization to defeat The Pacers, 21-14. The third seed was simply overpowering on the boards. Patti Mileski pulled down 15, Mary Ellen Mileski had 13 and Laura Gleason grabbed 11.

Most of The Pacers managed to work out a scheduling conflict with registration at Saint Mary's, but the game still began without Lisa McGrath. McGrath entered the competition about 15 minutes into the game as the Pacers were trailing 8-3. Jenn Harto's six points and ten rebounds led the Pacers. Eight points from Gleason carried The Almosts.

The final four remaining teams receive an off day tomorrow before beginning the semifinals on Saturday We Weren't Cheerleaders in High School will take on Double Decker Oreo Cookie, and Revenge of the Quixotic Quint play The Almosts at 5 Saturday on the Stepan courts.

Golfers expect a fight with tough Ohio teams

By ORLANDO RUBIANO
Sports Writer

After spending last weekend in Columbus, the men's golf team will once again return to Ohio. this weekend's site will be in Kent, Ohio , where the Irish will participate in the 13th annual Kent St. invitational, as Ball St., Miami of Ohio, N. Illinois, Ohio and Kent St. are all ranked in the top 10. Windmill Lakes Golf Club will be the site of the tourney, with the format calling for 36 holes Friday, and 18 Saturday on the par 70 course. the Irish will hold a practice round today, before starting play Friday at 8:00 a.m.. They will be paired with tournament favorite Kent St.

Notre Dame coach Noel O'Sullivan says his squad is looking forward to a stiff challenge this weekend, as the team will be making its first appearance in the annual tournament.

"We are very hopeful that this will be a good tournament for us, we need to improve upon last week's finish," O'Sullivan says.
"The key for us may be that we have had past success playing MAC schools, so I think our guys know that they can play well against the rest of the field. We are due, as a team, to play a good tournament."

The Irish hopes for a top finish will ultimately depend on the character of the team. From the ranks emerges one person who exemplifies the word, character. According to O'Sullivan, senior Lon Huffman has exhibited this trait, especially over the last three weeks.

"Lon has been hitting the best, by far, lately," says O'Sullivan. "He has been our number one guy in the last two tournaments we have been in, and in my eyes he has played very impressively."

O'Sullivan also noted that sophomore Richard Connelly could be a pleasnat surprise in the tournament

"Rich is capable of shooting good rounds, which we would most certainly like to see him get, so I think he could be a big factor in us doing well this weekend."

Naturally, the other members of the team will have to pull their own weight if the club has any illusions of finishing first. But, there is little doubt in O'Sullivan's mind that they can win the whole thing.

"I know we can win this tournament, whether we do or not of course, remains to be seen. Looking at it realistically, I would be happy with at least a top three placement. That would be a real compliment for the team."

In the slam dunk contest, Peters used an air toss-bounce-slam move to please not only the judges but the crowd for the win. Despite his lack of size, David Rivers used impressive leaping ability to impress above the rim for second place. Pete Hebert finished third with a solid array of slams.

At the nine foot level, Buscher twirled through a 360-degree leap from the boards to take first. Mike Shimota placed second and Mike Moore third to round out the short man's division. Unfortunately, the crowd was appeased by only one baseline slam by Ken Barlow, as both Barlow and Donald Royal declined the cheers of the gallery.

Bookstore marked by intense play, Peters, Buscher best slam dunkers

By MIKE SZYMANSKI Assistant Sports Editor

The Bookstore XV Sweet Sixteen offered some intense battles yesterday as survival of the fittest narrowed the field to eight teams. The Bookstore courts also witnessed the high-flying slam dunk competition, producing some surprises with Jeff Peters garnering the 10-foot category, and John Buscher slamming for first from nine feet.

With the advent of referees for the third day, perhaps the most fervently contested game was The Embarrassing Stains' 21-18 victory over Mr. Coffey and the Non-Dairy Creamers.

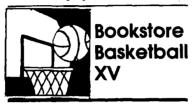

Tim Kempton's 9-of-21 with 12 rebounds, and Mike Kelly's 11 rebounds for the Stains overpowered Creamers' big men Pete Hebert and Eric Janowsky in a highly physical game. Milt Jackson, 6-of-15, and Dave McGuffey, 7-of-20, both gave fine performances in the losing effort.

Tequila White Lightning outlasted a strong second half rally to defeat Tofu Chaka Khan, 21-16. Key free throw shooting and defensive play by Sean Cullinan, 8-of-14, in the stretch sealed the victory. Tequila's Chris Nanni turned in a strong game, shooting 6-of-13. Tofu had its problems from the field as Bill Zadell went 1-of-10, and James Welch shot 2-of-10.

"Tofu played well together," said Nanni, "but we can play better than we did today. Leone's Stallions (Tofu's next opponent) is bigger than us, but we will stick to our running game."

Let's Go Crazy kept its wits while Port-a-Pit played out of control resulting in a Crazy 21-17 victory. Crazy man Chris Perozek was the key performer shooting 5-of-9. Pit players Joe Price, 4-of-15, and Cedric Figaro, 0-of-6, were off, as Pit shot 13-of-49 from the field.

"It was a very physical game inside, we like to run but were hindered by injuries," said Crazy guard Carlton West. "We will need a solid effort against the Fun Bunch in our next game."

The Fun Bunch Finale showed its intent on repeating as champions, downing Bud Melmon and the Fugitive Guys, 21-8. Steve Tracey, 5-of-11 with nine rebounds, and Greg Dingens, 5-of-8 with 10 rebounds dominated the boards, while the Fugitive Guys could not find the shooting mark, going 8-of-39 from the outside.

No team has demonstrated shooting prowess quite like WBBS with Ed Smerciak in the tournament characterized by inside play. WBBS shot 21-of-36 as a team with Kenny Scheurman was the WBBS high man with 6-of-9 in a quickly played contest which took 25 minutes.

Lee's BBQ Roundhouse grilled Shysters, 21-14, as Jim Dolan went 5-of-9 and Tom Antonini pulled down five rebounds. Shyster Dave Corrigan did the bulk of the shooting for his team, going 6-of-Leone's Stallions won easily against Unidentified Grace Defenders, 21-10. Stallion players Bill Sullivan, 6-of-11 and five rebounds, and John Murdo, 4-of-6, paced the scoring as Mike O'Grady pulled down seven boards. The Defenders went 10-of-49 with Steve Takach taking a game high eight rebounds.

David Rivers sky-walked to second place in the slam dunk contest held at the Bookstore courts yesterday. In Sweet Sixteen Bookstore XV action, The Embarassing Stains earned a hardfought victory over Mr. Coffey and the Non-Dairy Creamers. Mike Szymanski details the games at left.

Irish offensive linemen feature potential talent

By MARTY BURNS and MARTY STRASEN Assistant Sports Editors

This spring the Notre Dame offense has really shown something different. And in more ways than just an occasional option pitch or flanker reverse.

Gone are Allen Pinkett, Tim Scannell, Ron Plantz, Tom Doerger and Mike Perrino. Who's in, however, is still anybody's guess "We lost a lot of guys from last year and (the coaches) put in a new system, so it was tough at the beginning," said Heffern. "But we're really not that inexperienced because the second string played a lot last year.

"Also, this year the coaches are stressing the little things, hustling around the ball, enthusiasm. We're finally getting a solid grasp of the offense. We have a ways to go but I definitely feel we're getting close as the 20-practice spring season winds down to its final two ses-

In fact, the only thing that's certain right now for line coaches Tony Yelovich and George Stewart and running back coach Mike Stock is that they have a crop of inexperienced players with the potential to exceed anybody's expectations.

Here, then, is an update on the status of the offensive line and backfield as it stands right now on the spring season.

An offensive line is supposed to create huge holes, but not the type that veterans Scannell, Plantz, Doerger, and Perrino made with their impending graduations. Fortunately for the Irish, veteran starting guard Shawn Heffern does return to add some stability in the trenches.

This loss of depth, along with the new blocking assignments required by head coach Lou Holtz' new offensive system, has opened things up at every other position on the line but the right guard slot manned by Heffern. Still, the unit as a whole has responded well to the challenge and the holes have begun to fill.

r to being able to play against Michigan."

Just who will be playing when the Irish face the Wolverines Sept. 13 is difficult to say at this stage. Besides Heffern, center Chuck Lanza, guards John Askin and Tom Freeman, and tackles Byron Spruell, Pete Rokich, and Tom Rehder have all played well. Among the other candidates for playing time have been converted guard Tom McHugh at center, and Tom Riley, Joe Kelty, Dom Prinziavalli and Rick Michalak filling in the rest of the line.

Veteran Joel Williams seems to have the reins on the tight end position, as his steady imporvement over the spring campaign allowed Rehder's move to tackle. Backing up Williams is emerging freshman Andy Heck, who has been battling it out with walk-on Mike Brennan and converted linebacker Kurt Veteran guard Shawn Heffern (52), pulling here to block for Hiawatha Francisco (33) in spring practice, will add some needed stability to an inexperienced offensive line. With Hiawatha out with arthritic knees, D'Juan Francisco, mark Green and corny Southall will challenge for the vacant position of tailback. Marty Burns and Marty Strasen analyze the situation at right.
