Prosecutors offer 'real world view' to underaged student partygoers

By BUD LUEPKE
Copy Editor

Prosecutors offered students their own view of "the real world" in student partygoers' latest confrontation with the law last night in Nieuwland Science Hall.

"I'm talking to you about the real world," said St. Joseph County Prosecuting Attorney Michael Barnes. "If you are under 21 and drinking, you are in violation of the law," said Barnes.

He said that this law applies whether one is having a glass of wine with one's parents, or drinking at a house-party or in one's dorm room. "Notre Dame is not a sanctuary" from Indiana statutes, he said.

Barnes did not have encouraging words for underage drinkers. "If you're a 19 or 20-year-old sitting with a beer in your hand, you're a dead pigeon," he said, and this means one will be cited for violating the law.

Citations may be followed up by one of three possible alternatives, said Barnes. Students may plead guilty, pay the fine and accept the conviction on their record, or they may plead not guilty and contest the conviction in court. First-time offenders have a third option called pretrial diversion.

Barnes said pre-trial diversion is a contract between a violator and city government whereby the accused consents to a probation period of six months to a year, pays a fee of less than $50 and does 10 to 60 hours of community service. This completed, the conviction will be erased from the criminal record.

"This way, the student gets no record and we get service and we get the fine," Barnes said.

Director of the Pre-trial Diversion Program Linda Scopelitis, also present at the meeting, estimated that 35 to 40 Notre Dame students have opted for pre-trial diversion this year. She said those students who have already paid their fines are not eligible for the program. "If they pay the ticket, they've got the record," she said.

But students questioned the methods police used in issuing those citations. For instance, the breathalyzer... No, the alcohol sensor. Barnes distinguished between the two. He said the breathalyzer indicates the level of intoxication and is used in traffic violations. He said the alcohol sensor has not proven reliable in detecting levels of alcohol consumption but could be used to detect whether a person, such as a minor, has had any alcohol. Yes, students can refuse it, but police will probably arrest anyway, Barnes said.

Arguing with police will not help matters either, said Barnes. "If you give (police) a speech on constitutional law, you only up the ante on going to the can," said Barnes. "The more dialogue you have with police, the more you hike the probability for an arrest. That's just the way the real world works," he said.

Entering a house is determined by probable cause of a crime being committed, said Barnes. "Ultimately, it comes down to the police officer's discretion," he said.

Barnes said dogs were used by police "as a precaution and a show of force."

Barnes, who is a 1973 graduate of the Notre Dame Law School, tried to give perspective to the student drinking menace. "Since I've been here, this has been a continuing problem with Notre Dame students and area residents," he said. He said students should see themselves as members of the South Bend community. "I don't think being a Notre Dame student carries any special privileges ... nor do I

Hesburgh: Learn from presence of foreign students

By MARK DICKINSON
Senior Staff Reporter

University President Father Theodore Hesburgh told students to "learn from the presence of international students in our midst" at the International Student Organization meeting last night.

Hesburgh said Notre Dame students can benefit from international students by experiencing new languages, new cultures, and by gaining a broader sense of the world. He also said international students can learn from students at Notre Dame.

Hesburgh addressed international students by saying "I hope you don't just come here to absorb America. I hope somehow you pass out to Americans some sense of your nation, your people, your culture, and your language."

He went on to encourage Notre Dame students to go abroad on one of the foreign studies programs and to keep speaking the languages they had learned after returning. Hesburgh said it was "a shame so few people make use of the opportunity" to go overseas.

Last night's talk in the Memorial Library auditorium was the first in a series of "Around the World" lectures given by the International Student Organization to promote communication between different nationalities and to expose people to new ideas.

Hesburgh thanked the ISO for their series which he called "long overdue and badly needed at this University." He said, "One of the worst dangers this University and most American universities face is to become provincial, to become ingrown as though the world began and ended wherever the university happens to be ... in this case South Bend, Indiana."

Hesburgh attributes the beginning of his views about international students to his junior year in college when he was sent by Notre Dame to Rome to earn doctorates in philosophy and theology. He found himself a minority and had to learn Italian, Latin, French, and later German.

After three years of study, Hesburgh had to leave Rome in 1940 because of the German blitzkrieg, but he said the 3 years had a "profound effect" on his life. Hesburgh said "It came home to me that the world was much larger than Syracuse, New York or South Bend, Indiana."

Hesburgh estimates there are approximately 450 foreign students from 68 different countries at Notre Dame, but he says he would like to see this number doubled. He admits there aren't more foreign students because of the great expense of coming to school in America.

Delivery of materials, not weather prolongs LaFortune renovations

By ERICH STRAUB
News Staff

Despite delay in the delivery of some materials, renovation of LaFortune Student Center is on schedule for completion in late October, said Don Dedrick, director of the physical plant.

Originally scheduled to be completed before the beginning of the semester, the renovation, Dedrick explained, was slowed because of bad weather and delays in the delivery of material.

Dedrick said, however, that recent weather had been much more favorable.

"The weather has been no problem. Our biggest problem has been delivery of material."

Dedrick cited the Huddle as an example. "The Huddle is essentially complete, but we've had to wait on delivery of kitchen equipment. It should be here by the end of this week, but it will be a good five or six weeks after that before we're through."

Completion of the ballroom, said Dedrick, had been delayed for similar reasons. "The inside of the ballroom has been ready for several months, but we've had to wait on delivery of stone for the stairs. It's just been a struggle to get material delivered on time."

Presently, most of the construction is taking place in the basement area, with the lounge, barbershop, florist, travel agency, and record store, already opened.

Dedrick stated that he hoped to have construction finished as soon as possible. "I appreciate everyone's (the students) patience with the delays. I believe everyone will be pleased and enjoy it (LaFortune) when it's complete."

Dedrick added that much of the building has been completed already and turned over to the students for occupancy.

"The second and third floors are essentially complete, and everyone has moved in as far as I know."

College hoops is all hoopla

"College athletics are a farce." I was sort of shocked when I heard these words. These words came from, of all people, a TV cameraman covering one of Notre Dame's men's home basketball games last year.

He and I were eating hotdogs in the pressroom. The cameraman was taking a break from shooting highlights for a local TV station. I was taking a break from my volunteer job as a statistician for the basketball team.

"All this is made possible by a bunch of teenagers running around playing a game," the cameraman said of the event that was taking place in the arena. The cheering, the crowds, the band, the excitement. All the hoopla. The entire event was meaningless, he said. It was all contrived.

This event seemed to me to be his livelihood. Because someone had contrived this event, he had a job.

Yet he said he hated being there. It was all too shallow.

He would still have a job if there were no "big-time" college basketball, he said. There were plenty of real events involving real people out there that he would rather be covering. All he did here was film a few seconds of a fast break here, a glimpse of an ecstatic crowd there.

Every week, major crimes are committed, premature babies are saved by medical miracles, and happy families celebrate their good fortunes. These are real concerns and real celebrations, he said. This is real news; these things are important.

But at that moment, there were thousands of people around the corner from us in the arena sinking in unison into the depths of despair and then soaring to the heights of celebration all because a bunch of teenagers were playing a game.

One wonders how the first varsity basketball coach at Notre Dame recruited his players. Perhaps he put up a sign in the dining hall and then stood on a soapbox saying, "I know you all came to this fine school because you are bright and you want to get an education. But maybe five of you would like to have a little fun in your spare time."

Consider today's recruiting. We don't look for 4.0s and see if any of them happen to be able to shoot hoops, too. We gun for the best basketball talent in the land and then pray they somehow manage to meet the standards of Proposition 48.

Basketball is the number one priority in our players' lives. If we hear that a player has failed a test, our first fear is not that he may be struggling with his education. Our first fear is for his eligibility.

Traditionally, each Notre Dame basketball season starts out slowly as the Irish play lesser-known and local teams: easy teams. The players study hard in the fall - their second semester eligibility depends on it. Then, after finals are over, the players' heads belong to the coach.

When the TV cameraman spoke of all this hoopla being for some teenagers playing a game, he didn't say that they necessarily have any fun.

Students, alumni, and other fans place incredible pressure on the coaches to produce a winning team. And the coaches place incredible pressure on the players. With so many drills to run, situations to cover, and films to watch, there is little time for fun and games.

Even student managers, who for the most part are volunteers, quickly discover that the pizzazz of the big-time basketball stage show disappears when they go backstage. Locker rooms and closed practices are no bowl of cherries for anybody involved in high-pressure, big-business, big-time basketball. In the big time, there's no room for fun and games.

I had started eating my hotdog at halftime--the hotdogs are free in the pressroom since the press is a key part of the hoopla machine--and I realized by the intermittent roar of the crowd that the second half had been going on for some time. But I wasn't all that eager to get back to the excitement.

Suddenly, the cameraman said, "I'm here because my boss sent me. Why are you here?"

Well, I said, I had started working for the team because I thought it would be fun. That didn't really turn out to be true. But I hung around anyway. The more I saw of the team and the more I thought about college athletics, the more disillusioned I had become. But I hung around anyway.

"But, really, why did you hang around?" he asked as the crowd roared again in the background.

For the same reason the crowd comes out every week. Not to see some teenagers run around and play a game. But for a little of the glory, and for all of the hoopla.

American, Frenchman kidnapped; Arabic statement labels them spys

BEIRUT, Lebanon - A group calling itself the Revolutionary Justice Organization claimed responsibility yesterday for the kidnapping of American accountant Joseph Cicippio. It also said it was holding a Frenchman whose abduction had not been reported previously.

The claim was made in a statement delivered to the independent Beirut newspaper An-Nahar shortly before dawn.

The handwritten Arabic statement, accompanied by pictures of the two men in captivity, claimed that Cicippio was a U.S. spy and that the Frenchman, identified as Marcel Coudry, worked for the French secret service counterterrorism department.

It accused the United States, France and Israel of "preparing for an aggression against our oppressed people under the pretext of terrorism," and said both men would be put on trial.

The statement, which was translated by The Associated Press, also accused the French government of reneging on unspecified pledges allegedly made in negotiations to resolve previous kidnappings.

The Revolutionary Justice Organization previously has claimed responsibility for the abduction of four French television crewmen last March 8, two of whom were released June 20. The group is believed to be composed of pro-Iranian Shiite Muslims.

Cicippio, 56, originally from Norristown, Pa., was kidnapped Sept. 12 by four gunmen on the campus of the American University of Beirut, where he was the acting comptroller.

The Revolutionary Justice Organization said it kidnapped Coudry in Christian east Beirut. It did not say when or give further details.

In Paris, a French Foreign Ministry official disclosed that a French citizen named Marcel Khodari, who had been living in Beirut, disappeared in February.

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, would not say whether Khodari might be the Coudry mentioned in the statement.

A French Embassy official in Beirut said he had no record of a Frenchman named Marcel Coudry being in Lebanon.

An An-Nahar editor, speaking on condition of anonymity, said an envelope containing the statement and photographs of Cicippio and Coudry in captivity was delivered to the newspaper's office in west Beirut.

Another group, the Arab Revolutionary Cells-Omar Moukhtar Forces, claimed Sept. 14 that it kidnapped Cicippio and American educator Frank Herbert Reed, whom gunmen seized when they intercepted his car in west Beirut on Sept. 9.

However, it did not provide photographs of them in captivity to support its claim.

Reed, 53, of Malden, Mass., is director of the Lebanese International School. Like Cicippio, he is a convert to Islam and is married to an Arab woman.

A telephone caller Sept. 9 had claimed Islamic Jihad was responsible for Reed's abduction. The pro-Iranian group holds at least three other American and three French hostages.

But Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, issued a statement two days later, disclaiming Reed's kidnapping and saying that it issues claims only in written statements accompanied by a photo of a hostage.

French Prime Minister urges end to terrorism

UNITED NATIONS - Prime Minister Jacques Chirac of France urged the United Nations yesterday to stamp out international terrorism, which has cost his country nine lives in the past two weeks.

Chirac told the 41st General Assembly that terrorism is the most urgent challenge to the world and requires concrete countermeasures, including joint action to improve security in the air and on the sea.

"The tragic events in Istanbul, Karachi and Paris prove once again that terrorism has become the systematic weapon of a war that knows no borders or seldom has a face," Chirac told delegates.

Nine people have been killed and more than 160 injured in five bombings in Paris since Sept. 8. Terrorists stormed a synagogue in Istanbul, Turkey, on Sept. 6, killing 21 worshippers. Two gunmen also were killed. Twenty people were killed after hijackers opened fire inside a Pan Am jetliner in Karachi, Pakistan, on Sept. 5.

Chirac reminded delegates that among terrorism's victims are the French, American and British hostages held in Lebanon. Word of another French kidnap victim in Lebanon came yesterday, when a group called Revolutionary Justice claimed it had abducted a man the group called a French secret service agent.

Chirac, who entered the U.N. building behind a phalanx of American security agents, said terrorism "would take us back to ages we thought were long gone if we allow it a free hand to corrupt democracies and destroy the basic rules of international life."

The French prime minister addressed the third day of the assembly's so-called "general debate," which features a parade of government leaders from among the 159 U.N. member states.

Other speakers Wednesday included Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid and Chinese Foreign Minister Wu Xuequan.

In his speech, Chirac said countries have "not always shown the necessary lucidity toward this scourge (terrorism) which some would like us to think is the sole means of expression of the oppressed."

"The odious methods it uses, the slaughter of innocent people perpetrated in free societies, the ongoing blackmail over the lives of hostages rule out our confusing, even in some small way, those actions with genuine resistance," Chirac said.

He condemned states "willing to close their eyes to terrorist organizations' activities or that do not hesitate to use them to their own advantage and even actually encourage them."

Panel defines eligibility for new AIDS treatment

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - A panel of experts yesterday finalized criteria on who will be eligible for an expanded trial of the first promising drug treatment for AIDS, but said the information would not be made public until government regulators review it.

Government health officials, academic researchers and representatives of the pharmaceutical company which makes the drug met at the National Institutes of Health for several days before finalizing test criteria.

Kathy Bartlett, a spokeswoman for Burroughs Wellcome Co., developer of the drug, said the research proposal would be submitted tomorrow to the Food and Drug Administration.

"According to the FDA, the review will be completed early the following week," Bartlett said.

Meanwhile, Otis R. Bowen, secretary of health and human services, told restaurant owners they should allow employees with AIDS to keep working in their kitchens.

A waiter or kitchen worker with AIDS should only be taken off the job, Bowen said, if there is "evidence of other infection or illness for which any food service worker should also be restricted."

Bowen told the National Restaurant Association, "All the epidemiologic and laboratory evidence we have indicates that blood-borne and sexually-transmitted infections like AIDS are not transmitted during the preparation or serving of food or beverages."

"No instances of this happening with AIDS have been documented," he added.

After the FDA review of the new Burroughs Wellcome drug, the company's spokeswoman said, criteria for the expanded Investigational New Drug trial will be made public to doctors and those interested in taking part through the toll-free telephone hotline set up to answer questions about azidothymidine, or AZT.

The hotline number is 1-800-843-9388, and it operates everyday between 8 a.m. and midnight (EDT).

House defeats bill for local revenue sharing

WASHINGTON - House leaders yesterday night moved to kill the General Revenue Sharing program without a vote, quietly deleting the $3.4 billion for local governments from an omnibus spending bill scheduled for full House action today.

The House Rules Committee, by voice vote and without debate, sent to the House floor a last-minute substitute for the pending $567 billion measure, deleting only the revenue sharing money.

The action required an abrupt turnaround by Rep. Jamie L. Whitten, D-Miss., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, who had kept alive revenue sharing in the massive spending package despite Reagan administration opposition and Congress' own voted intention to terminate the program in the fiscal 1987 budget.

Whitten had persuaded his committee to cut other programs across-the-board to pay for revenue sharing.

However, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., other House leaders and committee chairman said they opposed extending the program at the cost of others. The federal government, which has been running deficits in excess of $200 billion, can no longer afford to continue passing along money to municipalities, they said.

Under pressure from House leaders, Whitten submitted the substitute plan yesterday. "He had no choice," said an aide, who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

The rules committee then sent the substitute bill to the floor instead of the original, and barred any floor amendments to add the money back in.

Pot, coke use revealed in survey of doctors

Associated Press

BOSTON - Nearly 40 percent of doctors under age 40 admitted in a survey that they used marijuana or cocaine to get high with friends, and a quarter of doctors of all ages said they recently treated themselves with mind-affecting drugs.

Overall, more than half the physicians and three-quarters of the medical students who participated in the Harvard University survey said they have used drugs at least once for self-treatment, to get high or to help them stay awake.

Only 1 percent of the doctors surveyed said their drug use had ever caused them to give poor care to patients.

Most physicians use these drugs only occasionally, if at all. But the researchers say medical students and young doctors are more experienced with drugs than are older physicians. And they predict that the proportion of drug-taking doctors will grow as medical students set up practice and take their habits with them.

"Perhaps for the first time," they wrote, "appreciable although small proportions of persons entering medicine have histories of extensive drug use and dependence."

But they concluded that the drug use they found "should not be cause for great alarm," because it simply reflects growing drug use throughout American life.

"When psychoactive drug use becomes a fad and is approved by the broad spectrum of society, just about all groups get involved," said Dr. William E. McAuliffe, the study's director. "That includes physicians and pharmacists as well, the people who are usually the keepers of the drugs."

McAuliffe, a researcher at the Harvard School of Public Health, published his findings in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine. His study was based on a random survey of 500 practicing physicians and 504 medical students in Massachusetts conducted in November 1984.

think that makes you fair game to pick on," he said.

Barnes said there is no official policy to crack down on Notre Dame parties but that Mayor Parent's press conference on student parties last spring was a response to two parties that were "particularly bad".

Barnes said many problems also existed with non-Notre Dame parties. Scopellitis said the 35 to 40 Notre Dame students on pre-trial diversion represents a small fraction of the 800 presently on the program.

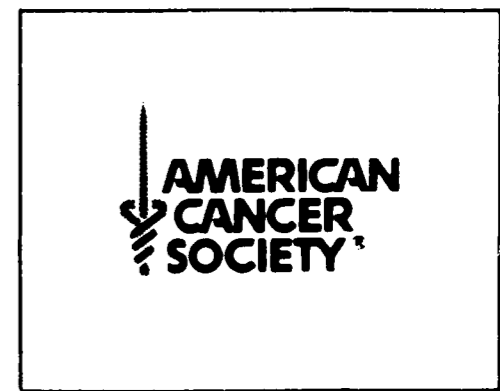

In an accompanying editorial, Dr. David C. Lewis of Brown University recommended more emphasis on the dangers of drug abuse in medical school. He noted that the study found that the students surveyed had received more formal education about drug problems than had practicing doctors.

Soviets consider freeing Daniloff

Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS - Soviet officials yesterday considered a two-stage U.S. proposal to let American newsman Nicholas S. Daniloff leave Moscow, and Secretary of State George P. Shultz left the door open for another meeting with the Soviet foreign minister.

"We're working on it," Shultz said in between meetings with foreign ministers attending a special U.N. General Assembly session.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze held his own series of talks, and told reporters while posing for photographs with French Prime Minister Jacques Chirac: "the less noise the better. We continue to work in a calm atmosphere."

Shultz and Shevardnadze met twice Tuesday. One U.S. official said yesterday that the negotiations were "active," and that Shultz might see Shevardnadze again.

The Reagan administration proposal would let Daniloff leave Moscow while Soviet physicist Gennadi Zakharov is tried in Brooklyn on spy charges. If Zakharov is convicted, he would be exchanged for an unspecified number of Soviet dissidents.

Administration officials publicly refuse to equate the Daniloff and Zakharov cases, saying the U.S. News & World Report correspondent is innocent. They also rule out any trade. But privately, they acknowledge the proposal has been put to the Soviets for consideration.

The proposal was advanced by the Reagan administration soon after Daniloff was arrested on Aug. 30 and appeared this week to be the basis for the U.S.-Soviet discussions.

Shultz merely raised his hand in a restraining gesture when asked by reporters yesterday night if another meeting with Shevardnadze was in the offing. He also refused to say if there was progress in efforts to free Daniloff.

Shevardnadze said earlier yesterday that "we have given good proposals" to the Americans. "They must think about them."

But a U.S. official in Washington said: "there hasn't been anything acceptable to us that the Soviets have proposed yet."

Shevardnadze, emerging from a meeting with a Maltese official at the United Nations, said he still believed there was a chance of resolving the Daniloff dispute.

"Yes, yes, there's a possibility. There is a chance. Everything's up to the American side," he said.

Asked if some sort of exchange had been discussed during the negotiations, he replied: "Don't interfere with them. Give us a chance to work."

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said yesterday in Washington that the "issue is not resolved."

Claiborne pleads for tax evasion acquittal

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Abandoning calm testimony in his own defense, federal Judge Harry E. Claiborne beseeched the Senate Impeachment Committee Tuesday to acquit him if it believes he was the victim of the "brutal errors" of income-tax preparers.

Asked by Sen. Mitch McConnell why a convicted tax evader should be exonerated in his impeachment trial, Claiborne leaned into a microphone and pleaded for acquittal, "If you honestly feel in your heart I got a raw deal."

Claiborne, serving time in a federal prison while still carrying the title, and salary, of chief U.S. district judge for Nevada, testified for the second straight day in his 6-day-old trial.

The trial followed a unanimous House impeachment vote earlier this year. The committee of 12 senators hearing evidence will later hand the case to the full Senate for a verdict on whether Claiborne can keep his lifetime job on the federal bench.

In addition to urging a favorable decision so he could restore his own battered life, the 69-year-old Claiborne maintained that the independence of the federal judiciary would suffer if judges could be "literally chased from the bench for any reason."

Launching into his theme that he was framed by vengeful federal prosecutors, the judge said, "The biggest danger I can see to the federal courts is if ever there be created a buddy relationship between the federal judiciary and the executive branch of government."

65 mph limit OK'd for portions of interstates

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The Senate yesterday approved a $52.3 billion highway bill that would increase the maximum speed limit to 65 mph on rural portions of interstate roads, but a House chairman immediately responded with a threat to let the proposal die.

"I don't know whether we will go to conference as long as this is in the bill," declared Rep. Jim Howard, D-N.J., chairman of the House Public Works and Transportation Committee.

"I don't know how anybody could vote for legislation that could result in so many deaths, in so many paralyzing injuries and other serious injuries on the nation's roads," Howard added in a statement released by his committee.

If the House and Senate versions of the legislation do not go to a conference committee, the differences in the bills would remain unresolved by next month's congressional adjournment.

Thus, the four-year program authorization, which envisions $12.35 billion in federal highway aid annually, would not go to the White House for President Reagan's signature.

The provision to permit state legislatures to raise the speed limit from the current level of 55 mph to 65 mph on portions of the interstate system outside the nation's cities was approved Tuesday night by the Senate.

The lawmakers yesterday approved the bill itself, which would also bar construction of billboards along federal highways.

Americans' labels of Communism are unfounded

One of the things that strikes me most about public opinion in the United States is the fervent anti-communist mood. Frankly, I'm quite shocked at the level of hatred, oversimplification, misinformation and falsification when it comes to the discussion about communism or the Soviet Union.

Peter Palesch
guest column

Be assured, "Communists" are human beings like you or me, have families for whom they care, they enjoy life, yes, they even smile and laugh and they want peace just as we do. Surprised? Well, if you watch movies like Rambo or rely on columns like "Talks with Communists not always the answer" (Kevin J. Smart in The Observer Viewpoint of Sept. 7) you probably are.

What bothers me most in these anti-communist tirades is the often implicit assumption that "we in the West" (as Kevin described the United States and its allies) are the moral superiors. We are the good guys, the others the bad guys. And thus we can justify everything we do in the name of anti-communism (for example the overthrow of truly elected governments in the cases of Chile and Guatemala or the support for so-called "freedom fighters" who specialize in terrorizing the population of Nicaragua). After all communism is a bad and everything against it is a good. Simple, isn't it?

To bolster the claim of the bad communists, some recent Soviet misdeeds are vividly pictured - in most cases the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan provides proof enough for the arguments that the Soviets are aggressive warmongers. At the same time however, it is conveniently overlooked that the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan has its counterpart in the United States' policy via Nicaragua, El Salvador and Guatemala.

Although the justification of the U.S. involvement in these countries, i.e. defense of human rights and democracy against communist aggression suggests a "good cause," I would argue that it is not very different from the Soviet Union's justification of their invasion, i.e. defending Afghanistan against imperialist aggression. This becomes obvious if we look back at the long history of U.S. involvements in Central America: the defense of human rights and democracy did not play any role in the U.S. policy in Central America. What it boils down to is simply the policy of a superpower that does not allow for independent nations in its self-declared security zone. Alone the possibility that such a nation could formulate policies which might be harmful to U.S. interests (whatever these are or whoever defines these) is conceived as a threat that has to be eliminated. Is that so different from what the Soviets are doing?

It is interesting to note that in this context the label "Communist" suddenly takes on a new meaning. Everyone who does not agree with and acts against the status quo easily becomes a Communist just in the same way as in the Soviet Union everyone who fights against the almighty state apparatus may be labeled an imperialist agent (with all its consequences). And again, because being a communist is a bad we do not have to be concerned with human rights or democracy while fighting this communism.

Is that our moral superiority? Isn't the killing of children in Afghanistan as morally wrong as the killing of children in Nicaragua - even if they were "real communist" children? Obviously President Reagan and many in Congress think differently, or probably they don't care.

Another area of supposed proof of Soviet aggression is the arms race. While all we hear about the United States is its need for security, the Soviets are portrayed only as potential aggressors. But don't they have security needs too? After all they experienced painfully what it means to be invaded and they still haven't forgotten this. What should they think of the rapid expansion of the U.S. military force in the light of President Reagan's repeated remarks that the Soviet Union is evil and thus has to be erased? Shouldn't they feel threatened by the U.S. quest for being Number One - and answer with increased military spending?

Please, don't misunderstand me, I don't want to justify any Soviet action like the invasion of Afghanistan nor am I interested in showing how bad "we in the West" really are. But before we raise the claim to be the good guys, we'd better clean up our own house and realize that both, the United States and the Soviet Union are superpowers playing superpower geopolitics. Therefore patriotic self-righteousness is totally out of place.

P.O.Box Q

SYR is defended as high point of semester

Dear Editor:

At the Michigan game two weeks ago I heard 59,075 fans chanting "Lou, Lou." Naturally I assumed they were cheering for our new football coach. Ah, but I was mistaken. Yesterday's Observer showed that the "Lou, Lou" call was actually for Notre Dame's anti-alcohol crusader Lou Sarabano.

After reading Fun Boy Lou's article I found myself in complete agreement. Lou is right. What Notre Dame - nationally known as the Mecca of College social life needs is more administration involvement in our private lives. The University's crackdown on fun should not be halfway: fun should be completely abolished. I nominate Lou a the student leader of this noble crusade.

The first question I want to ask Mr. Sarabando is whether he has ever been to an SYR. Those two nights a semester on which he said we act like "Class A jerks" and have the "Domer mentality" are some of the best nights at Notre Dame.

These nights give us an opportunity to ask someone, either a friend or someone we are interested in, to have a good time in the dorm. Unless you like to get laughed at, "Let's go for a bottle of club soda and discuss the origins of life," just doesn't cut it.

If I'm not mistaken it isn't written on all SYR tickets that the holder of this ticket must get sloppy drunk and vomit uncontrollably in the bathroom.

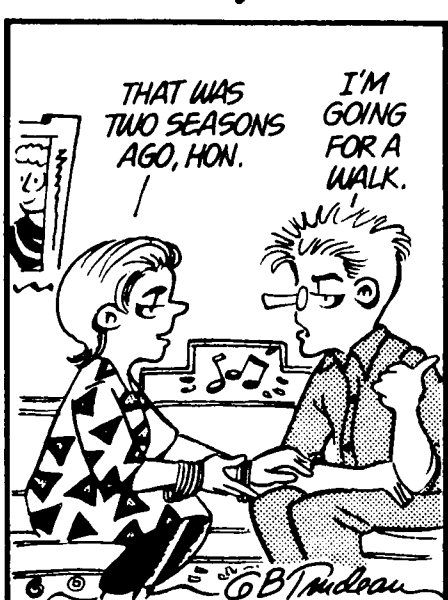

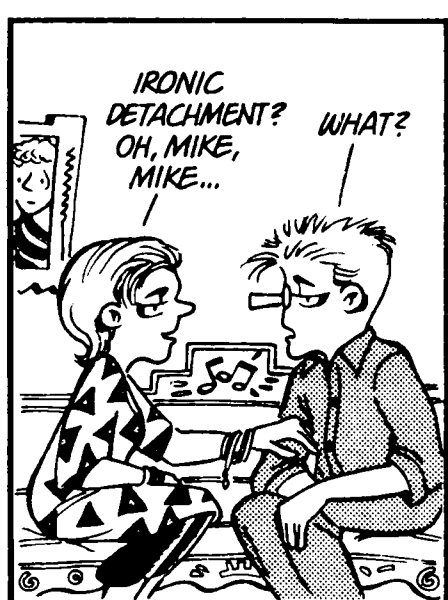

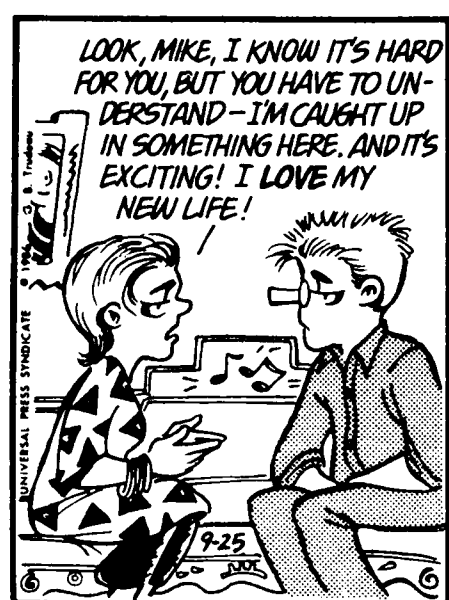

As he said, "If we need alcohol to enjoy our weekends, we are not at the right institution." If we all didn't want the opportunity to drink we would have gone to Brigham Young or Oral Roberts.

The administration gives us the opportunity to have a good time, and I'm sorry if you don't take advantage of it. Why don't you go to an SYR and see how much fun the "other half" has exhibiting the "Domer mentality." Let me know how it goes and maybe we'll do lunch.

Cluchey's 531st Performance In 'Krapp's Last Tape' Masterful

features writer

Rick Cluchey's 531st performance of Samuel Beckett's "Krapp's Last Tape" was a masterful conviction. The audience at Washington Hall, both students and adults, was spiritually and emotionally moved despite a technical breakdown in the sound system.

The intricate spatial arrangement of the stage combined with the mechanical and lyrical details of Cluchey's performance made Beckett's distilled vision of the human condition highly evocative.

On stage

Krapp's Last Tape

Cluchey, appearing in tattered old clothes, was the focal point on a darkened stage advertising a celebration of Beckett, the quintessential writer of the 20th century. Krapp is a mechanism of facial expressions, weary sighs and resonating grunts as he enters his dimly lit den composed merely of a worktable, chair and hanging lamp. The audience was intensely waiting, a common element in Beckett plays, for conversation amid total immersion in Cluchey's detailed use of non-verbal communication.

Cluchey engaged in a series of repetitive, physical and tactical movements and gestures, including a mugged facial expression when confused or concentrating, contrasted with a stark dimensional, almost exaggerated, opening of the eyes when thinking or remembering. All of this pervaded Krapp's systematic eating of banana halves, giving his character an essence of triviality and emptiness.

Following this comical, but yet depressing, scene with an old, preoccupied man with nothing better to engage his mind, Cluchey brings out the essential prop, a reel-to-reel tape recorder and a series of boxes. At this point Krapp began the activity that consumes his waking hours. He looked up a particular tape in a book that indexed each spool, his 39th birthday, "box 3, spool 5." It was at this point Krapp uttered his first audible words, reveling in the word "spool" and cataloging the topics of the tape. When Cluchey began to play the tape, the sound system unfortunately failed to produce causing a break in the performance.

Despite technical difficulties, the show continued flawlessly. In the play Krapp is a 69 year-old man confronting his 39th birthday. While listening to the tape, the audience learns that the man at 39 is not the same man as he was 10 years ago because he has given up all vision of his "Opus Magnum." He wants to return to the time when he was happy with a woman and despite the mention of eight women in the play, it is evident Krapp is a bankrupt lover and desperate alcoholic. In his final tape at age 69, he can only laugh cynically at the tone of his voice, his false

At age 39 Krapp feels that the world is below him, "moving from side to side and up and down," and yet it is also non-existent. It is this same sensation that he reiterates at age 69 but unlike 30 years ago, he does not want to ever return to this life. This serves as the intense ending of Beckett's drama, a portrayal of a depraved human condition.

During his third visit to Notre Dame Cluchey is masterfully teaching his audience a play of a failed human being, written and directed by Beckett. Although this version which Cluchey brings to Notre Dame has differences from the published text, Beckett, the foremost playwright of the absurdist theatre, has successfully compressed his message by stripping the inessentials, making "Krapp's Last Tape" a true poetic and mechanical expression of aging. Krapp is a man who is incarcerated by his failed past, emphasized by his physical swigs of alcohol and mugged facial expressions, trapped in the shadows of a meaningless life and Rick Cluchey's masterful performance of this Beckett character will long be remembered as theatrical genius.

'Growing Up Catholic' Not So Bad

features writer

Growing up Catholic doesn't necessarily sound exciting.

But it was humorous when Maureen Anne Teresa Kelly and Richard Glen Michael Davis, the two authors of the New York Times bestseller "Growing Up Catholic," turned our Catholic lives into a three-ringed circus during their hour of comedy at O'Laughlin Auditorium last night.

It was interesting watching a group of so-called Holy Molies waiting to hear their faith get kicked around. But then again, haven't we always wanted to laugh at our absurd Catholic upbringing?

It was one religious crack after another when the opening line was "May the Lord be with you."

Kelly sported the infamous girls uniform of 100 percent polyester with an understated plaid, peter-pan collar and snazzy pearl snap. Davis, in his conservative blue blazer, casually described his apparel as "the Vatican fall wear, for that matter spring, summer and winter wear too."

The nonchalant back and forth dialogue between Kelly and Davis had the entire crowd envisioning the absurdities of their early parochial school days. For instance, a Nuns favorite word: "NO!"

Remember practicing for your First Communion with pickle slices or quarters? The days when you would go home and play Mass with the neighborhood kids? Or how about going to confession and forgetting the "Bless me Father for I have sinned...?"

Amidst all the knocking of Catholic quirks sat the only Nuns in the auditorium. The three admittedly chuckled and shudders shook. But they kept glancing at one another with looks of utter amazement. The Nuns didn't really groove on the perils of a Catholic girls date.

The girl is supposed to bring a dime, never to slip from between her knees and if it does, she should use it to call home.

She should use a telephone book instead of a guys lap and she is advised never go to restaurants with white table cloths; it could remind her date of bed sheets.

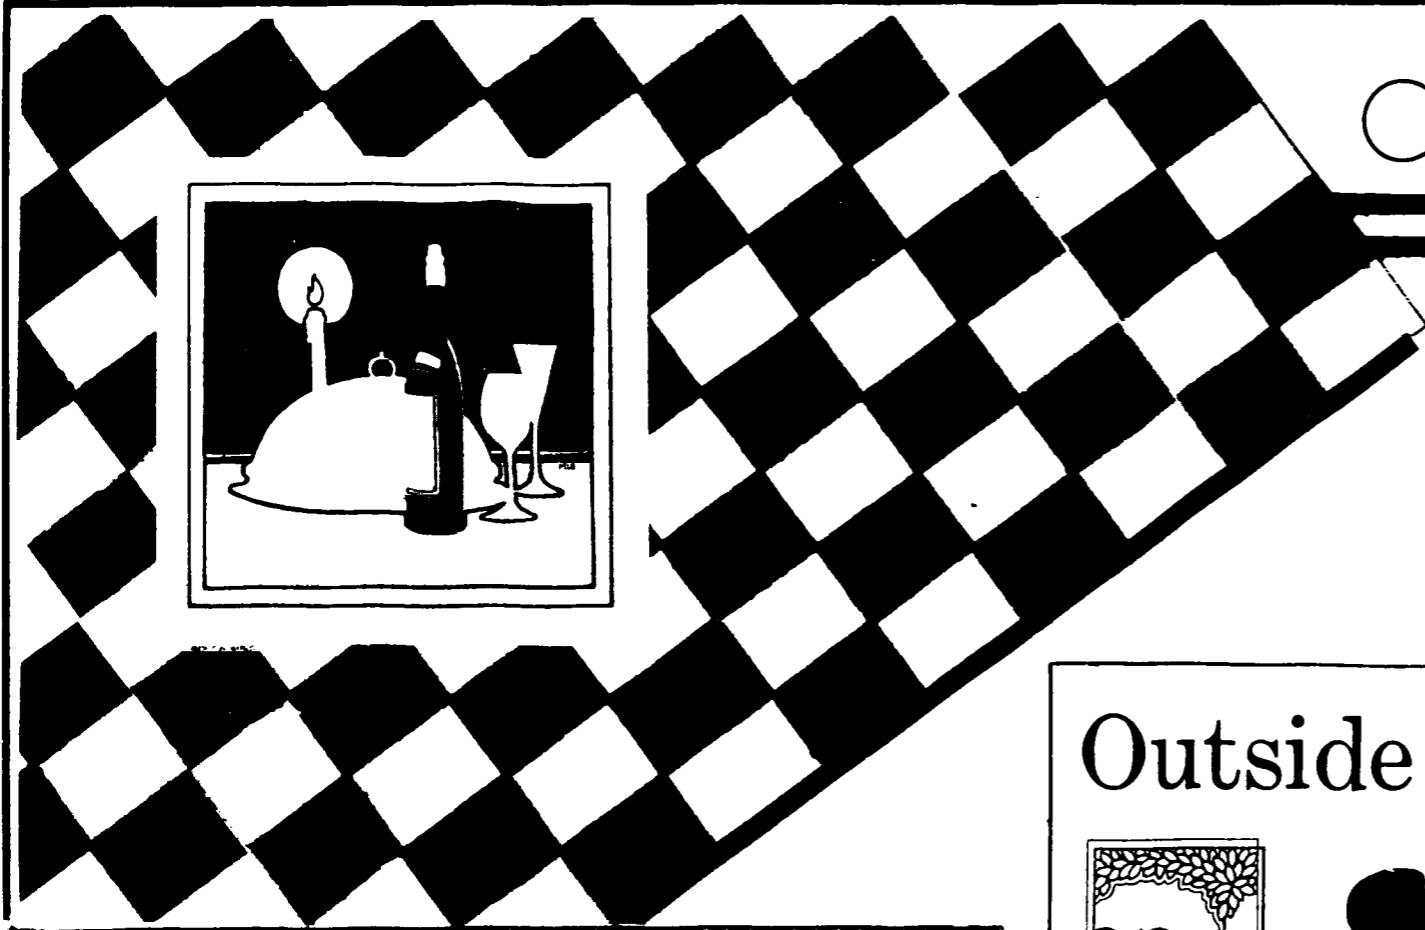

Kelly and Davis also gave some suggestions to encourage the ailing Nun vocation. Instead of calling it celibacy they suggested calling it asexuality. They also suggested changing Convent to Condo.

When they started ranking the qualities to look for in a great Catholic institution, the show became depressing. Number one is a nationally ranked basketball or football team. Kelly and Davis commented that Notre Dame is no longer Saint Lou Of Holtz, is it?

Number two, a good male/female ratio. Number three, bars no further than 20 feet a part. At least they ranked Notre Dame number one as far as Catholic college for sports. We have that going for us.

The question remains will we ever get to heaven? I think so, see you there.

Billy Hatcher (right) and the Houston Astros slid into a guaranteed spot in post-season play, as they clinched a tie for the National League West title with a 6-0 victory over San Francisco last night. Details on this and other major-league baseball games appear at right.

Ryan leads Houston to clinch NL West tie

Associated Press

Blue Jays 8, Tigers 2

HOUSTON - Nolan Ryan pitched no-hit ball for 6 1-3 innings Wednesday night and the Houston Astros clinched a tie for the National League West championship by beating the San Francisco Giants 6-0.

Ryan, who gave a clean single to Mike Aldrete in the seventh, allowed one hit through eight innings. He struck out nine and walked three. Reliever Charlie Kerfeld gave one hit in the ninth.

Ryan, 11-8, holds the major-league record with five no-hitters. He also has pitched nine one-hitters. Ryan has been on the disabled list twice this season with a sore elbow.

The Astros clinched a share of their second NL west title. They won their other championship in 1980.

One more Houston victory or one loss by runnerup Cincinnati will clinch the title for the Astros.

Billy Hatcher and Kevin Bass each drove in two runs and Glenn Davis hit his 30th home run in the seventh. Mike LaCoss, 10-13, took the loss.

Hatcher's two-run single highlighted Houston's three-run fourth inning and made it 4-0.

The Astros led the division through much of the first half of the season and have been in first place since July 21, when they beat Montreal 8-7.

Pirates 2, Expos 1

PITTSBURGH - U.L. Washington singled home the tiebreaking run with two outs in the eighth inning Wednesday night to give the Pittsburgh Pirates a 2-1 victory over the Montreal Expos in a rain-delayed game.

With one out, Barry Bonds drew a walk from Bob McClure, 2-4. Reliever Jeff Reardon got Tony Pena to ground into a force play, but Jim Morrison and Washington followed with singles.

Don Robinson, 3-4, earned the victory with two innings of scoreless relief.

DETROIT - Home runs by Tony Fernandez and Cecil Fielder highlighted a six-run Toronto first inning, and Dave Stieb scattered seven hits over seven innings as the Blue Jays beat the Detroit Tigers 8-2 Wednesday night.

The first-inning uprising came at the expense of Detroit's Dan Petry, 5-9, who lasted just two-thirds of an inning. Stieb, 7-11, struck out six and walked one.

Cardinals 7, Phillies 1

ST. LOUIS - Danny Cox pitched a seven-hitter and got home-run support from John Morris and Andy Van Slyke as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Philadelphia Phillies 7-1 Wednesday night.

Cox, 11-12, struck out five and walked one in pitching his seventh complete game.

Phillies starter Kevin Gross, 11-12, took the loss.

Royals 2, Twins 1

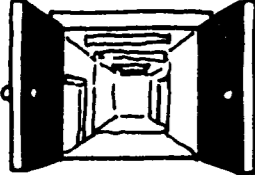

MINNEAPOLIS - Frank White hit a solo homer in the top of the ninth inning, the 46th surrendered this season by Minnesota's Bert Blyleven to tie a record set 30 years ago by Hall-of-Famer Robin Roberts, as the Kansas City Royals beat the Twins 2-1 Wednesday night.

White's homer, his 20th, gave him three of the nine hits allowed by Blyleven, 15-14, who struck out 14 batters and walked none.

Royals starter Mark Gubicza allowed only one run on four hits in 6 1-3 innings before giving way to Dan Quisenberry, 3-7, with a runner on first in the seventh. Quisenberry got pinch-hitter Randy Bush to ground into a double play on the first pitch to end the inning.

Michelle Dasso, the No.1 singles player, is Notre Dame's best bet as the women's tennis team heads to Evanston, Ill., for the Midwest Intercollegiates. Steve Magargee previews the young team's trip in his story at right.

Young tennis squad heads for tournament

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Sports Writer

After an improved performance at its own Irish Invitational Tournament last weekend, the underclassmen-dominated women's tennis team faces perhaps its toughest competition of the fall this weekend in the Midwest Intercollegiates at Evanston, Ill.

The tournament, which starts today, is an individual-flight competition of 64 singles players and 32 doubles teams. Even though team points will not be recorded, the Irish will run up against players from some of the top schools in the country - including defending champion and host school Northwestern, currently ranked seventh in the nation.

"It's a tough field. There will be teams from the Top 20 and some from the Top 10," said Head Coach Michelle Gelfman. "It's not a team competition. It centers on individuals, so there's not as much pressure on the individual to score points for the team. They'll be playing more relaxed than they usually do."

Competing with players from high-caliber teams like Northwestern in the fall season will bring some needed playing experience to an extremely young team.

Four freshmen, second-seeded Stephanie Tolstedt, third-seeded Alice Lohrer, sixth-seeded Resa Kelly, and eighth-seeded Patty O'Byrne, will be among the eight students playing in the tournament. Two more, fifth-seeded Natalie Illig and seventh-seeded Julie Sullivan, are sophomores.

Junior Michelle Dasso is the top-seeded singles player, and fourth-seeded Tammy Schmidt is the lone senior on the team.

"We're really in the process of rebuilding and revamping the team. I think we'll come up with a record that will be very respectable by the end of the spring season," said Gelfman. "They (the freshmen) have the opportunity to be outstanding tennis players as their four years go by."

The Irish can look at last weekend's Irish Invitational as one big step of improvement. After disappointing losses in dual matches to Illinois and Miami of Ohio the previous week, Notre Dame rebounded with a solid showing in its own tournament, which, like the Midwest Intercollegiates, is an individual-flight tournament. Although team scores were not recorded, the Irish would have placed second or third among the five schools which participated.

"I was very impressed with the way we played. We really capitalized on our doubles play a lot more than we did in the past, and it seemed to pay off," said Gelfman.

Notre Dame's doubles teams are Dasso and Tolstedt, Lohrer and Illig, Schmidt and Kelly, and Sullivan and O'Byrne.

Even though the Irish face a difficult fall schedule, Gelfman said her major concern was with the team's spring season.

"The fall season is an adjustment season for us. Even though we play a lot of matches in the fall, the heaviest part of the schedule is in the spring," said Gelfman.

Dolphin defense "high schoolish"

Associated Press

MIAMI - The adjective "high schoolish" was thrown out by a coach and a player in describing the once proud Miami Dolphins defense.

Another member of that shell-shocked corps was kinder, comparing the way he and his cohorts are playing to his earlier stint with a first-year professional expansion team.

The Dolphins have given up 111 points and 444.7 yards per game in their first three games. In 1973, by contrast, the Dolphins gave up only 150 points the entire season.

With a 50-28 loss to San Diego and a 51-45 overtime loss to the New York Jets, Miami is the first team to give up 50 points in more than one game in a season since the 1967 Denver Broncos. The Dolphins now have 13 games to establish a league record of three 50-point debacles.

The 1-2 start Miami beat the Indianapolis Colts 30-10 between the two losses is the worst since Don Shula took over as coach in 1970.

Amid the desolation, there is hope.

"This will be a great, great story when we bounce back and do a great job from here on out," fifth-year cornerback William Judson said. "And I think it will happen."

"We lost our composure against the Jets and against San Diego," Judson said.

"When you do all that you can do, you're going to get beat some time. But when you make a mental error and let a guy go down the field on you, you feel stupid. That's high schoolish."

He said the Dolphins need to concentrate on the positive, and look at films of past games when they have played well.

Veteran safety Lyle Blackwood also is preaching the power of positive thinking. But he admits it's hard to be positive after giving up 1,081 yards in two games.

"The only situation similar to this for me was at Seattle when it was an expansion team," said Blackwood, a 14-year veteran playing with his fourth NFL team.

Tom Freeman, who came to Notre Dame as a defensive player, has found himself a spot in the starting lineup on offense at left guard. Mike Szymanski features the versatile senior at right.

Freeman now starting in new offensive role

By MIKE SZYMANSKI
Senior Sports Writer

Most people resist change initially, but eventually find that the things turn out for the better. That is exactly the story of Notre Dame left guard Tom Freeman.

Freeman, a 6-4, 265-pound senior, came to Notre Dame as a defensive lineman his freshman year, but did not see varsity action. Gerry Faust then had a suggestion.

"At the end of freshman year," said Freeman, "I was at linebacker when Coach Faust first asked me to move to the offensive line. I liked defense though, and at the time I thought I had a better chance to play there.

"When we returned after summer, Faust told me that I would have to beat out Byron Spruell and Tom Rehder to play on defense, and after the first week of practice, he decided that I was needed on the offensive line.

"He told me that I would never make it if I continued to rebel." Not being the type that makes trouble, Freeman accepted his new duties, and he has not looked back since.

"I changed my goals," said Freeman, "now I really enjoy the position. It takes great concentration since you have to think about every move. It takes more control than defensive play, and the precise nature of the position is a challenge for me."

Generally speaking, defensive linemen are mean, slightly crazed, intimidating players on the field, but Freeman does not see them in that light.

"They don't scare you, because you control the offense. If you do our job the right way, we feel no one can stop us as Michigan learned." SMU noseguard Jerry Ball, Outland Trophy and Lombardi Award candidate, is regarded by Freeman as the best player he will face.

Freeman brings added quickness to the run-blocking game as his main attribute. "For me, the biggest thing I need to improve is technique," said Freeman.

Fortunately, Notre Dame offensive line coach Tony Yelovich is a stickler for technique.

"If you are going to be good," said Yelovich, "you have to have the fundamentals." Yelovich carries a wooden stick at practice, often inserting it in the space between linemen in order to measure line splits. "Freeman has a great attitude, good work habits, and a tremendous effort. Like all of our linemen, he is still in a learning process, gaining experience fast."

The Irish offensive line appeared to be a question mark before the season began because of the lack of experience, but Notre Dame rolled up 192 yards rushing and 455 yards total offense against a highly-touted Michigan defense, and 341 yards total offense against Michigan State.

"People forgot that last year, the second team offense moved the ball and scored against Purdue, Penn State, and Miami," said Freeman. "I knew we worked well as a group. We were smaller than Michigan but those teams are huge compared to the rest of the schedule. Right now, I am the smallest at 265 after Rehder moved up.

Part of the reason for Notre Dame's offensive success is the new, innovative offensive schemes of Lou Holtz and Company. "It was very confusing at the beginning when they threw the whole offense at us in three days," said Freeman, "but it became a matter of practicing over and over again.

"We used to have a quick and a strong side, where the strong side would switch according to the tight end. Now, only the tight end switches, thus you get to know the person your blocking against. You face him all day. It is easier to then make adjustments accordingly.

"Our biggest asset is our enthusiasm as a unit, we have to work in order to win, people do not give up just because we are Notre Dame. It is easy for people to get discouraged, but it has not happened. In a way the two losses have helped us to work harder than we would have if we were undefeated.

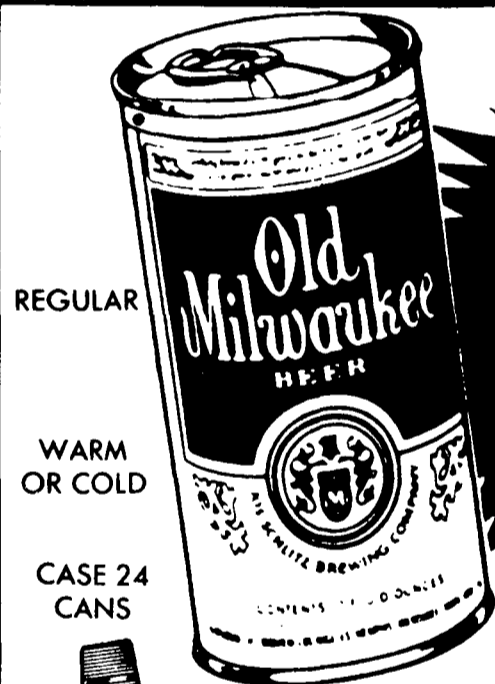

"Coach Holtz told us that the difference between us being 2-0 and ranked fourth in the country is two plays."

two months off of that. I'm so anxious to play but I have to be calm and realize it will all come one day."

For now, Jefferson will have to be content with running through block drills and working with the prep team to give the Irish defense a look at their upcoming opponents. Although there is not much real contact involved - Jefferson's knees still lack some of the required strength for that - it is has been encouraging nevertheless.

"It feels great to get back in and run the plays, for there was always that thought lingering in my mind that I wouldn't make it back," said Jefferson. "I have another year of eligibility now and I have thought about coming back constantly. A lot will depend on how I do this year."

What about the fumble against Michigan?

"I don't see it in my dreams, I don't really even remember it," he said. "I guess when something traumatic happens, like they say, you forget about it. I've never even seen it on tape yet. But after I get back in the game, then someday I'm going to want to see it and I will."

That is, if the determined Jefferson isn't too busy watching the highlight films of his inspiring comeback.

EXTRA POINTS - Notre Dame will play before a national television audience for the fourth straight week on Oct. 4 when it travels to Birmingham, Ala. for a game with the third-ranked Crimson Tide. ABC-TV picked up the option on the game and scheduled it for 2:30 p.m.

ND soccer team ups record to 7-2 after 10-0 shutout of Blue Demons

By BOB KEMPER
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame soccer team upped its record to 7-2 yesterday with a 10-0 thrashing of DePaul at Alumni Field.

The Irish dominated the game throughout, and utilized great team play. DePaul, which fell to 2-4, trails in the series between the two schools, 5-0.

Sophomore midfielder Joe Sternberg led the scoring barrage by recording the first hat trick of his collegiate career. He added two assists to go along with his three goals. Senior goalkeeper Hugh Breslin registered the shutout. While he was credited with only four saves, two were spectacular open-field stops on breakaways.

Coach Dennis Grace was quite pleased with the team's effort. "We are pretty much injury-free now, and since the setback at Michigan State the guys have been pretty hungry," commented Grace. "It was a great team effort. The only disappointment was that I could not substitute more than seven players. I wish everyone could have played today."

For unknown reasons, the DePaul head coach decided not to wave the seven-man substitution limit.

The Irish controlled the ball so well that play was contained almost entirely to Notre Dame's end of the field. The fact that the Irish had 35 shots on goal compared to four for the Blue Demons was glaring testimony to Notre Dame's dominance. In addition, the Irish had the benefit of 14 corner kicks.

Freshman midfielder Rolfe Behrje began the scoring onslaught at 15:20 of the first half with an assist by sophomore midfielder Randy Morris. Sternberg quickly responded with two goals at 21:20 and 26:29 assisted by junior forward Bruce McCourt and junior sweeper Steve Lowney, respectively. McCourt closed out the first half scoring at 35:15 with a goal set up by Morris.

Sophomore stopper John Guignon wasted no time in joining the scoring parade as he tallied an unassisted goal 16 seconds into the second half. Behrje registered his second goal at 7:35 with an assist by Sternberg. McCourt then set up Sternberg for his third and final goal at 12:35. Morris added a pair of unassisted goals at 23:09 and 24:51. Senior wingback Marvin Lett added the final nail to the coffin at 43:59 with a goal assisted by Sternberg.

Notre Dame travels to Dayton, Ohio this weekend for the Wright State Invitational. They face Miami (Ohio) on Saturday and Wright State on Sunday.

in a match played yesterday. Rick Rietbrock has the story at right.

Irish overcome BGU despite lackluster game

By RICK RIETBROCK
Sports Writer

Notre Dame head coach Art Lambert must be happy that it is not always whether you win or lose, but how you play the game. His volleyball team posted a four-game triumph over Bowling Green but looked less than impressive doing it.

Lambert went even farther in describing his team's performance.

"This was probably our worst outing of the year," he said. I can't think of anyone who really had a good night tonight."

The sloppiness showed at the very beginning of the match. Notre Dame fell behind early, 3-7, because of poor timing on attacks and several missed serves.

Then Kathy Cunningham brought the Irish back with a series of kills and dinks that put the Notre Dame in front 10-8. The Irish went on to post a 15-10 victory.

The second game was a disaster. Bowling Green jumped out to a 5-0 lead. The Irish pulled to within one, but the Falcons scored eight unanswered points on the way to a 15-5 blowout.

Notre Dame came back with possibly its best game in the third contest. Several well-placed shots by freshman setter Taryn Collins led the Irish to a convincing 15-6 victory.

Notre Dame appeared to be on its way to another big victory in the last game but a scrappy performance by Bowling Green made the game into a thriller.

The Irish jumped out to a 7-3 lead behind Zanette Bennett's quick start, but the Falcons came back to assume a 10-9 lead.

The game stayed tight the rest of the way with the Irish getting clutch game point side-outs at 14-15, on a Cunningham kill, and at 15-16 on a Mary Kay Waller kill.

Holtz steps up work on kicking game

Notre Dame kickers Dan Sorenson, John Carney, (and Steve Beuerlein) no doubt had a tough time watching the game films this week of their respective specialty units' performances in the loss to Michigan State.

But not nearly as tough a time as did the punter for the Pittsburgh Panthers, who probably saw enough in his nightmares of his unit's effort against Purdue to fill up a season of film sessions.

"The first time (Purdue) went after the punter I thought they had broken the young man's leg," said an incredulous Lou Holtz, when asked his opinion about the Boilermakers' stunning punt-rush team that blocked three Panther punts in the game. "They had hit his leg before he had even touched the ball. I just have never seen a football team get pressure on a punter like Purdue did."

The Pittsburgh kicker actually suffered little more than a bruised leg to go with his bruised ego and bruised confidence in his blockers. And though Holtz is not certain whether the Boilermakers' effort was due more to a good relationship among the Purdue rushers or a bad one between the Pitt kicker and his teammates, he is taking no chances.

"I feel much better about our kicking game now than I did last Sunday," he said. "We have worked very hard on it this week in practice."

The kicking game has become an area of immediate concern this week because of the critical mistakes and problems that have occurred in the two Notre Dame losses. Michigan capitalized on a muffed kick-off return and a missed point-after-touchdown try, while Michigan

State blocked one punt and watched as Notre Dame missed another field goal and sent a quick-kick sputtering 15 yards to set up Spartan scores.

These miscues proved to Holtz just how important it was to get his special teams ready. And the fact that the next Irish opponent, Purdue, had a 95-yard kick return to go with its three blocks last week, only strengthened his resolve.

Marty Burns
Football Notebook

"Our kicking game will never be challenged like it will this week against Purdue," Holtz noted. "The pressure they put on the kicker is just unbelievable, and (Purdue kick-returner) Rod Woodson has already returned one for 95 yards. On the third punt-block, they didn't even block it. They were in so fast the guy didn't even try to kick it - and he was on his own 8-yard line."

It is not understatement to say that on Saturday there will be two (maybe three?) Notre Dame kickers who will be very grateful for the extra time spent this week in practice working on the kicking game.

Perhaps nobody has learned the painful lesson of how important the special teams are than senior tailback Alonzo Jefferson.

Almost a year ago to date, moments into the second half of Notre Dame's season-opener against Michigan, the 5-9, 179-pound reserve player lay on a stretcher in Michigan Stadium, his knee ligaments torn up from the helmet of a Wolverine player. Jefferson had been attempting to recover his bobbled catch of the second-half kickoff, when his knee met the striped headgear of the Michigan player.

At the time of the fumble, Notre Dame was clinging to a 9-3 lead. Michigan, however, went in three plays later to take the lead, and then held on for a 20-12 upset of the Irish.

The prognosis for Jefferson, at least 18 months of rehabilitation after surgery, was disheartening for the long-time reserve player who was figuring on a real shot at the No. 1 tailback slot in 1986 after the graduation of Allen Pinkett. To make the whole affair even more sad, that day last year was Jefferson's 20th birthday.

Tuesday, however, on the practice fields behind the ACC, Jefferson was allowed to resume practice with the team - six months ahead of schedule. It was a re-birth of sorts for the fleshy little player who, even while injured, always took an active role in practices by offering encouragement and support.

"I always kept the deep drive to get back in it and I always knew I would make it," said Jefferson. "I'm six months ahead of schedule but I'm still trying to knock
