Student to appear before grand jury on fatal accident

By MARK PANKOWSKI
News Editor

A county grand jury will decide today whether to indict a Notre Dame student in connection with the Dec. 6 accident that killed junior Michael Cogswell.

The 21-year-old student has been subpoenaed to testify before the grand jury in St. Joseph County Superior Court, the county prosecutor's office said.

Notre Dame senior Douglas Meier said he also was subpoenaed to testify at the hearing, which is closed to the public. Meier said he was driving in the area when the accident occurred.

The six-member grand jury will review police records and listen to testimony to determine what charges, if any, to indict the student on, the prosecutor's office said.

The student was arrested on the charge of driving while intoxicated after he submitted to two blood-alcohol tests, said Cpl. Mary Potter of the county police department.

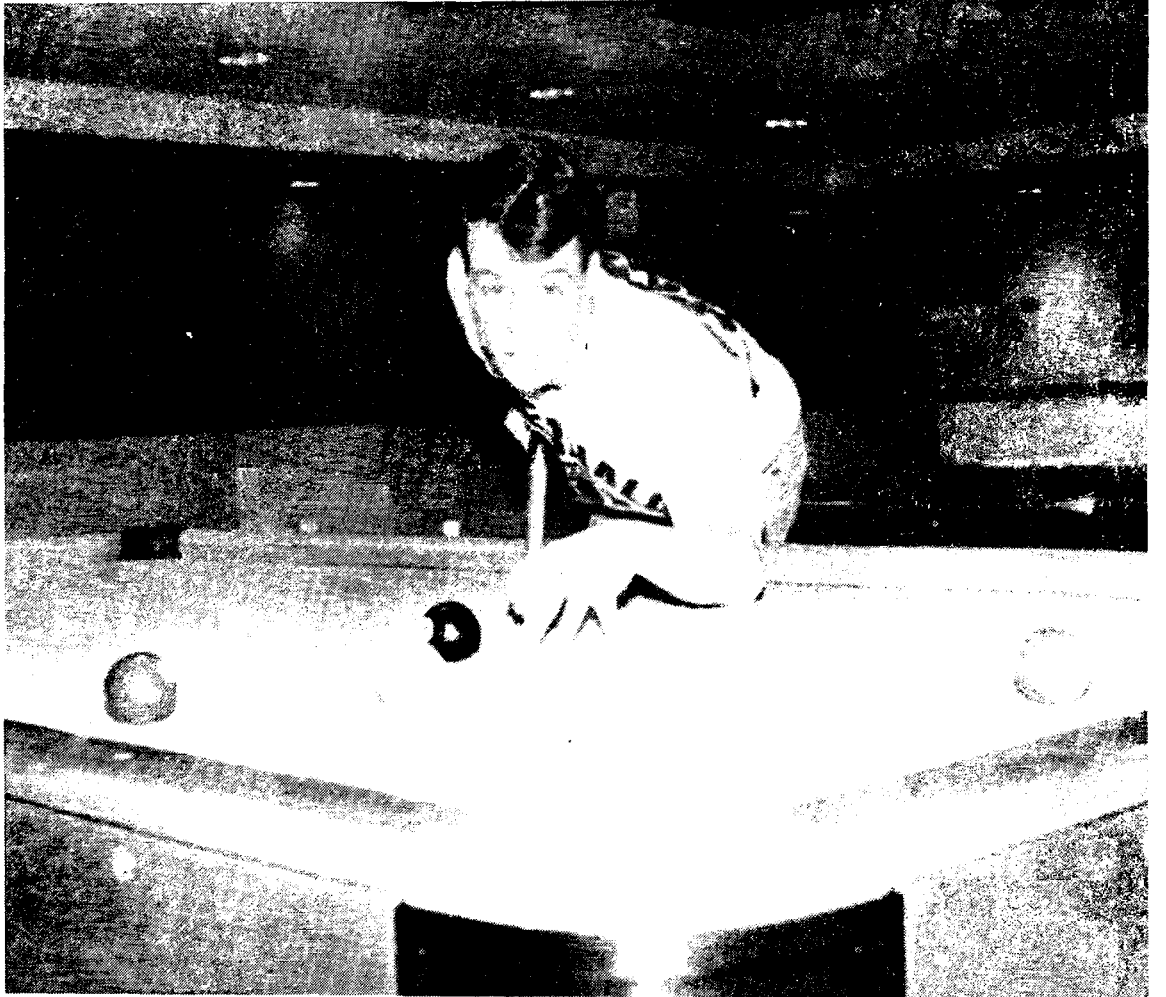

The prosecutor's office did not charge the student, but instead sent the case to the grand jury for review.

Potter said the student told police he was driving east on Saint Mary's Road, stopped at a stop sign, then went forward and hit an unknown object.

Michael Cogswell, a Zahm Hall resident, died from massive head injuries 10 hours later.

One of his roommates said Cogswell was walking home with two friends when he was struck. They were returning from a party at the Saint Mary's Clubhouse, he said.

The two friends are participating in foreign-study programs this semester, he said. They apparently will not return to testify before the grand jury.

Reagan tells nation he "regrets" selling arms to Iranians

Associated Press

WASHINGTON -President Reagan told the nation Tuesday night that he now regrets his failed risk in selling arms to Iran but, despite the continuing furor, "will not sit idly by if our interests and our friends in the Middle East are threatened."

He said he did not want to see an America that had become "so obsessed with failure that we refused to take risks that could further the cause of peace and freedom in the world."

The president delivered his sixth State of the Union address as the Pentagon shifted its overseas naval forces in what one source described as a response to recent hostage-takings in Lebanon.

Reagan said relatively little about the situation in Lebanon and used the bulk of his remarks to lay out the agenda for the last two years of his presidency.

In introducing wide-ranging remarks involving America's competitiveness overseas, its relations with the Soviet Union and its budget problems at home, he said, "Now, ladies and gentlemen of the Congress, why don't we get down to work?"

Democratic congressional leaders, responding to the president in their own televised remarks, said they were willing to cooperate with Reagan, but that he must first answer questions about the sale of arms to Iran and whether he intended to swap arms for hostages.

"The administration's recent dealings with Iran have cast a long shadow over this country," said Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia. "The sale of arms to Iran - in direct contradiction to our stated foreign policy--raises real questions about trust."

"The administration has the obligation to tell the American people exactly what led to the arms-for-hostage deal--and what happened to accountability in the White House," Byrd said.

The president's speech was broadcast live from the chamber of the House of Representatives before a joint session of Congress. Smiling and looking fit, Reagan was applauded warmly as he returned to the public eye after a month's absence following the holidays and recuperation from prostate surgery.

Reagan said it was not wrong to try to establish contact with a nation of strategic importance and "certainly it was not wrong to try to secure freedom for our citizens held in barbaric captivity."

He added, "But we did not achieve what we wished, and serious mistakes were made in trying to do so."

Reagan said his administration had made progress on many fronts but "I have one major regret."

"I took a risk with regard to our action in Iran. It did not work and for that I assume full responsibility," Reagan said.

While mentioning mistakes, Reagan did not say he, specifically, was guilty of any. Unlike his earlier statements on the subject, Reagan-- in a single sentence--linked the effort to open contacts with Iran with trying to win the release of the hostages. The administration insisted previously that release of hostages was merely a byproduct of establishing a relationship with "moderate" elements in Iran.

Reagan did not offer any new revelations about the arms sale and later diversion of profits to Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

While pledging to find out the facts and take any necessary action, Reagan said that "in debating the past, we must not deny ourselves successes of the future. Let it never be said of this generation of Americans that we became so obsessed with failure that we refused to take risks that could further the cause of peace and freedom in the world."

"Much is at stake here and the nation and the world are watching to see if we go forward together in the national interest, or if we let partisanship weaken us," Reagan said.

He added: "Let there be no mistake about American policy: we will not sit idly by if our interests or our friends in the Middle East are threatened."

Dorm relocation proposal discussed by HPC

By REGIS COCCIA
Assistant News Editor

A proposal for the relocation of the residents of Howard, Holy Cross and Carroll halls was discussed at Tuesday night's Hall Presidents' Council meeting.

"The idea is to plan now and get some input before (the administration) makes their decision," said Student Senator Brian Holst, who collaborated on the proposed program with Holy Cross President John Powers and Carroll President Tim Salmon.

"The proposal is going to be effective in three years, but of course we don't know how it's going to work," Holst said. According to Holst, the proposal is "a fair and favorable means of relocating displaced residents without adversely affecting the residents of halls which are to remain open."

Holst said the proposal recommends that no freshmen be admitted to either Carroll or Holy Cross Hall in the last year of its existence as an undergraduate residence.

"We've got a limited number of spaces and the housing office has already got names for them," said Carroll Hall President Tim Salmon. "We're just trying now to determine how many spaces we've got because we've got guys coming back from overseas so we're trying to get that coordinated," Salmon said.

The relocation program proposes that "members of a displaced hall should hold a 'dorm pick' within their hall in the same fashion as they would conduct regular 'room picks', only a few weeks earlier. A 'dorm pick' would allow residents to choose the hall they want to move into, in accordance with availability.

"During 'dorm picks', a student would be able to pull in up to three of his fellow residents with him," the proposal states. The proposal also recommends that each dorm be required to

Lee's Grill correction

Because of an editing error, an article about a Jan. 16 raid of Lee's Ribs was reprinted in the place of a story on a Jan. 25 raid. The more recent raid is contained in today's inside column and a brief on page 2.

In Brief

Three arrests were made Sunday during the second raid in two weeks of Lee's Grill and Bar-B-Q. Arrested for disorderly conduct and resisting law enforcement was Timothy A. Kerper, 21, of N. Notre Dame Ave. Arrested for false informing and being a minor in a tavern was Julie A. Whiteman, 19, of LeMans Hall, Saint Mary's. Maria A. Vitek, 19, of Glenview, Ill., was arrested for being a minor in a tavern. All three were taken to St. Joseph County jail and booked Sunday morning. -The Observer

Lightning strikes twice when it comes to Lee's raids

A flyer for Saturday night's events at Lee's Grill and Bar-B-Q declared that "Lightning never strikes in the same place twice."

Lightning's been comin' in pairs ever since. Law officers rained upon the bar like bolts from above Sunday morning, making three arrests and leaving 10 cited students in their wake.

It was the second time in two weeks that the bar has been invaded by officers from South Bend, Indiana State, and Indiana State Excise police forces, according to Lt. Richard Kilgore.

Seems as if Lee's is cursed for even uttering the words.

The Observer became the curse's next victim when it printed a story about the first bust for the second time in Tuesday's edition.

Another second: Sgt. Greg Deitchly of the Indiana State Excise Police led the joint operation, just as he led the first.

The citations were also the same the second time around: charges for being a minor in a tavern for all 10, according to Kilgore.

One difference was the incredible number of patrons cited in the first raid -- this one did not come near the new high of more than 200, set by the Lee's raid of Jan. 15.

Three custodial arrests were made, Kilgore said.

For Lee's, how long will this curse last? Can the bar survive it?

The recent citations and arrests are state liquor law violations for which Lee's is liable, Kilgore said. A meeting has been scheduled for today between the owners and the Alcoholic Beverage Commission, according to Gale Lighthall, a worker for the restaurant-tavern.

Lighthall said he will attend the meeting.

The ABC fined The Commons $1,500 on Nov. 10 of last year and closed the bar for five days after investigating a Dec. 15, 1985 raid. The Commons was charged with allowing minors to loiter after the raid.

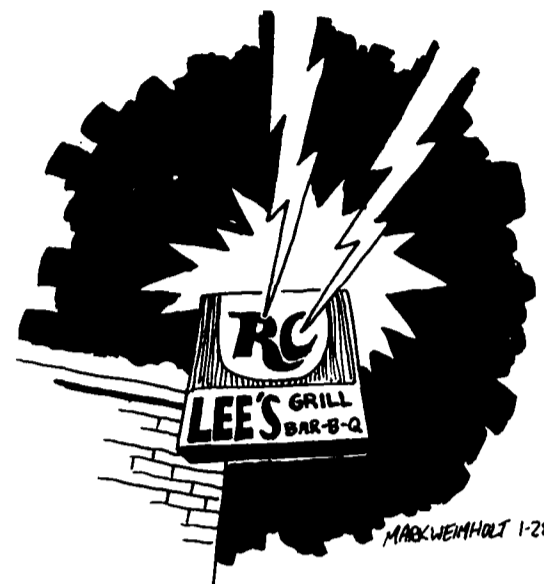

More citations were delivered in the Jan. 15 raid on Lee's than ever before in South Bend. The location of the bar that formerly held this dangerous honor is now a vacant lot.

Another thing that may come out of the latest raids on Lee's is tougher police tactics regarding charges and arrests.

One of those arrested in the Sunday morning

Tripp Baltz

News Editor

bust was given the same charge for which ten others were only cited.

Lt. Kilgore said this was because the police record showed the patron tried to hide in a crowd when law officers entered the building.

Conduct "primarily differentiates who gets arrested and who gets a citation," Kilgore said.

Kilgore said it is the arresting officer's prerogative to decide whether a patron should be arrested or cited.

Kilgore added that patrons who try to escape while a bar is being raided can be charged with resisting law enforcement.

The events over the last two weeks demonstrate that the police are cracking down harder on the underage drinking package: fake IDs, entering taverns and escaping from raids.

They're trying to indicate that lightning sometimes strikes twice.

Former owner of Nickie's tavern forfeited $1,000 in bond money

By MARILYN BENCHIK
Assistant Saint Mary's Editor

Nick Bilello, former owner of Nickie's tavern, forfeited $1,000 in bond money last week to the city of South Bend.

Bilello failed "to repair the code violations which were placed on the building," said Larry Clifford, code enforcement hearing officer.

"Bilello was in on a demolition order and said he would like to have the demolition order set aside. He wanted the opportunity to fix the repairs," said Clifford.

In order to convert the demolition order to a repair order, Clifford asked Bilello to post a bond. "He promised to perform as promised, and if he failed to perform, the bond would then be forfeited."

Clifford said the bond was posted at 10 percent of the total estimated damage cost. "The damages were set at $10,000, so the bond equalled $1,000."

Clifford said he issued an order form on Oct. 13, "categorically setting out five (types of) items that had to be repaired by Nov. 28."

The five categories took all of the code violations and broke them down into specific code violations on the premises, according to Clifford.

The violations ranged from holes in the roof to electrical and plumbing problems, said Clifford.

"He (Bilello) only met two of those items."

"I ruled there had not been substantial compliance to make repairs," said Clifford.

John Gourley, Bilello's attorney, felt "the city of South Bend should have been a little more lenient and understanding."

"We feel the fact that we posted the cash bond showed our good faith," Gourley said.

Gourley said Bilello had trouble getting a certain roofing contractor because "the contractor had other jobs lined up, and we don't think the city gave us enough time to make the repairs."

"Our position was there are a many buildings that are worse off than the building Mr. Bilello owns," he said.

Gourley said he thinks the city is "trying to get rid of the tavern by using selective enforcement. They seemed hell-bent on getting rid of it."

The property and the liquor license have been for sale for over a year. Gourley said the building and the license are being sold separately.

The tavern closed in July 1985. "Mr. Bilello was disgusted with the way the bar had been run in his absence. The manager had allowed entrance to minors, and the bar was raided in Bilello's absence," Gourley said.

Weekend closing time altered at Theodore's

By GREG LUCAS
Staff Reporter

The Office of Student Activities has ordered Theodore's to close at 2 a.m. instead of 3 a.m. on Fridays and Saturdays because of damage to the LaFortune Center, according to Vince Willis, club manager.

"There is some damage being done in the building and it's being blamed on the people in Theodore's," said Willis.

Ceil Paulsen, assistant director of Student Activities, declined to comment on the nature of the damage and on the order to close Theodore's an hour earlier.

According to Willis, there has been no damage to Theodore's since the Penn State game in November. "Nothing has been done in Theodore's since that first time," Willis said.

"In the building there are other problems that I have been told are occurring between two and three a.m.," said Willis, who was unable to describe the exact damage to the LaFortune center.

tune center.

Willis did not feel that closing Theodore's one hour earlier would significantly reduce the potential of damage being done to LaFortune. "The crowd between two and three usually has been there and leaves at three. Most people do not come between two and three," said Willis.

"If you close at two, it's like taking away one-third of the most valuable time," Willis said. "Not only do I think (the order's) not necessary, I think it's detrimental," Willis added. "There should be a place on campus to socialize after parties," said Willis.

"I can see why the administration is concerned with maintaining the building, but I think there are better solutions than closing an hour early," Willis said. Willis was optimistic that an alternative agreement could be reached. "I do think that if we come up with an appropriate plan, the administration will be receptive," said Willis.

make a minimum of 7.5 percent of its total capacity available to students displaced from other dorms.

"We don't want to send too many people to a dorm, unless the dorm wants that," said Holst. "If, say, 100 guys from Holy Cross wanted to move into Carroll, they would probably take over, it wouldn't be Carroll Hall anymore," he said.

"It's inevitable that someone's going to get (the short end of the bargain)," said Salmon.

In other business, the Council discussed the Buzz Bus and drinking and driving. "The HPC Alcohol Committee met twice and came up with two recommendations," said Stanford Hall President Jim Wimbiscus.

"First of all, we're thinking about a taxi service, where someone at a bar or a party gets drunk and then takes a taxi to the dorm. The RA on duty would have money, that he was provided with, to pay the taxi driver. The drunk person would either pay then or at a later time," Wimbiscus said.

"We're going to push the Buzz Bus again," Wimbiscus said. "On campus we're going to try to have a free coupon with a schedule on the back; that way, everyone would have a chance to ride it," he said.

According to Wimbiscus, the Buzz Bus will run on Thursdays as soon as a driver for that night is found. HPC Co-Chairman Joanie Cahill said ridership for the Buzz Bus is approximately 100 students per night.

Rebels hold out inside TV station; Aquino: Attempted coup crushed

Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines--Mutinous soldiers held out inside a walled television station today, long after President Corazon Aquino announced that the loyal military had crushed an attempted coup.

Gen. Fidel Ramos, commander of the armed forces, gave those inside the building--about 160 troopers, 50 civilian supporters of ex-President Ferdinand Marcos and a few policemen--a deadline to surrender but then withdrew it.

Ramos went to the besieged station at 3 a.m. today and spoke for about 45 minutes with the rebel leader, air force Col. Osca Canlas.

Canlas told reporters Ramos ordered the rebels to leave the station by 6 a.m. (5 p.m. Tuesday EST), but he said he asked Ramos to extend the deadline and the general "graciously allowed it." There was no indication a new deadline had been set.

After his meeting with Canlas, Ramos remained near the station for more than two hours and at dawn he told reporters Canlas had sent a message saying he had not finished consulting with his men and was not ready to make a decision.

Ramos then left the area but said, "This cannot go on indefinitely." He gave no indication that a move against the mutineers was imminent.

Maj. Gen. Salvador Mison, deputy chief of staff, said a general and 17 other officers were behind the revolt and five had been arrested, but would not name them. Officials said about 500 soldiers took part in the rebellion.

Marcos' supporters clashed with security forces outside the station and police said at least 34 people were injured, six of them seriously.

Mrs. Aquino said earlier that "intensive military operations" might be needed to oust the rebels, and promised that they would be dealt with severely.

The coup attempt was the most serious effort by disaffectured soldiers to take power since Marcos fled the country 11 months ago and Mrs. Aquino became president following a contested election.

The rebel soldiers and civilians seized the complex housing Channel 7 and radio station DZBB in part of a pre-dawn coup attempt Tuesday that included attacks on five military garrisons in which one rebel was killed and 16 were wounded.

Defense Minister Rafael Ilete said 271 conspirators had been arrested and at least 70 remained at large.

Ramos said the mutineers were Marcos supporters who wanted to destabilize the country before Monday's nationwide vote on Mrs. Aquino's proposed constitution, which guarantees her a six-year term.

About 300 Marcos supporters gathered on EDSA boulevard late Tuesday near the broadcast center, where they built bonfires, hurled stones at police and shouted, "We want Marcos, we want Marcos."

Divestment would show commitment to blacks

"We are now faced with the fact that tomorrow is today. We are confronted with the fierce urgency of now. In this unfolding conundrum of life and history there is such a thing as being too late. Procrastination is still the thief of time. We must move past indecision to action. Now let us begin. Now let us rededicate ourselves to the long and bitter-but beautiful-struggle for a new world. This is the calling of the children of God, and our brothers and sisters wait eagerly for our response. Shall we say the odds are too great? Shall we tell them the struggle is too hard? Or will there be another message, of longing, of hope, of solidarity with their yearnings, of commitment to their cause, whatever the cost? The choice is ours, and though we might prefer it otherwise we must choose in this crucial moment of human history."

Martin Luther King

guest column

Last semester an event took place which seems to have been glossed over by many on this campus. All around us there has been a call for tough action against the sin which is apartheid. But Notre Dame and perhaps this has been true of the nation as a whole is in no apparent rush to help - perhaps because those in need are people of color.

'How can we expect them to be committed to blacks in another country when they are not even committed to blacks currently attending their own institution?'

The event: "The National Conference of Catholic Bishops urged Roman Catholic dioceses and institutions to strip themselves of their holdings in companies operating in South Africa or persuade those companies through stockholder resolutions to withdraw business from that country." The Times article continues stating that "the recommendation is expected to affect hundreds of millions of dollars in the investment portfolios of this country's vast network of Roman Catholic institutions - 184 dioceses, 19,313 parishes, 850 religious communities, 200 colleges and universities and hundreds of Catholic hospitals and charitable agencies." I guess they should have said 199 colleges and universities since Notre Dame should not be included.

IBM has divested. Kodak has divested. Coca-Cola has divested. GM has divested. The British National Bank has divested. Bishop Desmond Tutu has called for divestment. Winnie Mandela has called for divestment. The African National Congress has called for divestment. The Notre Dame Student Senate, the Notre Dame faculty, the Notre Dame Black Alumni Conference, the Notre Dame Black Student Union have all called for divestment. And, as you now know, the National Conference of Catholic Bishops has called for divestment. But Notre Dame has remained steadfast and foolhardy.

Let's face it, Father Hesburgh, Father Williams and the predominantly white Board of Trustees know what is best for the poor downtrodden black masses. Tutu and Mandela live with the atrocities, the degradation, the humiliation, the injustices, the murders and the violence every day, how can they possibly know what is best for their people? Martin Luther King, Jesse Jackson and Medgar Evers obviously didn't know what was best for blacks during the Civil Rights Movement did they? But perhaps I am being a little too tough on them you say. And indeed this may be true for how can we expect them to be committed to blacks in another country when they are not even committed to blacks currently attending their own institution. How can they be attentive to blacks there when they are not listening here?

Picture this situation: an admissions counselor is standing in the midst of a room packed with minority high school seniors telling them how Notre Dame is Catholic, how socially concerned Notre Dame is, what a great place it is and how much they want minority students to attend Notre Dame. Then a black student raises his hand and asks whether or not Notre Dame has divested. Response: no, number of applicants: none. What message does the University send to blacks across the country? As the premier Catholic institution in the country, what message does it send to Catholics across the country? Notre Dame is living a lie, contradicting the ethical constructs upon which the very foundation of the University rests.

Would the response be the same if the people involved were not people of color? Regretfully, I think not. The fallacy of Notre Dame's stance may be evidenced by another example. A couple of years ago when the African situation of starvation finally came to the attention of a long-since ignorant American population, the Archdiocese of Philadelphia sent the three million dollars it raised in the annual Catholic Charities Appeal to Poland to purchase toys and cribs instead of feeding the hungry. Similarly Notre Dame and the nation is not in any rush to help because those imperiled are not white, are not Irish, are not Polish are not Italian. . .and thereby not of primary concern. The blacks of South Africa are not viewed as true "brothers and sisters" and consequently though they "eagerly await a response" it shall not be forthcoming for there exists no "solidarity" with them. They are not worth the "cost."

In this "crucial moment in human history" Notre Dame with its tauted Christianity and white purity has chosen "not to act". In the light of the "fierce urgency of now", Notre Dame has chosen "procrastination". We have told them "the struggle is too hard" and "the odds are too great". (Indeed Father Hesburgh has apparently wearied of the fight. Having been so intimately involved with the Civil Rights Movement perhaps he is too tired to recognize his inconsistencies. Father Hesburgh, would Martin Luther King shake your hand today?) Notre Dame has issued a hypocritical message which it shall prove to regret. I was always told that inaction in the presence of wrong was just as sinful as the wrong itself. Is not Notre Dame an accomplice to this sin which it says it abhors? It is time to stop talking, cut the lip service, and act. Otherwise how will they know that we are truly Christians?

If we continue to wallow in the valley of indecision and inconsistencies, then what Bishop Tutu said of the West in general may be directly applied to Notre Dame: it can "go to hell". For in not hearing and responding to the cries of the children of South Africa, Notre Dame has neither heard nor responded to the "calling of the children of God".

Accidents caused by a lack of responsibility

Dear Editor:

After reading Kevin Trautner's and Sean O'Brien's letter of January 16th, I have suggestions for the two.

First, they should read up on the laws of the state of Indiana, which prohibit drinking for anyone under the age of twenty-one.

Second, they should check the U.S. Constitution, especially the amendment regarding unreasonable searches and seizures.

Third, they should look up the definition of the word "responsibility."

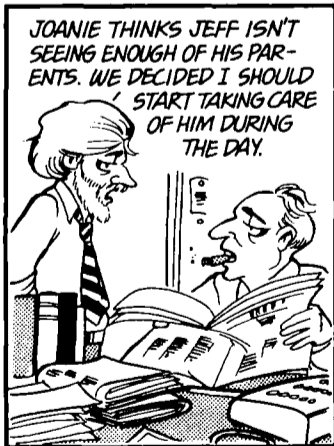

This school's strict alcohol rules did not kill Michael Cogswell. An allegedly intoxicated student killed Michael Cogswell. One of the aims of the University's alcohol policy of 1984 was to encourage responsible use of alcohol by students. Unfortunately, some students did not react to the policy's implications with responsibility, leading to tragic consequences. Letting the beer flow on campus again will not rectify this tragic problem (Michael could just as easily have been killed in front of the Grotto as opposed to Saint Mary's). The fault lies squarely on the shoulders of the people who were drinking and who were involved in the accident last December. It does not lie on the administration's shoulders. It does not lie on Father Beauchamp's shoulders.

Until all students here take responsibility for their actions and their drinking, no administrative action will prevent deaths like Michael Cogswell's from happening again.

The war of sexes is over!

ND's 'fat chicks' and 'insecure boys' find peace

Editor's Note: Today The Observer concludes its examination of women's progress at Notre Dame 15 years after females were first admitted to the University.

ROBIN SQUYRES
features writer

The girl took a deep breath, hitched up her voluminous, tent-like sweats, and stood up. She clutched her Calculus book to her chest for courage as she began the journey to end her craving for something sweet...something smooth...ice cream.

From long experience, she knew tonight was mint chocolate chip night. She crept around the milk machine, fervently hoping no one would notice her.

But it was too late--there they were. The Notre Dame Men. Laughing. Uproariously. "Fat chick, fat chick," they chanted...

So, you ask, what is it really like to be "a woman at Notre Dame?" Amazingly, completely erroneous stereotypes are rampant.

Is it a life of pure bliss--thousands of men lined up to date the few eligible girls? Or is it a life of pure hell-- sexism, chauvinism and basic nastiness constantly directed toward the innocent, outnumbered female intellectuals?

Oddly enough, when one investigates the stereotype situation on an individual level, it ceases to exist. Yes, my friends, CEASES TO EXIST.

The women do not seriously feel the supposed tension vibes the men are supposedly sending, and the men say of course they don't really mean the stereotypes they throw about so casually.

Now let's get this straight--are we to infer that the massive, male/female tensions at Notre Dame that have been the object of probing psychological studies for years are no longer a valid excuse for meaningful subject matter? Apparently, an era has come to an end.

As a residual effect, though, some prejudices remain. "It's harder to find girls' bathrooms around here than guys'," observed an anonymous female student.

"The days of Notre Dame being a male-dominated school are over, and everyone has to realize that," says Sandra McBride, a sophomore.

While we're discussing the Notre Dame female stereotype, it would only be fair to include their supposed "hatred" of Saint Mary's students. Everyone knows a Notre Dame girl will stop short of nothing to maim or kill a SMIC chick, right?

Is this a fantasy created by Notre Dame men who love the illusion of women clawing at each other over SYRs? Or a sad but true story of frustrated, competitive females?

Sure, you'll catch the occasional grimace as you mention the females "across the road,"but the deep-seated hatreds simply do not exist.

"Most ND girls are ingrained with a little tension, but they always admit they know nice girls at St. Mary's," says McBride. "Notre Dame and St. Mary's girls are more than happy to meet each other at parties."

"I don't think that people take the stereotype as seriously as they put across," says Chris Murphy, a Flanner Hall resident. He adds, "I personally look at it as a joke."

There are some actual facts that have given way to ugly tension-causing rumors. For instance, it is common knowledge that it is harder for a female to get into Notre Dame than a male. Thus, the average female of the last few years here is said to be of superior intelligence to the average male.

The university is presently increasing female enrollment to better balance the ratio. The greater number of female slots will hopefully lessen the female disadvantage, and the accompanying male inferiority complex.

Women's support groups have been started to cope with the "special problem of being a woman at Notre Dame," but have actually died from lack of interest.

Is that to say there are no problems? There are always insulted individuals rampaging about, but the majority of the student population enjoys a peaceful coexistence with the opposite sex (under the constant supervision of du Lac, of course). Jibes below the belt are commonplace, but that's human nature.

We have our fun mocking each other because we're not allowed to do much else. But at least we can thank Notre Dame for honing our sense of keen wit and stimulating conversation.

...meanwhile, Howard braces for a sex change

features writer

Conversion of Howard Hall into a women's dorm will begin the day after commencement, according to Physical Plant Director Don Dedrick. "The process is a very simple one," said Dedrick, since both men's and women's dorms are easily interchangeable. Basically, the only renovation will be done within the lavatories, and is scheduled to be completed before the start of the Special Olympics this summer.

Residents of Howard continue to feel "angered," "upset," and "disappointed" in the way the administration conducted the affair. The issue now concerning the residents is how they will stay together next year.

Hall President Jim Bradford

said "they (the administration) did not give us much of an option to stay together." Howard residents were only guaranteed that groups of six men could be placed in the same dorm, but not necessarily room together. As a result, he said, "residents plan to move off-campus next year--many to Campus View."

However, Bradford also stated that the situation could prove to be a positive one, because now residents "realize how much they really like Howard Hall."

Bradford believes that the delayed notice of the conversion of Howard was a "political move to stop any demonstrations or protests." "During finals week the residents were too busy to do anything about the notice," said Bradford.

Other Howard residents express mixed emotions about the conversion. Although resident Doug McLaughlin plans to "stay on campus" next year he has not decided where he would like to live. McLaughlin also felt that "everyone now realizes how much Howard really means."

Resident Matt Kelty said his "anger has changed to frustration." Kelty said, "I realize the opposition is useless, but there are many things that can't be accounted for." Kelty is disappointed in the administration for their "insensitivity" toward the residents and for "not presenting their reasons more clearly."

Although freshman Bruce Haikola has not lived in Howard long enough to "feel close to the others," he is still upset about the conversion. Haikola also said that meeting new people next year will be a challenge.

Resident John Piecyk is disappointed in the administration and is upset about the Howard change. "(Howard) is an intimate community--everyone is concerned about everyone," said Piecyk. He also thought it was a "rude" gesture for girls to examine the dorm the same day the residents received their eviction notices.

The conversion of Howard and the building of two new women's dorms is part of the attempt to equal the male/female ratio at Notre Dame. The two new dorms will be constructed between the Memorial Library and Pasquerilla East and West.

Many Howard residents have suggested that the new dorms be expanded to accommodate the number of females that will be living in Howard. However, "the buildings are filling capacity and the cost effective is too great," according to Dedrick.

Wrestlers tune up for big weekend by facing undefeated Boilermakers

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Sports Writer

If the Notre Dame wrestling team was hoping to face the toughest competition possible in preparation for this weekend's National Catholic Tournament, the Irish are definitely getting their wish.

Just four days after losing to perennial national power Nebraska, the Irish will face an undefeated Purdue squad tonight at 7 p.m. in West Lafayette, Ind.

"They're the surprise team of the Midwest," said Irish coach Fran McCann of the Boilermakers.

"They're definitely in the top twenty, and since they've beaten nationally-ranked Michigan and Michigan State, they're probably around the top ten. It's been a long time since Purdue's been in the top ten."

Although Purdue has not traditionally had a strong wrestling program, overall team balance has led the Boilermakers to a 10-0 start.

"They're solid up and down the lineup, and they're very physical," said McCann. "When I was coaching in diana State, we used to shut Purdue out. But this is the best Purdue team I've seen since I've been coaching in the Midwest."

While Notre Dame's 1-5 dual meet record is far below Purdue's unblemished mark, McCann isn't about to concede anything to the Boilermakers.

"We're going to give them all they can handle. Looking at our matchups with them, it will be a good meet," said McCann. "We're in as good shape as we've been in this year, and Purdue better be ready to wrestle."

my parents could come watch me. It was far enough where I could grow up but close enough so if I had to get home I could. My parents come to absolutely every home game I have. They're very supportive of me. And I came mainly because of the education."

The Irish have faced several adverse situations this season, particularly the loss of three players. Bunek admits that it has been very tough on the team but says that it certainly will not keep them from playing their best basketball.

"You have to put things into perspective," she adds, "and be very positive. You have to think of it as a challenge to the team. It's a tough experience but we'll be better in the end."

The Irish have been improving with each trip out on the court, so the Flyers of Dayton and first-year head coach Sue Ramsey will face a stiff challenge at 7:30 tonight in the ACC. Fans who go to support the Irish can say hello to Mr. and Mrs. Bunek. They'll be the ones cheering the loudest when £44 puts the ball in the hoop.

plaints should center on the officials, not the opposing team.

Of course, all of this protesting does little good. It sounds like sour grapes, even if the point is valid. Sometimes it can get a coach into trouble. If Notre Dame played in a conference, Phelps would probably get a reprimand from the conference commissioner for his post-game comments. Since the Great Independents have yet to put together an officiating crew, and don't have a commissioner, he didn't.

Notre Dame will continue playing UCLA, no matter how terrible the referees are, and no matter who Walt Hazzard thinks he is. Poor officiating is part of basketball because the game itself is nearly impossible to cover well. Mistakes in the officiating are expected, but they are magnified when they occur at the end of the game. Or if they occur in a big game. That brings us to Sunday's collision with the nation's top-rated team.

The North Carolina Tar Heels boast the No. 1 squad in the nation. They were a step ahead of the rest of college basketball for much of last season. They are coached by the legendary Dean Smith, so legendary that Carolina's arena bears his name, even though he is still living. Despite those lofty accomplishments, the Heels felt the need to offer suggestions to the officials.

Most fans remember last season's tight battle in the heart of Carolina country. The Irish gave the Heels a run, but eventually fell. Smith and his center Brad Daugherty were not satisfied with the win, though. They were less than enthused with Phelps' version of the Bruise Brothers, Tim Kempton and Jim Dolan. To emphasize the point, it was suggested that the Heels don't tear away jerseys for this year's battle.

One would have to wonder why the superior team, after winning a game in which its opponent had played very well, would find the need to chastise the officiating. There are enough legitimate complaints that need to be addressed without wondering if Brad Daugherty got roughed up a bit.

Officials have an impossible job, but it is still frustrating to see blown calls. The key is to adjust to their style, if at all possible, and make them as insignificant a part of the game as possible. Complaining about officiating is a dangerous game, and it can blow up in your face.

The Irish will be substantial underdogs this Sunday. But if they can build up a head of steam against fellow independents Dayton and Marquette, anything can happen. Tear-away jerseys, huh? Who knows, the ACC could once again prove fatal to a No. 1 team. And then Dean Smith will have put his Heels in his mouth.

Voce's recent emergence lifts Irish

By MIKE SZYMANSKI
Sports Writer

For the first time in his career, junior forward Gary Voce put two great performances together back-to-back for Notre Dame, leading the Irish to a win over Dayton last night. Head Coach Digger Phelps, along with the student body, has recognized that Voce has arrived.

"We said in the preseason that the most important player coming back was Gary Voce," said Phelps. "Gary was the guy that had to step in. He had to do some things in the rebounding situations."

"He as a junior has responded to (Assistant Coach) John Shumate in more ways than the other players, which has made Gary a better player on the boards as well as at playing post defense (and) getting the confidence to score more points."

Voce again was in double figures for rebounds last night, grabbing three offensive and nine defensive boards. In addition, he went six-for-six from the field with two free throws, along with two clutch steals.

While Notre Dame has had trouble putting teams away, Voce took up the offensive and defensive charge at several key situations in the second half. Voce initiated the first run when he put in a David Rivers' airball underneath and then made a steal upcourt.

At this point, the student body began chanting "Voce" for the first of several times in the game.

According to Phelps, the key for the Irish was to get the big man involved in the game. And Voce along with Donald Royal heeded the call.

While Rivers was on the bench and Scott Hicks was leading the offense, Voce worked inside not only to clear the boards, but also to get important second shots and three-point opportunities to keep the offense rolling.

Even when he made defensive mistakes, such as fouling Dayton's Troy McCracken into a three-point play, Voce did not lose concentration. And as a result, Notre Dame would remain in the lead throughout the second half with the help of Royal, Mark Stevenson, and Hicks.

"I am not going to take shots that are not there," said Voce, "but if the ball comes to me on a reversal then I will shoot it. I think I can get more points on offensive rebounds now."

"I don't think (my teammates) were hesitant (about passing to me) before, it was just my aggressiveness going after it, posting up and receiving the ball."

"As far as points, rebounds and total concentration, I thought I was aware of a lot that was going on. I can see a lot more of what happens, and I have been trying to take charge and talk a little more."

and Royal.

Stevenson was a perfect 4-of-4 from the field in the first half, with three more from the charity stripe. The second half belonged to Voce, who always seemed to show up in the right place at the right time to give Notre Dame a boost.

who dumped in 17 points on the night. Notre Dame hit on 18-of-23 from the line for the game.

"Dayton is a very tough team and those kids play hard all the time," Phelps said. "Defensively, I thought we played pretty solid and we rebounded well when we had to."

The Irish played man-to-man defense the entire game, mixing in some full-court pressure to keep Dayton off-balance. Anthony Corbitt, a 6-6 freshman, led the Flyers with 14 points, while Noland Robinson added 12.

Dayton forced Notre Dame to hit the outside shot with a packed-down 2-3 zone for the better part of the first half, and the Irish responded by netting 13-of-20 (for 65 percent) in the opening 20 minutes. The Flyers then switched to a man-to-man for the remainder of the game, opening up the inside for Voce

Irish survive UD rally, hang on for 66-55 win

By MARTY STRASEN
Assistant Sports Editor

There were times when one had to wonder whether Notre Dame had learned its lesson.

After blowing an 11-point lead at UCLA this past Saturday in a 63-59 loss to the Bruins, the Irish looked to be toying with fire again last night, but held on with some clutch free-throw shooting to pull out a 66-55 victory over Dayton at the ACC.

Notre Dame built an 11-point lead on four occasions in the second half, largely behind the strong inside play of 6-8 senior Donald Royal (17 points) and 6-9 junior Gary Voce (16 points, 12 rebounds), but the Flyers refused to yield and rallied to within two points, 57-55, with 4:03 to go.

"I thought we got careless at times and that's why I took David (Rivers) out," said Irish head coach Digger Phelps. Phelps benched his star point guard for almost six minutes in the second half, leaving the backcourt duties to senior Scott Hicks. Rivers finished the game with only eight points, seven below his season average of 15.1.

"I just thought he was trying to do too many things by himself, and we've got to space him out for the rest of this week," said Phelps. "We just can't afford to be careless against good people."

The Irish then took control of the game with nine straight free throws to seal the win, four by sophomore Mark Stevenson,

Complaints about refs are becoming official bore

It's official. The celebrated Notre Dame-UCLA rivalry is getting ugly. And another similar situation could arise in Sunday's North Carolina game, just because the referees have not been satisfactory in the eyes of some coaches and a few players. Can't these officials please anyone?

Notre Dame head coach Digger Phelps saw his team lose a large lead in a small amount of time and cried foul. Pushing foul, slapping foul, and blocking—not charging—foul.

In fact, Phelps said the referees in last Saturday's game against UCLA were so pitiful they may have cost his noble warriors the ball game. He said they were the worst officials the Irish had ever endured in 16 years at Pauley Pavillion. Pretty serious stuff.

Not everyone agreed with Phelps, however. Most notable was Jerome Richardson, who poo-pooed the idea that UCLA received any favors from the officials. He went so far as to say that he was bumped a few times without going to the line, but that he didn't complain. He and his teammates also suffered through poor officiating when the two teams hooked up in the ACC last year, and they didn't complain. Not like big bad Digger. What a poor loser that Phelps is.

Rick Rietbrock

Irish Items

What Richardson seems to forget, or chooses not to remember, is that his own coach, Walt Hazzard, did indeed complain about the officiating after last season's game. And compared to Hazzard's claims of a year ago, Phelps' statements are very tame. Hazzard was so incensed by the officiating in last year's contest, he considered the possibility of ending the historic rivalry. Phelps' protests never approached that magnitude.

Ending a rivalry as rich as Notre Dame-UCLA seems to be a ridiculous way to voice displeasure with officiating. Clarence Kay caught that pass in the Super Bowl but the referee's incorrect call somehow managed to slip through the grasp of the vaunted instant replay. But I never heard Denver, or the AFC, threatening to stop playing Super Bowls. Bobby Knight shows his anger by throwing chairs, managers kick dirt at the umpires, and John McEnroe lobs obscenities. Digger Phelps decided to show his in the post-game press conference. Officiating is a nearly impossible job that will always turn Jekylls into Hydes. But the com-

Dayton seeks revenge tonight

Bunek, Irish aim at Flyers again

By BRIAN O'GARA
Sports Writer

The last time the Notre Dame women's basketball team faced Dayton, a conference championship was on the line. In a hard-fought battle in Dayton last March, the Irish pulled out a 66-62 victory and a bid to the Women's National Invitational Tournament.

Tonight the Flyers seek revenge as the two teams take to the ACC court for a 7:30 contest.

A key factor in that game last year was the return of then-freshman Heidi Bunek to the Irish lineup. Bunek had suffered a stress fracture in her right leg early last season which kept her on the bench for much of the season. She returned, however, to average 13.8 points and 12.8 rebounds over the season's last four games as the Irish soared to a third-place finish in the WNIT. Bunek now admits the return was difficult.

"I missed fourteen games," said Bunek. "Coming back from that was hard because it was just like starting all over again. I watched all the games so I could progress mentally, but physically it was hard getting back into shape. But I worked hard and I knew it would pay off eventually."

Pay off it did. Bunek, a native of Milwaukee, Wisc., topped off her strong comeback by earning a spot on the WNIT All-Tournament team. Now, as a sophomore, she has taken over as the team leader, averaging approximately 14 points and eight rebounds per game. She teams up with another Wisconsin native, junior Sandy Botham, to give the Irish a strong one-two punch in the front line.

Bunek's big contributions to the Irish are no surprise considering the basketball success that she has achieved throughout her career. Named to six first-team All-America squads as a senior at Pius XI High School in Milwaukee, Bunek led her team to four consecutive state championships and was named Wisconsin's Miss Basketball for 1985.

"We lost only two games in my high school career," said Bunek proudly. "We started a dynasty. My high school is going for its seventh consecutive state championship and is on a 55-game winning streak. That all started with us."

Bunek attributes much of her success on the court to her supportive family, and her father in particular.

"My dad is the one who got me started," she says. "I really didn't start playing organized basketball until the eighth grade and I was very thin and lanky. My dad put me on a weight program. We have a weight gym in the basement that is almost as big as the one here at Notre Dame. He taught me everything. He would work me for hours. I didn't have older brothers to play against like a lot of girls do so my dad was the one who taught me the game."

This closeness with her family was one of the major reasons why Bunek chose to come to Notre Dame.

"My final five schools were Texas, USC, Louisiana Tech, Notre Dame and Nevada-Las Vegas. I chose to come here because it was close to home and
