Aquino wins endorsement for constitution, 5 more years

Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines - President Corazon Aquino won a decisive victory Monday as Filipinos overwhelmingly endorsed her proposed constitution and another five years of her leadership, unofficial returns showed.

Filipinos backed the draft charter by a 4 to 1 margin nationwide, according to the unofficial count by the private National Movement for Free Elections. Only in the northern Luzon Island stronghold of former President Ferdinand Marcos did a majority of voters appear to have rejected the proposal.

Final, official returns from the Commission on Elections were not expected before next week.

The private vote-count showed an approval margin of more than 80 percent - 5,374,617 to 1,294,656 - with 27 percent of the 86,703 precincts reporting nationwide.

Partial, unofficial returns from seven northern Luzon provinces showed about 54 percent in the region were opposed to Mrs. Aquino's proposal. Opposition also was strong in Manila precincts at military installations.

Mutinous soldiers linked to Marcos attempted a revolt last week but were put down by government troops. Some military officials, including one of the coup leaders, have criticized the government's peace overtures to end the 18-year-old Communist insurgency.

Voters were asked to state "yes" or "no" on whether they supported ratification of the 20,000-word draft, which sharply reduces the power of the president, restores a bicameral legislature, bans the military from political activity except voting and expands human rights guarantees.

The charter, completed in October by a 48-member commission appointed by Mrs. Aquino, also guarantees her a six-year term.

The plebiscite marked the first time Mrs. Aquino turned to the electorate for an endorsement of her 11-month-old leadership, and her supporters described the balloting as a "vote of confidence."

Former Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, who campaigned against ratification, claimed Mrs. Aquino used the vote to run for re-election uncontested.

Senate defeats gay rights proposal

By CHRIS JULKA

Student Body President Mike Switek broke a tie in the Student Senate Monday night by voting against a proposal recommending that homosexuals be allowed to reserve rooms for meetings and advertise through University media.

The senate also voted to close discussion on a second proposal to establish a campus advisory board for The Observer, and took no vote on the proposal.

In addition, the senate voted to add a referendum to the upcoming student election ballot asking students to rate The Observer.

The first proposal called upon the University to allow the Notre Dame-Saint Mary's Gay-Lesbian Society to reserve meeting rooms on campus and advertise through University media.

When the first proposal was submitted for discussion, senate members disputed the preamble as well as the resolution itself.

Student Vice President Don Montanaro challenged the preamble's contention that there are "approximately 500-600 homosexuals in the Notre Dame community."

Montanaro said the basis for the statement was questionable and said it should be changed to "There are homosexuals in the Notre Dame community."

Student Senator John Gardiner, who proposed the resolution, said he disagreed. "I have Dr. (Patrick) Utz (Director of the Counseling and Psychological Services Center) verifying that a good estimate would be 5-600. And that's a good estimate . . . I think it's really safe to say that there are 500

Student charged in Cogswell accident

A Notre Dame student will be charged with driving under the influence of alcohol, a Class A misdemeanor, in connection with the Dec. 6 accident that resulted in junior Michael Cogswell's death.

The St. Joseph County grand jury did not indict the 21-year-old student last week, but instead recommended that he be charged with a misdemeanor, County Prosecutor Michael Barnes said Monday.

The charge carries a maximum punishment of one year in prison and a $5,000 fine, Barnes said. The student also could get probation.

Barnes said the 21-year-old

Notre Dame student was originally charged with driving under the influence of alcohol.

The charge was dropped, however, so that the case could be sent to the grand jury for review, he said.

Barnes said he could not discuss why the grand jury recommended charging the student with a misdemeanor.

He did say, however, "the entire factual circumstances of Mr. Cogswell's death were exposed. And the grand jury, after reviewing the case, made what they thought was an appropriate recommendation."

Barnes said he decided to reinstate the original charge because he "thought that was

The Notre Dame student charged in connection with a traffic accident that killed a South Bend man will go to trial on Feb. 17, County Prosecutor Michael Barnes said Monday.

The 20-year-old student has pleaded innocent to charges of reckless homicide and involuntary manslaughter stemming from the Nov. 15 accident.

The case, which will be heard in St. Joseph County Superior Court, involves the death of Buddy D. Moore, 52, of 1314 Goodland Ave.

Moore died of severe head injuries one day after being struck by a car driven by the student, county police records show.

Following the accident, the student was arrested on misdemeanor charges of driving while intoxicated and driving with an expired operator's license, according to police records.

Those charges were dismissed, however.

Instead the student was charged with reckless homicide, a Class C felony which carries a maximum penalty of eight years in prison and a $10,000 fine. The minimum punishment is three years in prison.

The student was also charged with involuntary manslaughter, a Class D felony punishable by up to four years in prison and a $10,000 fine. The minimum penalty is a one-year prison term.

According to police records, Moore was struck as he walked on Edison Road shortly after the Penn State-Notre Dame game.

The accident occurred when the student's car made a U-turn on Edison Road, headed east and then struck Moore, police records show.

Moore was taken to St. Joseph's Medical Center in South Bend, where he died the next day.

In Brief

Jeanne Heller, student body president, announced at last night's meeting of the Saint Mary's Board of Governance that those who have not signed the petition to open Cushwa Leighton library earlier on Sundays may do so Wednesday in Madaleva. The petition will be presented to the Academic Affairs Council which will meet in two and a half weeks. - The Observer

Cartoonist Johnny Hart's "The Wizard of Id" and "B.C." comic strips have joined a New York State police campaign of posters, leaflets and pamphlets against teen-age suicide and drug abuse. One drawing shows the king from "The Wizard of Id" carrying a picket sign with the message "Start Your Own Revolution, Take A Friend Off Drugs." Similar locally produced flyers and pamphlets are in use in Colorado, Utah, Texas, California and Washington state, officials said. - Associated Press

Republican presidential hopeful Pete du Pont on Monday urged drug-use testing for workers in critical occupations, ranging from pilots and doctors to crane operators. Du Pont, the former Delaware governor and only announced GOP candidate for president, earlier had called for random drug-testing of school children nationwide. He said the importance of eliminating drug use made mandatory testing a reasonable requirement, despite constitutional guarantees. - Associated Press

Liberace, the piano virtuoso whose flashy garb and gentle wit made him a television and concert favorite for 40 years, was reported near death on Monday at his desert home in Palm Springs, Calif. Liberace, 67, is suffering from anemia, emphysema and heart disease. Friend and manager Seymour Heller said the entertainer was exhausted after a sell-out performance in Radio City Music Hall early last month. Heller blamed the fatigue on a watermelon diet the star went on in 1986. He denied a report in the Las Vegas (Nev.) Sun that the star had AIDS. - Associate Press

Same waiting game continues as senior anticipates the future

Anticipation permeates the Saint Mary's and Notre Dame community as seniors prepare themselves for the "real world." The Counseling and Career development center at Saint Mary's and the Career and Placement services center at Notre Dame are filled with anxious students who are opening files, signing up for on-campus interviews and applying for graduate schools.

The anticipation soon turns into anxiety as students prepare their resumes, receive second interviews and complete graduate school applications. After this is done, students must wait.

I think back to my senior year in high school when, in the fall, I hurriedly prepared at least eight applications to various colleges and universities around the United States. I was set on attending one school in particular. I was told that I would hear by May 1 of my acceptance or rejection. For many weeks before, I thought about all the possibilities: how the letter would read if I were accepted, and how I would feel; and how the letter would read if I were rejected, and how I would feel.

Not only did I imagine, but I also asked the opinions of my parents and teachers, "Do you think I'll get in?" (What were they supposed to say, NO?) Of course not. Quite politely, they all responded, "You have just as good a chance as anyone, you've done all you can do now it's up to the admissions committee."

Soon May 1 came and my mailbox was empty. It remained empty for several days afterwards.

Approximately 3 weeks after the May 1 estimation a letter arrived at my house. It read completely different than I had ever expected. I wasn't rejected, and I wasn't accepted. Instead I was on a waiting list "until further notice."

This is one option that I had not considered. My months of pondering over my future were over and I still didn't now the answers.

Because of this delay, I couldn't hold off my college decision any further; instead, I withdrew my name from the waiting list and pursued another path.

Many seniors may feel this same anticipation as they wait patiently for second interviews or graduate school acceptance letters.

It is comforting to know that if the one career path a student counts on does not develop, there are many other paths that one can pursue. It is still difficult however, to go to the mailbox day after day, look in, and see light coming from the other side. It looks alone, empty and desolate.

It is just as horrifying to open the mailbox and see the return address of the company or graduate school, tear it open, only to find a financial aid form or a confirmation letter from a company.

Whatever the case, one must always remember that one letter does not make or break one's whole life. As Jeff Roberts, coordinator of placement services and assistant director of counseling and career development at Saint Mary's said, "It would take 181,818.18 twenty-two cent rejection letters to equal the $40,000 education students receive."

With this in mind, Roberts said students should realize that only a minute portion of available employers conduct on-campus interviews. The on-campus system is designed to reject the majority of applicants, he said.

Approximately 25 percent of college seniors have jobs when they graduate, either through on-campus interviewing or other wise, he said.

Because of the competition involved with on-campus interviewing, rejection letters are the norm. When one is received, several questions should be asked: Was I genuinely interested in the position?; If so, did I take the opportunity to present myself in the fullest sense, such as attending receptions, writing thank-you's, asking questions, and researching the organization?; If I did, were the odds in my favor to begin with?; And finally, What was the competition for the job position?

With these questions in mind, students can begin to look realistically at the "real world," Roberts said.

A person's whole life is not contained in one letter. If the original goal is not reached, another will take its place.

Party, denounced the charter as "pro-imperialist" and said it did not go far enough in changing Philippine society.

Right-wing criticism has centered on a provision that extends Mrs. Aquino's term to June 30, 1992. They have questioned the mandate Mrs. Aquino claimed in last February's fraud-tainted presidential election.

Those critics refused to concede defeat and predicted more political challenges to the government despite Mrs. Aquino's promise that ratification would bring stability.

The army placed 79 of its 81 battalions on alert in case of trouble following last week's failed coup attempt.

The charter provides for self-rule for the Moslem minority and land reform for the peasants but leaves details to a Congress to be elected May 11.

Israeli parliament to have hearings to determine role in arms scandal

Associated Press

JERUSALEM - A parliamentary committee announced Monday it will conduct hearings on whether Israel promoted American arms sales to Iran and had a role in diverting profits to rebels in Nicaragua.

Testimony in a 64-page U.S. senate report indicated Israel initiated the U.S. arms sales to Iran and played a role in funneling profits to the Contras fighting the Nicaraguan government.

The Israeli government on Sunday denied such findings.

Abba Eban, chairman of the Knesset's Defense and Foreign Affairs Committee, said he wrote a letter to Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir asking that the government provide a written explanation of its role in the arms scandal.

"Israel's official statements have only been reactions and do not give a positive, contiguous account of Israel's actions and the principles that guided it," Eban said in a statement distributed to reporters.

Eban said he asked for a "detailed document that will explain the government's actions and rationale on the subject of (selling) weapons to Iran."

Committee member Simcha Dinitz told The Associated Press that a six-member subcommittee on intelligence services would begin closed-door sessions Tuesday by questioning two Israeli officials named in the Senate report.

He identified them as Amiram Nir, the prime minister's adviser on anti-terrorism, and David Kimche, former director-general of the Foreign Ministry. They acted as liaison to Washington in the arms deals.

The Senate Intelligence Committee report published Friday listed Nir and Kimche as initiators of some of the sales. The report said Nir and Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin suggested diverting funds from the sales to the Nicaraguan rebels.

Nir has made no public comment since the arms scandal broke in November. Kimche denied he proposed arms dealings with Iran, and Rabin rejected allegations that he had authorized shipments of arms to Contra rebels.

"Not only did I not propose, neither I nor any authorized Israeli, proposed that Israel help the Contras directly in any way," Rabin said on Israel Army Radio on Sunday.

"On the contrary, I rejected a request by an American member of the National Security Council who proposed this to Israel."

Dinitz said the Senate allegations required further response. He said the committee wanted to give Israeli officials "an opportunity to respond to our satisfaction to these allegations."

The legislative committee began hearings in November when the weapons deals became known. The Senate report has triggered new concern that the scandal could harm Israel's ties with the U.S. Congress. Israel counts on Congress for essential foreign aid, which totalled $3 billion last year.

The hearings will be secret and closed to the press, Dinitz said.

Senior Israeli officials have said Israel also has agreed to provide the Senate panel headed by Daniel Inouye with written testimony from Nir, Kimche and two Israeli arms dealers involved in the weapons sales.

Dinitz said Inouye, D-Hawaii, asked Israel for the information last week and the 25-member Israeli Cabinet has agreed.

Only one ticket attends meeting for candidates

By ELIZABETH R. CORNWELL
Staff Reporter

Only one prospective student body presidential ticket attended Monday night's informational meeting.

Prospective student body presidential candidate Vince Willis and his intended running mate, Cathy Nonnenkamp, attended the optional meeting.

Willis is manager of Theodore's, and Nonnenkamp is junior class president.

Because the meeting was not mandatory, other prospective candidates may still choose to enter the election, according to Dan Gamache, Ombudsman Election Committee chairman.

A mandatory meeting for all prospective candidates will be held in room 123 Nieuwland Science Hall at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, Gamache said.

Prospective candidates will receive their petitions for office at the meeting, said Gamache. They must have 150 student signatures on the petitions and have them filed with the Ombudsman Election Committee by Feb. 9.

The committee will release an official list of candidates on Feb. 9, Gamache said. The candidates will be allowed to begin their campaigns at 12 a.m. on Feb. 11.

homosexuals on campus."

Members of the senate also voiced criticism of statements contained within the resolution itself.

"If they are to have club status, does that mean they could rent out Theodore's and have a gathering?" asked Maria Cintron, judicial council coordinator.

"Just like the ISO could rent out Theodore's," said Gardiner, adding that allowing a homosexual club to rent out Theodore's would be the same as allowing the Black Cultural Arts Society to do so.

Student Senator Tim Salmon said there was a distinction between recognizing a homosexual organization and an organization like the International Student Organization.

"The majority has given its consent to recognize (groups like the ISO) even though they are a minority," Salmon said.

Recognizing a club for homosexuals however, "would go against the 7,400 students who are not homosexuals," he said.

Gardiner said such a policy attitude "does not promote diversification in the student body."

Freshman Advisory Council President Dave Kimkopf said he objected to a portion of the resolution which stated the administration's policy of "not allowing homosexuals the minimal rights to reserve a room and inform other of its existence is harassment and prejudice itself."

Said Kimkopf: "I don't know if the University actually is prejudiced in acting the way it does. 'I think what we're asking here is the University to disregard the Church's teaching in making its policy, and that's a very serious thing. . . . I think (the University) acted absolutely correctly in the way it did."

Sheila O'Conner, co-chairman of the Hall President's Council, objected. She argued, "If you don't want to recognize homosexuals as a club, what do you suggest the group do? Just let them suffer?"

Executive Coordinator Mike Jaeger said, "This University (already) provides for the things you are suggesting other than club status."

Said O'Connor: "But then no matter what, you are stuck with Campus Ministry. '(We need to) get them some sort of room for a pre-arranged meeting.'"

In response to criticism that such a meeting could become a "pick-up point for homosexuals," Gardiner said, "Heterosexual meetings are pick-up points. . . . A lot of the times it's the same thing."

When a motion passed to vote on the proposal, Switek broke a tie by deciding against the proposal.

Gardiner then submitted a proposal, whereby a review board would be established, which would "be available to students and review the status of the Observer once or twice a semester."

Gardiner said the board would have no oversight powers. Nevertheless, the proposal stated that the board would "be allotted a certain amount of money by student government annually for expenses and in the instance that it must advertise something it finds totally wrong."

Gardiner said he had heard complaints that The Observer rejects many of the columns submitted to it and that it is therefore not open to the full student body.

Montanaro countered that this was the prerogative of an independent newspaper like The Observer.

Gardiner said "If the students must pay a mandatory fee of $12 each year for the Observer, then the students should have a say in it."

Montanaro said students already do have a say in it because it is open to "any freshman who wants to become a reporter and work up through the ranks."

Added Montanaro: "People have to pay for Scholastic and the yearbook too, and many don't get what they want to be in it."

Switek then said, "I am violently opposed to any student government control whatsoever over The Observer."

At his request, over two thirds of the senate voted to close the debate.

"I don't see any connection between us and The Observer," Switek said.

The senate did pass a proposal to place two referendums on the student election ballot. One will ask students whether the University should set a date for divestment of its holdings in companies engaged in business activities in South Africa. The other will ask students to rate the quality of the Observer.

the appropriate charge for (the student) to face at a minimum."

Last week, the grand jury reviewed three fatal traffic accidents, including the one involving Cogswell. The six-member panel returned one indictment, which was made public on Monday.

Indicted on the Class D felony charge of involuntary manslaughter was a 20-year-old Mishawaka resident.

The man was indicted in connection with an Oct. 19 crash, which resulted in the death of a 16-year-old youth.

The Mishawaka resident, who is not a Notre Dame student, turned himself in to authorities on Sunday.

Following the Dec. 6 accident involving Cogswell, the 21-year-old student was arrested on the charge of driving while intoxicated, police said. The student had submitted to two blood-alcohol tests before the arrest.

According to police, the student said he was driving east on Saint Mary's Road, stopped at a stop sign, then went forward and hit an unknown object.

Cogswell, a 20-year-old Zahm Hall resident, died from massive head injuries 10 hours after being struck.

The 21-year-old student has not yet pleaded in the case, Barnes said.

Catholic theologians must present Church's views

In light of the Charles Curran case, it would be appropriate for Notre Dame and other Catholic universities to reassess their own compliance with the principle of truth in labeling which is central to that case. The Sacred Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, with the approval of the Pope, informed Father Curran that "one who dissents from the Magisterium as you do is not suitable nor eligible to teach Catholic theology." The decision was based on Fr. Curran's "open contrast" with the teaching of the Church on the following issues: "on a right to public dissent from the ordinary Magisterium; the indissolubility of consummated sacramental marriage; abortion; euthanasia; masturbation; artificial contraception; premarital intercourse; and homosexual acts."

Charles E. Rice

The comment of Bishop John M. D'Arcy of Fort Wayne-South Bend epitomizes the truth in labeling issue involved here. "It can never be the role of a Catholic theologian," said Bishop D'Arcy, "to teach in opposition to what the Church teaches. People send their children to Catholic colleges and universities to receive Catholic teaching. If a theologian calls himself or herself Catholic, and then teaches in opposition to the Church, the Church has not only the right, but indeed the obligation, to declare that that particular theologian cannot be considered a Catholic theologian because he is not only probing, analyzing and questioning, but claiming that in these areas the Catholic Church is wrong and I am right."

The past presidents of the Catholic Theological Society of America and the Catholic Theology Society said in March, "If Fr. Curran's views on the various issues mentioned in the letter are so incompatible with Catholic teaching that he must be declared no longer a Catholic theologian, justice and fairness would dictate that other Catholic theologians who hold similar views should be treated in exactly the same fashion." However, unlike the Catholic University of America, Notre Dame, Georgetown, etc., are legally secular corporations with no juridical ties to the Church. It is likely that the sanction available to the Church with respect to a professor at such a university will be limited to a declaration that the professor is mislabelling himself by claiming to be a Catholic theologian.

Incidentally, the right claimed on behalf of Fr. Curran, "to dissent from noninfallible Church teaching" does not exist. It could be argued that at least some of the teachings involved in the Curran case are infallible under the principles stated in the Second Vatican Council's Dogmatic Constitution on the Church (No. 25). Whether or not the teachings contradicted by Fr. Curran are technically infallible, however, there is no warrant for dissent from them. As Cardinal Ratzinger summarized the provisions of No. 25 of the Constitution and of Canon 752 of the Code of Canon Law, "the faithful must accept not only the infallible Magisterium; they are to give the religious submission of intellect and will to the teaching which the Supreme Pontiff or the college of bishops enunciate on faith or morals when they exercise the authentic Magisterium - even if they do not intend to proclaim it with a definitive act." The fact that the "dissenter" is a professor gives him no special privileges. If a theologian at a Catholic university cannot bring himself to accept the teaching of the Popes and Councils, he ought to have the candor at least to present himself as a generic, rather than a Catholic theologian.

Apart from the individual theologian, when an institution solicits money on the ground that it is a "Catholic university," it represents that it is Catholic as the term is understood by the governing body of that religion and especially by the Pope, the only person in the world with the legal and moral authority to give conclusive definition to that term. The Pope has stressed, for example in his October 7, 1979, address in Washington, D.C., the duty of fidelity to the Magisterium which is incumbent on all Catholic universities and their theology teachers, with or without "juridical links to the Holy See."

The Catholic university, of course, does not undertake to guarantee the spiritual formation of its students. But the university's claim to be Catholic involves an implicit assurance at least that the students will have a predictable opportunity to study the Catholic Faith as that Faith is taught by the Popes and Councils. Those students are entitled to assurance that they will have a chance to study theological subjects with a professor who agrees with the Church or is at least willing and able to present the teachings of the Church favorably as well as accurately. If not, whatever they learn of those matters may be filtered through the distorting lens of a professor whose teaching will be affected by his own dissent, agnosticism, etc. What is most regrettable in such situations is the missed opportunity to provide the students with the intellectual background that would enable them to make intelligent choices in matters of faith and morals for the governance of their own lives.

If the parents of an entering freshman paid top dollar for a brand new Mercedes automobile and then discovered that what was under the hood was not a Mercedes engine but an old Ford Model T motor, they would have a remedy at law based on the violation of the principle of truth in labeling, whether the switch were innocent or fraudulent. Those parents and students have a moral right to protection against a similar switch with respect to education. The professor who presents, as authentically Catholic, positions which contradict the Magisterium is merely applying to education the commercial standards of the Mercedes dealer who puts the Model T engine under the hood.

If a Catholic university cannot assure its students a chance to study the Catholic Faith as the Vicar of Christ intends it to be studied, let it drop the "Catholic" from its solicitations and let it acknowledge that, however good it may be in other respects, it is not Catholic in the most important sense in which that term is used.

It ought to be possible at least for Notre Dame and St. Mary's to undertake, beginning with the next academic year, that students will have available at every level identifiable courses in which the Catholic heritage will be studied with professors who accept it as understood by the Popes and Councils. Only then will the students have a fair opportunity to make intelligent judgments in that matter.

Charles Rice is a Professor of Law.

Giving crowd technical raises other questions

Dear Editor:

It was unfortunate when the Notre Dame student body was charged with a technical foul at the end of Sunday's game against North Carolina. I realize that what we did was wrong. We deserved to be punished.

But that was our first foul as a student body this season, and it raises a few questions regarding crowd fouls. After the foul was called during Sunday's game, were we all supposed to raise a hand to let the scorer's table know that the foul was on us? What if we commit five crowd fouls in one game? Does this mean the whole crowd has to leave the arena before the referee will resume play? (Are NBA crowds allowed six fouls?) What if our team is losing in the closing minutes of a game - can the crowd intentionally foul a poor free-throw shooter on the opposing team? And finally, is there any way we can take a charge?

Again, I am not questioning the call. It was clearly a foul on us. But for future reference, I feel that these questions need to be addressed before the student body finds itself being asked to leave the arena.

Recent Grads Return From Work In Chile

features writer

Imagine what it would be like to start your life over again, to re-enter the world with a new perspective on life and an increased sensitivity toward your surroundings. Lou Nanni and Kim Krasavec, both 1984 graduates of Notre Dame, recently returned from a two and one-half year commitment with the Holy Cross Associates in Santiago, Chile. The experience has changed their lives.

"I feel like we have been given new eyes and a new mind and a new mouth," said Kim.

Their experience of actively sharing in the lives of an poor the Chilean poor, has given Lou and Kim a deeper sense of Christian faith as a guiding force in their lives.

"I wanted a formative experience," said Lou of his decision to join HCA. "I wanted to grow in my faith in God and to open myself up to an experience that would be challenging and new." Both Lou and Kim wanted to live and minister in a Christian community to better prepare themselves for life after college.

"You realize that being a student in a university in the United States, that you are part of a privileged class. I had to go (to Chile) in order to begin to understand what was going on in the rest of the world," Lou said.

Lou and Kim joined the other Holy Cross Associates in immersing themselves in the life of a poverty stricken Chilean parish. "You learn the first year that the most valuable thing we do is to love the people. It's Christain testimony," noted Kim.

Another rewarding aspect of being a Holy Cross Associate is the experience of communal living. "You learn to love people that you don't necessarily like," said Kim. Lou added, "It was incredible, the love and mutual respect we came to feel for one another."

Kim compared the community to an image of the Body of Christ. Each member of the community, like each part of the body, contributed to the healthy functioning of the whole.

The Associate community in Chile is involved in many areas of service. Lou taught English at a school in the poblacion, or shanty town, of Andacollo, and he also taught at St. George's College, a school for the elite class of Santiago.

In addition, his ministry included weekly visits to women political prisoners. "The trauma that these people carry with them is incredible," Lou said. Most of the women had been routinely tortured by the CNI (Chilean Intelligence), and yet their strength was evident in the uncritical love they showed to their visitors. The women left Lou with a plaque that read: "You have come to know women who have consciences as fertile as their wombs."

Kim also taught English at the Colegio Andacollo. She later worked with the Vicariate for Youth Ministry. Here Kim was involved in a popular education program in which the students and teachers learned together. "We all have some knowledge and we all lack some knowledge," she said.

"The challenge of Christianity is to love and share in the sufferings of those beyond our family and close friends and I think that is one of the foundations of this program," commented Lou.

Kim met one Chilean man who embodied this spirit of Christian giving. He was standing in front of his one room hut when a relief group stopped to ask for contributions to aid the victims of a recent earthquake. "It was cold outside," Kim recalled, "and the man took the shirt off of his back and gave it to us, saying, 'They need it more than I do.'" She added, "It makes you reevaluate everything all over again."

Kim and Lou are currently involved in the Transition phase of the Holy Cross Associates' program. Part of their ministry includes sharing their Chilean experience with people back in the United States. They are scheduled to address the Notre Dame community tonight at 7 p.m., in the CSC, and Sunday, February 8, at 4 p.m. The presentations will reflect on the value of participating in any Christian ministry, through their particular experience in Chile.

What is next for Kim and Lou? Lou will be at Notre Dame this semester, working at the Kellogg Institute and assisting Fr. Malloy, while taking graduate courses in Government. Though Kim has a lot of questions about the future, she is sure of one thing: "I want to integrate Chile into everyday of my life."

Do the South Bend Shuffle...

ND Hunger Clean-Up To Begin

LIZ DURKIN
features writer

Reducing hunger while cleaning up parts of South Bend--these are the goals of the National Wide Hunger Clean-up sponsored at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's by the Overseas Development Network.

On Saturday, April 11, 1987, hunger clean-ups across the country will bring together students, community organizations, and residents who will work directly to beautify a part of their city and raise funds to benefit the hungry in their community, and hunger stricken countries overseas.

The National Wide Hunger Clean-up is organized by the National Student Campaign Against Hunger, along with the USA for Africa/Hands Across America Organization, and will be sponsored at NDSMC by Overseas Development Network.

The Hunger Clean Up recruits both college and high school students to do work on clean-up projects in South Bend. We will be contacting local not-for-profit organizations in order to find work sites. Types of jobs including painting, cleaning up parks and playgrounds, and working in food pantries. Basically, whatever people think they need done. The money will be raised in two ways. First, we're going to contact local businesses and request donations of money, clean up tools, or refreshments and incentives for the workers.

Second, each student will try and raise their own sponsors who will pledge a certain amount per hour. The profits will be divided in half between needy organizations in South Bend and the hungry in other parts of the world.

The ND Hunger Clean-up has just begun to organize. We need students to help on either recruitment, fundraising, choosing work sites, and publicity. Our first meeting will be Thursday, February 5th at 6:30 p.m. at the CSC.

ODN is a nation wide group with branches on campuses all over the country. It started at Notre Dame last year. ODN has two basic functions.

First, to help raise funds for development projects in the third world. A list of projects is provided by the national office. Projects are devised on the basis of what the local people think they need, not on what a group of "experts" tell them they need.

The second function of ODN is to raise awareness on the ND campus itself. This is done through sponsoring movies and lectures on development issues, and its major event: Third World Awareness Week, from Feb. 8-15.

A Guide To Student Services (Clip & Save)

features writer

Are you angry? Frustrated? Confused? Running out of people to turn to? Please don't despair. There is someone who can help. There are many offices on campus designed to handle students' questions and problems concerning any number of different situations that might arise. The problem is that many students are unclear as to where to go with a certain problem or unaware as to what services actually are available to help. So, in keeping with the spirit of service, I have compiled here a list of offices, attempting to clarify the functions of each as they pertain to us, the students.

Office of the Registrar

Located in the Administration Building in room 215, the Registrar can help with just about anything.

If you have any questions about your grades or transcript, this is the place to come. There is a nominal $2.00 charge for every transcript ordered, and you should allow three days to properly process and check each request. Requests for transcripts must be made in person at the office or in writing by mail; no telephone requests will be honored. Remember that the busiest time for these requests is after the end of each semester.

If you lose your ID, the Registrar is the place to come to get it replaced. The charge for a new card is $10, and you will be issued a Validine to use while the new ID is being made, a process which takes about two weeks. If you happen to find your old ID during this period, continue to use the Validine and take the old ID back to the Registrar. They will keep it on file there, so that, in the event that you lose your new ID, they will only have to revalidate your old one, saving you the $10 processing fee.

The Registrar also makes out the departmental and final exam schedules and handles any conflicts a student might encounter (more than 2 exams in one calendar day or more than 3 in a 24-hour period). However, it is recommended that the student try to work out conflicts with his professor if possible, to save all the red-tape hassle.

good idea to get things squared away before then. (2) If you already plan to live with friends in a new dorm, they all move to the bottom of the list for picks. That's just the way it goes.

order to receive any aid, is to complete and submit a Financial Aid Form (available in the office) by February 28 at the very latest.

The Financial Aid office is also the place to start if you're looking for a job on campus. Even if you haven't filed an FAF or have filed but showed no need, you can still get a job on campus. Just make an appointment to get an "exception" slip, which will allow you to work. Usually, the only jobs available for non-need students will be in food service (dining halls, the Huddle, Oak Room) because the students who have demonstrated financial need are given first priority on available jobs, naturally, so the "better" jobs are taken quickly. However, if a non-food service job is unfilled at that time, a non-need person can take the job. Just go into the office, or the Student Employment office in room 109, and ask. No time is too late to find a job. New ones are always coming in.

Students' Accounts

Going down three floors to the ground level of the Ad. Bldg., on our left in room 102 is the Office of Students' Accounts. Although the functions of this office are mainly administrative, if a student has any problems with tuition payments, bills, or fines, this is the place to get it all settled.

Also, a variety of different off-campus jobs are posted in the glass case outside the Financial Aid office and on the bulletin board outside, underneath the steps.

Career and Placement

This office is located in the basement of the Memorial Library. Although its main function is to assist seniors and grad students, it is also there to help Juniors and sophomores (in some cases) find summer internships and other employment opportunities.

The office has listings of all the companies that will be interviewing on campus and a brief description of the people they are looking for. There is also a list of companies which are not interviewing but are accepting resumes. Available too in the office is a packet on how to draw up a resume, as well as counselors to go over the finished product with you. The C&P library also has resources available for students to do research on their own.

Morrissey Loan Fund

We move now over to LaFortune, upstairs on the second floor in the Student Government area, in the Treasurer's office. The Morrissey Loan Fund is open Monday - Friday, 11:30-12:30, and was set up as a short-term, low-interest loan fund for students. Any student can borrow $20-200 (in $5 increments) for thirty days, at which point a 1% interest charge will be assessed. If payment of a loan is late, there will be a ten-cent per day charge added on, and reasonable attempts to reach the person will be made. If, however, payment is still not made within ten days, the whole amount will be turned over to Students' Accounts, a $10 charge will be added, and the balance will be added to the tuition bill. At this point, the student will lose all future borrowing privileges at the Fund. Keep in mind also that there is a one-day wait for approval of loan requests. Come in Monday and you've got 200 bucks on Tuesday!

Lost and Found

Located behind the Information desk in LaFortune, this office does just what you think it does. If you've found something that isn't yours or lost something that is, then come here to get it taken care of.

This is also the place to come if, for whatever reason, your prof doesn't accept your reasons for missing that exam. Plead your case here and see if it makes any difference. If they can't help you here, then you're out of luck.

Office hours are 8-12, 1-5, Monday-Friday.

So there you have it. A list (although surely incomplete) of all the administration officials and offices just waiting to serve you. You are not alone. Feel better now?

Also, if you want to officially change anything at all-- your college, major, permanent or off-campus address, name, etc.--the Registrar is the first place to go to get it taken care of.

The Registrar is also the place to go for all of your good-student insurance benefits, VA benefit certification, and full-time student certification for payment deferrals on student loans. There is also a Notary Public in the office to notarize all your official documents.

Student Residences

This office is above the Registrar in room 311. If you want to switch dorms for next year or at the end of fall semester, you need to pick up a form here. When you find a dorm with an opening and the new rector signs the form, you're all set. There are a couple of key things to remember: (1) Room picks for next fall are May 1, so it would be a Student Residences also provides help in finding housing off-campus. Available in the office are house and apartment listings, terms available (e.g., furnished, pay own heat), maps, etc. The best time to start looking is the beginning of the first semester prior to the one you plan to move off (the earlier the better for houses). The University is not involved at all in any part of the process--everything is between you and your landlord.

Financial Aid Office

And across the hall, in room 103, we find the Financial Aid office. The primary purpose of this office is to help students find ways to finance their education through scholarships, grants, loans, and employment. If you are curious as to what options are available to you (even if you are an upperclassman), call and make an appointment to talk with a counselor. West German auto manufacturers react to declining dollar

By YORK DAMM
Business writer

A dropping dollar is expected to give the U.S. economy a major push to recover from its huge $170 billion deficit in 1986. But how far does the dollar have to decline so that a positive effect on the economy will take place?

Since Feb. 26, 1985, when the dollar reached its peak in West Germany at 3.47 marks, the dollar has declined steadily to 1.84 marks as of last Friday. Economists have said they believe that a 40 percent drop of the dollar against the German mark and against the Japanese yen has to occur to support the efforts of the administration to lower the trade deficit significantly.

A declining dollar is expected to make imports so expensive that the consumer will turn to products that are made in America. Although import prices went up 9 percent during 1986 and the December trade deficit went down slightly, many companies already see too much damage done to their business by the strength of the dollar in recent years.

Importers have reacted quickly to the changing value of the dollar, as they strike back by offering rebates and discounts for periods of months to protect their hold on the U.S. markets. For example, West German manufacturers such as Bayerische Motorenwerke AG (BMW), Mercedes Benz and Volkswagen AG would rather accept cuts in their profits than a loss in their share of the U.S. car market. Surprisingly, both BMW chairman Eberhard von Kuenheim and Mercedes Benz chairman Werner Breitschwerdt are optimistic for 1987. BMW, selling 90,000 units in the United States annually and being the number 16 car producer in the world, relies on its "image of an accepted and renowned luxury-car maker," as von Kuenheim pointed out in an interview with Business Week.

Mercedes Benz, being the number 15 car producer in the world, relies on a high quality and high performance basis like that of BMW. In fact, the latest model of BMW, the 735i and the Mercedes Benz luxury automobile, the 560 SEL are tough competitors on both the German and the international markets.

A third West German car-maker, the Volkswagen AG, producer of the Golf GTI, Jetta and the Audi 5000 S expects its sales to be at the same level as in 1986. Consumer complaints about an "acceleration problem" caused losses last year, which Volkswagen hopes to compensate for in 1987.

Volkswagen's chairman stressed the fact that the problem with the 5000 S has been resolved and estimates a slight improvement in sales for Volkswagen AG worldwide.

In Japan, a rising yen has caused many car producers to raise prices on their models by an average of $1,300 last year. Further increases are very likely for this year according to industry experts. However, Japan's share of the U.S. trade deficit, an estimated $52.6 billion in 1986, is calculated to drop only marginally by $400 million in 1987. Self-imposed limits on exports by the Japanese car makers are not likely to help the trade deficit soon, because they have occurred only in insignificant numbers so far. Japan, being the number three export country (the United States was surpassed for the number one spot by West Germany in the period of Jan.-Oct. 1986) achieved a huge trade surplus in 1986, which amounted to $91.8 billion. Given this fact, many have said it is clear that the Japanese are eager to maintain this surplus. They will do so by renovating their production facilities throughout 1987 to come out even stronger at the beginning of 1988, at the latest in 1989.

General Motors and Ford, combining for a total of $13.5 million in car sales per year have to stay alert if they want to avoid a flooding of the U.S. market as has occurred in previous years.

The United States, having trade connections to more than 130 countries in the world, is going through rough economic times at the moment, which are worsened considerably by its trade partners in Japan and Western Europe. A trade war was just narrowly averted recently, when negotiations resulted in an agreement on U.S. grain exports to Europe. Only 24 hours later, an ultimatum by the United States would have expired which would have led to 200 percent increases in the prices of products of the Common Market, such as French cognac, Dutch cheese or British Whiskey. In return, the Common Market threatened to impose high taxes on U.S. agricultural products. Although a trade war was avoided, tensions remain in international trade concerning equal access to all markets, without restricting taxes or regulations anywhere. Until an agreement can be agreed on, the United States will continue to have a negative trade balance.

Cost-conscious advertisers shorten TV commercials

In case you were wondering why you've been seeing more commercials while watching less TV lately, it's not because the networks are selling more advertising. The reason: The spots are shrinking.

Growing numbers of cost-conscious advertisers have been favoring 15-second commercials over the traditional 30-second spots for the last two years. This strategy, for instance, was the only one available for a company to spend less than $500,000 to remind Super Bowl viewers about its product.

For the large advertisers, the question comes down to this: Do we want to form an impression or are we satisfied with giving our customers a simple reminder?

Still, problems arise when too many short spots run in a row. John Goodchild of the Weightman agency feels that viewers get annoyed when there are eight ads in one break. Even Manning admits "there's a real danger of overloading 15's with unnecessary details and too many selling points."

Polaroid Corp. has decided to change its spots

Alex VonderHaar

from time to time. Normally, it uses longer ads for television, but "15's are a very nice way to remind people of the message in our longer commercials." Their abbreviated ads touting their Spectra camera led to impressive sales results at Christmastime.

Currently, about 20 percent of the 5300 weekly network ads last fifteen seconds, but that share is rising. Last fall, Gillette introduced Foamy shave cream for sensitive skin. Although most marketers recommend against using brief spots for product introductions, Gillette's effort has worked so far. The spots using footage of Abbott and Costello slapping each other took advantage of Foamy's established name.

Have you ever driven past a small inn called "Patel's Motel?" Patel is the name that comes from a clan of landowners in the west-coast Indian state of Gujarat.

Indian immigrants have seen a great deal of success in the U.S., but most Americans still associate them with cheaper sleepers. In fact, The Wall Street Journal cited a study indicating that 28 percent of the 54,000 hotels in this country are Indian-owned. They dominate the smaller inns, for example, in California and throughout the South.

Discrimination limited their progress. As late as 1935, businessmen in the West posted billboards reading, "No jobs for Japs or Hindus." Relaxation of immigration rules ushered in a new age after 1965 as more Asians were allowed to enter the United States. Indian immigrants now number more than half a million with 500 more arriving each week.

Government eases regional phone company rules

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The Justice Department proposed Monday that the seven regional Bell companies be turned loose to compete in making telephones and offering information services, but it disappointed their desires to enter a key part of the long-distance market.

In a 210-page filing to U.S. District Judge Harold Greene, the department said competition and changing regulation in the industry since the breakup of the Bell system three years ago have ended the need for most of the restrictions on the regional companies.

Further, the department's antitrust division said, changes were needed to bring to consumers more sophisticated equipment and new electronic information services--such as message storing and electronic mail--already offered to consumers in other countries.

After winning seven matches in one week, including one which featured perhaps the team's best comeback ever, the Men's Volleyball Club finally ran out of gas, losing to Bowling Green in the semifinals of a 15-team tournament at Ann Arbor, Mich.

Before the tournament, the Irish defeated Grand Valley State, 15-10, 15-8, 15-11, and then came from two games behind to beat Miami (Ohio), 12-15, 11-15, 15-8, 15-1, 15-11. It was the first time in at least three years that Notre Dame had come from two games down to win a match.

"Against Miami of Ohio, everyone played really well. The last three games we really came together as a team," said Club President John Sullivan. "We had a lot of fan support, and they were really behind us the whole way."

The Irish will be back at home in the ACC Pit to face Wisconsin this Saturday at 12:30 p.m.

Playing in Rivers' shadow does not concern Jackson

By BOB KEMPER
Sports Writer

Playing in David Rivers' shadow. That is the future freshman guard Jamere Jackson faced when he signed his national letter of intent last year. But that did not bother him when he chose Notre Dame.

"It did not bother me at all that I would be playing in the shadow of David," says Jackson.

"In choosing a school, basketball was actually the third priority. Academics were first and a good social atmosphere was second. I am not looking at Notre Dame as a stepping stone to the NBA. Playing professional basketball is a longshot for any player."

Those are pretty humble words for a player that averaged 12.9 points per game while earning four letters at Manuel High School in Peoria, Ill. Jackson also was named to several all-state teams and was nominated for McDonald's all-America team."

"The most exciting thing about Notre Dame is that the Notre Dame family extends across the United States. Whether we are playing in Philadelphia or Los Angeles, people are always pulling for us. Wherever I go when I graduate, Notre Dame will be there."

So far this season Jackson is averaging 10.1 minutes and 2.7 points per contest.

"When Donald (Royal) was hurt and a couple of other players were getting off to a slow start I got to play a lot," he says. "Now it is back to what I had anticipated -waiting. My high school coach told me that those kids that wait and are patient will get their chance. I am sure my chance will come."

Head Coach Digger Phelps is high on his freshman guard.

Guard Jamere Jackson averaging 2.9 points a game

"Jamere could be the surprise of the whole crop," says Phelps. "Once he improves his defensive concepts, he is going to be a factor. With the way we press and run, he is a real asset. In addition, his outside shooting could really be important in the three-point shot aspect of the game."

While balancing the demands of being a varsity athlete and a successful student at the University of Notre Dame would be a bit overwhelming for most 17-year-olds, Jamere Jackson is taking it all in stride. The transition from high school to the collegiate ranks has been a smooth one for the Peoria native.

"The workload has not been that different from high school. What is different, though, is the need to budget time more effectively," says the Dillon Hall resident. "The free time between classes, combined with new distractions, can be a real temptation. What it comes down to is studying between classes instead of turning on the television and watching a soap opera."

"Juggling time between basketball and studying does not present that much pressure. Everyone knows Coach Phelps' position on academics. If a conflict arises, basketball is second. We would never be penalized if we had to skip practice in order to study for a test." When asked why he decided on Notre Dame over the likes of Wisconsin, Marquette and Northwestern, Jackson responds without hesitation.

"I will answer that question like any sincere student-athlete. Notre Dame is the best of both worlds. On one hand, the TV exposure and athletic tradition are fantastic, while on the other hand, academics are of first priority."

Academics have always been quite important to Jackson. He was permitted to skip a grade in elementary school and was ranked 13th in a graduating class of 208 in high school. He is presently enrolled in the Frerhsmen Year of Studies and plans to major in business administration.

"When we travelled to Maryland earlier this year to take on the Terrapins, Tracy Jackson, Duck Williams and Collis Jones showed up at our practice session. They faced the same demands that we do, and now they dress in suits and ties. It was reassuring to see that all the hard work is well worth it."

Swimmers edge Cleveland State; women roll over St. Bonaventure

By KELLY TOWNSEND
Sports Writer

The goals were set, and the Irish swim teams met them in swimming action over the weekend.

Friday both the men's and women's swim teams defeated Cleveland State, and the women also won their meet against St. Bonaventure on Saturday.

When Cleveland State faced the Irish in the inaugural meet at Rolfs Aquatic Center last season, the Vikings handed the Irish a loss. Friday they returned the favor in the only way possible, at Cleveland State's home pool.

For the first half of the meet, the Irish trailed Cleveland by a seven point margin. But a first and second-place finish in the 200-yard IM pulled the men to within one, and the Irish took a one point lead after the one meter diving event.

From that point the Irish kept the lead over Cleveland. They increased the spread to ten points after an impressive showing in the 200-yard breaststroke. Finally meet came down to the 400-yard freestyle relay, and Notre Dame emerged from the water with a 116-99 victory over Cleveland State.

"This was a significant win for the men," said Head Coach Tim Welsh. "Last year Cleveland blew past us like we were just learning to swim. They stayed keyed up throughout the meet."

The women also faced a tough Cleveland State women's team. Their meet was almost a mirror image of the men's, with the women taking an 11 point lead before the final relay and then adding seven points for a well-earned 143-125 victory.

"The women ran into a much harder team than we expected," said Welsh. "We had to be real careful about how we swam, with St. Bonaventure still to face on Saturday."

Despite a late arrival at St. Bonaventure that evening, the Irish were able to continue their strong swimming on Saturday.

The women started the day off on the right foot with a 137-122 victory over St. Bonaventure. After leaping out to an 11-4 lead in the first event, the women kept St. Bonaventure in check. Although St. Bonaventure launched many comeback attempts, they could not catch the keyed-up Notre Dame swimmers.

The men, hoping for another victory, were met in the water by a determined St. Bonaventure team. Undaunted, the Irish put fear into St. Bonaventure with solid performances throughout the meet. Despite a valiant effort, the Irish fell to St. Bonaventure, 117-95.

Coach Welsh was more than pleased with the weekend's performances.

"We obtained one of our objectives," said Welsh. "We beat a team we lost to last year in grand style. It's a tribute to our guys that we were able to go neck-and-neck against two strong teams."

"Not only did we win, but we were able to drop our times in all the key events. Once a couple people go faster, the whole team follows suit."

Improvements in time will give the Irish an edge this weekend as they travel to Bradley University and then return home Saturday for a meet against Kalamazoo and Ball State.

Irish guard Mary Gavin was named the North Star Conference player of the week. Gavin had the first triple-double in Notre Dame women's basketball history against Marquette Saturday.

'Weak link' epeeists whip Tartars as fencers extend winning streaks

By TERRY LYNCH
Sports Writer

Sometimes there's just so much verbal jousting a fencer can take. And when the 'weak link' stabs became unbearable for the men's epee team, they didn't just put up and shut up. They put up and screamed about it.

This past weekend against Wayne State, the men's epee team whipped the over-matched Tartars by an 8-1 tally. That, combined with the expected 8-1 score by the heralded foil team, paved the way for Notre Dame's 21-6 pasting of rival Wayne State on Saturday in Detroit.

Sophomore Todd Griffie has provided the spark for the resurgent epee team, which now leads the team in overall wins. Griffie took to wearing headbands with 'weak link' written on them last week in practice as an obvious parody to Head Coach Mike DiCicco's remarks about the epee team being the weakest part of the fencing team behind the foil and sabre fencers.

The epeeists proved otherwise this weekend, combining for an impressive 31-5 overall record.

"Griffie's gone nuts with this weak-link thing, and it's just been great for the team," said DiCicco. "I would have bet you anything in the world last week against those guys going 8-1 against Wayne State. Those guys were just unbelievable this weekend."

Yesterday at practice, Griffie and his epee teammates continued their antics, showing up to practice sporting colorful t-shirts with a picture of a chain and the words "weak link" printed on them.

Saturday's victory preceded Sunday's sweep of Tri-State, Detroit, and Michigan-Dearborn. The men's fencing team now enjoys a 62-meet winning streak, which is the second-longest streak in Irish fencing history.

The women's fencing team continued their current streak of 31 meets without a loss this weekend. Janice Hynes, Anne Barreda and Kristin Kralicek won the last three bouts against a tough Wayne State team, coming from a 7-6 deficit to claim a 9-7 victory.

Molly Sullivan, last year's NCAA champion, went 2-2 during the meet.

"Molly said she was distracted last weekend, and that she was thinking about going to Germany this weekend to fence in the Senior World Cup," said women's coach Yves Auriol.

"I don't think the team is ready yet. We still need to make adjustments. We'll be facing six teams this weekend, and hopefully that will help us. We don't have our rhythm yet, and it's a problem that can only be solved by more competition.

"Even so, Molly lost two bouts against Wayne State and we still won," continued Auriol. "We have a balanced team, and we proved that the two strong girls (Wayne State) had to face us weren't enough."

Both fencing teams will be in action next weekend when they travel to Columbus, Ohio, for a seven-school meet. The fencers will then participate in the Junior Olympics the following weekend before hosting their first meet of the season Feb. 21.

Irish face high-scoring W. Mich.

By MARTY STRASEN
Assistant Sports Editor

Tomorrow night's women's basketball game between Notre Dame and Western Michigan might just mark a first for the Irish this season.

They have to worry about a possible let-down.

After every kind of problem in the book seemed to show its face for Notre Dame head coach Mary DiStanislaio this season, the 5-12 Irish played their best game of the campaign this past Saturday against Marquette, posting an impressive 95-60 rout of the Warriors. In addition to other highlights, junior point guard Mary Gavin established two school records in the contest, and was named this week's North Star Conference Player of the Week on Monday.

Gavin had the first triple-double in Notre Dame history, with 11 points, 14 assists and 10 steals. Her 10 steals were also a school record, topping her own mark of eight set earlier this year against Montana. Mary Beth Schueth swiped eight in 1985 against Xavier.

The Irish can ill-afford that dreaded let-down, however, as the Broncos enter the ACC (7:30 p.m.) with a 13-4 record, 6-3 in the Mid-American Conference.

A high-scoring group, all five of the Western Michigan starters average at least 13 points per contest, with 6-1 center Shannon Pickell leading the way with 16.6 a game. Senior guard Tracy Wells is second in the nation in assists, averaging 9.2 per outing.

Looking at the last four meetings between the two squads, history would seem to favor the Irish. The teams have faced each other every year since 1983, and Notre Dame has won all four times under DiStanislaio. Of those victories, the last three have been by a combined total of 80 points.

The Observer/Greg Kohs

The Irish women's swim team edged Cleveland State on Friday and edged St. Bonaventure on Saturday. Kelly Townsend details all the swim teams' action on page 10.

Crystal Mountain takes its toll on ski teams

Several injuries kept the men's and women's Ski Teams from finishing as well as usual during last weekend's races at Crystal Mountain, but the skiers are confident they will recover by this weekend's divisional races.

The men's team traveled without top skier Pat Eilers, who was ill, and lost number-two skier C.B. Thomas to a sprained knee during the races. The Irish twice ended up placing fourth in the two-day tournament.

"We were one point out of third place on both days," said Jeff Parker.

With Jane Heisel out with an injured hand, Sharon Dow, Laurie Shea, Kathy Skendzel and Mary Beth Skendzel led the Notre Dame women's team to two third-place finishes.

Saint Mary's got the worst of the injury bug over the weekend, though, as its top skier, Maureen Connaughton, broke her leg on the first day of competition. The Belles went on to finish fifth on both days.

It could not be a worse time for the teams to get hit by injuries. This weekend, the teams return to Crystal Mountain for the divisional races. Out of twelve teams competing over the weekend, the top four will advance to a race near Duluth, Minn., between the top teams in the Midwest. The top two teams in that race advance to nationals.

Despite the injuries, the teams feel they should advance to the race near Duluth.

"The women and men are both very confident of making it as long as we can all stand up," said Kathy Skendzel. "Saint Mary's will have more of a struggle now that its number-one skier is out, but I think they can make it too."

Parker is equally confident about the chances of the men's team.

Steve Megargee

Club Corner

"We should be able to qualify because Eilers will be back, but we're not too sure about Thomas," said Parker. "Without our top two skiers, we were still able to stay in the top four last weekend."

Encouraging the men's team last weekend was the result of a dual meet with Michigan following the two-day races. The Irish, behind J.P. MacFayden and Todd Maus, handily defeated the Wolverines.

Participating in the Can-Am Games last weekend at Windsor, Canada, the Women's Track Club faced some of the toughest teams on both sides of the northern border.

"There were some excellent teams there. It included teams like Michigan, Michigan State, the Division II national champions, the NAIA champions, the National Junior College champions, and the defending Canadian champions," said Head Coach Dan Ryan.

Julia Merkel finished third in her heat in the 1500-meter run with a time of 4:56, and posted a personal-best time of 3:03 in the 1000-meter run.

"Julia equalled her best 1000-meter run time already. I expect greater things to come from her," said Ryan.

Linda Filar (5:09), Karen Sharpe (5:26), and Terry Kibelstis (5:45) all competed in the 1500. Wendy Powers recorded a time of 11.74 in the 60-meter hurdles, and Susan Rosenthal participated in the shot put.

"There were some very good performances out there," said Ryan. "There's a lot of work to be done, but they did really well."

The team next competes in the Michigan State Relays on Saturday.
