Accusations prompt U.S. walk-out

Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS -President Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua accused the United States on Thursday of having no regard for justice in his country, and repeated his demand for direct peace negotiations with Washington.

The six-member U.S. delegation walked out of the General Assembly hall early in a harshly critical speech during which Ortega said, to hearty applause: "let President Reagan recall that 'Rambo' exists only in the movies."

Ortega repeatedly attacked Reagan for asking Congress to vote more aid for rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government, claiming the request defies a peace accord signed by the five Central American presidents Aug. 7.

Reagan said in a speech Wednesday to the Organization of American States that he was asking for $270 million in new aid to the U.S.-backed rebels, known as Contras, to make sure the Sandinistas honor the peace plan.

Democratic congressional leaders say his chances of getting the money are slim. A $100 million aid package ran out Oct. 1.

The peace accord signed by the presidents of Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Honduras, Guatemala and El Salvador was endorsed by the United Nations on Wednesday. It calls for an end to foreign support for rebel forces in Central America, and measures to achieve greater democracy in the region.

U.S. sinks three boats in Gulf

Associated Press

WASHINGTON -U.S. helicopter gunships sank three Iranian patrol boats in the Persian Gulf on Thursday after an American observation helicopter was fired upon without provocation, the Pentagon said.

It was the second American military engagement in the region since the United States attacked an Iranian ship laying mines on Sept. 21.

Officials said no Americans were hurt in the confrontation.

At least six Iranian crewmen survived Thursday's assault and were picked up from the gulf's waters by a U.S. patrol boat, said Pentagon spokesman Fred Hoffman.

Three of the six were reported in serious condition, he said, adding that a search for other survivors was continuing.

President Reagan was informed of the incident by Lt. Gen. Colin Powell of the National Security Council staff. Powell went to the Oval Office at 3:30 p.m. EDT to brief Reagan, said presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater. He said the president would be updated on developments as warranted.

"It appears it was an isolated incident," Fitzwater said. "We did not provoke the incident in any way. Our helicopters acted in self-defense because they were fired upon."

He said the administration would review the incident in terms of the War Powers Act, which if invoked gives

Falwell resigns from PTL, Bakker hopes to return

Associated Press

FORT MILL, S.C. -The board of the PTL ministry resigned Thursday and PTL chairman Jerry Falwell said he feared defrocked minister Jim Bakker would return, making the ministry "the greatest scab and cancer on the face of Christianity in 2,000 years."

The resignations were prompted by a court ruling Wednesday that allowed PTL's creditors and contributors to file a competing plan for reorganizing the ministry, which is plagued by more than $60 million in debt.

Bakker, in a news conference at his mountaintop retreat near Gatlinburg, Tenn., said he would return to the ministry if invited to do so by its creditors.

Bakker said he thought Falwell was resigning to avoid testifying under oath in bankruptcy court.

Falwell, who has his own ministry based in Lynchburg, Va., said PTL's main television program, the "PTL club," will remain on the air at least three weeks, but the payroll at the "Heritage USA" theme park will not be paid Friday.

"I hope the successor will pay them," he said. Falwell asked PTL's 1,200 workers to stay on, although it was not immediately clear who would take control.

Falwell said members of the PTL's board were willing to fight Bakker, but unwilling to fight the courts. And he predicted Thursday that within six months, "barring a miracle of God," Bakker would resume control of the evangelical empire he turned over to Falwell in March amid a sex-and-money scandal.

Bork opposed; Reagan won't surrender

Associated Press

WASHINGTON -Robert Bork's Supreme Court nomination was dealt an almost certainly fatal blow Thursday as opposition spread to a majority of the Senate. But President Reagan said he wouldn't surrender "in the face of a lynch mob."

Reagan officials, giving what seemed to be conflicting signals, insisted the fight would continue to the Senate floor, no matter how bleak the outlook, but also said it was up to Bork to decide whether to withdraw.

The president himself said of Bork, "He has a decision to make. I have made mine. I will support him all the way."

Bork went at midday to the Justice Department to meet with Attorney General Edwin Meese, raising speculation the nomination might soon be withdrawn. Department officials added to the speculation by saying Meese had arranged a meeting with Reagan to talk over Bork's fate.

However, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said later that there would be no such meeting, that Meese had reported there was no change in the status of the nomination and that "our strategy is to continue to make our case and change minds."

Terry Eastland, a Justice Department spokesman said Bork "obviously wants to stay in the fight for the nomination as of today and the attorney general is not trying to persuade him one way or the other."

Meanwhile, Democratic Sen. George Mitchell of Maine, himself a former federal judge, declared on the Senate floor that he would oppose Bork's nomination if the White House pursues it to a final vote. According to an Associated Press tabulation, based on floor speeches, written statements and a telephone survey, Mitchell was the 51st senator in the 100-member chamber to declare he would reject confirmation.

Idolizers of 60s wear rose-colored glasses

Almost every age except the present is a golden one. This is trite, but it's still true.

Ronald Reagan, for instance, sees the '20's as the golden age. Calvin Coolidge was president then, a firm believer in the axiom that the best government does absolutely nothing. He presided over an America that could speak softly and carry a big stick without worrying about getting blown up by some weapon out of science fiction if it hit too hard.

During the '70's, everybody talked about how great the '50's were. Gasoline was about as expensive as water, the biggest worry was what one should wear to the hop, and nobody was embarrassed about having fins on their cars. These were the "Happy Days." But then '80's came, and the "Happy Days" on TV was updated from the '50's to the '60's.

"Whatever happened to the '60's, the protest marches, demonstrations and all that "idealistic" stuff many ask now, especially if they're older than 35. The hippies of two decades ago who are the now the acquisitive yuppies of today argue that the "robust dialect" of their day has been stifled. Even a handful of equally nostalgic theologians echo this sentiment by claiming that somehow dissent by itself is "integral to the dialectic process," essential to development of the Church.

Even the USA Today purportedly showed that college students are "less idealistic" than they were 20 years ago in a recent article complete with graph. More directly, Washington Post journalist Colman McCarthy complained in an article on "Hesburgh Notre Dame": "Other failings include an anaemic student newspaper. The Observer, a daily, has no editorial page. Apparently, no faculty advisor has told the kids that the kicks of college journalism are had by writing editorials blasting the administration."

A Notre Dame alumna quoted this remark, concluding, "Nothing is more unhealthy for the cultural and intellectual life of a campus than the dampening of the spirit of irreverence."

Others have already addressed these particular remarks to great detail, so I won't beat them to death. I would only like to point out that just as Reagan is still living in the '20's, so we may now have a new brand of reactionaries.

Were the '60's that idealistic, or at any rate more idealistic than the '80's?

There sure were a lot of demonstrations that looked nice and dramatic on television. But aren't some of last generation's social critics overdoing it by equating rebellion with idealism and wholesomeness? Does irreverence really amount to a healthy outlook? Would blasting the administration just for "kicks," as McCarthy suggests, really make us idealistic?

All of this strident emphasis on the indispensability of dissent by yuppies, journalists and theologians reminds me of what that great German nationalist Hegel said about war: "(It makes for) the ethical health of peoples corrupted by a long peace, as the blowing of the winds preserves the sea from the foulness which would be the result of a prolonged calm."

Chris Julka

Assistant News Editor

It's almost as if today's yuppies are saying campus protest is an inherent good. For a student to be a true idealist, one must prove one's ideological manhood, become the causa sui. To devil with everybody else, society and universe, for it is all absurd anyway—thus evidently the remark that the only healthy attitude is one of irreverence.

I take it for granted that most people, except the most hopelessly devoted disciples of Jean Paul Sartre, would say nobody seriously believes dissent by itself is an inherent good.

Yet this is exactly what people start believing when they refuse to take off the rose-colored glasses. The student protestors of the '60's were not the oppressed masses rising in revolt. They were the privileged themselves. They were the leisure class who did not want to get drafted and wanted to establish their freedom and identity. Yet I find it no coincidence that yesterday's hippies are today's career-obsessed materialists. Take away the Vietnam War and academia's almost adolescent infatuation with Sartre, and all that would be left of the '60's is what you have today: yuppies looking for "kicks."

If we refuse to recognize this, however, and continue to gild the students of the '60's as Don Quixote's while equating the hooplas of demonstrations with idealism, then we run the risk of forgetting what idealism means altogether.

sity will make a final decision on the fate of Carroll Hall.

Carroll Hall will remain open as an undergraduate dormitory for men, said Father David Tyson, vice president of student affairs.

Carroll Hall residents were notified last year that the hall would be closed to undergraduates after the 1988-89 school year. The hall would then reopen as a dormitory for male graduate students for the following year.

In a letter to Father Michael Sullivan, rector of Carroll Hall, Father Tyson said, "The University presently plans to retain the use of Carroll Hall as a residence for undergraduate men after 1988-89."

Pending a favorable recommendation by the Task Force on Residency, the Univer-

The Task Force will present its report and recommendations to the administration on March 15, 1988.

The University, in addition, has decided to keep Holy Cross Hall open for undergraduate men during the 1988-89 school year. As a result, the University should be able to accommodate all freshmen without using the study lounges. A review by the Office of Student Residence revealed that the overcrowding of freshmen in recent years has been due to the increasing number of upperclass students choosing to remain on campus.

Jamie Froman, Carroll Hall President, commented, "We'd all like to see Carroll stay open, especially for the freshmen and sophomores who will be able to remain in the dorm."

Eyes opened at SYR

By ERIC M. BERGAMO
Senior Staff Reporter

A task force examining the issue of alcohol use and abuse at Notre Dame is in the "early stages" of collecting information, said Patrick Utz, director of the University Counseling Center.

Members of the task force recently attended an SYR to "get a sense" of what a hall party is, Utz said.

The task force was established last spring under a mandate from University President Father Edward Malloy to examine the issue of alcohol use on campus and the alcohol policy, Utz noted.

Utz said the task force will look at the issue from "all kinds of levels," including student and faculty levels.

The task force consists of Utz, six faculty members, two rectors and five students. The task force will have until March 15 to submit their recommendations to Malloy.

There are also task forces dealing with family and residentiality, he added.

Utz suggested that members of the task force attend an SYR after the topic kept coming up repeatedly in discussions.

A number of the members of the task force "did not know what SYR stood for," Utz said.

The task force will meet with 26 student leaders who will recommend the best methods to gather information, Utz said. The student leaders will recommend where to have meetings open to students and how to conduct the meetings.

After the meeting with student leaders the task force will hold open meetings with students, he said.

Japanese tanker attacked in Gulf

Associated Press

MANAMA, Bahrain -An Iranian vessel attacked a Japanese tanker Thursday in the Persian Gulf, wounding three crewmen and starting a fire in the engine room.

The Tomoe 8, a 9,400-ton chemical tanker flying the Panamanian flag, was hit by what the captain called a "gunboat missile." The attack came the day after Japanese ship owners lifted a suspension that kept their tankers from operating in the gulf for a week.

Iraq reported its seventh air strike on Iranian coastal shipping in four days. There was no immediate confirmation from maritime executives based in the gulf, where Iran and Iraq have been at war since Sept. 1980.

France said its mine-hunting ships found two more mines in the Gulf of Oman, just south of the Persian Gulf, on the other side of the narrow Strait of Hormuz. Iran has been blamed for laying mines in both bodies of water.

In response to the French report, some companies ordered their ships away from the area, a major coastal anchorage for ships bound to and from the Persian Gulf, shipping sources in the United Arab Emirates said. A U.S.-operated supertanker hit a mine there in Aug.

Robertson admits he 'sowed wild oats'

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA

Republican presidential candidate Pat Robertson, in his first appearance since he acknowledged being legally married 10 weeks before the birth of his first child, said Thursday he sowed wild oats in his youth but Jesus had forgiven him.

The former minister and television evangelist also said he didn't think journalists covering the presidential campaign should be making such inquiries.

The Wall Street Journal reported Tuesday that Robertson and his wife, Dede, were legally married 10 weeks before the birth of their first child, and on Thursday, the Washington Post quoted him as saying he and his wife felt married from the day they conceived their son.

Robertson said he hadn't previously revealed his wedding date in an effort to "protect his family," the Post reported.

"I have never, ever, claimed that I was free from the normal life of a young college man," Robertson told reporters before addressing some 250 supporters at a fund-raising luncheon.

"I have never, ever, indicated that in the early part of my life I didn't sow some wild oats. I sowed plenty of them."

"But I also said that Jesus Christ came into my life, changed my life and forgave me."

He added, "I think it is outrageous to intrude into a man's family in the guise of journalism. I think to dig back to somebody's family 33 years ago and try to resurrect some skeleton is outrageous because the skeleton isn't there."

"I have lived and led a life with integrity. I have been a father, a husband of impeccable quality over the years, and I think to hurt a man's family, that is over the line."

He implied, however, that the investigation into his background might be helpful to his candidacy.

Congress a say in whether American forces could remain in the region. The administration has refused to invoke the law over the Persian Gulf deployment.

Fitzwater said the act is reviewed every time there is an incident and "will be after this incident, as well, but there are no preliminary judgments to make other than we will comply with the spirit of the resolution by giving full and detailed consultations to the Congress."

Asked if the Iranians picked up from the water would be returned home, Fitzwater noted that the United States repatriated Iranians who were captured from the mine-laying boat.

"I think the other incident is instructive of our general attitude, but I just couldn't go beyond that," Fitzwater said.

China orders reporters out of Tibet for violations

Associated Press

CHENGDU, China -Chinese authorities Thursday ordered Western reporters out of the Tibetan capital of Lhasa, where police reinforcements prevented independence protests that have left at least 14 people dead.

Yu Wuzhen, director of Tibet's foreign affairs office, told the reporters to leave within 48 hours for violating a little-publicized reporting regulation, according to reports reaching Chengdu.

Yu, who called the reporters together in a hotel room in the Tibetan capital of Lhasa, said the 14 journalists from the United States, Britain, Italy, West Germany, Canada and Australia failed to apply 10 days in advance for permission to cover news there.

Lhasa, capital of the remote Himalayan region, had been one of more than 400 cities in China where foreigners could travel without official permission.

The journalists arrived in Lhasa after violent demonstrations Sept. 27 and Oct. 1 that were led by Buddhist monks loyal to Tibet's exiled spiritual and former temporal leader, the Dalai Lama.

The Chinese government said six Chinese policemen were killed in street battles Oct. 1, and Western doctors traveling in Lhasa said at least 8 Tibetans also were killed.

About 100 monks staged a third demonstration Tuesday and 60 were arrested.

Lhasa was reported quiet Thursday. Reporters were barred from visiting the Sera and Drepung monasteries just outside the city, whose members led the demonstrations, but otherwise were free to move about.

Tibetan monks had said they hoped to hold another protest on Wednesday, but authorities bolstered security forces with more than 1,000 armed police from other cities and put road blocks around the monasteries.

Among Ortega's caustic comments about Reagan was: "I'm sure he hasn't even read the agreement."

The Nicaraguan president spoke from notes, not a prepared text. Much of what he said concerned Reagan's speech to the Organization of American States, in which he urged the Sandinistas to negotiate a cease-fire with the Contras, expel all Cuban and Soviet forces, establish "full democracy" and restore freedom of the press.

At a news conference after his speech, Ortega said La Prensa, which is Nicaragua's only opposition newspaper and has been allowed to resume publishing, might be closed again if it supports Reagan's request for more Contra aid.

Human fragility depicted in war

"Platoon" has been generally acclaimed by most critics as one of the best screen portrayals of the Vietnam War. By any standard, "Platoon" is a powerful film; powerful in its emotional directness, in the absolute honesty with which it depicts the miseries of the human condition and the tragedy of war. Although ostensibly the theme of the movie is the war of Vietnam - and it is true that it poignantly depicts that deplorable chapter of our history - its message is a deeper message, not restricted to any particular historical circumstance. "Platoon" brings to life in a frightfully immediate way one of the most dangerous threats confronting us all: the threat of spiritual corruption and the dissolution of all moral perspective in our dealings with other human persons.

Victor Krebs

If there is anything that characterizes a civilized society it is its heightened awareness of the basic principles by which we acknowledge the value of life and the respect we owe our fellow creatures. The more civilized a society, the more educated are its members and the clearer is their sense of the bonds existing between them, the stronger their recognition of other people's rights, of their own obligations and responsibilities towards one another; civilization means the rise of moral consciousness.

The threat that the circumstances of war pose to a civilized society is the dissolution of its moral dimension: the blurring of our ability to discriminate between what is good and what is evil, and ultimately the loss of our very ability to act from virtue. The scenario is terrifying, the moral sense which serves as the foundation of any human community collapses under the demands of a perverted desire of power, the pursuit of the basest pleasures, and the proliferation of violence and mindless destruction. It is part of the horror of war that it places us in a situation where spiritual values are subordinated to the requirements of physical survival. Despite the common attempts to romanticize war by appealing to the ideals for which it is fought, the undeniable fact is that it diminishes our moral worth by subordinating all principles to the demands of the self. This is certainly not a denial of the good will that may stand behind each individual soldier in his belief in the values he sees himself as fighting for; it is a description of the circumstances in which he eventually finds himself. That is in the end what this movie makes so painfully evident, and its power derives from its ability to bring before us with disarming directness the fragility of the human soul to the circumstances of war.

We are sometimes rash in our dismissal of such circumstances because of their remoteness from our present situation, because in the security of our all-too-comfortable worlds such atrocities, such moral degradation and insensitivity to our essential values seems impossible. But the threat is not restricted to the circumstances of war, even if it is most poignantly illustrated by them. The threat of moral dissolution and spiritual corruption is ever-present in any human society, and especially in a society which is, like ours, increasingly preoccupied with the possession of material goods, and often slave to the deceptive allure of indiscriminate sensual pleasure and the satisfaction of selfish interests. The threat is most acute precisely in our ever-so-indulgent lifestyles, in our lack of real commitment to anything except the most superficial values, and in the unwillingness to subject our beliefs to the careful and responsible scrutiny of self-criticism and reflection.

The protagonist of the movie talks directly to us when he says in his last words that it is our duty to find good in our lives; after experiencing the horrors of war, after experiencing the moral degradation of people like us, we are challenged to seek within us that good that allowed Taylor to survive his terrible trial and to utter his final words of hope even in the face of senseless destruction.

But how can we discern the necessary components of that Good which is to replace and hopefully prevail against the mindlessness of war and its destruction? How can we start our search for that Good that will keep us safe from the perversions to which we are exposed in our society? How, in other words, can we strengthen our moral sense?

There are clearly two kinds of people represented in "Platoon." There are those that find in the occasion of war - in the horrifying spectacle of the perversities of reason gone wild - a painful occasion to deepen their understanding of virtue, to realize the deep roots of moral principles. There is, for example, the striking scene of Taylor rescuing the Korean girls from the violating hands of the American soldiers, and his heroic appeal to the categorical claims of morality, his appeal to our natural bonds with all human beings. But there are also those (and indeed they are the many) who find in war the occasion to give free reign to their basest instincts, indulging in the nihilistic urge to destroy everything and everyone for no other reason than the satisfaction of a senseless illusion of power. Although confused at first, Taylor managed to return to a sober attitude despite the extraordinarily disconcerting circumstances in which he found himself. Although, at first, a believer in the ideals behind their struggles, Elias, the other hero of the story, never lost his critical vision, never ceased to question the reasons which had brought them there; and it is because of that, because of their capacity to see beyond their contingent limitations, that they became the moral presences in an otherwise despairingly inhuman situation.

The fragility of the human spirit to moral corruption is endemic to our human condition. The only protection against this natural tendency lies in our continuous and perseverant attempt to overcome ignorance, in our striving to make ourselves more receptive to the Good. We are able to overcome unscathed situations of duress where our moral sense is threatened only when we have developed a strong familiarity with Virtue; only if we have developed a sound and sharp moral sense. The human soul has a natural affinity to the Good, but it is an affinity that comes slowly and painfully to us. Not without reason did Plato depict our human condition as that of prisoners in a cave. It is through a careful process of spiritual cleansing, of depuration of our passions and sharpening of our intellectual powers that we are able to recognize good and evil.

There are those that have never seen the light, they are the ones who find in the chaos and destruction of war the suitable medium to indulge in their ignorance and perpetrate the most atrocious acts; they are the ones that are most vulnerable to the illusions and temptations of the rampant materialism and selfishness in our society. But insofar as we have known the delights of mutual understanding, insofar as we have come to see the deep-seated sovereignty of virtue and have been able to intimate the profundity of the bonds that tie all of us together as fellow creatures and inhabitants of the same world, we will be less prone to fall again into the darkness of ignorance, less vulnerable to the corruption which is ever-present, as much in our everyday existence as in the state of war. It is only through exposure to the Good that good souls are made; only through the difficult but sweet labors of reflection that they are cultivated. The deeper message of "Platoon" lies in its challenge for us to search in our lives for the good without which chaos and destruction are indeed... inevitable.

Semester abroad reveals new insights

Football games, Sacred Heart Masses, Observers and Hungarian Noddle Bake all seem a bit removed when you're away from Notre Dame. It's not like an "out of sight out of mind" thing, but rather, you simply lack much more information about campus than memories and infrequent letters provide.

Robert Hennig

guest column

When you first start the semester, you miss Notre Dame. Tower Records did not stock the Sports Illustrated with Tim Brown on the cover until three weeks after it went on sale at The Huddle.

No one could find a pub or television station playing the Michigan game and the best anyone could do for the Michigan State game was a barely audible signal from Armed Forces Radio.

Father Malloy's inauguration went on, mostly oblivious to us.

It's just not easy being a Domer 4000 miles away from Notre Dame.

And, as the weeks go by, you really don't seem to mind it all that much. Simply put, there are other things on your mind:

Are you going to go to Ireland or Paris next weekend?

Will you be seeing Les Miserables

this Wednesday? or The Phantom of the Opera? or Chess?

When are you going to get your next meal supplement or letter from home?

Past London Program students will tell you that South Bend becomes a strange blur in your memory the longer you are away from "there" and over "here" instead.

"Oh yeah. We have to go back to South Bend next semester."

Though the semester has barely started, the thought of going back to South Bend already inspires a sort of dread.

You've changed and Notre Dame hasn't.

You've become a black sheep in the Notre Dame family because you dared to leave for a semester.

All this, of course, doesn't actually matter until you come back.

For now, you go to Soho to get your hair cut and go shopping on Oxford and Bond Streets and travel on weekends. Day-to-day life in London is so entirely different from your previous two years at Domer U. and also, for many of us, anything is previous.

And it is so much more fun.

You begin to wonder if you could find a way to stay and not go back.

It just won't be the same.

Education can break cycle of poverty

This is the second in a series from the Justice Education Communication Group at Saint Mary's.

What is it like to be poor? Do any of us really know? Do any of us fear that we'll go to bed hungry tonight? Or that we'll wake up in the morning shivering in a damp apartment? Most of us take for granted money, a comfortable home, food, electricity, and water. But many people in America are struggling just to survive. They are stuck in the cycle of poverty. This country of ours, which preaches democracy and opportunity, needs a new focus - a dedicated concern for education which will enable the poor to help themselves out of their desperate situation.

Sally O'Dowd

Having worked in City Utilities last summer, I have learned much about poverty, about those who are poor, why they are poor. My eyes, often clouded by my blissful existence at St. Mary's, have a clearer vision of reality now. I saw poverty that would make your stomach queasy. I saw a young mother, not much older than myself, cry because her water supply had been shut off and she could not afford to turn it back on. She had given birth less than 72 hours before, and had a two-year old waiting at home. "I don't care about myself," she said. "I care about my babies." Unfortunately, most of the parents I saw were not as compassionate towards their children. I saw physical and verbal abuse that would make your body shiver at every harsh word and you skin sting at every slap. One woman said to a five-year old, unbathed little girl, "If you don't be quiet, I'll take you to the bathroom and beat your behind." (I hadn't heard the child make a single noise.) I can't count the times I heard children insulted and humiliated, being called "fools" and literally thrown into a chair, the parent demanding, "Shut up!" Does it sound like a bar room fight? Anger and violence, scowls and harsh words. Not my idea of a typical family.

I witnessed these scenes for three months and have since wondered why they took place. I've realized that because the parents were uneducated, unemployed, depressed and frustrated, they released all their aggressions on their children. Unable to control their destinies, they could control their kids, with violence. Having pitied the innocent children, white and black, I have come to a conclusion: the adult poor and minorities that many people disrespect and mistreat were once children that sympathetic people wanted to nurture, to clothe, to bathe. The needs of today's children must be tended to so they won't be discriminated against as adults.

Education can meet some of these needs. However, inner city schools lack the materials and teachers to provide stimulating environments for these children. But if the Department of Education were appropriated more funds, successful education could thrive in America. If provided with governmental assistance, schools could afford to pay teachers attractive salaries, thus attracting intelligent, motivated, concerned teachers who in turn will motivate the children to read, to write, to think for themselves. Adult education and job training/placement programs could also demonstrate to the parents the value of literacy, enabling them to set a positive example for their children. Thus, the children won't struggle between conflicting environments of school and home.

The impoverished need to believe that hitting the books is far more productive than hitting the streets. They need to know that education is the key to their future. It's not the fault of today's parents that these children are remiss from the value of education. The parents themselves are simply the product of a seemingly unbreakable cycle of poverty. Impoverished environments have deprived past and present generations of values such as self-respect and self-discipline, attributes that enable one to succeed. But these people can't teach these values to themselves if they don't have the means to learn them. Birds can't fly without wings. If this nation focused more on the needs of the poor, and the desperate necessity of quality education and teachers, these people could understand the wonder of learning. Then they could learn to help themselves and to discover the opportunities of which this country is so proud. Children do learn what they live. It's time for this country's poor children, and their parents, to learn something new.

Food fight showed lack of respect

Dear Editor:

The Hall President's Council would like to address an issue that has filled these pages in the weeks since the ND-Michigan game. We don't want this to be just another letter about food fights, and we hope everyone will give this letter a fair chance.

After the Michigan game, those of us here on campus went to the dining halls in a celebratory mood. Some of us went there to eat; some of us went there to work. Everyone wanted to enjoy the win as much as the next guy. That's where the food fight comes in.

Sure, food fights may seem harmless, but there's more to it than that. In the Michigan food fight, people got hurt. One student had to receive stitches, but far more importantly, many of the people who work at food services were hurt verbally. People who work hard, day in, day out, to provide food for all eight thousand of us were told to "get real jobs." Many were abused in more obscene ways.

The food fight showed a lack of respect for all members of the Notre Dame family; those of us who threw food offended those of us who were hit with jello, salad dressing and the like, those of us who work there, those people who had to clean up the broken glass, smeared entrees, and far-flung fruit in both dining halls, and most importantly, the people with real jobs who work 14 hour days so that we can all eat at convenient times.

Notre Dame knocking off Michigan in Ann Arbor was a Notre Dame moment. The food fight after the game was not. We are all proud to say, "We are ND," but food fights are not Notre Dame. This week, and throughout the season, let's all celebrate with the Irish, but not at the expense of each other and the hard working individuals who provide us with a quality food service every day of the year.

The Hall Presidents' Council

Gays belong in minority discussion

Dear Editor:

Father Griffin's October 2 column is a timely and cogent reminder to all of us to beware of bigotry and prejudice in our lives. The column manifests the compassion and wisdom for which Father Griffin is so respected not only at Notre Dame, but throughout the nation. His cautionary advice to beware of the hatred in our society toward Jews and Blacks and other minorities needs to be taken to heart by all of us. This is especially true when we examine the community's attitude toward another minority not mentioned in Griffin's column, the gay and lesbian members of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's communities.

I hope that someday soon I will read in Father Griffin's column the following paraphrase: "She would have been surprised to learn the number of gays who love Christ very much. Even when they suffer, they don't hate God and they don't hate being gay or feel sorry for themselves at not being heterosexual. Perhaps they feel sorry for heterosexuals who are twisted inside by fear and bigotry, for whose sake, the gays have had to play games, like being invisible...or role playing. The anger of gays in America - so plain to see in protest writers like James Baldwin...has always been outweighed by the love and forgiveness in them."

Strike testifies to erosion of values

Dear Editor:

I'm unable to identify the person who coined the expression "The public be damned." However, it seems to this observer to be the attitude of some of these professional football players and their agents. The bottom line: Greed and more greed. I fail to see or it escapes me where there is any concern for the fans. They are the ones who build these stadiums (shrines) and foot the bill for these enormous salaries paid to these people. And it is darned hard earned money that the fans shell out to witness these Sunday afternoon spectacles. The fans do possess a very potent weapon - boycott. They should use it. Unfortunately the good would have to suffer with the bad. I know that there are players out there who are concerned about the fan. For you I praise. In the light of this greed by some, it is incongruous to say the least when we read daily in the press of those thousands of our brothers and sisters who are unable to come by enough food each day to stay healthy; let alone the many other social services that they are unable to afford. Consider too, the thousands of children and adults who die each year from starvation in this world of ours. And the thousands yet who perish from related diseases. It is high time to reassess our values, our priorities, and our responsibility to ourselves and to also our hungry, troubled and disadvantaged brothers and sisters wherever they may be found.

Heck scores on two-point conversion in last year's USC game. This score narrowed the score to 37-35, and the Irish would go on to win 38-37. The junior tight end counts that game as one of his personal highlights.

Irish tight end

Heck is complete player

By THERESA KELLY
Sports Writer

What does it take to turn a high school sophomore into a Notre Dame football player?

In the case of junior Andy Heck, three key factors turned him from a raw athlete with good size to a seasoned, businesslike starter at tight end for the Irish.

One of the reasons was Notre Dame itself.

"When I decided to come to Notre Dame, I knew I was going to the greatest university in the country, both academically and for football," says Heck. "Nowhere else does a player get the attention, the challenges, and the pressure."

A second factor was high school basketball teammate Tommy Amaker, who earned a scholarship to Duke and was drafted by the Seattle SuperSonics. Amaker was a star senior guard when Heck was a sophomore at W.T. Woodson High School in Fairfax, Va.

Heck says the respect and admiration Amaker earned were influences on his football career.

"Tommy was a great athlete and a great student," says Heck. "He had the respect of everyone in the school. As a sophomore, I thought I'd sure like to have all that."

"You look up to guys like that. You emulate them, consciously or not," Heck continues. "You see what works for them and try to make it work for you."

The formula must have worked again. Heck earned numerous football honors as a tight end and linebacker, and made the decision to play for Notre Dame. With the Irish, he met a third factor in his growth as a player, tight end coach George Stewart.

Heck has plenty to say about the influence Stewart has had on the tight end since spring practice in 1986, when the two began working together.

"Coach Stew has great intensity on the field," Heck praises. "He has an incredible knowledge of the game, and he knows how to make practice fun. He takes more pride in doing things right than anyone I know."

"He is the best coach I've ever been around, and also one of the best friends I've ever had."

Stewart's influence helped Heck become this season's starter at tight end. Heck alternated with Joel Williams last year, and is backed up by freshman Frank Jacobs this season.

"You get the job because you do what is expected of you," Heck says. "Work out, be prepared, give everything you can."

"Having more than one guy who can play the position is a great advantage for the team. It's good for Jacobs, too."

Heck says that his style of play must be controlled and technical, because "offense is

In the footsteps of the legend

By PETE SKIKO
Sports Writer

The storied history of Notre Dame football is chock full of names that have become familiar even to the most casual college grid follower.

This history includes the fact that, remarkably, two of Notre Dame's coaches rank 1-2 in total winning percentage. Knute Rockne's teams won 88 percent of the games he coached over 13 years. Only ten years later, Frank Leahy's squads won 86 percent of their games from 1941-1953.

What happened at Notre Dame during those ten years between the reigns of the most prolific coaches in college football history? Stagnation? Letdown?

Hardly. After the 1930 campaign during which the Irish won their third national championship under the immortal Rockne, Notre Dame was flying high. The football team had just concluded its second consecutive unbeaten, untied season with a 27-0 drubbing over favored USC at Pasadena, Calif., had proven that its squad was no fluke by challenging the toughest schedule in college football, and was secure under the steady tutelage of Rockne. Then came the shocking tragedy.

100 Years of Irish Football

On March 31, 1931, Knute Rockne and seven others were killed in a plane crash near Bazaar, Kansas, on a flight headed for Los Angeles.

Who could possibly replace the greatest coach of all time? The unenviable task fell upon a huge man by the name of Heartly "Hunk" Anderson, who had been Rockne's offensive and defensive line coach. Anderson was a competent coach, but the chemistry was never quite there when he was at the helm.

The Irish were certainly still one of the premier teams of their day. The fight, the aggression, and the murderous schedule remained trademarks of the team throughout Anderson's tenure. But in his debut season, 1931, Anderson

PITTSBURGH - For many people around this country, the thought of Pitt evokes images of a town as hard as the steel produced there. This idea extends to incorporate the city's sports teams as well.

During the 1970's, the NFL was dominated by the Steelers. The Pirates were also heavy hitters in baseball during that decade, and the Penguins hockey team is beginning to emerge as a team as slick as the ice they play on.

But there is one more team which in retrospect seems to have always been there.

The Panthers of the University of Pittsburgh have always managed to be a driving sports force for the town during whatever decade of which you may wish to speak.

This year is no different. But the Panthers seem to have found a new form of iron to be forged into the steel coming out of Pitt - specifically Ironhead.

Craig Heyward

Or, more specifically, junior running back Craig 'Ironhead' Heyward.

Heyward, who stands at an intimidating 6-0, 260, is currently ranked seventh in the country in rushing, averaging 139.6 yards per game, and is 13th overall in all purpose yardage with 155 yards per game.

He is also eighth on the all-time Panther rushing list with 1,943 yards. If he can maintain this average for the rest of his college career, he will move to number four on this list, surpassing such former Panther greats as Warren Heller, Marshall Goldberg, Joe McCall and Charles Gladman. And the catch to it all is that he still has over a season and a half to go.

And like Notre Dame's Tim Brown, he is also being looked at as a legitimate Heisman Trophy candidate, if not this year, then next.

Pitt head coach Mike Gottfried calls him, "the best player as well as the best person I've ever coached."

And former NFL coach Sid Gillman, who recently joined the Panthers as a volunteer offensive coordinator, calls him, "a 10-pack back - he'll carry six of their guys and four of ours."

But the ever-modest Heyward sees himself in a different light.

"I love carrying the ball, that's my job," he says. "Sure I get tired. I'm no robot running on premium gas or anything like that, but you get your stamina somewhere. There's always a point in a game where you'll get your second wind."

The impressions Heyward has made on the teams he's played against have been touted across the land.

"Incredible," is what David Futrell, a defensive lineman at Brigham Young, had to say.

Add to that, "He roars down the field like a raging bull, maybe they should have made that movie about him," from Bill Romanowski of Boston College.

And last season, the defensive line of the then number-one ranked Miami Hurricanes was quoted as saying, "Trying to stop him is like trying to stop a locomotive - just ain't no easy job."

"All I'm doing is the job that I'm supposed to do," Heyward says. "If you give me the ball, then I'm going to run as far as I can with it - no more, no less."

This weekend's matchup against Notre Dame will be a reunion of sorts for Heyward. He will be facing his former coach, Foge Fazio, who left the position as head coach at Pitt in 1985 and is now the defensive coordinator of the Fighting Irish. Fazio recruited Heyward for the Panther team, and Heyward said that he is looking forward to their meeting again.

"This is a special game for us, not only because we need a win but because it is against Notre Dame - a school that is steeped in tradition and against our former head coach," Heyward said. "Neither I nor any of the other players feel any animosity toward him because he is our former coach. As a matter of fact, it makes the game even better, and he and I will always be friends."

As well, Fazio only has words of praise for his former player.

"He's in league all by himself."

Heyward knows this competition against the Notre Dame defense - which allows only 99 rushing yards per game - won't be easy, but he is prepared.

"Notre Dame is really no different from us. They're in their second year of a coaching transition. If everyone does what they're supposed to do, I can't see why we won't win."

So let ND think it has the ultimate secret weapon in Tim Brown. The people in Pitt know they have an ironclad champion in Craig Heyward.

Heck and former Irish split end Milt Jackson (6) last season. The junior says that just being at Notre Dame is largely the source of his success.

all business. Each play is set. I have my job, and ten other guys have theirs.

"So I'm not a killer. I see myself as a technician - the right step, the right place at the right time. To improve myself, I'd like to be more aggressive, but keep the techniques and stay under control."

Heck says he likes the blocking aspect of the tight end spot, but the chance to catch the ball makes the position special.

"Tight end is fun because, every once in a while, I get to move the ball. That's what the game is all about."

The attention on the offense this year has been on Tim

Brown, but Brown's talents would be wasted without the rest of the offensive squad.

"Our offense is geared to getting the ball to Timmy Brown," Heck says. "But when he's double teamed, it's up to Terry (Andrysiak) to read the defense and go to who's open - the backs or the tight end."

Heck counts the USC game last season as a highlight of his career. In that game, he opened the scoring for the Irish with a five-yard touchdown reception from Steve Beuerlein and scored the two-point conversion in the fourth quarter that cut the Trojan's lead to 37-35. The Irish won the game (38-37) with a field goal with no time left.

"Southern Cal had to be my best game personally and for the team," Heck said. "I felt like I contributed to the win, and the game was a lot of fun."

Coach Stewart has watched Heck's progress since the spring of 1986. Heck had all the natural talents, but he needed to work on the fundamentals.

"Andy was young, but he was a decent football player," says Stewart. "Fundamentals are so important for our young men. Andy has really improved to be where he is."

"He has outstanding character and athletic ability. He is a super football player for the University of Notre Dame."

And for Heck, Notre Dame is the place to play.

"There is no higher level than ND," Heck says. "This is the best. Notre Dame is the epitome of college football."

watched his team drop its final two games after going 6-0-1 in its first seven. Both losses were upsets, the first coming at the hands of a vengeful Southern California squad which knocked off the Irish before its first-ever capacity crowd at Notre Dame Stadium, 16-14. Demoralized, the Irish fell in their season finale, 12-0 to Army at Yankee Stadium, taking them out of contention for yet another national title.

In a scenario familiar to many Notre Dame coaches throughout the years, a two-year mark of 13-4-1 while playing one of the toughest schedules in the country brought howls from the media and fans for Hunk Anderson's ouster. The final straw was the 1933 season, in which the Irish, despite rallying for a 13-12 upset of heavily-favored Army at Yankee Stadium in the final game of the season, finished 3-5-1. That season marked the first time since the team's second year in existence that Notre Dame had finished below .500. Enter Elmer Layden. One of the original Four Horsemen, Layden was dear to the hearts of Irish fans, but he had to prove himself if he was going to become a mainstay along the Irish sidelines. As his career on the field had shown, Layden was up to the challenge.

Elmer Layden's 47-13-3 mark (.770) over 11 years could only be obscured by the awesome shadow of Rockne. In 1938,

Elmer Layden

Layden's squad won the national championship in 1938 behind quarterback Steve Sitko's scrambling and passing. That championship season also featured the 300th win in Notre Dame history, a 19-0 whitewashing of 12th-ranked Minnesota at Notre Dame Stadium.

Layden also coached what many have called "The Game of the Century." The Irish scored twice in the final two minutes to beat top-ranked Ohio State, 18-13. With Notre Dame trailing 13-6 and three minutes left to play, quarterback Andy Pilney led the Irish downfield and lofted a 33-yard touchdown pass to Mark Layden. But the Irish missed the extra point. Laying with the Buckeyes with a 13-12 lead with less than two minutes to go.

Ohio State recovered the ensuing on-sides kickoff, but, with a minute left, Pilney forced a fumble with a vicious hit. The Irish had first down at mid-field. Pilney took the snap, dropped back to pass, found all of his receivers covered, and scampered to the Buckeye 19-yard line. Pilney was unable to return, however, as he tore ligaments in his knee on the play.

Elmer Layden sent young Bill Shakespeare in to quarterback. Shakespeare, facing a ferocious rush fired the ball right at a Buckeye defender, who couldn't hold on for the interception. On the next play, with 22 seconds left in the game, Shakespeare hit Wayne Millner for a touchdown that once again kept Notre Dame in the nightmares of their top-ranked opponents-to-be. A 40-point underdog in some papers, the Irish had rallied for yet another tight win.

After the 1940 season, Layden ended his illustrious coaching career, giving way to yet another legend, Frank Leahy. And yet another chapter in the incredible history of Notre Dame football to be told.

The Game

By PETE GEGEN
Assistant Sports Editor

PITTSBURGH -The last time Notre Dame visited Pitt Stadium, Irish defensive coordinator Foge Fazio was on the other side of the line of scrimmage.

In 1982 Notre Dame faced Fazio's 7-0 Panthers, then the top-ranked team in the nation, but a freshman named Allen Pinkett led the Irish to a 31-16 upset.

Now Fazio will try to stop the 3-2 Panthers at his former home field.

"I'm trying to treat this game just like any other football game," said Fazio.

While Fazio downplays his past, the Irish football players are keying on the past - a 10-9 loss at the hands of the Panthers at Notre Dame stadium last season.

"It's more of a revenge factor," said Irish free safety Corney Southall. "They came into our house and beat us, and we did have the game won."

A blocked punt led to the decisive field goal with 1:25 left in that game. That loss dropped Notre Dame to 1-4 on the season.

If you try to use that game as a barometer for this season's matchup, about the only clue you can derive is the revenge factor.

This time Notre Dame enters the game with a 3-0 record and a No. 4 ranking in the polls. Pitt is 3-2 and has dropped out of the Top 20 after early season rankings. Notre Dame starts four fifth-year seniors on just the offensive line, while Pitt starts six freshmen or sophomores on offense. The difference a year has made for both teams is amazing.

"Notre Dame has an air of confidence we don't have," said Pitt head coach Mike Gottfried. "We were better off last season. We're a different ballclub, and we've got a different set of problems to work on."

After resounding victories against Brigham Young (27-17) and North Carolina State (34-0), the Panthers fell short to Temple (24-21) and Boston College (13-10) and squeaked by West Virginia (6-3).

"We started out very well," said Gottfried. "We're just not making the key plays. We've been making too many penalties and mistakes to beat the good teams."

Don't let these comments lead you to believe that Gottfried has a negative outlook on this game. Pitt features a traditionally-tough defense and an offense led by a large-scale tailback.

Notre Dame's offense vs. Pitt's defense

Two weeks ago against Purdue, the Irish offense faced adversity for the first time this season. After turning over the ball just once in two games, Notre Dame coughed the ball up three times in the first three quarters and found itself down 20-17.

But the offense turned things around, driving 91 yards (officially 81) to give the Irish the lead. The 44 points scored against the Boilermakers moved Notre Dame to ninth in the country in scoring offense with a 33.7 per game average.

The Irish will be hard pressed to match that average this weekend. The Panthers have a solid core of seniors on the eighth-rated defense in the nation. Pitt is allowing just 269 yards and 11.4 points a game.

"They have dominated the other teams' offense," said Irish head coach Lou Holtz. "They don't crowd the line, they grab it. They play in your backfield."

Senior linebacker Zeke Gadson, who replaced the injured Darrel Woods at the beginning of the season, is the team's leading tackler with 54, including 15 sacks, 10 tackles for a loss and five fumbles forced. He teams with senior Jerry Wall and junior Jerry Olsavsky to create a seasoned linebacker corps.

As Braxton Banks (knee) returns to Notre Dame's backfield this weekend after missing the last two games, freshman Tony Brooks will miss the game with an ankle injury.

The Irish will also be thin at the split end position as Ray Dumas suffered a knee injury in practice this week, but Aaron Robb (back) returns to back up Tim Brown at flanker.

Irish quarterback Terry Andrysiak has quietly climbed to 14th nationally on the passing efficiency chart, completing 26-of-45 attempts for 412 yards.

For the second game in a row, Notre Dame will be facing a team with a quarterback controversy.

games, but his performance has tailed off lately, and even Genilla admits he isn't exactly feeling comfortable on the field.

The Panthers have two freshmen quarterbacks, Larry Wanke and Darnell Dickerson, waiting in the wings. According to Gottfried, as the season progresses, the need to give the freshmen game experience becomes more urgent.

"I've got to think about getting our ballclub ready not just for this weekend, but also for the next five games down the road," said Gottfried. "All three are inexperienced. If we want to do well next year, we've got to get these freshmen on the field."

As of Wednesday, Gottfried had not yet announced a starter.

"We're preparing as if the quarterback is going to be Genilla," said Holtz. It should be noted that the two freshmen quarterbacks are much better runners than Genilla.

But before the Irish defenders begin to lick their chops, they must first handle the nation's 7th-leading rusher.

Junior tailback Craig Heyward has rolled up 648 on 110 carries this season, good enough for a 4.8 yard-per-carry average. Even more intimidating is Heyward's size. At 6-0, 260 pounds, Heyward will be quite a package to handle.

"He looks like a tackle who got lost and didn't know where to line up," said Holtz. "If there's one guy you have to stop, it's Heyward."

Split end Reggie Williams leads the receivers with 19 catches for 322 yards and three touchdowns.

The "No-Name Defense" counters Heyward's running with a stingy defense against the run. The Irish are ranked 14th in rushing defense with a 99.0 yards-per-game average.

More importantly the defense has created more than a dozen turnovers. Notre Dame is the top-rated team for turnover margin with a +3.3 mark (14 gained, four lost). Southall leads the turnover parade with three interceptions.

The secondary will receive a boost with the return of Brandy Wells from a knee injury.

On the negative side, the Irish have rolled up 21 penalties in three games for 181 yards, most of those coming on the defense and special teams. But in comparing those totals to their opponents 10 penalties, Holtz feels that his players aren't the only ones making mistakes.

"I take my player out of the game because he committed the penalty," said Holtz, "but when I look at the films I really can't see the penalties." Holtz shied away from directly criticizing the officials, but he did note that a split officiating crew will not be working this game, as had been the case the first three.

In the kicking department, Jeff VanHorne, the man who kicked the winning field goal for Pitt last season, is struggling in the field goal department, making only five of 12 attempts. On the other side, Ted Gradel has been hot for Notre Dame, converting seven-of-nine attempts.

Punter John Rasp has been averaging 41.2 yards a kick, while Vince Phelan is ranked 10th in the nation with a 42.7 yard average, although Holtz indicated he wasn't as happy with the kicking game against Purdue as he had been.

PEERLESS PROGNOSTICATORS

Each week, the Observer sports staff, a random student picked by the sports editor and some well-known figure in the Notre Dame community predict the outcome of the week's major college football games. Records are compiled as to how each person does against the spread. In other words, it isn't enough to pick the winner of a given game. The person must pick the winner and give the underdog points. Home team is in CAPS.

Liberation in a chauvinist Church

A young lady called to ask how I feel about women's liberation. If a Darwinist had phoned Billy Sunday to ask how he felt about the vivisection of monkeys, that baseball player, turned Bible-thumper, might have answered: "Predictably." Predictably, as a part-time male chauvinist, I have mixed feelings about women's liberation. Still, I have allowed myself to be dragged, kicking and screaming, into modern times.

Women's liberation is like the charismatic movement: charis-

Church makes up its mind to ordain them?"

Drinan answered: "Women should urge the start of Vatican III, which could decide this matter."

I said, in agreement with Father Drinan: "Only an Ecumenical Council could decide on the ordination of women, after the churches in the West have consulted with the churches in the East, not in communion with the Pope."

She said: "How would you feel if Catholics started to ordain women right away?"

I answered: "Ordaining wo-seemed that way to me. Every time I feel updated, the New Theology takes a couple of giant steps ahead of me. If the Holy Spirit is the guide, what does it matter if an old curmudgeon spends a great deal of time wondering how obsolete he's become?

In the meantime, the Church decided it owed a debt to the women. Many Catholic women are part of the infra-structure of Notre Dame, now that the campus in co-ed. Is it hard to be a pre-Vatican II male chauvinist on a changing campus in an updated Church? Not if you have humility, and not if you don't mind feeling superseded. You try to stay patiently polite as a gentleman of the old school, and you try not to die inside, out of disappointment at things you are no longer asked to do. You can still say Mass, and hear confessions; and these duties can keep you young-in-heart as a priest.

Change is the sign of life, even in an ageless Church. Change is inevitable in this penultimate decade of the 20th century; nobody can save you from it, and nobody should have to, since human beings are an evolving life form. The only real tragedy for a priest is to become bitter in a way that consumes him.

"Ordaining women now would do more harm than it does good."

You ask yourself: "Are you bitter, since your turn in the pecking order never really came, as you were promised it would come, when you were young? Are you hurt because so much of the ministry, once entrusted to you, has been passed out piecemeal to colleagues, who complain of being treated as second-class Catholics? As a senior priest, do you ever feel like a second-class Catholic yourself, since you're in the situation of the jealous apostles in the Gospel who saw their rivals calling down fire from heaven in a way that they thought only the elect were supposed to do?"

Sometimes, when I see amateurs at work, I get mad and jealous. At other times, when I see professionals and talented non-professionals reflecting glory on the Church, I rejoice in the variety of ministries. The parable of the vineyard workers could have been written exclusively for me. "Why stand ye here idle? There is work enough for everyone, and I may hire whom I wish."

Years ago, I heard stories of laymen presiding at the Eucharistic celebration, and declaring the forgiveness of sins. I wasn't threatened then, and I am not threatened now, if theology shows this to be the will of Christ. "They also serve who only stand and wait," wrote the blind Milton. Shepherds, left out in the cold, should consider if they're truly unemployed.

The liberation of a chauvinist Church means that all of us take turns in enduring pain. When nuns, looking for a place in the sun, complain, I grit my teeth, looking for grace under pressure, because they are telling me again: "Priest, move over." When Duty whispers low, "Thou must," old age should reply, "I can, saving the honor of Christ." Why in a power struggle, should I piously mention Him? Because of the politics of competitiveness and anger, having nothing to do with the ministry of the Cross, which turn up as arguments for women's ordination.

"The liberation of a chauvinist Church means that all of us take turns in enduring pain."

Bede, in his history, recalls the argument presented to the king in favor of the Faith of Christ. "Man's life on earth seems like the swift flight of a sparrow through the banqueting-hall where you are sitting at dinner on a winter's day. Inside, a comforting fire warms the hall; outside the storms of winter rain or snow are raging. This sparrow flies in one door and out the other. Inside, he is safe from the storms; but after a short moment of comfort, he vanishes from sight into the wintry world. Even so, man appears on earth for a little while; but of what went before this life, or of what follows, we know nothing. Therefore, if this new teaching has brought any more certain knowledge, it seems only right that we should follow it . . ."

The Church --whatever the politics and human errors that damage it --continues to be the inn of the Good Samaritan for creatures, pausing between night journeys, to see if life or death is love's last word. The Church, like the Cross, is a bridge over troubled waters. Its sacraments and mysteries are balms in Gilead, having nothing to do with power politics.

Who is John Paul II? Is he a wolf in shepherd's clothing? Anti-Christ appearing as an angel of light; the foremost of chauvinists; the last of the Caesars? By whose authority is he calling the shots? The least you can say of him is that he is an important religious symbol. Even if he's an embarrassment, he saves us from chaos. If you got rid of him as a devil, seven worse devils would take his place. Then you could ordain women to a ministry that doesn't mean much, because the Pope, disappearing, would take the magic with him. If the Pope is trivial, all of us are trivial, ranging downward in an apostolic succession. Yet, he's treated as trivial; he's punished for being trivial, since he's denying the women (so they say) their share in Christ's cakes and ale.

Extremists, please spare us the Church; we need it for a while. Without it, we would be left naked to our enemy, spiritual death. Catholic women, who are hurting, are asking the Pope to help them. How will they answer him if he says his hands are tied? Will they tell him he could help them if he wasn't Polish, or a misogynist or a stick-in-the-mud who hangs on to the tradition?

If we knew that the Church would last 100,000 years, it would be clear that the Holy Spirit hasn't finished launching us. A church lasting to the end of time is in no great hurry. Who, among the progressives, dreamed of ordaining women in 1965, at the end of the Council? The "Now Generation" is complaining because it hasn't happened in the two decades since then. As Father Drinan says, women of the Church have made more progress in the last 20 years than they did in the last 20 centuries.

The Pope spends a lot of time stamping out brush fires started by Catholics who claim they aren't liberated. He answers: "You are liberated enough to love without reservation." He tells that to priests wanting to be married: "You are free to love God's people with all your hearts. What more do you need?" How do you like that? We call his attention to our human feelings, and he encourages us to be lovers! Is that tyranny, or isn't it?

In the lifetime of the next pope, we may have Vatican III, which could approve of women's ordination, or priests marrying. In the meantime, we're supposed to fill up our time with love, as though love could fulfill us as Christians. It's enough to drive a modern Catholic out of his outdated Church, in search of greener pastures.

"You are liberated enough to love without reservation."

I'll tell you a secret: the Church liberates you from bondage to sin, so that you can love your neighbor as yourself. Outside of that, there are only service jobs, which are specialized forms of ministry. Without love, you'll be a tinkling cymbal or sounding brass, even if you're saying Mass. With love, you can celebrate a liturgy approved by Christ, by handing out cups of water and bread, in His name. Volunteers at the Catholic Worker do a more priestly day's work than a pastor does when he spoils walking with a game of golf.

What do you think of the zeal of Catholics who sound ready to tear down the Church, because they can't wear robes on the altar every Sunday, showing off to the flock, who will talk about them behind their backs?

I'm on the eve of my 62nd birthday as I write this, too old to lie, and too naive, perhaps, to realize how dumb I sound. None of it would be worth mentioning if I hadn't gotten a phone call critical of the Holy Father. He's not too old to learn, and neither am I. I'm sorry for Catholics who can't become priests. I'd rather see their love than their anger.

Father Robert Griffin

Letters to a Lonely God

matic preaching hasn't convinced me of the importance of being slain in the Holy Spirit and speaking in tongues; still I'm more sensitive to the presence of the Holy Spirit than I used to be. I'm more conscious of the way women have been given the short end of the stick, in the Church as well as out of it, now that women are standing up for their rights.

In fairness to myself, I was probably raised as a male chauvinist by my mother, though she was no shrinking violet as a housewife. My dad was a life-long Republican, and she was a closet Democrat in the days of the New Deal. When I wanted to be a Catholic, I got her on my side, to save me from being blown out of the water by his WASPish, Yankee prejudice.

She had her prejudices. She wouldn't, she said, give houseroom to a woman doctor or a male nurse. As a middle-aged cleric going to psychiatric therapy, I had a lady doctor as my shrink. We got along so beautifully, the shrink explained, because the parent I was closest to was my mother.

The young lady on the phone said: "You spend a lot of time defending the Pope." I explained that John Paul II is the head of the Church and the boss to whom I owe loyalty. She wanted to know if I believed women should be ordained. Her meaning was clear: the Pope opposes the ordination of women, therefore the Pope is the enemy. If I'm on the Pope's side, I must be as much of a male chauvinist enemy as he is.

I gave her the answer which I heard Father Drinan, S.J., the ex-Congressman, give Mary Gordon, the novelist. "The Pope can't decide by himself whether women should be ordained."

"You mean," the answer came back, "that women should be patient until the men now would do more harm than it does good. Other women would be the first to protest. Half the Catholics now going to Mass would give up the Church, if we made a quick change like that."

She was persistent, like the serving girl who shamed St. Peter. She said: "Would they be more of a loss than the Catholics who don't go to Mass because of the Church's injustices to women?"

We could have chased each other around the mulberry bush endlessly, offering each other arguments, none of them new, since I am neanderthal, just as she is liberated. Can women be ordained? Will they be ordained? Not in John Paul's lifetime, it seems. After he's gone, will the Holy Spirit surprise us? Who can say? In the meantime, we have the politics of liberation, which have left some of us punch drunk. Thirty-three years ago, as a new priest, I was told: "Ask nothing; refuse nothing. Young men do the leg work of the ministry. Old men call the shots. Father knows best, and you are still a boy, so keep your mouth closed."

"Her meaning was clear: the Pope opposes the ordination of women, therefore the Pope is the enemy."

Ten years after I was ordained, Vatican II ended. Over night, some of the best professionals were over the hill. Young men out of the seminaries were the new professionals, if they understood the mind of the Church according to Vatican II. By 1975, these new professionals had taken their turns in being over the hill, for their brand-new, Vatican II theology had become slightly outdated. At least, it

Irish host North Star tourney; Gelfman likes her chances

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Sports Writer

In five years of membership in the North Star Conference, the Notre Dame women's tennis team never has lost a conference match or tournament.

Irish coach Michele Gelfman is not planning on changing the tradition this late.

"We've never lost a conference match, and I don't plan on starting now," Gelfman said. "We won't lose. I have a lot of confidence and faith in our players. They're hard workers and have shown it this year."

Notre Dame will host the North Star Conference Tournament this weekend at Courtney Courts. It will be the team's last North Star Conference competition before switching to the Midwest Collegiate Conference next year.

Action starts at 9 a.m. Saturday, but the Irish will not hit the courts until 1 p.m. Singles and doubles finals start at 9 a.m. Sunday.

Gelfman is confident she will be seeing many of her players in Sunday's finals. Notre Dame holds all of the top seeds in the six singles brackets and the three doubles brackets.

"I don't want to lose one slot," said Gelfman. "I want to win all the singles and all the doubles. I think we can."

In Notre Dame's two conference matches this year, the Irish shut out Northern Illinois, last year's conference runner-up, 9-0, and whipped Marquette, 8-1, without top-seeded Ce Ce Cahill, who missed the match with the flu.

Michele Gelfman

Both Alice Lohrer and Resa Kelly are out with injuries and will miss this weekend's tournament. Gelfman still is confident the Irish can overcome Marquette, which she figures will provide the stiffest competition.

"Even though we don't have Alice and Resa in the lineup, we're still about as strong because all the girls won before when they moved up in the lineup," said Gelfman. "We're consistently strong straight through. I'm confident if we move our lineups we can still be as competitive."

Singles players for the Irish will include first-seeded Cahill, who takes a 19-0 singles record into this weekend, second-seeded sophomore Stephanie Tolstedt, third-seeded senior captain Michelle Dasso, fourth-seeded freshman Kim Pacella, fifth-seeded junior Natalie Illig and sixth-seeded junior Julie Sullivan. Cahill and Dasso, Tolstedt and Pacella, and Illig and freshman Cathy Bradshaw will form the Irish doubles teams.

The three doubles teams, changed after the injuries to Lohrer and Kelly, have played together only at last weekend's tournament at Northwestern, but that does not faze Gelfman.

AL playoffs

Twins take 2-0 advantage

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS—Tim Laudner and Dan Gladden drove in two runs each, and the Twins dealt Jack Morris his first major-league loss in the state of Minnesota, beating the Detroit Tigers 6-3 in the second game of the American League playoffs Thursday night.

The Twins, who were 0-6 in playoff games before Wednesday night's 8-5 victory, took a 2-0 lead in games in the best-of-seven series, which moves to Detroit for Game 3 Saturday. Detroit will send Walt Terrell, 17-10, against Twins rookie Les Straker, 8-10.

Morris, a Minnesota native and 11-0 in his career against the Twins in the Twin Cities, allowed a two-run double to Laudner in a three-run second inning and a two-run single to Gladden in the fourth. The runs all were scored with two out.

Morris, 18-10, also gave up a fifth-inning homer to Kent Hrbek, who led the Twins with 34 during the season.

Bert Blyleven, who pitched for the Twins the last time they were in the playoffs in 1970, worked 7 1-3 innings and limited Detroit to Chet Lemon's second-inning homer, a two-run shot, and an eighth inning solo homer by Lou Whitaker. Juan Berenguer got the final five outs, four on strikeouts, for the save.

This game very easily could have become a home-run hitting contest. Blyleven, 15-12 in the season, led the majors allowing 46 homers, and Morris gave up 39. The Tigers led the majors with 225 homers; the Twins had 196.

But this game did not turn on home runs, although three were hit. It turned on defense and speed—with Randy Bush stealing two bases in the pivotal Minnesota fourth to tie the playoff record—and that made a loser for the first time in postseason of Morris, the free agent the Twins didn't want.

Morris had a 1-0 playoff and 2-0 World Series record, all compiled in 1984 when the Tigers won the Series. The loser of his last three regular-season decisions, Morris, who went eight innings allowing six hits with three walks and six strikeouts, wasn't any more effective this time out as the Twins continued their winning ways at home.

Minnesota had a 56-25 home record this year, best in the majors. Add two more.

Blyleven, acknowledged as having the best curveball in the league, was the winner of this one, allowing seven hits, walking one and striking out six in his first postseason outing since 1979 when he won one game each in the playoffs and World Series for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Blyleven had retired eight in a row and 15 of 16 before Whitaker hit his first homer of the playoffs with one out in the eighth for the final margin. Before the homer, Twins third baseman Gaetti made a diving stop of a grounder to his right by pinch-hitter John Grubb, and first baseman Hrbek made a diving catch of Gaetti's throw to save what could have been another Detroit run.

Last December, Morris had come to Minneapolis, wearing his full-length, black mink coat and offering to come to the Twins as a $2 million free agent. He was turned down flat, and he and the mink went back to Detroit. Morris is headed back to Detroit again, and very much alive are the playoff hopes of the underdog Twins.

AP Photo

Tim Laudner had the game-winning RBI as the upstart Minnesota Twins powered past the Detroit Tigers, 6-3, on Thursday night at the Metrodome in Minneapolis. The Twins hold a 2-0 game advantage in the American League Championship Series, which shifts to Detroit on Saturday.

Dawkins, Turpin to Jazz

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY—The Utah Jazz beefed up their front line with centers Darryl Dawkins and Mel Turpin in a seven-player NBA trade Thursday that also involved the Cleveland Cavaliers and New Jersey Nets.

The complicated player shuffle began with New Jersey sending Dawkins to Cleveland in exchange for guard John Bagley and forward Keith Lee. The Cavaliers then sent Dawkins and Turpin to Utah for backup center Kent Benson and reserve guard Dell Curry.

The transaction leaves the Jazz with two veteran centers behind 7-foot-4 Mark Eaton and is expected to provide much-needed inside scoring, Utah President and General Manager Dave Checketts said in announcing the trade.

All seven of the players traded were first-round draft picks, but none was a starter at the end of the 1986-87 season.

Dawkins, 30, a 12-year NBA veteran, has a 12.3 career scoring average. But the 6-foot-11, 270-pound Dawkins has been hampered by injuries the past three seasons, playing in only six games in 1986-87 and 97 during the past three seasons.

Turpin, 26, a three-year player for Cleveland with a 10.4-point career average, scored 6.1 points per game in 64 games last season. Plagued by weight problems, the 6-11 former University of Kentucky star lost playing time when the Cavaliers drafted North Carolina's Brad Daugherty.

Injuries plague Belles in first loss of season

By ANNE GALLAGHER
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's tennis team lost its first match in division play on Wednesday to University of Illinois-Chicago, in its final home effort of the fall season.

A case of asthma sidelined top-seeded sophomore Jennifer Block, and the Belles lost the match by the heartbreaking score of 5-4.

The major factor for the loss was health reasons, however, that's no excuse," said Belles coach Debbie Laverie. The people we had out there were capable but they (UIC) were more prepared mentally."

Along with Block's injury, several other players competed even though they were not feeling up to par physically.

"Everyone has been out, and people have not been playing up to their ability," said junior Charlene Szajko.

Laverie indicated that he knew the Belles were in for a challenge.

"I knew it would be a tough match, this team is one of the toughest dual matches of our fall schedule," said Laverie.

In singles play, freshman Sarah Mayer won in straight sets, 6-4, 6-3. Freshman Mary Turk dominated opponent Susan Lavickas, 6-0, 6-2. Charlene Szajko pulled out of a close first set after some inspiring words from Laverie. She went on to take the second set 6-2 to take the set. Sophomore Elizabeth Heinz, suffering from an injured hand, lost the first set 1-6, but came back in the second set to win 6-4, but only to lose the tiebreaker set 7-5.

In doubles play, the tandem of Jane Schnell and Mary Turk emerged as the sole Belle victors. They defeated their opponents in straight sets, 6-5, 6-2. The team of Michelle Cheney and Elizabeth Heinz lost 1-6, 4-6. Sarah Mayer and Charlene Szajko lost 6-3, 5-7, 3-6.

Kalamazoo edges SMC soccer, 1-0

By MOLLY MCNEILL
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's soccer team gave nationally-ranked Kalamazoo a run for their money yesterday before falling, 1-0.

Kalamazoo, ranked eighth in the NCAA Division III standings, was the toughest opponent the Belles had faced this season.

Saint Mary's came out strong in the first half, holding Kalamazoo to only five shots.

Kalamazoo caught the Belles napping and capitalized on a corner kick ten minutes before the half.

"We went to sleep for two or three minutes, allowing Kalamazoo to catch us off guard," said Coach Van Meter.

The second half was mainly controlled by Belles' forwards Celeste Aquino, Tricia Troester, Holly Munz and Mollie Meehan.

Seniors Mollie Clement had a good steady game in the middle and applied constant pressure on the opponents.

The Belles' brightest opportunity came when Troester took a shot that deflected off a Kalamazoo defender, giving the Belles a corner kick.

Meehan crossed the ball to the middle, but it was met by the Kalamazoo goaltender.

Sweeper Anne Sweda used her big foot to keep the ball away from the goal and out of the Belles' zone.

Even though the Belles were unable to score, Meter was very pleased with his team's play.

"I feel good about the game," said Meter. "It was by far the best team game all year."

Meter feels his seniors, goalie Patty Hatfield, and midfielders Landry Clements and K.C. Chandler have done an exceptional job of leading the team.

The Belles travel to Joliet Saturday to take on Lewis College.

Tyson-Holmes upcoming?

Associated Press

NEW YORK—Former champion Larry Holmes will come out of retirement and meet undefeated heavyweight champion Mike Tyson Jan. 23, if Tyson wins his next fight, promoter Don King said Thursday.

Holmes' return is "predicated on Tyson beating Tyrell Biggs," King said.

Tyson, 21 years old, defends his undisputed title against Biggs at Convention Hall in Atlantic City, N.J., Oct. 16.

Tyson has a record of 31-0 with 28 knockouts.

NVA regulations state that a player is not eligible for inter-hall play if he is a member of the varsity team of the same sport in the same season.

"He played for us, that's all I can say," said Mulligan.

Central Michigan Coach Christy Freese was pleased with her team. "We're more of a grass team and it was nice to get a win on a turf field. We had a hard time getting through them though. They allowed us few shots on goal. Defensively Notre Dame shut us down well," said Freese.

Currently sporting a 3-4-1 record, the Irish get a chance to improve to .500 again at home next Tuesday against Goshen at 4 p.m.

ND hopes to earn Top-20 spot, continue hot streak at home

The Notre Dame volleyball team begins a busy weekend of action tonight by taking on the University of Kentucky in a 7:30 p.m. match in the Joyce ACC Pit.

The Irish will have their hands full with the Wildcats, ranked ninth in the nation and bearing a 10-1 record.

Notre Dame heads into the contest with a 14-3 record and a three-match winning streak. Winners of 11 of their last 12 contests, the Irish are ranked seventh in the latest NCAA Midwest Regional Poll and appear on the verge of breaking the NCAA Top 20 for the first time in the program's history after receiving some votes in this week's poll.

Of the three Notre Dame losses thus far this season, two defeats came at the hands of Top 20 teams, Southern Cal and Northwestern. Irish head coach Art Lambert says this contest against Kentucky will be the most difficult of the season thus far.

"Northwestern was a big match last week," said Lambert, "but Kentucky is a very big match for us. They're the highest ranked team we've faced yet this season."

"It really helps us being at home," added Lambert, whose squad has won 14 consecutive matches at home dating back to September of 1986.

The Irish have had a full week off to prepare for the match, after defeating Iowa last Saturday at the Joyce ACC.

"We've watched some films on them," said junior middle blocker Mary Kay Waller, "and they're definitely not unbeatable. We'll be trying to play towards their weaknesses."

"The national rankings are still a little shaky since it's still early in the season," continued

Waller, "so we aren't necessarily outmatched just because they are way up there in the rankings."

After facing Kentucky tonight, the Irish go back at it again Saturday night at 7:30 against Northern Illinois and then again Sunday at 4 p.m. against Minnesota. All three matches will be at home, where the Irish play 11 of their remaining 13 contests.

The Huskies of Northern Illinois own a 9-6 record and will try to avenge their two losses to Notre Dame last season. The Gophers are currently 13-5 and, according to Lambert, "one of the top teams in the Big Ten."

After these three matches in three days, Notre Dame has another week off before heading to Texas and Nebraska for a four-match October break swing.

Lukewarm play has Irish shut out, 2-0

By KATIE CRONIN

The Irish field hockey team was little better than the temperature yesterday, playing a lukewarm game against Central Michigan and losing 2-0.

Central Michigan's Darcey Thorpe chilled a warmed-up Notre Dame team by scoring 53 seconds into the first half. The Irish refused to be frozen out, coming back quickly to pressure the Chippewas for a penalty corner but failing to make use of the opportunity. Neither team dominated during the first half, but Central Michigan's Corinne Dunagan managed to put one in the cage at 19:01.

In the second half the Irish spent more time on Central Michigan's side of the field, gaining temporary momentum with several strong upfield pushes affected by breakaways initiated by left link Benet DeBerry and left wing Debbie Charlesworth. But again and again Irish play stalled once the ball reached the Chippewas' 25-yard line.

Offensively, Notre Dame played a tentative game. Irish players were in the action, but Central Michigan demonstrating its scrappier, more aggressively stubborn, grass field style of play - more often than not beat them out for the ball.

In overall stats, Notre Dame recorded only five shots on goal compared to Central Michigan's seven, this despite the teams' having three and four penalty corners respectively.

"We need more hunger for the goal, especially when we're in front of it. We lacked that today," said senior co-captain Benet DeBerry. "People have to concentrate less on passing and shoot more when we're in front of the goal."

"We made mental errors and had poor execution," said Irish coach Jill Lindenfeld.

"Four people on the team stood out today: left link Benet DeBerry, left wing Debbie Charlesworth, right back JoAnne Marshall, and goalie M.J. Beutel," said Lindenfeld. She also cited players Caroline

Varsity player off team; St.Ed's forfeits IH win

By THERESA KELLY
Sports Writer

A Notre Dame varsity football player has left the Irish squad after he played in Sunday's Interhall game between St. Edward's and Carroll.

Pat Fravel, a St. Ed's resident and a walk-on cornerback, caught a touchdown pass in the 6-0 St. Ed's victory. The play was reported Wednesday in The Observer, and Fravel said he went to the Football Office and spoke to Head Coach Lou Holtz that afternoon.

"The decision was made that I would leave the team," Fravel said. The junior preferred not to comment further on the issue.

Dan Whiteside, supervisor of men's Interhall football at Non-Varsity Athletics, said yesterday that a Carroll Hall protest of the game has been reviewed, and Carroll has been awarded the victory.

Whiteside said he spoke to St. Ed's coach Stu Mulligan yesterday afternoon, and Mulligan admitted that Fravel participated in the game and scored the lone touchdown.

"After we found that out," Whiteside said, "it was pretty much automatic that Carroll wins the game. It's official. It's in the books."

Fazio downplays Pittsburgh homecoming

"You can't go home again."

-Thomas Wolfe

Irish defensive coordinator Foge Fazio returns to familiar stomping grounds Saturday night when Notre Dame travels to Pittsburgh. But in a sense, he isn't really going home; he'll be on the visitor's side.

Fazio spent 13 years on the Panther side of the field, four as a head coach and the remainder as an assistant. In those four years, Fazio rode the rollercoaster. His first two squads went 9-3 (their first loss was to an Irish squad led by Allen Pinkett) and 8-3-1, but seasons of 3-7-1 and 5-5-1 followed for a final mark of 25-18-3.

But the Pittsburgh connection goes farther than that for the 48-year old Fazio. He was a center and linebacker for the Panthers. One of his teammates was a crazy tight end named Mike Ditka. And of course, Fazio is a native of the Steel City.

It's easy to see why so much attention is being focused on Fazio's "homecoming." This week's Irish press release has a quote from Foge at the top where normally a quote from Head Coach Lou Holtz appears. The release also has all the Fazio-

Pitt stats listed above. It was expected that he would be the second speaker at Holtz' weekly press conference instead of a player. Especially since Fazio's defense has been a major part of Notre Dame's success. But Fazio has downplayed all the attention.

"I've been back lots of times," Fazio smiled Wednesday. I go back to see my mother."

Dennis Corrigan
Sports Editor

Yet while downplaying the personal emotion, Fazio says that there will be something there.

"It will be different," he said. "I'm looking forward to it. I do know their players and coaches very well. I have a lot of respect for them. I know about half the players' parents because I've been in their homes."

"I know there will be a lot of emotion because the old guy is coming back, but I know they're going to try like hell to beat the old man."

Even Fazio's players are dispelling the homecoming fanfare, preferring to look at Saturday's game as more of a grudge match.

"They came into our house here in South Bend. They beat us, and we did have the game won," Irish free safety Corny Southall said Tuesday. "As it turned out they won the game. It's more of a revenge factor. This year we're 3-0 and ranked fourth. We have a lot to protect."

As for it being Foge's old school, we don't look at it that way. We look at it as they beat us last year, and this year we're going to return the favor."
