ND grad is elected mayor of South Bend

By CHRIS BEDNARSKI

Senior Staff Reporters

Promising to make a positive difference in South Bend's future, Democratic candidate and Notre Dame graduate Joe Kernan claimed victory in the city's mayoral race Tuesday night.

With 100 percent of the vote counted unofficial results showed Kernan with 17,030 votes or 53 percent, to 15,104 or 47 percent for Republican challenger Carl Baxmeyer.

A veteran city planner, Baxmeyer was trying to end a 20-year Democratic hold on city hall.

Two-term incumbent democratic Mayor Roger Parent is retiring.

"Notre Dame is certainly a great asset to the (South Bend) community," said Kernan, a former catcher for the Notre Dame baseball team.

"I look forward to a great relationship with the University," he said, adding he has already contacted University President Father Edward Malloy. "This is a great opportunity for Notre Dame and South Bend to work together," said the former city controller and deputy mayor.

Joseph Kernan

Greeted with chants of "Joe, Joe," Kernan explained to jubilant campaign workers the opportunity his administration has to make a difference in the city's future. "In a community of South Bend's size we have an opportunity to make a difference in the place that we live, a very positive difference."

Making this difference, however, will be a big challenge, said South Bend's new mayor. "It is (a challenge) we are going to face head on," he said. "We are not going to back away. I can guarantee that we are going to be successful."

With the election over, Kernan said he hopes to unite South Bend. "What we need to do now is focus on tomorrow, what tomorrow is going to bring, what it will hold, how we are going to tackle it, and how we are going to get there," he said.

HPC plans for Rockne's birthday

By JENNIFER GRONER

Tuesday evening Digger Phelps and the HPC discussed plans to celebrate Knute Rockne's 100th birthday on March 4, 1988. A stamp commemorating Rockne will be issued on this date and President Reagan has been invited to join the ceremony in memory of his role as the Gipper, said Phelps.

Phelps, head basketball coach, is a member of the Post Masters Citizen Stamp Advisory Board, which is planning a ceremony that day on campus to issue the stamp commemorating Rockne.

President Reagan has been invited to Notre Dame to participate in the festivities since he portrayed "the Gipper" in the film "Knute Rockne: All-American," said Phelps.

Unless there is a national crisis, the chances of Reagan attending are favorable, according to Phelps, who said the President's calendar was thus far being kept open for that day.

The coach asked the hall presidents for their input on where and when the ceremony should be held. The consensus was that the event should be held in the JACC around noon to accommodate television networks that may wish to broadcast the ceremony on the news. The presidents agreed to get feedback from students and report back to Phelps later this week.

A campus-wide sports trivia contest is being planned by the HPC in order to pick a three-

Democrats win seats on city council

By CHRIS BEDNARSKI
and REGIS COCCIA
Senior Staff Reporters

Democratic incumbent Ann Puzzello won re-election in the race for South Bend's 4th District city council seat while Democrat and Notre Dame graduate Sean Coleman won an at-large seat on the council.

With 100 percent of the vote tallied, unofficial results showed Puzzello with 3,333 votes or 58 percent to Republican challenger Richard Heyde's 2,373 or 42 percent.

Heyde said poor voter turnout and University support of the Democratic party in the district hurt his campaign. "In (the 4th) district, near the campus, Notre Dame put a tremendous amount of support into the Democratic party," he said. "The University's support is substantial with any candidate."

The 4th District comprises most of the Northeast Neighborhood, where many Notre Dame and Saint Mary's College students reside.

With 19,269 votes, Coleman, who proposed an eight-point plan during his campaign for better relations between Notre Dame students and South Bend residents, earned one of the three at-large council seats.

The Northeast Neighborhood needs to be re-zoned, Puzzello said, to protect its family owned residences from "deterioration that comes with rentals."

Neighborhood deterioration caused by rented houses has occurred in many areas of South Bend, she said.

Puzzello, who will begin her second term in the council seat, said she plans to introduce a re-zoning bill at next week's planning board meeting.

Although relationships between students and residents in the Northeast Neighborhood have improved this year, Puzzello said, the area still needs more unity between students and residents.

"I think if the students would try to be neighbors a little bit then the residents would also try to be neighbors," she said. "I think they could have a real good deal."

Puzzello said the neighborhood needs more police protection but would benefit more from neighbors getting together to protect one another.

She said she hopes to develop a spirit in the neighborhood where residents would watch over student houses when students leave for breaks.

Puzzello said she hopes to develop this spirit through meetings with University officials, including University President Father Edward Malloy.

Coleman, a 1978 Notre Dame graduate who lived off-campus his senior year, said he also plans to meet with University officials to improve relations between Notre Dame and South Bend.

"We have a great opportunity to better our relationships," he said. Coleman cited cooperation between Notre Dame and South Bend during last summer's International Special Olympic Games as an example of great things that can be done when the city and University cooperate.

Coleman's eight-point plan for better relations between off-campus students and South Bend residents includes establishment of an off-campus center for coordinating student programs, designation of an off-campus housing coordinator and assignment of a councilman to the University's task force on community relations.

Coleman also proposed formation of a group of student volunteers who would promote responsible socializing and help with trash and public safety problems.

Break begins earlier

Special to The Observer

Although some calendars say differently, Thanksgiving break officially begins after the last class on Tuesday, Nov. 24, according to Daniel Winicur, dean of administration and registrar.

Winicur said two versions of the academic calendar are in circulation, causing confusion about the time the break begins. Some calendars were inadvertently printed with the date on which Thanksgiving break had traditionally begun in the past.

In previous years, Thanksgiving break had started Wednesday at noon. This was changed because it was unfair to those students who have class Wednesday morning while others don't, Winicur said.

University offices will be open, as usual, on Wednesday, Nov. 25.

Lack of concern puts apartheid policy on hold

A few years ago images of racial violence in South Africa constituted a major part of the daily American news diet. Gruesome photos of "necklace" burnings decorated the covers of Time and Newsweek. Footage from the latest township riots was a safe bet for the evening news. The word "apartheid" was often heard. South Africa was becoming an issue of American concern.

For one reason or another the problem of South African racial injustice has lost its prominence in the American headlines. What once was a front page story now only occasionally receives coverage. A cynical explanation is that the story simply does not sell anymore. Another is that the problem solved itself of its own accord. If no news is good news, then, as far as America is concerned, there is no call for any action at all.

The net effect of this media silence is that in 1987 it is easier than ever to put the apartheid issue away in a box and forget that the problem exists.

Presidential candidates seem to be aware of this lack of interest on behalf of the American public. Apartheid is no longer considered a crisis. What this country should do, if anything, to help alleviate the racial injustice in that part of the world is not a question they choose to address. Because the public would rather know about the morality of the candidates' sex lives than their views about foreign policy, no candidate actively addresses an issue so far from the mainstream concern.

In its seven years of conducting America's business the Reagan administration has been most adept at avoiding the South African problem. The "wait-and-see" approach stemming from the White House does not take an active lead in ending the injustice. In fact it does just the opposite, it allows a volatile situation to run its course, with only the hope that the problem will work itself out for the better.

As far as the public is aware, South Africa and apartheid never even enter into the President's imagination. In recent months political commentary has portrayed Reagan as a distracted and disengaged leader. Others give him more credit and argue that his administration survives from day to day through crisis management. In either case Reagan's lack of concern is not surprising.

Jim Carroll

Serious problems rarely work themselves out for the better. It also is hard to believe that the lessened media coverage truly indicates that the problem has disappeared. Diseases that go into recession always have the potential to reappear. The images of dismembered corpses strewn about the streets of Capetown - victims of car bombs attributed to racial tensions - sadly enough are likely to reappear in America's papers. When this happens the crisis mentality again will take hold. Then perhaps the wait-and-see policy will be called into question.

The cover story of this week's Time magazine focuses on America's leadership crisis. The lack of concern exemplified by a wait-and-see policy towards apartheid is a good example of this failure in leadership. It means that our government is limited to reactionary politics and does not actively seek to make the world a safer place.

Nieuwland to get new wing

By GREG LUCAS
Senior Staff Reporter

Construction will begin next May on the addition of a new three-story wing to Nieuwland Science Hall, said Don Dedrick, director of the physical plant.

The new wing will be added to the north side of the science hall and run parallel to the existing building across from the Clarke Memorial Fountain. "The completion of the addition will take a full year from the start of construction," said Dedrick.

The new wing will be used primarily for undergraduate physics classrooms and teacher offices, said Mike Kenahan, director of foundation and corporate relations. Kenahan also said a considerable amount of renovation will take place in the existing building to improve facilities for microelectronics research.

These renovations in the science hall will not be started until the summer of 1989, according to Dedrick.

The primary impetus for the $5 million effort to renovate Nieuwland comes from John Dow and Jacek Furdyna, professors of physics, who are members of an elite nationwide consortium of nine researchers studying diluted magnetic semiconductors (DMS), said Kenahan.

DMS research is primarily concerned with areas such as ultra-fast photonic computer parts that operate using light rather than electrons, according to Kenahan.

Other universities represented in the consortium include North Carolina State, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Brown, Harvard and Purdue, Kenahan said.

The consortium is funded by the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA), a U.S. Department of Defense funding agency. The government agreed to fund Dow's and Furdyna's microelectronics research under the condition that Notre Dame improve its facilities, said Kenahan.

The University then obtained an independent grant from Lilly Endowment Inc. that will match every dollar donated to the project with another dollar for up to $500,000, said Kenahan. He added that his office is now seeking "a donor who would be willing to fund all or a large part of the remainder."

"I don't think that construction will disturb classes too much," Dedrick said.

However, he said a temporary road would have to be established next to the existing one that leads back to LaFortune Student Center, Washington Hall and Cavanaugh Hall.

Dedrick said the new wing will extend into the existing road and that a new road would have to be constructed closer to the peace memorial. He said the temporary road will probably create some inconveniences for traffic in that area next year.

Senior class is sponsoring 'Designated Driver Week'

By MATT GALLAGHER
Staff Reporter

The class of 1988 is sponsoring "Designated Driver Week," to be held Nov. 9-13. The purpose of the week is to increase awareness of the problem of drunk driving and to institute a designated driver program in the community. The highlight of the week will be a block party to be held Friday, Nov. 13, at the Joyce ACC.

The senior class is sponsoring this week, along with Student Government, the classes of 1989 and 1990, BACCHUS and the SUB. The purpose, according to Senior Class President Diane Fitzgibbon, is to make the Notre Dame, Saint Mary's and South Bend communities more aware of the drunk driving problem which the area has been experiencing. Fitzgibbon mentioned the death of classmate Michael Cogswell as an example of what drunk driving can cause.

The class officers hope to persuade their fellow students and the residents of the community to begin the practice of having a designated driver when the members of a group drink alcohol, according to Fitzgibbon. The designated driver would promise not to drink alcoholic beverages and to drive home his friends who do.

To increase awareness of the designated driver campaign, the sponsors of the week will be distributing keychains throughout the week at local bars (some of whom are co-sponsoring the event) and in the dining halls. These keychains will have "NDDD" printed on them, to remind the student when he reaches for his keys that he is a Notre Dame Designated Driver.

Fitzgibbon said there would be permanent signs placed in the dorms and in the sponsoring Michiana bars, reminding the students and neighborhood people of the program and listing the local business establishments which were part of the program. Bridget McGuire's, The Commons, Uncle's, Chi-Chi's, the Alumni/Senior Club and other participating businesses will offer free soft drinks to the designated driver of each group.

Fitzgibbon also said there would be letters in The Observer throughout the week to help increase awareness of the program. Letters will also be sent to local residents in an effort to involve them in the campaign to prevent drunk driving.

Fitzgibbon stressed that this was to be an ongoing campaign, not just limited to this one week. She also said the sponsors of the event were not encouraging drinking to those who were not drivers. "We're not advocating others to get bombed," she said. "We just hope to keep at least one sober to drive."

The culmination of the week will be the Senior Block Party on Friday at the JACC. The event will be open to all members of the Notre Dame and local communities. Local bands and community organizations will be represented at this event, with a variety of food available for purchase. The sponsors hope to forge a sense of community between the students and the local residents, said Fitzgibbon.

Man arrested for threat against Shultz

Associated Press

WASHINGTON -An unemployed chemist armed with three guns and at least 600 bullets was arrested Tuesday after allegedly telling his mother he was going to kill Secretary of State George Shultz, authorities said.

Edward Lewis Gallo, 41, of Worcester, Mass., was taken into custody at a local hotel and charged with making a threat against a public official.

A semi-automatic version of an M-16 rifle, two shotguns and 600 to 700 rounds of ammunition were removed from Gallo's car.

Speaking briefly to reporters as he was being led by police to be booked, Gallo said, "I'm a tourist. I don't know . . . I'm a tourist on vacation. I've been down here on vacation two or three other times."

Asked about weapons, Gallo said, "I was going to go hunting. That's why I'm on vacation."

Gallo was taken by police from a hotel in northeast Washington, several miles away from the State Department, after a brief struggle outside his room at about 7:50 a.m. The hotel's 22 guests were evacuated, according to police spokesman Wendell Samuels.

Several blocks of New York Avenue were closed during the morning rush hour, creating a huge traffic backup on the major commuter thoroughfare.

Sgt. Michael Vacca of the Worcester Police Department said in a telephone interview he was told by members of the Gallo family that the suspect had recently lost his job as a chemist for the city of Worcester and was "pretty unstable."

Vacca said he was told that Gallo left home Monday with a gun wrapped in his army jacket.

He said he knew nothing about Gallo's political affiliations. He said Gallo's mother and a sister of the suspect in Pennsylvania had mentioned that Shultz might be a potential target, Vacca said.

He added that Gallo would spend his time watching television news shows and often became quite upset.

Court told abortion law protects rights

Associated Press

WASHINGTON -States must be allowed to protect the right of parents to consult with their young daughters who seek abortions, the Supreme Court was told Tuesday.

An Illinois law requiring that parents be notified at least 24 hours before teen-age girls abort their pregnancies should be reinstated, State Deputy Attorney General Michael Hayes argued.

"The law protects the constitutional right of parents to properly control the upbringing of their children. It protects family structure and protects minors from their own immaturity," he said.

But Colleen Connell, a Chicago lawyer representing doctors who perform abortions, said the law exposes teen-age girls to medical risks in a misguided attempt to promote family unity.

Lower courts have blocked the 1983 law from being enforced.

If the Supreme Court reinstates the law and it serves as a model for other states, abortion could become a less-available alternative for many American teen-agers who become pregnant. The number of such pregnancies now is more than 1 million a year.

The court's decision in the case, the only abortion controversy currently before it, is expected by July.

The Illinois law, enacted by the state General Assembly over Gov. James Thompson's veto, required that unmarried girls under 18 and still financially dependent on their parents notify both parents 24 hours before having an abortion.

The law allowed a girl to avoid notifying her parents if she could prove to a state judge she was mature enough and well-informed enough to make the decision on her own and that notifying her parents would not be in her best interest.

Doctors who failed to comply with the law's requirements faced criminal prosecution.

A federal trial judge struck down the law, but the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals did not go that far.

The appeals court ruled that the 24-hour waiting period was an impermissible infringement on the right to have an abortion. But it left to the state Supreme Court the issue of whether the law sufficiently protected the confidentiality and anonymity of girls who appeal when a judge denies permission for an abortion.

Reagan nominates a woman to be secretary of labor

Associated Press

WASHINGTON -President Reagan on Tuesday nominated former Interior Undersecretary Ann Dore McLaughlin to succeed William Brock as secretary of labor and bring a woman back into his Cabinet.

Reagan called McLaughlin, who also has held senior roles in the Treasury Department and the Environmental Protection Agency, a woman of "uncommon experience and competence . . . who has won my full confidence and support."

With only 15 months remaining in the administration, there appeared to be little sentiment among Democrats and labor unions for opposing the nomination.

"We're going to take a pretty good look at her, but it doesn't seem like she's drawing any serious opposition," said Paul Donovan, a spokesman for the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee headed by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass. He added the panel has not yet decided when it will hold hearings on the nomination.

Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, senior Republican on the Labor and Human Resources Committee, called the choice of McLaughlin "an inspired one. Ann has the ability and background to run the department." He added that "she is well-respected and her experience in government will bring a special expertise to the Labor Department."

McLaughlin gave up the No. 2 post in the Interior Department, a job she had held for three years, last March following several clashes with Interior Secretary Donald Hodel.

"When I left your administration earlier this year, I had no idea I would be back so soon," McLaughlin, 45, told Reagan in a White House Rose Garden ceremony announcing her nomination.

Neither Reagan nor McLaughlin addressed any issues facing the department, including a large backlog of pending regulations in the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

But, if confirmed by the Senate, she can be expected to lead the administration's fight against a broad agenda of legislation being pushed in Congress by labor unions.

Among more than a dozen bills moving through Congress are measures to raise the minimum wage, frozen at $3.35 an hour since 1981, to require 60 days advance notice of plant closings and large layoffs and to mandate employer-provided health insurance.

As Interior Undersecretary, McLaughlin reorganized government coal-leasing programs that had come under severe criticism while James Watt was secretary.

When Hodel became secretary in 1985, he began taking charge of some of the department's more controversial issues himself, such as oil drilling off the California coast.

Colleagues said McLaughlin, who had been serving as the department's "chief operating officer" under Hodel's predecessor, William Clark, felt that the scope of her authority was being narrowed.

At the time of her resignation, she reportedly was being courted by the White House to succeed White House spokesman Larry Speakes. That job eventually went to Marlin Fitzwater, an associate of McLaughlin when she held top press relations jobs in the Treasury Department and the Environmental Protection Agency.

McLaughlin was communications director for President Nixon's re-election campaign in 1972 and his second inauguration in 1973.

member team that will represent Notre Dame in a national trivia contest to be held this January in Florida. One person from each dorm will be sent to the campus contest to compete for a place on the team. The representatives will have all their expenses paid for the trip to Florida.

HPC is in the process of formulating a proposal to increase student ticket allocation for away football games. If the game is within a 250 mile radius, the current policy reserves for students 5 percent of the 5,000 tickets the University receives. If the game is further than 250 miles from campus students receive 1 percent of the 5,000 tickets.

Dr. Goldrick will be meeting with HPC November 5 to discuss topics such as food fight repayment, alcohol awareness, jurisdiction boundaries of Office of Student Affairs, SYRs and hall finances.

Expected selection for defense secretary praised

Associated Press

WASHINGTON -Senators of both parties predicted Tuesday that Frank Carlucci, President Reagan's national security adviser, would be easily confirmed as secretary of defense if nominated as expected to replace Caspar Weinberger.

Weinberger's resignation and Carlucci's selection are likely to be announced later this week, according to administration and congressional sources speaking on condition of anonymity.

Officially, neither the White House nor the Pentagon confirmed the reports, and both Weinberger and Carlucci declined comment.

Sources said Carlucci would be replaced as director of the National Security Council staff by Army Lt. Gen. Colin Powell, who is currently Carlucci's deputy. Powell would be the first black to hold that position and would be the sixth national security adviser in Reagan's presidency.

Weinberger, 70, plans to leave because his wife Jane is in poor health, suffering from cancer and severe arthritis, the sources said.

Dixon also predicted better relations between the Pentagon and the Democratic-controlled Congress, saying: "I think Carlucci tends to be more moderate. Cap is your quintessential hawk. He was also fairly confrontational. I think that Carlucci may be a little less so."

That same trait worried Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., an early Weinberger critic who turned into a staunch supporter. When the Senate voted 97-2 to confirm Weinberger on Jan. 20, 1981, the Reagan administration's first official day in office, the dissenting votes were cast by Helms and his North Carolina colleague, the late John East.

Conceding defeat, Baxmeyer told friends and supporters he "thinks it's important to the city of South Bend that we get behind the city, promote it and try to do our best in the next four years to make the city all it can be."

"We ran a good campaign. We worked hard, it was a clean campaign" he said. "We just didn't quite get the job done."

Baxmeyer said he plans to remain politically active in the future. "I think the area needs a couple of strong political parties," he said. "As far as running for office, I don't know if I could say in the near future, anyway."

"I'm not real anxious to start running again" he said.

SMC plans events to aid Chile

By CHRISTINE MCCANN
News Staff

A day of public-awareness events to publicize the plight of Chileans who cannot afford the poll-tax required to vote, and to help them pay that tax, will be held Nov. 16 in the Stapleton Lounge in LeMans Hall, Board of Governance president Eileen Hetterich announced Tuesday.

The program will include a slide show and a display of Chilean art, and will culminate in a showing of the Jack Lemmon and Sissy Spacek film "Missing," which deals with military takeover in the third world.

Mary Ann White, a senior English major, is organizing the project, which is co-sponsored by the Board and the Department of Justice Education.

Hetterich said although there will be no entrance fee, donations are encouraged to help pay poll-taxes in Chile. At the present time, many Chileans are unable to express their opinion through the voting process because they are unable to afford the high taxes placed upon voting, she said.

A new merchandising policy issued by Mary Ellen Smith, director of student activities, was distributed to board members. The policy states that all student groups must receive permission from the Office of Student Activities before they can sell any items. The policy states other stipulations, including "sexist, alcohol- or drug-related designs will not be allowed."

Vice-President Smith Hahagen reminded members that Student Government will sponsor the Alumnae Speaker Series again this evening at 6:30 in Stapleton Lounge. Featured will be Kathleen Flynn-Fox, a former Saint Mary's history major.

U.S. Navy hits fishing boat

Associated Press

MANAMA, Bahrain-Persian Gulf shipping sources said Tuesday a U.S. Navy frigate fired on a fishing boat last weekend, not a hostile Iranian craft as the Pentagon believed, and killed an Indian member of its crew.

They quoted another crewman as saying the warship fired machine guns Sunday night even though the fishing boat and two others with it showed lights and were making way for the frigate and a refueling tanker it was escorting out of the gulf. The Pentagon identified the Navy ship as the USS Carr.

In Kuwait, a small bomb ripped the side off a police van parked near the Interior Ministry on Tuesday, heightening fears of Iranian sabotage in the rich Persian Gulf sheikdom but causing no casualties.

It was the 10th bombing reported this year in Kuwait, all blamed on Shiite Moslem militants who back the fundamentalist Shiite regime of Iran in the 7-year-old war with Iraq. Iran accuses Kuwait of aiding Iraq and fired three missiles into its oil terminal-anchorage complex last month, hitting two tankers and a major loading dock.

The shipping sources' account of the shooting incident, which the Pentagon said occurred at dusk Sunday near the Iranian island of Abu Musa, was similar in many respects to that offered earlier by officials in Iran. They denied any Iranian boats were involved in an encounter with the Navy.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency quoted a military spokesman as saying: "Our investigations yesterday and today show that, contrary to U.S. claims, no unusual event happened near the Abu Musa island Sunday evening."

Abu Musa, a small island in the southern gulf, has been used as a base for Iranian speedboat attacks on neutral shipping.

In Washington, the Pentagon said Tuesday it was investigating the report that the boat fired upon was a fishing vessel but had no information so far that sustained the claim.

India's consul in Dubai, Aroun Kumar, said police in Sharjah told him late Tuesday only that "one Indian citizen was killed by gunshot wounds in the high seas."

According to the shipping sources, machine-gun fire from the Carr killed one Indian crew member and wounded three. Hospital officials in Sharjah, one of the United Arab Emirates, denied reports that some seamen were hospitalized or treated there.

Some American officials in the gulf had said Monday the boats might have been neutral fishing craft.

ND should not recognize gay group

It is always exhilarating to see the press functioning as it should. The column and editorial of November 3 on the issue of homosexuality show that The Observer can and does serve as an effective forum for all issues.

Matt Crowley

guest column

However, as a member of the newspaper, a student at Notre Dame, and a Christian, I feel I must write in dissent of The Observer's opinion on the recognition of the Gays and Lesbians at NDSMC.

Although I am going against my generally positive nature in publicly criticizing a proposal, I feel truly obligated to state that I am wholeheartedly against the recognition of the club. I will go so far as to say that I am morally opposed to the acknowledgment of such a club by the religiously-oriented school that I attend.

Being somewhat paranoid about publicly expressing my opinions on sensitive issues, I wish to make a few things clear right away. I am not homophobic. In fact, someone close to me is an admitted homosexual, and I do not berate the person. I do not wish to instigate any sort of witchhunt either; while my values lead me to speak against such a club, I do not intend to condemn or degrade homosexuals.

Instead, I am fielding my objection to the idea of recognizing a group that seeks to advocate a lifestyle that is in direct opposition to the set of values established by the Catholic Church, with which this University has strong ties.

The label 'advocate' is appropriate because the club is composed of members who are very certain in their minds and hearts that they are homosexual. They are not "exploring their sexuality" or debating the morality of alternative lifestyles. They are not concerned with debate on "a proper Catholic response to such a life." The club is an advocacy group, looking to promote their lifestyle and encouraging others to consider the "gay" life.

Once we begin with recognition of one commonly objectionable group, where do we stop? Shall we have a Nazi club as well? But, hey gang, it only wants to have a public discussion on the extermination of Jews...

Or maybe form an Atheist club. We could meet in the theology department offices!

Also, when we allow the Gays and Lesbians of NDSMC to be formally recognized, we have tossed aside one of our Christian values.

How do we justify blinding an entire campus to the advocacy of a lifestyle that our community as a whole finds objectionable? And if you beat me on that point, how do you prevent further erosion of the moral character of an institution that is famous for its

"wholesomeness?"

I suppose once we accept an advocacy group for homosexuality, we can get to work on some serious stuff, like restarting free love.

Lastly, I wish to address one of Professor Storey's comments.

He remarked that the University has implemented a "Conspiracy of Silence" which prevents discussion of homosexuality. Apparently, he failed to notice the appearance of his own column. He proved on Nov. 3 that there are places to discuss volatile issues, and that all people have the right of access to them.

Public discussion on the morality of homosexuality is a good thing, and I am glad to see it being conducted in a newspaper that I work for. My objection is to the advocacy of this lifestyle on campus, and I hope that the University continues to answer the question of recognition with a big "No."

Violence in sports misplaced at ND

Dear Editor:

I have just spent a day attending Notre Dame sporting events, and I would like to share my impressions with the campus community. I have been very upset with some of the things which I experienced and though I don't believe my writing this letter will really change anything, I feel compelled to bring these observations to the attention of the readers of the Observer.

The most upsetting thing to me was the behavior of the fans at Saturday's hockey game against Windsor at the ACC. Though I was given the impression by an usher that I would be sitting in the student section, there were a number of males sitting near me who could barely have passed for civilized people, never mind college students. Evidently, they were quite drunk, and continued drinking in the stands as they hurled obscenities at the Windsor players. Of course, I am aware that college students imbibe alcoholic beverages; in fact, I have been known to do so myself from time to time, but the obnoxious banterings of these three hooligans spurred me to leave the game and write this letter.

The worst part of this experience for me was the fact that these ram-bunctious youths were merely the most extreme examples of an attitude I found pervasive among both the hockey crowd and the typical crowd at a Notre Dame football game. Granted, both of these sports are very physical, and that is what attracts many fans to the games. But even beyond the considerations of good sportsmanship, I just have to wonder why there is such a lust for blood and even death on the part of Notre Dame students, who are rumored to be such a Christian bunch in much of the country. At each home football game, I find myself yelling at the Notre Dame defense to inflict pain upon the opposing team's players. When I become aware of this, I do not feel comfortable with myself and I wonder why I am driven to such feelings. But when I look around the stadium, and listen to the crowd, I see and hear things which belie the Christian image Notre Dame has of itself as a university.

As for considerations of sportsmanship, I would like to say that the hockey fans at tonight's game were to a large degree lacking in this quality. I quickly got the impression that they had come more to see a fight than a good hockey game. Perhaps there would be a bigger crowd if they brought professional hockey or better yet, professional wrestling to the ACC, but I thought the point of intercollegiate athletics went beyond such crass commercialism, at least at Notre Dame.

I don't expect that this letter will be read by the few barbarians who completely ruined my enjoyment of the hockey game. It is my sincere hope, though, that those of you who have taken the time to read it are motivated by it to explore your own psyches and to be more aware of the cultural meaning of your behavior at sporting events.

Senior Class works on drunk driving

Dear Editor:

The Senior Class of Notre Dame is embarking upon a very important campaign. We are addressing the issue of drunk driving. This issue has undoubtedly been raised and approached again and again from many different angles, but the thrust of our campaign is as follows: It is our hope that every time a person or group of people gets in a car after going to a party, bar or other alcohol-related event, that there is a sober driver behind the wheel, that this act of designating drivers becomes a habit, and that this habit will remain with all of us throughout life.

In support of this, we have planned for the week of Nov. 9-Nov. 13 a Designated Driver Week. During this week, special attention will be given to the issue of drunk driving. There will be guest columns in the Observer from people who have different perspectives and insights on drunk driving. We will distribute special "Designated Driver" keys to go on your keychain with the inscription "N.D.D.D." These keys will serve to remind you not to drink and drive as well as let others know you support this program. We will display posters which advertise the names of the local bars who will support the program by supplying N.D.D.D. keys to students and community members and give free soft drinks to designated drivers.

On Friday of the Designated Driver Week is the annual Senior Class/Neighborhood Block Party at which students and community members get together for a party. Let this be for us a celebration of life and all of our efforts to preserve it.

Ode to a recruiter: 'I Don't Want to Work'

As a junior liberal arts major I am being forced to face the big question: "Just what do I want to do after I graduate?" Also as a junior liberal arts major, I am being forced to face the big answer: "I want to vegetate." Well okay, that's not entirely true. In addition to vegetating I'd like to cruise months ago."

"No dice, bucko. Now how about that job?"

I shut the drawer. I don't need to wear underwear that badly.

I soon learned, though, that there's no escaping it. Somebody has decided, without consulting me, that college construction company driving a truck. My partner was this little hairy guy named Gus, and when I say little and hairy I mean really little and really hairy. In fact, he looked like a hair ball. He was chubby, he chewed tobacco, and he must have asked me the question "Ya got a little woman son?" at least 375 times.

We drove equipment and messages from construction site to construction site, and we listened to country music all day. Most of the time, Gus talked about his little woman. Other times he talked his little alcohol problem. Still other times, he was content to just kind of fall asleep while driving on the highway.

This was definitely a bad thing. You don't know what a bad thing is until you face death with a hairball named Gus and Mel Tillis croaking out of the dashboard at top volume. I could just imagine the headlines: "Notre Dame Student Dies in Flaming Hairball." They would have a double funeral for Gus and I, and Mel Tillis would play a benefit concert in our memory. It was all too much to take, and I would say something like, "Jeez Marie, Gus, how about those crazy Iranians!" At this point he would wake up immediately and talk about "them damn ferriners" for hours. It was slightly better than being dead.

Last Christmas I washed dishes at an Italian restaurant called Mama DiSalvo's. Some genius of kitchen engineering had decided to place the dishwashing sink and machine right next to the back door. This back door was the sole rear entrance, and that meant that all the garbage went out the back door. That meant that the door was always open, and the temperature outside was averaging a balmy ten degrees above zero.

To add to the problem, the very same genius of kitchen engineering had placed the freezer out in the parking lot. No joke. It was also my job to run out and get endless pans of linguini and jugs of wine. After a few days, I realized that running from a steamy kitchen to a freezer in ten degree weather was a sure ticket to death by pneumonia. My boss was a young Italian guy named Bobby. I tried to explain the pneumonia situation to him.

"Uh, Bobby. Something has to be done about this. I'm going to get sick. It's not safe." "What you say?" "I said I'm going to get sick and die!" "What you say?" "Sick! Die! Me!" "What you say?" "I think we have a communication problem, Bobby." "No problem at all! Go get some linguini."

I did end up getting sick. I spent New Year's Eve with a temperature of 104 degrees and a great view of my bedroom ceiling. Bobby had the nerve to call me at home.

"When you a comin' back to work?"

"I know where your house is, Bobby."

"What you say?"

"I'm going to firebomb it, Bobby, for what you've done to my lungs."

"What you say?"

These experiences have convinced me that I wasn't meant to hold a real job. Additionally, I have little or no interest in making a fortune. It seems ridiculous to spend 30 or 40 years working yourself to the bone to amass a huge fortune that you will only be able to enjoy when you're about 300 years old. I also have trouble taking orders. I'm just in a bad way jobwise.

Is there anyone else like this out there? Sometimes it seems that most of the students here are looking forward to having careers. Wake up! You've got it good right now.

School seems hard now, but in retrospect it will look like a prosterior romp through the tulips. Soon you'll be crawling up the corporate ladder, cursing your co-workers and giving yourself heart disease. Fun huh? You'll be making money, lots of it, but will you have time to spend it? Is Tammy Faye Baker a natural beauty? Heck no!

Anybody want to join me in my vegetation crusade? Anybody? No takers? Oh well. Drop by and visit me sometime. Bring your checkbook.

Need a laugh? The AT&T College Comedy Tour guarantees a night of sheer and uninhibited fun featuring both well-known entertainers and Notre Dame's own not-so-well-known performers.

Master of Ceremonies for the event will be none other than Calvert DeForest, better known to David Letterman fans as Larry "Bud" Melman. His unique sense of humor, which has given birth to such concepts as "Toast on a Stick," has earned him national recognition. Some even consider him a cult hero. The Notre Dame community is sure to boast some of these followers who will undoubtedly rise up for this occasion.

The November 20, 8 p.m.

show at Stepan Center will feature comedians Rita Rudner and Emo Phillips. Rudner, who has also made appearances on the Letterman show, finds her inspiration in Woody Allen and reflects this with her humorous observations on life. Her witty insight reveals itself in material dealing with relationships, run-away boyfriends, mothers specializing in food poisoning, and the indignity of bathing caps, for example—all topics with which many ND students will be able to identify.

The bizarre and unpredictable Phillips has made appearances on Letterman, a Cinemax special, and HBO. His craziness pervades his new album, E MO2. Commenting on the plaid polyester pants he wears, he states, "I've found women are attracted to the Dacron look." And his weird stories about his childhood and views of the world are sure to amuse.

Notre Dame students, who as of yet remain unidentified, will provide the opening act by singing with the help of Record-A-Tune. This concept allows people to select one of five hundred popular songs which has dropped the lead vocal, thereby giving the honors to aspiring (or maybe just enthusiastic) performers.

RECORD-A-TUNE

A Record-A-Tune contest at 9 p.m. on November 10 will determine the three lucky acts to precede the comedians. The Alumni/Senior Club, the site of the contest, is designating the evening "Undergrad Night" so that no talented (or amusing) acts remain undiscovered. Judges include Dean Brown, local comic Steven Kimbrough, and a ZIP 104 personality among others. Entry blanks may be found in this issue of The Observer, at the bookstore, and on the 2nd floor of LaFortune.

Both activities are sponsored by SUB, the sophomore, junior, and senior classes, and ZIP 104. Fun-loving students and other interested parties can purchase tickets for the November 20 AT&T College Comedy Tour appearance at the Cellar for $7.

Hard times for meadowfoam growers

Associated Press

CORVALLIS, Ore.—Dr. Gary Jolliff plants a five-inch stack of reports, scientific papers and clippings on a small patch of desk in his crowded office at Oregon State University's Crop Science building. Jolliff is a professor, a part-time researcher and full-time advocate for Limnanthes alba, commonly known as meadowfoam. Its flowers produce an oilseed touted for 20 years as an answer to everything from Willamette Valley field burning to the slaughter of sperm whales.

Native to Oregon and northern California, meadowfoam's unique qualities—its combination of carbon atoms makes it a durable, heat-tolerant oil—were discovered in the 1950s. In the '60s, it was seen as a replacement for oil from the endangered sperm whale; in the '70s it offered a renewable substitute for finite oil reserves. It also could be an alternative for grass seed growers, because it could be grown in fields used primarily for grass seed, but would not require field burning after harvest.

Jolliff gets exasperated as he thumbs through the stack, reviewing press accounts of inflated expectations of an economic and environmental miracle. Such optimism didn't reflect the slow, halting nature of turning a plant such as meadowfoam into a crop.

Meadowfoam is named for the appearance of an ankle-deep white foam that a field of the stuff gives. Growing fields of foam is the easy part, Jolliff says. He calls meadowfoam a "national treasure" and a potential $80-million-a-year crop. The frustration comes in cultivating the political and financial support needed to turn the plant's promise to profit.

"We know how to make plants profitable," Jolliff says. "We just have to invest in them. You don't have to be very smart to see that if you put some research into this thing, it will go places."

New crops don't have a constituency to press for research funds, he says. And many observers of meadowfoam are cynical, having witnessed the rise and fall of the crop's prospects in the 1960s and '70s.

Meadowfoam is currently used in cosmetics and hair products. Japanese companies have been buying a small share of the crop since 1985. Now meadowfoam is billed as an option for farmers of surplus crops, such as wheat. But none of these bursts of interest have produced any burst of research money.

But meadowfoam still holds promise. Bob Buchanan, director of the Oregon Department of Agriculture, says the majority of agriculture leaders regard meadowfoam as a credible crop. Jolliff was invited to tell Congress about a proposed new research agency. And U.S. Representative Bob Smith has become interested in finding money for meadowfoam research, an aide says.

But to market meadowfoam on a large scale, growers must offer buyers a low, stable price. Meadowfoam oil is now priced at $3.60 per pound, but officials say it should flatten out at $1. It's a vicious cycle. Without money for research and development, it is hard to attract investors. Without investors, it's hard to demonstrate quality, yield and market demand to justify the research.

"So many people want proof before they're willing to invest," says Jolliff. "It's not in the cards for bureaucrats to take risks."

The risks fall to the 23 grass seed growers experimenting with meadowfoam. They've invested $500,000 and 1,000 acres of land. Oil from harvested seeds is extracted in Texas, refined in California and trucked back to Oregon, where all but 15 of the first 75 tons are stored waiting for a market.

"The market isn't interested in buying a product because there isn't a constant supply," says Dave Nelson of Associations for Grass Seed and Meadowfoam Growers. "And farmers don't want to grow it because there's no market."

Irish tailback Brooks' past keys Irish future

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Sports Writer

The book says that a freshman will have troubles adjusting to major college football because he will not have faced any kind of competition in high school that approaches the college level.

Somebody ought to explain that to Notre Dame freshman tailback Tony Brooks.

As the captain at Booker T. Washington High School in Tulsa, Okla., Brooks led his team to two state championships despite going up against opponents now suiting up for teams like Oklahoma, Oklahoma State, Georgia and Texas.

"There were Division I players coming out of every school," says Brooks. "Athletes like Steve Largent, Drew Pearson and Wayman Tisdale came out of that area."

"My school was academically one of the top 150 in the nation, and the football program had four losses in the four years I was there."

But while Tulsa may have been a football haven for college scouts, it had its bad aspects as well. This darker side of his hometown contributed in Brooks' decision to come to Notre Dame instead of joining some of his friends at Oklahoma.

"My mom and dad liked Coach (Lou) Holtz, and my dad liked the history and tradition, and he thought I could come here and be a better person and be around the right environment," Brooks says. "I'd been around the exact opposite for much of my life."

"Notre Dame's a really religious place, not strict but you have lots of restrictions, and it's pretty quiet and not too fast. There are not many run-ins with drugs and gangs. Where I come from you see a lot of that," continues Brooks. "It's the kind of atmosphere you can get caught up in. I saw a lot of Division I caliber players not going to college or going to junior colleges. I said from my sophomore year that I'd get to my books so when the time came, I wouldn't say 'I should have' or 'I could have.'"

Instead, he has been able to make a substantial contribution to the Irish backfield as a freshman, highlighted by an 82-yard rushing performance on 12 carries last Saturday against Navy. Running back coach Jim Strong says that is partially because he used some of the more beneficial resources of his hometown.

"Tony came out of an excellent high school program," says Strong. "I know his high school coach, Larry McGee, and he was very well coached at the high school level. His team has three or four major college players every year, and they run their high school program like a college program."

Of course, Brooks has found he has needed to make adjustments to be successful at the college level.

"The intensity and the pace of the game were the biggest things," says Brooks. "In high school, you could play well for a few downs and then coast. Here you have to play every down like it's your last down. Granted, some players have the ability to coast, but those who play with desire every down are the ones who set themselves apart. Tim Brown's that type of player."

Although he has not started, Brooks has seen action in every game except for the loss to Pittsburgh, which he missed with an injured ankle. In Holtz' multiple back system, Brooks has been able to share time with junior Mark Green and classmate Ricky Watters at tailback. As the biggest and most physical of these three tailbacks, he also replaced an injured Braxton Banks at fullback against Michigan State.

Brooks has realized what he needs to learn as a college player, and as far as he is concerned, he is learning from the best.

"My practice habits are better, I have a more serious attitude toward the game, and I have improved my speed," says Brooks. "I think we could go all the way and be national champions if we listen to Coach Holtz. The man knows everything, everything he says is right. He knows the game."

If the Irish do come on to win the national title, it could very well mean Brooks would be spending New Year's Day in Miami facing the school back in his home state that he chose not to attend.

tributing nine tackles in the contest.

Beyond these four, several freshmen have made their presence felt for the 6-1 Irish. One sign of this was obvious Saturday. Despite the blowout, fans remained attentive as Notre Dame's second and third teams displayed their many talents and kept up a high quality of play - a promising sign that more seasons like this one are on their way.

Tony Rice again came away from an Irish win with an injury, this week in the form of a bruised leg, making him questionable for Saturday's matchup with Boston College. In his Tuesday press conference Holtz said if Rice could not start the game, Kent Graham would get the nod, joining Rice and Terry Andysiak as the third Irish quarterback to start a game this fall.

Holtz also maintained that Rice is the number-one quarterback and will remain that way. Platooning Rice and Graham is only a result of what the Irish need in the situation they face, not a concerted effort on Holtz' part to break in both young quarterbacks.

"They one thing I want to make clear," said Holtz, "is that I'm not interested in giving anybody work on game day. We're interested in winning the game. Period. We develop people in practice. But when we get on game day Saturday, we're not interested in giving anybody work or keeping anybody happy. All we want to do is win."

The Saint Mary's soccer team wrapped up its season with a victory over IUSB and a loss to Siena Heights. Molly McNeill highlights the action below.

SMC soccer season ends at 6-8-2

By MOLLY MCNEILL
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's soccer team finished its season last weekend with a final record of 6-8-2.

Hosting Soccer Parent's Weekend, the Belles started out with an impressive 4-0 victory Friday over Indiana University at South Bend. The Belles came out strong, putting their first goal in the net only five minutes into the game.

Freshman Tricia Troester

came up with the ball at mid-field and beat the defender to score the first goal on the breakaway.

It wasn't long before the Belles struck again, as Amy Ross scored from the middle on a pass from Landry Clement.

The first half ended with still another goal by Belles' forward Marcie Gaus.

In the second half the Belles relied mostly on their defense, including the strong goaltending of senior Patty Hatfield, who registered another shutout for the year.

As Parent's Weekend wound down and the season approached its end, the Belles lost to Siena Heights Sunday, 2-0.

"I felt good about our soccer progress as a team, even though our won-loss record didn't show it," said coach Tom Van Meter.

Overall Van Meter was pleased with his first year coaching the Belles and looks forward to next year.

"My goal now is to start to build for next year," said Van Meter.

Brown, Rice battle injuries

By MARTY STRASEN
Assistant Sports Editor

All-America flanker Tim Brown and starting quarterback Tony Rice are among a large group of Notre Dame players who have missed practice so far this week because of injuries suffered this past Saturday.

Brown suffered a broken left ring finger when it got caught in a Navy defender's jersey early in the first quarter of a 56-13 Irish victory over the Midshipmen. He returned to pick up a total of 173 yards in the contest.

Rice came away from the contest with a contusion in his leg.

Others members of the team who have missed at least one day of practice this week include defensive linemen Mike Griffin (back and ankle), Tom Gorman (gastritis) and Ted FitzGerald (ankle). The Irish have not started the same defensive line since the third week of the season.

Still out with injuries from earlier in the year are free safety Corny Southall (ligaments), split end Ray Dumas (knee), tailback/flanker Alonzo Jefferson (ankle) and defensive lineman Bryan Flannery (back).

"(The injury situation) is reaching a point where it's going to hurt us," Holtz said Tuesday morning. "I'm really concerned about it."

Brown, Rice and many of the others probably will be able to play Saturday against Boston College, Holtz said.

"There is a possibility Kent Graham will open up at quarterback," Holtz added. "It's too early to make that decision."

Farley

for a 25-yard touchdown pass to open the scoring.

Farley's Tami Goodwin scored her third punt return touchdown of the season, covering 75 yards and accounting for the final Farley points.

In other action Sunday night,

P.W. continued to show why it belongs at the top by crushing Howard 22-6. After a season-opening loss to Farley, P.W. ran off seven in a row to finish the season.

Playoff action begins on Sunday with semi-final games pairing P.W. and Farley at 1 p.m. followed by B-P and Lyons at 2:15 p.m. at Stepan fields.

Defense

tough," understated Fisher coach Chris Carlson. "Our offense was set up by our defense."

In fact, Fisher's lone score was set up by an interception. Late in the second quarter, with Alumni driving, Fisher cornerback AC Yenchko picked off a John Nieirs pass.

From there Fisher quarterback Greg Gibbons tossed a 20-yard strike to his prolific-scoring flanker Pat Murphy for the only score of the game. The extra point provided some excitement, as Fisher's holder, Steve Nytes, took a bad snap from center and raced outside for the two-point conversion.

"It came down to who wanted it more," said Alumni coach Mike Brcik. "We knew they wanted to beat us, and they were really psyched up. We took it as just another game, instead of a playoff game."

Soccer faces Valpo

By PETE SKIKO
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame soccer team left the West Coast with two losses against UCLA and San Diego State, but returned with the feeling that it can play with any squad in the nation.

With that in mind, Head Coach Dennis Grace feels relatively confident heading into tonight's game with Valparaiso, at 7:30 in Krause Stadium.

Even if Notre Dame's all-time record against the Crusaders wasn't 17-0, and even if the Irish haven't outscored Valpo 112-14 over the ten-year history of the series, Grace might still feel good about his team's chances.

"We have an extremely positive attitude coming out of California," said Grace, in his fourth year as the Irish mentor. "Heck, early this year, both of those teams (UCLA and SDSU) were in the top five in the country. To lose both on penalty kicks like that was tough in a sense, but you'd have to be blind not to see that we played them both down to the wire. The boys know that what they accomplished out there was pretty special.

"Nobody hung their head after either game. If you had come into our locker room after we played UCLA, you would have thought, 'Holy mackerel, Notre Dame beat the Bruins'. I'm extremely pleased at the intensity with which we're playing. I was happier after this weekend than I have been after a few wins this year."

Never one to look past an opponent, Grace expects the typically scrappy Valparaiso team to come at the Irish, figuring that it has nothing to lose by pulling out all the stops against a team it has never beaten.

"Every year, Valpo comes to play," said Grace. "They've been overmatched by us for the last few years, but their coach does a nice job with the program and we had better be ready to play. But I've got a feeling that we'll be ready to play."

The Notre Dame volleyball team suffered a defeat at the hands of Western Michigan, which dashes their hopes of post-season action. See story at right.

Irish fall to Broncos; playoff chances slim

By KELLY TOWNSEND
Sports Writer

Last night the Notre Dame women's volleyball team went up against nationally ranked Western Michigan hoping for a victory that might have given them a shot at a bid in the NCAA tournament. Unfortunately, their hopes were dashed as the Broncos handed the Irish their eighth loss of the season.

In the first game, the Broncos caught the Irish off guard on their first serve, racking up seven points. The Irish responded with two points of their own from Maureen Shea and Zanette Bennett. Western Michigan then regained their momentum, adding three more points before Notre Dame could answer back. The Irish did answer back, however, with strong blocks and a service ace by Kathleen Morin, who lead the team with four. This turned the Irish around, heading them to a 15-13 win.

Coach Art Lambert was pleased with the score.

"After a faulty start," said Lambert, "the girls got it together. They adjusted to Western Michigan's style of play and took away their cross court game."

At the start of the second game it seemed that the Broncos were going to have a scoring frenzy similar to that of the first. They were halted after three by a strong Irish defense. The Irish came back with a point of their own and then put up a defensive wall that kept out a strong Bronco squad. Despite this, the Broncos were able to chip away at the wall little by little and hold the Irish at bay. By the end of the second game, Western Michigan had pulled down the wall to tie the match with a 7-15 game.

Coach Lambert's response to his team's performance in the second game was less than joyful.

"We didn't adjust," said Lambert. "It's just that simple. Western Michigan changed their attack and we failed to adjust. They picked themselves up and out hustled us."

The inability to adjust proved to be fatal as the Broncos continued their diligent attack on the Irish defense. In game three, Notre Dame became more disorganized, making bad judgements and bad passes. This breakdown led to another 7-15 match.

As in the first three games, the Irish started the fourth slowly. Unable to effectively break the Western Michigan defense, Notre Dame fell into a holding action to make it as hard as possible for Western Michigan to score. The Broncos were finally able to end the game 6-15 to win the match 3-1.

This is the sixth loss to a top twenty team for the Irish this season and should limit their chances of an NCAA tournament bid. Putting thoughts like that behind them, the Irish will face Eastern Michigan tonight. The Irish are looking to extend their series lead over the Hurons to 3-0.

Four battle for women's IH title

The women's Interhall flag football season ended last Sunday with many questions and only a few answers.

The final standings are tallied, and the playoff berths set, but they settle very little.

Breen-Phillips and Pasquerilla West tied for first with 7-1 records, and Farley and Lyons both ended at 6-2 to tie for third.

The top four teams qualify for the playoffs, so who is favored?

P.W. beat B-P and B-P beat Farley, but Farley beat P.W. B-P beat Lyons and Lyons beat Farley, but P.W. beat Lyons. Head to head matchups help very little.

How about records against non-playoff opponents? All four teams were 5-0.

Last Sunday's action was typical of the confusion.

B-P ran its winning streak to six games with a 20-12 win over Badin (1-7). With the score still close at the half, Margeret Johnson scampered 65 yards on the opening play of the second half to extend the B-P lead to 20-8. Keri Dresser and Tina Pidgeon provided the first half scoring on runs of 5 and 25 yards respectively.

"I was a little disappointed in how the game went," said B-P head coach Dan Deboer. "Defensively, we had a few problems. A little hard work though, and we'll be ready for the playoffs."

Farley, meanwhile, kept pace with the leaders by posting a convincing 20-0 victory over Walsh (1-6). Substitute quarterback Colleen McGillis teamed up with Kara England

Strong defenses lead Fisher and Dillon to playoff victories

By TIM SULLIVAN

If the true strengths of a football team emerge during the big games, then both the Dillon and Fisher Hall men's Interhall football teams have true strength in their defenses.

Defense was the key in both of Sunday's playoff games, as Dillon edged Flanner 3-0, and Fisher shutout Alumni 8-0 to move into next weekend's semi-finals.

Dillon used an uncommon, but lethal, weapon to defeat

Flanner - the foot of placekicker Mike Braemer. After a misplayed Flanner punt, resulting in Dillon's best field position of the day (Flanner's 25-yard line), the Big Red drove ten more yards before being stopped on the Flanner 15.

Dillon coach Jeff Morgan then made the tough decision to go for a field goal. Braemer nailed it and the defense held up.

"With Mike Braemer," said Morgan, "we'll go for anything under 50 (yards). At that point in the game I said, 'let's take the sure three and bring the defense out and let 'em play.'"

The Big Red defense was not dominating - instead they came up with the big plays when needed to shut down the Flanner team.

Four interceptions were the four biggest plays. Flanner moved the ball effectively throughout the game, but key Dillon interceptions stymied Flanner's efforts. The second quarter, for instance, belonged to Flanner, as the Flannerites drove for nearly the entire ten minutes. But an interception ended the drive deep in Dillon territory.

Dillon's biggest interception came late in the fourth period. Trailing 3-0, Flanner began its longest drive of the day. Quarterback Pete Parton's passing ("It was his best game of the year by far," said Flanner coach Jim Kelly) and the running of Dave Kane got the ball to the Dillon 10. Kane then took a pitch and prepared to throw an option pass, but he slipped and his errant pass was picked off by Dillon's Andy Aye.

Flanner's spirits dropped, and the game effectively ended, with that interception.

"They moved the ball real well," said Morgan, "but we came up with the big plays when we had to."

Fisher's defense was definitely dominating.

The Green Wave completely shut down Alumni's passing attack and controlled the Dogs' running game to come away with the 8-0 victory.

"Our defense played really

'91 proving to be a class act for the Irish

Last spring they were touted as the best recruiting class in the nation.

Lou Holtz was called a recruiting genius and Irish eyes were smiling when Notre Dame nabbed several blue-chip players to come and play football this fall in the House That Rock Built.

When the official signing day arrived last February, a full 30 players, the scholarship limit, signed on with the Irish, including all of Holtz' designated "must-haves."

Coach Holtz is still being praised, and Irish eyes are now glowing thanks to three words.

Six and one.

The class of '91 has played a large part in Notre Dame's success on the gridiron this fall and now holds the distinction of being the only members of this squad which have never had a losing season.

"They've made a substantial contribution," said Holtz of his freshmen. "So many of them have played a prominent role. When you think of how many have played, it's astounding. (Todd) Lyght, (Scott) Kowalkowski, (Tim) Ryan, (Donn) Grimm, (Andre) Jones, (Ricky) Watters, (Tony) Brooks, (Frank) Jacobs, (Kent) Graham, and the list goes on."

The most notable performances to date have been turned in by the dynamic tailback duo of Tony Brooks and Ricky Watters. Their statistics are nearly identical. And equally impressive.

Brooks is third for the Irish in rushing with 226 yards on 44 carries while Watters is close behind with 224 yards on 50 runs. Both rushed for touchdowns Saturday against Navy, Watters for his second of the season and Brooks for his first.

Holtz outright swept these two away from home-state coaches Barry Switzer and Joe Paterno. Brooks, who has shown talent at the fullback spot as well, hails from Tulsa, Okla. and was actively recruited by the No. 1 Sooners. Watters, the only freshman named on USA Today's first-team All-America squad last year, grew up under the shadow of Paterno's nose in Harrisburg, Pa.

Quarterback Kent Graham has emerged as a composed signal-caller for Notre Dame and has given Irish-watchers something to speculate about by posting impressive numbers when filling in for another rookie, Tony Rice.

Graham's dropback passing style has enabled the Irish to use a hurry-up offense and march down the field quickly when necessary. Graham is 9-of-11 for 133 yards, one touchdown and one interception.

Freshman free safety Todd Lyght sparked Notre Dame's just-short comeback against Pitt with a blocked punt in the second half that set up an Irish touchdown. The multi-talented native of Flint, Mich., billed in the pre-season as Tim Brown's eventual successor at flanker, earned his only start of the season the next week against Air Force, con-
