Honor code reactions are varied

By MARILYN BENCHIK
Senior Staff Reporter

With the installation of an Academic Honor Code, which calls for unproctored examinations and students reporting cheaters, many varied student reactions are surfacing on the Notre Dame campus.

Dan Gerlach, student representative on the University Academic Honor Code Committee, believes that "you cannot force honor on anybody," but said he agrees with the principles of the code. "A Catholic university should advocate an honor code as part of education morally and ethically in addition to intellectually," said Gerlach.

The code is directed at this year's freshmen. "Upperclassmen are not going to be forced to use the code. The only classes which will state whether or not it is an honor code class will be electives," he said.

While the freshmen will have to comply to the rules of the code in three out of five of their classes each semester, they "came in knowing that they'd be governed under the code in some of their classes," Gerlach added.

The Honor Code will be implemented during the Spring semester.

Survey to show student beliefs

By KENDRA MORRILL
Copy Editor

The first annual survey of the student body of Notre Dame was sent out to approximately 2,000 randomly chosen students yesterday.

The survey, set up through the Social Science Training and Research Laboratory, is being conducted by student government "to better determine the backgrounds, desires, and attitudes of Notre Dame undergraduate students," according to the cover letter that accompanied the survey, which was signed by all five of the student senators.

The survey is divided into three sections: demographics, campus issues and social issues. The demographics section asks general information questions about the respondent which should help to better identify the typical Notre Dame student, according to the letter.

The social issues section will "elucidate what Notre Dame students believe" about various social, moral and ethical issues, said Steve Viz, student senator for District 4.

The campus issues section is perhaps the most vital part of the survey, according to Viz. "The majority of action will come out of it," he said.

"The purpose of the whole campus issue section is to provide concrete support for or opposition to issues that arise on campus," Viz said. If student government has concrete evidence of student support or opposition on a certain issue to bring to the administration, its "efforts (to persuade the administration) are given more credibility," said Viz.

A long-term purpose of the survey is to examine how the student body changes over the years, according to Viz. He said he hopes the survey will continue annually. "Then, at the end of five, ten, 15 years we can see how the student body has evolved," he said.

Viz said he wanted to stress the "complete confidentiality and individuality" of the survey. Many students might think there would be administrative repercussions based on some of their answers to the more controversial questions, said Viz, but the administration has nothing to do with the survey.

He said Father David Tyson, vice president for student affairs, assured him that there would be no type of investigation and no effort whatsoever to pinpoint any students based on their answers.

"No one even sees the cards," said Viz. "They go

Saint Mary's begins exchange with black college

By PATTI WEED
News Staff

In an attempt to increase the minority population at Saint Mary's College, administrators are working on a student exchange program with Spellman College, a predominantly black women's college in Atlanta, according to Mary Ann Rowan, director of admissions at Saint Mary's.

A meeting between college administrators last spring about student exchanges prompted a visit from three Saint Mary's students to the Spellman campus last weekend.

Tentative plans call for students from Spellman to visit Saint Mary's during the spring semester. If all goes well and positive feedback is received, then an opportunity for students to spend a semester at either college would be formed, said Rowan.

Spellman and Saint Mary's have similar statistics in many areas.

Enrollment at Spellman is 1,600, compared to 1,800 women at Saint Mary's. Student composition is also similar, with Spellman admitting students from 42 states and 12 nations, and Saint Mary's admitting students from 45 states and 22 nations.

The difference between the two liberal arts colleges is that Saint Mary's has a predominantly white population; Spellman is predominantly black.

Junior Monica Tette, senior Liz Neill and junior Christy Wolfe visited Spellman after being selected from among the 44 students who applied, said Rowan.

"I was surprised at the number of students that applied. It was difficult to choose three women," she said. The program was open to juniors and seniors.

Saint Mary's paid for all of the girls' travel expenses, while Spellman took care of their housing and meals.

Reagan: European security, SDI won't be bargained

Associated Press

WASHINGTON -President Reagan vowed Wednesday that a nuclear arms treaty with the Soviet Union will not undercut the U.S. commitment to the security of Europe, saying the stationing of 300,000 American troops abroad and "our steadfast nuclear guarantee underscore this pledge."

Reagan also said it was "totally unacceptable" for the Soviet Union to try to link reductions in globe-girdling strategic nuclear weapons to restrictions on his "Star Wars" missile defense plan, also known as the Strategic Defense Initiative, SDI.

"We won't bargain away SDI," Reagan said in a speech a month before Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev arrives in Washington for a superpower summit. The two leaders are expected to sign a treaty banning intermediate-range nuclear forces (INF) in Europe and to discuss other arms differences.

Last Friday, Reagan said Gorbachev was not making SDI concessions a condition for cutbacks in strategic arms. In his speech Wednesday, however, Reagan complained about "the Soviet tactic of holding these offensive reductions hostage to measures that would cripple" SDI.

Reagan's remarks, taped at the White House on Tuesday, were broadcast to Europe on Wednesday by satellite channels of the United States Information Agency's "Worldnet" and the Voice of America.

In part, the speech attempted to calm fears that the removal of U.S. medium- and short-range missiles in Europe would weaken the Western alliance and leave Europe vulnerable to the Warsaw Pact's conventional forces, which greatly outnumber those in the West.

The address also challenged the authenticity of Gorbachev's campaign of openness, or "glasnost," and underscored to the Soviet Communist Party general secretary that Reagan is adamant about moving ahead with his Star Wars program.

Urging the Kremlin to withdraw its forces from Afghanistan, Reagan said, "The Soviet occupation of Afghanistan is most certainly a dreadful quagmire." He called it "a no-win situation" for Moscow.

The INF treaty will require the United States and Soviet Union to eliminate medium- and short-range nuclear missiles in Europe.

In Brief

In the Philippines, police have detained 17 people in the killings of three Americans near Clark Air Base and await tests on weapons before deciding whether to file charges. At least six of those held are also believed to be rebels of the communist New People's Army. 11 of the 17 were picked up Tuesday in the Angeles City area, next to the U.S.-run base 50 miles north of Manila, and the others were arrested last week on weapons charges. Ballistics tests are being conducted on confiscated pistols to determine whether they were used in the Oct. 28 killings. -Associated Press

A 6-foot ostrich on the lam in Oklahoma City caused quite a stir in Linda Alvarado's house. Alvarado's pooch first spied the bird near the house Tuesday and pursued it past her daughter's bedroom. The girl promptly dashed out after the flapping fugitive. The family terrier cornered the bird near a shed. While 10-year-old Graham covered the ostrich with his BB-gun, his parents called the sheriff's department, who responded: "We don't do ostriches, ma'am." Finally, after the Alvarados endured hours of guard duty, the ostrich's owner and a friend came by and literally bagged the escapee. - Associated Press

'Nun logic' part of charm in Catholic institutions

It was three degrees below zero, and the windchill factor was thirty below. There was three feet of snow on the ground from the storm that hit overnight, and school hadn't been cancelled.

It took us triple the time to get to our school in the boondocks, and we almost didn't make it. But it's O.K., we were being protected . . . by nuns.

When I found nowhere to park my car after sliding down the hill into the unplowed lot, I tunneled my way to the principal's office.

"Sister Mary Ann, why aren't the courts plowed?"

"We didn't know it was going to snow, Sandy."

There you have it, ladies and gentlemen, Nun Logic. It's a term I've used for years with my friends (Some of them nuns themselves). Because Catholics, but more particularly, nuns seem to have a way of thinking that is separate from any other.

I'm convinced that they all go to the same school before they can be first grade teachers. They all graduate thinking that grade school children have perfect bladder control and never feel nauseous. If they claim to, they're lying . . . even if the proof is all over the classroom floor.

But their biggest fear by far is gender interaction. In the first grade, the girls and the boys occupied separate sections of the room, and it was clear that Sister Anne Marie didn't want us to interact. She addressed us separately and took us to the bathroom, buslines and recess separately. Boys first, girls last.

The ERA wasn't very big then, but I had hopes that when I was one of the "Big Kids" in Junior High, things would change.

I found myself in the sixth grade at St. Christine's School with a pad of paper and a pen copying down verses in the New Testament during recess every day of every week.

Our entire class had been punished until graduation because the boys pinned Jeanette across the desk in Sister Cecilia's homeroom. So much for interaction.

But recess was taken away forever. At age 13, we were all damned to remain silent until high school.

So we read. But Sister Diane took my Judy Blume book away in the seventh grade because she was appalled at the "sexual content" and threatened to call my mother (who bought it for me).

Eighth grade and still not a "Big Kid" because I was a member of the "damned by God" class. We still went to the bathroom and bus in separate groups.

Sandy Cerimele

Saint Mary's Editor

Sometimes I wonder how I survived Saint Christine's. But then came high school and another chance at being a "Big Kid" and possibly discovering my sexuality.

Fat chance. I attended an "all girls school," and although our nuns didn't need to worry themselves with gender separation, their paranoia that we might discover our deep, dark secrets buried under brotherly love and the New Testament was imminent.

But they must've done something right, because they convinced at least 1,800 women to attend a private, single sex college. I'm 21 years old, and I've got to clear out of the study lounge in the library so they can BOYPROOF the building before they leave us in there "after hours."

The days of rulers on the knuckles and rosary beads may be long gone, but the sex classes and their adolescent confusion have permeated this generation of students.

Most of us chose Notre Dame or Saint Mary's over a public university or a private, non-Catholic university, knowing that this logic was prevalent.

Face it, although the paternalism can be annoying at times when parties get busted or a date has to end early, we live in a terrific community.

Maybe we all would like to wait a little longer to be a "Big Kid."

Scholar series speaker offers views of art

By PRATIBHA TRIPATHI
News Staff

College of Arts and Letters' Distinguished Visiting Scholar Series brought anthropologist Alexander Alland, Jr., as the guest speaker to Notre Dame Tuesday and Wednesday.

Alland discussed the evolution of aesthetic behavior as a form of affective communication in a lecture entitled "The Role of Culture and Biology In Human Aesthetic Behavior"

"Art is the accidental result of a series of evolutionary unrelated adaptations each of which has adaptive significance in domains other than aesthetics," said Alland elaborating from his book "The Artistic Animal."

"The fact that artistic behavior is built out of a grab bag of adaptive systems does not mean that art, once it emerges, does not have its own powerful adaptive value," Alland said.

In his speech, the Columbia University professor discussed the emergence of aesthetic behavior as the result of five major human adaptations: environmental exploration, play, attention to spatial configuration, ability for fine-grained perceptual discrimination, and the emergence of transformative process, which is exemplified in the linguistic metaphor.

"Without metaphor we would have neither true language nor art," said Alland. "Metaphor is a basic characteristic of language in which, to use a metaphor, new patterns arise from old cloth."

The lecture attempted to integrate, under the class of coherent theoretical approach, a set of biological and cultural-historical factors in aesthetic behavior. Alland drew his conclusions from his comparative research including a controlled cross-cultural study of drawing by young children in Japan, Bali, Taiwan, France, Ponape, and the United States.

"Our results show that cultural differences appear very early in the kinds of drawing children do," said Alland. "The data show that, except for kinetic scribbling which all children do before they begin to draw any kind of shape, there are no clear sequences or stages that apply to art work in all the cultures studied."

His results tend to confirm a relativistic approach to art style—that because each culture is unique there can be no true universals in human behavior. Alland, however, attempted to rescue the notion of formal universals.

C. America deadline today

Associated Press

WASHINGTON -The deadline for implementing the Central American peace plan is Thursday, but with warfare continuing in Nicaragua and elsewhere, U.S. officials see the 90 days allowed for compliance more as a beginning than an end of a process.

The signing of the agreement last August by five Central American presidents produced near-panic in the Reagan administration because officials saw the accord as a virtually cost-free way for Nicaragua's leftist government to win an end to American aid to the Contra rebels.

Now, however, those fears appear somewhat exaggerated, the officials say, adding that the Sandinista government is finding itself increasingly on the defensive and faces some extraordinarily difficult choices in the weeks ahead.

The peace agreement was primarily aimed at ending Central America's insurgencies through cease-fires and a process of national reconciliation. But fighting continues in each of the three war-plagued countries—Nicaragua, El Salvador and Guatemala—with little sign of an early settlement in any of them.

El Salvador has held cease-fire discussions with leftist rebels with no progress reported. However, consistent with the requirements of the agreement, President Jose Napoleon Duarte is expected to announce a general amnesty for political prisoners. A partial, unilateral cease-fire may also be decreed in time for Thursday's deadline.

Guatemala also has held direct discussions with leftist insurgents, but a settlement seems no more than a remote possibility.

Central American leaders appear to recognize that the 90-day schedule for implementing the agreement was too ambitious, and U.S. officials say the region's leaders now are looking to January as a more realistic deadline. Early that month, the five presidents are scheduled to review compliance with the agreement.

The United States, while making its concerns about the agreement known to friendly Central American countries, is not a signatory and thus has assumed the unaccustomed role of bystander.

The survey will show if the image of the homogeneity of Notre Dame students is true, said Viz. "There are lots of preconceived notions (about students' attitudes)," he said. "You can 'guesstimate' how most of the students would answer by a knowledge of the people around you." He said the survey is not trying to prove or disprove these notions, but is just trying to see if they are legitimate.

Viz said the key thing is that people return the surveys. "Only if we get a decent response can we really call it a legitimate survey," he said.

The surveys should be returned to the Social Science Training and Research Laboratory by Friday, Nov. 13.

While the University wants to decrease the amount of cheating in the classroom by implementing the Honor Code, Gerlach also sees a dual purpose involved. "This is a device to help moral growth. In the real world if a lawyer witnesses unlawful and unethical conditions existing to get a criminal off the hook, he has a responsibility to say something," he said.

The clause in the code which has stirred the most controversy is the Non-Toleration Clause. "If a student sees another student cheating, then (the witness) has an obligation to tell the professor about the cheating," Gerlach said. "If the witness does not say anything about the cheating, then this person is just as liable as the cheater," he added.

Mike Farnan, a junior economics major, commented that he would have a hard time turning someone in to a professor. He added that he does not see cheating as a big problem at Notre Dame.

"The code does not really apply to students here because most people take a personal pride in what they do. In my three years as a student here I've never witnessed a student cheating outright on an exam," Farnan said.

Contrary to this, Pat Smith, a sophomore English major, said he saw students cheating on a test the week before October break. "It really bothered me when I saw those people cheating."

Smith said he would report a cheating incident if the rules required him to do so, but he added "I've broken a few rules in the past."

Freshman Kara Hagstrom said, "If I would know that someone was doing it, I wouldn't turn that person into the teacher, but I'd talk to the person outside of the class if I saw the cheating more than once."

Democrats take key posts

Associated Press

Democrats on Wednesday hailed their victories in off-year governors' elections in Kentucky and Mississippi as a "good preview for 1988," while GOP challenger Frank Rizzo defiantly refused to concede defeat to incumbent W. Wilson Goode in Philadelphia's bitter mayoral race.

Republicans seized on a smaller-than-normal defeat in Mississippi and scattered victories in legislative races around the country to claim a "bittersweet success."

But the high profile winners were all Democrats, and Gov.-elect Wallace Wilkinson in Kentucky and Ray Mabus in Mississippi began planning their new administrations.

Wilkinson's 65 percent of the vote over Republican State Rep. John Harper gave him the biggest victory margin in Kentucky history, and he claimed a mandate to enact a statewide lottery and avoid higher taxes.

Mabus, who defeated businessman Jack Reed by a margin of 53 percent to 47 percent in Mississippi, said his victory was a signal that the South is changing.

"I think this is a new day for Mississippi," said Mabus, who campaigned as a crusader after a term as auditor spent investigating irregularities by county supervisors around the state.

Julie Anbender, a Democratic National Committee spokeswoman in Washington, called the election outcome "a good preview for 1988. . . . We're extremely pleased. We had expected the gubernatorial victories that we won."

Frank Fahrenkopf, chairman of the Republican Party, cited Reed's showing and said, "Mississippi has not elected a Republican governor in 114 years, yet the Democrats were barely able to pull this one out."

Fahrenkopf called the results a "bittersweet success." But in his statement, he made no mention of the record landslide loss suffered by Harper in Kentucky, and did not refer to his oft-repeated claims that a national political realignment toward the Republicans is taking shape in the country.

Kathryn Murray, the GOP's director of communications, noted that Republicans had gained control of the Washington state senate by winning a special election, held control of the New Jersey state assembly and expressed hope that Reed's relatively strong showing could assist the Republicans in their bid to win the seat being vacated next year by Mississippi's retiring Democratic Sen. John Stennis.

In Philadelphia's mayoral race, Goode had 332,396 votes, or 51 percent, to 318,526, or 49 percent, for Rizzo, with only 7 of the 1,739 precincts missing.

Candidate suffers loss, heart-attack

Associated Press

HOBART, Ind. -Republican mayoral candidate Robert Malizzo suffered a heart attack and went into open-heart surgery Wednesday after losing his bid to gain city hall, officials said.

Malizzo was admitted to St. Mary Medical Center in Hobart about 2 a.m. Wednesday, hours after losing the election by 696 votes out of more than 7,600 cast.

Fred Ott, a hospital spokesman, said surgeons were performing a bypass procedure on Malizzo to return blood flow to his heart. Tests indicated a blood vessel to the heart was completely obstructed, he added.

Malizzo, 43, was reported in serious condition.

"They haven't seen the last of the Republican Party in Hobart," Malizzo said after his defeat Tuesday night. "We have to regroup now, evaluate the campaign, and maybe in four years, try it again."

James Dayhuff, Malizzo's campaign manager, said the candidate began suffering chest pains at home. Barbara Malizzo, the candidate's wife, drove him to the hospital, where he was placed in the intensive care unit.

Dayhuff said Malizzo's heart condition may have been aggravated by the campaigning. Marie Caldwell, Hobart Republican chairman, agreed.

"It was a very strenuous campaign, and he was going all the time. It's bound to be the cause of all the problems now," Caldwell said.

Defector to U.S.S.R. returns to States

FRANKFURT, West Germany - A U.S. army private who defected to the Soviet Union seven months ago returned to the West on Wednesday and said he would surrender to American authorities.

Wade Roberts, 22, said he did not want to return to the Soviet Union but did not know if he would be going to the United States.

Roberts, who flew to Frankfurt from Moscow aboard an Aeroflot jetliner with his pregnant girlfriend, Petra Neumann, told Cable News Network in an interview that he did not expect to be charged with desertion.

"I have a piece of paper from the United States Embassy that they gave me stating that the only charge that they have against me is for being AWOL," or Away Without Official Leave, Roberts told CNN.

Roberts, who was assigned to a post in West Germany when he defected to the Soviet Embassy in East Berlin, said two weeks ago he was prepared to go home to face trial on charges of desertion.

Since then, he had been in contact with the U.S. embassy in Moscow trying to arrange his return to the West.

Peter Arnett, CNN Moscow bureau chief, accompanied Roberts on the flight and said he was not met by any U.S. military officials at the Frankfurt airport.

Roberts was declared AWOL from his unit in West Germany on March 2 and declared a deserter and dropped from the Army's rolls on April 2.

Neumann, 24, helped Roberts slip across the border into East Germany in the trunk of a rented car in April.

Roberts told CNN he decided to return and give himself up because of Neumann's pregnancy.

"I've got this child coming with Petra, and I really don't feel like I should go around for the rest of my life having a charge ... from the United States hanging over my head," Roberts said.

House vote bans lie detectors

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The House voted 254-158 Wednesday night to impose a sweeping ban on the use of lie detector tests by most private employers.

The House acted after rejecting a substitute bill, 242-169, that would have allowed private polygraph tests to continue under strict new federal guidelines intended to prevent abuses.

Supporters of the ban, approved and sent to the Senate after more than 10 hours of intense debate, charged that polygraph tests were unreliable and constituted a threat to workers' guarantees against job discrimination.

House opponents of the bill argued that polygraph tests are a valuable weapon against employee thefts that cost business firms an estimated $40 billion annually.

The ban, which was supported by organized labor and civil liberties groups, would apply to all private employers, although the House approved exemptions Wednesday for security guards at sensitive installations and for drug company employees with access to controlled substances.

Federal, state and local governments also were exempted, as well as private contractors doing intelligence work for the government.

The defeated substitute, sponsored by Reps. C.W. Bill Young, R-Fla., and George "Buddy" Darden, D-Ga., would have prohibited polygraph examiners to ask irrelevant personal questions, and required that test results not be the sole basis for hiring or promotion decisions.

The Reagan administration and the business community both opposed the ban on private polygraphs, which are administered each year to about 2 million employees and job applicants.

Roe vs. Wade to fall as science grows

Every abortion decision involves a conflict of values. The rights of the developing unborn child are in conflict with the rights of the pregnant woman. Every physician who cares for pregnant women is caring for two patients—the pregnant woman herself and the unborn child. The pregnant woman is frequently called upon to act in a way that is primarily oriented toward the welfare of her unborn child. She may be asked to optimize her diet, abstain from smoking or drink alcohol in moderation for the purpose of protecting her fetus. She may even be called upon to submit to procedures such as intrauterine transfusion or various fetal surgical measures to improve the condition of the infant without producing any direct benefit to herself. There is some disagreement about the ethical obligations of the mother in each instance, but few would claim that a mother may act with callous disregard for the welfare of the fetus. No one would claim, for example, that a woman is free to take Thalidomide during the first trimester of pregnancy.

Eugene F. Diamond

guest column

The long tradition of legal constraints against the practice of abortion in the United States was derivative of English common law, operative in colonial times during the framing of the Constitution, and codified into laws of every state for over a century. This tradition was interrupted in 1973 by the Supreme Court in its Roe vs. Wade and Doe vs. Balton decisions. The legalization of abortion was based on a constitutional right to privacy, but it was contingent on a declaration by the Court that the pre-viable fetus lacked personhood. It should be emphasized that the Court was discussing "personhood" in the legal sense of standing before the Court. It was not considering personhood in a broader philosophical or metaphysical sense and, in fact, specifically prescinded from a decision as to when life begins.

The existence of biologically independent life in the unborn from the time of conception is supported by the following observations:

First, human life can be made to begin under in-vitro conditions by the fertilization of an ovum by sperm.

Second, the zygote and embryo thus produced are independently viable and not "part-of" the Petri dish or the uterus into which it will be eventually implanted.

Third, criteria necessary for the definition of "life" rather than "death" (e.g. heartbeat, electroencephalographic activity) are present in the first trimester.

The unborn child has a unique dependency on its mother, but it will continue to be totally dependent on others long after it is born.

The existence of life is intrinsic and demonstrable. The existence of "personhood" is extrinsic and conferred by consensus, at times, arbitrarily (the Supreme Court, for example, in the Dred Scott decision declared black slaves to be non-persons or chattel for purposes of the law). The Harvard Conference on Abortion, in both its ethical and medical committees, concluded unanimously that life begins at fertilization. Expert testimony before the East committee in the Senate regarding the beginning of life fell into two categories: life begins at conception (majority view) or when life begins is uncertain (minority view).

If we conclude that when life begins is uncertain, we have a serious quandary. If we conclude that a human life or a human person does not exist until some arbitrary stage of life after conception (quickening, nervous system development, viability, or birth), we may feel free to carry out lethal measures against preborn individuals against whom we have passed this judgement. If we are incorrect, there is no remedy for the individual who has thus suffered a wrongful death. If, on the other hand, we extend protection to all stages in the human continuum, we avoid the wrongful death without causing any injustice to the unborn individual in the process. It has been customary in other contexts in the American experience to act in favor of life where the existence of life is uncertain. When there is a coal mine cave-in, for example, we do not board up the shaft but rather we dig for survivors. In almost every instance we continue to dig even when we are morally convinced that the oxygen supply has been long exhausted. It would seem reasonable to act similarly with regard to the unborn child. That is, presume that he qualifies for protection unless and until we can be certain that he is not a live human person.

The American Academy of Pediatrics, as a child advocate organization, has identified an obligation to the welfare of the unborn patient: First, on page 52 of the Policy Reference Manual, an official Academy statement on the "Age Limits of Pediatrics" states that our obligation begins "in the period prior to birth when conception is apparent." Second, the Academy actively endorsed and participated in the United Nations Year of the Child. The U.N. Declaration on the Child states,

"The Child deserves protection from conception". Third, the Academy has endorsed the development of joint perinatal teams with obstetricians, further affirming its interest in the fetus as a separate individual. Fourth, various Academy members are deeply engaged in projects involving therapeutic procedures, both medical and surgical, carried out in-utero. It will be difficult to sustain the position that a fetus can be a patient and, at the same time, not a person.

Recently, in San Francisco, an unborn child had surgery for an obstructive uropathy. He was removed from the womb, operated upon and then returned to the uterine environment. Was he a person while outside the womb and then a non-person when he was placed back in the intrauterine environment? Or, since the procedure involves removing only the lower half of the body from the uterus, did he achieve personhood for his buttocks but not for his brain? This is what the Supreme Court would have us believe. No wonder Supreme Court Justice Sandra O'Connor has stated that the Roe vs. Wade opinion "is on a collision course with itself." As science progresses the ridiculously reasoned legal status of the unborn child as a non-person will inevitably collapse.

Pothole repairs an exemplary solution

Dear Editor:

Anyone unfortunate enough to have parked on Green Field in recent weeks can attest to the presence of enormous potholes. These holes often became swamps when it rained and probably could swallow whole a small Yugo without leaving a trace. Many students complained to each other, and assumed nothing could be done.

In late September a committee comprised of Student Senate members and Cabinet officers was formed to deal with short and long term improvements in student parking. On October 26, 1987 representatives of this committee met with Don Dedrick, Director of the Physical Plant. When Mr. Dedrick was informed of the condition of Green Field he said he would look into it immediately. By Friday, October 30th, many of the potholes had been repaired, although there are still holes where cars were parked. Mr. Dedrick assured us that Green Field would never deteriorate to that condition again.

The members of this committee, on behalf of all members of student government, would like to publicly thank Don Dedrick for his cooperation and concern. If the actions of Mr. Dedrick are any example, the administration has shown its willingness to discuss and act upon legitimate student concerns. We also would like to encourage any students who have a problem or idea to approach their representatives in student government. This is a perfect example of how students can work with Student Government and the Administration of Notre Dame.

Council volunteers are dedicated

THERESA LOOMIS

The Notre Dame-Saint Mary's Council for the Retarded has played an integral role in shaping the recreational program offered by South Bend's Logan Center. The Logan organization satisfies various needs for the retarded community through its pre-school, adult rehabilitation, and residential programs. Ever since the center was founded in 1968, student involvement has centered on a Saturday recreation program and weekly bowling.

The council is led by co-presidents Dennis Hughes and Marie Mellin. Hughes says the council's main purpose is "to promote more social behavior in the clients." Their relationships in the community are broadened by bringing them into contact with people other than immediate family and friends.

Other goals include providing a therapeutic program in which skills can be developed, providing recreation in which relaxation and cooperation can be learned, and promoting awareness about mental retardation by dispelling myths and misinformed attitudes.

The Saturday morning recreation program extends from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and is held at the Logan Center. Located at 1235 North Eddy Street, the site is within short walking distance from campus. These student run sessions are informal and include activities such as singing, arts and crafts, and games.

Clients taking advantage of this program vary in age, functioning ability, and background. They include children and adults from Corvillia Home and the Northern Indiana State Hospital (NISH), as well as others living in home environments who attend Logan educational programs or work at Logan Industries, a workshop employing 300 people in packaging, operating machinery, or cleaning.

"People go into this thinking they'll do a lot of giving, but they end up receiving."

Some clients are wheelchair bound or profoundly retarded while others have had fairly normal experiences but are learning disabled.

Student volunteers have initiated several new developments this year. In the past, games and crafts tended to be geared toward lower functioning clients. Now, however, projects on both low and high levels are offered so that all clients can participate and will be attracted to those better suited to their interests.

Also this year, the higher functioning clients are being encouraged to work with children from NISH. In this manner the clients act as supervised volunteers themselves. "Previously," comments Hughes, "some of the older clients formed separate little cliques. Now that they're in the capacity of 'teacher', they are more involved."

Hughes feels that the Special Olympics, which was held on campus this summer, is one reason for the expansion experienced this year. As a result of the visibility, more people are aware of the programs and are volunteering to help.

Bill Thomas, Logan's liaison with the NDSMC Council for the Retarded, agrees that the Olympic games have had a positive effect. "Increased general understanding of handicapped people has been the biggest result in the community."

Occasionally, the council organizes special activities for Saturday recreation. For example, one Saturday the group visited a farm. The session was extended to 2:30 p.m. and will include a picnic lunch.

Other special activities include field trips, overnight camping excursions to Michigan, Christmas parties, one home football game per season, and monthly theme dances at Logan Center.

The volunteers always have a party after these dances. Says Hughes, "The volunteers become a social unit. The fact that we're friends positively affects the way we enjoy rec and the way the clients enjoy rec."

Funding for the council's activities comes from many places. Half of the budget is derived from a trust at the university. The remainder comes from the Center for Social Concerns, Student Activities at ND and SMC, and donations from outside sources. Some of the special activities, such as the camping trip and dances are quite expensive. Comments Hughes, "Those are not small matters for us to operate."

He continues, "We do a lot of financial planning, organizing, and training. We've been involved a long time and are an integral part of Logan's program. They couldn't offer everything they do without our cooperation. We enjoy a good reputation and receive a favorable response. That speaks well of us as a school and also of our student leadership."

That's pretty impressive. It's not something every campus could boast."

Generally, between 50 and 60 students volunteer each Saturday. Some Saturdays entire groups volunteer their time. Last year the football team and its head coaches, the hockey team, Shenanigans, and the Glee Club participated in rec periods at Logan Center. Faculty, staff, and graduate students also contribute.

However, Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students are not the only volunteers. Students from Indiana University--South Bend and Holy Cross College, interested adults of the community, and young people involved in local confirmation programs are active participants too.

Countless reasons exist for people's desire to volunteer with the retarded. Says Hughes, "When you go you can almost regress back to childhood. When volunteers see advancements in clients--changes in behavior or greater personal discipline--it's really amazing and makes the program worth the effort. I know I'm helping when I see that they're able to improve. I know that it works." "God brings the people he wants to volunteer. I try not to be pushy. We get enough people to keep the program running. If they enjoy it, they come back. It's worked well for 20 years. The clients think it's fantastic."

Bill Thomas of the Logan organization also supports this sentiment. "The students can serve the people on a more individual basis. A lot of friendships are made--real friendships, something that carries over...The volunteers and clients remember each other, even after the students graduate."

Christine Hartman, a co-captain of the bowling program says, "They all love Notre Dame students because, every time they meet, the students are doing something for them." Client Ted Puchala is a prime example. He is known as "Mr. ND" because of his unbounded enthusiasm for ND football and his wide array of clothing carrying the ND insignia. He admits that singing the fight song is one of his favorite parts of Saturday recreation.

Volunteers for the bowling program meet in the lobby of Pasquerilla West at 3:45 p.m. on Friday afternoons and return by 6:00 p.m. They do the scoring for the bowlers but cheering is just as important.

Paul Kelly, the other co-captain, believes a neat aspect of involvement is that "people go into this thinking they'll do a lot of giving but they end up receiving."

All volunteer leaders stress the point that new volunteers are always welcome. Everyone can find their own level of involvement. Volunteers do not have to promise any particular time commitment.

Says Hartman, "We would never say 'no, you can't volunteer enough time.' We can make use of time if you're willing to give it. If that means once a month--terrific! I have the most fun doing it. It's my hobby. I don't have any great quotes...just tell them to come."

For more information on the Saturday recreation program or on the Council for the Retarded in general, contact Dennis Hughes(-4075) at Notre Dame or Marie Mellin(-5526) at Saint Mary's College. If interested in helping with bowling, contact Paul Kelly(-2252) or Christine Hartman(-2955).

How to buy sunken treasure

Associated Press

NORTH MIAMI BEACH, Fla. - Why dream about searching for treasure at the bottom of the sea or a ship that went down in a violent storm, asks Sidney Simon, when he has 18 such vessels for sale?

"Even a scuba diver would have a ball with any of these," said Simon, who describes himself as the "human dynamo of eastern Canada."

The sunken or abandoned ships he owns, Simon admitted, will not produce gold and silver treasures, but the 70-year-old businessman promises that, as salvage, they are worth a fortune.

"Why search for the Republic when you can buy one of mine and go for the real cash?" asked Simon, referring to current efforts to salvage the 600-foot RMS republic that sank off Nantucket Island, Mass., in 1909 with an estimated $1.2 billion in valuables on board.

Most of Simon's wrecks are in relatively shallow waters off his native Nova Scotia, having run aground or struck sunken reefs between 1900 and 1935. Although some are broken in half, Simon claims they are mostly intact. Some are partially visible from the surface.

None of his ships are small, said Simon, a Canadian citizen who also has a residence here. They are mostly freighters, but he also owns what's left of a 470-foot hospital ship and a four-stack World War I-vintage U.S. destroyer.

There are only two conditions to buy one of his wrecks, explained Simon, president of Trans World Slag and Metals Co.: "cash up front and only U.S. dollars."

Records Simon has indicate most of the ships carried coal, lumber or salt or were empty when they went down. However, some apparently carried general or unrecorded cargoes when they sank. Their value, he said, is in scrap metal, fittings and engine parts he contends have been preserved by salt water. "And there's the copper tubing," he added with a smile.

One ship has a solid bronze propeller weighing 25 tons, he said. "Just dig away the sand and cut the shaft and there's $50,000," he continued. "Someone could make a killing."

Most of the ships were purchased from the Canadian government or insurance companies by his father, the late John Simon, and passed on to him in 1948.

Simon also owns millions of tons of old white slag and coke breeze at two abandoned steel mills he has in Londonderry and Ferona, Nova Scotia.

Slag is a steel mill byproduct used to make building and insulation materials, asphalt, glass and for nourishing oyster beds. Coke breeze is the residue of the manufacture of coke and used to make charcoal briquettes.

Simon also speculates some of his ships might be refloated with the help of a large salvage ship.

As to a price for any of Simon's ships, he said, "Make me an offer. What's it worth to you?" The majority of the ships would have to be bought sight unseen. "I couldn't see them either when I bought them," he said.

Markovitz off to hot start

By SEAN S. HICKEY
Sports Writer

"I'll help out wherever the team needs me... that's all I care about," said sophomore hockey player Kevin Markovitz. Markovitz displayed his versatility against Windsor in the season-opening series last weekend.

Against Windsor, a Canadian team, Markovitz contributed on both sides of the red line, tallying both nights as Notre Dame split the series. Markovitz finished the series with one goal and two assists.

"Last year I played defense," said Markovitz, "and the coach started me at center last Friday night but switched me back to defense Saturday night."

Markovitz is from St. Louis, Mo., where he played four years of varsity hockey in high school. He attended an All-Star national hockey tournament in his senior year where he consulted with Notre Dame coaches.

"Basically I chose to attend Notre Dame with the idea of finding the best academic school with a good hockey program," said Markovitz.

As a freshman, Markovitz had 22 points--18 of those coming on assists and four on goals.

"One of the most thrilling moments for me was my first collegiate goal against West Point," said Markovitz.

"Kevin is a clever stick handler," says Head Coach Ric Schafer, "and a good skater. His stick handling skills will help us, especially on defense, to get out of the defensive zone more quickly."

The next opponent for Notre Dame is Kent State at Kent, Ohio, a fellow American Collegiate Hockey Association member. The Golden Flashes have gotten off to a shaky start thus far this season and sport a 3-7 record heading into this weekend's contests with Notre Dame. Kent State also has a new coach, Tom Viggiano, who, like Schafer, is returning to his alma mater to coach.

Despite the competitiveness in the ACHA and the calibre of teams Notre Dame will play, Schafer is optimistic about the season.

"I want to win the remaining 29 games and win the ACHA conference," added Schafer. "The team is hardworking, but we just need to eliminate a few mental lapses. If we can correct some of those mistakes, I think we can get Notre Dame hockey back on track."

Switzer closes in on Sooner win mark

Associated Press

NORMAN, Okla. -Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer laughed at the audacity of the idea.

"When you first started out," a questioner asked, "did you ever think about surpassing Bud Wilkinson's record?"

Wilkinson is perhaps the school's most famous coach. And until this year, he had also been the winningest coach in Oklahoma football history. But now Switzer, in his 15th season, can pass Wilkinson if the top-ranked Sooners beat No. 12 Oklahoma State on Saturday.

Switzer enters the game with a 145-25-4 record. Wilkinson compiled a 145-29-4 mark in 17 seasons. Wilkinson won three national championships, and Switzer also has won three.

"If I had said in my first year that I was going after Bud's record, you would have put me over at Central State," Switzer said, referring to a Norman mental hospital. "You don't start out with those types of goals."

Instead, he said, you start out by trying to establish yourself, to prove you are deserving of the position. Switzer wasted no time doing that. His first season, 1973, the Sooners went 10-0-1, with the only blemish a 7-7 tie to Southern Cal.

The following year Oklahoma went undefeated and won the national title. In 1975, Switzer's third season as coach, Oklahoma went 11-1 and won another national title.

In 1976, the Sooners stumbled just a bit, finishing 9-2-1. They came back strong the next four years, combining for a 42-6 record in those seasons and winning three Orange Bowl titles.

straight points to take the match. The strong net play of Shea and senior Kathy Baker gave the Irish the momentum, while the hustle of White and Morin shut down any hopes for an Eastern Michigan comeback.

"Morin set a beautiful game," said Notre Dame head coach Art Lambert of the decisive fifth game. "The team was passing well and we played good defense in that game."

Kathy Baker played well tonight and I thought Zanette Bennett had a good game."

Notre Dame, 21-8, heads to Dayton tonight to face their North Star Conference rival. The Irish then return to the Joyce ACC Pit Saturday night at 7:30 to host Louisville.

Bears resort to passing in come-from-behind contests

Associated Press

LAKE FOREST, Ill. --The come-from-behind victories they have pulled off the last two weeks might show character, but they are not characteristic of the Chicago Bears.

Some of the guys in the offensive line are showing concern, and the Bears' chances of leading the NFL in rushing a record fifth time are in jeopardy.

"We don't want to keep going through that, but sometimes it happens," said Jimbo Covert, a two-time All-Pro tackle, of the come-from-behind victories that have forced the team to abandon its running attack.

"We have to run the ball to be effective but you can't run when you're behind," said Covert. "We're becoming like San Diego. We have a good quarterback and good receivers, but that's not our characteristic.

"As long as we're winning, it's fine, but we can't keep doing that," said Covert. "It's about time we win a toss and drive downfield and score."

Since the strike ended, the Bears, behind quarterback Jim McMahon, have had to resort to the passing game for victories of 27-26 over Tampa Bay and 31-28 against Kansas City. They fell behind Tampa Bay 20-0 and behind Kansas City 14-0 and 28-14.

Center Jay Hilgenberg, also a two-time All-Pro starter, doesn't think falling behind puts any more pressure on the offensive line.

But Hilgenberg rather likes the Bears' new image in which the team is averaging 186.6 yards passing to 121.3 rushing. "We've been behind so much that we've become a passing team," said Hilgenberg.

just outside the penalty area. Then came the biggest scare with 7:20 left in the game when Cseri drilled a shot off the far left post. After that, the defense held tight to give Notre Dame its eighth-straight victory at home.

"These kids got that knack of keeping it close," said Grace of his players, who have also gone into overtime six times this season.

The team did not emerge unscathed from the push-and-shove match. Forward Pat Murphy suffered a hamstring injury late in the second half. The extent of the injury is not known.

Stopper Paul LaVigne was slowed by a bruised thigh, courtesy of Valparaiso's Laslo Balla. LaVigne and Balla were going at it all night long, and both received yellow cards.

Giants upset with Candlestick

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO -The defeat of a plan to build a downtown stadium means that the San Francisco Giants will be looking for a new home, club owner Bob Lurie says.

"The Giants will not be in San Francisco," Lurie told a news conference after Tuesday's election defeat of a proposition that would have replaced Candlestick Park with an $80 million ballpark. "There are lots of cities across the country that are dying for the Giants."

Lurie, whose lease on Candlestick expires in 1994, said, "I will be talking to a lot of different communities, starting in 1988. I'll consider anywhere that wants us."

Not everyone believes him. Ex-San Francisco Mayor George Christopher was skeptical. "I don't think it means anything ..." he said of the Proposition W loss.

"We have seen Lurie change his mind before and I don't think anybody believes that he would turn down a downtown ballpark if a site like Third and Mission were made available ..." said Dan Woodhead, president of the Downtown Ballpark Boosters Club, adding that there is plenty of time for more negotiations on a new stadium.

It has long been Lurie's contention that the Giants, traditionally one of the worst teams in the National League in terms of attendance, would do far better if they played in a stadium that was not as chilly, windswept and inaccessible as Candlestick.

"A lot of improvements have been made, but you can't put earrings on a pig," said Giants catcher Bob Brenly. "It's always going to be windy and it's always going to be cold."

But fans did turn out this past season, breaking all past records as 1.9 million watched the Giants capture the NL west title.

Should the contributions fail, they warned, the city's hotel tax funds would be tapped, however.

game," Holtz said of Saturday's Notre Dame-Boston College earlier in the week. "For the last year, it's all I've heard about any time I talk to someone from that part of the country. It may not be for the national championship, but you'd never know that from the interest that's been shown."

Whether or not the interest stems from the fact that a number of Notre Dame students live in the Boston area, or the fact that the contest pits the two Division I Catholic football schools against one another, I'm sure the last meeting between the schools has something to do with it.

It was billed as the "Vatican Bowl."

The 1983 Liberty Bowl was decided by the success and failure of the placekickers after the six touchdowns scored. Boston College missed its first on an icy field, and then failed to convert on two-point attempts after its next two scores.

The Irish, meanwhile, connected on their first PAT and had the last two blocked. That one extra point and a 111-yard day by tailback Allen Pinkett were enough for a 19-18 victory over Doug Flutie and the Eagles.

The only other time the two schools met, in 1975, Dan Devine rolled to a 17-3 victory over BC in his first game as head coach of the Irish.

Santiago wins National League Rookie of the Year

Associated Press

NEW YORK -San Diego catcher Benito Santiago, who hit safely in 34 straight games to establish a first-season record, was a unanimous selection as the Jackie Robinson Rookie of the Year in the National League, the Baseball Writers Association of America announced Wednesday.

Santiago, who batted .300, hit 18 home runs, drove in 79 runs and stole 21 bases, received 120 points, while runner-up Mike Dunne, a pitcher for the Pittsburgh Pirates, had 66 points-drawing 22 second-place votes.

Pitcher Joe Magrane of the St. Louis Cardinals finished third with 10 points.

Two writers from each of the league's 12 cities participated in the voting, which was conducted at the end of the regular season. Points were awarded on a 5-3-1 basis.

Santiago, a native of Puerto Rico, became the fifth NL rookie to be acclaimed unanimously. The others were Frank Robinson, Cincinnati, 1956; Orlando Cepeda, San Francisco, 1958; Willie McCovey, San Francisco, 1959; and Vince Coleman, St. Louis, 1985.

Mark McGwire of the Oakland Athletics was named American League Rookie of the Year on Tuesday. He also was a unanimous selection.

Santiago broke Jimmy Williams' all-time rookie record of hitting in 27 straight games for the 1899 Pittsburgh Pirates. The modern record had been Guy Curtright's 26 straight with the 1943 Chicago White Sox.

Santiago's streak was stopped on the last Saturday of the season by Los Angeles Dodgers right-hander Orel Hershisier.

Santiago is only the fifth catcher--and the first in 15 years--to be selected the top rookie. The others were Johnny Bench and Earl Williams in the NL, and Thurman Munson and Carlton Fisk in the American League.

Soccer flat in win: Morris gets record

By PETE GEGEN
Sports Writer

It shouldn't have been so close, but a flat Notre Dame soccer team escaped with a 2-1 victory over Valparaiso Wednesday night at Krause Stadium.

The Irish managed to win their 15th game of the season, only after holding off a Crusader rush in the final minutes.

"We just didn't play well," said Irish head coach Dennis Grace. "Valparaiso wanted it. They looked like they were going for the NCAA bid and not Notre Dame."

This match did not help Notre Dame's chances of making the NCAA Tournament. The team will have to win its final two regular-season matches this weekend against Marquette and Ohio State, and hope that misfortune strikes Akron and Evansville, in order to get an invitation.

However the win did break Notre Dame's three-game losing streak, and it also broke forward Randy Morris out of his assist "slump." After a four-game dry spell, Morris assisted on both goals to set an Irish record for most assists in a single season with 17.

Morris worked a perfect cross to forward Bruce "Tiger" McCourt for the first goal at the 26:11 mark. McCourt sent the pass into the right-hand corner for his 12th goal of the season.

Despite the score the Irish were not in control of the game. In the second half Crusader midfielder Zenon Horb hit two rockets from outside 30 yards, the second one necessitating a diving save by Irish keeper Dan Lyons.

But Lyons could not stop an arching shot by Valparaiso's Mickey Cseri at the 77:47. The shot came from a direct kick

Midfielder Randy Morris (right) and the Notre Dame soccer team eked out a 2-1 victory over Valparaiso last night, with Morris setting a single-season assist record in the process. Pete Gegen has the story at left.

Volleyball team nips Eastern Michigan in five games

By BRIAN O'GARA
Assistant Sports Editor

At times, it appeared as if nobody really wanted to win this one. Until the fifth game.

With last night's match tied at two games each, the Notre Dame volleyball team pounced on the visiting Hurons of Eastern Michigan in the fifth and final game, clinching the match with a convincing 15-4 win.

That fifth game win was one of the only convincing aspects of the evening. Both teams traded side-outs several times, having trouble putting the opposition away.

In the opening game, Eastern Michigan jumped out to a 5-2 lead before the Irish rallied to take a 9-6 edge behind service aces by senior Kathy Baker and junior Maureen Shea. Eastern Michigan battled back to knot the score at 12 and 13, but Notre Dame pulled out the win with an ace by senior setter Kathleen Morin and freshman Amy White's solo block of a Huron kill.

In game two, Eastern Michigan's blockers seemed to be everywhere, or at least everywhere Irish hitters were aiming the ball. Notre Dame jumped ahead 5-4 but the Hurons reeled off nine straight points en route to a 13-5 lead and eventual 15-7 win to knot the match at two.

Junior Zanette Bennett opened the third game with two quick kills, giving the Irish a side-out and 1-0 lead. White doubled that lead with one of her three service aces on the evening, and Notre Dame continued to hold off the feisty Hurons while taking a 6-3 lead. The Irish began to have trouble with Eastern Michigan's consistent blocking game, and saw too many blocked volleyballs fall on their own side of the net as the Hurons tied the game at nine.

Two kills and a solo block by a spirited Shea gave the Irish a shot in the arm and a 14-9 lead. The visitors again held tough, forcing Notre Dame's net players to hit long and close the gap at 14-13. Not to be denied, Bennett finished off the game with one of her game-leading 25 kills. Irish-two games to one.

Game four began with the same preliminaries, a brief Notre Dame lead that dwindled into a 6-6 tie. Junior Mary Kay Waller kept the Irish hopes alive with three kills for Notre Dame side-outs, but the Irish could not garner any points when serving and the Hurons jumped ahead, 12-9. Two kills by Bennett surmounted a long string of side-outs and a Waller block tied the game at 12. The tie extended to 14 before the Hurons put the game away, 16-14, and it was on to game five.

The fifth game was all Notre Dame. White began the rout with an ace, followed by a service error. The Irish not only out-scored Eastern Michigan last night, but out-errored them as well. Notre Dame committed 19 service errors to the Hurons' nine, 41 hitting errors to their 15. But the most important edge was the final score as the crowd filtered out of the gym.

The Irish jumped ahead 3-0, fell behind 4-3, then tallied 12

Rice, Brown, others OK for Boston College

This is getting to be a habit. And one Notre Dame head coach Lou Holtz wants to break.

No injuries as serious as the broken collarbone suffered by senior quarterback Terry Andrysiak four weeks ago against Pittsburgh have plagued the Irish lately. But nagging injuries to key players have made life difficult for Holtz in practice, although the results haven't shown come game days. And this week, nagging injuries have resulted in another decision for Holtz as to a starting quarterback for Saturday.

All-America flanker Tim Brown and starting quarterback Tony Rice were among a large group of players who missed practice Monday and Tuesday, only to return Wednesday. The pattern is getting ridiculous, and is making Holtz' weekly press conference every Tuesday sound like a broken record.

"(The injury situation) is reaching a point where it's going to hurt us," Holtz said Tuesday afternoon, expressing concern about the number of players who missed practice Monday and Tuesday. Rice missed practice early last week as well, after suffering a mild concussion against USC.

The list was a larger one this time, including Brown (broken left ring finger), Rice (ankle), split end Pat Terrell (ankle), defensive linemen Mike Griffin (back and ankle), Tom Gorman (illness) and Ted FitzGerald (ankle), and offensive linemen Tom Rehder (ankle) and Jeff Pearson (back).

All but Pearson were back in action Wednesday, and the sophomore is expected to be ready for Saturday's game against Boston College.

The players always seem to be ready by Saturday afternoon. And it's tough to second guess a 6-1 record against perhaps the toughest schedule in the nation.

Marty Strasen

Assistant Sports Editor

But you've got to wonder how much the team's timing and chemistry (there's that word again) are improving when all those players are missing half a week of practice time.

"It's hard to retain any kind of consistency when you don't have the right guys in there," Holtz said Tuesday.

The Irish haven't started the same defensive line since the third week of the season against Purdue. Griffin, Jeff Kunz and Bryan Flannery had on the first-team gold uniforms in practice Wednesday.

As for the quarterback situation, Holtz announced after Notre Dame's 56-13 thrashing of Navy that Rice was the starter and freshman Kent Graham the backup. But Graham filled in well Monday and Tuesday, and Holtz announced earlier in the week that the freshman might open up against the Eagles.

"It's too early to say," Holtz said after Wednesday's practice. The last practice before Saturday's contest is today, as the team watches game films on Friday.

"Tony Rice was No. 1 coming out of last week," Holtz continued, "but he missed an awful lot of work. I think both will play, but I don't know who'll start."

The quarterbacks split time with the first team Wednesday.

A good week of practice usually means a solid performance on game day, Holtz said after his squad disposed of the Midshipmen this past Saturday.

Evaluation has been difficult this week. That's just another problem caused by the injuries.

"You can't judge that just quite yet," Holtz explained Wednesday. "It's hard to judge exactly what kind of week of preparation we're having. I think we'll play well, though. At least I hope we'll play well."

"I can't believe the interest in this football
