Ticket shortage scatters freshmen

By PETE GEGEN
Staff Reporter

An unexpected shortage of season tickets has left approximately 300 students with an alternate season ticket set made up of individual tickets regularly sold to alumni.

At 4:30 p.m. the ticket office closed the last of 9,700 season tickets it had set aside for students, said ticket manager Bubba Cunningham.

The rest of the tickets that were wanted tickets got them, thanks to the quick work of Jim Bell, a 20-year veteran of the ticket office. All individual tickets remaining for games, known as 'singles,' were combined in sets of seven, marked "student" and sold as season tickets to students in line after 4:30 p.m.

The problem lies in the location of the seats in the singles packages. The ticket locations are scattered all over the stadium, even within an individual set.

"We're scattered all over the place," said Dillion Hall freshman Brian Mitchell. "For Michigan I'm in section 11, for Miami I'm in section 1. If they had us, I would have gotten there early. But the upperclassmen all said that it didn't matter when we got there, that everyone would get (student section) tickets."

The ticket office had planned on an increase of 300 season tickets over last year's total of 9,400. After Wednesday's sale to sophomores and graduate students, the office believed there would be enough.

"We were within 100 tickets of being on target until today," said Cunningham. "Today we had a lot of upperclassmen who didn't get tickets on their assigned day purchase them. The demand was unbelievable."

Cunningham said every last ticket in the student section was sold, including 'row 62,' which consists of folding chairs behind the last row. Those seats are normally used as replacements for lost season tickets. And of all the singles season ticket packages put together, only 13 remained at the end of the day.

"It worked out— every student who wanted to get in will get in," said Cunningham. "Unfortunately some students will be sitting in section 12

Suchy joins SMC Board of Regents

By LISA MONTPETIT
Staff Reporter

Susan Suchy, a senior business administration and economics major from Oak Lawn, Ill., has been appointed to a one-year term on the Saint Mary's College Board of Regents according to the office of William Hickey, president of the college.

Rose Anne Schultz, chairperson of the Board of Regents, said that Suchy will begin her duties as a full voting member of the board during the regents' fall meeting on campus, October 13-14. In addition, she will serve as a member of the Committee on Student Life and the Committee of Mission.

"I think it's a great honor," said Suchy, adding that the position is "going to have a lot of rewards to it".

Suchy has worked with student admission council, accounting club, collegiate choir, and has served as chairperson for Junior Mother/Daughter Weekend last spring and orientation this fall.

Mary Ellen Smith, director of student activities, who has worked closely with Suchy, described her work with Junior Mother/Daughter Weekend as "just incredible".

"She took a pretty standard weekend and turned it into something very special for everyone," Smith said. "We haven't had a parents weekend like that since I've been here."

Smith added that Suchy "gave 150 percent" to planning and programming even minor aspects such as color schemes and invitations. Smith also stated that Suchy's greatest

Malloy teaches Freshman Seminar

By SARAH VOIGT

Seventeen freshmen this year know Father Edward Malloy as more than just the president of the University; they know him as their Freshman Seminar teacher.

Malloy's section of Freshman Seminar is the first course taught by him since his inauguration as president last September. Due to Malloy's busy schedule, the class meets once a week on Sunday evenings from 7 to 9:30 in the Administration Building.

Why did the University President decide to teach a freshman literature course? "I love to teach. I didn't teach last year because I was new to the job. I always wanted to teach a freshman seminar class because I could control the size," Malloy said.

Before his presidency, when Malloy taught Theology, he often had difficulty keeping his classes a manageable size. "I couldn't turn away students who wanted into my classes," Malloy recalled.

Malloy's decision to teach again came as no surprise to Emil Hofman, Dean of the Freshman Year of Studies.

"Father Malloy has always been thought of one of the most gifted, effective, popular teachers on campus. He loves teaching and interacting with students," Hofman said.

Since this year is designated the Year of Cultural Diversity on campus, Malloy chose cultural diversity and intercul-

Appiah: today's young aren't as racist as parents

By JOHN O'BRIEN

Racism, its complexity, and its subtle appearance in many facets of society were the topic of a lecture last night by Anthony Appiah, a professor at Cornell University and associate director of the Black Fiction Project.

The lecture, "Varieties of Racism," was the first in the "Year of Cultural Diversity" series on campus.

"It is now conventional to express abhorrence to racism, but few people can give an accurate definition of racism," said Appiah. "Racism is not a theory, but an ideology."

Anthony Appiah

Appiah concentrated on the philosophical aspects of racism rather than discuss the topic of racism on campus.

In giving a definition of racism, Appiah distinguished between "intrinsic racism" and "extrinsic racism." Intrinsic racism justifies discrimination by citing inherent differences between individuals, like skin color and other physical features, Appiah said. Extrinsic racism is discrimination on the basis of qualities or perceived qualities of a race.

Appiah accused many racial organizations of extrinsic racism. Movements such as Black Nationalism were singled out not because they excluded members on the basis of race but because they included

Indiana University is cracking down on alcohol use by the members of fraternities. The IU Alumni Interfraternity Council recently passed a resolution banning alcohol from Greek-sponsored events both on and off campus. Last weekend IU officials raided five fraternity houses, confiscating six kegs of beer at one. Formal charges and disciplinary actions will be pursued against this and another house which was charged with minor offenses. No alcohol was found in the other three fraternities. -The Indiana Daily Student

A lesbian marriage has caused an Indianapolis Quaker congregation to sever its ties with its state organization rather than recant the marriage, church officials said this week. Athletes fail in most important game: life

Chris Murphy

Editor-in-Chief

After working in the sports media this summer, I have come to one conclusion. Most professional athletes and their fans need to face a unique dilemma in American sport.

Most sports, at least at the professional level, are arguably being played with the greatest skill and determination ever. But, at the same time, the athletes who are performing at a peak level are failing miserably in life.

Let's take a look back at some of the year's worst stories.

Champion Mike Tyson disposed of the only supposed heavyweight challenger Michael Spinks in just 91 seconds. Since then, Tyson has engaged in a better brawl with Mitch Green outside of, well you figure it out, a 24 hour clothing store (which Tyson says) or a 24 hour nightclub in the Bronx. Earlier, Tyson made quick work of a parking attendant at a concert in Los Angeles and added to his reputation by quarreling with his management, his wife, and his mother-in-law.

The Boston Red Sox have graced the nation's sports pages this summer with their winning streak. But even more has been said about Wade "Delta Force" Boggs who apparently had been running around with Ms. Margo Adams on team road trips for a couple of years, while Mrs. Boggs stayed in Boston raising a family. As this hit the press, Wade had the nerve to say that the marital ordeal strengthened the Boggs family.

That's just great: affairs in the papers, boxing matches in and out of the ring, and rampant drug abuse across the board in sports. What seems to be lacking is some sort of social responsibility an athlete should feel for the people who not only put them on a pedestal, but also indirectly pay his exorbitant salary.

This abuse of sport is just recently coming about, or at least just recently being heard about by the general public. Here's one reason why. It's because athletes have been put above everyone else for so long that if a writer or broadcaster has something bad to say about him, the athlete can deny everything and never speak to the journalist again.

The late Dick Young, a New York Daily News sports columnist, would attest to this. Young felt athletes should be treated like everyone else and once asked Mets' fans to boo Dwight Gooden, a symbol for what was going wrong in sports, upon his return from drug rehab. Mets' fans responded angrily to Young's plea and gave Gooden standing ovations time after time.

At the same time, these wonderful athletes can pad their living comforts by using the press to demand trades, complain about fan treatment, and then write a book about it all. Need I go any further than Brian Bosworth's compelling autobiography "The Boz: The Autobiography of a Modern Day Anti-Hero"? Classy Brian can tell everybody about recruiting abuses, payments to Oklahoma Sooner players, and freebasing cocaine in the locker room on game days, but what about his own steroid use? It's always neat to look back on things everybody, including yourself, did while having a four year free ride but quietly forgetting your mistakes.

The same goes for Lawrence Taylor, the poet laureate and possibly the most intimidating player in the National Football League. If he's not dancing on a quarterback's head, he can usually be found holding out of camp for money apparently used for his on-again off-again drug habit. And in this tough world called the N.F.L., Mr. Rozelle sits Mr. Taylor down for 30 days to get his act together. It doesn't matter that it's happened before or that everyone, except Rozelle and management, knew Taylor was off the wagon this training camp.

These incidents paint a sad picture of American sport today. At a time where we should be celebrating the on-the-field accomplishments of the Tyson, Gretzky, and Canseco, we are muddling through stories of Robin Givens, Norby Walters, and Margo Adams. And the owners apparently cannot persuade themselves or their pocketbooks to take a stand on the athletes' responsibility toward themselves and the people who pay to see them. When's the last time you've seen an owner or coach say that a player has a problem. Instead, it's usually "he'll be back in 21 days."

Athletes are people too. The press hounds them, and it's the press' responsibility to cover them as closely as possible. Both the press and the athletes' salaries are being paid by those who pay attention to them. Unfortunately, a lot of people aren't paying attention.

Spicer stresses greater student accessibility to computers at ND

By MICHAEL WELLS
News Staff

Bringing together all of the computing at Notre Dame under one office and improving facilities will be the major goals of the new Office of University Computing, according to the University's newly appointed Assistant Provost for University Computing Donald Spicer.

The improvement of computer accessibility for students and faculty is an important priority, said Spicer. This will be addressed over the next few months by the opening of two new Macintosh labs.

The first of these is scheduled to open in the basement of the LaFortune Student Center in early October. The new room will contain 50 Macintosh computers.

Spicer also said that an even larger lab, this one to be located in the Hesburgh Library, should be finished over the Christmas break.

Another important task which Spicer has given priority to is the encouraging of "non-traditional" new uses for computers within different departments. This would entail making use of computers to aid research and study in such diverse fields as sociology, graphic arts, and engineering. "I'm very enthusiastic about the direction computing is going to take at Notre Dame," says Spicer. "There's wonderful potential here."

Donald Spicer

Spicer, who left his administrative post at Dartmouth College to accept the newly created assistant provost position at Notre Dame in June, is here largely as a result of the report of a 1986 task force on computing at the university.

According to Spicer, the committee found the university's program severely behind current standards, and one recommendation was the creation of the new office.

"Spicer joins Notre Dame at a time when the improvement of computing capabilities ranks as one of the University's highest priority needs," said Associate Provost Roger Schmitz.

Spicer said that while the new office wants to unify the University's differing computer systems under its direction, the colleges which now have their own computer resources will not have them brought under its control. "We are in charge of new initiatives," Spicer said.

The O'Shaughnessy Macintosh lab, for example, will remain the charge of the College of Arts and Letters. Spicer said, however, that it was just refurbished as a joint venture between his office and the College.

What plans does Spicer have for the near future? The next step after creating the new office is "to address the other recommendations of the task force, which call for a significant financial investment."

Spicer said that the receipt of a grant from a computer firm is expected to be announced shortly, providing some of this funding.

"I think computing at Notre Dame has fallen behind. It's really a matter of providing the overall direction to make it into a modern resource for the students and faculty," said Spicer.

ND mainframe worth less than new PC

By DANNIKA SIMPSON
News Staff

The University is currently looking for a new computer to replace its IBM mainframe, which reportedly is worth only $2,000.

Jim Wruck, director of the University computing center, declined to say how much the mainframe cost or why its value has depreciated so much. He said the computer was purchased and installed "between '83 and '84."

The mainframe, an IBM model 3033, occupies a large room in the Computing Center and Mathematics Building. The model was invented in 1975 and has given the University community years of reliable service, Wruck said.

The Computer Merchant's Blue Book lists the University's mainframe computer at a value of $2,000. That's comparable to the cost of a new personal computer.

Serving as a general timeshare for the University community, the machine transfers electronic mail on campus, as well as throughout the nation. It is also capable of communicating with other computers around the world.

"Until we have something fairly clear to be a proper investment, we'll live with what we have," Wruck said.

About a year ago, a special task force recommended that the University invest between 20 and 25 million dollars in a new computer system, Wruck said.

As for the old system, officials are working to create more work stations for teachers and students as well as updating the Macintosh computer lab in O'Shaughnessy Hall, said Wruck.

A new system would make research easier for students, said Wruck, who added that he would like to see the system become an open resource to the community.

"It does not make sense for a student to have to go to a faculty member to get an account," Wruck said. "We know we have a lot of work to do. We are at the start."

members on the basis of their race, he said.

Appiah said extrinsic racism is similar to loving your relatives not because you want to, but because you should love your relatives. This is wrong, according to Appiah, because "decisions are made on the basis of some established ideology, whether it be wrong or right."

Appiah said that ideologies can convince people to ignore those facts that threaten their beliefs. However, he said, "Sane people can be convinced to avoid partiality," but he also added that the human species is "prone to distortions that show partiality."

While Appiah admitted that racism is an ideology and thus, is hard to eliminate, he cited rational arguments as the only means of combatting racism. Those people who refuse to give up their prejudices despite strong factual arguments have a "cognitive incapacity." This general inability or unwillingness to accept the facts can only be remedied by "sending them to psychotherapy," joked Appiah.

"Education is only one part of a complicated society and we must be modest before taking all of the credit," he added.

Plus grading system debuts

By MAURA KRAUSE
Staff Reporter

A new grading system with plus and minus grades has been implemented by the Academic Council and is currently in effect at both Notre Dame and Saint Mary's College.

This new system was enacted last spring when the Academic Council approved the plan brought forth by the Student Senate in cooperation with the registrar, said Dan Gerlach, a student member of the Council.

"The idea," said Gerlach, "which was discussed at one meeting and voted on at the next, had many (committee members) in favor of it. This high level of interest made it possible for the Council to pass this. The final vote of the Council was very strong in favor of the new system."

The registrar supported the plus and minus grading system for "two main reasons -- 1. because of the strong student interest in it, and 2. Notre Dame was the only school of this

In this new system, an 'A' grade is still the highest possible. Grades of 'B+', 'C+' and 'C-' have been added to the grading scales of both Notre Dame and Saint Mary's. In addition, teachers at Saint Mary's now have the option of assigning a grade of 'D+' The lowest passing grade at both schools is still a 'D' for undergraduate students and a 'C-' for graduate students, Winicur said.

This new grading system will allow "graduate schools and law schools to more accurately compare Notre Dame applicants to other applicants and with it teachers can also more accurately assess students' work," said Gerlach. An "explanation of the new system will be on the back of upperclassmen's transcripts to alleviate confusion," said Gerlach.

Gerlach said that the Council approved the grading plan last spring on the day that the students running for class office were permitted to hang their campaign posters, many of which claimed to be in strong favor of having a system of plus and minus grades initiated.

The grades will first appear on the Fall 1988 grade reports.

First Pershings Leave Heilbronn

U.S. army trucks carrying sections of nine Pershing II missiles roll out of the U.S. Pershing II site Camp Redleg at Waldheide near Heilbronn, West Germany yesterday morning on their way to the United States, where they will be destroyed in the framework of the Intermediate Range Nuclear Forces Treaty. See story below.

First US missiles pulled from Europe

Associated Press

FRANKFURT, West Germany-- Five years after West Europeans took to the streets in massive anti-missile protests, the United States on Thursday began removing its intermediate-range rockets in accordance with a superpower treaty signed last year.

A truck convoy hauled nine Pershing 2 missiles from a base near Stuttgart, and U.S. officials said they would remove the remaining 420 medium- and shorter-range missiles from Western Europe in the next 36 months.

"This is an important event in post-war history," West German government spokesman Friedhelm Ost told a news conference in Bonn.

The stationing of the missiles had sparked huge protests in Western Europe, including a coordinated demonstration in several cities that drew hundreds of thousands of people in October 1983. Deployment of the missiles began the following month.

But the anti-missile fervor waned, and by the time President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev signed their treaty banning intermediate-range nuclear missiles in December, only a handful of protesters was still active in West Germany.

A group of anti-missile activists who came to witness the removal applauded as the 15 U.S. army trucks carrying the missiles left the Heilbronn site in southern Germany, about 35 miles north of Stuttgart.

A rocket motor explosion at Heilbronn in January 1985 killed three U.S. soldiers and injured 16 others. West German news reports said the accident led then-Defense Minister Manfred Woerner to promise residents that Heilbronn would be the first site from which missiles would be removed.

U.S. Navy Cmdr. Gerry Ryan of European Command Headquarters in Stuttgart told The Associated Press: "It's the first time that U.S. intermediate-range missiles have been withdrawn in Europe."

"The remainder of the U.S. Army European-based, intermediate-range nuclear missiles are scheduled to be removed over a 36-month period," he added.

The Soviet Union began removing its missiles from Czechoslovakia and East Germany in February.

Ticket scalping ban enforced this fall

By KELLEY TUTHILL
News Staff

Scalpers beware: the University is no longer going to tolerate individuals making a profit from Notre Dame football tickets.

Ticket Manager Bubba Cunningham said that those found selling tickets for a price higher than face value will be escorted off campus and their tickets confiscated. The ticket office will then be able to use their computers to find the original purchaser. This person will then be denied future ticket sales.

Although scalping of tickets is not against Indiana law, it is against University regulations.

Cunningham said that this year his office has the cooperation of the campus security as well as the city, state, and county police forces. "They're willing to help because they, too, hate to see people walking around with a fistful of tickets," said Cunningham. "These men and their families would like to go to the game also."

The new enforcement of the University's scalping law is a result of a situation that has continually worsened over the years, said Cunningham. "People shouldn't be able to make a profit from Notre Dame tickets considering that my office turns down 140,000 ticket orders annually," he added.

Cunningham cautions all those who exchange or sell their tickets at face value to be sure the tickets will be used by that individual and not scalped. "Simply put, one should only purchase tickets to the games they want to go to."

A new system has been developed to alleviate the problem of individuals with extra tickets on game day. Cunningham said that the tickets can be brought to a window outside of Gate 14 where they will be resold.

The ticket owner would fill out a card so that he or she could be reimbursed for the afternoon after the plane crashed at Dallas/Fort Worth Airport earlier in the day.

amount of the ticket. This window will be open two hours before kickoff. This is to help alumni who are constantly unable to get tickets and previously forced to buy them from scalpers.

Another change that will affect Notre Dame football fans is the new policy of no reentry to the stadium. 'Pass outs' will only be given in emergency situations, said Cunningham.

'Bull pens', fenced-in areas consisting of restrooms and concession buildings, will be set up outside the stadium at the southeast and southwest gates.

This policy of no reentry was developed to make the atmosphere more enjoyable for viewers, said Cunningham. Cunningham also said that this is consistent with 95 percent of the stadiums across the country.

Bradley, candidate Bayh visit South Bend, set stage for debate Wednesday at ND

Associated Press

SOUTH BEND-- Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., parlayed his NBA career into cheers of approval before a partisan crowd of Hoosier Democrats gathered yesterday to support Evan Bayh for governor.

"Evan Bayh is going to win this election and is going to be the first Democratic governor of Indiana since 1964," said Bradley.

Bayh watched approvingly as Bradley echoed the secretary of state's campaign themes of government frugality, better education and improved health care before hundreds of St. Joseph County party activists.

Bayh and Bradley spent nearly 90 minutes at the airport rally and fundraiser before leaving for Fort Wayne and a similar appearance before Allen County party faithful.

Bradley, who played basketball with the New York Knicks before winning his Senate seat in 1978, compared his high school basketball career in Missouri to the plot of the movie, "Hoosiers," in which a smalltown team wins the state championship.

Before he ruffled off an autographed basketball, Bradley recalled the story of a fan who supposedly threatened to kill Bradley's dog if the Knicks lost again to the Boston Celtics. Bradley wrote the fan that he had no dog, and weeks later a gift dog arrived with a message warning: "Bradley, don't get too attached to this dog."

"And you know what I would say to the Republicans in the state of Indiana who think the governorship is their right?" he asked. "Don't get too attached to the Statehouse."

Bradley claimed a Bayh administration would emphasize home health care for the elderly and better health care for poor women and infants, but maintaining control of taxes and spending.

"Can you imagine any politician who gets into office, and the first thing he does in office is cut his own budget?" Bradley asked, bringing up a Bayh policy that has since become part of Bayh's campaign advertising. "That's what Evan Bayh did."

tural experience as the theme for his seminar. "I want to provide a context of reading and writing to help the class use various media to experience cultures other than their own," Malloy said.

The syllabus for Malloy's class includes seven novels, one play, and two movies. The reading list includes such varied works as Elie Wiesel's "Night", James Joyce's "A Portrait of an Artist as a Young Man", and Turgenev's "Fathers and Sons".

Even the Freshman Seminar students themselves supplement the theme of cultural diversity. The seventeen freshmen represent many different minority and ethnic groups.

Do any of these freshmen feel intimidated by their teacher's "other job"? Not if Malloy can help it. "By the end of the first class I had all of my students learn each others' names. I want them to feel comfortable with each other," Malloy said.

Father Malloy seems enthusiastic about his teaching debut as President. He said, "I have a lot of confidence in the students in a class this small. I always enjoy the dynamics of the classroom."

Abortion debate lacks Christian context

A recent article in the Observer concerning abortion and the question of morality surrounding it seems to indicate that there is a definite lack of knowledge of Catholic moral teaching on the issue. It would seem reasonable that in a Catholic university any issue that we address regarding faith and morality should be discussed in light of the authoritative teaching of the Church. After all, Christ did establish the Church, and He gave her the authority to instruct. Unfortunately much discussion about abortion, even in Catholic circles, is done without any regard to the teaching of Christ through His Church. Thus the arguments presented are often seen to be severely flawed. I shall speak of three areas in which this problem is most evident.

John Raphael, Jr.

The first misconception is the debate concerning when exactly human life begins. Because there is medical controversy over this, it is often presented as an argument in favor of abortion. However this is not a valid supporting argument in for the morality of abortion. In the "Pocket Catholic Dictionary," by Father John Hardon, S.J., direct abortion is defined as "any destruction of the product of human conception, whether before or after implantation in the womb. . . . As a willful attack on unborn human life, no matter what the motive, direct abortion is always a grave moral evil. . . . The essential sinfulness of direct abortion consists in the homicidal intent to kill innocent life. This factor places the controverted question as to precisely when life begins, outside the ambit of the moral issue; as it also makes the now commonly held Catholic position that human life begins at conception equally outside the heart of the Church's teaching about the grave sinfulness of direct abortion." Thus, it can be seen that for one who claims to be Catholic, the question of abortion is neither ambiguous nor debateable. The distinction often made between atrocities such as the Holocaust, heinous crime that it was, and abortion is irrelevant to the moral question -- and furthermore, any argument which places the unborn out of the realm of human life. Thus, allowing direct abortion is completely inconsistent with Christian moral teaching.

The second point that I would like to discuss is a rather short but very important one. Often it is presented as an argument in favor of abortion that other unborns, or even newborns, can be aided by organs of the aborted. It is also said that in the case of incest or rape, an abortion should be allowed. The premise behind these arguments is the same; namely, that one should do evil in order to bring about a good. St. Paul in his letter to the Romans (Rm. 3:8) teaches that the Christian is forbidden to act in this way; thus, again it is seen that in light of Catholic morality this argument is invalid.

The third point often brought up is that by not allowing a woman to choose to have an abortion, her rights are violated. Thus anyone opposed to abortion is sexist. Our late Holy Father Pope Paul VI had this to say on the subject: "Respect for human life is called for from the time that the process of generation begins. From the time that the ovum is fertilized a life is begun which is neither that of the father nor of the mother. It is rather the life of a new human being with its own growth." Consequently, "divine law and natural reason exclude all right to the direct killing of a human being" (Declaration on Procured Abortion, III, 12). The question is not then one of denying certain women their rights; rather it is one of denying a whole class of men and women, the millions of aborted unborns, their rights. As long as we are innocent, no one has the right to take our lives. Yet there are those who, on a false understanding of human rights, would take the innocent lives of the unborn. Those who claim that women (or men who consent) have the right to abortion, also claim the right to sin because Catholic morality regards direct abortion as a grave moral evil.

As Christians we are called to be the salt of the earth. We must not go flat. We have the responsibility to bring Christ and His saving precepts into the world. We cannot be guided in faith and morality by a world that has made leaps and bounds in technological advances, but has also regressed to the renunciation of God and fallen into moral blindness. We must proclaim to the world that Christ is the way, truth and life. And we do this by proclaiming moral truth in all areas and concerning all issues. This means that, with regard to abortion and other issues, we owe it not only to our society, but also to God to proclaim the truth concerning abortion. This is the Spirit and letter of Vatican II: The Council proclaims:

"Whatever is opposed to life itself, such as any type of murder, genocide, abortion, euthanasia and willful self-destruction. . . all these and others of their like are infamies indeed. They poison human society, but they do more harm to those who do them than to those who suffer the injury. Moreover they are a supreme dishonor to the Creator." (Gaudium et Spes, 27).

The Second Vatican Council reaffirmed the constant teaching of the Church. As Catholics what more do we need besides the word of God as taught to us by the faith? How can we call ourselves believing Catholics if we disagree with something the Church so firmly teaches? One would have to assume that many Catholics today are simply unaware of what the Church teaches. They simply do not realize this is not an issue of choice, and that to entertain that direct abortion is morally permissible is completely inconsistent with Christianity. Often, appeals are made to compassion when dealing with abortion and other sensitive issues; this is correct. Compassion, however, does not mean taking the path of least resistance nor that of maximal convenience. It means, as the Latin root makes clear, to suffer with. Always, we must beseech the mercy of God and ask Him for the grace to overcome our adversities, but we show no compassion -- in fact, we do the greatest harm to all involved -- when we turn away from the saving precepts of our Lord.

ROTC inconsistent with Catholic beliefs

Dear Editor:

I read with fascination Major S. A. Lindsey's Viewpoint column in the Aug. 26 Observer. While it never achieves precision, the column's apparent design is to express its author's anxiety about a recent examination undergone by the University's ROTC programs, undertaken by twelve University faculty members and underwritten by the University's Provost. Major Lindsey fears that the publicity surrounding the examination and subsequent "Report on Ethical Aspects of the ROTC Program" might afflict impressionable readers with a suspicion that "the military is the only profession with moral or ethical challenges." To dispel this, the Major presents an exotic catalogue: mandatory drug testing in the Marine Corps, the military chaplaincy, service fundraising drives, and the oath to defend the Constitution ("a pretty moral and ethical document"). He concludes that "Christian values should pose no spiritual dilemma to Notre Dame midshipmen." He describes those of us who have misgivings about the appropriateness of ROTC on a Catholic campus as "moralists," and I suspect that his use of the term is derisive.

The word "killing," the major reminds us, cannot be found in any Department of Defense mission statement. I don't doubt him. The word is missing from most pro-abortion rhetoric, too. "Exploiting" is probably absent from Playboy's editorial statement of purpose, too. So what? Military organizations are designed to kill people for reasons of state. It may be possible to be simultaneously a Christian and an effective soldier, but it should be crystal clear that military science will always be profoundly at odds with a faith which respects no national boundaries and insists that all human beings, even the major and I, are sons and daughters of the same father.

Parents thank SMC Orientation

Dear Editor:

We would like to express our sincerest thanks to the Saint Mary's administration, the Orientation '88 Committee, the student body, and parents for the Orientation '88 weekend. The weekend was well organized, informative and caring. Because of everyone involved it was less difficult leaving our daughter at her new home. We will miss her but are confident she will realize her potential at Saint Mary's College.

Doc's golden discovery

accent writer

Years ago, Doc Pierce sold bottles of a potion called "Golden Discovery," which was actually booze but sure made his patients feel good.

Today, Doc Pierce's restaurant will undoubtedly be a golden discovery to those who haven't tried it yet.

The warm, rustic atmosphere of Doc's—which is friendly and casual, yet romantic at the same time—creates the perfect setting in which to enjoy a relaxed, excellent meal from appetizer to dessert. (For those desiring a really intimate meal, Doc's has one booth that seats only two people side by side at the table.)

One suggestion—make reservations a day in advance. Those without reservations are still seated, but not before a lengthy wait. If you do have reservations and are not seated on time, the Doctor will furnish cocktails while you wait. We, however, were seated nearly a half hour before we were supposed to have been seated.

If perfection is possible in a meal, Doc Pierce's achieved it. We started off the evening with a bottle of Sauvignon Blanc ($9.00), a white wine that would enhance any meal, especially the fish or chicken dishes.

A huge portion of potato skins ($3.25), topped with melted cheese, bacon bits and served with sour cream, began the meal. The skins were excellent and are ideal for two to share. Other tempting appetizers on the menu are the sauteed mushrooms ($2.45), french onion soup au gratin ($1.95) and cocktail delights ($3.95 or $7.45), which are unpeeled shrimp simmered in beer and available by the quarter or half pound.

The entrees alone would be enough to satisfy the hungriest person and are amazingly low-priced for the quantity and quality of the food, including a tossed salad, hot bread and choice of baked potato, steak fries or rice.

The salads were enormous, covering what would be a normal dinner plate. The bleu cheese dressing was delicious, containing large chunks of cheese, and the homemade croutons—deep-fried with parmesan cheese, garlic and seasoning salt—were the highlight of the salad.

The orange roughy ($8.95) was absolutely fantastic. The large, mild filet, baked with a sour cream and parmesan cheese topping, was cooked to white, flaky perfection and served with lemon and melted butter on the side. With a baked potato (easily six inches long) served with sour cream and butter, the dinner was one of the best I've ever eaten.

The chicken mornay ($7.95) was equally delectable and prepared in an equally generous portion. The fresh boneless breast of chicken was sauteed in herb butter and white wine and topped

For over 100 years the Administration Building with its brilliant Golden Dome supporting the majestic statue of the Virgin Mary has been the heart and the focal point of this University. The statue and dome symbolize the ambitions and dreams of 28-year-old Father Edward Sorin who founded the University in 1842 and named it Notre Dame in honor of his special patroness, Our Lady.

According to Thomas J. Schlereth's book, "The University of Notre Dame: A Portrait of Its History and Campus," the story of the Dome begins in 1844 when construction was completed on the first main building. This building was the basis of Father Sorin's young University and the site where the majority of the institution's activities took place. Academic instruction was from elementary to college preparatory, with only about 12 college level students.

But Father Sorin envisioned bigger things for his University. So, in spite of tight finances, he decided to expand Notre Dame in 1863 by reconstructing the original building, and replacing it with a grander, more impressive structure topped by a white dome and statue.

All of the classrooms, dormitories, and faculty sleeping quarters, as well as the library, museum and dining halls were situated in the new main building. When fire destroyed the still new main building and four adjacent structures on April 23, 1879, most people assumed that the staggering financial loss would mean the end of Notre Dame. However, the now elderly Sorin was determined not to give up on what he had put his entire life into developing. Four days after the fire, he addressed the community and declared his intention to rebuild the University.

The April 22, 1879 edition of the South Bend Tribune quoted Sorin as saying, "Tomorrow we will begin again and build it bigger; and when it is built, we will put a gold dome on top with a golden statue of the Mother of God so that everyone who comes this way will know to whom we owe whatever great future this place has."

Fundraising committees were formed immediately, and donations were collected from all over the United States. The following week, 30 architects submitted their drawings for a new main building. After the selection of a design by W.J. Edbrooke of Chicago, the ground was broken on May 17. Three hundred laborers worked for 16 hours a day to ensure that the building would be ready for the opening of the fall semester.

The students at Saint Mary's showed their support of the rebuilding by donating the 19-foot 4,000-pound cast iron statue of Mary. The statue was made by Giovanni Meli as a replica of a statue erected by Pius I in Spagna in Rome.

In September of 1879, months after the building, minus the wings and the dome, the returning students found the money was being done, the statue placed on top of the front entrance.

It used to be that a priest being changed from one parish to another would receive his marching orders on Tuesday. He was expected to fold his tents like the Arabs and silently steal away to his new rectory, reporting to his new boss on Saturday, ready to hear the afternoon confessions. A modern priest might need that much time to get his bar supplies packed and delivered.

Why must a modern priest spoil himself with the knick-knacks of luxury and impedimenta that slow him down more than an albatross around his neck? One priest I know had an excuse for buying a Cadillac: "Nothing," he said, "is too good for the Blessed Sacrament," meaning that when he brings the Eucharist to the sick, the Real Presence needs leg room that you can't find in a cramped little Volkswagen. Who can question this man's respect for Jesus?

In honesty, I am not so religious. I have pictures I point to when I'm trying to establish my identity as a sensitive person deserving of respect. I'm sorry to be leaving PW; that goes without saying. I'm excited to be moving into Stanford, because it's been a part-time home to me for 20 years. The sorting out of my emotions will have to wait until later, however. Right now, I feel crushed by the logistics of relocating books, clothing, records, keepsakes, and junk I've been collecting since I was ordained.

My dog, Darby O'Gill II, is very confused by the commotion; he's afraid, I think, that I'm leaving him behind, because his toys and dishes are still in the old room, and he can only find a water bowl that doesn't have his name on it in the new digs. He keeps staring me in the face to ask me what's happening. How can I convince him we're in

The old-fashioned priest would consider that owning a stereo, a television set, three radios, four typewriters, dozens of records, hundreds of books, plus other miscellaneous treasure costing a pretty penny, plus a closet full of clothes which, if stitched together end to end, would cover as much ground as the main tent used in a three-ring circus—the old-style priest, having so much transitory stuff to care for, would

Confessions of a Pop Group, the latest release from The Style Council, looks at first glance like another case of European pretentiousness. With this particular album The Style Council appears to be challenging the listener to properly place the group somewhere in the musical spectrum.

It is obvious both from the album notes and the album itself that the group is moving away from its pop-oriented cast into a more jazz and instrumental strain. Yet, the album is named Confessions of a Pop Group, which seems to suggest that the music produced on it should be the mainstream. The album notes claim that if we were all conscientious music listeners, this is what we would listen to all the time (a strong statement from a group whose highest American chart position is just into the top 60).

One has to think that Confessions indicates an attempt at a lyrical message that will respond to this claim. Unfortunately, all too often substance is provided by brooding black and white cover shots. Seriousness is all well and good; after all, each generation of bright intellectuals needs someone (or more than one someone) to say nice things nicely. Sooner or later though, they have to provide a little steak with their sizzle. The sizzle is of course the delicious sound, but the steak is hardly enough to feed a soul on the Lost Hope Diet. "To busy living in the past to live in the future" (from the title track) doesn't sound as if a great thinker is in our midst.

None of the oh-so-considered doodlings offered on this album approach the much more lively, fun spirit of the group's earlier songs, especially their mild American hit "Shout to the Top."

Let's not forget, though, that sizzle is still important. On this level The Style Council seems very well named. Style drips from this album. The vocals are haunting on the ballads and inspiring on the upbeat tunes, especially the female voice that seems to have appeared from nowhere. (There is no mention, only a photo of her to be found on the notes.) The instrumental pieces are clever and keep your attention in a way that "the Wave" doesn't. The songs are just plain beautiful. There is no other way to describe them. Plenty of strings and piano parts mix and accent quality harmonies—something rare in music today. Without a doubt, Confessions has true technical excellence.

The quality music makes it hard to dislike this group, even if they lack true substance. After all, finding substance is not an easy thing to do. Nevertheless, there is something scary about liking this album. On the one hand, it is wonderful listening. The music is pleasantly moody. It constantly brings to mind well-dressed people sipping cocktails and discussing Allan Bloom. But Style Council is the kind of gin-and-tonic music your parents probably would like and, let's face it, that's pretty frightening.

extended. The dome is a free-standing structure with a brick foundation and iron skeleton and a wood facade. The Administration Building's completed dimensions are 320 feet by 155 feet and from its base to the top of the statue, it towers 206 feet above the ground, the highest building on campus.

For over a its century of existence the Administration Building has had more diverse uses than any other building at Notre Dame. The basement, which was once used for trunk storage, classrooms, lavatories, and dining halls now is the location of the purchasing department, the cashier's office, the admissions office and the comptroller's office.

On the second floor, where the main entrance is located, the president's and vice president's offices, sleeping rooms and parlors were once where Information Services is today. The Provost's Office was formerly the University Parlor where concerts and receptions were held.

The third and fourth floors were used for dormitories. In addition, the fourth floor housed the library. Architecture, sculpture, mechanical drawing and photography were taught on the fifth floor, which is now closed to the public due to fire hazards.

In addition, the fifth floor was the location of the University museum and various academic departments. Finally, there were originally two chapels and 22 classrooms scattered throughout the building.

The history of the multipurpose Administration Building is filled with numerous traditions. For example, The use of the main front steps used to be restricted to only visitors, faculty and alumni. Commencement exercises were held in the main building with a procession down the front steps. Only after successfully completing a degree program was the graduate considered equal enough to ascend the steps and smoke on the porch with his professors.

Over the years there have been several proposals to demolish or reconstruct the Administration Building, but just as Father Sorin's dream of establishing a prominent Catholic University refused to be squelched by various hardships, the Dome remains standing, as a bright symbol of our University's tradition and future.

excuse for being is that they are delightful; in the evening, when I'm tired, I look at them, and feel rested.

I have books that I will never have time to read, and records and tapes I have listened to once and will never be tempted to hear again. I have ephemera I bought on shopping days in London when I was feeling homesick and spending money seemed to be the best way of killing time. I have stacks of things that were given to me, some of which I can't get rid of fast enough; others that I know friends will check to see if I still have when they look in curiosity around my room.

My main excuse for being devoted to Lladro figures and Havilland plates of unicorn tapestries in the Louvre is that I would like to have a modest estate to leave my nephew when I die. Celibacy can be a real pain if you don't have relatives who want to inherit your watch and the brass plaques with your name on them. My nephew already has a watch, he tells me; if he considers my watch expendable, he is not apt to be excited over the trophy that honors me as the Senior Class Fellow of 1973. Lladros and unicorn plates will be something his wife can enjoy, so I guard them as heirlooms charming enough for the family to hold onto. Maybe my superiors, reading this column, will regard it as a last will and testament, naming my sister's boy as the beneficiary of the left-over valuables in my life that the Holy Cross Community doesn't want.

A Bible verse I memorized as a child is appropriately didactic: "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and a loving nature is better than silver and gold." I believe the verse; however, I wouldn't mind

"Celibacy can be a real pain if you don't have relatives who want to inherit your watch and the brass plaques with your name on them."

having great riches, either silver or gold, or valuable property I can't take with me, interest-bearing bonds that I can leave in my will. I gave up all such forms of earthly vanity when I took the vow of poverty. As a replacement, I substituted delicate items that I'm afraid of breaking, instead of working to acquire a spotless reputation and a Christ-like disposition. Now I'm punished by worry over thieves breaking in or moths corrupting the treasure-trove I have set my heart on. I could end up like Marley's ghost wearing chains made from boxes and ledgers he has to drag around through dusty rooms he is doomed to haunt.

Does God really mind if I keep a few pretty things that will become hand-me-downs to my nearest, dearest relative? If I thought He did, I would hold a garage sale, the proceeds of which would go to the missions. Tired as I am from dragging breakables from one dorm to another, I would give them up happily, if I felt that I needed to do so, to save my soul.

Coventry Patmore has a poem he called "The Toys," about a child who has cried himself to sleep after being harshly punished: "...on a table drawn beside his bed/He had put within his reach/A box of counters and a red-veined stone/A piece of glass abraded by the beach/And six or seven shells/A bottle with bluebells/And two French copper coins, ranged there with careful art/To comfort his sad heart."

The boy's father, grieving because he unjustly struck the lad, prays that when he himself lies asleep in death, God will look on him paternally as He remembers "of what joys/He made his toys." Instead of chastising him for his childishness, he hopes God will treat him with tenderness and kindness.

May God think gently of me, wearing myself out over playthings which couldn't be more of a nuisance if they were the rock that old Sisyphus kept pushing up the hill, so that it could roll back down on him as soon as he reached the top.

Irish still unsure about kicking, punting positions

By THERESA KELLY
Assistant Sports Editor

Take five guys with a grand total of two minutes and 39 seconds of playing time, and what you've got is a rebuilding project.

Three walk-ons, a former basketball player and one scholarship holder make up the kicking game for Vinny Cerrato, the Irish recruiting coordinator who works with the punters and kickers during the season.

The key to the Irish kicking game (and everyone else's) is consistency.

"When we all started out, we knew what we needed most was consistency," Cerrato said of his inexperienced crew. "I have to say that every one of those guys has really improved."

This is the second consecutive starting-from-scratch season for Cerrato. Last year, Ted Gradel replaced Irish record-holder (field goals in a game, season and career, attempts in a season, career percentage and season percentage) John Carney at placekicker, and Vince Phelan won the punting job with exactly one collegiate punt on his resume.

Phelan ended up setting a career mark for punting average last season, but both

Reggie Ho

Gradel and Phelan have been lost to graduation.

Stepping into Gradel's shoes (which probably will be too big for him) is junior Reggie Ho, of Kaneohe, Hawaii, who had one successful point-after last season.

"I'm not exactly big in stature," the 5-5, 135-pounder said.

Ho's deadly accuracy may be combined with the stronger foot of sophomore Billy Hackett, the only scholarship kicker on the team.

"I came in very confident this fall," Hackett, a native of Sarasota, Fla., said. "I started having trouble with field goals inside the 30, but I've corrected the problem this past week."

According to Cerrato, Hackett, also the only kicker with game experience (2:39) and Ho may share the kicking duties this season, with Ho taking the extra points and short field goals and Hackett making the longer attempts.

"Billy and Reggie have both come very far," Cerrato said. "Reggie has always been pretty consistent, but he's gotten even better, and Billy has a strong leg. There's a good possibility that we'll be working with both of them, seeing them in the game depending on the situation."

Two seniors and a sophomore are battling for the punting job, and again, consistency is the key. Sophomore Jim Sexton of South Bend has been the most consistent this fall, according to Cerrato.

If the first game were today, what would happen?

"I don't think we'd punt," Sexton said.

"Really, though, I think I've progressed well," he continued. "But then again, so has everyone else. We're all working, all getting better at the same pace."

Also in contention for the punting job is Sean Connor from Ziegler, Illinois. After three seasons on the basketball team, Connor gave up his final season to try out for football.

"It was a tough decision," Connor said. "I've missed football. I haven't really played football since high school, so I'm really excited about this season."

Pete Hartweger of Creve Coeur, Mo., is the final man in contention for the punting job.

"It's been a great fall," he said. "Everything's gone better than I expected. Starting out, I had no idea what would happen; I just knew that everyone had a good chance."

For both the positions, the competition is intense.

"Both those guys have been punting well, especially Jim," Connor said of his competition. "It's going to be tough to get the job."

"Any one of us could be playing at a different school," Sexton said.

Cerrato said a team can't overlook the importance of the kicking game.

"Having a great player on the kicking team is as valuable as having an offensive or defensive star," he said. "Something like one in five plays involves kicking, so you can't underestimate the value. If you get the field position, you gain a real advantage."

"It takes some good people to make the kicking game a weapon instead of a liability."

Baseball roundup

Tigers lose, Red Sox win

Associated Press

DETROIT - Rob Deer's two-run single keyed a five-run fifth inning and Mike Birkbeck won his eighth game since being recalled from the minors as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Detroit Tigers 6-2 Thursday night.

The first-place Tigers, who have lost eight of their last 10, saw their lead in the American League East drop to 1 1-2 games over the idle Boston Red Sox.

Royals 5, Twins 2

MINNEAPOLIS - Mark Gubicza beat Minnesota for the second time in five days with a nine-hitter and Jamie Quirk knocked in two runs, lifting the Kansas City Royals to a 5-2 victory over the Twins Thursday night.

UM's QB is still unknown

Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. - The jury's still out on Michigan's starting quarterback, with five players vying for the position - six, if you count coach Bo Schembechler's tongue-in-cheek candidacy.

Schembechler said Thursday that he hasn't decided who will call the signals against Notre Dame on Sept. 10 in South Bend, Ind.

"You don't want to put a young guy in a bad position," Schembechler told a news conference. "I would say we're probably leaning a little bit toward a veteran. But that doesn't mean that's chiseled in stone."

Demetrius Brown, a junior, started 10 of 12 games last year but threw 16 interceptions, seven at Michigan State. The other quarterbacks are junior Michael Taylor and red-shirt freshmen Wilbur Odum, Eric Bush and Ken Sollom.

Gubicza, 17-7, struck struck out eight and walked none.

Blue Jays 5, Rangers 1

TORONTO - Jimmy Key pitched a six-hitter for eight innings and Ernie Whitt homered, leading the Toronto Blue Jays to a 5-1 victory over the Texas Rangers Thursday night.

Key, 9-4, struck out five and walked two before being relieved by Tom Henke to start the ninth. Key outdueled knuckleballer Charlie Hough, 11-15, who gave up six hits, four walks and five runs in 5 1-3 innings.

Tigers get O's Lynn, but not for post-season

DETROIT - Veteran outfielder Fred Lynn, obtained by the Detroit Tigers as pennant insurance, cannot qualify for postseason play because he missed a deadline for reporting to the club by 10 minutes, team officials said Thursday.

"It's not even a question of 'may not' " be eligible, Tigers spokesman Greg Shea said. "He is not."

Red Sox 4, Angels 2

ANAHEIM, Calif. - Larry Parrish's two-run homer keyed a four-run sixth inning that lifted the Boston Red Sox to a 4-2 victory over the California Angels Thursday night.

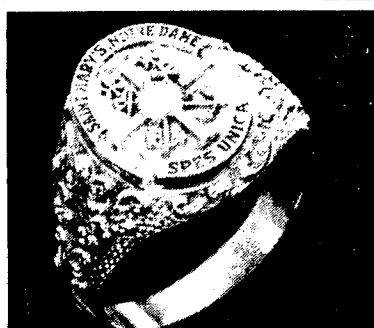

With Boston trailing 2-0 on Wally Joyner's two-run homer in the fifth, Dwight Evans led off the sixth with a single off Terry Clark, 6-3. Evans moved around to third base on a pair of infield groundouts before scoring on Todd Benzinger's single.

Becker's Open ends quickly

Darren (not Ce Ce) Cahill ousts 5th seed in straight sets

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Boris Becker was upset by a lightly-regarded Australian in straight sets at the U.S. Open Thursday while Pam Shriver was ousted by the third best tennis player in the Soviet Union.

Steffi Graf and Martina Navratilova kept form in perspective and cruised into the third round.

Becker, a West German seeded No. 5 and still seeking his first U.S. Open title, was given an unexpected exit by Darren Cahill 6-3, 6-3, 6-2.

Cahill is no relation to Notre Dame sophomore Ce Ce Cahill of the Irish women's tennis team.

"What can you do? it's the U.S. Open and you have to do your best," the two-time Wimbledon champion said. "It's just that my best wasn't good enough today."

Becker's sore feet were sprayed with a freezing substance several times during the match, but it didn't help the fifth seed.

"When I was pushing for a couple of shots, all of a sudden the pain came very strongly. Then I couldn't play the next few points," said Becker, who withdrew from last month's Canadian Open because of similar foot problems.

"All he had to do was hit the ball a little away from the center and I couldn't reach it. I don't think it was a difficult match for him."

Brad Gilbert, who beat Becker in the fourth round at last year's Open, was an upset victim Thursday. The No. 11 seed lost to Jaime Yzaga of Peru 1-6, 6-0, 6-4, 6-2.

Third-seeded Stefan Edberg breezed past Guy Forget of France 7-5, 6-1, 6-3, while No. 2 Mats Wilander got a scare from hard-serving Kevin Curren before prevailing 3-6, 6-3, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3.

"It's tough against Curren because he hits so hard," said Wilander, who is now 12-1 in five-set Grand Slam matches. "I couldn't get any rhythm."

Shriver was eliminated by Leila Meskhi 4-6, 6-1, 6-4.

Graf, going for the first Grand Slam sweep since 1970, beat Manon Bollegraf of the Netherlands 6-1, 6-0, while Navratilova, seeking her third straight Open title, ousted Elly Hakami 6-2, 6-1.

Meskhi, a 20-year-old who is ranked behind Natalia Zvereva and Larisa Savchenko in the Soviet Union, rallied from a 2-4 deficit in the final set and dug out of a 0-40 hole in the final game.

"The idea was to stay as close as possible, not lose my serve and take chances on Shriver's serve," Meskhi said through her translator, Soviet team coach Olga Morozova.

Also advancing to the third round were fifth-seeded Gabriela Sabatini, No. 10 Claudia Kohde-Kilsch and No. 11 Zina Garrison.

Sabatini beat American Beverly Bowes 6-2, 6-0, Kohde-Kilsch eliminated Raffaella Reggi of Italy 6-2, 2-6, 6-4, and Garrison topped Helen Kelesi of Canada 3-6, 7-5, 6-0.

Men's winners included third-seeded Stefan Edberg, No. 8 Miloslav Mecir and No. 10 Henri Leconte.

Edberg beat Guy Forget of France 7-5, 6-1, 6-3, Mecir defeated American Sammy Giammalva 6-4, 6-1, 7-6 (7-5), and Leconte downed Barry Moir of South Africa 6-0, 6-4, 6-4.

Shriver won two tournaments and reached three other finals before coming down with mononucleosis just before Wimbledon. She has struggled ever since, reaching a low point last month with a loss in Los Angeles to 15-year-old Amy Frazier.

tween the two teams. The Hoosiers lead the Irish 3-1 in the lifetime series.

Notre Dame counters the Hoosiers with eight returning monogram winners including five starters from last season's North Star Conference champions. Although the team has posted two consecutive 30-win seasons, it has yet to make an appearance in the NCAA post-season tournament. Head Coach Art Lambert has set his sights on the tournament by handing the team a grueling schedule that includes nine of last year's top 14 teams.

As for Indiana, the Irish hope to avenge last year's loss.

"Last year's match against Indiana," said Coach Lambert, "was our worst hitting game of the season."

"Opening with a win can do more for a successful season than anything," continued Lambert. "The key to our game is passing and ball control, without them, it will be a long season." The nucleus of the team is made up of seniors. Team captain Maureen Shea will handle much of the outside hitting against Indiana along with career kill leader Zanette Bennett.

In the middle, three-year starter Mary Kay Waller will cause opposing hitters to think twice about coming her way. The match will also feature the return of The match also will feature the return of junior Kathy Cunningham, who missed most of last year with a shoulder separation, and the debuts of freshman setter Julie Bremner and hitter Joanna Bruno, who both will start in Saturday's match.

"If we take each match one at a time, we should have a top-20 season," said Lambert.

Aggie QB back home at LSU

Richardson returning to his roots for A&M-LSU skirmish

Associated Press

LSU's official homecoming isn't scheduled until Oct. 29. But it will be a homecoming of a different sort Saturday night when Texas A&M visits Baton Rouge.

Bucky Richardson, A&M's sophomore quarterback, grew up seven miles from Tiger Stadium and "always dreamed about playing there."

But as he grew older, Richardson's dream of starring in an LSU uniform began to fade. He signed with Texas A&M and started five games last season as a true freshman. At LSU, which already had an outstanding quarterback in Tom Hodson, he probably would have been redshirted.

This will be Richardson's first visit to Tiger Stadium in an enemy uniform. LSU coach Mike Archer says he made the

"In recruiting Bucky, I stressed to him that he had to make the decision that was right for him," Archer said. "He made the right decision to go to Texas A&M. He led them to the Southwest Conference championship and the Cotton Bowl last year."

Richardson has no regrets about leaving home.

"You grow and you mature and your horizons are a lot broader once you take your recruiting trips and see everything," Richardson said. "It's just a learning process, and I felt it was best for me to move on."

"There are other programs in the country just like the one you grow up around. I didn't really realize that until I got out and visited and saw the support of all those schools."

"I think the mature players are able to pack up and leave home because they know that's the best thing for them. I'm not saying that people who stay home are immature. I'm just saying that you have to realize what's the best for you. The best for me was coming to A&M."

USC 34, BC 7

NEWTON, Mass. - Rodney Peete's passing set up two touchdowns by Aaron Emanuel and a pair of field goals by Quin Rodriguez Thursday night as eighth-ranked Southern Cal whipped Boston College 34-7 in a 1988 football opener.

Peete, a fifth-year senior who led USC to the Pac-10 championship last year, picked apart BC's secondary while completing 21 of 33 passes for 271 yards and one touchdown.

SMC volleyball readies for season

By JANE SHEA
Saint Mary's Sports Editor

The Saint Mary's volleyball team began its fall play Thursday with a pre-season game against Lake Michigan College in which no score was kept. The exhibition match was used as an opportunity for both teams to rotate all its players into various positions.

"I felt the team came along at the end," said Belles coach Sue Medley, "I am happy with the team's performance."

Lake Michigan came on strong at the start of the scrimmage, but the Saint Mary's teamwork pulled the team together. By the end, the teams seemed evenly matched, and both had their share of good blocks and spikes.

Senior captain Tammy Suth leads the Belles' attack this season. A strong sophomore class also should make its presence known throughout the season.

St. Mary's opens its season Tuesday at St. Joseph's College.

"It will be a hard fought match," said Medley "The teams are about equal."

The Belles hope to improve on a 1987 season that saw Saint Mary's place second in its conference and win the Districts.

"The team's schedule is tougher than last year's but the players are also tougher," said Medley.

Suba scored again at 57:30, and junior K.T. Sullivan finished out the Irish scoring at 74:44 by calmly converting a penalty shot, making the final score 5-1.

Overall, Grace was very pleased with the inaugural game.

"We accomplished everything we wanted to accomplish," he said. "The outside competition has given us an opportunity to see what we need to work on."

The team was very excited about the victory as well.

"We still have to work together a lot," said Suba. "But it's fun, and we're really supporting each other."

The women will travel to Rensselaer on Tuesday, Sept. 6, where they will confront St. Joseph's at 4 p.m. They will return home to Krause Stadium on Sunday, Sept. 18 against Western Michigan at 11 a.m.

Irish soccer halts Ramblers in season-opener

By PETE GEGEN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame soccer team started the season on the right foot with a decisive 4-1 victory over Loyola (Ill.) Thursday night at Krause Stadium.

Seniors Bruce "Tiger" McCourt and John Guignon each had a goal and an assist, and seniors Pat Murphy and Joe Sternberg tallied the other two goals.

But before the Irish could score, the Ramblers brought back thoughts of last season's 2-1 overtime battle when Loyola's Rich Drab kicked in a loose ball in front of the Irish net for the first goal of the game at 15:16.

"I'm disappointed that we gave up that goal and were down 1-0," said Irish head coach Dennis Grace. "But for the most part we played well, and I'm happy we came back the way we did."

Five minutes later, Randy Morris initiated one of the prettiest scoring plays ever seen at Krause Stadium. Morris eluded one Rambler's mark, dribbled around two others and set a perfect pass down the line to Guignon. Guignon topped the play with a perfect pass to McCourt, who headed the ball in for the score.

The Irish got a reprieve on a missed scoring chance three minutes after the tying goal. The referee awarded Notre Dame a penalty kick for a Loyola hand ball in the box, but keeper Brian Closs stopped Guignon's attempt. The referee, however, whistled Closs for moving before the kick, and Guignon made good on his second attempt.

Murphy made it 3-1 when he deflected in Steve LaVigne's pass from the left corner. The play was started by more fancy finesse play in the midfield by Sternberg.

"Our offense is looking good," said Grace. "We'll score a lot of goals and keep it exciting. But we have to also play well on defense. I'm not happy about our marking at midfield and the way we were bringing the ball up from the back."

The offense continued to click in the second half, and Sternberg headed in a McCourt cross to put the finishing touches on Notre Dame soccer's 100th win ever. The Irish also kept alive their string of 11 straight wins at home since moving to Krause Stadium last season.

Senior Kevin Mayo started the game in the first half and earned the win. Junior Danny Lyons, who has been sidelined by an injury to his lower left leg, played the second half. Grace said that he made the switch to give some playing time to Lyons, whose Albuquerque, N.M., hometown does not have summer soccer leagues.

With a 3-1 cushion at the start of the second half, Grace made three other changes in the lineup, starting sophomore Danny Stebbins at forward, freshman Karl Roemer at midfield and freshman Mitch Kern at wingback. Grace continued to freely substitute throughout the second half.

The team leaves this morning for Lafayette, Pa., to play in the Metropolitan Life Soccer Classic. The Irish will face Maine Saturday and the host Leopards Sunday.

Volleyball starts year against IU

By GREG SCHECKENBACH
Sports Writer

Once again, the time has come for jump serves, great digs and overpowering spikes. This means volleyball, Notre Dame style.

The Irish women open their season against state rival Indiana Saturday night at 7:30 in the Joyce ACC Arena.

The Irish move from the Pit this season to the arena, which has a much larger seating capacity. Admission is $1.

Saturday's match will mark the season-opener for both schools, but the intrastate rivals both sport veteran lineups. Indiana returns four starters from last season's 20-13 team, including outside hitter Liz Armbrustmacher, middle blocker Julie Goedde, outside hitter Lisa John and setter Joy Jordan.

Indiana defeated Notre Dame, 15-13, 13-15, 8-15, 11-15 in last season's only match be-

K.T. Sullivan puts the finishing touches on Notre Dame's victory with a converted penalty shot against IUSB. The Irish women's soccer team won 5-1 in its first varsity game ever.

Women top IUSB in first game ever

Soccer team wins first varsity game

By COLLEEN HENNESSEY
Sports Writer

In an historic moment in Notre Dame athletics, the Irish women's varsity soccer team scored a victory over Indiana University-South Bend 5-1 Thursday in its first game at varsity status.

"I'm just happy to have that first one under the belt," said Irish coach Dennis Grace, whose squad gained varsity status last spring.

IUSB started the scoring with a goal at 25:07 of the first half when Cathy Blum picked up a loose ball in the Notre Dame penalty area and beat Irish goalkeeper Kelly McCrystal.

Notre Dame responded seven minutes later as sophomore forward Mimi Suba took advantage of a misplayed IUSB back pass and slammed the ball into the net. The goal tied the score and put Suba's name in the record books with the first-ever goal for the women's varsity soccer team. "It feels great. It's an honor just to be on the team," said Suba, who comes to the squad after a year with Farley's Interhall team. "We have a lot of fun out there."

The third goal of the game, at 38:11 of the first half, put the Irish ahead for the first time 2-1. Junior Joy Sisolak knocked the ball into the goal after a scramble in front of the cage. Susan Haling recorded the assist.

Notre Dame added insurance with one minute remaining in the half. Sisolak fed the ball to freshman forward Susan Zilvitis, who scored to give the Irish a 3-1 lead.

The second half saw the introduction of freshman Karna Spencer in goal, who held her own with several key saves against a sporadic Lady Titan offense. The Irish defense, led by freshman sweeper Molly Lennon, remained largely untested throughout the game.

Irish feeling the heat in pre-Michigan drills

In eight days, the Irish football team opens the 1988 season under the lights at Notre Dame Stadium. As game day approaches, however, the only thing the Irish are under is a lot of heat.

"You're mush," yells a defensive coach at his players after Irish tailback Mark Green pops through a hole for a seven-yard gain. "What's Michigan going to do to you guys?"

Then the defense comes up big, as nose tackle Chris Zorich bursts into the offensive backfield and throws a back for a three-yard loss.

"When are you men going to start playing some football," one of the offensive coaches hollers at the offensive line. "Michigan's defense is twice the size of the people you're letting through!"

There's no winning on the practice field these days, even though Irish head coach Lou Holtz said he has been very pleased with some of his team's recent workouts.

It's often difficult for an onlooker to determine what kind of progress a team is making from watching the players go at each other. But it's easy to see that something is happening on the fields behind the Joyce Athletic and Convocation Center that is worth noting.

There's an urgency in every play. You can feel it.

And you certainly can hear it.

"What the coaches are trying to do is get us ready to play one of the top football teams in the country," said guard Tim Grunhard, a member of the offensive line, which has been under more heat than any other unit on the team. "We expect it at this point. There's not much time left."

"When we're playing against each other, there's got to be a winner and a loser on every play. There's always one side that could have done better on that play. But when we hit Michigan, the winners have to have the golden helmets on. We're getting tired of hitting each other."

Marty Strasen

Sports Editor

But if the Irish were tired of beating up on each other before this afternoon's closed scrimmage in Notre Dame Stadium, chances are they'll really be spent after it's over. Holtz is not even allowing the media into this one.

Don't be surprised if you hear it from the dining hall or your dorm room.

"We're going to be there for awhile," Holtz said. "But when we come out, we're going to be a football team."

Grunhard agreed.

"Mother Mary's going to be watching over us (today), and I think she's going to throw her blessing on us and give us Saturday off after what we're going to go through," the junior said. "When it's over, we can start saving it up for that one big blast against Michigan. I think a lot of people will be surprised at the way we'll come out in that game."

A TOUGH DECISION: The schedule-makers have given Notre Dame fans a tough choice for Saturday night sports entertainment.

The Irish volleyball team opens its season at 7:30 p.m. in the JACC against a tough Indiana squad. Art Lambert's team is coming off consecutive 30-win seasons and looks to avenge last year's 13-15, 15-13, 15-8, 15-11 loss to the Hoosiers.

On the other hand, Notre Dame fans might want to take advantage of the opportunity to yell obscenities at Jimmy Johnson and the Miami football team as the Hurricanes take on No. 1 Florida State at 8 p.m. on WSBT-22. Miami did not lose a game last season, so it should be fun watching the defending national champs get off to an 0-1 start in 1988.
