Hiler and Ward to meet in debate in JACC Thursday

By REGIS COCCIA
Senior Staff Reporter

Students on campus will get a taste of congressional politics Thursday night when the 3rd Congressional District candidates square off in a debate in the Joyce ACC.

Incumbent Republican John Hiler will face Democrat Tom Ward, a Notre Dame graduate, in a one hour debate arranged, sponsored and moderated solely by students.

The debate represents a unique opportunity for students to "make a statement on national politics," said Mike Paese, student body vice president.

"If Notre Dame votes in a block, it will determine the election," Paese said, noting the narrow margin in Hiler's victory over Ward in 1986. The 3rd district race then was the closest congressional race in the nation. Hiler edged Ward by only 47 votes, after more than a two-month recount.

The Notre Dame debate is an important campus event for two reasons, said Mike Keegan, student government's executive coordinator for political, cultural and social concerns.

"We show (Hiler and Ward and the local community) that we're concerned with politics and that we're concerned with

Rep. John Hiler, 3rd Congressional District incumbent, made a special visit to Notre Dame yesterday to talk with students in American Studies Professor Robert Schmuhl's class.

Hiler told students in Schmuhl's "American Political Life" class about his campaign for Indiana's congressional seat and about his opponent, Tom Ward, a Notre Dame graduate.

"It's a difficult balancing act," Hiler said, adding that he has split his legislating with his campaign responsibilities, which officially began last December.

Student assaulted in Dillon over the weekend by two unknown people

By KELLEY TUTHILL
Staff Reporter

A student was attacked and injured in Dillon Hall last Saturday night following the Air Force game.

Phillip Johnson, assistant director of Security, said the assault occurred on Saturday, October 22, at 8:45 P.M. There are two male suspects who were allegedly accompanied by a female, according to Johnson.

Johnson said that the first suspect called out to the Dillon resident as he walked by. The two exchanged words and one suspect struck the student, while the other suspect assaulted the student twice, in the eye and cheek, said Johnson.

Johnson said that following the attack the student retreated and the suspects left. "The student is not on campus, he went home to seek medical attention," said Johnson. "I don't have any additional information on the injuries of the student."

The student was not hospitalized, but he did go to the Student Health Center, according to Johnson.

The first suspect is a black male, six feet tall, with a lanky build. Johnson said that he was also described as having short hair, 19 to 20 years old, and was wearing a grey sweatshirt. Johnson said that the first suspect was intoxicated at the time of the incident.

The second suspect was described as a black male, five feet, ten inches, with a medium build. Johnson said that he has short hair, 19 to 20 years old, and was wearing dark grey.

The third individual present, though not involved in the assault, was described as a black female, five feet, two inches to five feet, four inches, medium build, 19 to 20 years old, according to security.

Johnson said, "Apparently there were people present who saw the suspects and may know something about them."

"We, at this time, have no idea who they were. Any information is important because the injuries were serious enough for the student to go home," said Johnson.

"Right now we are hopeful that someone knows who the people are and what they were doing in the residence hall. We believe that people know who they are and what they were doing," said Johnson.

Any information about the suspects, who they were visiting, or the type of vehicle the suspects left in, should be directed to campus security.

INSIDE COLUMN

Who is the "They" who seems to rule us?

They say you shouldn't wear white shoes after Labor Day. They say you can never be too rich or too thin. They say men reach their sexual peak at age 17. They say these are the best years of our lives.

Well, who are They and why do we listen to them?

Some people take comfort in assuming these people are somewhere in Europe, or the West Coast - stereotypically the trend-setting regions of the world.

When my roommate was four years old, her older and wiser cousin told her there was a big tall building in New York City that had T-H-E-Y spelled in huge blinking neon letters across the top of it and the people who worked there made up all the rules and passed them out to the world.

That's about as good as any explanation for these masters of fad and fashion and omniscients on proper living. The quintessential "They" comprise a pretty powerful force running through our society for a bunch of people we have never met. They control our conduct, our dollars and sometimes our self-evaluation.

I remember when it was absolutely necessary to have a big purple plastic comb with something like "TUSH" written on it in the back right pocket of my skating jeans (without studs) and roller skates with green wheels and matching pom-poms with the little bells in them every Friday night. We'd skate to "Saturday Night" by K.C. and the Sunshine Band, something from The Village People or maybe a couple skate to a Journey ballad.

Everybody who was anybody or trying to be anybody was at the Rollercoast because it was the thing to do. Says who? But we all went, even if we didn't really like to skate.

Now, just because we drive ourselves to slightly different places to congregate with our peers doesn't mean we've shaken the desire to do the in thing in style.

On October 6, my roommates and I counted 87 brown leather flight jackets on Saint Mary's and Notre Dame students at the Saint Mary's Beer Gardens, Senior Bar and The Commons. There were too many people at Bridget's to add to this number.

Last year, it was jean jackets, but it's always something. Hey, everybody needs a coat, right? Why not buy the one They are wearing? You can just picture Them sitting around at a meeting in someplace like Topeka, Kansas, drinking Cappuccino and laughing at what They've created . . . because They know how we feel about committing Faux Pas -- in anything.

But They don't limit Themselves to guiding us through the materialistic fashion world. For some reason, there is also a mysterious authority attached to statements like "They're saying now that both red and white wines are acceptable with all kinds of meat, pasta and fish." Great. Thanks guys. Now, if They can only come up with something about how to get lettuce off our teeth at fancy restaurants without making that gauche saliva sound, we'll be so relieved.

Everybody needs some stability in life, and maybe that's what They're for. Could be. There's a little conformist in everybody. Most of us wear clothes every day and it's nice to have some help choosing them, especially for those of us who aren't really morning people and can't make such decisions at ungodly hours. It's also nice to know we can impress our friends with things They say, like "Everything happens for a reason" and "Money can't buy happiness."

But whoever They are and whether or not They are right, They've got us, because nobody wants to be wrong and nobody wants to be out of it. As long as we all know what They say, we don't need to know who They are.

But if only we knew how to become one of Them, then we'd be in business -- the coat business, the comb business, the music business and the wine business.

Wish your friends a Happy Birthday through Observer advertising.

ND Peace Corps volunteers talk to interested students

By VALLI VAIRAVAN
News Staff

Two returning Peace Corps volunteers were on campus yesterday and today to talk to students interested in joining the Peace Corps after graduation.

Stephen Rypkema, the area Peace Corps representative, and Michael McQuestion, a Notre Dame graduate, both served as volunteers to the Peace Corps in the Philippines.

An information table for the two-year program is set up in the Hesburgh Library concourse and at St. Mary's, in LeMans.

Today, there will be a Peace Corps film and open discussion at the Center for Social Concerns, at 7 p.m. On November 3 and 4, Peace Corps representatives will be on campus to interview interested students.

Rypkema said the Peace Corps is looking for people in sciences, health care, education, engineering, business and liberal arts. Most of the Peace Corps programs require a four-year degree or three to five years of relevant working experience.

Interested seniors and graduate students are invited to apply. The acceptance rate to the Peace Corps is about one out of four or five, according to McQuestion.

Rypkema served in the Peace Corps from 1984 to 1986, in the Philippines, in the Forestry and Agriculture Program.

McQuestion, a pre-med major while at Notre Dame, served three years in the Philippines, from 1974 to 1977, in the Rural Public Health Program. Now, he is the supervisor of PolioPlus, of the Rotary International Foundation.

Notre Dame has a close connection with the Peace Corps. Father Hesburgh, former president of the university, helped in the initiation of the service and is on the board of directors, according to McQuestion.

Notre Dame has a long tradition of volunteers and has one of the highest percentage of applicants of colleges and universities. Last year, 15 Notre Dame graduates joined the Peace Corps.

McQuestion said a common reason Notre Dame applicants cited for joining the Peace Corps was "that they had been given so much in life, and now they want to give some of it back. It is a theological idea, a very sincere one."

The Peace Corps, a U.S. Government Agency, provides volunteers, who share their skills and energy with people of developing countries for a two year period.

Today there are almost 6,000 volunteers working in 66 developing countries, in Asia, Africa, Latin America, and the Pacific.

Reagan creates new federal office of Veteran Affairs

Associated Press

WASHINGTON --Saying America's debt to military men and women doesn't end "the day the uniform comes off," President Reagan signed legislation Tuesday giving veterans a Cabinet-level voice for the first time.

"I'm saying to all our veterans what I say to new Cabinet members: Welcome aboard!" said Reagan, the self-proclaimed enemy of an expanding federal government, who once suggested abolishing the departments of Education and Energy.

Reagan said the bill gives veterans "what they have deserved so long - a seat at the table of our national affairs."

Sitting under a sparkling au-turn sun in front of a columned building of the National War College at Fort McNair, the president signed into law the bill creating the Department of Veterans Affairs, effective March 15.

Spokesmen for veterans organizations applauded the elevation of veterans issues in the councils of government, but noted that the legislation offers no increases in compensation or improvements in health care.

Cooper Holt, executive director of the Washington office of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, said he recalled the day -last Nov. 10- that Reagan signaled he had accepted Cabinet-level status for veterans.

"There were several of us over there at the White House, and we came prepared to make a case," Holt recalled in a telephone interview. "But when he came in, he apparently had decided against some of his advisers, and he said he wanted to do it."

Supporters of the legislation had argued that the Veterans Administration already has the fifth-largest budget among federal agencies.

Eve of election in S.Africa is violent

Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa -- Police used tear gas, rubber bullets and clubs Tuesday to scatter crowds protesting segregated local elections. Anti-apartheid leaders urged blacks to boycott the vote, but without violence.

About 7,000 local offices nationwide are at stake in the elections today, the first time people of this racially separated nation will have cast ballots on the same day.

The 26 million blacks vote only locally and have no voice in national affairs.

President Botha's ruling National Party is expected to lose ground in white elections to the staunchly pro-apartheid Conservative Party, which opposes the government's tentative moves toward reform.

Fewer than 500,000 of the 2.4 million registered blacks are expected to vote, despite an ambitious government promotional campaign.

Low turnouts also are anticipated in townships populated by people of mixed race, officially called "coloreds," and those known as Asians, who are predominantly of Indian descent.

A chamber of the national parliament, with little power, was created for each group in 1984.

About 21 percent of the registered black voters cast ballots in the last black municipal elections in 1983, roughly the same as the number expected this time.

Critics say figures for blacks will be virtually meaningless because so few are registered and no local candidates represent major organizations opposed to the official apartheid policy of racial separation.

Most leading opposition groups are banned and activists generally view black town councils as subservient to the government controlled by South Africa's 5 million whites.

"If we were asked to vote in today's township conditions, we would not do so," the nation's largest daily newspaper, the independent Star of Johannesburg, said in an editorial. "Whatever statistics are squirreled out to justify the legitimacy of elected black councils, they will have no effect on reality."

Archbishop Desmond Tutu and other black anti-apartheid leaders have defied rules of 2-year-old state of emergency in advocating a boycott. Botha's government seeks a high turnout among blacks as support for its claim of "broadening democracy" in South Africa.

More than 1,000 people held an anti-voting rally Tuesday at the University of the Witwatersrand in Johannesburg and many, including black activist Winnie Mandela, marched to a campus gateway.

Riot police ordered them to disperse, then fired tear gas and rubber bullets. Authorities said there were no injuries or arrests.

Wages and inflation have shown marked increase in past year

Associated Press

WASHINGTON -- Wages in the past 12 months have risen an average 3.9 percent, while private employer costs for benefits have soared 6.7 percent—more than double the previous year—largely on increases in Social Security taxes, the government said Tuesday.

The combined effect of the pay raises and higher benefit costs have sent total employer costs up 4.7 percent in the 12 months ending Oct. 1, compared with a 3.4 percent rise in the previous 12-month period, the Labor Department said.

Inflation, as measured by the Consumer Price Index, has risen by 4.2 percent over the past 12 months, the government reported last week.

The steep increase in benefit costs resulted primarily from a rise last January in employers' Social Security tax rate from 7.15 percent to 7.51 percent, the Labor Department said.

It also cited large increases in health insurance costs and lump-sum bonus payments from profit-sharing arrangements, which are now calculated by the government as a benefit rather than a wage.

A six-member student panel moderated by Keegan will question each candidate on campaign issues during the debate in the concourse of the JACC, Paese said.

The debate, sponsored by the Notre Dame student government, will begin at 8:30 p.m. Thursday and is open to the public. Free tickets for reserved seating are available at the Information Desk in LaFortune.

Local media will attend, but the debate will not be televised, Paese said.

Debate issues will range from education to foreign policy, Paese said. "It will be completely issue-oriented. All of our questions will be completely, beginning to end, issues."

is available in the O'Hara Lounge on LaFortune's first floor from now until Election Day on Nov. 8, Keegan said.

Gov. Cuomo regrets his advice given to Dukakis

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS -- New York Gov. Mario Cuomo said Tuesday he gave Michael Dukakis bad advice about ignoring attacks by Republican George Bush, and he now believes the Massachusetts governor should capitalize on the underdog's role and "play the 'Rocky' music everywhere."

"You are an underdog, use it," Cuomo said of his latest recommendation to Dukakis. "They'll (the American public) give you an extra listen. They'll lean forward out of respect."

But Cuomo said he may have overestimated many American voters when he advised Dukakis not to respond to attacks by the Bush camp.

"I said I believe the people are smarter than that," Cuomo said of his advice to Dukakis. "I'll tell you something. I was dead wrong. A lot of people were fooled, if you judge it by the polls."

Cuomo made his comments on a flight from Albany, N.Y., to Chicago and later in a speech to about 300 Chicago-area Democrats who paid $300 each to hear the New York governor.

Cuomo continued on to Indianapolis later in the day for more campaigning on behalf of Dukakis and other Democratic candidates.

Cuomo successfully portrayed himself as the underdog in his 1982 Democratic primary for governor in New York against New York City Mayor Cuomo.

While Cuomo continued to predict a Dukakis victory over Bush which he said would come together the last four days of the campaign, he said the Dukakis win would "maybe not be as large a landslide as I had figured."

Cuomo has defined a "landslide" as 52 percent of the vote or larger.

In Indianapolis, Cuomo was to attend two fund-raising events for Democratic gubernatorial candidate Evan Bayh, one a $500-a-person reception for major Indiana Democratic campaign contributors and the other a $100-a-person dinner at which Cuomo was to speak.

Cuomo's appearance in Indianapolis came after his harsh attacks against Indiana Sen. Dan Quayle, Bush's vice presidential running mate.

Among other things, Cuomo has said Quayle "appears to be of limited intelligence."

"They wanted somebody who was not more formidable than Bush," said Cuomo last month of Quayle's selection. "It took them awhile, but they found one."

Asked Tuesday whether he'd keep attacking Quayle even in his home state, Cuomo said, "I prefer to keep the case as positive as I can."

Missing Purdue student turns himself in to police

Associated Press

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. -- A Purdue University freshman missing for more than a week turned himself in unharmed to Chicago authorities, the university said Tuesday.

Branko Semen, 17, went to Chicago police early Monday evening. He was taken to the Transitional Living Program, a facility for lost juveniles and runaways, where he was waiting to be picked up by his parents on Tuesday, authorities said.

Semen, a science student from Merrillville, was last seen on campus Oct. 18. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Josef Semen, told police their son wanted to leave Purdue and join the Army, but they would not give him their permission, according to university spokesman Joe Bennett.

University police said Semen told authorities Monday that he had left Purdue because of various pressures he didn't believe he could handle.

Semen said he had walked most of the 100 miles to Kankakee, Ill., and had taken a bus from there to Chicago.

Bennett said police did not know why the youth had turned himself in, but Semen did tell authorities he intended to return to the university.

Campus police had asked state police agencies in Indiana, Illinois and other states to join in the search for Semen, a German citizen until his 18th birthday on Friday, when he will become a U.S. citizen.

Police tracked Semen to Otterbein, about 25 miles east of the Illinois state line, where a service station worker said the youth had stopped in last Tuesday, wearing a backpack.

Cindy Payne, who operates the service station, said Semen had asked for a map and a compass. She had neither, "so he just walked out the door and headed toward Illinois," Payne said.

Semen's friends at the dormitory complex where he lives said he had not talked about leaving the university and had not appeared unhappy. His sudden disappearance was perplexing, they said.

US remembers attack on Grenada

Associated Press

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada -- A U.S. Navy band played "God Bless America" and sailors from the frigate USS Simpson marched in review Tuesday as Grenadians celebrated the fifth anniversary of a U.S. invasion that ousted a Marxist junta.

Navy Secretary William Ball III and other U.S. officials joined a crowd of about 1,500 for a military parade in the Queen's Park sports stadium to mark the invasion.

Oct. 25 is now known as Thanksgiving Day on the island and is a national holiday.

The American marchers were joined by Grenada's police force and coast guard. A police unit marched in a formation that made the number five, for the anniversary.

A message from President Reagan read by Ball said Grenada had made major progress since 1983, and paid tribute to the 19 American servicemen killed in the invasion of the nation twice the size of Washington, D.C., declaring: "The Grenada that we know today, a free, peaceful country, is the best confirmation that those lives were not lost in vain."

The United States, joined by seven Eastern Caribbean nations that provided token forces, sent 6,000 Marines and paratroopers to Grenada to expel a Marxist military junta that had seized power in a coup.

Six days earlier, soldiers had executed Prime Minister Maurice Bishop and 10 other officials of his leftist government, killed scores of bystanders with mortars and automatic weapons and placed the country under 24-hour curfew.

Bishop was overthrown as a result of factional feuding within his government.

The U.S. military intervention was widely criticized abroad as a violation of Grenada's sovereignty.

The Reagan administration said the invasion was mounted at the request of the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States, which feared Cuba would use Grenada as a staging area communist aggression in the region. Cuba denied any aggressive aims in Grenada.

Grenada's 94,100 residents generally regard the invasion, which the Reagan administration called a "rescue mission," as a liberation from repression and near-anarchy.

In a speech Tuesday, Prime Minister Herbert Blaize chided Grenadians "who were on their knees in 1983" but had forgot-

Aeroperu plane crashes in Andes killing almost 20

Associated Press

LIMA, Peru -- An Aeroperu plane carrying 69 people crashed in the Andes shortly after takeoff Tuesday, killing at least 19 people, authorities reported.

They said the 50 other passengers and crew were injured.

Some passengers were believed to be foreign tourists, the officials reported, but they did not release the identities or nationalities of the dead and injured. Lima police said five of the injured were foreigners.

Officials said the cause of the crash had not been determined. A Peruvian congressman on Aeroperu Flight 771 said there was an explosion aboard just after takeoff.

Reports on the number of deaths conflicted.

Puno state Gov. Victor Urbiola put the toll at 22. He spoke in a radio interview after visiting the crash site 540 miles southeast of Lima.

Dr. Percy Cadenas, chief physician at the Juliaca hospital, where the injured were taken, said as many as 20 people perished.

Jose Guerra, president of the state-run airline, said the plane was filled to capacity with 69 people and 50 survived the crash, which occurred soon after the Dutch-built Fokker F-28 left the Manco Capac airport at Juliaca in the Andes. The twin-jet plane was en route to Arequipa, Peru's second-largest city 120 miles southwest of Juliaca.

Tourists often take the flight to visit Lake Titicaca, in Bolivia near Juliaca.

Officials said many passengers and crew suffered burns when the plane broke in two and the rear section burst into flames.

Police in Juliaca said four Peruvian legislators, a senator and three congressmen, were among the victims but did not give their conditions.

Regarding negative commercial spots by his opponent Tom Ward, Hiler said "comparative spots are part of the 1988 campaign." "He's had ads on saying I lie and he's had the ad on my family," Hiler said.

"This is the first time the Republicans have responded to this stuff. I think if it's fair for one side, it's fair for both," he said. "This is not a business for the timid."

The American people have news given to them in very short form because that's what they want to buy, Hiler said. "I think the American people vote on where they want to see the country headed based on a given philosophy of government," he said.

"I don't think they have to know issues in depth to make a rational decision on who they want to run the country," he said.

Hiler, who defeated Ward in the 1986 race by a mere 47 votes, said he thinks he will win again. "I would not have gotten into this race last December if I thought I wasn't going to win. I think it will be a close race, in the 2,000 to 3,000-vote range."

Hiler, 35, has a wife and two young daughters. He has been in public office for eight years.

Based on his students' interest, Schmuhl asked Hiler about six weeks ago to speak to the class. "I was interested in someone in public office and he was a natural choice because he was in local and national politics," Schmuhl said.

Helicopter crashes killing eight men

Associated Press

OCOTILLO, Calif. -- An Army National Guard helicopter on a nighttime anti-drug smuggling mission clipped a power line and smashed into a desert hillside, killing the five lawmen and three guardsmen aboard, officials said Tuesday.

The fiery crash Monday came on the first night of Operation Border Ranger, a joint anti-drug smuggling program conducted by six Southern California sheriff's departments and the federal government, said National Guard Maj. Steve Mensik.

The program to stem the flow of drugs into the United States from Mexico has been suspended while the accident investigation is carried out, he said.

The UH-1H aircraft crashed while investigating a car parked on a remote access road off Interstate 8 in the Mountain Springs Grade area, about 70 miles east of San Diego, Mensik said.

"They were in the process of descending to get a closer look at the suspect vehicle. Apparently, at about 500 feet, they struck a power line that had been strung between two hilltops," he said.

Lt. Col. Gage of the Army National Guard told The Associated Press that the car observed by the helicopter apparently was a U.S. border Patrol vehicle. When asked what happened to the car, he said: "Nothing. I believe it turned out to be a Border Patrol vehicle. That's the best estimate."

Gage declined to give his first name. A telephone message left at the Border Patrol was not returned.

On desk graffiti, football, and flowers

Every Sunday night, the show "60 Minutes" gives Andy Rooney a few minutes to whine and/or show us "have you ever noticed?" insights about things in everyday life. Watching Rooney's bit on TV this past week gave me a novel idea. Since I couldn't think of anything worthwhile to write for a column, I thought I might compile my own list of "have you ever noticed?" gripes and see if I could get it published (if Rooney can do it on national TV, then there's no reason why I can't in a paper of such unparalleled excellence as The Observer). So, I'm finally getting a chance to let loose on some of the things around here for which I (and I hope many others) have no particular love.

Glenn Fogarty
with no apologies

For starters, every time I go to find a desk in the library, it always seems that I find one that is covered with a plethora of not-very-polite sayings. These sayings usually feature some four-lettered epithets tacked on to such old standards as "your mother," "your sister," "fat N.D. chicks," and a host of others. General complaints are pretty popular, too. Occasionally there's even a bit of poetry as well, complete with ingenious innuendo. Radicals vary it a bit and tack "narrow-minded business jerks" or "male chauvinists" onto the usual flowery four-lettered prose.

How people actually get all the time to write all of this fine deskfront literature I'll never know. I'm just waiting to hear someone be honest and reply to the question "Goin' to the 'brare to study?" with "No, I'm just going there to write on the desks for a while." Although I must commend the talents of these literary giants, I have to admit that reading the time-honored, four-lettered formulas is starting to get a bit tedious. Maybe the library could offer a course in "Creative Graffiti" so that the individuals who bless our desks with their talent could lend some literary grace or artistic flair to their work. I'd really appreciate it.

Some of the things that go on at the football games really grate on my nerves as well. There's one awful cheer where students sort of shake their wrists around limply and shriek "Woo, Woo, Woo, Woo!" Only a woman or some type of fairy could have made up that monstrosity. Maybe if enough of us just stop going along with it, the morons who like it will get the hint and shut up.

Armchair Quarterbacks are to be found a dime a dozen in the stands, too. Their favorite complaint a few years ago was "Oh, Beuerlein, you . . . (fill in the blank)." Last year I heard them playing a game that could be described There's one awful cheer where everyone sort of shakes their wrists around limply and shrieks "Woo, Woo, Woo, Woo!" Only a woman or some type of fairy could have made up that monstrosity.

only as "Musical Quarterbacks." It goes like this: "Put in Tony Rice," "Put in Kent Graham," "Put in Rice," and over and over and over again. The favorite Armchair QB ditty this year is "Use the Option! Run the Option!" I swear I hear those words at least five times a minute. People who probably don't even have the slightest idea of what an option play is are probably mouthing those holy words these days. It's as if Moses could come down off Mt. Sinai saying "I give you . . . The Option!," and these people would be standing in awe. I just wish they'd spare me the play-by-play commentary.

Having to buy flowers for SYR's is another thing. When I first got here, I thought that practice was pretty classy. I don't think so anymore. It's so commonplace, it's trite, and expensively so. Considering that most girls throw the things out after the fact, I wish there were some alternative. I could think of better ways of spending money than on those silly green bundles, especially when it's three bucks or so a shot for a single rose. Maybe some entrepreneur could invent "Disposable Paper SYR Flowers" and sell them for a fraction of the cost of the real thing. Better yet, how about just a paper picture of flowers in a green bundle. It would fit a lot more compactly in a trash can. If everybody used them, what difference would it make? Until that day, I'd just love to see some guy throw out his date's flowers for her, to save her the trouble. That would be a gallant move.

I just hope I can come up with a worthwhile topic for next month.

Right to Life group slates Oct. 27 event

Dear Editor:

On Oct. 27, the second annual Respect for Life Mass, dinner, and lecture are being sponsored by the Notre Dame Saint Mary's Right to Life group. These events present a wonderful opportunity for us to gather together to celebrate life. My wife and I would definitely be in attendance, if it were not for the fact that on that date I will be participating in a national program on substance abuse in Washington, D.C.

"Human life is precious because it is the gift of a God whose love is infinite; and when God gives life, it is forever." (Pope John Paul II) Saint Mary's College is profoundly aware of and rooted in its Catholic and Holy Cross traditions. We believe deeply that the holiness of life is one of God's greatest gifts.

Doonesbury

As individuals in modern society, each of us has an obligation to reflect upon this serious issue and to act with courage to respect life. As Vatican II's Constitution on the Church in the Modern World states: "All should be persuaded that human life and the task of transmitting it are not realities bound up with this world alone. Hence they cannot be measured or perceived only in terms of it, but (in terms that) always have a bearing on the eternal destiny of man."

The efforts of the Notre Dame Saint Mary's group help us to focus the attention of our entire community on one of the most important issues of our times. Let each of us support these events as an aid in our search for ways to affirm our commitment to a deep and lasting respect for life.

Hiler/Ward debate tomorrow night

Dear Editor:

Now that we have all had a relaxing, much needed break, we can look forward to all the things yet to come in November. As we all know, November 1988 promises to be an exciting month as our nation chooses its new leaders.

Responding to the exciting number of people who registered in student government's Voter Registration Campaign, Notre Dame and Saint Mary's student governments have arranged for a debate between Representative John Hiler (R) and Tom Ward (D). They are the candidates for the 3rd District of Indiana. As legal residents of South Bend and the 3rd district, you now have a responsibility to vote for the community leaders. Not only do you have the responsibility to vote, but this vote should also be an informed and educated one.

In efforts to do this your student governments have arranged several information drives and tables in order to educate yourself on the issues, the candidates, the parties, and the entire campaign. This drive at Saint Mary's is Nov. 1-3 in Madeleva lobby from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m.

Most of all, we urge you to take the initiative and attend the debate between Hiler and Ward on Thursday, Oct. 27 at 8:30 p.m. in the Joyce ACC Monogram Room. Your future leaders are visible now and are talking to you. Take advantage of this debate to listen and learn about the issues that will affect you from the people who will represent you.

Professor O'Rourke, teacher and writer

accent writer

William O'Rourke may be known to most of the Notre Dame community solely as a professor who teaches a course entitled Fiction Writing—a descriptive writing course comprised mostly of junior and senior English majors. What most students do not know is the fact that O'Rourke is also an extremely talented and notable American writer.

He has always taken his teaching career as seriously as his writing career. He is quick to point out, however, the difference between the two careers. "When you teach," O'Rourke explains, "you have to step forward and speak for yourself. On the other hand, with a book, you let the writing speak for you." He also believes all writing should be given some special regard in that "writers are like environmentalists and books are like reservations," he explains.

"Just as environmentalists must protect their reservations, writers must protect their language."

O'Rourke's first hand experience as a writer has been extremely beneficial to his teaching career. "My career as a writer allows me to start at a level of understanding with my students that other professors take more time to achieve." He adds that once they begin turning in papers the understanding deepens.

This professor sees his students as equals and realizes they have strong views of their own. Mike Searle, a senior English major who had taken O'Rourke's Fiction Writing class last year, commented, "He (O'Rourke) knows when to lecture and when to let the students talk. Usually he would step back and let the class discuss a subject or critique a paper together. He would, however, step back in the discussion as soon as he realized that we had lost our direction. He would then give his opinions—which we accepted as the standard—and put our discussion on the path that he thought it should be on."

An example of a typical assignment in O'Rourke's class was when he had each of his students take a newspaper article—a real story about real events—and write a short story centered around it. "He especially likes fiction written realistically, that is, incorporating everyday, normal people and events," Searle explained.

O'Rourke has written three novels, "The Meekness of Isaac," "Idle Hands," and "Criminal Tendencies," all three of which were awarded with praise from critics across the nation. His nonfiction book, and incidentally his first book, "The Harrisburg 7 and the New Catholic Left," was chosen by The New York Times Review as one of the most notable books of the year. He also edited "On the Job; Fiction About Work by Contemporary Writers," a collection of short fiction containing works by such prominent writers as Bernard Malamud and John Updike.

Professor O'Rourke was born in Chicago. In 1968 he received his B.A. in English at the University of Missouri in Kansas City and in 1970 he earned his M.F.A. at Columbia. O'Rourke taught at both Rutgers University and Mount Holyoke College as an assistant English teacher before coming to the University of Notre Dame in 1981.

Starting when he was only 26, this professor/writer published a new book about every five years. "The generation before mine always said, 'If you can't do (write), teach,' but my generation did both," O'Rourke laughed. He is now currently working on three books: "Edmund Wilson's Elbow," a novel about the author's generation of writers, "The Terminal Year," a novel dealing with collegiate life, and "Notts," a novel centered around the coal-mining strike in 1984.

Biff and Muffy looking ready for their wedding festivities.

Wedding couple

JOHN BRENNAN
accent writer

They met during Freshman Orientaton Week. Even the chocolate ice cream of the Ice Cream Social couldn't distract Biff's attention from Muffy's pale, freckled, Irish skin. She wore a yellow sundress. She obviously was of the right upbringing—a Bloomfield Hills native, plenty of Daddy's money. In Biff's mind, she studied the English classics or philosophy. Without a doubt this beauty was highly principled, a girl with lofty morals.

Biff's dream state was shattered when the top scoop of Muffy's five-scoop cone rolled on to her dress. Without hesitation Biff grabbed 15 napkins and sprinted to the aid of the fair Muffy. She happily accepted his help.

As Biff gently stroked the ice cream from Muffy's dress, Muffy took inventory of Biff. His Gucci watch and Vuarnet sunglasses led Muffy to believe that Biff had as much of Daddy's money as she did. He seemed a gentleman in every way—his stature, build, and poise. Muffy was not going to take her eyes off Biff anytime

"The relationship lasted all 4 years... soon."

From then on Muffy and Biff were like flies on flypaper. The relationship lasted all four years at Notre Dame. Their classmates became increasingly ill with each passing academic semester. The culmination of these four years was the recent October engagement ring.

Daddy's blowing big bucks. Come share the joy's of marriage with Muffy and Biff during Wedding Week, Wednesday, Oct. 26 thru Sunday, Oct. 30.

Japan: different, exciting

Hello from Tokyo, Japan. I am here as a participant in Notre Dame's Year in Japan program. While I am here, I will be attending Sophia University, and residing in its dormitory. My purpose in writing this column is to inform our student body of the opportunities to travel abroad for a year, or a semester, and to spread interest and increase participation in the programs.

Ale off to an impressive start

By SCOTT BRUTOCAO
Sports Writer

Arnold Ale is quickly proving that he has what it takes to excel in competitive college football.

He is rapidly gaining recognition as the freshman who started at defensive end in front of Flash Gordon and Andre Jones in the Miami and Air Force games, and although Jones has reclaimed his starting role in the upcoming game against Navy, Ale continues to see plenty of action.

"He is progressing well," said George Stewart, coach of defensive ends under Head Coach Lou Holtz. "For a freshman to come into a situation like Notre Dame, a big time college university, and to have done as well as he has done is really an accomplishment."

Ale, along with Jones and Gordon, is part of a very talented defensive end squad, and to have been entrusted with the starting job against the Hurricanes, the number one team in the nation at the time, is quite an accomplishment.

"He's one of those kids that are a little different," said Stewart. "He's like a Derek Brown or like a Rocket Ismail in terms of a kid who can come in and play and help a football team as a young athlete."

Fans may remember Ale intercepting a Darnell Dickerson pass at Pittsburgh with 3:10 left in the fourth quarter, sealing the victory for Notre Dame. Or a fan may choose to recall his performance in the Michigan game, where on a first quarter kickoff he recovered a Michigan fumble on its own 22 yard-line which led to a 38-yard field goal.

"Starting against Miami was an unbelievable experience," said Ale. "I was shocked at the time I found out I was starting. I had a hard time sleeping the night before, actually the whole week before. All of a sudden I had the starting job against the number one team in the nation."

"Arnold played well against Miami," said Stewart. "It was good to see a young kid in a big game like that not losing his perspective. He was just trying to help us win, and he really responded well to the challenge."

Ale came to Notre Dame as an experienced high school athlete. He played outside linebacker and captained the team his senior year at Carson High School, and in his last three years there Carson only lost three times.

In 1987, Carson was ranked in the top five high school teams in the country throughout the year by USA Today. Ale was a big part of its success, including in his senior season 117 tackles, 22 sacks, and 45 tackles for minus-222 yards.

Ale also earned letters in track as a high jumper and triple jumper and in basketball as a forward.

Ale's experience in one of the best high school football teams in the country, in which eight players signed Division I scholarships, made his transition to Division I college football a little easier. It was not, however, without its surprises.

"In high school there's maybe one guy who is 250 pounds, but in college the whole line is 280," said Ale. "In high school you may be faster than others but in college even the lineman are as fast as you."

The people whom Ale credits the most in helping him along are the other defensive ends and his coach.

"Coach Stewart has helped me a lot," said Ale. "He helps me not only in football but also in problems off the field. He's a great coach."

"Frank Stams and Scott Kowalkowski, Flash (Gordon) and Andre (Jones), have helped a lot too," he continued. "We're all tight like a family."

As for the present, Ale continues to improve, but according to Stewart, still has some improvements to make.

"The thing that Arnold has to improve on, the same as Andre Jones a year ago, is overall body strength," said Stewart. "Coming from high school, and coming into a college environment in overall terms of strength, Arnold lacks a little bit."

"But he's a kid that in a year or two with a little added weight, if he can get a little stronger physically, it will help him tremendously," continued Stewart.

Currently, the 6-4 end weighs in at 203, and Stewart would like to see that number rise to 215.

Despite these possibilities of improvement, Stewart isn't worried.

"He is very easy to coach," said Stewart. "You tell him something once and he knows it. He's the kind that if he has a weakness he's willing to work to improve that weakness. He's the kind that whatever we ask him to do, he'll do to the best of his ability."

Irish soccer loses for first time in '88

By TIM SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

Losing three out of its last four matches, the Notre Dame men's soccer team has crashed from the unbeaten ranks with a loud thud.

After an auspicious 10-0-2 start, the Irish have fallen victim to three soccer teams (Akron, College of Charleston, and Rutgers), while routing one squad of lesser talent (DePaul). The losses dampen Notre Dame's hopes for an NCAA tournament berth, either from the Great Lakes region or at-large.

"Those (non-region) games can help a lot if we win," explained Irish head coach Dennis Grace. "Rutgers was fifth in the nation and Charleston was seventh (in the NAIA). It all depends on how we do from here on out."

The Irish took advantage of the fall break to travel east and play some top competition in Charleston and Rutgers. The Cougars of Charleston, though an NAIA team, had the experience of many older, European players, and the Scarlet Knights had shut out eight of their 11 opponents.

In both games Notre Dame played flat first halves, falling behind 2-0. But a quick halftime strategy change allowed the Irish to dominate both second halves, only to lose 2-1 and 2-0 respectively.

"We pulled our sweepers (at halftime)," said Grace of the two comeback attempts. "We went man-to-man all over the field. It worked really well in both cases. We may even start the weekend's games (at Florida International in Miami) that way."

Three of the four shots to elude Irish keeper Danny Lyons "were incredible," said senior captain Joe Sternberg. Notre Dame's lone score came on a Pat Murphy goal on an assist from Sternberg.

"We're very disappointed in the results," said Grace, "but I'm happy with a lot of the things we did."

The Irish's last game before the road trip saw the DePaul Blue Demons travel to Moose Krause Stadium. The game provided no inclination of the scoring woes Notre Dame would soon encounter.

The Irish exploded for a 6-1 victory, featuring goals by Bruce "Tiger" McCourt, John Guignon, Danny Stebbins, Steve LaVigne, and the first collegiate goal for Diego Miron.

"It was the first time we were healthy in a while, and it definitely showed," said Grace.

Grace also noted at the time that Charleston and Rutgers were the beginning of an important month of matches outside the region. Despite the losses, Grace remained happy with his teams performance.

"Conference-wise, we're back to ground-zero," said Sternberg. "We have to win this weekend (in two big games down south). Our morale is still high."

Notre Dame rallied behind the seniors.

"This last road trip really drained us and the win will help our spirit," said Shewman.

The Irish are coming off of their first ever top-twenty ranking last week as they grabbed the 18th spot before losing that ranking after losses to San Jose State, Minnesota, and Iowa. This win coupled with two wins this weekend should vault the Irish into the poll once again.

Men's cross country falls in poll after USC

By SCOTT BRUTOCAO
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's cross country team has encountered difficulties of late, losing junior Mike O'Connor for the season and losing to USC away on Saturday.

Two weeks ago, the team turned in an uninspiring performance at the Notre Dame Invitational, tying for a disappointing fourth place.

Earlier in the year, moreover, the Irish learned that sophomore Pat Kearns would be out for the year with an injury. Last week, Kearns underwent surgery for a hernia. Right before fall break, it was announced O'Connor would be out for the rest of the season with a stress fracture of the leg. This is the most damaging injury to the Irish because O'Connor was their number three runner.

Last Saturday the Irish lost to Southern Cal 21-34 to even their record to 1-1. In only the second meeting between the two schools, in which Notre Dame dominated in the first one, the Irish performed below expectations.

The dual meet saw USC take four of the top five positions, with the only Irish runner being senior Ron Markezich, who ran the 4.6-mile course in 23:28.42 for second place.

Southern Cal runner Fredson Mayiek, from Kenya, won the race for the Trojans in 23:09.73.

Junior Tom O'Rourke took sixth place in 24:11.56. Fifth-year senior captain Dan Garrett, who had finished first or tied for first in every meet this year for the Irish, finished seventh in 24:11.82.

Sophomore Ryan Cahill finished ninth in 24:21.50, and fifth-year senior Rick Mulvey finished tenth in 24:42.86.

"We went into the meet unprepared mentally," said Garrett. "We thought they would roll over and die for us but they were really ready for us."

The loss was especially a shock because just the week before the Irish were ranked fifth in the country in a national coaches poll. Now they are ranked 12th.

With the Midwestern Collegiate Conference Championships coming up on Friday, the Irish cannot afford to be running poorly, especially with injuries.

"We can't push the panic button and train especially hard for the (MCC) race," said Head Coach Joe Piane. "We'll train how we have trained and been successful over the past couple of years. I think it's a matter of getting the runners fired up and running an aggressive race."

"The runners have to run more as a group and go off right from the gun," continued Piane. "The runners can't run passively and let someone else dictate the race."

Running passively was exactly what Notre Dame did against USC.

"They (USC) took the lead and we just kind of let them do it," said O'Rourke. "We gave up in the middle of the race."

The Irish cannot give up at the MCC championships, with stiff competition coming from Loyola (Ill.), who definitely will be up for the race.

"Everybody's going to be mentally prepared for it," said Garrett. "They'll be up for it, we'll be up for it. Things should get interesting."

Bowls

tern Conference and Pac-10 Conference runners-up.

Nebraska lost to UCLA, and Oklahoma fell to Southern California. But both UCLA and USC are members of the Pac-10 Conference, whose champion faces the Big Ten winner in the Rose Bowl. That matchup figures to include the winner of next month's UCLA-USC game against Michigan.

The other New Year's Day bowls (actually being played on Jan. 2 this season) are the USF&G Sugar, the Mobil Cotton, the Sunkist Fiesta and the Citrus. The Citrus Bowl, held annually in Orlando, Fla., is considered in a class slightly below those other games.

Notre Dame played in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas last season, where the Irish lost 35-10 to Southwest Conference champion Texas A&M. The SWC has a team off to a strong start for the first time in several years, as No. 11 Arkansas holds a 7-0 record. The Cotton Bowl still might not get the matchup it wants, however, because Arkansas has to play Miami on the road on Nov. 26. That's a week after invitations go out, and not many people will expect the Razorbacks to win at Miami.

The Sugar Bowl, held in New Orleans and hosted by the Southeastern Conference champion, still has no idea who will be attending its bowl. Georgia, Auburn, Alabama, Florida and Louisiana State all are atop the SEC standings with one loss apiece.

The Sunkist Fiesta Bowl, which is not tied to any conference appears to be in the best position to attract Notre Dame at this point. The only restriction facing it is that since it is being played at the same time as the Rose Bowl, the Pac-10 and Big Ten have refused to allow their runners-up to make the trip to Tempe, Ariz., for the Fiesta.

"We're continuing to scout both the Pac-10 and the Big Ten," said Fiesta Bowl committee member Dennis Edwards. "We can extend invitations to them, but it's probably a question as to whether they'd accept it."

The success of major independents like Notre Dame, West Virginia and Florida State this season probably make that matter irrelevant. Rumors persist of a Fiesta Bowl featuring a Notre Dame-Miami rematch, but according to Edwards, that also is irrelevant.

"We don't think that would be a good game," said Edwards. "We don't think that Notre Dame's team would find that attractive. They beat Miami; I don't think that they want to have to prove it again."

Since the Fiesta does not have any ties with conferences, it also could set up a game between the Irish and West Virginia. The Mountaineers are this year's Syracuse-undefeated against a weak schedule. West Virginia's toughest games left are at home against Penn State and Syracuse, but the Mountaineers also have to travel to East Rutherford, N.J., for an encounter with a pesky Rutgers squad.

The Fiesta also could pair the Irish with once-beaten Florida State, a team that quietly has won all its games since a 31-0 season-opening embarrassment at the hands of Miami. The Seminoles still have to play at South Carolina and at home against arch-rival Florida. The Big Eight runner-up, provided it is either Nebraska or Oklahoma, is another possible Fiesta Bowl participant.

NEW YORK - Tony La Russa, who piloted the Oakland Athletics to a club-record 104 victories and the American League pennant, was named AL manager of the Year Tuesday by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

La Russa, 44, edged Boston manager Joe Morgan by 14 points in balloting by a committee made up of two writers from each AL city. La Russa received 103 points, compared with 89 for Morgan and 37 for Sparky Anderson of the Detroit Tigers.

La Russa got 15 first-place votes, six more than Morgan, who took over the struggling Red Sox at midseason and led the club to the AL East title.

played poorly early in the game. Co-captain Matt Hanzel opened the scoring at 11:20 of the first period off a rebound from a David Bankoske shot.

The Seawolves answered less than three minutes later when Coulson scored a shorthanded goal which proved to be the beginning of the end for the Irish.

"It looked like a question of who was going to play worse," said Schafer. "We won that battle."

The game was delayed for about 20 minutes at 17:14 of the first period because of problems with the plexiglass. Whatever happened during the delay, Alaska-Anchorage proceeded to score five goals in the second period and make the final 20 minutes of the game

Women beat USC, win first dual meet

By MARY GARINO
Sports Writer

The women's cross country team pounded USC by a score of 19-36 last Saturday, evening its dual meet record at 1-1.

The victory was a milestone for the young women's cross country program at Notre Dame as the team won its first dual meet ever in its three years of varsity existence. The runners did it with veterans and underclassmen in a total team effort.

The Irish overwhelmed the Trojans by placing five runners in the top seven. Senior captain Theresa Rice finished first, posting a time of 14:19 on the 2 1/2 mile course in Los Angeles. She was followed by freshman Lucy Nusrala in second and sophomore Terese Lemanski in fourth. Completing the point total for Notre Dame were juniors Linda Filar (fifth) and Wendy Murray (seventh). The top five Irish runners crossed the finish line within a minute of each other, lessening the gap between the first and fifth finishers for the team from earlier meets.

"It was a big win for us," said women's coach Tim Connelly. "We ran well as a team for the first time. Seven kids came through, not just two or three."

Connelly was particularly encouraged by the finishes of Lemanski and Murray. Both ran strongly as they contributed to the victory. In previous races, the Irish did not have runners who would step forward to fill in the fourth and fifth spots for the team.

"(Lemanski and Murray) were the ones I was hoping would break through, and they did," said Connelly.

Rice continues to turn in exceptional performances for the squad. She has been the first member of the team to finish in three of the first four races that the Irish have contended in. Her consistency has been one of the positive aspects of the season so far.

According to Connelly, the win at USC is an important confidence builder for Notre Dame as they approach the Midwestern Collegiate Conference Championships this Saturday in Chicago and the NCAAs in November. The Irish will be gearing up for these races beginning this week, and they will try to build on their success at USC.

"If we run at the MCC Championships the way we ran against USC, then we should win," said Connelly. "We're excited about the win, but we have to keep rolling."

a mere formality.

Catani singlehandedly turned a 1-1 game into a 4-1 game by scoring three goals, two of which were shorthanded, in a span of less than 10 minutes. Bobby Herber kept the game relatively close with a goal at 11:24 of the period, but Steve Bogoyevac answered Herber's score just 26 seconds later, and the rout was on.

"They (Alaska-Anchorage) are a pretty good team," said Schafer. "At times, they made us look bad. But when they were on the other side of the ice, we looked bad."

Things didn't get any better in the third period. Robb Conn and Dowell Frantz each scored for the Seawolves to increase their lead to 8-2. The Frantz goal was the last for Alaska-Anchorage, and only fittingly, was shorthanded. Notre Dame's Tim Kuehl closed the scoring at 15:25 of the final period.

"They didn't handle adversity well at all," said Schafer. "That adds to the dilemma of it all. That bothers me as much as the bad plays. We were outmanned badly against Western Michigan, but we never quit."

"This was a horrible nightmare," Schafer continued. "I feel badly about it, and we'll try to do something about it."

Alaska-Anchorage throttled the Notre Dame Fieldhouse, spoiling the home opener for the Irish hockey team 8-3 Tuesday in the Joyce ACC and dropping their record to 1-3.

Alaska ices Irish in home opener

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Assistant Sports Editor

The good news for Notre Dame hockey fans during Tuesday night's home opener was that a bundle of goals were scored during Irish power plays.

Unfortunately, it was Alaska-Anchorage which was doing all the scoring. The Seawolves took advantage of four shorthanded goals to thrash the Irish, 8-3.

"There is an old joke in hockey to decline the penalty," said Irish coach Ric Schafer. "Four shorthanded goals—that could be a record. That's horrendous."

Notre Dame's power play blues were only part of a nightmarish performance that left Schafer bewildered about his 1-3 squad.

"I'm really disappointed," said Schafer, who directed last year's team to a 27-4-2 record against a considerably weaker schedule. "This was supposed to be our home opener, festive and lively. This was like going to a New Year's Eve party with your folks.

"We're not that bad," Schafer continued. "If we're that bad, we belong with the Mini-Mites and not in college hockey."

Tony Catani and Troy Coulson led the scoring attack for Alaska-Anchorage. Catani had a hat trick with two assists, while Coulson scored once and recorded three assists.

"Coulson played a well-rounded game tonight," said Seawolves coach Brush Christiansen, whose team improved to 2-3 on the season. "He's one of our best team players as far as getting back on defense and making the most of opportunities. The opportunities came, and he set Tony up with a couple of goals."

Notre Dame actually kept the game close in the first period, if only because both teams

Fifty-eight ways to remember Oct. 15

It's been 11 days but the images are still fresh and so is the feeling. Notre Dame beat Miami and is 7-0 now. Amazing.

Amazing when you look at how far the Irish have come since three years ago. A lot has been said about this last game, but here are some thoughts on what occurred on October 15 and where it leads us to today.

1. Miami's Donald Ellis said Notre Dame was no different to him than Central Florida. Central Florida won on October 15 too.
2. Akron didn't though. Gerry Faust's team lost to Auburn 42-0.

3. In the post-game press conference, Jimmy Johnson said that he didn't think Notre Dame put much pressure on his Steve Walsh.
4. Did he see the same game I did? Frank Stams probably has a different opinion, too.
5. Speaking of Stams, in the post-game press conference he opened with "Did y'all see Elvis in the stands? I left a ticket for him."
6. That was the first thing on his mind after beating the No. 1 team.
7. After everything else that happened that day, I wouldn't be surprised if old swivel-hips himself was somewhere in Rockne Stadium.
8. Brent Musberger is the most bandwagon broadcaster in college football.
9. His sidekick, Boy Wonder Pat Haden, wasn't exactly neutral in his praise for the Hurricanes, either.
10. But then again, USC alumnus Haden would probably eat liver before giving the Irish a compliment.
11. Fortunately ABC is covering the USC game on November 26.
12. Let Miami talk rematch—it'll never happen.
13. The only place the two teams could meet again this year is in the Fiesta Bowl and its representatives have said they have no plan to do that.
14. Besides, Notre Dame and Miami have played 11 times on Grace Hall's TV station and the Irish have won everytime. Why play again?
15. Speaking of bowls, Southern Cal holds the key to the national championship.
16. If the Trojans win all their remaining games they will be No. 1.
17. No other football team in the country can say that unconditionally.
18. But Southern Cal also has the toughest road.
19. Comparisons of how ND and UCLA do against the Trojans will determine the top-ranked team going into the bowl games.

ND volleyball destroys Ohio State

The Notre Dame women's volleyball team destroyed an unimpressive Ohio State team without two of their usual starters Tuesday at the Joyce ACC. Zanette Bennett and Colleen Wagner both missed the match. Bennett was not able to participate due to sickness, while Wagner missed because of a season ending knee injury suffered in the recent road trip. Wagner's loss will hurt the Irish even though they did not show it against the Buckeyes.

The match was a blow-out from the start as Notre Dame crushed Ohio State 15-5, 16-14, 15-7. In the first game, the Irish jumped out to a 10-3 lead early and never looked back. Mary Kay Waller and Kathy Cunningham snuffed the Buckeye hitters with numerous blocks as the rest of the Irish team backed them up with acrobatic digs.

Freshman Jennifer Slosar started her first match of the season for the ailing Bennett. She led Notre Dame with eight digs and also contributed six kills. The 6-1 middle blocker played well throughout the game as she overcame first game jitters.

"I was very nervous for the first few points, but after the match started to flow, I forgot about all my nervousness," said Slosar.

In the second game the Irish were challenged by the out-manned Buckeyes. Unforced errors and service problems plagued Notre Dame throughout even though they never trailed by more than four points. A Waller service ace turned the tide for the Irish as they went on a five point surge. After a see-saw battle, Notre Dame prevailed in the end to win 16-14.

Julie Bremner, as usual, played well for the Irish. She recorded 39 assists in 87 attempts. Quicks sets by Bremner to Waller were the key to Irish momentum.

"Julie set extremely well tonight considering we were so tired," said Waller. "She was on target with everything tonight and that makes my job much easier."

The third game was as easy as the first for Notre Dame as they cruised 15-7. Senior Whitney Shewman sparked the Irish with three service aces in the game and four for the match. Bremner and Waller teamed up again, this time for blocks, as the duo recorded three tandem blocks for the game. Waller led Notre Dame with 12 blocks, while Bremner contributed eight.

Inspiration was a definite factor that contributed to the win. Being down two starters,

With top-ranked UCLA and No. 3 USC aiming for the Rose Bowl, the Notre Dame football team is No. 2 in the polls and No. 1 in the hearts of the New Year's Day bowl selection committees.

Representatives from the Cotton, Fiesta, Orange, Sugar and Hall of Fame bowls attended Notre Dame's 41-13 victory over Air Force, which improved the Irish record to 7-0.

"The tradition of Notre Dame, its 101-year football history, being a national team and just the mystique of Notre Dame makes it attractive," said Orange Bowl committee president Jim Barker. "Lou Holtz has brought Notre Dame back and made them a team to be reckoned with from now on out."

Bowls can not officially extend invitations to schools until Nov. 19, the day of the Notre Dame-Penn State game. Rumors of which teams are going where start being spread long before that time.

"Prior to that time (Nov. 19) it's a courtship," said USF&G Sugar Bowl committee president-elect Jim Flower. "You can hold each other's hand, maybe squeezing it a little. You can't ask to marry yet, but you can say you're serious with your commitment."

Miami's Orange Bowl features the Big Eight Conference champion against another team, and its winner has taken the national title for three of the last five years.

That does not figure to be the case this season. Oklahoma and Nebraska are the Big Eight's two traditional powers, and both teams already have lost once this year.

"It's disappointing, but you can't have them up there every year," said Barker. "You have to have them rebuild. We're obviously disappointed that they're not at the of the rankings this year."

Barker also said the selection committee has narrowed its choices for the bowls non-Big Eight representative to Notre Dame, No. 6 Florida State and No. 7 West Virginia, with longshots being the Southeastern Conference's
