Bush ticket distribution stirs controversy

Wrong info on distribution time leads to problems

By MARK MCLAUGHLIN
Senior Staff Reporter

Incorrect information on the distribution of tickets to today's lecture by Vice President George Bush has resulted in controversy around the campus.

Fliers were distributed by the Office of Student Activities on Friday, said Director of Student Activities Joseph Cassidy. The fliers said in part: "student tickets available Monday at noon at the LaFortune information desk." The information desk normally opens at noon, said Cassidy.

Starting at 8 a.m., however, 900 student tickets were distributed from the information desk in the LaFortune Student Center.

Many students registered as Republicans with Notre Dame Saint Mary's College Republicans were notified by phone that distribution would be taking place at 8 a.m. Several student organizations, including Students for Dukakis/Bentsen and student government, did not find out the actual distribution time until late Sunday afternoon.

"Student Activities took it as if it were business as normal," said Richard Conklin, director of public relations and information.

Conklin said the University and the Bush campaign advance team had agreed "from the beginning" that ticket distribution should be as early as

Student leaders react to ticket distribution

By SARA MARLEY
Senior Staff Reporter

The confusion surrounding Monday's distribution of tickets for Vice President George Bush's lecture today has student leaders irate.

Leaders of campus organizations representing both parties were displeased that the original time of distribution announced last Friday on Office of Student Activities fliers was incorrect and that a lack of communication existed in correcting the error.

See Senate Reaction, p.3

"This is supposed to be a lecture for the Notre Dame community. Everybody should have a chance to go and ask questions," said Karl Kronenberger, chairman of Notre Dame Saint Mary's College Democrats.

Kronenberger questioned the fact that Republicans on campus seemed to be informed of the mistake in time to contact pro-Bush students. "The Republicans had a phone tree network, and they tried to get all the conservatives that they could to get the tickets before the rest of the student body even knew they were on sale," said Kronenberger.

"I arrived at twenty to eight and there were already tons of people there gathered around the information desk. At 8:00 I got up on a table and said this shouldn't start until 12:00 since that is what was announced," said

Candidate Ward visits Psych class

By CHRIS MURPHY
Staff Reporter

Third Congressional District candidate Tom Ward made a surprise visit to Prof. Daniel Lapsley's psychology class on Monday.

Ward, a 1970 graduate of Notre Dame, emphasized his personal philosophy that "what I give is what I get" in the 20-minute speech and question and answer period during Lapsley's Child Development class.

The Democratic candidate encouraged students to make a difference in the world. "I would encourage you as you face decisions to find a way to give something. In that way, you'll get a lot back," Ward said.

Voting is one way of giving something, said Ward. "Democracy works only if the people vote. It's the minimum we can do."

Notre Dame students can

have an even more direct impact by entering politics, said Ward.

"We need good leadership... people like you in this room," said Ward.

Students have also played an important role in his campaign, added Ward. "It's a good place for those who are interested in politics to get started," said Ward.

A key to succeeding in politics, as in life, is the realization that "the only limitations are our own," said Ward. "There's nothing I have that you don't. You could be up here in five or ten years," Ward said.

Ward went on to address his personal political activities and his race against 3rd District incumbent Congressman John Hiler.

Ward, who lost by just 47 votes to Hiler in the fall of 1986, said that it's time for a change in the nation's economic policy.

"I feel like I'm in an auto driving 90 miles per hour in the dark with no headlights on and there's a cliff somewhere out there," Ward said about the last eight years of Republican economic policy.

Ward added his support for the Human Life Amendment but said that the United States needs to build proper "economic support structures because children need quality of life," said Ward.

"Too many women have abortions because they can't afford children," said Ward.

Ward concluded by saying that much of what students learn at Notre Dame coincides with the political world. "It takes involvement and giving of self. Take that specialness at Notre Dame and keep that spirit alive by sharing it," Ward said.

Other ways to see Bush lecture announced

By MARK MCLAUGHLIN
Senior Staff Reporter

Several alternative arrangements have been made for the George Bush lecture this afternoon at Stepan Center, but the "no signs" rule remains in effect.

Speakers will be placed outside Stepan Center so that more people can hear the lecture.

The Center for Continuing Education will have closed-circuit television broadcasts of the lecture in its meeting rooms. Doors to the CCE were opened at 8 a.m. today. The areas where television coverage has been installed will seat 300 people, said Director of Student Activities Joe Cassidy.

The actual lecture is set to start at 2:30 p.m. today.

Seating will begin at 1:30 p.m. and ends at 2 p.m.

Banners and signs will not be permitted in Stepan, said Director of Public Relations and Information Richard Conklin. "What people do outside is fine," said Conklin.

"This has been standard procedure with all debates," he added. "We did the same thing with Ford, with Carter, with Reagan, with Mondale and all the other political figures on campus."

Conklin said that banners shown in the background of local news broadcasts from Stepan yesterday would be removed by today's debate.

The lecture by Bush is sponsored by the White Center on Law and Government. The Center provides a focal point for public law research in the Notre Dame Law School.

INSIDE COLUMN

Notre Dame men do their laundry in their own way

Dear Michelle Dall,

This is in response to your Oct. 6, 1988, Inside Column titled "Cleaning up your act is a dirty business."

I must agree with several of your statements. The sight of men washing clothes is certainly pitiful. Many of our sex do resort to ploys such as calling up random girls to help us, and making such a mess in the laundry room that any female with a sense of compassion feels compelled to lend a hand.

However, the vast majority of the male sex labors through the laundry experience, doing their own laundry in their own way.

First, you must realize that the clothes you see as a girl are not the same ones I see as a guy. You see a pink blouse made of 100 percent cotton, something which would look good with that new sweater your Aunt Jill got you for Christmas last year.

I see a pink shirt. Period.

And it's probably dirty.

As I'm sure you've noticed, the average Notre Dame male couldn't match a shirt to a sweater if his life depended on it. Shirts are simply intended to be worn. Ideally the shirt is clean -- or at least pressed.

This leads to our attitude regarding cleaning this hypothetical pink shirt. If it doesn't need to match, what's a little extra bleach matter? Logically, white means clean, therefore the more bleach the better, right?

Remember, white equals clean.

Second, it is a well-known and scientifically-proven fact that girls are born with an innate knowledge of what shrinks in what temperature water (I think I learned that in Honors Biology; I got a B-).

This is the only logical explanation for how girls know that that dirty pink shirt belongs in cold water (I think). As you admitted in your column, girls don't do laundry at home either; that's what moms are for. Therefore, since they couldn't have learned it at home, a genetic explanation is the only answer.

This goes to prove a third point: some girl in Neanderthal times (or whenever they invented the washing machine) decided that clothes should be washed by color. Certainly no guy ever decided this. It would be much more logical to sort on another principle. Many guys, in a rebellion against the status quo, decide to sort based on size, fuzziness, or location on the body. I give my full support to these courageous freedom fighters.

Matt Gallagher

Assistant News Editor

Another problem an average Notre Dame male has with the entire laundry process (or should I say fiasco?) is the veritable plethora of detergents, fabric softeners, bleaches, starches, little-blue-sheets-that-smell, and the dozens of other items "necessary" to make that pink shirt pink.

All I want to ask is: WHY?

Again, I find myself in the unfortunate position of blaming this on that very same Neanderthal woman. This was just a ploy on her part to confuse the many generations of men to follow who would find themselves stuck in the basement of Badin with fourteen boxes of powder, of which they can use precisely one: All Temperature Cheer (Note the operative phrase: "All Temperature." How can you go wrong?).

Luckily for mankind (and I don't mean womankind), the Fab Detergent Co. has created the greatest invention of all time. Better than the automobile, better than the computer, better even than the wheel: the "Fab One Shot."

Imagine, detergent and fabric softener in one! What a concept!

Now, if they only could master the concept of colors and darks in one. . .

American hostage claims U.S. blocked his release

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon - American hostage Terry Anderson, in a videotape released Monday by his kidnappers, read a statement that accused the Reagan administration of blocking his release and urged the next president to do more.

President Reagan denied interfering with efforts to free Anderson, and his chief spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, denounced the tape as "a cynical attempt" to influence the Nov. 8 election.

Copies of the 2-minute, 35-second tape were delivered to two Western news agencies in Beirut four days after Anderson, 41, marked his fourth birthday in captivity.

Statements from the pro-Iranian Islamic Jihad, which holds Anderson, accompanied the tapes.

"On the occasion of Terry Anderson's birthday and in response to your letters, and according to his desire to send you a recorded message, we hereby enclose with this statement the recorded message on videotape," the kidnappers said.

Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, began the message by identifying himself and saying the date was Oct. 30.

"Once again I'm being given a chance to speak to my family, to my friends and to the American people," he said.

Anderson said his spirits were boosted by the birthday greetings he received, "But as my fourth birthday in captivity passes and as the end of my fourth year (in captivity) approaches, I find it difficult to keep my hopes and my courage high."

"I've been very close to being released several times over the past two years. But each time it seems that the U.S. government uses its influence to stop any agreement from being made. And I don't understand this."

In Los Angeles, Reagan told reporters his administration had done everything possible to win the hostages' freedom. "I don't think that was Terry speaking," he said. "I think he had a script that was given to him."

When asked about the statement on the tape that the U.S. government interfered when the hostages were about to be released, Reagan said, "That is absolutely not true, but let me point something out. Terry Anderson is in that terrible confinement at the hands of those barbarians -- any information he has has to have come from there; there is no contact with the outside world."

"We have been doing everything we can for the release of the hostages," the president said.

Senate discusses Bush ticket distribution

By FLORENTINE HOELKER

News Staff

Student Senate again suspended its weekly agenda, this time to deal with the controversy surrounding the distribution of tickets for today's lecture by Vice President George Bush.

In an unusually long meeting Monday evening, the Senate discussed the available details surrounding the event. They agreed that blame could not yet be assigned to specific individuals, and voted on a representative statement which would clearly state their views on the event.

The senate resolution concluded that the University-sponsored lecture is supposed to be non-partisan, but has since not become such. As a result of difficulties with the ticket distribution process, the audience which has received tickets is probably not representative of the Notre Dame student body as a whole.

The resolution states that they "regret the manner in which the lack of information was taken advantage of." In it, the senate also said that they "condemn the manner in which the ticket information was disseminated."

Mike Paese, student body vice president, seemed to capture the general opinion of student government when he said, "I find it disturbing that Notre Dame students were involved with and perpetuated this event."

The senate also considered writing a press release to express the opinion of student government concerning the event, but voted against it, saying that their primary concern was for the students.

MBA Mini-Forum to be held today in the CCE

By KELLEY TUTHILL
Staff Reporter

The annual "MBA Mini-Forum" will be held today in the lower level of the Center for Continuing Education from noon until 4 p.m.

"The purpose of the Forum is to bring together as many top MBA programs from across the country in one setting," said Jeff Rice, Assistant Director of Career and Placement Services, which sponsors the event.

Rice said that representatives from thirty-four schools will be present, many from admissions offices. The University of Chicago, Wake Forest, Penn State, University of Virginia, University of Southern California, University of Texas at Austin, and Michigan State are among the prestigious programs that will have information available to students, said Rice.

The table representatives will answer questions and distribute information particular to graduate programs, said Rice. "No interviews or appointments will take place. Instead students can stay as long as they wish to gather information."

Representatives from the MBA program at Notre Dame will also be present and available to talk with interested students, said Rice. He said that this was particularly beneficial to students that are unable to get individual appointments.

Students of all majors are encouraged to attend because "all types of majors enter MBA programs, not just business majors," according to Rice.

"All classes should come to the Forum so that students can begin to accumulate information and make more informed choices about their future," said Rice.

A benefit of this Forum is "to help students understand the real purpose of an MBA and what it can do for them career-wise," said Rice.

Rice said that students are also able to make contacts at the schools for the future. "The representatives are very personable and students are usually able to call and ask for the person by name at a later date."

In the past the average attendance has been 200 students, said Rice. "I feel good about the program because no where else in four hours will you have such an array of information available," said Rice.

Labor, Likud battle in Israeli election

Associated Press

JERUSALEM -Israelis vote Tuesday in an election tied to 11 months of violence that has cost the lives of more than 300 Palestinians and 10 Jews, including a rabbi's daughter and her three children killed in a weekend attack.

Sunday's firebomb attack on a bus that killed 27-year-old schoolteacher Rachel Weiss and her children was expected to boost the chances of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of the conservative Likud bloc, who advocates tougher measures against the Arab uprising in the occupied lands.

"There's no question it will help Likud," said Daniel Elazar, a political analyst of the Jerusalem Center for Public Affairs. "For most voters, this will only reconfirm their beliefs, but for those voters sitting on the fence something like this could push them off to the right."

Zeev Eitan, a political analyst at Tel Aviv University's Jaffee Center for Strategic Studies, said: "in this election, that could be the difference between a clear victory by one party or a tie."

Polls taken before the attack and published Monday in the newspaper Maariv either gave Likud the edge or indicated a dead heat similar to the one that forced Likud and the center-left Labor Party into a "national unity" coalition in 1984.

Four different polls indicated Labor, led by Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, and its left-wing partners would win 47-55 of the Knesset's 120 seats, with Likud and its allies getting 56-65.

300 Rice student tickets are needed for mentally disabled

By CINDY PETRITES
News Staff

Students representing the Logan Center Council for the Retarded and the LaPorte County Sheltered Workshop have joined forces to allow developmentally disabled children and adults to attend the Rice football game this weekend.

To raise their goal of 300 student tickets, the students have launched an ad campaign and are manning booths in the dining halls to make students aware of their efforts and motivate them to contribute.

"It's something the kids really look forward to," said senior Karen Maier, co-leader of the Logan Center Council for the Retarded. The Council, composed of Notre Dame and St. Mary's students who organize weekly activities with the retarded community of South Bend has been collecting student tickets for the last few years to allow Logan Center clients the chance to attend one

Notre Dame home football game a year.

"It's almost a tradition now," said Maier, noting their success in past years.

This is the first year they have joined forces with the LaPorte County Sheltered Workshop representatives in a unified appeal to the Notre Dame student population.

"It's a chance to do something for the less fortunate, to give someone else the time of their lives. It's an easy sacrifice to make, and it has to make you feel good," said Sue Cunningham, Special Projects Coordinator for the CSC and representative for the LaPorte County Sheltered Workshop.

The last time developmentally disabled clients at the Michigan City-located workshop attended a Notre Dame football game was the ND vs. Air Force game two years ago.

"It was a big event in their lives. You should have seen them, coming off the busses with the biggest smiles, clutching their lunchbags."

That year 70 developmentally disabled adults made the hour-long bus trek from Michigan City to cheer Notre Dame on to a 31-3 victory over the Air Force Falcons.

Maier hopes the campaign will enjoy even greater success this year thanks to the new system of issuing individual tickets instead of ticket books. In past years ticket-donating students had to rely on the Council to return their ticket books after the game. The new system makes contributing their tickets risk-free for the students and much less hassle for the collectors.

Rice isn't the biggest game for most students. But, said Maier, of these individuals who make it a point to sing the Notre Dame fight song every Saturday, "it is to them."

possible since student interest was unknown. "There was a strong preference that (the audience) be students," said Cassidy.

"We wanted as early an indication as possible" of student interest, said Conklin. "We were surprised to see such a response after the Hiler/Ward debate showed limited interest." About 400 students attended the Hiler/Ward debate after a strong publicity effort, said Conklin.

Conklin said he did not know Sunday that fliers had been distributed with incorrect times. "I did the best I could Sunday afternoon" to get the word out, Conklin said. He said he had sent press releases to The Observer and to WVFI.

Distribution of the fliers with the incorrect times "was a mistake," said Conklin. "The whole scenario that there was a conspiracy is untrue," Conklin added.

"Tickets ran out at 10:20," said Cassidy. He added that they were handed out on a first-come, first-served basis, with two tickets given out for each student identification presented.

According to Cassidy, 900 tickets were allotted for Notre Dame students, 200 for Saint Mary's students, and 200 for the Law School, whose White Center is sponsoring the Bush lecture.

Saint Mary's students were notified by flier that distribution at Saint Mary's would be on Monday at 9 a.m., and distribution was in fact at that time.

Two hundred tickets were handed out by the University and the St. Joseph's GOP received 500, said Tom Ehrhardt, co-chairman of Students for BushQuayle.

"By no means was there any scheme to mislead any student groups," Ehrhardt said. "That's just not true." He added that there was no attempt to hide the distribution time from the Dukakis/Bentsen people.

But a note distributed by Students for BushQuayle to members of that organization and members of the unrelated Notre DameSaint Mary's College Republicans, marked "CONFIDENTIAL," read in part "Tell all your Republican friends (and not Democratic) to join us (for a meeting) and to also definitely pick up their two tickets . . . Monday, even if they won't use both, for we can re-distribute the tickets for them."

The note did not specify distribution times for the tickets, but several members of College Republicans were also called by the "Vice President's Advance Desk" and notified of the correct time for ticket distribution. They were also told that it was "really important that (they) get over there and get tickets for support of Vice President Bush."

College Republicans said they were unaware of any plans to contact students about ticket distribution.

"There has not been any redistribution of tickets," said Matt Schlapp, co-chairman of Students for BushQuayle, of the note. "We certainly had people using the tickets."

"You can't blame Students for BushQuayle or the BushQuayle campaign for our superior organization," said Allison Heuring, a member of Students for BushQuayle who was responsible for the note campaign.

"There's nothing wrong with making sure that Republicans knew the distribution was at 8:00," said Erhardt.

"Some of the (non-Republican) groups obviously did find out," said Schlapp. He said that members of Students for Dukakis/Bentsen and the Anti-Apartheid Network were on the ticket line at LaFortune. Schlapp also said that he had attempted to call officials in student government on Sunday but did not reach them.

100 tickets that were originally set aside for Students for BushQuayle were instead distributed to Notre Dame students who were put on a waiting list for tickets, said Schlapp. "We tried to make a gesture," said Schlapp.

"It's a shame that a mistake resulted in phone calls that kept the rest of the student body out" of the Bush lecture, said Student Body President Tom Doyle. Mike Paese, student body vice president, added that it was "unfortunate that the typical Notre Dame student, whether or not he or she has a party affiliation, will not have a chance to hear the Vice President speak."

"To people who say that candidates are using Notre Dame, I say, where is the other candidate?" said Conklin. "One chose not to come and one did choose to come. The one who did come obviously has an advantage."

Kronenberger. Kronenberger said he was openly ridiculed by others in line after this statement.

The person responsible for distributing the tickets told Kronenberger he was told by the Office of Student Activities to distribute the tickets at 8 a.m.

Mike Bettencourt, chairperson of Students for Dukakis/Bentsen, shared Kronenberger's views. "In no way was the ticket distribution fair," said Bettencourt.

"There was an obvious attempt to control who gets into a University-sponsored event," said Bettencourt.

"I got a phone call from someone who happened to be working in ticket distribution. I believe every attempt was made to contact the Republicans," Bettencourt said.

Students for BushQuayle, a campus political organization, started a notice distribution campaign to publicize the ticket distribution to fellow Republicans.

Members whose names appeared on mailing and phone lists of the College Republicans received notes from a group calling itself the "George Bush election committee." The note was marked "CONFIDENTIAL" and informed students of an organizational meeting held Sunday evening in the Center for Continuing Education.

The note read, in part, "Tell all our Republican friends (and not Democratic) to join us and to also definitely pick up their two tickets . . . Monday, even if they won't use both, for we can re-distribute the tickets for them."

"We played no part in it whatsoever," said Mike Kraft, co-chairperson of the Notre DameSaint Mary's College Republicans, of the note campaign. "I'm personally fed up."

Although the notes were addressed to "College Republicans," the official Notre DameSaint Mary's organization was uninvolved, according to Kraft.

Kronenberger was informed Sunday evening by an anonymous phone caller that the tickets would actually be distributed at 8 a.m. Monday morning. The caller also informed Kronenberger of the meeting in the CCE.

Kronenberger attempted to attend this meeting to get information about asking Bush a question following his lecture. "I tried to go over there, but they wouldn't let me in," said Kronenberger. He was asked if he supported Bush and was denied entrance when he replied he was not, according to Kronenberger.

Student Body Vice President Mike Paese also commented on the confusion. "It may be within the rules, but it's unfair and manipulative," Paese said.

Paese expressed concern that the University was being manipulated by the Bush campaign. "I hate to see us identified with a specific political ideology," said Paese.

"The tickets are out now, they can't be changed," Paese said.

Paese and Student Body President Tom Doyle met early Tuesday with University President Father Edward Malloy to discuss the situation, but no change in the ticket distribution is planned.

Vote for Bush and Hiler

The 1988 presidential campaign has mercifully entered its final week, with voters feeling disappointed. Neither George Bush nor Michael Dukakis has emerged as a strong choice. The voters have been forced to select the marginally better candidate, and for this reason The Observer endorses George Bush.

The primary issue of this campaign has been the economy. One cannot doubt that the Reagan administration has enjoyed a certain degree of economic success. His policies have increased aggregate output, lowered unemployment, and tamed inflation. These same policies have left much to be desired, however—large budget and merchandise trade deficits, a worsening income distribution and a decline of U.S. economic power worldwide. Bush can claim partial credit for the successes, but if he wins he must address the failures.

Bush can also claim partial credit for the successes of the Reagan administration's "peace through strength" stance. U.S.-Soviet relations have improved lately with the signing of the INF accord, for example. Bush seems ready not to revert to Cold War rhetoric.

Two of Bush's weakest policy positions are in Central America and defense spending. The Reagan administration's current support of the Contra rebels in Nicaragua has accomplished nothing yet has cost taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars. A new approach to the region's problems is desperately needed.

The recent defense spending scandal signals the need for tighter fiscal responsibility in the largest budget category. A critical look at the need for and feasibility of specific weapons programs is in order. Cutting waste from the defense department does not weaken our nation's defense.

Although George Bush is not the most qualified candidate in the country, he is the most qualified of this year's choices.

The Observer endorses incumbent John Hiler (R) for the 3rd District Congressional seat. Hiler has been competent in representing the people of this district for the past eight years and should continue in this capacity.

Much of what a congressman can accomplish is based on respect among his peers in the House of Representatives. Currently in his fourth term as representative, Hiler has proven himself capable of serving his district's interests in the Washington bureaucracy.

Hiler also has proposed an innovative approach to curing the growing education ills of this country.

His belief that a tuition tax credit program for parents who pay for private education is a positive step for those in the middle class and those students at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's.

Similarly, Hiler's willingness to support an open enrollment plan acknowledges both a crisis in the public school system and that competition among school systems can improve education.

He has also shown clear support for recruiting foreign investors to bring industry and jobs to the 3rd district. Though his opponent shot down the issue at the student-sponsored debate last Thursday, Hiler recognized that this rustbelt area needs industry to provide jobs now.

For continued fair representation in third district of Indiana, exercise your right to vote. Exercise it for John Hiler.

Election '88: C

Dukakis vows to seek progressive change

So, you thought Ronald Reagan could not be president again? Think again. George Bush will make your worst Reagan fears come true—only worse. In November the American people have the chance to reverse the reactionary trends of the last eight years by electing Michael Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen. If George Bush and J. Danforth Quayle are elected, the trends of the Reagan-Bush era will not only continue but also get worse.

Karl Kronenberger

guest column

During the last eight years, the Reagan-Bush administration has led an assault on America's poor. Poverty rates have increased for almost all demographic groups, but children under age six and families headed by women show the largest increases and have the highest rates of poverty in each racial group. There are 33 million people living in poverty, 8.5 million more than in 1978.

The average yearly cost of two children in day care is $4,000. Bush encourages the private sector to provide on-site facilities even though today only one percent of medium-to-large-sized companies provide even partial coverage of child care costs for their employees. Bush also encourages employers to provide health care insurance for workers and opposes federally requiring it. Over the last eight years the majority of new jobs have been in the low-paying service sector; how populations, but, because of lack of federal funding, WIC only serves 40 percent of those eligible. Bush has no position available regarding WIC.

Dukakis represents a trend away from catering to the rich and neglecting the poor in this country. Dukakis supports a universal, federally funded health care bill. He also supports a federal commitment to day care programs and WIC. George Bush is obviously against homelessness but is publicly indifferent, and the Reagan-Bush administration's lack of policies targeting the homeless just fuels the problem. Dukakis opposes the federal government "unloading" housing stocks, and he calls for sufficient state housing funds and many of these do you think will provide health care? It also must be noted that the Reagan-Bush administration has repeatedly tried to dismantle Medicare and replace it with a voucher system. Together, Reagan and Bush cut $20 billion from Social Security and tried to push through $200 billion more before 1992. Bush is opposed to long-term catastrophic health insurance.

The Harvard University
Physicians Task Force on Hunger estimates that 20 million people in the U.S. go hungry for some period of time each month—12 million of them children. The indicator of the health in our nation, the infant mortality rate, is higher than that of 17 industrialized countries. To directly address this problem is the effectively proven Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants and Children (WIC). WIC has been successfully used in highly vulnerable new financial and regulatory strategies for dealing with expiring contracts and restrictions. To address the housing shortage, he proposes a National Partnership for Affordable Housing, housing incentive grants, tax credits, mixed housing production, and federal rental assistance.

Dukakis represents a trend away from catering to the rich and neglecting the poor in this country.

A Bush-Quayle victory would continue the Reagan-Bush trends of malignant neglect of America's working people. An estimated 12 million Americans lost jobs since 1981 as a result of plant-closings and layoffs. For those laid off, there is only a 62 percent chance of finding another job within a year. More than 44 percent of the new jobs created in our economy during the 1980s pay less than $7,400 a year—35 percent less than a poverty level income for a family of four. Also, in the Reagan-Bush era, 84 percent of job growth has been in the two lowest-paying industries.

Bush is not on the side of the American workers. Every year since 1981 the administration proposed cuts in already inadequate child care programs and offered no new ways for working parents to afford day care. Bush opposed recent legislation requiring 60 days notice of plant closings to workers. And the administration cut funds for employment and training by 51 percent since it entered office in 1979. While Bush recently flip-flopped on the minimum wage, the facts of his seven years in office are that the minimum wage has declined 31 percent in real value.

The Bush agenda and the Quayle record says NO to workers. They oppose all of the following: collective bargaining rights for workers, the textile and apparel trade act, unemployment compensation benefits legislation, strengthening safety laws, labor law reform.

Dukakis proposes a Fund to Rebuild America that will commit a half billion dollars a year to economy-building and job-creating partnerships. Dukakis also supports raising the minimum wage. He strongly supports American workers. For example when General

Motors Corp. consider down its Massachusetts Dukakis brought company and town leaders together to save the plant and 4,000

The Reagan-Bush administration has had contempt for democracy that Americans close to their hearts. Bush would mean a victory for most would mean a victory for the U.S. government—the CIA and the "secret" posed of characters like Shackley, Richard Secord, Singlaub, will get a chance to continue to subvert the constitution.

Bush has effectively undermined the Constitution concerning his role in the Contra affair. Specifically discussed in the recent meeting between Felix and Bush? In a memoirary wrote "Contra" Bush's aids recently president does not remember was discussed at however it did not resupply. If it did the have broken the law.

A victory for Bush would mean a victory for the most cratic in the U.S. government -

Bush's administration to effectively support human rights, but has been domestic and international values and American values and American values on its own causes. Bush Vice Presidents 1986 Terrorism, and then the administration's Ayatollah Khomeini evidence that the Reagan campaign in 1980 cut a deal with Moammar Khaddafi for the release of the hostages held until after the election in the U.S.

Comparing the Candidates

Bush focuses on traditional family values

In the 1988 presidential campaign, the family has jumped to the forefront of the few issues the candidates have chosen to address. I grant that the candidates' motivation for landing on this issue may be mere opportunism, but the recognition that there is a problem with the American family is of great benefit to our nation.

guest column

The traditional family, the one that helped build our great country, is falling by the wayside. In the past, the family served to educate and to instill values in our children. However, the pandemic teenage drug abuse, gang violence, teenage pregnancies, and illiteracy points to a loss of values and direction in American youth.

This loss, which has been most prevalent in the past 25 years, has weakened the economic and social bases of our country.

Not so long ago, divorce, single parenthood and unwed mothers were exceptions to the norm. People today still think that these situations are anomalies, but statistics say otherwise:

Almost half of the marriages performed this year will end in divorce. The United States possesses the highest rate of divorce in the world.

Three-fifths of the children born this year will spend at least part of their childhood in a single-parent family.

One-fifth of all children born in the United States last year were born to unwed mothers; the figure for minorities is even higher.

These figures should be cause for alarm to anyone who cares about the future of our nation.

The lure of drugs and gangs in our nation's schools is stealing the education of the very people who need it the most: the lower classes. These teenagers are wallowing in a vicious cycle which is marked by the disappearance of the family and the disintegration of the community. The family needs to be resurrected before these people can rise out of poverty.

The middle class is by no means immune to the problems brought about by the destruction of the family. With a large number of middle class families having two parents in the workforce, children are often left to be raised by friends, relatives, or daycare facilities. There is a definite loss of values and of culture when children are able to learn from their parents for only an hour and a half per day. Our public schools and child care facilities cannot begin to compensate for this loss of parental care.

The 1988 presidential campaign has been deluged with images of family and the future of our country. The American voter must determine which candidate is best able to help move the American family in the right direction. I feel that George Bush and the Republican Party are willing to make a firm and sincere commitment to bringing the family back from ruin.

While Ronald Reagan has brought economic prosperity, jobs, peace, and world respect, his attempts to restore the family have sadly failed. Minorities have been largely ignored, and that is where the family has suffered the most. Under Secretary of Education William Bennett, the public schools have improved, but there remains much work to be done. Unfortunately, the small yet significant progress which has been made over the past eight years in the area of family issues has been overshadowed by the various scandals which have rocked the Reagan administration.

George Bush is not Ronald Reagan. George Bush did not like Ronald Reagan eight years ago, and I still doubt they are the best of friends. Bush has done his job, a loyal advisor, and he has done it well. George Bush, however, rises far above his former boss on the issues of family and values.

The lure of drugs and gangs in our nation's schools is stealing the education of the very people who need it the most: the lower classes.

George Bush's understanding of the vital importance of family issues was evidenced in his acceptance speech at the Republican convention in New Orleans. "It is family that communicates to our children—to the twenty-first century—our culture, our religious faith, our traditions and our history."

George Bush has outlined programs intended to curb the trends which are causing the destruction of the family. A "toddler" tax credit program has been proposed that will aid poor mothers in finding proper child care to help the development of their children. George Bush will strongly encourage states to promote child care programs that will allow teenage mothers to continue their education by remaining in school, thus allowing them the opportunity for a better life. George Bush will remove disincentives to grandparents caring for their grandchildren by repealing the earnings limitations for social security recipients.

Continuing education reform is also important to George Bush. The Vice President realizes that education is the key to our nation's future strength. Since 1980, the average teacher's salary has increased by 20 percent to $28,000 per year. George Bush intends to continue increasing the salaries of educators so that the best qualified individuals will be drawn to teaching.

Civil rights have always been a concern of George Bush. The Vice President's promise to nominate a Hispanic on the Cabinet may sound patronizing, but it exemplifies his eagerness to have minorities involved in the upper levels of government. The Governor of Massachusetts is quick to point to his ethnic heritage, but his dealings with Rev. Jesse Jackson show that he does not really understand the needs of minorities.

George Bush's experience with drug prevention and his hard stance on crime will aid in purging two of the greatest plagues of families and the nation. The Governor of Massachusetts does not even have the support of the police force of Boston.

The traditional value system of the Republican party brings hope that the Bush-Quayle ticket can direct the structure of the American family. The quality of the candidate each party nominated is exemplary of the different emphasis the two parties place on traditional family values.

George Bush's impending victory on Nov. 8 will serve to accomplish at least one vital task: reminding Americans that the family still does matter. We can only hope that, when George Bush assumes the presidency in January, the Democratic Congress will go along with his initiatives to help rebuild the American family.

Britain Through the Nag's Head

The usual Sunday lunch-time ritual of walking down the road to the pub is tinged with extra excitement the fruits of several months of hard work and special care. The first round of drinks is ordered, and the the hot tip for the 2.35 horse-race at Kempton Park.

I discovered the charms of having a local pub through Sunningdale's Nag's Head. I was drawn into the open friendliness, and soon found myself rushing through the rituals of the week, anxiously awaiting my Sunday jaunt to the place that I had dubbed the most hospitable in England.

Physically, it would never win any "House Beautiful" awards, but to me it would lose some of its atmosphere if Jean and Albert, the proprietors, ever found the time and inclination to fix the paper on the ceiling, parts of which are held in place with strips of cellotape, or to give the nicotine-stained walls a fresh coat of paint in their original shade of off-white.

After my first few visits, the faded, plush upholstery on the bar stools and chairs and the bar glasses, unused and undusted for years, ceased to appear worn, and simply added to the character of the place.

The England portrayed through the glossy picture postcards of the Changing of the Guard and the whispered rumours about the stability of the Prince and Princess of Wales' marriage has little in common with the one I experience through these weekly excursions. Both are reflections of England's past and present, yet it is through these people that I feel I am truly experiencing what it means to be a "Brit."

Headaches of the past week pale into insignificance in the company of the regulars as we exchange the customary friendly banter. For the time being, I could want nothing more from life than my pint of draft as I lean back in my favourite seat, listening with half an ear to the talk of this week's special at the fishmonger's on one side of me and a heated debate over this weekend's edition of the Racing Post on the other.

To top it all off, after two straight years of embarrassment, my family has finally succeeded in winning the unique distinction of calling ourselves the champion onion growers of Sunningdale, Royal Berkshire, England. If nothing else, this elevated status affords us the privilege of holding our heads high in the pub until next year.

today. The regulars of the Nags Head pub in Sunningdale drift into the pub in twos and threes, each bearing real purpose of the day unfolds. Today is the weigh-in day of the Great Onion Growing Competition.

Rumours have circulated for weeks concerning secret fertilizing formulae or the chap in Ascot whose onion is reported to be as big as a football. Twenty-seven onions are placed upon the scales in the search for the Nag's Head Champion Onion Grower.

To the inhabitants of the small towns of England, trips down the road to the local pub for a pint or two and a chat with the regulars are as essential as breathing. For an hour or two in the afternoon the problems of the world are set aside, and the most pressing issues involve cricket and

London's Driving Me Crazy!

accent writer

Either I was in a very bad 3-D film or in a runaway car out of Mr. Toad's Wild Ride in Disney World. As I clutched the bar in front of me on the coach that whisked us from the airport to our lodgings in London, the blood drained from my increasingly white knuckles. It became apparent that our stay in London would be even more breathtaking than we ever imagined.

Strains from "The Flight of the Bumblebee" droned in my mind like background music as The Maniac Behind The Wheel zipped his Big Bad Bus from lane to lane, took corners at excessive speeds with millimeters to spare, and had a harrowing habit of driving up onto the sidewalk to get out of the way.

Not to knock the driver's amazing skill. Squeezing that mobile monster through traffic is definitely an art, and he was a master. Thank goodness the windshield was the size of a movie screen, and we didn't miss a single swerve. Our asthmatic shuttlebus wheezed and gasped as we caught our breath with every turn of the wheel.

"Wicky! Wicky!" the driver cried to three people who had the unfortunate luck of being caught on the street as our bus barrelled around the corner. They hesitated, horrified, IN THE MIDDLE OF THE ROAD. "Do your sleeping in bed! You'll get killed that way!" he shouted at them. But did we slow up? Not the brakeless bus from Hades.

All too soon I was in the uncomfortable position of being one of those poor pedestrians without the American Automatic Right-of-way. Glancing to the left to check for oncoming traffic, I stepped out into the street, only to be vehemently beeped at by a taxi cab driving pell mell straight for me from the other direction, with no hint of mercy in its brake pads. In fact, the driver floored it with the full intention of giving me a crash course in pedestrian P's and Q's. Silly me forgot that here, oncoming traffic "oncomes" from the right.

Even if you do look the right way, and that oncoming car seems a mile away, never ever think that you can beat it across that intersection. When you dash into the street, you make the opening move of the British driver's favorite game: Flatten the Fool. When you break into a run, his face breaks into an erie sneer as he accelerates with a roar to nothing short of the speed of sound. At this point, you can be sure he won't break at all, and your only course of action is to break into a cold sweat and dive for the nearest manhole.

Travel in London has indeed been hazardous, for while there is so much to see, to walk down the street with eyes turned upwards rather than fixed on the demon doubledecker bus-bent-on-destruction could prove "bloody awful."

However, in keeping with the "Keep Britain Tidy" campaign, there are little green men on many corners of London that live in the cross-walk lights and help pedestrians avoid making a mess of themselves. Yet even these aids have not been enough to keep us from dragging each other out of the path of the villainous Vauxhalls and mean Mercedes. About the only thing we haven't been in danger of being hit by here are the Royal Mail trucks.

ND women's soccer drops two matches

By COLLEEN HENNESSEY
Sports Writer

It was a disappointing weekend for Notre Dame women's soccer. The team traveled to Dayton and dropped both its games in a four-team tournament that included Dayton, Xavier and Wright State.

Dayton totally outplayed the Irish in the first match, winning by a score of 6-0.

"Dayton is the best team we've played all year," said Notre Dame assistant coach Neil Schmidt, who accompanied the women on the trip.

The first half ended at 1-0 and Schmidt decided on a tactical change, switching to a one-on-one strategy and taking out the sweeper. The idea was to stop up the Dayton offense and free the Irish front line to generate a counterattack of its own. It had the opposite effect.

"They jumped on us pretty quick," said Schmidt. "We've never allowed more than two goals a game all season and it was a new experience for us. We didn't know how to react. We didn't play to our potential."

Schmidt said the difference between the two teams was a matter of experience.

"Dayton has played a lot of good Division I teams," said Schmidt. "In our first year, we lack that experience against top talent. We are definitely going to upgrade our schedule next year. We've learned a lot."

Against Xavier, Notre Dame played a more evenly matched game, but was unable to pull out a victory.

"I thought we should have won," said Schmidt.

Xavier scored early in the match, but Joy Sisolak came back to tie it up for the Irish, scoring her team's only goal of the tournament.

The game went into overtime when Notre Dame keeper Kelly McCrystal blocked a Xavier penalty shot with no time left. The Irish proved unable to carry the momentum into overtime, however, and lost the match on what Schmidt termed a "questionable goal." Schmidt thought that Xavier may have been offside when the goal was scored.

"We played better in the second half against Xavier," he said. "But we were still tentative after Dayton. We started to play our type of game. It was just a case of missed opportunities."

Schmidt cited the play of K.T. Sullivan, Kelly Hanratty and Debbie Ho as being bright spots in the otherwise unremarkable tournament.

"It was a valuable experience and it will show up for us down the road," he said.

Notre Dame will take its 13-5-1 record to Michigan State on Friday to play the final game of its first varsity season.

"Three weeks ago, Michigan State was ranked in the top 20," said Schmidt. "How well we do all depends on our state of mind."

Women's C.C. places second in MCC meet

By MARY GARINO
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's cross country team finished second at the Midwestern Collegiate Conference Championships, losing out on first place by only two points.

Going into the meet, the Irish runners knew that Dayton was the team to beat. They came close, but the final score showed that Dayton had the winning edge, 30-32.

Notre Dame took four spots in the top ten, led by Lucy Nusrala, who took second with a time of 18:32, proving once again that she can be counted on to finish high for the team. Captain Theresa Rice was six seconds behind Nusrala in third, and Linda Filar was seventh. Rounding out the scoring for the Irish were Terese Lemanski (ninth) and Kevaleen Ryan (eleventh).

Dayton's Laura Schweitzer led the way for her team by placing first, recording a time of 17:57 on the 5,000 meter course in Chicago. Her teammates finished fourth, fifth, sixth and fourteenth, en route to a slim victory over the Irish.

"I told the team before the race that this would be a dual meet between us and Dayton," Coach Tim Connelly said. "To be honest, we should have beaten them."

Rice said that while the team was disappointed by the close loss, they could still hold their heads up.

"No one has anything to be ashamed of," she said. "We ran well, but Dayton is a good team."

Following Dayton and Notre Dame in the standings were Detroit, Butler and Loyola. Evansville and Xavier finished sixth and seventh, respectively. There were seven teams, not nine as originally anticipated.

There was some controversy at the beginning of the race. During the first 100 meters, there was a pile-up, and three Notre Dame runners fell. The officials didn't call the start back.

"That really hurt us," said Coach Connelly. "Linda Filar and Terese Lemanski were two of the runners who fell, and they might have done better. I think that Linda could have been in the top five."

Connelly was happy with the performances of the first five runners for the Irish, which he offered as a positive aspect of the disappointing second place finish.

Future MIS/Corporate Executives

SHARE THE INSPIRATION.

The rush of adrenaline. The surge of excitement. The flash of inspiration. Familiar feelings to talented IS professionals at The Travelers. And to the promising graduates who'll join us this year.

You've discovered these feelings in your academic work. Recognized them in the elegance of advanced technology.

And now you can share in them at The Travelers, where the support is stronger, the environment more sophisticated and the applications more challenging.

As a distinguished college graduate with an Information Science-related background, you now have a difficult decision to make about your future. That's why we created ACCENT. A fast-paced, competitive program. Offering a comprehensive foundation in Information Systems concepts and practices, financial services concepts and principles of management — leading to key professional positions.

All in one of the most advanced IS environments in the financial services industry — including the largest IMS shop, 14 IBM mainframes and a 30,000 terminal SNA network.

But our commitment to staying on the cutting edge of IS technology doesn't stop there. We've recently installed over 25,000 IBM PCs, integrated the latest 4th generation languages, and we're developing our future leaders with ACCENT.

If you have a degree in business, MIS or a related discipline, high academic achievement, exposure to hardware and software, and some programming experience, you have the right credentials for ACCENT.

If you're a highly-motivated person, an independent worker, and an innovative thinker, you have the right chemistry for ACCENT.

Now make the right move. To The Travelers' ACCENT program. Where you'll find varied and valuable learning experiences. A supportive human environment and a sophisticated technical one. And where you'll find plenty of opportunities to help move you ahead.

You'll also receive a competitive salary, complete benefits and even an IBM PS/2 to take home with you. Plus generous relocation assistance to our Hartford, Connecticut home office.

So, if you're a bright and talented IS-oriented graduate, join The Travelers. Where the accent is on you and the inspiration shared by all.

Sign up immediately to interview with a Travelers' recruiter on November 15th or 16th. Or, send your resume to: Gail Greenier, The Travelers Companies, 30-CR, CN88, One Tower Square, Hartford, CT 06183-7060.

Former split end Terrell finds home in secondary

By BRIAN O'GARA
Sports Writer

Pat Terrell has worn many hats during his football career.

A quarterback and receiver in high school, Terrell has jumped from one side of scrimmage to the other three times since arriving at Notre Dame.

A receiver-turned-defensive back-turned receiver again, the 6-0 junior was switched to the secondary once again last spring and has found his niche, earning a starting spot at free safety in the last four games.

"I was a little hesitant about making another change this late in my career," said Terrell. "But coaches really can see talent where its best, and I guess if I hadn't made that change from quarterback to receiver in high school I would never be here."

"Coach Holtz told me we needed help in the secondary as far as depth is concerned," continued Terrell, "and I'm a team-oriented person so I was ready to do that."

Terrell was ready, too, when Miami's Steve Walsh threw the ball his way on Oct. 15. In his second defensive start, Terrell intercepted a second-quarter pass and returned it 60 yards for a touchdown, then knocked away Walsh's conversion pass in the game's waning moments to seal an Irish 31-30 upset.

"I was fortunate to have a great game," said Terrell, "but now you just have to put that out of your mind. It was a big confidence-builder for me. I felt comfortable out there. That's all it takes to be a good football player—to know what you're doing and have confidence in what you're doing."

"We tried to not look ahead to Miami before we played them," continued the Grace Hall junior, "and we're trying to not look back at that game now. I'm sure I'll go home and break out the tape after the season is over."

There could be a lot more to put on the highlight film for the 8-0 Irish by the time this season is over. Notre Dame jumped into the top spot in the AP college football poll yesterday following UCLA's loss last weekend.

"It's a great place (No. 1) to be," smiled Terrell, "but we know that it really doesn't matter too much until the end of the season. Our job is to just keep winning, and the polls and bowls will take care of themselves."

"As far as being No. 1 during the season is concerned," continued Terrell, "in some ways it works against a team rather than working for it because it makes every game even more difficult. Everybody wants a piece of the so-called No. 1 team in the nation."

Terrell came to Notre Dame out of Lakewood High School in St. Petersburg, Fla., surrounded by the Florida football triumvirate of Florida State, Florida and Miami. After leaving the warmth of home to head for a chilly South Bend in mid-January, he, like many, was impressed with the people, not weather.

"It was cold and I was from Florida. I had been looking at those three schools," recalled Terrell. "I thought personally that I would get stuck in the state, but there's nothing wrong with that—they're all good programs."

"But I came up here," continued Terrell, "and liked how everything was—the academics and athletics combined. I know you hear that from so many people but you see its really true after visiting other schools. Reggie Ward and Timmy Brown were my hosts when I visited. I just found that the players here were more compatible with me rather than another place where I may have to change to fit in."

As the starting split end for five games last season Terrell played alongside Brown but caught only two passes—for a total of 63 yards.

"I was the other receiver," said Terrell. "I would see a lot of passes going over my head. It was frustrating at first but when you have the best player in the nation on your team, you've got to get him the ball."

The football is not the only thing going over Terrell's head that he notices—he is a self-proclaimed "aviation freak."

"When I was a wide receiver, that was probably one of my problems," joked Terrell. "I dropped a lot of passes because the airport planes fly right over the practice field all the time and I probably looked at the planes instead of the ball."

"I like to fly," continued Terrell. "I go up in Cessna 172s with friends of my Dad over the summer. I don't have my license yet though—I'm working on it."

The pilots license will have to wait for a while though. Terrell is having enough high-flying fun of his own, denying opponents' aerial efforts for the top-ranked Irish.

Rugby season ends with win over Wildcats

The Rugby Club ended its seven-game fall season with an 18-12 victory over Northwestern last weekend in Evanston, Ill. Senior Mike Ryan scored twice for a much-improved Irish squad.

"We improved steadily over the course of the season," said Club President Jim Lammers, "even though our season was plagued by injuries."

Earlier in the season, the Rugby Club participated in the Indiana Union Rugby Tournament. Notre Dame took a fourth-place finish in the eight-team tournament. A third-place finish was in Notre Dame's grasp until the Irish decided to play the second string for experience in the final game.

"Experience is essential for the upcoming spring season," stated Lammers.

Mike Ryan, John Monohan and Lammers all were voted to the select all-tournament team, which consisted of players from numerous Indiana colleges. These three players represented Indiana in a tournament that included teams from many Midwestern states.

The Rugby Club will hold tryouts and training for the Spring season sometime in February.

Squash Club continued its winning ways this weekend with two outstanding wins at the Joyce ACC.

In the first match-up, the Irish beat up the University of Miami of Ohio 5-2. In the second, they cruised 3-1 against the Fort Wayne Squash Club.

Graduate student Marcus Knipp won both his games impressively, and the rest of the team followed with nearly the same results.

neared the top of the Hopkins restraining box, where he was quickly stuck by a Bluejays defender. As he was falling backwards, Capano scooped the ball to his left and into the stick of fellow sophomore Mark Brady. Brady then fired the ball across the crease to an open Brian McHugh, who beat Hopkins goalie Ian Hobbs for the score.

Freshman Mike Sullivan added the final goal for the Irish, who will continue lifting drills until January, when they will resume practicing for the spring season. The Irish will be competing for the NCAA Western bid with Air Force, Ohio State and Michigan State, who lost 16-4 to Hopkins Sunday.

Zimmerman said his team's trip was done to improve lacrosse in the Midwest and to give Hopkins players a glance at another school with a rich sports tradition.

"We love to see lacrosse become established here in the Midwest because of its great schools," Zimmerman said. "And it was great to see the beautiful campus and tradition out here. I've always heard of the Golden Dome and seen football games on t.v., but that football stadium was nothing like I imagined."

Notre Dame is ranked No. 1

UCLA's loss puts Irish at top spot for first time since '81

Associated Press

For the first time since 1981, the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame are on top of the college football world.

And since Monday's Associated Press poll finds Southern California right behind Notre Dame, it sets up what would be the 24th meeting between No. 1 and No. 2 when they meet on Nov. 26 in the Los Angeles Coliseum.

Before that can happen, however, Notre Dame, 8-0, must defeat Rice on Saturday and Penn State on Nov. 19 while Southern Cal, 7-0, has to beat California, Arizona State and UCLA, the former No. 1 team, which slipped to sixth in the wake of Saturday's 34-30 upset at the hands of Washington State.

Notre Dame, a 22-7 winner over Navy, received 44 of 58 first-place votes and 1,144 of a possible 1,160 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. The Irish had been second behind UCLA the past two weeks. Southern Cal, a 41-20 winner over Oregon State, received 11 first-place votes and 1,097 points in climbing from third place to second.

Since the AP poll began in 1936, Notre Dame has won seven national championships, more than any other school. But the Irish haven't won a national championship since 1977 and were last ranked No. 1 after opening the 1981 season with a 27-9 victory over LSU. Notre Dame lost to Michigan 25-7 the following week and hasn't been higher than fourth until two weeks ago.

Notre Dame became the fourth team to be ranked No. 1 this season. Florida State was No. 1 in the preseason poll but lost its opener to Miami 31-0. Miami became No. 1 for six weeks before losing at Notre Dame 31-30. UCLA was No. 1 for two weeks.

Although the Top Ten in this week's poll are the same 10 teams as last week, there was considerable shuffling.

Miami's defending national champions moved from fourth place to third with one first-place vote and 1,041 points following a 31-7 triumph over East Carolina.

West Virginia leaped from seventh to fourth by routing Penn State 51-30. The Mountaineers, 8-0 for the first time in their 97-year football history, received the other two first-place votes and 950 points. West Virginia was as high as No. 4 twice during the 1983 season.

Florida State was idle but rose from sixth to fifth with 886 points, followed by UCLA with 847 points. Nebraska dropped from fifth to seventh with 835 points after struggling past Missouri 26-18.

Oklahoma trounced Kansas 63-14 and held onto eighth place with 739 points. Auburn blanked Florida 16-0 for its third straight shutout and remained No. 9 with 715 points and Wyoming is again 10th with 658 points after routing Colorado State 48-14.

The Second Ten consists of Arkansas, Oklahoma State, LSU, Michigan, South Carolina, Syracuse, Clemson, Alabama, Georgia and a tie for 20th between Brigham Young and Indiana.

The Observer / Michael Moran

The Associated Press indicated its agreement to Irish safety George Streeter's "We're number one" proclamation Monday. The Irish were ranked first in the latest AP poll, one spot ahead of future opponent Southern California.

Powerful Johns Hopkins squad buries ND lacrosse 22-3

By PETE LaFLEUR
Sports Writer

A sellout crowd of 600 was not enough to inspire the Notre Dame lacrosse team, as the Irish fell to perennial power Johns Hopkins 22-3 Friday night at the Loftus All-Sports Center.

Sophomore attackman Matt Paneta led the Bluejays, who outshot the Irish 58-9, with three goals and two assists. Freshman Jeff Wills and junior Jay Clarke added three goals each, and freshman Drew Burns scored a goal and four assists.

But the most striking fact of the Hopkins point barrage was the balanced scoring. No Bluejays player scored more than three goals and 15 different players combined for the 22 goals.

"One of the things I told our players before the game was that Hopkins takes advantage of your mistakes, and that's really why they had that kind of (scoring) balance," said Irish coach Kevin Corrigan.

Despite an inspired performance by Notre Dame's junior goalie Jeff Glazier, Hopkins used a controlled passing game and a stingy defense to dominate in all possession aspects of the game. The Bluejays won 23 of 29 faceoffs and cleared the ball out of their zone on all 23 attempts. Hopkins also led Notre Dame in ground balls 45-36 and successfully stopped 15 of Notre Dame's 33 clears.

"I was pleased with how we played," said Hopkins coach Don Zimmerman. "We took control of the tempo by controlling ground balls and clears and we really put pressure on their goalie."

"But I want to give him (Glazier) some credit because we took some shots that I thought were in and he was able to turn them back."

Glazier came up with 28 saves, the most in Irish history, but often faltered in clearing the ball upfield.

"I think we may have put Hopkins on too high of a pedestal and I think in the first half you could see we were intimidated," Glazier said. "We were throwing passes away—I threw at least eight or nine away-- and that really hurt us."

"I feel like I only did half my job," he continued. "I had a lot of saves but the other half of my job is controlling the ball and getting it up to the attack. Sometimes I just had trouble keeping the ball in my stick."

A young Irish midfield -- comprised of five freshmen, three sophomores, and one junior-- had problems as expected in controlling the ball for the Irish as they fell behind 13-1 at halftime. According to Corrigan, the Irish were unable to get the proper movement needed for good shots.

"Their close defense is outstanding and they just didn't let us control the ball at all," Corrigan said. "We weren't able to get any offensive success to build on and when the ball did come down we couldn't get it settled with the attack."

One positive aspect for the Irish was the physical play of many players. Sophomore midfielder John Capano had several crowd-pleasing hits while sophomore defenseman Eamon "Clifford" McAnaney briefly knocked Hopkins All-American defenseman Dave Pietramala out of the game.

Capano, who scored in the first quarter to give the Irish their first goal, started the second goal in what was possibly the biggest play in a frustrating game for the Irish.

After weaving through several players, Capano

Soccer team bounces back

Irish whip Penn St., Boston Univ. in Gatorade Classic

By PETE GEGEN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame soccer team more than made up for lost ground at the Florida International-Gatorade Classic this weekend, pounding Penn State 3-1 and No. 20 Boston University 5-1 to win the title.

Rebounding from a mid-October slump, the Irish improved to 13-3-2 and gave themselves control of their own destiny heading into the final week of the season.

"We did what we've always done, the ball just bounced our way," said Notre Dame coach Dennis Grace.

In Friday's match against Penn State, Randy Morris scored on a rare assist by keeper Danny Lyons to give the Irish a 1-0 lead. The Nittany Lions tied it on a penalty kick, but second half goals by Joe Sternberg and Mark Crowe, his first of the season, put Notre Dame ahead for good.

In Saturday's game, Boston University, the top-ranked team in the New England region, took an early 1-0 lead, but Bruce "Tiger" McCourt scored on an assist from Pat Murphy at 42:22, and Morris tallied a minute later just before the end of the half.

In the second half, Morris put the finishing touches on his first career hat trick with assists from Joe Sternberg, his 100th and 101st career points at Notre Dame. Murphy added a goal to complete the scoring.

These two victories have resurrected Notre Dame's NCAA tournament bid hopes. The team's schedule for the final week is such that, unlike last season, it has a very big hand in determining if it gets the bid.

"If we don't do well, then we'll go home with no complaints," said Grace. "If we do well, then I think the selection committee has to give us a hard look. We still don't get the respect I feel we've earned."

The schedule has the final home match against Wisconsin-Green Bay Wednesday at 1 p.m., followed by the Midwestern Collegiate Conference Tournament at St. Louis this weekend. Notre Dame probably will be the third seed in the tourney, meaning that it will likely need to beat both No. 4 Saint Louis (a 2-0 winner over No. 16 Akron) and No. 10 Evansville (a 1-0 winner over No. 2 Indiana) to win the tournament.

Notre Dame returns to the No. 4 position in this week's Great Lakes region poll. Evansville is first, followed by Indiana and Akron.

The Observer / Rob Regovich

Randy Morris (4) and the Notre Dame soccer team got back into the NCAA tournament picture over the weekend with a pair of victories in the Florida International-Gatorade Classic. One of the victories was a 5-1 triumph over No. 20 Boston University.
