Candidates' quest for votes continues

Associated Press

George Bush and Michael Dukakis both laid claim Sunday to precious, last-minute momentum in their campaign marathon, the vice president declaring the tide was "moving in our direction" and the combative underdog insisting he was "rocking and rolling" to an election upset Tuesday.

The political equivalent of a nuclear exchange occurred on television, where the Republicans and Democrats spent millions of dollars in advertising for the waning hours of the campaign. The two candidates bought time for 30-minute commercials on all three major networks for election eve on Monday.

Although national polls pointed to a victory by GOP nominee Bush, both candidates battled the clock and physical exhaustion in a final drive to snare undecided voters and nail down the presidency.

NBC news said Bush led nationally by five percentage points, and that one of every five voters were undecided or might switch allegiance.

"There ain't no stopping us now unless we stop ourselves," the vice president said at a breakfast rally in Colorado Springs, Colo.

"We can't turn the White House over to the people who claim to be on our side but who left the country on its back," Bush said.

Countered Dukakis, also beginning his day in Colorado, "He's slipping and sliding, we're rocking and rolling." Dukakis sought to raise fears over the possibility that Bush-if elected-might put vice presidential running mate Dan Quayle in charge of the White House crisis management team.

"Gives you the chills, doesn't it?" Dukakis asked. "Think about it-the Cuban missile crisis, with Dan Quayle in charge."

ELECTION '88

Democrats voiced confidence they would retain or perhaps widen their majorities in the House and Senate in Tuesday's balloting, and they got little dissent from Republicans on that score.

One of the tightest Senate races was in Florida, where a late-hour poll showed a virtual dead heat between Democratic Rep. Buddy MacKay and Republican Rep. Connie Mack for the seat being vacated by Democratic Sen. Lawton Chiles.

Bush aide Alixe Glen described the vice president's rapidly changing itinerary as a "Magical Mystery Tour." Dukakis tried to defy the clock and was flying overnight from Spokane to Cleveland and then St. Louis-and then back to the West Coast for a noon rally Monday.

A series of state polls provided a picture of several close races. One poll gave Bush a 17-point lead in Texas, with its 29 electoral votes. But Dukakis was reported gaining on Bush in the latest survey in Colorado, and holding an eight-point lead in Iowa.

NBC news said its nationwide survey completed Saturday night showed the vice president with a lead of 48 percent to 43 percent, down from two weeks earlier, and that a very high 21 percent of the voters are "undecided or may still change their minds."

Bush professed little doubt about the outcome Tuesday.

"Things are moving in our direction," he said as he raced Sunday from Colorado to California to Michigan.

Dukakis, in a desperate race, noted that both candidates began the day in Colorado.

"For months George Bush has been following me around

Democrats gun for Senate advantage

Associated Press

WASHINGTON-There is an unusual unanimity this year about prospects for the Senate in Tuesday's balloting: democrats will remain in control, and may well increase their eight-seat advantage.

"The Democrats will hold onto 54 seats at a minimum, and I believe have a very good opportunity to add," said Sen. John Kerry of Massachusetts, chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee.

"We realize it's still quite volatile out there," said Tom Mason, spokesman for the National Republican Senatorial Committee. "We could end up on Election Day minus two. But we could just as easily be plus two or better."

One reason little change is expected is that, unlike some past presidential elections, there has been no overriding national theme dictated by the top of the ticket, the kind of compelling issue that would propel voters to seek massive changes.

Rather, polls have shown a general contentment with the status quo, and that works to the benefit of incumbents.

That advantage extends to the House, where very little movement is expected in the Democrats' 255-177 majority.

Pipe bomb is found in ND stadium

By REGIS COCCIA
Senior Staff Reporter

A small pipe bomb filled with an unidentified substance was found early Saturday morning near Notre Dame Stadium and removed by a bomb disposal unit, said Director of Security Rex Rakow.

A stadium usher found the device, a 4.5-inch plastic pipe with an attached fuse, at 7:20 a.m. Saturday between Gates 16 and 17 on the pavement outside the stadium, less than five hours before the Notre Dame-Rice football game, Rakow said.

After securing the area, Notre Dame Security called the South Bend Police Department's bomb disposal unit, which arrived at about 7:50 a.m. and removed the device, he said.

Rakow said the pipe bomb was then taken to a police pistol range, where authorities attempted to detonate it from a distance with a shotgun.

The bomb did not explode and did not appear to contain black powder, a substance usually used in pipe bombs, Rakow said.

An unidentified grainy, oil-based substance was found inside the plastic pipe. The bomb and its contents will be taken to a laboratory for analysis, Rakow said.

A fuse was attached to the device but it was not lit, he said. Security received no threats or phone calls about the bomb before or since it was discovered. No other bombs were discovered, he said.

Rakow said the bomb was the first such device he has found in nine years with security. Security is still investigating the incident.

INSIDE COLUMN

Seniors should keep job search in perspective

Rejection. It can be so hard to accept. I mean, isn't it an indication that in some way we have failed or are inferior or don't have "what it takes?"

No. And now is when seniors have to ingrain that in their minds.

Most of us have not experienced much serious rejection (SYR dates notwithstanding). Even when applying to colleges, how many of us came to Notre Dame because we couldn't get in anywhere else?

Then the final year at Notre Dame rolls around and seniors begin to prepare for life after college—maybe trying to get into a good grad school or interviewing for the ideal job. We've always been pretty successful in our endeavors before, so this should be no problem and we all should get exactly what we want, right? Not true.

The catch is that everyone applying for jobs and spots in graduate schools is very well-qualified.

The companies interviewing on campus have their pick of Notre Dame students. Unfortunately, they can't take every person who interviews with them so most get rejected from one company or another.

I'm not saying "don't worry, be happy (even if you get a rejection letter)." I am saying this is a time when it is so important to keep the job search in perspective—not to let a few rejections convince you that you are destined to work at McDonald's with high school students.

I lost my perspective when I interviewed with one of my "dream" companies. I was devastated when I was told the company "would not be continuing the interview process" with me. My first thought was my qualifications and experiences really aren't that great; next, I do awful in interviews and will never get asked back for second interviews; then, I don't have whatever it takes to get a job; thus leading to the conclusion that I will never get a job.

All this from one interview.

Fortunately I have friends who do keep things in perspective.

One friend said one out of 10 or 12 companies you interview with will make a job offer. From his perspective, he had a few down but only a few more to go before an offer.

Another friend asked me what was the worst thing that could happen if I didn't get a job through Career and Placement. Well, I would have to hit the pavement and conduct a job search like just about everyone else has to.

Kendra Morrill

Assistant News Editor

He told me how fortunate we are at Notre Dame because we have opportunities to interview with prospective employers on campus, while so many students at other universities don't have these opportunities, and even more people don't have college degrees. Yet we have degrees from Notre Dame, which gives us a jump on others in the job market.

He's right.

Something else I realized is every company in every industry has different needs. A rejection simply means you may not fit the exact specifications of that company, but there are other prospective employers out there whose specifications you do fit.

The point is that rejection is unavoidable, but it can't make you not want to try for something. It isn't failure. It isn't an indication you are inferior or don't have "what it takes." It is an experience that might cause you to look at things a little differently, but then again, everything looks a little differently after college. Maybe it prepares you for when that time comes.

Andres plans events at SMC

By CATHLEEN MEERE
News Staff

Although Dennis Andres was appointed director for conference and events services at Saint Mary's just this year, he has already indicated he has big plans for bringing new events to the college.

Andres said he has developed a five-year plan for coordinating special campus events at the college by trying to "get anything and everything I can that's appropriate."

"The job involves coordinating schedules and finding clients, whether they be faculty members, students . . . or other, off-campus personalities, for banquets and shows," Andres said.

Andres said he arranges for both campus organizations and outside groups to use conference rooms, theaters and other campus facilities. Opening the college's facilities to different groups is particularly beneficial to local organizations, said Andres.

Groups Andres deals with range from bagpipe performers to comedians to ballet companies. "Clients should be appropriate for the Saint Mary's (audience), and they should bring in money," he said. Profits earned from the events are put into the school's general fund.

Andres' responsibilities for planning and scheduling campus events include providing programs for St. Mary's students' and faculty members' enjoyment.

Andres said he is both happy and excited about his new position. He said he feels comfortable in the Saint Mary's environment and looks forward to bringing in many types of clients.

Before coming to Saint Mary's, Andres was Managing Director for the Holiday Star Theatre in Merrillville, Ind. Since 1979 he has held various positions at the theatre, including event coordinator, production manager and technical director.

Andres also served as Assistant Managing Director of the Erie Civic Center and Warner Theatre in Erie, Pa. and an assistant professor at Mercyhurst College in Erie.

He also was event coordinator and production manager for the Erie Ballet Company and Administrative Production Assistant for the Syracuse Stage in Syracuse, N.Y. Andres earned his master of arts degree from Syracuse University in 1976 and his bachelor's degree from Mercyhurst College in 1972.

Andres is succeeding Randy Brown, who has accepted a position with Fort Wayne Memorial Coliseum.

Second phase of immigration reforms to begin

Associated Press

The second phase of the federal government's immigration amnesty program starts today, when thousands of amnesty recipients can begin applying for permanent residency and receiving their so-called green cards.

Federal officials expect about 1.5 million of the 1.8 million non-agricultural workers who applied for amnesty under the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 to apply for permanent residency.

But that figure may be optimistic, authorities said, because some potential applicants could find themselves shut out of overcrowded English and civics classes they must take to qualify for permanent residency.

In Los Angeles, at least one school—the Evans Community Adult School—has been holding classes 24 hours a day to handle the crush.

In Dallas, classes for amnesty recipients are free in public schools, but many attend privately-run programs.

In New York City, classes will be offered by the Board of Education, the City University of New York and many community-based organizations.

New York's applicants represent 153 nations and pose a challenge to educators, according to Garrett Murphy, director of the state Department of Education's Division of Continuing Education.

"We probably have more language groups and more languages than any other state," Murphy said.

Arthur Helton, a spokesman for the Lawyer's Committee for Human Rights, predicted New York state would be "overwhelmed" by a late swarm of applicants because the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service has done little to inform immigrants about the education program.

"It's starting with remarkably little fanfare," he said, adding that many immigrants are probably unaware of the educational component. "People may just think they have (legal) status now, and they aren't thinking about the next step."

The INS released its guidelines for civics classes only about two weeks ago.

Police protect themselves with their shields as a fellow officer, center, is engulfed by a firebomb thrown by radical students in Seoul. The protesters were demanding the arrest and punishment of former President Chun Doo-hwan. See related story below.

Ex-president's arrest demanded

Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea--Tens of thousands of screaming protesters clashed with police Saturday throughout South Korea, demanding the arrest of former President Chun Doo-hwan on corruption charges.

Riot police in Seoul fired tear gas to block a 10,000-strong crowd from marching to the former president's house. The protesters threw rocks and firebombs.

At least 11 officers were injured, authorities said, including 10 hurt when a police station in Seoul was pelted with rocks and firebombed. Dozens of protesters were seen injured and carried away, but police gave no figures for the total number of injuries and arrests.

Tear gas filled the streets of seven other South Korea cities--Wonju, Chunchon, Cheju, Kwangju, Taegu, Taejeon and Pusan--as police fought students at anti-Chun rallies, authorities reported.

The scandal over corruption allegedly committed by Chun and his family has been the major political issue in South Korea since the Summer Olympics in Seoul. Opposition groups rejected a governing party offer Saturday for Chun to make a public apology for his alleged misdeeds in office.

Students in Seoul burned effigies of Chun, President Roh Tae-woo and Uncle Sam, and thousands of citizens cheered and shouted "Arrest Chun Doo-hwan!"

Roh was elected in December to replace Chun, who held office seven years. The election followed months of anti-government demonstrations.

In Pusan, an opposition stronghold south of Seoul, police fired tear gas at thousands of protesters trying to burn an effigy of the former president after a street march, according to Yonhap, the South Korean news agency.

Police also battled groups of slogan-chanting protesters in Kwangju, after students razed two police buses, shattered dozens of windows and damaged eight cars in a firebomb attack on a government prosecutors' building.

One student was injured when he fell out of a third-floor window.

In Seoul, police martial arts squads drove protesters into side streets, beating and kicking them, but the protest swelled with thousands of other citizens demanding Chun's arrest.

Thousands of riot police using armored vehicles fired volleys of tear gas at more than 15,000 protesters at one crowded shopping area.

During the Seoul rally, leaders called for bigger rallies next week and vowed to attack Chun's house.

Radical students have attacked government buildings and party offices since Thursday, when riot police blocked a march to Chun's home by thousands of students.

Chun's younger brother, Chun Kyung-hwan, was recently sentenced to seven years' in prison for taking bribes and misusing millions of dollars in government money while he headed a rural development program.

"There isn't the thematic difference" that has pervaded presidential contests in the past, Mason said. "President Reagan said it best: we are the change. It's not as clear a mandate as in 1980, when there was such a screaming need for change."

That was the year Republicans rode Reagan's coattails to a 12-seat pickup and control of the Senate for the first time in a quarter-century. In 1986, an eight-seat gain enabled Democrats to retake control.

This time, Republican George Bush and Democrat Michael Dukakis have been criticized for running a race devoid of issues, devoted mostly to personal attacks and distortions of each other's records.

So issues in this year's Senate campaign have been largely drawn from a list of topics that Democrats claim as their own, although they have been used by candidates of both parties: the environment, education, social security, health care and "family issues" like child care.

Also prominent in Senate stump speeches and advertising have been the problems of drugs and crime.

Most Senate incumbents of both parties appeared likely to win re-election on Tuesday, but there were several prominent exceptions.

Analysts said Republican Sen. David Karnes, who was appointed in 1987 to fill an unexpired Nebraska Senate term, was the most likely to be ousted. Democratic former Gov. Bob Kerrey, a popular figure, held a heavy lead in polls.

Three other incumbents--two Republicans and one Democrat--also faced difficult battles for survival.

In Nevada, GOP sen. Chic Hecht, who for months had been considered the most vulnerable Republican incumbent, has fought back to a dead heat with his challenger, Democratic Gov. Richard Bryan.

Gunmen were behind failed Maldives coup

Associated Press

MALE, Maldives--Military officials tried to break a high seas standoff Saturday night with gunmen who staged a failed coup in Maldives, seized 25 hostages and were holding them aboard a crippled boat, officials said.

Two Indian warships tailed the boat in the Indian Ocean, and military officers were negotiating by radio with the gunmen for release of the hostages, Indian and Maldivian officials in Male said.

"We have not yet reached any conclusion. There are many lives involved. There are threats to life," said Maj. Zahir of the Maldivian security forces. He gave only one name.

"We are trying to solve the problem as soon as possible," said Zahir nearly 48 hours after the ship left Male, the capital.

Officials said an aide to former President Ibrahim Nasir participated in Thursday's pre-dawn attack and may have instigated it.

Nasir, who lives in Singapore, denied involvement.

In Male, members of the security forces patrolled the gray sand streets. Businesses and shops were closed because of a national day of mourning for those who died in the violence.

India's top diplomat in Male said 27 to 32 people were killed when 150 gunmen--believed to be Tamil mercenaries from nearby Sri Lanka--attempted to overthrow President Maumoon Abdul Gayoom.

"This figure is probably understated, because the mercenaries may have removed their dead," Ambassador A.K. Banerjee said. He provided no breakdown on the deaths, but said 25 people were taken hostage aboard the vessel. Earlier reports had said there were 18 to 20 hostages.

The mercenaries fled early Friday after Indian paratroopers landed to help Gayoom and his lightly armed security forces in the Indian Ocean nation, which is also known as the Maldives Islands.

5 reported injured in south Lebanon raids

Associated Press

Sidon, Lebanon—Israeli helicopter gunships rocketed the shop of a boat dealer suspected of links with PLO guerrillas Sunday, demolishing the business and wounding five people, two of them seriously, police said.

The Israeli army said its warplanes destroyed a Palestinian guerrilla base in South Lebanon. It did not mention casualties.

Lebanese police said four Israeli Cobra helicopter gunships blasted the shop and a nearby citrus grove with eight rockets in two sorties. The shop in the southern port of Sidon was closed at the time.

A police spokesman, who cannot be named under standing regulations, said the shop owner, Mahmoud Hijazi, was suspected of renting two motorboats to PLO guerrillas and selling the guerrillas spare parts.

It was the sixth Israeli air strike against guerrilla targets in south Lebanon in three weeks and the 21st this year. By police count, 108 people were killed and 204 wounded in raids since Jan. 3.

Hijazi's motorboats, anchored off the beach about 600 yards from his shop, were not hit in the raid, police said.

Earlier police reports said aircraft attacked guerrilla bases in the teeming Ein el-Hilweh refugee camp on Sidon's southern outskirts. Police said the guerrillas in the camp opened up with anti-aircraft fire but were not targeted by the Israeli aircraft.

Israeli-backed Lebanese militiamen also killed three guerrillas who apparently landed in a boat on the Mediterranean coast just north of Israel, the army command said.

An Israeli army announcement said the base attacked Sunday was used for launching attacks and ammunition storage. It said all planes that took part in the raid returned safely.

The brief announcement gave no further details.

Suspect is found in computer virus case

Associated Press

ITHACA, N.Y.—A Cornell University graduate student whose father is a top government computer-security expert is suspected of creating the "virus" that slowed thousands of computers nationwide, school officials said Saturday.

Robert Morris Jr., 23, a first-year student in a doctorate computer science program, has a reputation as an expert computer hacker and is skilled enough to have written the rogue program, Cornell instructor Dexter Kozen said.

The New York Times quoted sources as saying Morris created the virus, which on Wednesday night began infecting an estimated 6,000 university and military computers connected through the Arpanet computer network established by the Pentagon.

The virus slowed down computers by replicating itself over and over and taking up memory space, but it is not believed to have destroyed any data.

The origin of such programs is hard to investigate, and it may be impossible to trace the virus back to Morris, said M. Stuart Lynn, vice president of information technologies at Cornell.

"At this stage we're simply not in a position to determine if the allegations are true," Lynn said at a news conference.

"It's quite conceivable we may not be able to say with any certainty" if the virus was created in Cornell's computer system, he said.

He said the university had been contacted by the FBI, but there was no indication any criminal charges would be filed. Officials said the school could discipline Morris if he was involved.

The FBI said it was launching a preliminary inquiry to determine whether federal law had been violated.

Morris could not be reached for comment Saturday. His roommate, Chansong Da, said Morris did not come home Friday and she did not know where he was. University officials also were unable to contact him, Lynn said.

Reached at his home Saturday in Arnold, Md., Robert Morris Sr., chief scientist at the National Computer Security Center in Bethesda, Md., would not say where his son was or otherwise comment on the case.

The elder Morris has written widely on the security of the Unix operating system, the target of his son's virus program, the Times reported. He is widely known for writing a program to decipher passwords, which give users access to computers.

Cornell officials said they began examining Morris' computer files Friday night after the Times identified him.

Morris had passwords in his files "for some computers at Cornell and Stanford to which he is not entitled," although those could have been placed there by someone else, Lynn said.

Officials concerned with 'cockpit chatter'

Associated Press

WASHINGTON—Two fatal airliner accidents have prompted questions about idle chatter in the cockpit and raised concerns by some safety officials that pilots may not always be focusing on business when they should be.

Federal investigators at the National Transportation Safety Board are closely examining the tape covering nearly 30 minutes in the cockpit of Delta Air Lines Flight 1141 last August before the Boeing 727 crashed seconds after takeoff, killing 14 of the 108 people aboard.

More than half of the tape, covering a lengthy taxi period at the huge Dallas-Forth Worth International Airport, involves impertinent conversation among the pilots and two flight attendants on subjects ranging from the recent purchase of a house to the habit of birds nesting near airports.

Nearly 11 minutes of the tape were omitted from the transcript because they were considered irrelevant, including a reference, according to sources, of the disclosure in news reports a few days before the crash of idle chatter aboard a Continental Airlines that crashed in Denver 10 months earlier.

If there is an accident, one participant in the Delta cockpit reportedly reminded his colleagues, their words might end up in the newspapers, too.

Later, the plane's captain told investigators he did not care for the lengthy presence of the flight attendants in the cockpit, but that it was not his nature to order them from the cockpit during the long takeoff delay.

Investigators emphasized that so far there has been no clear evidence linking these conversations—some of which was technically legal because the plane was not moving—with the possible cause of the crash.

Luxuries curbed to cut deficit

Associated Press

AMMAN, Jordan—The days of champagne and plastic roses are coming to an end in Jordan, a country running short of imported money to pay for imported goods.

The government Saturday imposed taxes and restrictions on imports aimed at saving $200 million a year in foreign currency for this country of 2.8 million people.

"We started developing a champagne budget on a beer pocketbook. . . This is why (the economy) has to be adjusted," said a senior government official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The belt-tightening move appeared to be the first step in what the official said would be a three-to-five-year period during which Jordan hopes to slash its $6 billion to $7 billion foreign debt.

The government banned new letters of credit to finance cars and trucks, video recorders, refrigerators, microwave ovens, television sets, chandeliers, marble, plastic flowers and fruit, and a dozen other goods.

Finance Minister Hanna Odeh announced on television Sunday night that banning chandeliers alone will save $3 million.

The blacklist targets the posh Western lifestyle many Jordanians adopted in the early 1980s, when their country was flush with money, much of it imported by hundreds of thousands of Palestinians with Jordanian passports who worked in the Persian Gulf.

Bus driver leaves wheel, is arrested

Associated Press

SANTA ANA, Calif.—A bus driver whose vehicle was commandeered by a passenger who accepted his challenge to "drive this better than I can" has been fired.

Kim Dale Miller, 36, was dismissed Friday, a day after his case was heard by an Orange County Transit District committee, said spokeswoman Claudia Keith.

The driver was dismissed for berating a passenger and leaving a bus unattended, Ms. Keith said.

He had not driven for the district since Oct. 19 when witnesses said he stepped off his bus after challenging passenger James Biddle to do a better job.

Biddle, a 52-year-old Buena Park engineer, said he complained about the driver's berating a passenger and about sudden starts and stops.

Biddle said Miller told him, "I suppose you think you can drive this better than I can."

When Biddle said he could, Miller got off the bus.

Biddle carried the vehicle's 31 passengers more than mile, stopping to let people off and on, before police pulled him over. Passengers said Biddle made change, gave them transfers and was courteous.

Biddle was cited for joy riding and operating the vehicle without a bus-driver's license. He is scheduled to appear in Municipal Court Monday and faces a maximum of $400 in fines and three months in jail.

Miller could not immediately be reached for comment. His phone number was not listed in the Anaheim directory.

Grad student: political hypocrite?

As usual, I bumped into my friend Gabby the grad student down in the library pit. He immediately spied my "George Bush '88" button and gave me a sullen look. "How can you support that guy, with his awful record on the environment?" he asked as he drew on yet another cigarette. "Our air is hardly fit to breathe as it is. Besides, intellectuals like us shouldn't be so political." He exhaled a cloud of smoke in my direction, and then suddenly examined his watch. "Darn! I'm late for the anti-apartheid vigil! Remember what I said about politics," he warned as he rushed off.

Kevin Smant

on politics

Gabby is very typical of a graduate student here at Notre Dame. Let's say he's a complex individual. He wants very much, for example, to fit into the "mainstream" of graduate student life. To be accepted, though, one must meet certain political and ideological tests. For, despite protestations to the contrary, graduate student life here and elsewhere is as political as any smoke-filled room stuffed with politicians.

For one thing, Gabby is sure to be anti-establishment, anti-big-business, pro-union, and generally pro-"people" in his conversations. He warned me that big-business controlled the TV networks; he eagerly discusses with his friends in the economics department the progress of Sandinista labor unions in Nicaragua (although he hasn't had much good news there lately, come to think of it); and he routinely bemoans the fate of the homeless in the face of Reagan administration policies. I asked him whether he could actually prove that "millions" of homeless exist, but he just glared at the can of Coca-Cola in my hand. "Don't you know about the Coke boycott?" he snapped. "Can't you show any compassion? You're so self-centered."

In other words, there are a lot of things Gabby doesn't like. Last week, I interrupted another one of his lectures on the plight of the average worker to ask him how his dissertation research was going. "Oh, not bad," he said. Suddenly a look of disgust crossed his face. "But I was at the University of Chicago library last week, and you wouldn't believe the people I had to put up with. I saw one librarian reading 'People' magazine. All the guy at the gas station wanted to do was talk about some bears, or something. I don't even like animals. Why don't they keep their zoos locked up?" he grumbled.

I suppressed a smile and volunteered that the attendant probably meant Chicago's professional football team. He looked disdainful. "That's just what I mean. Football ought to be banned.

This country is full of hillbillies, buffoons and fools. Ordinary people know nothing about real culture." I was confused. "But you just... about the average worker..." It was no use.

He's the one lamenting the dominance of the "establishment" and what the "system" does to people, while rushing off to hand out leaflets for the Dukakis-Bentsen ticket.

Graduate students also must always display a rather slippery characteristic they call "tolerance." It is hard to tell what it means. But I guess it explains why Gabby and his friends always talk and write about homophobes, racists, chauvinists, elitists, ethnocentrists, "McCarthyism," and so on. I never realized the world was such a dangerous place.

But then, going back to the issue of race, I never realized it occupied his mind so much. When he wants to inspire himself, he quotes Martin Luther King, Jr.—you know, about eliminating the acute consciousness of race so that everyone can join hands and sing "free at last," etc., without regard to skin color. Of course, then he immediately goes on to lament the lack of really effective affirmative action quotas, or the lack of classes devoted solely to black authors, or the paucity of black faculty members here at Notre Dame. "People's skin color shouldn't matter!" he thunders. "Intolerance is rampant on this campus."

In short, I suppose everyone knows Gabby. He's the one lamenting the dominance of the "establishment" and what the "system" does to people, while rushing off to hand out leaflets for the Dukakis-Bentsen ticket. He wears his cynicism on his sleeve, and laughs when I show emotion on an issue, while at the same time hurrying to organize anti-apartheid rallies and Coke boycotts. He dreams of economic "cooperation," the end of the profit motive, and a leveling of the "gap between rich and poor."

Meanwhile he also envisions his first full-time teaching job. Then he can finally get that new car he's been wanting, that nice suburban house, a VCR, his own den, a steadily rising salary. . . I overheard Gabby just yesterday, talking about Dan Quayle. He was laughing. "What a hypocrite!" he chuckled. I laughed too. But not at Dan Quayle.

Economic formula predicts accurately

Imagery: Graphic in its presentation and powerful in its persuasion. The American public has been saturated with stories about the impact of such imagery, with the Bush campaign's commercials cited as indisputable. Network news programs have covered these commercials almost as much as the candidate. Further, they have hinted at the haunting power of the phantoms behind the scenes who created them—the infamous "media gurus."

Ed Yyevoli

But just how much do these commercials sway the American electorate? Will people vote against Michael Dukakis because of a minute of black and white footage of prisoners walking through a revolving door? Do people vote for George Bush because his grandchildren are cute? Other evidence of why a particular candidate will win seems to imply or even confirm the contrary.

A September edition of The Economist presents a formula which picks who the American electorate will choose on November 8 and by how much. Curiously, this formula does not include a variable which estimates which candidate has slandered the other more effectively. Instead, it relies solely on inflation, real growth (especially in the year before the election), and incumbency. When the article was written the formula gave George Bush 55 percent of the vote, today the formula would probably give him 54 percent (this is my estimate which has not been confirmed due to a lack of data). Whether this is the formula's exact number or not, it is important only that the scheme has predicted the incumbent party's share of the vote with astonishing accuracy. In the last six elections it has erred within an average of one percentage point.

The first quick objection to such formulas has been the presentation of other schemes which are accurate but obviously have little to do with politics, for example, the taller man always wins, an American League world series victory helps the Republican Party, and the New York Mets success on banner day correlates to a Democratic victory. However two important distinctions must be drawn between these "formulas" and the economic indicator formula. First, these astrological predictions don't give us numbers, just winners; second, they lead to conclusions about the American public which are absurd. Most people don't remember how the Mets did on banner day.

But what conclusions does the economic indicator formula lead to? One above all others, the major economic indicators have a greater impact that any other single factor on the outcome of a presidential election. This is not to say that George Bush could have simply read the formula and retired to Kennebunkport with his name resurfacing only on the ballot. We must not forget the early lead Mike Dukakis enjoyed immediately following the Democratic Convention. But we must also recall George Bush's quick surge after he shared equal time in the spotlight. For the Vice-President a break-even strategy was enough; for the Governor of Massachusetts hitting those "line drive singles" Bruce Babbitt described could lead only to defeat.

Further evidence of the power of these economic factors may be found in the lack of voter turnout predicted in this year's campaign.

Further evidence of the power of these economic factors may be found in the lack of voter turnout predicted in this year's campaign. Many contend that this is due to the disdain of the electorate for the way this campaign has been run. But if we admit that the public responds to purely superficial advertisements in a negative way, we should conclude that the public would vote against the man they perceive the most guilty of this—George Bush. Further, it has been many years since the public has been happy with either the candidates or the campaign. Because most people vote mostly in accordance with economic indicators, the positive nature of these numbers has resulted in a criticism of the candidates as issueless as the campaign.

But what about the deficit, why do people name this issue as most important in the campaign? Consider my respect for Notre Dame. I may indeed complain about the alcohol policy and parietais (purely hypothetical, of course), and I may name these as the most important issues at this university. But if it came down to endorsing this university, these factors would be of little importance. Put more simply, the public is not going to name inflation as the top issue in the campaign because inflation is under control. The issues the American public will name as most important are problems. The issues the American public finds most important are those they feel hit home the hardest and most directly. Inflation, jobs, and national prosperity are in this short list, not the deficit.

All of what has been said is not a reason to ignore the world of Roger Ailes and the Bush campaign team. Although the Bush/Quayle team did not come out ahead in the three debates these men and women have created powerful commercials which coincide well with the theme of the Vice-President's campaign. The above is also not an excuse for the inadequacy of the Mike Dukakis team of Sasso, Brontas, and Estrich. They truly have done a poor job at advertising their man, and organizing a single theme for his campaign. I agree with columnist Fred Barnes that Mike Dukakis seems to have been running as if he were the incumbent since the Democratic Convention. I submit that Mike Dukakis would have had to run like Ben Johnson to beat the formula in '88.

Democrats abandon the "little guy"

Imagine this scenario: A Notre Dame class is in progress. A shout comes from the hallway that the building is on fire. The flames are spreading, threatening to engulf the whole structure.

What's to be done? I dare say those in the classroom would get their priorities sorted out in a hurry. They would certainly stop the class at once. Not because what they are doing is unimportant, but because they not have more pressing concerns. Like saving peoples' lives. Like trying to put out the fire.

Edward J. Murphy
guest column

I submit that the issues in the current presidential campaign are rather like this. There is one issue of such overpowering importance that it dwarfs all other concerns. I am referring to the fact that over the past 15 years the lives of more than 21 million Americans have been destroyed in abortuaries of this country. And the grisly business continues unabated.

Every working day in the abortion mills of this country more than 5,000 people are killed. This means that every day the number of babies killed by abortion in the United States is nearly equal to the number of students who live on this campus! And since Roe v. Wade was decided in 1973, effectively withdrawing legal protection from unborn children, the number of lives lost exceeds the total combined population—man, woman, and child—of the following cities: Phoenix, Birmingham, Little Rock, San Francisco, Denver, Hartford, Atlanta, Miami, Chicago, Peoria, Indianapolis, South Bend, Cedar Rapids, Louisville, New Orleans, Baltimore, Boston, East Lansing, Ann Arbor, Detroit, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Newark, Albuquerque, Santa Fe, Buffalo, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Dayton, Tulsa, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Nashville, Dallas, Houston, Salt Lake City, Richmond, and Milwaukee.

This is an evil of monumental proportions. Without a doubt the question of legal protection for unborn babies is the watershed issue of our time. Therefore how candidates stand on this crucial question is of overriding importance.

What if, when the classroom building catches on fire, one said: "Well, I am personally opposed to fires in buildings, but I don't think government should be involved. I don't believe we should call the fire department."

Or if one said: "Well, I admit that the fire in the building is an important issue, but it is but one of many important things going on around here. So let's not be one-issue-oriented and become preoccupied with putting out the fire."

And, of course, one might say: "Let it burn! Nobody is going to tell me I have to leave this class and try to put out a fire. Let people burn-up if that's their choice."

As a boy growing up in a small town in central Illinois, I recall how my father, a Democrat, proudly affirmed this political affiliation by saying that Democrats were for the "little guy". Dad did not live to see the day when the political party, which he proudly supported, shamelessly abandoned the most helpless and defenseless of the "little guys", the children in the womb. He would have been heartbroken, as was I, to see this once great party become the pro-abortion party, the party of death for the innocent unborn.

Recently, the Catholic Archbishop of Hartford, Archbishop Whealon, resigned from the Democratic party for precisely this reason. Earlier on, Bishop Vaughan of New York did the same thing. These bishops have the priorities right. When the building is on fire, you must set aside other tasks and try to put out the fire. When babies are being killed at the rate of over one and a half million per year, you must concentrate upon stopping the slaughter.

If you believe, as I do, that the most pressing need right now in this country is to restore legal protection (yes, constitutional protection) to all human beings, then I put this challenge to you who call yourselves Democrats: Get out of the Democratic Party.

This is the time for action. There will probably never be a more opportune time in your lifetime. The Democrats have nominated a man for president who is staunchly pro-abortion. Consider that Michael Dukakis introduced pro-abortion legislation in the Massachusetts Legislature, at the behest of a notorious Boston abortionist, three years before the infamous Roe v. Wade decision.

This is one who brags that he is a card-carrying member of the ACLU. I hope that before you vote this November you will take a look at the agenda of this organization.

Let me point out one item of this agenda for you to ponder. Because the Catholic Church is pro-life, regarding abortion as a most serious transgression of God's law, and because many Church leaders have urged Catholics to ber of the ACLU. Think about it.

What a powerful blow it would be for civil rights in this country if thousands, indeed millions, of Democrats would tell the leaders of the pro-abortion support pro-life candidates, the ACLU believes that the tax exempt status of the Catholic Church should be recinded. Do you believe that? Well, the ACLU believes it, and the Democratic candidate says he is a card-carrying mem-party that they have had enough. They aren't going to take it anymore. They can no longer be taken for granted to vote for pro-abortion Democratic candidates just because Mom and Dad are or were Democrats.

Over a century ago many good people walked away from a political party which had become the pro-slavery party. You Democrats would not for a single instant remain a member of a political party which espoused human slavery. You would walk away, and you should. Just as people in the last century chose freedom instead of slavery, choose life today instead of death.

Election forum explains issues

Dear Editor:

On Monday, Nov. 7 at 7:00 p.m., Omicron Delta Epsilon, the economics honor fraternity, will sponsor an election forum in the library auditorium. Profs. David Betson, Kenneth Jameson, and James Rakowski of the economics department will offer their knowledgeable opinions and answer questions from the audience.

While there have been various debates on the presidential election here on campus, none have explained the economic policies that Vice President Bush and Governor Dukakis are proposing as this forum will. A student/faculty reception with food and beverages will follow. So do yourself a favor and shed your ignorance of the current economic problems facing the next president by attending this forum.

Shuttle bus needs improvement

Dear Editor:

Over the past few weekends, it has come to my attention that the late night shuttle bus service is in need of improvement. I particularly noticed this on Friday, Oct. 29. Due to the many dances and other activities taking place that weekend, the 2:05 run to Saint Mary's, which is supposed to be the last run of the night, was so packed that the driver had to make an extra run to accommodate everyone. Cramming the bus over three times its safe capacity is dangerous to passengers as well as a strain on the driver. It is highly inconsiderate to risk injury to others by pushing, shoving, and otherwise stampeding to secure a place on the bus. If it is imperative that one get home quickly, he or she should call Campus Security.

When the driver makes extra runs during the night, he is doing so for the sake of students' safety. Thus it is only proper that he should be treated with respect. However, this was certainly not the case Friday night. On the second run, several students begged the driver to wait for their friends who were on their way. If one expects to utilize the shuttle service, particularly late at night, it is not too much to ask that the person be on time to catch the bus rather than inconveniencing the driver and other passengers by expecting them to wait. If students want personalized service, they should call a taxicab.

Once the shuttle was finally on its way, the behavior of many of the passengers was downright obnoxious. There was pointless screaming all the way home. When I politely asked an exceptionally loud girl to please keep her voice down, she merely smirked and said, "We're too cool to be quiet!" No, my dear, you're too inconsiderate to be cool.

If there are several events going on in the same night, there should be extra buses running. If this compiles the costs of dance tickets or activity fees, so be it. Better a few extra bucks to ensure our safety than several million dollars in lawsuits when an accident occurs and serious injuries or death results.

The Accused" is a riveting movie that does more than hold the viewers' attention for two hours: it makes one think, even after the film is over.

"The Accused" revolves around the brutal gang rape of Sarah Tobias, who is played remarkably well by Jodie Foster. Aside from exploring the indignities of this crime, "The Accused" digs even deeper, causing the audience to question how our legal system views rape and how we as a society view the victim and in this case, the eyewitnesses to the crime.

What is really surprising at the outset of the film is how apathetic everyone is to Sarah's plight. While at a local bar, Sarah is raped on top of a pinball machine by three men in full view of several cheering witnesses, but no one comes forward to testify on her behalf, not even her best friend who was working in the bar that night.

Instead, everyone (including the lawyers dealing with her case) concentrates on the circumstances leading up to her assault. Not only did Sarah have a less than pristine past, but she came to the bar after having a fight with her live-in lover, drank a bit, smoked some pot, and willingly went into the game room where she allegedly "flirted" with her future attackers.

Assistant District Attorney Katheryn Murphy (Kelly McGillis) is assigned to handle Sarah's case. After reviewing the case, the defense attorneys convince Katheryn that Sarah's testimony would never be strong enough to convict her assailants of Rape. Although Sensitive rape film inspires thought

Katheryn is very adamant about charging Sarah's attackers with Rape, she gives in to the other attorneys, and the charge is reduced to Reckless Endangerment.

After the charge is reduced, it seems as though the case is closed - except for Sarah. Not only was Sarah denied the chance to testify, but the crime will not even go on the books as rape. Sarah's outrage convinces Katheryn that she made a terrible mistake, and Katheryn decides to take a radical step by putting the witnesses on trial.

The film deals with a concept in law that few people probably ever consider - the responsibility of the witness. In "The Accused" this responsibility falls on the witnesses who did nothing while the rape occurred, but the persons held most accountable are the onlookers in the bar who cheered on Sarah's attackers while they committed the brutal act.

"The Accused" introduces the idea of Criminal Solicitation - where an eyewitness can be guilty of goading or enticing another person to commit a criminal act. The men who cheered, clapped, and encouraged the rapists to violate Sarah are brought to trial in what could best be termed a legal long-shot, and the film successfully maintains the viewers' attention until the final verdict is announced.

Not only are the legal concepts thought-provoking, but the Foster's and McGillis' characters are refreshingly human. It would have been very easy to make Katheryn Murphy the super-attorney who never makes a mistake, but the fact that she did make a mistake in allowing the initial Rape charge to be reduced makes her character more believable.

The fact that Sarah is not a lily-white victim does not make her less of a victim, and "The Accused" makes it clear that Sarah's dubious character does not lessen the crime. Foster's portrayal of Sarah shows us how easy it is to put a person's character on trial and transfer the guilt from the attacker to the victim - at least in the minds of those observing the circumstances of Sarah's case, and even the audience as well.

Another interesting aspect about this film is the bond that forms between Katheryn and Sarah. Katheryn is obviously a well-respected, well-paid attorney who normally does not have dealings with a blue collar woman with a limited education. During the course of the film, Katheryn and Sarah slowly break down the social and economic barriers between them as they learn to trust each other.

The combination of superior performances and an innovative plot make "The Accused" a very powerful film. It forces us to reconsider some very important aspects of the legal system, while questioning our views on attackers and victims.

In court, Sarah Tobias (Jodie Foster) recounts the circumstances of her brutal rape in Paramount Pictures' 'The Accused.'

Sentimental mob movie will make viewers laugh

JOE BUCOLO
accent writer

They always like you when you're someone else." This is Jerry's motto in David Mamet's new motion picture "Things Change." The beauty of the film is that it is "someone else" in relation to others in the recent swarm of mob-related films. "Things Change" is an innovative dramatic comedy-estranged from the mob family of films-worth of even the most outrageous of movie ticket prices.

The film deals with a shoe shiner named Gino (Don Ameche) who agrees to take the rap for a murder committed by a big-time mob chief in exchange for ownership of a fishing boat, his lifetime dream. The plan is set; Gino signs a confession and waits for the arrival of Monday morning when he will be locked in prison for three years.

To ensure that nothing in the plan goes awry, the mob boss assigns Jerry (Joe Mantegna) to closely watch Gino until Monday. Jerry appreciates this assignment since it serves as a chance for him to redeem himself of his past blunders.

Jerry and Gino check into their designated hotel room where Jerry is to coach Gino

on his phony confession and, on Monday, deliver him to the police. Out of compassion for Gino, Jerry alters the plan somewhat and soon the two are on a plane to Lake Tahoe for one last fling. This final hurrah, however, turns into a comedy of errors when Gino is mistaken for a mafia boss.

What makes this film so irresistible is its careful blending of wit and sentimentality. Jerry is constantly getting into trouble while trying to play the role of an important mobster; naive Gino finds himself in some trouble of his own when he befriends some of the most powerful of mob bosses. As the film progresses, Gino wins the hearts of Jerry, the mobsters, and the viewing audience. Jerry's tough cover is paper thin and soon his compassion for Gino and dislike of the mob shines through.

The movie's stars, Don Ameche and Joe Mantegna, provide brilliant performances. Ameche, star of over fifty movies, is so believable as Gino that viewers will have a difficult time accepting him in other roles. Mantegna, star of "Three Amigos" and "Suspect," is a rising star who takes credit for most of the film's funny one-liners.

"Things Change" is a witty, refreshing film that entertains its audience from the minute the theatre's coming attractions end. Plot and characters like these do not come along often and should not be missed. Some things change, but David Mamet's creative genius and ability to tell a story never will.

Tough TCU wins over ND swimmers

By KEVIN REISCH
Sports Writer

As they headed down the final stretch, Irish swimmer Chris Petrillo appeared to have a shot at victory. However, his Texas Christian opponent had other intentions, making a powerful lunge and reaching the wall a fraction of a second before Petrillo.

This 400-yard freestyle relay Friday night at Rolfs Aquatic Center provided a fitting conclusion to the entire competition at the Notre Dame Invitational. The Notre Dame swimming program turned in a strong showing but continually had to settle for second best against a tough TCU squad.

"Texas Christian redefined the level of competition at this meet," explained Irish coach Tim Welsh. "They gave us a new standard to approach."

The Irish men's team, outscored by the Horned Frogs 226-162, finished ahead of Illinois-Chicago (138), Wabash (132), Xavier (114), Marquette (84), and Wayne State (50).

Exhibiting strength in the distance events, Notre Dame improved upon its results from the previous night, when it fell to TCU in a dual meet. In the 1000-yard freestyle relay, David Ledrick and Brian Rini combined for a win with a time of 9:40.68.

Sophomore Jim Byrne played a key role in three of five second-place outcomes for the Irish. Employed as both a leadoff and an anchor man, Byrne paced his relay teams in the 800-yard freestyle, 400-yard butterfly, and 400-yard backstroke races.

In the 3-meter diving event, Ed Veome and Adam Hirschfeld sprung to the top with a combined score of 392.65. Veome and Pat Dugan teamed up to capture second in 1-meter diving.

Like the men's squad, the Notre Dame women looked impressive despite dropping the majority of events to their main adversaries. The Horned Frogs sped past the Irish (226-186), who in turn topped Xavier (130), Illinois-Chicago (114), Saint Mary's (112), and Marquette (58).

Sophomore Amy Tri entered four races and incredibly led her relay teams to second place each time. The combination of Acampora, Quirk, Pamentor, and Moster in the 400-yard backstroke relay accounted for a triumph in 4:16.15.

In the 1-meter diving event, Jennifer Kipp and Allison Baker captured the crown by posting a score of 329 points. Kay Richter and Kris Penn collaborated to reach second in 3-meter diving.

"I think we had a very good meet. We swam more relaxed, more competitive, and more aggressive than last night throughout the program," said Welsh. "We are characteristically a team of depth, and this meet was a measurement of our depth."

For St. Mary's, the performance represented a marked improvement over last year. The squad consistently finished fourth or fifth in the swimming events.

Katie Cavanaugh and Carrie Cummings leaped to third place from the 1-meter diving board. In 3-meter diving, Cummings and Ann Blake also came in third.

"This year's team is vastly improved all-around over last year's," said coach Dennis Cooper. "For one thing, we filled all the events, which we were not able to do last year. Also, we were competitive in some of the relays."

said Rice coach Jerry Berndt, whose winless Owls fell to 0-8. "We made two crucial mistakes. We had a couple of guys out of lanes. But as soon as he hit it, I knew he had a touchdown."

Ismail surprisingly got the chance to return another kickoff with the Irish leading 38-9 early in the fourth quarter. "The Rocket" showed his gratitude by picking the ball up off the ground, cutting to the left side of the field and racing 83 yards to burn Rice for another touchdown.

"The last one we were just trying to squib it and take away their rhythm, but they still hit on us," said Berndt.

The second touchdown kickoff return tied a school record previously set by Paul Castner against Kalamazoo in 1922.

While Ismail's kickoff returns gave the Irish enough points to secure the victory, Notre Dame's offense also successfully rebounded from a lackluster showing last week at Navy. The Irish scored on four of their five first-half possessions, with a Ricky Watters fumble on the Rice 21 stopping the only non-scoring drive.

"Rice is a tough team coming off the ball, but we had something to prove," said junior offensive guard Tim Grunhard. "Our number-one goal was to get back to basics and get that attitude we had at the beginning of the season."

Notre Dame had 14 different players carry the ball Saturday for a total of 294 yards on 52 carries. Mark Green led the way with five rushes for 66 yards, including a 40-yard scamper in the first quarter that led to Notre Dame's second touchdown.

The Irish added two more touchdowns in the second half, the first coming on a three-yard run by Anthony Johnson and the second on a one-yard jaunt by Tony Brooks. Kicker Billy Hackett, who replaced Reggie Ho this weekend, had the first extra point blocked. A two-point conversion by Johnson followed the Brooks score.

The two teams exchanged field goals in the final two minutes of the half (Parsons hitting from 41, and Hackett from 42), and the Irish held a 31-6 halftime lead.

"I thought that offensively we played awfully well up front," said Holtz. "I was a little disappointed with our ability to execute in the passing game."

Irish quarterback Tony Rice completed three of eight passes for 80 yards, and backup Kent Graham was 6-of-10 for 65 yards.

The Owls were able to move the ball when quarterback Quentis Roper (21-of-35 for 197 yards) had time to throw the ball. But that wasn't often. Frank Stams, George Williams, Chris Zorich and Wes Pritchett each had turns sacking Roper, while Michael Stonebreaker led the Irish with 13 total tackles.

Notre Dame also broke up four passes and forced four turnovers. Jeff Alm and D'Juan Francisco had interceptions, and Pritchett and Steve Roddy recovered Owl fumbles.

"With their offensive line, a lot of the other schools had used kind of a head fake-faking one way and going the other way," said Zorich. "We saw that on the films and decided to do that too."

The Notre Dame offense wasn't quite done at halftime. A 19-yard run by Rodney Culver with 9:15 to play in the third made it 38-6.

After a Parsons 45-yarder in the first play of the final quarter, Ismail took off with his second touchdown. Hackett kicked a 28-yarder to raise the lead to 48-9, and Joe Jarosz seemingly ended the highlights with a six-yard touchdown run with 46 seconds left in the game.

But Rice's Nigel Codrington blocked Hackett's ensuing extra point attempt, and Billy Stone galloped 85 yards to the Irish endzone. The run gave Rice two points and closed the scoring at 54-11. It was the first time the new NCAA conversion rule had come into effect in Division I-A play.

Big mouths cost Oklahoma State; USC wins big

Associated Press

Some loose lips helped sink Oklahoma State.

The 12th-ranked Cowboys fell 31-28 Saturday to intrastate rival Oklahoma, ranked eighth, and a few off-the-cuff remarks by Oklahoma State fullback Garrett Limbrick may have made the difference.

With his team trailing 31-28 late in the fourth quarter, quarterback Mike Gundy marched the Cowboys from their ninth to the Oklahoma 20 and seemed poised to put Oklahoma State in the lead.

But on third-and-2, Limbrick was hit with a personal foul call, the Cowboys were penalized 15 yards, and their hopes ended when wide receiver Brent Parker dropped a perfect pass in the end zone.

No one officially confirmed the reason for the penalty, but Limbrick admitted he was heckling Oklahoma linebacker Richard Dillon after side judge Michael Borgard broke up a shoving match between the two players.

Southern Cal 35,
California 3

Rodney Peete passed for a career-high 305 yards and three touchdowns and Cleveland Colter returned an interception 29 yards for a touchdown as USC routed California.

The Trojans are 8-0, and 6-0 in Pac-10 play.

Miami, Fla. 34, Tulsa 3

Steve Walsh passed for three touchdowns to lead third-ranked Miami to a Homecoming Day victory.

Walsh, who has thrown 20 touchdown passes in Miami's last five games, tied Vinny Testaverde's school record of 26 in a season.

The Hurricanes are now 7-1 and Tulsa fell to 2-6.

West Virginia 51,
Cincinnati 13

Major Harris threw three touchdown passes before suffering a hip injury as No. 4 West Virginia used big plays against Cincinnati, 2-7, to remain unbeaten.

West Virginia, 9-0, put the game out of reach with a 24-point third quarter.

The Mountaineers' record is their best since the school started playing football in 1891.

Florida St. 59,
S. Carolina 0

Peter Tom Willis, starting for the first time this season, passed for 271 yards and four touchdowns as Florida State took advantage of mistakes to rout South Carolina.

It was the worst loss ever suffered at home by South Carolina, which had been riding a 14-game home winning streak.

The Seminoles improved to 8-1.

UCLA 16, Oregon 6

Troy Aikman threw for a touchdown and backup tailback Brian Brown ran 68 yards for another score as UCLA struggled to a Pacific 10 Conference victory.

UCLA, 5-1 in the Pac 10 and 8-1 overall, used the two second-half touchdowns to stay in the Rose Bowl race.

The Bruins rebounded from a 34-30 loss at Washington State last week conference and 6-3 for the season.

Michigan 22, Minnesota 7

Mike Gillette kicked five field goals and Tony Boles rushed for 184 yards on 32 carries as Michigan won the Little Brown Jug.

Michigan, leaders of the Big Ten, improved to 6-2-1 overall and 5-0-1 in the conference. A victory over Illinois next week would put the Wolverines in the Rose Bowl.

Illinois 21, Indiana 20

Jeff George threw a 5-yard touchdown pass to Mike Belamy with 26 seconds left to lead Illinois past 20th-ranked Indiana in a Big Ten game.

The victory improved Illinois' record to 5-3-1, 4-1-1 in the Big Ten. Indiana fell to 6-2-1 and 4-2.

Linebacker Julyon Brown recovered a fumble by Indiana quarterback Dave Schnell at the Hoosier 31-yard-line with 1:48 to play to set up the winning drive.

blocks and Shea, Shelton and freshman Jennifer Slosar each registered five kills.

Freshman setter Julie Bremner provided her hitters with 22 assists and cleverly set up the Irish attack while helping bring the team up to 14-9 for the season.

"I'm pleased we didn't drop down to their level," said Irish coach Art Lambert. "We started out a little slow, but we didn't panic and came back and forced them to play our game."

"It was good teamwork and I think Julie Bremner played a smart match. We beat a team we should have beaten them."

Friday night, the Irish had to work to beat the Hurons of Eastern Michigan as they won the four-game match 15-8, 18-16, 15-8 and 15-10.

Eastern Michigan's Roxanne Munch took a bite out of the Notre Dame's defense, tallying 21 kills, but the Irish countered with a weapon of their own as Waller finished with 19 kills for a team-high .571 hitting percentage and eight total blocks.

Bennett helped control the net as well, registering 17 kills and adding a team-high nine total blocks.

Shelton led the Irish defensively with 10 digs and Bremner added eight digs as well as 57 assists to help the Irish make the transition from defense to offense.

"Our heads weren't in the match against Eastern Michigan," said Lambert. "But we played well enough to get the win and come back strong to control the game against Michigan."

Ditka can relax: Bears win

Associated Press

While Mike Ditka sat in a hospital room and watched on television, his Chicago Bears made him feel pretty good.

Ditka, who suffered a mild heart attack Wednesday, watched with his wife and a doctor at Lake Forest Hospital on Sunday and he had to like what he saw as the Bears beat Tampa Bay 28-10.

"I think it would have been harder on him not to watch the game," said his wife Diana. "That would be more stress."

The game was a good test for Mike Tomczak, who once again replaced an injured Jim McMahon at quarterback. Tomczak, often the subject of Ditka tirades on the sidelines, completed 18 of 26 passes for 269 yards and upped his record to 12-2 as a replacement starter for McMahon.

"I played within my limitations," Tomczak said. "The offense put some points on the board and we broke the third-quarter jinx."

Bengals 42, Steelers 7

At Cincinnati, Eddie Brown set a club record with 216 yards receiving, including an 86-yard scoring play on the hosts' second play from scrimmage. Boomer Esiason threw three touchdown passes, his first in three games. He was 15-for-23 for 318 yards as Cincinnati rolled up more than 500 yards of offense.

The Bengals scored on their first three possessions and had little trouble with the Steelers, 2-8, their worst record since 1969, when they went 1-13 in Chuck Noll's first year as head coach.

Eagles 30, Rams 24

Philadelphia's defense victimized Jim Everett for four interceptions—the Rams quarterback had yielded just five, fewest in the NFL.

Randall Cunningham threw three touchdown passes, two to rookie tight end Keith Jackson, who entered the game as the league's leading receiver with 51 catches. Cunningham, who twice left the game with a sore right ankle, completed 22 of 39 passes for 323 yards for Philadelphia, 5-5.

The Rams, 7-3, had won five straight road games. They nearly got No. 6 but Everett, whose six completions carried the Rams to the Eagles' 18, was picked off by William Frizzell with 24 seconds left.

Patriots 21, Dolphins 10

John Stephens continued his strong running with 104 yards, giving him more than 100 yards in three consecutive games. The last Patriot to do that was Don Calhoun in 1976.

Stephens had a 13-yard TD run and Bob Perryman scored from the 1. On the series leading to those touchdowns, the Patriots stayed entirely on the ground. Of the 23 total plays on those two series, Stephens, a first-round draft choice from Northwestern (La.) State, ran 15 times for 75 of the 120 yards.

Giants 29, Cowboys 21

The Giants won their fourth consecutive game against the dregs of the NFL and stayed in control of the NFC east. After mediocre outings in two wins over Detroit and one against Atlanta, New York surged to 26 points in the first half against Dallas, 2-8. The Cowboys have lost six straight, the first time they have dropped that many in one season since their first year.

major drawback for the Gator Bowl, Shover said:

"I would assume it would be. We're guaranteed a national market and they're on a pay network."

The Fiesta Bowl also would be willing to increase its payout to put on a game for the National Championship, Shover said.

"Our payoff is actually higher than the reported $2.5 million," he said. "We're looking at $2.8 million, and it could go higher than that."

But attracting top-ranked teams to bowl games involves more than money, and McCandless said the Gator Bowl's fringe benefits make it more appealing. Most importantly, the Gator Bowl is second only to the Rose Bowl in seating capacity.

"We can seat 82,000 people, and we could provide 20,000 seats for each team—possibly more," McCandless explained. "And we feel we've done a great job on entertainment for the players. You ask the players from LSU last year and they'll all tell you about the great time they had in Jacksonville."

So while Notre Dame and West Virginia battle to stay in the National Championship hunt, the Gator and Fiesta Bowls are waging a battle of their own over the site of a possible Mountaineer-Irish showdown if the teams remain unbeaten.

But neither bowl wants to turn the situation into a bidding war.

"We'll extend our invitation to Notre Dame at the proper time, and I'm confident that everything will be handled properly," McCandless said. "I honestly don't think it will come down to a bidding war."

"We're competitive, but we're also very good friends," Shover said. "All these bowl guys are good friends of mine."

"I don't blame the Gator Bowl for being so aggressive," Shover added. "We're like that, too. I think we (the Fiesta Bowl) were No.13 when we started and now we're No.2. So we're kind of aggressive, too. We sweetened the pot a couple years ago."

The Fiesta Bowl increased its payoff and moved to prime time in 1986, when No.2 Penn State beat then top-ranked Miami to claim the National Championship.

Still in the game: Others scouting the Notre Dame-Rice game Saturday included the Orange, Citrus, Sugar and Cotton Bowls.

"We're still in the running," said Jim Barker of the Orange Bowl, which hosts the Big Eight champion in addition to an at-large team. "We have a great relationship with the Notre Dame people and we think a matchup against Oklahoma or Nebraska would be a big attraction that could decide the National Championship."

None of the bowl representatives at Saturday's game were scouting Rice.

Waitz wins another NY Marathon

Associated Press

NEW YORK --Steve Jones of Wales won the New York City Marathon on Sunday, redeeming himself after three years of sub-par marathons, and Grete Waitz of Norway led all the way in becoming the fastest women's finisher for a record ninth time.

Jones, 33, in his New York marathon debut, took the lead near the 12.4-mile mark, was caught briefly at 15 miles by Salvatore Bettiol of Italy, then moments later took command, completing the 26-mile 385-yard course in 2 hours, 8 minutes, 20 seconds.

Waitz, 35, who never has lost a New York City Marathon that she's finished, was clocked in 2:28:06 in beating 1984 Olympic gold medalist Joan Benoit Samuelson.

Improved ND hockey wins, ties with Dearborn

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Assistant Sports Editor

Irish hockey coach Ric Schafer might not have been happy about his team's early-season play, but he was all smiles with Notre Dame's weekend performance.

The Irish downed Michigan-Dearborn 4-1 Friday night at the Joyce ACC, then tied the Wolves 3-3 Saturday at Dearborn.

"It was a very good weekend for us," said Schafer. "There were some very encouraging signs."

Notre Dame, 3-4-1, rallied from a sluggish first period before 1790 fans Friday to cruise past the Wolves in what was expected to be a close contest between two evenly matched teams.

Irish wing Michael Curry's power play goal opened the scoring with 20 seconds left in the first period. Curry took a behind-the-net pass from Bob Bilton and beat Dearborn goalie Dave Church from around the left side of the crease. Bobby Herber also was credited with an assist.

Tim Kuehl extended the lead to 2-0 at 3:59 of the second period when he nailed a slap shot from behind the right circle after receiving a pass from linemate David Bankoske. Kuehl's goal, giving him the team lead with four on the season, also came on the power play.

Dearborn answered that just 17 seconds later on a goal by Joe Burton. But that was to be the Wolves' only goal of the evening.

"I didn't know if we'd see any games like that, only giving up one goal," said Schafer. "We didn't give them any real scoring opportunities, and that was the difference. We blocked a lot of shots; thank goodness that's in our bag of tricks."

Senior co-captain Brian Montgomery gave the Irish insurance at 13:21 of the second period with his first goal of the season. The goal, from the left side of the crease, came on assists from Curry and Rob Bankoske.

Herber ended the scoring in spectacular fashion with a breakaway goal at 8:49 of the final period. The senior from Edina, Minn., received an assist from Bruce Guay.

Irish goalie Lance Madson recorded 21 saves. Church had 22 saves for Dearborn.

"I'm embarrassed, I think the whole team's embarrassed," said Dearborn coach Tom Anastos. "Not taking anything away from Notre Dame, we embarrassed ourselves tonight. The two teams played giveaway early in the game, but Notre Dame played strong second and third periods, and we never woke up."

Anastos probably was considerably prouder with his team's performance at home Saturday, but his Wolves could not prevent a late Irish rally.

Dearborn led 3-1 when Notre Dame scored with just four minutes remaining in regulation. Schafer pulled Madson in the closing moments to get an extra attacker on the ice, and the Irish responded with a tying goal to send the game into overtime.

Neither team managed to score in the 10-minute session of sudden death overtime, and the game ended in a 3-3 tie. Schafer was extremely pleased with his team's effort.

"It was a classic collegiate hockey game between two evenly matched teams," said Schafer. "The first period was the best 20 minutes of hockey we've played this year. The second period, we had to kill off a few penalties. Dearborn played exceptionally well in the second and third periods."

Irish turn on heat to steam Rice

Ismail blasts two returns for TDs

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Assistant Sports Editor

Notre Dame's freshman split end Raghib Ismail is referred to as "the Rocket," partly because of his 4.28 speed in the 40-yard dash and partly because his actual first name is difficult to pronounce.

In Saturday's 54-11 cooking of Rice, Ismail showed off his speed with two touchdown kickoff returns and showed the Owls that no matter how hard it is to say his name (it's pronounced Ra-GIB), it's even tougher to catch him from behind.

"I thought Raghib Ismail's kickoff returns were crisp," said Irish coach Lou Holtz, who saw his team successfully defend its number-one ranking and up its record to 9-0. "He has outstanding speed and talent."

Ismail wouldn't take any of the credit for his pair of touchdowns Saturday.

"I have to give credit where credit is due, and none of it goes to me," said Ismail, whose brother Qadry is a freshman wide receiver for Syracuse. "The whole key to the returns was getting through the first line of blocking, and nobody got a clean shot at me. That is good blocking. I returned kickoffs in high school, but I get all my confidence from the blocking the kick return team gives me."

The first return, which went 83 yards and was keyed by a Steve Belles block, followed a Rice 70-yard opening drive that ended with a Clint Parsons 23-yard field goal. The 3-0 Rice lead lasted all of 13 seconds.

"He (Ismail) hit it good,"

ND soccer wins MCC tournament

Special to The Observer

FENTON, Mo. -The Notre Dame men's soccer team upset third-ranked Saint Louis University 2-0 Sunday at the St. Louis Soccer Park to win the Midwestern Collegiate Conference Tournament, virtually assuring the team of a bid to the NCAA Tournament this week.

Irish coach Dennis Grace was named the MCC Coach of the Year, and forward Randy Morris was chosen the MCC Player of the Year. Morris and midfielders Joe Sternberg and John Guignon were named to the All-MCC team.

The Irish got to the finals by destroying Detroit 6-0 Friday and beating fourth-ranked Evansville 2-0 Saturday.

With their performance over the past two weeks, the Irish, 17-3-2, should be one of 24 teams listed when the NCAA announces the bids this morning.

In the upset victory over the Billikens, Sternberg put the Irish in front at 14:12 with a header off a free kick by sweeper Mike Drury. Midfielder Mitch Kern made it 2-0 at 35:04 with a shot from 17 yards out.

Danny Lyons had a brilliant game in goal, recording nine saves in earning his third shutout of the weekend.

Saturday Morris' two goals propelled the Irish to the finals with an upset win over Evansville, the top-ranked team in the Great Lakes Region.

Friday the Irish blew out the Titans behind forward Pat Murphy's two goals. Forward Bruce "Tiger" McCourt, midfielders Steve LaVigne and Sternberg, and wingback Danny Gordon each added goals.

Gator Bowl upping the payoff ante to lure Irish

By MARTY STRASEN
Sports Editor

The Fiesta Bowl has a gator snapping at its heels.

As Notre Dame continues down its road to a possible battle for the National Championship in January, the Gator Bowl wants the top-ranked Irish to know that such a game would not have to be played in Arizona. The Jacksonville, Fla., bowl might be willing to raise its payout from $1 million per team to more than $2.5 million if it could stage a game for the National Championship.

"Certainly to attract a team of this caliber and a game of this caliber, we would have to raise our figure substantially," said Tom McCandless, past president and chairman of the Gator Bowl selection committee, during Notre Dame's 54-11 thrashing of Rice on Saturday.

Both the Gator Bowl and Fiesta Bowl representatives said they are interested in lining up a game between the No. 1-ranked Irish and No. 4 West Virginia, both 9-0 with two games remaining in the regular season. Official bids are extended Sunday, Nov. 19, the day Notre Dame faces Penn State in the last Irish home game of the year.

But the Gator Bowl cannot offer network television exposure, and that could prove to be the drawback that sends Notre Dame west. ESPN has broadcasting rights to the season's only Jan. 1 bowl game, which is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m.

The other major bowls, including the NBC-televized Fiesta Bowl, will be played Jan. 2.

"Cable television has come on strong the last few years, and we see the date as an asset," McCandless defended.

"We are the only game on at that time, so you're not competing with anyone else. Anyone who wants to see the game is going to find a way to watch it."

ESPN would provide some of the extra payoff money for the Gator Bowl. The city of Jacksonville and Mazda, which sponsors the Gator Bowl, also would contribute.

But Fiesta Bowl representative Bill Shover still likes his bowl's chances of hosting Notre Dame on Jan. 2. When asked whether ESPN coverage is a

Irish continue to win, beat Michigan in three

By MOLLY MAHONEY
Sports Writer

The Michigan Wolverines came into the JACC Saturday night trying to get out of the rain and the cold. But the Notre Dame women's volleyball team greeted them with a storm inside as well—a man-made one—shaking down the thunder before Michigan could get its game going.

It took the Irish just 53 minutes to methodically manhandle Michigan, beating the Wolverines in three games, 15-5, 15-6 and 15-5.

The Irish started sluggishly in the first game, but they were able to steadily score behind the armwing of senior middle blocker Mary Kay Waller once they got their offense into gear.

Michigan grabbed a small lead early in the game, leading 4-1, before Notre Dame took control of the net offensively and consistently picked up the Wolverine attack defensively to prevent them from mounting a comeback.

The second game featured much of the same for the Irish, as the frontline pounded away at the Wolverine defense. Seniors Zanette Bennett and Maureen continued their strong play from the first game, as did sophomore Tracey Shelton.

The game stayed tight until the Irish broke a 6-6 tie with a varied attack of soft, offspeed shots into the seams of Michigan's defense and powerful kills that found the floor or skipped off the bodies of their opponents.

Notre Dame controlled the third game as well, as they took an 8-0 lead and never looked back.

Sophomores Amy White and Rachel Hall and freshman Katie Kavanaugh came into the game to continue the Irish dominance that forced the Wolverines to record a negative hitting percentage for the second straight game.

Waller led the Irish offensive assault with nine kills for an impressive .642 hitting percentage and added a team-high six digs.

Bennett contributed seven kills and a team-high six total
