Trespassers at ND apprehended

Four "peeping Tom's" were apprehended early Tuesday morning by Campus Security.

Phillip Johnson, assistant director of security, said that at 2:30 a.m. residents of Howard Hall reported four young men who were looking into their room to the hall security monitor.

The security monitor then immediately notified the main security office by radio, said Johnson. The men left the area as the security officer arrived.

Johnson said that the officer was able to obtain descriptions of the men before leaving Howard Hall.

Two men were found near St. Michael's laundry and the other two were at the bus shelter near the post office in a vehicle, said Johnson.

One adult was arrested for trespassing, two of the youths were turned over to Park View Juvenile Center, and the fourth person was released to his parent or guardian, said Johnson.

Johnson said that all the men were charged with trespassing and one man was taken to St. Joseph County Jail.

"The credit here must go to the residents of Howard Hall for quickly reporting the incident. I encourage all students to report any suspicious behavior on campus immediately to security," said Johnson.

Investigators are looking into the possibility that this incident is related to other recent campus crimes, said Johnson.

Construction site explosion kills six, creates large craters

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo.— Construction trailers loaded with 45,000 pounds of a chemical used in dynamite exploded Tuesday, killing six firefighters, ripping large craters in the ground and shattering windows up to 10 miles away.

The first trailer was filled with an estimated 30,000 pounds of ammonium nitrate, which is used to make dynamite explode more evenly, authorities said. The second trailer was storing about 15,000 pounds of the material. A third explosion occurred moments later in what was believed to be a portion of the first trailer that had been blown apart.

Debris was scattered over several acres around the construction site and onto nearby U.S. 71, said police spokesman Sgt. Greg Mills.

The blasts left two very large craters, 30 to 40 feet wide and 6 or 7 feet deep, and a smaller one about 15 feet across and 4 feet deep.

"The remains of one fire truck is sitting very close to one crater," said Fire Department spokesman Harold Knabe. "There is another vehicle of some sort, a large red truck. The other fire truck—there is absolutely no evidence that it was ever there."

Windows, some of them large plate-glass panels, were broken in scores of businesses and homes. One merchant, Stan Katz, said looters took items from his Food City Warehouse supermarket, where several large windows were shattered.

A woman at a motel about three-quarters of a mile away said the force knocked her from her bed to the floor.

Firefighters were already at the construction site when the explosions rocked the area about 4 a.m. Two security guards at the site had called them when they noticed a pickup truck on fire, Knabe said.

Investigators believe the fires might have been intentionally set, Knabe said.

Security guards reported seeing someone and went to investigate, Knabe said. When they returned, they found one of their pickup trucks burning, and called firemen.

Malloy dedicates new homeless shelter

By JIM WINKLER
Staff Reporter

South Bend's new Center for the Homeless, located in the old Gilbert's building on South Michigan Avenue, was formally dedicated in a ceremony yesterday that featured University President Father Edward Malloy as the keynote speaker.

The University purchased the building last summer and renovated the 38,000-square foot former department store. Much of the work was done by volunteers from the student body, staff, and faculty, and cost approximately $400,000. The Center will be leased by Notre Dame to the Council of Providers of Services to the Homeless (COPOSH) which originally had planned on purchasing the facility.

COPOSH has turned the responsibility of operation and maintenance over to the United Religios Community (URC) which will raise money to finance the Center and will staff it as well. URC has appointed Father Stephen Newton to manage the 24-hour, seven-days-a-week facility.

At the Center 100 beds are available for single men and women and for families. In addition, the Center will provide professional counseling in fifteen disciplines, including alcohol counseling, job training, pregnancy counseling and housing referral. These services will be offered by local social work agencies.

At the dedication, Father Malloy compared those in the audience to those who weren't there: the homeless who will use the shelter when it opens its doors on December 1. "Most of us have never been down on our luck such that we couldn't get shelter. We have always been able to come up with the money or credit card, or recognition that allows us to find a decent place to sleep at night, but we are only a sickness away, one job away, from the people who will be here," Malloy said. He said the volunteerism and dedication to the Center "serves as an act of charity, love and justice, one of need and reciprocal return."

Malloy concluded by saying that he was proud that Notre Dame had played a part in "the human effort that brought us here." He expressed hope that Notre Dame would always be there to share the volunteer load.

In addition to Malloy, two others associated with the University spoke at the dedication. David Link, the dean of the Notre Dame Law School, is the president of COPOSH. He expressed his gratitude for all those who had helped bring the idea of a Center into reality. Link pointed out that this is only a temporary solution and that South Bend still needed to solve the problem of homelessness. Link emphasized the value of volunteering. INSIDE COLUMN

Thanksgiving was better with the Irish

The Thanksgiving weekend many of us spent in southern California, our safe trip and the undefeated Irish show that we have much to be thankful for: Lou Holtz's Fighting Irish, commercial pilots, bus drivers and sunshine in November.

The 80 Saint Mary's students on the trip learned what United's Friendly Skies are all about last Wednesday. We missed our flights by three and a half hours because a tanker had crashed on the expressway, creating a 20-mile holiday traffic jam on the road to O'Hare.

There were two planes to catch, and we had two moments of silence as each flew over our heads. When we finally arrived, we sat in the bus for another hour and a half while United decided what to do with us. Their first plan was to get us on a plane at 1 p.m. Thanksgiving Day. But they told us to sit tight and they would see what could be done.

Shortly afterward, they told us that they had added a flight to Los Angeles for us. To arrange the extra flight, the airline woke a pilot out of bed, pulled a flight crew together and stocked the plane with food and fuel.

Not one employee we talked to could remember adding a flight anywhere for any reason, especially on a holiday as busy as Thanksgiving.

They fed us, let us sing the Victory March as many times as we wanted to and as loudly as we wanted to. They told us jokes, gave us blankets and pillows and woke us when we landed. The pilot came out to welcome us to Los Angeles and we were off.

A flight attendant complimented our chaperone after we landed, saying that he had never been thanked by so many people in one day. He said, "Well, I guess you guys are America's best and brightest after all."

Unfortunately, the agent from Great American Travel got a different impression of our students when he stayed with us in the Anaheim Marriott.

He was awake for 72 consecutive hours, answering calls about trouble being caused by students in the hotel. There were pizzas thrown into the swimming pools, a group of students emptied the sand from the ash trays in front of an elevator and urinated in it Saturday after the game. He also got a call at 3 a.m. because a young man was running nude through the halls wearing a green Notre Dame hat.

His exact words on Sunday were, "Really impressive, guys," as he loaded the last bus of students onto the airport shuttle. He had a lot to be thankful for last weekend, too. . . mostly

But the Irish won. The weather could not have been better for the game and once again, there was much to be thankful for. The Orange County Alumni Association hosted a huge tailgater with plenty of food and drinks outside the Coliseum that made everyone feel at home.

We were thankful also for our bus driver, Gilberto Sanchez of Hot Dogger Tours, who drove us to the Coliseum on game day. We gave him a blue and gold pompon and he yelled "Go Irish!" as he switched lanes on the freeway, shaking it. He took the bus intercom and "warned" us when a car full of USC fans was approaching either side of the bus. He'd scream, "You ain't got no class" to the passengers wearing crimson and gold and he refused to let any of those cars pass or cut in front of our bus on our way to the game.

Most of us missed spending Turkey Day with our families but if we could have been anywhere else on Thanksgiving weekend, most of us would have been in vacationing California and watching the Irish close out their regular season, undefeated for the first time since 1973.

Garfinkel speaks on child support

By KATHY RYAN
Staff Reporter

Irwin Garfinkel, professor of social work at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, gave a lecture last night titled, "Child Support Assurance: A New Addition to our Social Security Menu." Garfinkel supports a social security program which has an assured benefit policy for children eligible for child support.

Garfinkel discussed many problems of our current child support program on both the private and public levels.

Private child support is currently handled on state and local levels. "The state statutes that governed child support left discretion to judges on the local level in the terms of setting of support and in terms of enforcing support," said Garfinkel. He feels judges have been too easy on offenders and are thus fostering and condoning the irresponsibility of the non-custodial parents.

The current public child support policy, Aid to Families with Dependent Children (A.F.D.C.), was instituted in 1935 as part of the Social Security Act. Garfinkel stressed that the policy "reduced poverty of those who were in desperate circumstances, but the structure of the program was inappropriate to changing demographics and changing expectations around the role of women."

Garfinkel promotes a system which supplements the child's family's income instead of substituting for it as welfare does. He feels this money can be obtained by putting the responsibility on the parents and adding new laws which include a child's entitlement to a certain amount of money which Garfinkel calls an assured benefit. This program would pay the difference between what the non-custodial parent pays and the set amount of income the government feels the child should receive.

Garfinkel feels enforcing child support laws should help the poor and the money should not be redistributed into the middle and upper classes as it has been in the past through reduction of taxes. He estimates that if seventy percent of what non-custodial parents owed was collected and combined with the money that would be saved from the A.F.D.C., the Assured Benefit Program could help half of those in need with no cost to the government.

Garfinkel feels there is much to be done in establishing paternity, the responsibility of the non-custodial parent, and setting up strict guidelines for the amount of money to be collected.

Garfinkel is the third speaker in the series entitled "The Year of the Child in Family Policy" which is sponsored by the AT&T Visiting Scholar Series of the Institute for Scholarship in the Liberal Arts, the Heshburgh Program in Public Service and the departments of economics and government.

HPC discusses blood drive challenge

Siegfried played host to the Hall Presidents Council for the first time last night.

Among the items covered was the challenge issued by Notre Dame to West Virginia for a blood drive contest. Exact dates and times to donate will be publicized.

Sally Derengoski, of Non-Varsity Athletics addressed the council concerning the Late Night Olympics to be held Jan. 27. Derengoski asked the HPC to "limit the number of scheduled activities and dorm dances on that night. Dorms are paired in teams and one dorm's SYR may greatly hinder another dorm's participation."

Last year 1,500 participated in Late Night Olympics and raised $2,000 to give to charity. NVA "hopes to make this year even more successful. Saint Mary's will also be included in a more complete way (in the event)," said Derengoski.

Also present to speak to the HPC was Cindy Petrites of Campus Wide Debates and John Hamill the Political Concerns Commissioner. Petrites and Hamill detailed the Iceberg Debates to be held early next semester. The debates are designed to "increase political and social awareness around campus and can be a great alternative to Monday night football for a few weeks next semester," said Hamill.

The Iceberg debates are set up as a "single elimination tournament with a consolation round so every team will debate twice. Topics will be announced in advance, giving ample time for the teams to prepare," said Hamill. Each team of four members must have at least two members on it from the sponsoring dorm, with one of the other two members being of the opposite sex. A $50 entry fee is required to go towards the prizes—$500 for the winning hall and $250 for the runner up. The debates will run from the last week in January through February and will not conflict with basketball games.

Strong limitations placed on power of Gorbachev

Associated Press

MOSCOW-- President Mikhail Gorbachev bowed to criticism of his constitutional reforms Tuesday, saying he will accept tighter limits on presidential power and try to accommodate republics clamoring for more autonomy.

Gorbachev, acknowledging the political give-and-take forming in the freer atmosphere he has fostered, told the Supreme Soviet, or parliament:

"Our own socialist system of 'checks and balances' is taking shape in this country, designed to protect society from any violations of socialist legality at the highest state level."

The Supreme Soviet is considering during its three-day session a package of almost 120 articles of legislation first published five weeks ago that Gorbachev says are the first major step toward a political system based on law, not central dictate.

But the draft laws faced stiff criticism that they actually strengthen the presidency, which Gorbachev assumed on Oct. 1, against the legislature, and strengthen Moscow's power against that of the 15 Soviet republics.

The unprecedented criticism of the proposed legislation was highlighted by the Estonian republic's Nov. 16 "declaration of sovereignty" over all internal affairs and demand to review all new Soviet legislation. Several Supreme Soviet deputies, including two top officials from the Baltic republics, registered dissatisfaction Tuesday with elements of the reform.

Arnold Ruutel, the Estonian president, told reporters that Supreme Soviet deputies only received copies of the amended proposals on Tuesday. They have not been published.

But Gorbachev, detailing some of the changes to the 1,500 Supreme Soviet members, said, "It is obvious that some of the provisions of the bills were not formulated precisely enough and caused quite a few critical remarks in the course of discussions."

"The draft now gives the U.S.S.R. Supreme Soviet the right to repeal decrees and decisions by its Presidium, and orders by the Supreme Soviet president," Gorbachev said.

That was implied in the Soviet Constitution, which requires Supreme Soviet confirmation of directives of the Presidium, the highest executive body on which Gorbachev serves as chairman.

But the Supreme Soviet almost never has challenged any such directive, and the proposed constitutional amendments said nothing about Supreme Soviet review.

Gorbachev's reforms call for the formation next year of a

Congress of People's Deputies, a 2,250-member legislative body that will include representation from the Communist Party, trade and creative unions, and social organizations as well as geographical legislative districts. The Congress will choose a smaller Supreme Soviet, which is to become more active.

He said the Congress would have power to recall any official it appoints, including the president.

One of three charges against North dropped

Associated Press

WASHINGTON-- The judge in the Iran-Contra case on Tuesday upheld two of the central charges against Oliver North but dismissed the third count.

U.S. district Judge Gerhard Gesell refused to dismiss the two charges of conspiracy to defraud the government and theft of government property against the former National Security Council aide that arose from the diversion of U.S.-Iran arms-sale proceeds to the Nicaraguan rebels.

"The indictment clearly alleges a conspiracy which involved concealing the very existence of the profits of the enterprise from the start and hiding from Congress information relating to the conspirators' assistance for the Contras," Gesell said.

"Its purpose depended on deceit from the start, and acts of concealment were actually part of the commission of the substantive crime," the judge said of North's contention the conspiracy count was invalid because it alleged more than one criminal conspiracy.

But Gesell dismissed a wire fraud charge, saying it "is, in many ways, a cumulative count" that would only create "substantial confusion in the minds of the jurors."

All three charges also were filed against North's co-defendants: former National Security Adviser John Poindexter and arms dealers Albert Hakim and retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord.

Gesell's dismissal of the wire fraud count suggests that charge may also be dropped against the other defendants.

South Shore to continue trains to Chicago despite financial trouble

Associated Press

GARY, Ind.-- Officials of the Northern Indiana Commuter Transportation District plan to make an offer to buy the South Shore Railroad's troubled passenger and freight operations.

The railroad is in financial trouble because of losses in its freight operation, officials say. The district and Metra, an Illinois funding authority, subsidize the passenger operation with state and federal money.

District officials also said Monday that they will begin negotiating on Friday a subsidy agreement for 1989 with Stratford Partners, a consulting firm managing the railroad until a new owner is found, and will appeal the Interstate Commerce Commission ruling a week ago that allows the commuter service to terminate Jan. 1.

Despite the railroad's financial problems, district board president William Carmichael said the passenger trains, which carry about 6,000 week-day commuters along the South Bend-to-Chicago route, will continue to run.

"The passengers need not feel jeopardized, despite what's been going on," Carmichael said.

FAA calls for additional alarm system on jetliners

Associated Press

WASHINGTON-- The Federal Aviation Administration told the airlines Tuesday it wants an additional warning device in the cockpits of all U.S. commercial jetliners to tell pilots whether the critical takeoff alarm system is working.

Commercial jetliners have alarm systems that are supposed to warn pilots if the plane's critical control devices such as wing flaps are not in the proper position for a takeoff.

But in at least two recent crashes it is suspected that the alarms failed to sound because of a malfunction. A spot check earlier this year of Boeing 727 aircraft showed 35 cases in which the alarms either failed or did not operate properly, according to the FAA.

The FAA said in a proposed order Tuesday that it wants the airlines to install in cockpits of all large commercial jets an additional warning light that would go on if power has been disrupted for some reason to the takeoff warning system.

The proposed directive, which is expected to go into effect early next year and give airlines another year to comply, would affect about 3,700 large commercial jets, according to the FAA.

The modification, which likely would be made during a plane's routine maintenance so as not to interrupt normal service, would apply to aircraft manufactured by Boeing, McDonnell Douglas, Lockheed and Airbus Industrie, the European consortium, as well as foreign manufacturers of smaller jets such as Fokker and British Aerospace.

"You're talking about the entire (U.S.) passenger fleet of large jet airplanes," FAA spokesman Fred Farrar said. Some aircraft- but probably only a few- may already have the additional warning devices, which are expected to cost $1,050 per aircraft to install, he said.

Airlines have until February to comment on the proposal, after which the FAA is expected to issue a mandatory requirement fairly quickly, officials said. While the air carriers will have another year to comply, many probably will begin immediately to make the modification in some aircraft.

The alarm systems have been a focus of attention in two major airline crashes within the last 15 months.

Link's partner in much of the planning of the Center was J. D'Arcy Chisholm, Associate Director of Notre Dame's Institute for Pastoral and Social Ministry. "The only thing that would make me happier is if the need for this Center did not exist," Chisholm said. He continued by saying that America needs to find a way to develop affordable housing if "we are going to have George Bush's kinder and gentler nation."

Father Newton concluded the dedication by explaining the logo for the center. The logo was designed by Adworks and depicts a pair of hands closing around a heart. "The hands are warming the heart, while at the same time, the heart warms the hands," said Newton. "We can reach beyond those we need to those who need us." Bent rule caused jet crash

Associated Press

IRVING, Texas-- The pilot of a Delta Air Lines jetliner that crashed Aug. 31, killing 14 people, testified Tuesday that some rules might have been bent in readying the Boeing 727 for takeoff but that preparations were adequate.

Larry Davis admitted seeming deviations from the rules under questioning by aerospace engineer Jeff Gorney as the National Transportation Safety Board opened an inquiry into the crash on takeoff at Dallas International Airport. Ninety-four people survived.

For instance, the Delta veteran of 23 years said he had used hand signals instead of calling out completion of each item on the pre-flight checklist and had made a takeoff briefing at the gate instead of on the runway.

"I like to get as much done as possible before we get into the position of getting rushed," said Davis.

Gorney also said a flight attendant was allowed into the cockpit when the jet was waiting to take off, despite an Federal Aviation Administration rule requiring a "sterile" cockpit once the plane has left the gate.

But he noted that the plane was "waiting in a line of traffic" and added: "I don't believe it was a critical phase of flight, but technically it was (in violation)."

Bad shuttle tire will not stop launch

Associated Press

CAPE canaveral, fla. (AP) -Nasa forged ahead Tuesday with the countdown for the secret mission of space shuttle Atlantis despite a forecast for unacceptably high wind and rain showers at launch time.

The managers said in a statement they weren't concerned by one lingering problem: a leaking tire on the shuttle's main landing gear.

Technicians can't reach the tire, which is filled with gaseous nitrogen, while the landing gear doors are closed. A refill would require rolling the shuttle back to its hangar and separating it from the external fuel tank, a process that would take weeks.

The upcoming launch is being treated with as much secrecy as possible and the Air Force has said only that it is scheduled for Thursday between 6:32 a.m. and 9:32 a.m. EST.

J.Montana appeals for lost girl

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO-- Football quarterback Joe Montana and his wife Jennifer, flanked by FBI agents, made a dramatic appeal Tuesday for the return of a 9-year-old girl who was abducted from a market on Nov. 19.

"We're here as parents . . . to ask the kidnapper of Michaela to please release her," said the San Francisco 49ers player. "Jennifer and I talk just about nightly how we would feel going through this. I know and she knows how important it would be if this were our daughter for someone to come forward."

Michaela Garecht was abducted from a supermarket parking lot near her home in Hayward, across the bay from San Francisco. An 8-year-old girl who was with her described the man as white, anywhere from 18 to his early 20s, 6 feet tall with shoulder-length, blond hair and a pockmarked or pimped face.

The Montanas, who have two young daughters, spoke at the request of the FBI at the agency's San Francisco office.

The FBI said it has intensified the search for the child by sending 40,000 information packets to truck stops and police departments nationwide. The packets include recent photographs of the blue-eyed youngster and an artist's sketch of the man who took her.

Montana said the thought of losing one of their daughters to a kidnapper "just about brings tears to our eyes."

Football tradition overshadows academics

Welcome back, domers and Domettes. You must all have had a great Thanksgiving break. Mom's roast turkey and pumpkin pie surely taste better than the dining halls' tofu and chicken wings, don't they? You all look reinvigorated. And what's more, your faces smile No. 1. Just as you see the old Golden Dome bathed in renewed glory, so can I see glory aglow on your faces. Whatever had you done over the break, I know you could not have missed the USC game. What a great game! Our heroes once again demonstrated that Notre Dame is No. 1. Their great deeds will be the talk of the town under the Dome this whole week.

Football is fun. Football is excitement. Unfortunately, the football season is near its conclusion. What will come up in God's little acre are finals and long hours of studying. After the athletes won the No. 1 title on the fields for Notre Dame's athletics, here comes our chance to fight for Notre Dame's academic reputation. I assume all of us understand that these are two separate matters. It is common sense that being big in athletics does not mean being big in academics. It is also common sense that when it comes to the matter of importance, academics goes before athletics in a school. We are, after all, sent here by parents for the degrees. The athletics only serve to invigorate our bodies, to harmonize our minds and to enrich our lives, all of which ensure us better achievement in academics rather than provide replacements for it. If a school is likened to a dog, athletics are only its tail.

Common sense though it is, there is the practical need to emphasize it. For historical reasons, the name of our school has been irreversibly connected to football. When one mentions Notre Dame, people think of football. It is not bad that the competitiveness in football has won our school much publicity in the earlier stages of development. But publicity is one thing; reputation is another. As the school grows stronger in academics, what the school needs is reputation, not mere publicity. The academic reputation cannot be won on the football field. The only way a school can establish its academic reputation is through academic means, namely teaching, researching and publishing.

Over the past few weeks, people have talked much about the overshadowing of the graduate schools by the undergraduate school. Leaving the truth of that aside, I feel more real and more devastating is the overshadowing of the academic program by the athletic program. What was the co-publicizing effect of the athletics and the academics in the earlier stages of the academic development may become the overshadowing effect of athletics on academics when the school is on its way to academic prominence. Cynics may degrade Notre Dame's academic competitiveness on the ground of its athletic competitiveness, especially when we ourselves are not cautious enough to keep the two matters straight from each other.

Our former president, Father Heshburgh, had worked for more than thirty years in an effort to separate the academics from the athletics and to foster an academic program as competitive as the athletic one. He had succeeded in the latter more than in the former, probably because facts are not nearly as stubborn as biases. I can see the continuing effort in the current administration in changing the school's image. However, I find quite questionable one of the means it is using: advertising for the academics in TV commercials during football games.

The Notre Dame commercial during the USC game goes like this: Notre Dame is a Catholic institution of higher learning with strong academic programs. Knute Rockne, before he became the coach of Notre Dame football team, lectured on chemistry at Notre Dame. Next time you hear about Notre Dame football, think of chemistry. Viewers probably will. And so will they think of football next time they hear about Notre Dame chemistry. The name for this phenomenon is, as every psychology major knows, conditioned response. It was discovered by the Russian psychologist Pavlov that if one, over several trials, lights a red lamp before one gives a dog a piece of bone, the dog will salivate any time afterwards one lights a red lamp. The human mind can be conditioned in the same manner. So my advice is: let people think of football when they watch football.

I believe that academic reputation and athletic reputation can peacefully coexist so long as they are kept clear of each other. I am therefore not advocating suppression of the athletic program. Believe me, I am as much a football fan as you are. It's a fact that the dog has a disproportionate tail. Tailoring it is not necessary. It is probably the fashion in the dog world (The dogs here have always led the dog fashion) to possess an impressive tail. It is beautiful. It is No. 1. Let the dog wag it, so long as it does not wag the dog.

I am proud of the reputations Notre Dame dogs already enjoy: No. 1 athletic; No. 2 handsome (according to the magazine "Playdog"). I hope they will add to these one more: No. 1 intelligent.

Senior fights a battle against cancer

Dear Editor:

I have just returned from Bloomfield, Michigan, where I visited a Notre Dame senior named Carlos Petrozzi. He is battling cancer and has asked me to write you a letter expressing his appreciation for all of the letters, calls, and visits. He really misses not being able to be here with all of us. He hopes to once again beat the dreaded disease. When he was a senior in high school he had a brain tumor surgically removed just before coming to Notre Dame for his freshman year. The tumor has reappeared in his pelvic bone.

His spirits were very good when I visited with him and his family. He smiled a lot and explained in detail how he was going to fight with all of his might. We celebrated the sacrament of the sick together, and I could see in his eyes that his deep faith in the Lord is certainly a source of strength for him.

He spoke proudly of the letters he had received from Father Malloy and also from Father Tyson. I gave him an autographed picture of the football team and a coach's hat from Lou Holtz. The inscription of the photo read: "I hope that our team can have the same courage that you have shown!" The hat had the inscription: "To Carlos, Assistant Football Coach, N.D., Lou Holtz."

All of this brought some great smiles to Carlos's face since he is a very strong fan of our football team. Victory not only for our football team but also for his fight against cancer.

Carlos really needs our prayers during the next month. He will be undergoing a massive dose of chemotherapy to suppress his immune system and eliminate the tumor. A bone marrow transplant will then follow. One of his twin sisters will be giving him the bone marrow that will rebuild his immune system.

As I left, Carlos came outside to my car by himself and shook my hand. He expressed how much he loved Notre Dame and all the people there. "I know that I am not just a number there! They do really care for me." He then told me to make sure that I told everyone how much he appreciates all everyone is doing. He especially likes it when people go to the Grotto and light candles and pray for him.

So, during the next month, let us all storm heaven with our prayers. Let us also stay in contact with Carlos. He can receive mail:

Carlos Petrozzi, Jr.
27887 Woodcreek Way
Bloomfield Hills, MI 48013

I will continue to stay in contact with him and keep the Notre Dame community posted on his progress.

Folk Choir: 'Part of a creative trend'

accent writer

Upon entering the grandeur of Sacred Heart Church for 12:15 Sunday Mass, one will delight in the echoes of a Gregorian chant. The Notre Dame Folk Choir sings this repetitious melody to create a calm, reflective mood so that Mass-goers will let go of the hurried world outside and focus on God and prayer.

Throughout the mass, the 26 student members of the Folk Choir, along with their director Steve Warner, will lead the congregation in celebration and prayer with a variety of liturgical music from different cultures and eras.

The name folk choir commonly denotes a selection of informal, homey music, or as director Warner describes it, "heart to heart, intimate and domestic." Although the 15 year old choir has gradually become more formal, it still works to convey the friendly warmth of the word "folk." The choir appreciates that some people wish to celebrate Mass in an informal manner as opposed to the formality of a mass with a full liturgical choir.

A combination of flutes, organ, guitar, trumpet, harp, and bodhran, an archaic drum, furnish the instrumental accompaniment to the 20 vocalists, five of each voice, which make up the choir. The variety of instruments, the employment of four separate voices, and the addition of a formal cantor exemplify some of the ways in which the choir has become more formalized.

Because of the choir's unique musical needs director Steve Warner utilizes his knowledge of music and liturgy to rewrite and revise much of their written music. Warner tries to "bring integrity" to the music of the choir by "crafting it in a choral fashion and writing out parts." The music which he composes has a sense of "looking forward and backward," traditional yet looking to the new. The director notes that liturgical music is "blossoming as a new form" ever since the Catholic Mass has been held in English and the Notre Dame Folk Choir is an active part of that creative trend.

To deepen and spread their knowledge and experience with liturgical music, the folk choir traveled to Ireland in the spring of 1988. The trip was sponsored by several organizations including the Archdiocese of Dublin, the American-Ireland Fund, and the University itself.

While absorbing the wonderful sights of Shannon, Waterford, and Dublin, the choir participated in liturgical workshops, gave performances and sang Masses. The folk choir was allowed to do the music for Masses at Irish monastic sites such as Glenstal Abbey, where no other outside group had ever participated before.

As a result of their overseas journey, the choir has developed and enriched their own reputation and the reputation of Notre Dame internationally. The trip was especially extraordinary in that it was one of few cross-cultural exchanges in pastoral and liturgical music. The choir has begun to utilize some of the music they learned in Ireland, here at Notre Dame. With appropriate funding, the group hopes to tour Ireland again in the near future.

Three year choir member Christina Fallon feels that the 12:15 Mass has "come into its own" recently as a result of the warmth brought to it by the folk choir. The members have built a community together as a result of their dedication to the aims and hopes of the choir, those being to enrich and enliven the prayer life of the whole Notre Dame community through music.

It's Mr. RoncoRock

One thing about college--you rarely get a chance to watch much television. I expected to miss my favorite shows like David Letterman and "Star Trek," but lately I think I've been going through TV withdrawal. I almost long for a repeat episode of geniuses as Boxcar Willie and 'Zamfir, master of the pan flute' and Ronco (the makers of quality products like Mr. Microphone and the in-the-shell egg scrambler) have joined forces to produce the finest television offer of all time; It's new, it's now, sure for generations to come!

How much would you expect to pay for a keepsake of this quality? But wait, don't answer yet, because there's more--if you act now, we will give you, absolutely free, this fabulous new record set: 'Disco Polka Rock' filled with chart-busting hits never before heard by the ear of man and not sold in any changes and I see an ad for a horror film.

The same deep-voiced announcer begins: "The terror is unthinkable... but the unthinkable is real. Just when you thought it was safe to go after that stubborn ring around the collar--the sheer savage horror lunges out without warning like a drooling, demon-possessed hell-beast from the darkest, most hideously evil depths of the infernal satanic netherworld. Ronco films presents: 'The Laundry Man Cometh.' It all began innocently enough..."

Vapid Housewife: "That's funny, dear; the house has been broken into, but all the criminals did was replace our regular laundry detergent with this brand X."

Dun-dun-dun-duh! (Foreboding music.)

(The picture shows the housewife being chased around the house by the Oxydol man, who is holding two shirts.)

Man (menacingly toneless): "Which shirt is whiter? Which shirt is whiter? Which shirt..."

Housewife: "I don't know! I don't know! Aaaaaaaah!"

Here I wake up in a cold sweat. I think it should be clear by now... I need help. I've got to admit my addiction. I'm a teleholic. But for now--I've gotta get some viewing time in. You know its a bad sign when you catch yourself singing the "Gilligan's Island" theme song--and suddenly you notice you know all the words by heart.

Michael Stonebreaker (42) moves in for the kill last weekend on Southern Cal's Rodney Peete. Stonebreaker finished third in yesterday's Butkus Award balloting behind Derrick and Broderick Thomas.

Notre Dame's Stonebreaker finishes third with 17 votes

Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. -Alabama's slashing play-breaker Derrick Thomas nosed out his buddy, Broderick Thomas of Nebraska, to win the fourth annual Butkus Award Tuesday as the nation's outstanding college linebacker.

Mike Stonebreaker of Notre Dame was third.

Alabama Coach Bill Curry called Derrick Thomas, a 6-foot-4, 220-pound outside linebacker, "one of the greatest in Alabama history."

An All-Southeast Conference performer with 22 sacks, he said he realized he was following in the footsteps of former NFL star Dick Butkus, for whom the award is named.

"He intimidated offenses, and I feel I can do that too," said Derrick Thomas, who is from Miami.

Former Alabama coach Ray Perkins, now head coach of the NFL's Tampa Bay Buccaneers, recruited Thomas, no relation to the Nebraska player, for the Crimson Tide and has said he would go after him in the NFL draft. He won't be alone.

"I wouldn't mind" playing for the Bucs, Thomas told reporters in a telephone conference call from school. But if he had his choice, he said he would rather play for the Los Angeles Raiders "because of the way they are on and off the field, their lifestyle in general."

Thomas received two more points in the voting by a 12-member selection panel than Broderick Thomas.

On a 3-2-1 point system, Derrick Thomas received four first-place ballots and a total of 22 points. Broderick Thomas got three first-place votes and 20 points.

Stonebreaker was followed by Keith DeLong of Tennessee and Percy Snow of Michigan State. Stonebreaker received three first-place votes and 17 points. DeLong had seven points and Snow six.

Derrick Thomas said he had met Broderick Thomas, and they had joked about who would win the award, but he said he believed Broderick would be a hard man to beat in the balloting.

Derrick Thomas, who has received several citizenship awards and was team captain this year, had 93 tackles, 22 sacks and two blocked kicks this season.

He said his major satisfaction was "getting to the quarterback five or six times during a ballgame."

Thomas, who attended Miami's Killian High School, will receive his trophy from Butkus at a black tie dinner in Orlando Saturday night. It is awarded by the Downtown Athletic Club of Orlando.

Previous winners are Brian Bosworth of Oklahoma in 1985 and 1986 and Paul McGowan of Florida State last year.

Bad ratings not expected to affect 1992 Olympics

Associated Press

NEW YORK -The chief executive officer of the 1992 Barcelona Olympic Games said Tuesday he expects no negative impact on television negotiations for those Games because of the poor ratings that the Seoul Games delivered for NBC.

"Absolutely not," said Jose Miguel Abad. "It is different with Spain. I believe there will more interest in the American market for our Games. The Spanish economy and setting is more exciting."

Abad said talks were continuing with all three commercial networks. "We are absolutely on time for successful negotiations," he said. "I hope to close the negotiations by Friday."

"It's possible there could be a hold up, but I know of no problems at the moment."

Asked how much he thought the Barcelona Games could get for American TV rights, Abad smiled broadly. "That is a hard question," he said. "I would be a bad negotiator if I explain my figure."

Industry speculation is that the rights will be sold for $350 million, $50 million more than NBC paid for the Seoul Games. CBS purchased rights to the 1992 Winter Games at Albertville, France, for $243 million and is expected to be the strongest bidder. NBC, disappointed over the Seoul return, and ABC, which lost money on its $309 million rights investment for the Winter Games in Calgary, are expected to make token bids.

NBC has never made public the final financial outcome of its coverage.

It is expected that the winning network will cut its investment by farming out part of the programming rights to cable television, the first time Olympics would be shown in that market.

Abad said he thought Barcelona's six-hour time difference with New York, compared with the 14-hour difference in Seoul, would help in negotiations.

Four corporate sponsors including Anheuser Busch have signed up for the Barcelona Games with four more to be added later. "I think the Spanish situation is of more interest for American and Japanese companies," he said.

Two blacks, woman among NL pres. choices

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Two blacks and a woman are among the top contenders to become National League president. If chosen by the search committee, the new president would become professional sports' highest-ranking official from a minority group.

Simon Gourdine, a former deputy commissioner of the NBA, is the top contender among the minorities, according to a baseball source who asked not to be identified.

Gourdine was a deputy commissioner and chief operating of the NBA for eight of his 12 years with the league, and dealt with labor and television negotiations, expansion, and the league's merger with the American Basketball Association. For the past three years, Gourdine, 48, has been director of labor relations for New York's Metropolitan Transportation Authority, which operates the subway and bus system and commuter railroads.

Phyllis Collins, the vice president and secretary of the NL and the league's No. 2 official behind Bart Giamatti, also is being given top consideration, according to the source. Giamatti is leaving to become baseball commissioner.

Collins, 57, has been with the league for 11 years and gradually has become the top official in the league office, dealing with the administrative details of running the league. Before coming to the NL, she was a secretary with the Atlanta Braves for 10 years.

Gilroye A. Griffin Jr., the vice president of labor relations for Bristol-Myers, is another leading candidate, but currently is ranked behind Gourdine, the source said.

memorable play because at the time USC was driving," said Southall. "I was on the sideline waiting to come in and I was thinking that we needed a big play right at that time, so for me it was perfect."

"I saw the receiver slip and Stan was in the right place at the right time, doing his job by being where he was supposed to be. I think he would have intercepted the ball either way."

The interception marked the biggest play to date in Smagala's career at Notre Dame, a career which has wasted no time getting started.

Smagala was thrust into the cornerback position, never having played it in his life before.

A tailback in high school, Smagala gained 1300 yards on 170 carries at St. Laurence High School in Burbank, earning all-area and all-city honors.

"(The transition from tailback to cornerback) was really difficult," said Smagala. "I had trouble my freshman year, pulling a lot of hamstrings. It was different to tackle someone instead of getting tackled."

"I just liked being at Notre Dame so I didn't care what position they put me in."

As a freshman Smagala earned a varsity letter as a reserve cornerback and on special teams.

Stan Smagala

After that, he secured a starting spot at cornerback in his sophomore season and has held it ever since, two interceptions and 74 tackles later.

Smagala was hampered by injuries as a sophomore, missing the Alabama game and having to have surgery on his shoulder.

"I feel I've improved a lot from last year technique-wise," said Smagala. "I'm more of a competitor this year than last year, and I'm not injured at all."

Smagala boasts excellent speed, running the 40 in 4.35. He was second only to Tim Brown last year and third this year behind freshman Raghil Ismail and senior D'Juan Francisco.

"Being back in the secondary is a great responsibility to the team," said Southall. "You have to have confidence in yourself and the players around you. Stan is one of the people you can always count on."

Smagala prides himself as a quiet player who doesn't have to be told twice what to do.

"I like to keep to myself," said the cornerback. "I like doing what the coaches ask me to do, and doing it the best I can."

"I wrestled at 98 pounds my freshman year in high school," "I was small so my high school coach told me not to play football. I've always been told that I was too short, too small, too light to play football, but I like to think I've proven them wrong."

The Observer / Zoltan Ury

Stan Smagala moves into position last weekend against Southern California. Smagala has quietly helped anchor a steady Irish secondary over the last two years. Scott Brutacao features the dependable cornerback starting on the back page.

Cahill, DiLucia lead tennis teams at Rolex

Special to The Observer

The Notre Dame women's tennis team had two people reach the semifinals in the ITCA/Rolex Midwest Regional Championships before Thanksgiving break at Madison, Wisc.

Sophomore CeCe Cahill, seeded fifth in the tournament fell to top seed Shawn Foltz of Indiana 6-1, 6-2 in a two-and-a-half hour match. Before that loss, she defeated three opponents without dropping a single set.

Unseeded freshman Tracy Barton fell to third-seeded Stephanie Reece of Indiana 6-4, 6-4. In the previous round, Barton had beaten sixth-seeded Wendy Geets of Wisconsin 6-2, 6-0.

"Tracy played like a house afire," said Irish coach Michele Gelfman. "I was very pleased with her performance. She played with strength and consistency."

Cahill and Barton also played doubles together for the first time in a tournament, and they advanced to the quarterfinals. The pair won two matches before losing to a doubles team from Wisconsin.

The tournament ended the fall season for the women's team.

Notre Dame's men's team also competed in the Rolex Championships, and freshman David DiLucia advanced to the quarterfinals.

DiLucia, the nation's 49th-ranked collegiate player, lost to top-seeded Dan Golberg of Michigan 6-2, 6-2. Golberg was a 1987 NCAA finalist and currently is the fourth-ranked collegiate player in the country.

"Like in any tournament, we had highs and lows," said Irish coach Bob Bayliss. "One of the highs was DiLucia's play. He didn't come close to losing a set until he played Golberg. David was a little rushed because he knew what kind of player he was playing against. Golberg had answers for everything David threw at him, but those are lessons freshmen have to learn."

In doubles action, Notre Dame's number-one team of DiLucia and junior Walter Dolhare advanced to the quarterfinals of the tournament before losing to a Northwestern pair 6-3, 7-5.

The Observer / Suzanne Poch

Ce Ce Cahill made it to the semifinals of the ITCA/Rolex Midwest Regional Championship in Madison, Wis. during the weekend before Thanksgiving. Details of how other members of Irish tennis teams fared appears at right.

Miami can't repeat, says W. Va. coach

Associated Press

CHARLESTON, W.Va. -Any University of Miami claim to the national championship is flawed by its loss to Notre Dame, and there's no way the Hurricanes can change that, West Virginia coach Don Nehlen said Tuesday.

Miami coach Jimmy Johnson said Sunday that if his team wins the rest of its games and No. 1 Notre Dame loses to No. 3 West Virginia in the Fiesta Bowl, the Hurricanes should successfully defend their 1987 title.

That defies logic, Nehlen said.

"At the end of the Notre Dame-West Virginia game, there will be one undefeated team. That team will be the national champion," Nehlen said.

Both Notre Dame and West Virginia are 11-0. No. 2 Miami is 9-1 with a games remaining against Brigham Young on Saturday and Nebraska in the Orange Bowl. The Hurricanes lost to Notre Dame 31-30, missing a 2-point conversion try in the final minute.

"Jimmy Johnson's just trying to plant seeds in everybody's heads, but his team lost to Notre Dame and he can't erase that fact," Nehlen said.

"The No. 1 team will play the No. 3 team in the Fiesta Bowl and the winner of that game will be the national champions because the No. 1 team already has beaten the No. 2 team."

West Virginia's schedule has been criticized as too weak to give the Mountaineers a national championship.

Brigham Young's 1984 team is cited most often when there is talk of weak schedules contributing to national championships, but Miami, too, once benefited from a relatively easy schedule.

In 1983, Miami's schedule included Houston, Purdue, Duke, Louisville, Mississippi State, Cincinnati, East Carolina, Notre Dame under Gerry Faust, and West Virginia. Miami won those games and lost 38-3 to Florida. But Miami beat Nebraska 31-30 in the Orange Bowl and won its first national championship.

"Schedules are something you can't even get into," Nehlen said. "We're a Division I college football team and we're undefeated and so is Notre Dame. We're the only ones left."

Even if schedules are considered, West Virginia still would have a claim for the national title, said Syracuse coach Dick MacPherson.

"He's had a similar schedule before and never went undefeated," MacPherson said of Nehlen, a longtime friend. "I think that what everybody needs to realize is that when anybody goes through 11 games undefeated, it shows the quality of the team and the coaches."

"Let them do it before they start knocking West Virginia."

West Virginia's Major Harris and the rest of the Mountaineers contend that if they beat the Irish in the Fiesta Bowl, there should be no doubt as to who the national champions should be. A related story appears at left.

The Belles of Saint Mary's College obtained their first victory of the regular season Nov. 22nd by defeating DePauw University 69-52.

Saint Mary's had an exceptional game, only turning the ball over to their opponents eight times. In addition to few turnovers they shot 47% from the field as a team.

"It was a really good game overall," said Head Coach Marvin Wood. Our offense was good and our defense created a lot of problems for them."

With five minutes left in the game the Belles led by 21 points. DePauw rallied to close the margin, but the clock ran out and they fell short.

Junior Julie Radke led the Belles in scoring with 17 points. Three additional players finished with double figures. They were juniors Amy Baranko (13) and Dawn Browman (10) and sophomore Linda Garrett (10). Baranko also led the team in rebounds, pulling down nine to help her team.

"All of our girls contributed to the win," said Wood. "DePauw is a really good team and our girls kept the morale and enthusiasm at a high level to beat them."

You don't need your parents' money to buy a Macintosh.

It's never been difficult for students to convince their parents of the need for a Macintosh® computer at school.

Persuading them to write the check, however, is another thing altogether.

Which is why Apple created the Student Loan-to-Own Program. An ingenious loan program that makes buying a Macintosh as easy as using one.

Simply pick up an application at the location listed below, or call 800-831-LOAN. All your parents need to do is fill it out, sign it, and send it. If they qualify, they'll receive a check for you in just a few weeks.

There's no collateral. No need to prove financial hardship. No application fee.

Best of all, the loan payments can be spread over as many as 10 years.

Which gives you and your parents plenty of time to decide just who pays for it all.

ND women win opener over 'Cats

Special to The Observer

The Notre Dame women's basketball team defeated the Northwestern Wildcats last night 75-63 in the squad's season opener.

After starting sluggishly and having problems in the first half with the Wildcats' half-court trap, the Irish found a few seams in it, leading to many of center Heidi Bunek's 22 points. Bunek, who shot 9-of-11 from the field, got into foul trouble in the second half but still emerged as the game's high scorer.

Bunek's inside game was complemented nicely by the perimeter shooting of guards Karen Robinson and Lisa Kuhns and forward Annie Schwartz.

"Yeah, it was an ugly win," said Kuhns, a senior co-captain. "But it was a good chance to evaluate our progress and what we've got to work on."

The Irish next tip off against Georgetown on Friday at a tournament hosted by the University of Virginia.

Heidi Bunek (44) cans a short shot against Mexico earlier this year. Bunek and the Irish defeated Northwestern last night in Evanston, Ill. Details of the game appear at left.

Some thoughts on a plane ride home

I sit here exhausted, totally, right down to the bone, but I feel exhilarated at the same time. Why? Because in my final collegiate game of the 1988 season I performed the absolute best that I have ever played in my life.

What is more gratifying than that is that my contribution was also necessary for the success of our team and the outstanding play of the secondary. I am most pleased with myself because I have improved from game to game. I have even surpassed the expectations of my coaches. To say that I have arrived is premature. However, I have taken steps in the right direction.

George Streeter

By George Streeter

What, for me, has been the most gratifying experience of the season? It is the fact that I saw what was necessary for success and sacrificed, beyond measures that I ever thought possible from myself, and worked harder than I have at any other point in my life for any single object in my life. And now, after an eleven-game perfect season, I can say, "George, it all paid off." I can say, "George, you went out with style and class." I can say, "George, at this stage of your life, you have accomplished more of your goals, achieved more of your dreams, and have more to be thankful for than any single individual that you know." It all overwhelms me to the point of tears.

Am I done? Have I reached the top of the mountain? No and yes. No, it's not over yet and yes, the team and I have reached the top of the mountain. However, there are other mountains to climb and also another opponent perched upon the top of this mountain. It is my next mission to surpass this obstacle.

This, however, is not the time for preparation for the future, but it is a time for reminiscing and rehashing, for being thankful. Thankful that I have had an opportunity to go to a school with such integrity, tradition and outstanding values. To an institution whose influence on my life is surpassed only by God and my parents. To a school, dare I say it, that I love. Yes, love completely.

I am thankful that I have an opportunity to participate and add—can you imagine that—add to the already rich tradition of Notre Dame and be remembered as an outstanding player on a great team, during a great season. I could not have written a script any better than a season I have been a part of.

It is always important to take time to smell the roses. I have put off that time at many junctures during the season, at many plateaus on our long mountain climb. I feel it is all too appropriate, at 11-0, to look back. Look back at the fun, back at the good times, and back at the hard times (there have been no bad times—just difficult ones).

It is from our past achievements as well as pitfalls that we draw our determination and our internal motivation to succeed. Through hard work I will achieve again. The war is not over though we claim victory in many of the battles. My past assures me that through hard work the best is yet to come.

Silent Stan just does his job

Junior cornerback lets his performance do the talking

By SCOTT BRUTOCAO

Picture the scenario: an unprecedented battle of the unbeaten between the Irish and the Trojans with the Irish ahead 14-7 in Los Angeles, with Southern Cal driving for a tying touchdown in the second quarter behind Heisman hopeful Rodney Peete.

Uh-oh, we're in trouble. But wait, Trojan flanker John Jackson, while running a route, slips on a timing pattern and Peete throws the ball right into the hands of Stan Smagala, the Irish short-side cornerback, who promptly returns the ball for 64 yards and six points.

"I was ecstatic," said the 5-11, 186-pound junior from Burbank, Ill. "When I scored I couldn't believe it. I was looking at the crowd and thinking 'this is a dream come true.'"

Smagala's interception return was a major turning point in the game. With USC having just cut the lead in half and driving to score again, the turnover took the wind out of the Trojan's sails and put the Irish ahead 20-7.

"We were in man-to-man coverage, I had a good break and I had good position on the guy," said Smagala. "I read it pretty well, but the receiver slipped."

"Rodney Peete threw where the receiver was supposed to be and I happened to be there. It hit me right in the chest."

"Stan is a pretty quiet guy," said Southall. "It's been a pleasure for me to play with Stan these last three years."

"If I were to start a team myself, I would want a Stan Smagala around. He doesn't say that much but leads by example."

Senior free safety Corny Southall remembers the impact of Smagala's play.

Notre Dame script calls for no glitz, just victories

All the glitter of Hollywood was there in Southern California on Saturday.

There was everything we had seen on TV and more—the palm trees, the outdoor jacuzzis, the glow-in-the-dark skateboards and the Hollywood letters overlooking the plush San Fernando Valley.

There were Mickey and Minnie dancing down Main Street USA at Disneyland while Ferraris and Jaguars cruised down Sunset Boulevard.

Then there were the Southern Californians themselves, singing the praises of their latest Hollywood script—USC's race for a national championship. The leading character was dubbed invincible after shaking off the measles, laryngitis, and defenders to lead his team to the Rose Bowl and a No. 2 ranking.

Rockin' Rodney led his cast onto the beautiful set, the Los Angeles Coliseum, preparing to rewrite the polls and bring the plot to its enticing climax.

But the Trojans' script somehow didn't sit well with the visitors in the white uniforms. They didn't care much for glitter or fashion, names on jerseys or fancy shoes.

Eleven opponents have learned that. The Irish care little for looking and acting pretty—all that can happen after the season. All that matters now is scoring the most points on eleven Saturdays, and one Monday-Jan. 2.

Hollywood scripts mean little on a football field of dirt and grass—the same dirt and grass that ABC cameras caught Rocked Rodney digging out of his helmet after Frank Stams' block-of-the-century.

It's hard to win the Heisman Trophy flat on your back.

The only script that counted was the one in Lou Holtz' game plan in his back pocket.

That script called for a 55-yard bomb on the first offensive play instead of safely running the ball to acquire some room to operate.

That script enabled Tony Rice to roll option left and race untouched for a 65-yard touchdown against a defense that shut down the once-unstoppable Oklahoma option attack.

That script, like the one for Miami, puts relentless pressure on one of the nation's best quarterbacks, forcing turnovers to later capitalize on.

And that script had speedy defensive backs sticking to USC's sticky-fingered and talented receivers like glue, giving Irish linemen and linebackers the freedom and time to keep Peete in the pocket then show him a little Irish hospitality.

The doubters are few now—the latest AP poll has the Irish an almost unanimous No. 1. What to many looked like a Universal Studios trick camera, look-of-the-Irish, it'll never last climb to the top is now a date with West Virginia for all the marbles.

Hollywood can keep its now-meaningless Rose Bowl. Thanks to the Irish, Trojan national title hopes are now just pushing up daisies.

And Hollywood can't top Notre Dame's script—a script that has one more act in Tempe, Ariz. Sixty minutes of football, the same kind of "forget the flashy stuff, let's just get the job done" football that led to 11-0, stands between the Irish and another national championship.
