Bush to give own budget this year

Associated Press

WASHINGTON- President Bush pledged Tuesday to submit detailed revisions to Ronald Reagan's budget next month and suggested high-level negotiations between the White House and Congress to produce an early agreement.

The White House acknowledged that Bush had not kept his promise to send his team of budget negotiators to Congress on the first day of his presidency. Likewise, it appeared unlikely Bush would follow through on his promise to personally lead the budget talks.

Amid a glow of bipartisan good will on the fourth day of his presidency, Bush met at the White House with Democratic and Republican congressional leaders to seek cooperation on the budget and foreign policy.

"Generally there is a very hopeful sense that we are going to be able to find bipartisanship almost everywhere," the speaker of the House, Rep. Jim Wright, D-Texas, said after two hours of talks with Bush.

"It was all sweetness and light," said the House Republican whip, Rep. Richard Cheney of Wyoming, acknowledging that differences on the budget and other problems are inevitable eventually. "The honeymoon's still on- two more days, three more days- enjoy it while it lasts."

Republicans and Democrats alike said Bush gave no clue about his budget priorities.

Bundy executed while demonstrators celebrate

Associated Press

STARKE, Fla.- Ted Bundy, a charming law school dropout who ended years of denials that he was a killer with emotional confessions to the gruesome slayings of 20 women in four states, was electrocuted Tuesday for murdering a 12-year-old girl.

Bundy's last words, before a black-hooded executioner pulled a switch at 7:06 a.m. sending 2,000 volts through his body, were to his lawyer and a minister: "Give my love to my family and friends."

More than 100 proponents of the death penalty waiting in a field across from the Florida State Prison cheered, lit sparklers and set off firecrackers at the signal that 42-year-old Theodore Robert Bundy had finally been put to death for a crime committed almost 11 years ago. Three earlier execution dates were stymied by appeals.

"Burn, Bundy, burn!" some shouted. A group of about a dozen people parodied an old tune by singing "On top of old Sparky," a reference to the nickname for Florida's oaken, three-legged electric chair.

Only about two dozen people opposed to the death penalty turned up to keep a vigil in the field.

"The people of Florida today administered justice," Gov. Bob Martinez said hours after the execution. "If there's ever been anyone on Florida's death row that deserved the electric chair, Ted Bundy was that individual."

Bundy had been quick-witted, known for his cockiness and arrogance, a handsome, blue-eyed charmer. He was the subject of five books and a television miniseries, "The Deliberate Stranger."

But he recently claimed to "feel God's presence," and was reported at the end to be remorseful about his bloody trail of kidnappings, sadistic sexual mutilations and slayings in his home state of Washington, and in Utah, Colorado, Idaho and Florida.

Bundy appeared frightened when he was escorted into the death chamber. But he moved easily to the chair, nodding to his attorney, James Coleman, and Gainesville minister Fred Lawrence, who had counseled him earlier.

"He was calm but visibly shaken," said state Rep. Randy Mackey of Lake City, an official witness.

A doctor pronounced him dead at 7:16 a.m. EST.

Parking at Goodwill out for Bridget's customers

By FLORENTINE HOELKER
Staff Reporter

The Goodwill parking lot next to Bridget McGuire's Filing Station is not available for parking, but the possibility exists that it might be accessible to students in the future.

The bar, commonly known as Bridget's, formerly had a large sign posted that warned students from parking at Goodwill. The sign stated that cars would be towed.

The Goodwill parking lot also had smaller signs saying that space is only for customers, and that violators will be towed.

Bridget's was recently repainted, however, and their warning sign was not replaced. This has led some students to believe that the Goodwill policy has been changed.

This is not true, said Camilo Saenz, the manager of Bridget's. Saenz said that the only risk-free place to park is in the Bridget's lot.

Saenz added that he hoped "something could be done about parking" in the future, but for now he said he would speak to the owner to re-post the warning sign as soon as possible to avoid confusion.

The issue of parkign violations and towing "hasn't been much of a problem lately," said Larry Neff, the Michiana president of Goodwill Industries.

"We probably haven't towed a car in six months," said Neff, "but the problem lies in Bridget's not having enough room for its patrons."

Neff reported that when Goodwill first located next to Bridget's and reconstructed the parking lot, they were contacted by area bars. The bars agreed to contribute money to Goodwill in return for parking privileges.

"For a time the bars contributed money, but they then stopped," Neff said. Consequently, Goodwill chained its lot and began the towing policy.

INSIDE COLUMN

Chase away mid-winter blues by writing to us

Take a moment to reflect on what you've done so far in the week since you've returned to campus. If you're like most the last eight days have included enrolling (probably), finding your classes (maybe), buying books (possibly) and enjoying yourself (certainly).

Savor these exciting moments while you can, because for many they prove to be the highlights of the winter social scene. Anyone who has survived a winter in South Bend knows that the upcoming weeks can be cold, dark, damp, and dreary. Waiting for the winter to end and the return of sunshine can seem like waiting for a Democrat to occupy the White House.

Is there nothing which can be done? No way of adding a little color to a suffocating screen of winter white?

The answer is so simple that you're holding it in your hands. Of course, it's the Observer. The perfect panacea for this pressing problem is simple: write a letter to P. O. Box Q.

What's that you say? Never written to the paper before? Don't worry. Many famous historical figures never wrote a letter to the editor until after they graduated from college. Think of it as an opportunity to get the jump on those foolish types who wait until their middle years before taking the plunge.

How to go about it? First, find a topic you're interested in. Local and campus issues make especially good subjects. Potential topics abound. National and political issues are always good subjects, but even more so if you can show how they relate specifically to our Notre Dame community. Take a stand and tell us what you think. Have a purpose in mind, and try to stick to it.

If your letter points out what you see as a problem, don't stop there. Offer possible solutions. Tell us what should be done to correct the situation. In other words, be for something, rather than just against. That way you'll be more persuasive.

Stating your opinion is important, but back up your opinion with a logical argument. Tell us why you think as you do. Facts and statistics can be useful here, as can a specific example.

These are some letter writing guidelines in a nutshell. The preferred length of letters is about 250 words, but don't stay up late counting. Interested? Sound too difficult? Tough stuff, this letter writing.

Don't be discouraged if you write a letter but don't see it in print. While The Observer tries to publish as many letters as it can, it often receives more letters than it has space in which to put them. Just because you don't see your letter in black and white does not mean we don't like what you have to say. Keep writing. Make it a habit, a part of your daily schedule. Shower, breakfast, letter to the editor.

Dave Bruner

Well, no. Still, letters to P. O. Box Q can be a good way to get something off your chest that's been mulling in your mind.

If you're still with me then by now you probably can't wait to reel off a brilliant, witty, educational letter to the editor. What to do if writing a letter doesn't satisfy your craving for writing? Write a column, of course. Columns usually run about 750 words in length and can be on most any subject of interest to members of the Notre DameSt. Mary's community. Who knows? You might even become a regular.

If you've ever complained that the level of intellectual dialogue on this campus isn't high enough, here is your chance to raise it a notch. Sit down with screen and keyboard (though pen and paper are O.K. too) and dish off that letter. Write well, write often, but, above all, write!

Wish your friends a happy birthday with Observer advertising.

Social concerns festival will be held at CSC

By JEFF SWANSON
News Staff

The Center for Social Concerns is holding a "CSC Festival" on Thursday from 7 to 10 p.m. at the center.

There will be representatives from all 43 service action groups at the event, said Kathy Royer, coordinator of service and social action groups for the CSC. "People who want to get involved in volunteer work should come because they will be able to talk to any representative and will have the opportunity to sign up for a service group," she said.

About three hundred people showed up for last year's CSC night, but Royer said she expects more people this year because of an increased interest in volunteerism at Notre Dame. As evidence she cited the addition of thirteen new social action groups since last year.

Royer said that there is a real variety of options for people who want to join volunteer groups. Both student and community groups will be represented, including the Logan Center for the retarded, the Dismas House for former prisoners, and the Student Tutorial Education Program for South Bend school children.

Many of the groups are active in aiding residents of South Bend, including the homeless and the elderly. Besides groups which are active locally, the CSC also has groups involved on the national and international level such as Amnesty International and the World Hunger Coalition.

Royer said that the setup of the festival will be similar to that of the Activities Night which was held at the beginning of this school year. According to Royer, people can get involved in most of the service groups at any time during the year, but the CSC Festival will be especially helpful for those interested in finding out what service groups are active at Notre Dame and what particular groups do.

Rescuers remove a victim of a landslide triggered by a massive earthquake Sunday night in a mountain village in the Soviet Union. Story at right.

Only one survives in Soviet town destroyed by earthquake

Associated Press

MOSCOW -- Mountain villagers in "endless" funeral processions Tuesday buried their dead from the Tadzhikistan earthquake that killed up to 1,000, and rescuers slogged through muddy rubble in a desperate search for survivors.

Rescuers reportedly found one survivor from the Tadzhikistan quake, although an official spokesman denied it.

New warnings were issued for more possible landslides caused by thawing snow in the Central Asian republic 1,800 miles south of Moscow that was hit by Monday's predawn earthquake.

In northwestern Armenia, which was devastated by a Dec. 7 quake that killed 25,000 people, a powerful aftershock was reported Tuesday. An Armenian official said the population had been warned and no casualties were reported.

Rescuers reportedly found one survivor from the Tadzhikistan quake, although an official spokesman denied it.

A 40-second tremor, which U.S. seismologists registered as 5.4 on the Richter scale, hit before dawn Monday. It loosened layers of mud that cascaded onto mountain villages in a rural area about 20 miles southwest of the republic's capital of Dushanbe.

Workers using shovels and bulldozers continued digging for survivors, the Soviet news agency Tass said, but a local official said the efforts might be in vain.

"There is little hope because of the flood of dirt and mud," Erkin Kasymov, a spokesman for the Foreign Ministry of Tadzhikistan, said by telephone.

Quayle will travel to Venezuela, El Salvador

Associated Press

WASHINGTON- Vice President Dan Quayle will be the first Bush administration representative to make an official foreign visit, going next week to Venezuela and El Salvador, the White House announced Tuesday.

The Feb. 1-3 trip was timed so that Quayle can attend the presidential inauguration of Venezuela's Carlos Andres Perez on Feb. 2.

Others scheduled to attend the inauguration are Cuban President Fidel Castro and Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega.

Other details were sketchy, and Quayle's chief of staff Robert Guttman said it was still being determined what individuals Quayle would meet during his brief El Salvador stop.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the El Salvador stop was added so that Quayle could discuss the elections there in March, and "extend the best wishes of President Bush who has known President (Jose Napoleon) Duarte for a number of years and meet with other officials as appropriate."

Polls have said the ARENA candidate is leading. U.S. officials are concerned that an ARENA victory could further polarize the war-torn country and make it more difficult to get further aid to El Salvador through Congress.

The Salvadorean elections are March 19. Duarte is constitutionally barred from seeking office again, but is backing fellow Christian Democrat Fidel Chavez Mena, a former foreign minister.

Stock-trading scandal hits Japan; third cabinet member resigns

Associated Press

TOKYO- Japan's Economic Planning Agency chief resigned Tuesday, becoming the third Cabinet minister in less than two months to fall victim to a major stock-trading scandal.

Ken Harada stepped down after news reports said he had received regular political donations from Recruit Co., the company at the center of the stock scandal.

Harada's resignation was a serious blow to Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita, who had reshuffled his Cabinet on Dec. 27 with a pledge to restore public trust in political ethics.

The Japan Socialist Party, the largest opposition group, quickly called for Takeshita and the rest of the Cabinet to resign. Opposition criticism of the administration also was expected to delay parliamentary debate in coming weeks over the fiscal 1989 budget.

Harada, 69, had chaired a special parliamentary committee examining the stock-trading scandal until he was made the country's chief economic planner in the Cabinet reshuffle.

Harada submitted his resignation shortly after the Cabinet met to approve the budget. Takeshita named Koichiro Aino, 60, a six-term member of parliament and former vice foreign minister, to succeed him.

Harada is the second member of the new Cabinet to resign because of links to the stock scandal. A member of the previous Cabinet, Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa, also stepped down in early December.

The nationally circulated newspaper Asahi Shimbun reported Tuesday that Harada had received about $80 a month from Recruit for 14 years.

A parking agreement might still be possible if the details can be worked out with the bars, said Neff.

Notre Dame students are concerned about the parking situation in the area. "Parking is totally inadequate now that the parking lot by the gas station is chained off," said senior Phil McAndrew.

"Bridget's and the Commons should make an effort to improve parking in the area if they're concerned about student patronage," he said.

Pep rally for football team discussed in HPC meeting

By MAURA KRAUSE
Staff Reporter

Hall Presidents Council held its first meeting of the new year Tuesday.

Tom Doyle, student body president, relayed plans for a pep rally for the football team to the Council. The team will be formally honored for the first time on Feb. 7 at 8:00 p.m. in the Joyce ACC. Speakers will be Coach Lou Holtz, Student Body President Tom Doyle and senior captains Mark Green, Andy Heck and Ned Bolcar. The Irish band and cheerleaders will be present and the movie, "They Wanted to Win" will be shown. The event is open to the public.

Sally Derengoski, representing the Late Night Olympics, described the Olympics' traditional grand prize system. This grand prize system is designed with each participating team contributing $100. Of the money collected, 20 percent is donated to Special Olympics and the remaining 80 percent goes to the winning team. If the winning team did not contribute to the grand prize fund the money goes to the next runner up. The winner of the Olympics receives a pizza party courtesy of the Alumni Association.

The late Night Olympics is taking place this weekend. The Olympics is still in need of volunteers to collect donations at the doors.

A Charity Ball will be held on March 31 in South Dining Hall. The theme of the ball will be "We Are One World," as part of the Year of Cultural Diversity.

A brief Senate report covered the All Campus SYR on Feb. 24 and ND night at University Park Mall on Feb. 9.

Eric Straub, from Irish Insanity, spoke to increase spirit at basketball games. The group will be selling t-shirts at the dining halls next week. The shirts are $6 and have "RUN N.D." printed on the front and "Battle for Seattle" on the back.

Keenan Hall President Joe Hippler asked for and received $1,000 from the Hall Presidents Council Fund. The money will be used for the Keenan Revue which is free to the public.

A mass will be held for Grace Hall resident Rick Macrina, who died over Christmas break. The mass will be held in Sacred Heart Church at 5 p.m. on Thursday.

Congress members' income from outside speaking may be banned through raise

Associated Press

WASHINGTON- Twenty-seven members of Congress attended the tobacco industry's annual conference near Palm Springs, Calif., earlier this month, staying at a posh resort with a golf course, tennis courts and a spa- and receiving nice speaking fees.

One of those attending was Congress' speaking-fees champion, House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski. The Illinois Democrat, who also played in Bob Hope's golf tournament in Palm Springs, made three speeches for $2,000 each and two speeches at $7,500 each while he was in the area, an aide said.

Soon, however, if a proposed deal goes through, in return for a big pay raise senators and representatives would give up access to the hefty speaking fees that have helped attract many of them to thousands of functions each year.

It's not clear how trip expenses would be handled. However, unless members of Congress are forced to pay all their travel and lodging expenses, conferences in places such as Palm Springs would seem to face no problem bringing in the people they want.

But some cities and groups could have trouble.

South Bend landfill manager being tried

Associated Press

SOUTH BEND- The manager of a hazardous waste landfill spent a largely quiet afternoon on the witness stand in federal court Tuesday while attorneys argued over his testimony.

Steven Shambaugh, president of Environmental Waste Control of Indianapolis, took the stand during the second day of his company's defense presentation.

The civil trial that began in December resulted from a suit filed by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency claiming that operations at the Four County Landfill have not complied with government regulations for disposing of hazardous wastes since 1985.

The government is joined in the trial by a citizens group claiming the hazardous materials dumped at the site have endangered the environment. Both the government and the citizens group want the landfill closed.

Shambaugh took the stand to testify about a series of documents exchanged between the landfill company and the Indiana Department of Environmental Management. Lawyers for the company said the documents show a "good-faith" effort by the landfill to comply with regulations.

Justice Department attorneys representing the EPA and lawyers for the citizens group, calling themselves Supporters To Oppose Pollution, or STOP, argued against admitting the letters into evidence. But District Court Judge Robert Miller Jr., without commenting, ruled the letters could become part of the case.

Mine collapses in Peru; up to 200 workers trapped

Associated Press

LIMA, Peru -- Rescuers saved three buried miners Tuesday and heard faint tapping inside a rundown gold mine where up to 200 men were trapped in a cave-in, officials said.

Energy Minister Jose Carrasco said saboteurs set a fire that ate through wooden supports and caused Monday's collapse. But police Lt. Juan Robles in Nazca, the southern town near the Sol de Oro mine, said the mine's operations were extremely disorganized, and he blamed the collapse on poor maintenance.

Carrasco said the tapping indicated that scores of miners might still be alive. He said the number of miners trapped in the mine was unknown but ranged from 15 to 200.

Robles said three bodies have been recovered so far. He estimated Tuesday that about 100 miners were trapped. Hours after the cave-in, Robles said 150 to 300 miners were trapped.

Carrasco met with civil defense officials Tuesday after reaching Nazca, 230 miles south of Lima. He told reporters on his return to Lima on Tuesday evening that two of the rescued men were hospitalized and a third was only slightly injured.

Officials said fallen earth, smoke and poison gas prevented rescuers from entering the mine until midday Tuesday, when special teams from state mines and the Lima fire department, supported by air force helicopters, reached the site.

Special to The Observer

Students who receive scholarships or fellowship grants awarded after August 16, 1986, should be aware that, for payments after 1986, part or all of such income may be taxable, according to the Internal Revenue Service.

Only degree candidates can exclude these amounts from income, and only "qualified amounts" can be excluded. The Tax Reform Act of 1986 defines qualified amounts as tuition and fees required for the enrollment or attendance of a student at an educational institution, and course fees, books, supplies, and equipment.

Any other amounts, such as for room, board, travel or incidental expenses, must be reported as income in the year received.

their employers provide their W-2 forms within 30 days after they leave.

Receiving a W-2 form for each job held during 1988 is important, not only because a copy of it must accompany the tax return, but also for personal records, the IRS said.

Form W-2 lists many items, including the wages paid, the amount of federal income tax withheld, social security tax withheld, any uncollected employee social security tax on tips, social security wages, social security tips, advance earned income credit payments, and the cost of group-term life insurance over $50,000.

If a Form W-2 contains an error, the employee should notify the employer so that the employer can send a corrected Form W-2 to the employee, the IRS and the Social Security Administration.

Kellogg ranked best MBA school

Associated Press

NEW YORK-- Northwestern University's J.L. Kellogg Graduate School of Management has the country's best MBA program, beating out such powerhouses as Harvard and Wharton, Business Week magazine said in a survey.

Indiana University ranked 12th on the list.

The survey, which appears in the Nov. 28 issue of the news weekly, also said that among other surprises, the graduate business schools of Cornell and Dartmouth made its top five, while Stanford and the University of Chicago, usually near the top of other rankings, finished lower.

Business Week said its survey was based on random polling of about 3,000 1988 graduates of 23 schools that often comprise conventional top-20 lists, which usually put Harvard and Wharton first.

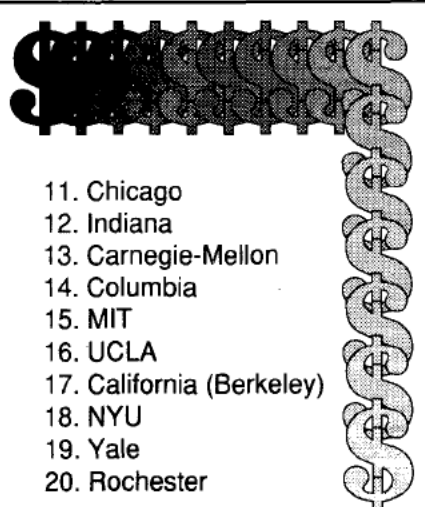

The magazine said it received 1,245 replies to a 35-item questionnaire, about 42 percent of those sampled and about 15 percent of all full-time MBA graduates of those schools in 1988.

It said questions concerned quality of teaching, curriculum, environment and job-placement efforts on a scale of 1 to 10.

A separate poll of corporate recruiters also was factored into the rankings, the magazine said.

Survey: Bush will face economic slowdown, must cut federal spending

Associated Press

WASHINGTON-- President-elect George Bush will be forced to deal with a dramatic slowdown in economic activity next year that will make his job of deficit reduction even tougher, the nation's top business economists predicted Monday.

The National Association of Business Economists said a survey of 200 of its members found them pessimistic about growth prospects because of a belief that inflationary pressures will mean higher interest rates and thus lower consumer demand for cars, houses and other big-ticket items.

An overwhelming majority of the economists, 88 percent, predicted that Bush would have to deal with a recession in his first two years in office; 40 percent forecast that the country would be in a downturn by this time next year.

The outlook is far more pessimistic than the official forecast upon which the Reagan administration is basing its final budget request to Congress. That assessment is calling for much faster growth, lower interest rates and falling inflation next year.

If the business economists prove to be more accurate, it will mean Bush will have to come up with even sharper spending cuts if he is to keep to his pledge of reducing the budget deficit without higher taxes.

Jay Woodworth, senior economist at Bankers Trust Co. of New York and president of the association, said the business economists believed Bush should make reducing the deficit his No. 1 priority.

A credible, multi-year deficit-reduction plan "would remove one major risk overhanging the financial markets, threatening to send the dollar lower and interest rates far, far higher," Woodworth said at a briefing for reporters.

Many of the economists surveyed were skeptical of Bush's "flexible freeze" to cut the deficit by simply holding overall spending growth to the level of inflation.

The overwhelming majority said a credible deficit-cutting package will have to include both spending cuts and revenue hikes, something Bush has vowed to avoid.

Woodworth said the last half of 1989 and the first six months of 1990 represented the period of greatest danger for a recession.

The Reagan administration, using far more optimistic economic assumptions, is projecting a federal deficit of $135 billion in the fiscal year that begins next October. That means the administration will have to propose $35 billion in deficit cuts in the budget it sends to Congress on Jan. 9 to meet the deficit target of $100 billion called for in the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law. However, Woodworth said the business economists believe the federal deficit will be much nearer the $155.1 billion deficit run up in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, meaning Bush's task of reducing the deficit without new taxes will be more difficult.

Ranking along with the budget deficit in urgency, the economists said the Bush administration would have to move quickly to propose a solution to the crisis confronting the savings and loan institutions, where estimates of the cost of dealing with hundreds of insolvent institutions now range up to $100 billion.

Woodworth said every month that the government delays in shutting the insolvent S&Ls adds $1.5 billion to the ultimate cost to taxpayers.

The Business page will appear every Wednesday in The Observer.

Hoffman and Cruise at their best in 'Rain Man'

ROBYN SIMMONS
assistant accent editor

Who would have thought that Dustin Hoffman and Tom Cruise would appear in a movie together? And who would have thought that the result of such a pairing would turn out to be one of the best movies of the year?

Hoffman and Cruise star in "Rain Man," which is as unusual in subject matter as it is in the combination of the two leading men. Hoffman portrays a middle-aged autistic savant (also known as high-functioning autism) who is taken from the mental institution where he has lived for almost 25 years by his younger brother Charlie, played by Cruise.

At the beginning of the film, Charlie doesn't even know he has an older brother. Charlie and his girlfriend Susanna (Valeria Golino) travel to Ohio upon hearing the news of his father's death, where Charlie discovers his older brother Raymond, and also learns that Raymond inherited all of his father's money.

Infuriated, Charlie literally kidnaps Raymond. Charlie feels that the money could be better used to save his own ailing business, and he decides to take Raymond back to California with him, and notifies Raymond's doctors that he'll return Raymond in exchange for his share of their father's money.

What starts out as a kidnapping turns into a journey in which Charlie learns about himself and his past through his interaction with Raymond. Soon after they leave the institution with Raymond, Susanna becomes fed up with Charlie's selfishness and goes back home on her own. Charlie makes plans to fly back to California with Raymond, but Raymond's tremendous fear of flying prevents it, and the two of them end up driving across the country.

Their road trip together is where the real film begins. Autistic persons are very dependent upon routine, and any change in that routine can be very upsetting. The irreversibility of Raymond's condition forces Charlie to adapt to the pattern of living his brother has developed.

The performances in "Rain Man" are what really makes the movie work. Hoffman is outstanding in a very difficult role. Raymond is virtually unable to communicate emotionally or verbally, yet he has fantastic mathematical abilities and memory skills. One particular quirk of Raymond's personality is his frequent recital of Abbott and Costello's "Who's on First" routine whenever he gets distressed by his new surroundings.

Raymond is a man living in a world of his own, and Hoffman's portrayal reminds us that it will be the only world Raymond will ever know. The expressionless look on Hoffman's face says it all.

While Cruise doesn't stand out as much as Hoffman, he does a surprisingly good job in his first (and hopefully not his last) "meaty" role. "Rain Man" is in a different league than Cruise's previous vehicles such as "Top Gun" and "Cocktail" but, in the course of "Rain Man", Cruise makes a believable transition from a self-serving jerk to a more sensitive, well-rounded person.

Charlie and Raymond's journey comprises most of the film and the excellent performances by both actors make this trip worthwhile. "Rain Man" will be a tough act to follow for both actors, because their work in this movie is probably their best to date.

Chain letters bind readers

It really sounded like my kind of letter, "Kiss someone you love when you get this letter and make magic." I didn't know they were calling it "magic" now, but hey, who was I to argue?

What I had received was the Saul Anthony de Crof chain letter, and it was supposed to bring me good luck. According to the paper, De Crof was a missionary in South America and this chain letter got its first link when he wrote it while in Venezuela.

irate and nervous people! I was having a party the week after everyone had received their letters. It was the hot topic of conversation to say the least. Everyone wanted to know if the other people had gotten one, and if anyone knew who had had the gall to send them.

At the time, I kept my lips sealed because I couldn't believe everyone was so mad, and I wanted to see if anyone could guess I was the culprit. Some people finally did guess, and everyone eventually

If this letter were demanding that money be sent in order to avoid bad luck, then it would be an outright fraud, taking advantage of people's fears of tough times and dreams of a better life. However, it just tries to scare people into mailing off copies of the letter, in hopes that maybe they will meet with the same good fortune some people have supposedly encountered.

On second thought, maybe it's not such a bad investment. I can make 20 copies for about $1.50, use 20 envelopes for about 35 cents, and mail them off for $5. For that initial investment of less than $7, I could win $70,000 like an air force officer did. That's one million percent profit!!

Let's see. I received the letter either on Thursday or Friday of last week. That means five or six days have gone by.

Just let this serve as a warning to the rest of you if anything does happen. "This is no joke. . . Do not keep this letter. . . Please don't ignore this. It works." I guess $7 isn't so much to invest after all.

MARY BERGER

Back in the Highlife

The letter told me I would "receive good luck within four days. . . provided I send it back out." Supposedly I would receive my luck in the mail just like Constantine Deas did when he won a two million dollar lottery. If I did not make 20 copies and send them to my friends and acquaintances around the world in need of luck, however, I might lose my job like Andy Daddit did, my spouse (or latest scope) like Gene Welch did, or my life like Dalen Fairchild did.

I have received chain letters like this one before. About two years ago, as a matter of fact, I think I received this same one and decided to send it out to my friends just for fun. I was curious what their reactions would be, and if they would send it back out.

I have never seen so many lightened up; but for some reason, nobody was laughing much.

Maybe everyone had this immense fear of bad luck really falling upon them if they didn't mail out 20 copies. Maybe they were frustrated with the stupidity and bogusness of the whole thing like I was this time. It's kind of like the Family Publisher's Clearing House Sweepstakes which everyone enters, secretly hoping they will be the next ten million dollar winner riding the yacht with Ed McMahon, and in reality, never even coming close.

Chain letters like this one and huge sweepstakes contests like the one with Ed's name on it prey upon the uncertainties and everlasting dreams of millions that many humans have.

Everyone wants something for nothing.

Malloy praises King's accomplishments

Editor's note: The following remarks were given by Fr. Malloy Monday, Jan. 16 at the Martin Luther King Celebration in South Bend.

It was 1958. My father and I and three of my friends were driving through the State of Delaware on our way to Philadelphia from Washington, D.C. We stopped at a restaurant along the side of the highway and sat down to eat. As we sat and waited . . . and waited . . . finally the waiter came over and said, "We'll be happy to serve you and your dad, but your three friends can go out in the back and we will serve them there."

Edward A. Malloy, C.S.C.

I was angry very quickly because they were my friends and I didn't know this guy from Adam. It so happened that my three friends were black and one of them was named John Thompson--the same John Thompson who, two days ago, walked off the courts at Georgetown University.

I couldn't understand why these people treated us that way. A kind of consciousness was bred from an experience of rejection and separation according to race. It was a time before the nation began to awaken to the glaring problems of social injustice and racial separation. It is a wonder, if you think about it, why the slaves of history had not simply refused to obey their masters. They were more numerous and they had an unrecognized power of their own. And yet, for some strange reason, their minds could not envisage any other way of living. It was the givenness of it all. Slaves and masters. Slaves obeying masters' orders. It was not until some of them could picture a brighter world, a better future, a sense of freedom and possibility that the world could change for the better--that all people of good will could wake up and even masters could discover that, in the very act of enslaving another, they were slaves themselves.

Martin Luther King . . . a martyr for racial justice, preacher of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, a pastor to people in trouble looking for a brighter future, trying to imagine a world full of hope. Martin Luther King . . . speaking in the midst of the anger of his heart to people who did not understand their own plight and what they had done to their fellow human beings. He was not a strange type of person; ordinary in fact. Brought up in the house of a minister. Raised in a good Christian family. He was bright and good fortune shone upon him. He was a Southerner who went north and got an education beyond most of his peers. But he did not turn his back. He returned and took a pastorate in Montgomery, Alabama. He began to enter the lives of his people, bringing them love, hope, understanding, a word of comfort, and a word of praise. As he began to teach them that even though they might be weak alone, they had strength together--if they could only recognize the power and force that existed from their native talent, from God, and from the recognition of the possibilities that lay ahead.

He began to vocalize the strengths of his people and call them to do great things with their lives. In the process, others began to sit up and take notice. White people, Northerners, and Southerners began to look at their neighbor down the street, or the person who worked for them, or with them, and began to see in them a human being, the worth and dignity.

Martin Luther King was a bookish man who studied some of the great thinkers of all times. He began to read the Gospels and tested them through his own experiences of suffering and pain. Through the prism of that experience, he began to discover a call to his people and to all people. He spoke of a world in which black and white, and yellow and red and brown, men and women, old and young, could stand together and face the future with strength and a sense of purpose.

He began to dream for us all and he began to develop some strategies of mutual understanding, friendship, and love. He saw the Sermon on the Mount, the great teaching of the Lord, with the priority of peace, justice, reconciliation, and mutual understanding. He began to see that as a calling card of new possibilities. He began to speak then quietly to his own congregation. He began to gather people in his home and in public meetings. He reminded them of the indignity that they suffered. He asked them why for so long they had accepted this terrible injustice without calling out to the heavens.

He read Gandhi--Gandhi who taught of the strategy of social change. It's like staring your enemies in the eye by standing there with strength, conviction, and purpose, by gesturing love, reconciliation, and peace. You could hold out your hand and maybe at least one of your enemies could reach out his or her hand and take it as a kind of bond. A bond of friendship for both. A newfound acceptance along the way.

A boycott there. A protest here. He began to vocalize that bottled up energy and strength and forged it in a kind of wisdom.

Martin Luther King . . . he stood before his enemies and he offered his hand and he gave them words of peace and the possibility of change. Martin Luther King became the conscience of the nation. For that he was hated by some and misunderstood by others. People of power and government used all their resources to discredit him in the eyes of his friends. But he persisted in his God-given task.

Martin Luther King . . . a person of deep faith who understood the mission of the Lord. He understood the teaching that is at the heart of all the religious traditions of history that God our Creator has made us one. That in the eyes of God we are equal and deserving of justice and a proper reward. God unites us and human beings in their ignorance and prejudice can separate and divide. It is our task to build bridges, to make friends, and to find a new and better way.

In this community we have our challenge and our task. We need to feed our hungry. We need to house our homeless. We need to educate our young. We need to provide proper jobs with dignity and good pay for all. We need to raise up leaders among ourselves to carry that agenda into government and into the units, committees, and agencies of this community. No one can do it for us. We can build coalitions around the state and around the nation. But we need to look at home first of all.

If Martin Luther King, Jr. were with us this evening, he would pass on a message we have heard so eloquently from some of the previous speakers. Stay in school, stay away from drugs, stop killing one another in the streets. Let us look in each other's eyes and recognize a friend.

Rev. Edward A. Malloy, C.S.C., is the President of the University.

King's dream founded lasting changes

Dear Editor:

Last Monday, Jan. 16, many students returned to Notre Dame from Christmas break for another semester of studying, tests, papers, and parties. I wondered if many of them realized that Monday was a federal holiday. It was the birthday of Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr.

Through his books, speeches, essays, and actions, Rev. King, in my opinion, changed the standard of living in America so that all Americans can live in peace, harmony, and especially equality. Black and other minorities in today's society now have the right to vote, the desire to pursue any career of their choice, the freedom to go into any public facility, and the right to associate with whomever they please. They also do not need to worry most of the time of being physically injured or murdered because they did any of the actions mentioned above.

Rev. King caused many white Americans to see beyond the color, religion, and ethnicity of their fellow countrymen. Whites realized that minorities are people with emotions and dreams just like them. We have come a long way. However, we have not reached the "promised land." Let us continue to follow Rev. King's dream for a better world for our future generations.

Schottenheimer signs as Chiefs' new coach

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, MO.—Marty Schottenheimer, the winningest coach in the American Football Conference the past three seasons, was named head coach of the Kansas City Chiefs Tuesday.

"Our goal for 1989 is to become the champions of the National Football League," said Schottenheimer, who resigned as coach of the Cleveland Browns at the end of the season in a dispute with owner Art Modell.

Schottenheimer, 45, took the Browns to the playoffs in each of his four full seasons as coach. His 32-15 regular season record the past three years is unmatched in the AFC and trails only the Chicago Bears and San Francisco 49ers among all NFL teams.

His resignation from the Browns was triggered by his refusal to hire an offensive coordinator, a role he was filling.

Asked if he would hire an offensive coordinator with the Chiefs, Schottenheimer broke into a grin. "We will have an individual to fill that role," he said. "Rest easy. Marty Schottenheimer is not going to call the plays. Someone will have that role, if not the title."

Asked why he would change from the approach that led to his departure from Cleveland, Schottenheimer said he thought remaining offensive coordinator for the Browns "was the best thing to do in that situation."

The naming of Schottenheimer completes a house cleaning that owner Lamar Hunt began in December with the resignation of team president Jack Steadman and the firing of General Manager Jim Schaaf.

Eleven days later, Hunt hired Carl Peterson as president and general manager. Peterson, as expected, fired coach Frank Ganz on Jan. 5 after Ganz had completed 4-11 and 4-11-1 seasons.

The Chiefs, a power in the old AFL and winners of the fourth Super Bowl, have made only one playoff appearance since 1971.

Date set for Leonard, Hearns

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS, NEV.—Sugar Ray Leonard and Thomas Hearns, who met eight years ago in a classic welterweight title fight, will fight June 12 at Caesars Palace in a rematch for Leonard's 168-pound title, promoter Bob Arum said Tuesday night.

Arum said he reached agreement late Tuesday on the fight with Caesars Palace, which he said will pay $8 million to host the bout.

The promoter said Leonard's lawyer, Mike Trainer, had not signed a contract for the fight but had "agreed in principle to everything."

Ellis

just had to reteach some things at halftime."

The starting frontcourt of Ellis, Keith Robinson and Jamere Jackson combined for only eight points and five rebounds in the first 20 minutes of play, while amassing five personal fouls.

Jackson scored four points on 2-of-3 shooting from the floor before he collided with Ellis at 10:57 of the first half. The two players lay flat on the floor for several moments before Ellis rose to his feet.

Jackson was later helped off the floor by teammates Scott Paddock and Keith Tower. Jackson is expected to practice Friday.

"Jamere tried to take the charge," said Ellis of the play that sent Jackson to the locker room with a hyperextended knee. "I went up to block the shot and Jamere was standing down there taking the charge, and I think he fell. My right leg hit his shoulders."

Of the frontline players, only Daimon Sweet, who came in for Jackson, made any kind of impact on the box score. Sweet poured in seven of his 15 points in the first half and grabbed two rebounds while successfully avoiding the personal-foul column.

Phelps recognized the disturbing first-half trends and instituted two changes in the second half, decisions that made all the difference in the world as far as Rutgers coach Bob Wenzel was concerned.

"Notre Dame did a good job of getting the ball inside (in the second half)," said Wenzel. "In the first half, we kept their big guy from scoring, so they tried to go to him in the second half."

The Irish also returned to the zone press and 2-3 zone defense that has worked so well for them in the past to create turnovers and stifle the Scarlet Knights, especially forward

Tom Savage. Savage, who led Rutgers with 14 first-half points, was held to a single point in the second half.

But as Ellis goes, so go the Irish.

And once the 6-9, 238-pound forward finally got his hands on the ball, he began to show the world why he was one of the most highly sought-after prospects in the nation coming out of Lincoln High School in East St. Louis, Ill., a year ago.

Ellis nailed a turnaround jumper in the paint 46 seconds into the second half and then scored 12 of Notre Dame's next 19 points as the Irish opened a commanding 55-38 lead with 13:27 remaining in the game. He converted two consecutive three-point plays in a span of just 17 seconds during the Irish spurt.

Ellis went on to score a team-high 17 points, including a spectacular dunk with just under seven minutes remaining in the contest to punctuate the Irish victory.

Irish

Notre Dame last season at Lincoln, Neb.

"This is going to be a tough matchup," said Irish coach Fran McCann. "I imagine that they have not forgotten last year's loss to us, and they will come in with a lot of fire."

Notre Dame placed 37th at last year's NCAA championships, while the Cornhuskers finished 39th. Nebraska is returning six ranked wrestlers from last year's squad and the Irish are not far behind with five.

Seven of the 10 wrestlers in Nebraska's lineup presently are ranked among the top 20 individuals in their respective weight classes.

"The key match ups are in the middle weight divisions and I expect them to decide the outcome," said McCann.

In the middle weight divisions for Notre Dame are senior Sean Dillon at 142 pounds, sophomore Todd Layton at 150, sophomore Mark Gerardi at 158, and sophomore Todd Tomazic at 167.

Dillon replaces senior Pat Boyd, who has been out for a month with a knee injury and should return in a few weeks.

"Without Pat, we are going to need a tremendous effort to win," said McCann. "He gives us stability in the middle of a match."

Otherwise, Notre Dame will be led by its usual starters. Senior co-captains Chris Geneser and Jerry Durso should provide the Irish with points in their respective weight divisions while junior Andy Radenbaugh will try and continue his winning ways at 118 pounds.

A trio of standout freshmen also have earned positions in the Irish lineup. Marcus Gowens will wrestle after Radenbaugh at 126 pounds. Rounding out the lineup, the Irish will be represented by Curt Engler and Chuck Weaver at the 190-pound and heavyweight divisions.

The overall series between the two schools is led by Nebraska 3-2. Notre Dame has posted a 2-2 record against Nebraska since McCann has been head coach.

Senior Jerry Durso is approaching the Irish record for career wins with 116. He trails Phil Baty by only two wins and should eclipse the record of 118 sometime during this weekend's National Catholics, which will be held Sunday at Notre Dame.

Durso has a career record of 116-25, including two trips to the NCAA championship.

Geneser also is nearing the top of the career wins category, needing only 12 more wins to catch Baty.

Hoops

scored 14 first-half points, was held to one point on 0-of-7 shooting in the final 20 minutes. Rutgers shot 33 percent as a team for the game.

"In the first half, they were hitting a lot of threes, and I think they were relying on the three-point shot a little too much at the end," said Irish guard Elmer Bennett, who dished out a team-leading five assists.

Rutgers coach Bob Wenzel was more concerned with the way his Scarlet Knights shot from a much closer range.

"We just couldn't score on layups," said Wenzel. "This should have been a game that would be in doubt with five minutes to go. It turned into a game that got out of hand."

Hershiser's latest vote: AP Man of the Year

Associated Press

NEW YORK—Orel Hershiser, a picture of perfection on and off the field, was named The Associated Press Male Athlete of the Year on Tuesday, finishing far ahead of his Olympic competition.

The Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher became the first non-Olympian to win the honor in an Olympic year since Denny McLain in 1968. Hershiser, who set a record with 59 consecutive shutout innings, is the 22nd baseball player to win the award in its 58-year history and the first since Dwight Gooden in 1985.

Hershiser got nearly twice as many votes as his World Series rival, Jose Canseco: 67 first-place ballots and 465 points, with Canseco—the first player to hit 40 home runs and steal 40 bases in a season—getting 30 first-place votes and 233 points.

Heisman Trophy winner Barry Sanders, who set all-time college records for rushing yards and touchdowns, was third with 207, followed by Olympic swimmer Matt Biondi with 152, NBA star Michael Jordan with 91 and Olympic diver Greg Louganis at 59.

Voting was done by sports writers and broadcasters on a 5-3-1 basis. The AP's Female Athlete of the Year will be announced Thursday.

"This caps a year of fantastic awards," Hershiser said. "It is a tremendous honor to be recognized with an award which covers all sports."

Hershiser spent the 1988 season setting records and collecting trophies. His wholesomeness and his hymn-singing earned him adulation among children and adults.

Hershiser's record streak, 23-8 record and 2.26 earned run average made him the unanimous National League Cy Young winner.

By the time it all ended, helped by a How To Pitch card he carried in his uniform back pocket, Hershiser had allowed just five earned runs in his final 101 innings.

GMAT

Directions: For the following question, select the best answer choice provided.

1. Only if we know human nature can we know the nature of the true good for human beings. And only if we know the nature of the true good for human beings can we arrive at an idea of the truly just society. Thus, if we know human nature and the nature of the good for human beings, we can arrive at an idea of the truly just society.

Which of the following points out a potential flaw in the reasoning above?

- (A) What one human being thinks is good might well be something that another human being thinks is not good.
- (B) Many people have arrived at ideas of the just society, and all of them have been slightly different.
- (C) It is quite possible to know human nature without in any way being able to know what is the good for human beings.
- (D) Philosophers have argued for centuries over what specifically defines human nature, without coming to a general agreement.
- (E) Arriving at an idea of the just society may require more than knowledge of human nature and knowledge of the good for human beings.

Michigan biggest, latest step for men's tennis

By BOB MITCHELL
Sports Writer

Welcome to the big time. The national schedule that the Notre Dame men's tennis program has longed for will become reality when the No. 11 Michigan Wolverines set foot on the Eck Pavillion courts at 3 o'clock today. It is truly a David vs. Goliath battle for the unranked Irish.

"We have to play a perfect match," said Head Coach Bob Bayliss. "We must play an error-free and airtight match."

Indeed, they will have to if the 0-1 Irish squad hope to even their record.

Michigan, who reached the semi-finals of the 1988 NCAA championships, has won 28 of the last 34 Big 10 championships including the last two.

This year's team looks to rival the great Michigan teams of the past. The Michigan roster, which reads like a Who's Who in Collegiate Tennis, includes the No.1 and No.7 players in the entire nation along with one of the best freshmen in the country.

Malivia Washington, the No. 1 player in America, heads the lineup for the Wolverines. Washington, a sophomore, won the 1988 Volvo All-American Tournament which is the first leg of the collegiate Grand Slam. The 1987 Wimbledon junior finalist is known for his strong serve and aggressive net play.

"Malivai is one of the finest athletes to come through college tennis in the last ten years," said Michigan head coach Brian Eisner, who holds the fifth-best winning percentages among active coaches (77 percent).

Dan Goldberg, the No.7 player in the nation, plays at the No. 2 position for the Wolverines. Among the senior's accolades is that he was the singles semi-finalist in the 1987 NCAA Championships.

At the No.3 position for the Wolverines is David Kass. Kass, a freshman, won the Rolex Regional Qualifier in November. Kass captured the Ohio and Florida state titles in 1988.

"Their No. 1, 2, and 3 players are as good as you can get in college tennis," said Bayliss.

Michigan, which leads the series record 37-10, has defeated the Irish in each of the past 22 years. However, Michigan coach Brian Eisner believes that past events will have no bearing on the present matchup.

"We have to be 100 percent concerned about playing our style of game," said Eisner, who possesses a 379-107 career record. "It doesn't matter who we play, we just have to play our game."

For the Irish, it truly will be an uphill battle. Yet, Bayliss believes that success is not unattainable in their second dual match of the season.

"We have to be better than Michigan on that particular day," said the second-year head coach. "Home is a big place for us."

And so, who knows? Maybe those Wilson raquets will turn into stones that knock down the mighty Wolverines.

Irish beat Rutgers in 2nd half outburst

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Assistant Sports Editor

Looking at the halftime statistics of Tuesday night's Notre Dame-Rutgers basketball game, somebody had to wonder what spirits were invading the Joyce ACC.

Yes, that was Rutgers (6-9) outrebounding Notre Dame 21-8. Who cares if the Scarlet Knights had no player taller than 6-7, or if the Irish were the nation's top team in rebound margin?

And that was leading Irish scorer LaPhonso Ellis with no points next to his name, and second-leading rebounder Keith Robinson with no rebounds in his column.

And that was Notre Dame (9-3) still somehow managing to lead Rutgers 36-29. Can you imagine what might have happened if Robinson was pulling down more boards and Ellis was scoring at his normal 15.5 clip?

You've got that right, a Notre Dame blowout. Ellis scored 17 second-half points to lead all scorers, Robinson recorded five rebounds with 11 points and the Irish went on to pound the Scarlet Knights 85-63.

"In the second half, we just went zone press back to zone, and did a lot of good things as far as rebounding and running and getting the ball back to LaPhonso," said Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps. "That was the difference in the game."

Ellis hit a jump shot and scored two three-point plays to lead a 9-2 Notre Dame run that opened the second half.

After Rutgers guard Rick Dadika connected on a three-point bomb to cut Notre Dame's lead to 46-35, the Irish went on a 13-4 spurt to turn what had been a close game into a rout. Ellis scored four points and Robinson added a three-point play during that second Irish burst.

By the end of the game, all the Notre Dame players had gotten on the scoreboard, including walk-on Tim Crawford with his four points in the final minutes.

"Coach told us to get the ball inside more," said Robinson. "They did not have any player who could really match up with our front line."

"We could penetrate inside and kick the ball outside if they started double-teaming down low."

Daimon Sweet was one of the main beneficiaries during those situations. After Jamere Jackson suffered a hyperextended knee midway through the first half, the freshman from Beaumont, Tex., scored 15 points to tie Joe Fredrick for second on the team.

"Our big men are the core of our offense," said Sweet.

LaPhonso Ellis (20) reaches high to block the shot of Lee Perry of Rutgers. Ellis was a key factor in Notre Dame's second-half surge that lifted the Irish past the Scarlet Knights 85-63.

"When people are sagging on them, double and triple-teaming them, it's easier for them to kick the ball back out to us."

After the Irish began to extend their lead, the Scarlet Knights tried in vain to get back into the game via the three-point shot.

During the second half, Rutgers made six of its 16 three-point attempts, many of which were taken around the vicinity of Elkhart. Tom Savage, who

Ellis keys Irish effort in victory

LaPhonso Ellis found himself in an unusual position at halftime Tuesday night against Rutgers in the Joyce ACC.

Notre Dame's leading scorer (tied with Joe Fredrick at 15.5 points per game) and rebounder (10.8 per game) had only four rebounds and two personal fouls to show for his efforts at the midway point of the Irish's 85-63 win over the Scarlet Knights.

Ellis' scoring troubles reflected Notre Dame's inability to pound the ball inside to its big men in the early going, which allowed Rutgers to stay close for most of the first half.

"We just didn't get the ball down to him (Ellis) and he wasn't getting open," said Irish coach Digger Phelps, assessing the first half in which his team was outrebounded 21-8 by a smaller Rutgers squad. "We

In perhaps its toughest dual meet of the season to date, the 16th-ranked Notre Dame wrestling team will be looking to extend its undefeated 6-0 record against highly-touted Nebraska at 8 p.m. tonight in the Joyce ACC arena.

Nebraska (7-4-1) currently is ranked 13th in the country and already has defeated an Iowa State squad that was then ranked fourth in the nation. The Cornhuskers will be looking to avenge a 21-18 upset loss to

DePaul's pressure stifles Irish women

By JEFF HEILERT

CHICAGO Ill.-- They turned up the volume at Alumni Hall Tuesday night, and DePaul's Lady Blue Demons turned up the tempo to literally steal their way to an 83-62 victory.

Relatively small Alumni Hall definitely is not small on noise. The raucous crowd and a very loud public address announcer were perfect complements for the full-court pressure of the Lady Blue Demons.

DePaul recorded 23 steals, including 12 in the first half alone. DePaul seemed at times to have six women on the court as they continually knocked the ball away from behind.

The senior leadership of DePaul All-American Diana Vines also proved too much for the Irish. Vines led all scorers with 23 points and also grabbed 11 rebounds and a school-record 12 steals. She became the first person in DePaul history, man or woman, to score 2,000 points and pull down 1,000 rebounds.

"She's the most talented player I have ever coached, male or female," said DePaul coach Doug Bruno. "She does so much out there. She is a total instinct player."

The Irish struggled on offense. Notre Dame found the basket unforgiving, shooting 8-for-26 (31 percent) in the first half.

Throughout the first half, the play of freshmen Margaret Nowlin and Comalita Haysbert kept the Irish close. Each grabbed three offensive rebounds and scored five first-half points.

"It was a tough game," said Irish coach Muffett McGraw, "and they (the freshmen) played well."

Karen Robinson led Notre Dame with 13 points, while Cathy Emigholz added 12.

Winning and losing with true Notre Dame spirit

Time and its passage changes all things. One place, however, has sustained a spirit and a tradition for so long that its story has evolved into legend. -Wake Up The Echoes

One thing has prevailed since Notre Dame first met Michigan in 1887 to the Irish Fiesta on January 2--the Notre Dame spirit.

Lou Holtz talks about it, Irish fans revel in it, and the players have used it to help win a national championship.

The emotions which go along with winning a national championship are new to most of us, but not to Notre Dame. Indeed, following the game won for the Gipper in 1928, sportswriter Paul Gallico captured the timeless essence of a fan's elation:

"When football becomes a near tragic race against time there is nothing like it for thrill, excitement or suspense. The game exerts a strange magic and you forget that it is just football and that one musn't overemphasize..."

"Hell's bells and gongs of inferno. Let us over-emphasize while we may. Tomorrow it may be too late. The enchantment which holds me still enthralled will be lifted."

Indeed, something as exciting as a national championship should not be soon forgotten. Here at Notre Dame there is little chance of that happening.

But the events of last week bring things into perspective--football is only a game. There is something so much more important--the game of life.

And with the taking of life from Bob Satterfield came a rush of emotion and love from this campus which truly signified the Notre Dame spirit.

One powerful moment among many came outside Friday's memorial service for Satterfield. Following the service several of Satterfield's teammates congregated outside the church in prayer.

The same arms that had pulled in touchdown passes or brought down opposing tailbacks were now draped around each other's shoulders in comfort.

No gold helmets. No screaming crowd. Notre Dame no longer meant first-and-goal at the six-yard line.

Notre Dame meant caring for each other--helping each other through a difficult, painful, and incomprehensible moment.

The spirit which on game day emerges from the lungs of 59,075 and the brawn of 100 now manifested itself in a somber crowd outside Sacred Heart Church engulfed by a placid snowfall.

It was ironic that at a place where winning counts so much, a loss brought out the true spirit of Notre Dame.

Adversity had faced these players all season long in the form of Rodney Peete, the two-point conversion, game-day suspensions and a national title game.

All those had been overcome and learned from. And so too was this one, by Satterfield's teammates and friends.

Bob Satterfield never made the afore-mentioned 59,075 jump to their feet or swap high-fives.

But Bob Satterfield and his never-ending smile made his friends happy. He loved people and they loved him back.

And that is what matters.
