Bush and Gorbachev: Saddam must end aggression

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev emerged Sunday from a seven-hour summit devoted largely to the Persian Gulf crisis and declared they were "united in the belief that Iraq's aggression must not be tolerated."

In an extraordinary joint statement, the two superpowers called on the entire world community to adhere to United Nations sanctions against Iraq so long as Baghdad's armies occupy Kuwait.

"Our preference is to resolve the crisis peacefully," said the written statement, issued moments before Bush and Gorbachev conducted a joint news conference marking the end of their one-day summit.

"However, we are determined to see this aggression end, and if the current steps fail to end it, we are prepared to consider additional ones consistent with the UN charter."

The joint statement also said the United States and Soviet Union recognize that the United Nations resolutions dealing with Iraq permit the shipment of food into Iraq and Kuwait for "humanitarian considerations.

The two countries said any such imports "must be strictly monitored" to make sure they meet humanitarian concerns "with special priority being given to meeting the needs of children."

It was the first time since World War II that the United States and the Soviet Union had lined up on the same side of a major regional conflict, and further evidence that the Cold War is fading into history.

In their wrap-up news conference, Bush said he and Gorbachev agreed that they will accept no Persian Gulf settlement "short of the complete implementation" of the U.N. sanctions that demand an Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait.

Gorbachev said their summit talks were "devoted to the quest for a political solution" to the Gulf crisis ... and I believe that they are on the right road."

Bush and Gorbachev discussed the prospect of U.S. economic aid to Moscow, but came to no conclusion. Bush

Tough Talk for Iraq

U. S. President George Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, pictured here following their bilateral talks last December, emerged from a summit Sunday with a joint statement encouraging the world to uphold the United Nations sanctions against Iraq. This marks the first time since World War II that the two countries have taken the same side in a major regional conflict.

Bed 'N Breakfast to serve ND/SMC visitors

By ANNA MARIE TABOR
News Writer

For the fourth year running, a registry of private homes will be serving parents and friends of Saint Mary's and Notre Dame students on special events weekends.

With the scarcity of motel and hotel rooms in the South Bend area on busy weekends, such as home football games and graduation, many alumni and others are expected to take advantage of the service.

Wilma Behnke, coordinator of this Bed 'N Breakfast, said that the service is available at any of over 35 homes in the area.

"South Bend reaps a great deal from Saint Mary's and Notre Dame families," Behnke observed. With the number of rooms ranging from one to four in the homes participating, they will be able to accommodate much of the overflow when the hotels fill up.

The person who seeks out a bed and breakfast service loves the home atmosphere and the sociability that it provides, said Behnke. Because the Behnkes and many of the other hosts and hostesses have had children

Liberian president wounded and captured during battle in capital

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — A rebel faction shot Liberian President Samuel Doe in both legs and captured him Sunday during a battle in that nation's capital, the British Broadcasting Corp. reported.

The U.S. State Department confirmed that Doe had been captured by rebels led by Prince Johnson but would not comment further.

More than 60 people, including dozens of Doe's bodyguards, were killed in the fighting between Doe loyalists and Johnson's fighters, the BBC said. It said the battle took place outside the headquarters of a West African task force in Monrovia, Liberia.

Doe had left his fortified seaside mansion to pay an unscheduled visit to the commander of the West African task force, Lt. Gen Arnold Quainoo of Ghana, the BBC's correspondent in Monrovia reported.

Johnson and some of his fighters followed Doe, and a quarrel erupted, the BBC report said. The two sides then started battling with rifles, machine guns and grenades.

Johnson's rebels wounded Doe in both legs and carried him off to their base camp, the report said.

Johnson called the BBC and declared himself president of Liberia until an interim government could be installed. Rival rebel leader Charles Taylor of the National Patriotic Front previously claimed the presidency.

The BBC said Johnson pledged to court-martial Doe.

Earlier, Doe and Johnson agreed to an informal ceasefire between their forces when the West African task force sailed into Monrovia two weeks ago. Taylor's forces opposed the West African intervention.

Cuban-American bishop celebrates vigil mass honoring Cuban exiles

By JOHN CRONIN
News Writer

A prominent Cuban-American bishop celebrated the brotherhood of exiled Cubans by presiding over a vigil mass for the feast of Our Lady of Charity last Friday.

The Most Rev. Enrique San Pedro, auxiliary bishop of Galveston-Houston, said the mass at Sacred Heart Chapel. The service was sponsored by the Cuban American Union of Student Advocates (CAUSA) and coincided with the first anniversary of the group's formation.

One year ago the group came together both as a community of faithful and a national community to celebrate the feast of a symbol of faith and culture to exiled Cubans. Since that day several law students have organized a group of 24 Cuban-American students at Notre Dame.

"We founded the group because we no longer wanted to be lumped together with all Hispanics. Hispanics are so diverse that we wanted a group that could share a common heritage," stated Bert Lopez Alberola, president of CAUSA.

The goal of CAUSA is to advocate the establishment of a democratic system in Cuba following what they regard as the inevitable collapse of the Castro regime.

"The communist regime is defunct and its days are numbered. The manifestations of discontent among the Cuban people is becoming more and more visible. Castro has been popular in the past, but we are beginning to see more open defiance of the government," said Lopez.

As one of two Cuban bishops in America, Bishop San Pedro's visit to Notre Dame demonstrated his solidarity with the exiled Cuban community in the United States.

Bishop San Pedro's message to the Cuban-American students was one of encouragement. He shares the belief in the inevitable decay of the present Cuban political system and challenged the students to reflect on the issues that will facilitate the reconstruction of Cuba.

CAUSA believes that its task is

Parking at ND: A fun way to spend your day

So, South Quad car owners, how do you like making the 15 to 20 minute walk to your new parking location in the D2 student lot?

Chris Anderson
Controller

Now for North Quad students: do you enjoy fighting for good parking spots with the whole campus (except for the privileged few who get to use the D6 lot)?

Obviously, the changes in the parking situation over the summer break have caused considerable problems and frustrations for those of us who have brought cars to school. The idea of a quick off-campus excursion is entirely out of the question now since you waste nearly a half hour just walking to and from the parking lot.

This is a serious problem which needs to be addressed, but to whom can we turn for help?

I envision the following things happening as a result of student complaints and discontent:

- HPC and the Student Senate will form several ad hoc committees to study the problem, and their ultimate solution will be to have all the dorms hang out banners which read "Parking in D2: Is it fair?"

- After receiving several complaints on the FRED line, Rob Pasin and Fred Tombar will be forced to start a student shuttle to D2. Since R-O-B was too short to use as a telephone number, they will insist that the new shuttle be dedicated to and named after Rob Pasin.

- Reacting to student and parental pressures, the Administration will draft an official statement that proclaims that any student who donates $33 million to the University for the construction of more buildings (like DeBartolo did) can get an on-campus parking spot.

- As its contribution, ND Security will promise to provide student transportation to D2 anytime a squad car is going there. Unfortunately, only a handful of people will be able to take advantage of this invaluable service since Security cars rarely go into the lot.

- Finally, student-faculty relations will reach an all-time low after student car owners attempt a hostile takeover of faculty parking lots.

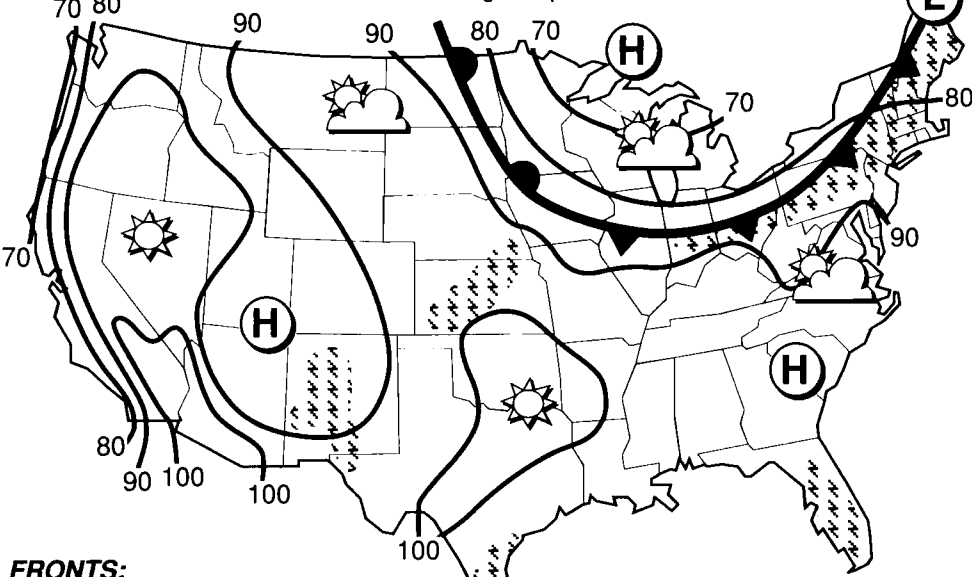

For those members of the University community that are offended by this article, get a sense of humor and realize that this is only a feeble attempt to bring some humor to a really bad situation.

And car owners, my advice to you is to just enjoy the walk to your off-campus parking place. After all, it takes away time that could be spent on other "worthwhile" ND activities.... like standing in a never-ending line.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Sunday she may stay in office another five years and would not rule out being prime minister at the age of 70. She was first elected Conservative Party leader in 1975 and came to power when her Conservative Party won in the 1979 general election. She since has led the party to two general election victories. "I am not immortal, but I've got a lot left in me yet," said Thatcher, who will be 65 next month.

Israeli soldiers shot and killed a Palestinian youth Sunday in the first lethal clash between troops and stone-throwing activists in three weeks, Arab reports said. The clash in the West Bank village of Beita came as Palestinians throughout the occupied lands observed a general strike marking 33 months since the start of their uprising against Israel. Palestinian reporters identified the victim as 17-year-old Ahmad Abu Seif, saying he died after soldiers shot him in the chest while chasing a group of stone-throwers into a field in Beita. Abu Seif was the 729th Palestinian killed by Israelis during the revolt that began Dec. 8, 1987.

The stabbing death of a 30-year-old woman has renewed concern about eight other deaths Philadelphia police have said may be the work of a serial killer. A man has been jailed without bond since May in one of the previous deaths, which date back five years. All the previous victims were women, ranging in age from 28 to 68, who had been repeatedly stabbed or bludgeoned. Several had been sexually assaulted. Five of the previous victims were killed in Frankford, a working-class neighborhood on the city's east side, and the others were killed nearby or frequented bars in the neighborhood.

About 700 marchers in Seattle protested U.S. military involvement in the Persian Gulf over the weekend, chanting "Hell, no, we won't go, we won't fight for Texaco," and "Money for school, not for war." The crowd listened to speeches Saturday at Seattle Center before marching peacefully downtown. The rally was organized by the Northwest Coalition Against U.S. Military Intervention in the Mideast. Among the protesters was Korean War veteran Don Alexander. A hand-lettered sign taped to his wheelchair said: "No blood for oil."

Zodiac killer and Dartman highlight a violent summer in New York City

NEW YORK (AP) — An infant asleep on a couch. A business executive speaking on a pay phone. A tourist standing on a subway platform. A 78-year-old man out for an evening walk. A prosecutor buying doughnuts.

In the violent summer of 1990, they were among hundreds of murder victims in New York City. Memorial Day arrived with the Zodiac killer; the Labor Day weekend ended with a tourist from Utah stabbed to death in the subway while defending his mother from muggers.

The three months in between continued a five-year trend of escalating summer violence, experts said. Killings continued at a record pace as the city appeared headed for a new homicide record of more than 2,000 for the year.

"Clearly, this is the worst of times. The numbers are higher than ever for murders," said Thomas Reppetto, head of the watchdog Citizens Crime Commission.

"This has got to be the worst summer since the Son of Sam" in 1977, said James Deady, a New Yorker for 27 years. "And that was a serial killer. This is much more wanton."

Six out of 10 New Yorkers say they would live elsewhere if they could, and three-quarters describe the city as dangerous and dirty, according to a Time magazine-Cable News Network poll released Sunday.

New York, historically and statistically, is a violent place. The average day sees five murders, nine rapes, 256 robberies, 332 burglaries and 367 auto thefts.

Walt Whitman, writing 150 years ago, warned: "New York is one of the most crime-haunted and dangerous cities in Christendom."

But this summer, violence was as constant as the heat. Victims were chosen by their birth signs or their clothes. Panhandlers turned ugly if turned down. Children asleep in their homes or cars became shooting victims. Muggers killed cab drivers at the rate of nearly three a month.

"I get the sense it was a more violent summer than usual. I think the fact that children were killed, that an assistant DA in the Bronx was killed — these are people you don't expect to get caught in the cross-fire," said Barbara Price, dean of graduate studies at John Jay College of Criminal Justice.

The summer started with a cryptic note found beside a 78-year-old shooting victim. "Zodiac — time to die," it read. Joseph Proce, who was out for a late night walk, died 24 days after the May 31 shooting.

The Zodiac also shot three people who survived. Then the mysterious killer disappeared and headlines were taken over by the Dartman. Between June 26 and a July 12 arrest of a suspect, an assailant used a blowgun to fire small, home-made darts at 55 women in midtown Manhattan.

A rash of shootings involving children had Mayor David Dinkins on the defensive around the same time. Four children, age 9 months to 9 years, were shot to death in eight days at the end of July.

On Sunday, Dinkins spoke at St. Patrick's Cathedral to ask New Yorkers to "come out from behind locked doors" to battle violence in the city's streets.

"Come out and put your eyes and ears on the streets; come out to help stop the violence," said Dinkins, who joined Cardinal John O'Connor at Mass.

On July 31, a television executive was shot to death while making a call at a Greenwich Village pay phone. Authorities say he was shot by a homeless man reportedly incensed by his rebuff of a request for spare change.

August concluded with a double shot of violence: a prosecutor was killed by a stray bullet as he bought doughnuts in the Bronx and a former state senator was shot to death in his Brooklyn office on Aug. 30.

Three days later, Brian Watkins, 22, of Provo, Utah, in town to see the U.S. Open tennis tournament, was stabbed to death in a Manhattan subway station while defending his mother from muggers. That slaying reinforced the perception of out-of-towners that New York is out of control.

Saddam tells superpowers to stay out of gulf crisis

(AP)—Iraq's Saddam Hussein on Saturday urged Presidents Bush and Gorbachev on the eve of their summit to get out of the Persian Gulf crisis and let the Arab world settle the matter.

A U.S.-chartered flight carrying about 300 Americans from Kuwait and Iraq meanwhile, landed in Frankfurt, West Germany early Sunday and, after refueling, was to continue on to Charleston, S.C. The plane arrived from Amman, Jordan.

Saddam, in a statement read by an announcer on Iraqi television and billed as an open message to the U.S. and Soviet leaders, told them: "I am not saying to either of you ... what your decision should be."

But he said Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev should bear in mind that "Iraq's army did not invade either of your countries."

Saddam, whose Aug. 2 takeover of Kuwait set off the chain of events leading to the summit in Helsinki, Finland, described Iraq as a peace-loving nation and warned of dangers of the huge U.S.-led buildup of forces in the gulf region.

"God and history are witness ... that the foreign intervention is complicating matters and will not provide a settlement," he said.

In Helsinki, Bush and Gorbachev expressed hopes for a settlement to the Persian Gulf crisis, now in its sixth week.

Bush told reporters on arrival he hoped the summit would "strengthen our common approach to this unjustifiable act of aggression."

The Soviet president, arriving later, cited the "acute crisis" in the gulf. "I hope this meeting will be successful," he said.

Bush's National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft suggested that the prospect of U.S.-Soviet unity on the Persian Gulf has Saddam on the run.

"We hope it causes him to lose some sleep," Scowcroft told reporters after a Saturday evening working dinner in Bush's hotel suite.

"We've put together a strategy that has a good chance of success without the use of military force," Scowcroft said, referring to the trade embargo against Iraq.

Asked whether Saddam was backing off, Scowcroft said, "I think he's maneuvering at present ... looking for a way out of his dilemma."

Iraq, meanwhile, sought to solidify its new rapprochement with Iran in an effort to get around U.N. economic sanctions.

Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz is due in Tehran on Sunday for the first high-level visit in a decade. Tehran's Jomhuri Islami newspaper said in an editorial that Aziz would return to Iraq "with his hands full" if Iraq continues its conciliatory policy toward Iran.

This policy has included Iraq's withdrawal of troops from Iranian territory, its exchange of war prisoners, and its dropping of a long-standing demand for full control of a strategic waterway.

In Kuwait, two more embassies bowed to the pressure brought to bear by the Iraqi occupiers. Sweden and Norway evacuated their diplomatic staffs but insisted their missions technically remained open.

The Iraqis, who ordered embassies in the conquered emirate to close two weeks ago, have been backing up that demand with a cutoff of food, water, power and telephone service to the missions.

About 20 embassies, including the U.S. mission, remain open with skeleton staffs to symbolize their refusal to accept Iraq's annexation of Kuwait, and to try to provide some protection for their citizens trapped by the invasion.

said he was interested in efforts to help Moscow's new economic policies, and vowed to cooperate in as many ways as possible.

But he said differences remain, and the United States has its own economic problems. Bush said he will recommend to Congress that there be "as close cooperation in the economic field as possible."

Gorbachev was at pains to say that Moscow wasn't cooperating on the Kuwait crisis in order to get economic aid. "It would be very superficial to judge that the Soviet Union could be bought for dollars," he said.

On one point of friction, the presence of Soviet military advisers in Iraq, Gorbachev said the number of advisers had been reduced from 193 to about 150. "They are leaving Iraq and the process is moving forward, so I don't think it's a problem," he said. There had been speculation that Gorbachev would agree to withdraw all the advisers.

Asked if war in the Persian Gulf was inevitable, Bush told reporters:

"I hope that we can achieve a peaceful solution and the way to do that is to have Iraq comply with the United Nations resolutions, and I think the part of our joint statement, two short lines, said it most clearly: 'Nothing short of the complete implementation of the United Nations Security Council resolutions is acceptable.'"

Bush added, "As soon as Saddam Hussein realizes that, then there certainly will be a peaceful resolution to this question."

"The United States is determined to see these resolutions enforced, and I like to feel that they will be enforced, and that that will result in a peaceful resolution" of the conflict, Bush said.

Knife found in home of suspect in U. of Fla. killings

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — State agents who searched a suspect's home in the killing of five college students found a knife hidden in a milk carton, a newspaper reported Sunday.

The Gainesville Sun quoted two sources close to the investigation as saying that the knife was found Thursday as agents searched the Indianapolis home of Edward Humphrey, his Gainesville apartment and his car.

Police in Colby, Kan., said Sunday that Humphrey was told to leave the town in western Kansas last month, about two weeks before the killings in Gainesville, because of his suspicious behavior, including arguing with a hitchhiker and later driving slowly through residential areas.

Humphrey, 18, hasn't been charged in the slayings but has been identified by police as one of eight suspects. They have refused to call him the prime suspect.

The Sun reported that the knife was found where Humphrey told investigators earlier this month it would be. Lab tests will be performed to determine if the knife is linked to the killings.

All of the victims died from multiple stab wounds, police said.

Also confiscated from the home, owned by Humphrey's 79-year-old grandmother, Elna Hlavaty, were books, videotapes, and clothing. Humphrey lived there with his mother and grandmother.

Gainesville police Lt. Sadie

Edward Humphrey

Darnell said Friday that "promising evidence" was found in the searches, but she refused to elaborate.

Meanwhile, police said the three apartments where the five University of Florida students were murdered have been released to their landlords.

Humphrey is being in lieu of $1 million bond in the Brevard County jail in Sharpes for allegedly assaulting his grandmother the night of his return from summer school at the Gainesville campus, where he is a freshman. His grandmother has said she wants to drop the charges.

Alachua County Sheriff's Lt. Spencer Mann reported Sunday that the crime scenes had finally been released by police.

"We feel at this point that nothing more is going to be gained. We have recovered all we are going to recover," Mann said.

In Colby, Kan., an officer intervened in an argument between Humphrey and a hitchhiker he had picked up Aug.

10, said Police Chief Randy Jones. Humphrey then asked the officer where he could use a certain gasoline credit card and the officer pointed out a station about three blocks away, Jones said.

"But he drove right past it and he was then seen driving slowly through some residential areas," Jones said. "The officer stopped him, asked him if he needed some assistance and they came to the mutual agreement that Humphrey would leave town."

Hours after Humphrey left Colby, he was arrested in Colorado's Crowley County, about 90 miles west of the Kansas border, after he allegedly failed to pay for $12 worth of gasoline at a convenience store, Sheriff's Sgt. Allan Turner said Thursday.

Biological research center established by alum's gift

Special to The Observer

A research center to study the molecular structures of complex molecules, especially those of biological interest, has been established at the University of Notre Dame by a $500,000 gift from Dominique Lizzadro, a 1933 Notre Dame graduate.

The Lizzadro Magnetic Resonance Research Center will be dedicated in Nieuwland Science Hall on Sept. 13.

The center features a state-of-the-art nuclear magnetic resonance spectrometer that enables researchers to obtain a three-dimensional picture of molecules in solution. Such a picture helps scientists to better understand the function and behavior of molecules within a system.

Although the research center was established to focus specifically on biochemical studies, such as cancer research, it will be equally useful to researchers studying complex organic and inorganic molecules.

Lizzadro worked as an examiner for the Illinois Insurance Department before 1949 when he formed his own company in Oak Park, Ill. He retired as the company's president in 1985.

A native of Baragiano, Italy, Lizzadro received his bachelor's degree in business administration from Notre Dame. In his local community he is known for spearheading the renovation of many of Oak Park's older buildings.

One of the structures, an office and shopping complex that contains his company's main offices, received an international architectural award for the restoration to its 1908 original condition.

The facility is under the direction of Anthony Serianni, associate professor of chemistry and biochemistry.

U.S. city councils utilize hotlines to dispell rumors

BALTIMORE (AP) — Sorry, sir, there are no plans for an underwater shopping mall in the Inner Harbor. No, ma'am, a highway is not coming through your living room. And no, pull tabs from soda cans and empty cigarette packs do not pay for kidney dialysis.

For 22 years, operators at the city's rumor control center have been handing out facts and dispelling rumors for confused or curious citizens.

"The rumor was it would be an underwater mall and they would have a restaurant and you could pick out your dinner from behind the glass," said Tom Saunders, who's worked for the hot line for 10 years. "We had contractors calling up wanting to build it."

Rumor control hot lines were opened in several major cities in the 1960s to ease tension in the wake of race riots. Although the violence of that era has passed, Baltimore's hot line still has a place, and some cities that dropped theirs are reviving the idea, Saunders said.

Philadelphia recently opened a rumor-control hot line after a black man was shot to death by a Korean shopkeeper, he said.

Besides handling the frivolous rumors, Baltimore officials say, the hot line keeps the public informed about topics that could affect health or safety — and helps the city to keep in touch with its residents.

"It's a place people can call to get good information, but also cast a straw vote, in effect, for things the city should be doing to enhance the community," said City Council President Mary Pat Clarke.

Budget talks in 3rd day; deadline Mon.

ANDREWS AIR FORCE BASE, Md. (AP) — Congressional leaders and White House negotiators raced the clock Sunday, trying to narrow their differences over the budget and reach an agreement for fiscal 1991.

The two sides worked for a third straight day at Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland, 20 minutes from the capital. Lawmakers have said they want to finish work by Monday to give Congress time to enact a package of savings by the Oct. 1 start of the fiscal year.

One official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the bargainers were discussing going to the on White House Monday to try to complete their work.

President Bush was scheduled to return to Washington late Sunday after his Helsinki summit meeting with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

Congress and the Bush administration have been deadlocked all year over how to reduce the deficit.

The bargainers have been searching for a combination of new taxes and spending cuts producing $50 billion in savings for next year and $500 billion over the next five years. Inaction could mean a record $250 billion deficit next year.

Democrats and Republicans have clashed all year over how to achieve budget savings.

Texas prison to reconsider system of marking homosexuals with wristbands

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A Fort Worth jail has promised to reconsider its system of marking homosexual inmates with colored wristbands, a policy one gay activist said was "like throwing meat to the dogs."

All prisoners at Tarrant County Jail wear colored wristbands: red for felons, blue for misdemeanor offenders, orange for those awaiting transfer to federal prisons, yellow for prisoners with medical problems and gray for homosexuals.

New inmates are questioned as they enter the jail, which houses both men and women. Those who say they are homosexual or bisexual are allowed protective custody because homosexuals are common targets of abuse by other inmates, jail officials said Saturday.

Homosexual inmates who choose protective custody are given gray wristbands and housed in isolated groups, although they mingle with the rest of the prisoners during meals and exercise breaks, officials said.

"We need to make sure one prisoner is not abusing another prisoner for any reason, and this is an aid to us," said John Pempsell, the chief deputy sheriff who oversees the jail.

Many homosexual activists and civil libertarians said the wristbands invite abuse, rather than deter it.

"You're putting a sign around their neck like, 'Come and Beat on Me,'" said Ed Koren, a Washington attorney for the National Prison Project of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Tarrant County Gay Alliance member Thomas Bruner said the policy is "like throwing meat to the dogs."

Jail administrator Bill Broome met Thursday with two members of the gay alliance and said the policy, which has been in effect for years, would be reconsidered.

"No policy is set in concrete," Broome said. "But the question has never before been brought to my attention."

Broome did not say when the policy might be changed.

Oklahoma executes murderer by lethal injection; first state execution in 24 years

McALESTER, Okla. (AP) — A man convicted in the shotgun slaying of someone who walked in on a burglary was put to death by injection early Monday in Oklahoma's first execution in 24 years.

Charles Troy Coleman, 43, was pronounced dead at 12:35 a.m. at Oklahoma State Penitentiary.

"Just tell everybody I love them and I have a peace and quiet heart," he said before he was given the lethal injection in his left arm.

He became the 138th person executed in the United States since the U.S. Supreme Court in 1976 allowed states to resume use of the death penalty.

Oklahoma becomes the 15th state since 1976 to resume executions. The last person put to death in Oklahoma was James D. French, electrocuted in 1966 for killing his cellmate. Oklahoma has 115 people on death row, four of them women.

Coleman had been sentenced to die for the 1979 slaying of John Seward in Muskogee. Seward, 68, and his wife, Roxie, 62, were killed when they surprised a burglar at a relative's home. Coleman was not tried in Mrs. Seward's death.

Coleman's truck was seen at the home, and custom-cut meat and other possessions from the house were found in his truck when he was arrested.

The U.S. Supreme Court twice denied requests Sunday to block the execution, the sixth and seventh time the high court had turned Coleman down, and a federal appeals court also refused a stay.

Defense attorney Mandy Welch raised mental competency questions in seeking a stay of execution.

The inmate's final motion for a stay was denied 6-1 by the U.S. Supreme Court late Sunday. Justice Thurgood Marshall dissented and Justice Harry Blackmun did not participate.

Coleman's lawyers lost a series of appeals in recent days. On Saturday, they lost an effort to overturn a federal judge's refusal to order the state Pardon and Parole Board to conduct a clemency hearing.

A second clemency appeal was made to Gov. Henry Bellmon. That appeal said Coleman had changed since 1979 and had started a religious ministry in prison, said Andrew Tevington, the governor's legal counsel.

Miss America title goes to Miss Illinois

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Miss Illinois Marjorie Vincent, a pianist of Haitian descent who wants to practice international law, was crowned Miss America 1991 early Sunday.

Miss Vincent broke into tears and smiled brightly as she given a surprise serenade of "There She Is" by Bert Parks, who returned to the pageant 10 years after he was fired as emcee.

"I couldn't believe it," she said afterward. "I was just so happy that I was in the Top 10. I still don't believe it."

Asked what she would do next, Vincent said, "I have no idea. I just want to see my family."

First runner-up was Miss South Carolina Mary Gainey, 24, of Hartsville.

Following her as second runner-up was Miss Tennessee Dana Brown, 25, of Memphis. Miss Texas Suzanne Lawrence, 21, of Humble was third runner-up, while Miss Louisiana Linnea Marie Fayard, 22, of Shreveport took fifth place.

Earlier in the pageant, the 75-year-old Parks serenaded 29 former Miss Americas with a lip-synched "There She Is" that wasn't quite synched. A standing ovation greeted Parks, who neglected to mention at least a dozen of the former beauty queens he was to introduce.

Vincent, 25, of Oak Park, is a third-year law student at Duke University who graduated from DePaul University in 1988 with a degree in music.

She played Chopin's "Fantasy Impromptu — Opus 66" with dramatic flourishes and a light touch during the talent portion of the competition.

The 5-foot-6, 110-pound Vincent performed in a rust satin embroidered coat detailed in gold cracked ice over a black sheath petticoat dress.

She wore a turquoise chiffon silk gown that was beaded with silver, white and varying shades of turquoise bugle beads, sequins and rhinestones. The gown also featured a sweetheart neckline with a keyhole opening in the back.

Vincent, who came to the United States from Haiti when she was 3 years old, has said she wants to study international law and help in the economic development of the impoverished Caribbean nation. She speaks French and creole.

Vincent comes from a modest family. Her father is a doorman and a check cashier and her mother is a seamstress.

She said in a pre-pageant interview that she wants to speak out on the plight of battered women.

Miss Vincent was the only black contestant among the 50 this year. Last year's Miss America, Debbye Turner, also is black. Miss Vincent is the fourth black woman to hold the title.

Vanessa Williams, then Miss New York, was the first in 1983. She lost the crown because nude photos taken years earlier appeared in Penthouse magazine. She was replaced by first runner-up Suzette Charles, Miss New Jersey, who also is black.

Among her interests, Vincent lists listening to chamber music and jazz, collecting mugs, cooking, reading mysteries and romance novels.

The other semifinalists were Miss Colorado Karrie Mitchell, 24; Miss Iowa Kerri Lynne Rosenberg, 26; Miss Oklahoma Cynthia Lynne White, 24; Miss Pennsylvania Marla Wynne, 23, and Miss Virginia Shannon Noelle DePuy, 19.

They scored the highest after three nights of preliminary competitions in swimsuit, talent, evening gown and interviews with judges.

Miss South Carolina, like Miss Turner, played the marimba. Miss Pennsylvania performed a ventriloquist act with a green cockatoo puppet named Oscar.

Several of the contestants overcame personal tragedies and disabilities to make it to the Boardwalk.

Pope blesses largest Christian church in the world

YAMOUSSOUKRO, Ivory Coast (AP) — Pope John Paul II arrived Sunday to consecrate the biggest Christian church in the world, a basilica that rivals the grandeur of St. Peter's. Opponents say the country can't afford it.

Heavy security was in place around Yamoussoukro, the native town of President Felix Houphouet-Boigny, to prevent anti-government demonstrations by recently legalized opposition parties.

Architect Pierre Fakhoury defended construction of the church in a country where Roman Catholics are estimated to make up less than 15 percent of the 10 million people. Most of the people are animists and Moslems.

"The president swore he would give God the biggest and most beautiful church he could," he told reporters.

On Thursday, police fired tear gas and used truncheons to break up an attempt by opposition leaders to stage a peaceful march in Abidjan.

Prosecutors inclined to bust bingo

NEW ALBANY, Ind. (AP) — When bingo was illegal in Indiana, prosecutors looked the other way because the games run by churches, charities and other non-profit groups generally benefited good causes.

Not that bingo is legal in the state, however, prosecutors are taking a closer look at the games to make sure there's no undue profiteering.

"There's some concern among some prosecutors that the statute is somewhat loose," said Richard Good, executive director of the Indiana Prosecuting Attorneys Council.

On July 1, a law took effect legalizing bingo to raise money for non-profit organizations. As of last week, 1,043 charitable groups had registered with the state, said Jane Kelley, a deputy secretary of state.

to build an "international skills tank" which would allow them to contribute to the reconstruction when the time comes, according to Lopez.

The organization, which currently has about two dozen participants, is hoping to expand their membership in future years after they have gained official recognition by the university. CAUSA also intends to become involved in bringing more Cuban-American students to Notre Dame.

There will be a conference sponsored by CAUSA on November 1 - 3 which will bring together Cuban legal scholars, historians, and community leaders to discuss a future constitution for the country and to inaugurate a "think tank" which will facilitate a transition to democracy.

Anyone of Cuban heritage who is interested in becoming involved in CAUSA should contact Lopez in the dean's office at the law school.

150 miles south of here. A British Broadcasting Corp. television team that tried to meet with opposition leaders was briefly detained Sunday.

Houphouet-Boigny has ruled this nation as a one-party state since independence from France in 1960.

The pope met with the president at his residence Sunday evening.

Among the dignitaries who were to attend the Monday morning consecration were South African Foreign Minister Pik Botha, French Cooperation Minister Jacques Pelletier and Jean-Christophe Mitterrand, the son and counselor of President Francois Mitterrand.

Cardinals and bishops from 18 African nations and about 350,000 people also were to attend the consecration of the Basilica of Our Lady of Peace, which towers over this small town 150 miles north of Abidjan.

The Ivorian League of Human Rights charged Sunday that authorities had forced thousands of villagers to come to Yamoussoukro for the service.

The consecration ceremony will end a 10-day papal tour of four African nations, during which the pope has called for a narrowing of the economic gap between the continent's urban elite and rural poor.

Earlier Sunday, in Kigali, the capital of Rwanda, the Polish-born pope prayed to "the Virgin Mary, queen of peace," appealing for her intercession to bring peace to the world, particularly in the Persian Gulf.

A Rwandan government official publicly challenged the pontiff on the church's attitude to AIDS, celibacy and sainthood of Africans.

Christophe Mfizi, Rwanda's state information director, said doctors were hard pressed to defend Catholic bans on birth control in nations facing a population problem and the use of condoms to prevent the spread of acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

John Paul initially declined to visit the basilica in Yamoussoukro, but accepted the invitation after Houphouet-Boigny agreed to build a hospital nearby and grant the Catholic Church permission to open a radio station.

Houphouet-Boigny, a Catholic, has said he paid for the construction of the basilica with his own money.

But opposition leader Laurent Gbagbo has questioned how the president, a former cocoa farmer, could afford to pay for a basilica on the scale of St. Peter's in Vatican City. Government opponents have accused Houphouet-Boigny of stealing state funds.

The government says the basilica cost $140 million, but other estimates have put its cost as high as $250 million.

Copy service attracts increased student business

By CHRISTINE WALSH
Business Editor

After almost a year of operation, business at The Copy Shop is rapidly expanding, filling a previously existing gap in the campus market for copying and related services.

The Copy Shop, owned and run by Dan Foley, a second-year MBA student and 1989 graduate of Notre Dame, began operations in the basement of LaFortune in October, 1989. The purpose of the new business is to provide a "complimentary service to existing duplicating services on campus," according to Foley.

One service that has particularly taken off this semester is that of compiling 'course packets' for professors to be used as reading and study supplements for their students. The course packets serve as a "textbook supplement" and contain anything from sections of books, magazine and journal articles to professors' notes, outlines and copies of overhead transparencies, said Foley.

The advantage of the course packets is that students need not make as many trips to the reserve reading room in the library, thus saving valuable time, said Foley. "They allow a professor to update their class each semester... keeping information current."

Often the materials found in the course packets are sections from books that are out of print and articles that are either difficult to find or that the professors have written themselves, Foley said.

Approximately 76 professors from a wide range of departments at the University opted to use The Copy Shop to assemble course packets this semester, according to Foley.

Course packets provide "one compact format for all their materials," said Foley. Some professors even include course outlines with blank sheets so that student can take notes within the packets, making the packets "interactive teaching instruments." Foley said, "It's senseless to sit in a class and copy transparencies. [The packets] can open the classroom to more discussion."

The Copy Shop has been especially cautious with respect to the copyright laws governing the reproduction of print materials such as those contained in the course packets, said Foley.

Permission to reproduce materials must be obtained for each thing that is copied. Ordinarily, The Copy Shop sends a fax of the request to reproduce materials directly to the publishers. According to Foley, "Only a few copyrights have been denied."

The majority of the materials whose request for reproduction were denied were sections out of books currently in print, especially paperbacks, said Foley. There have been few problems with books that are out of print.

Occasionally, publishers ask for royalty fees for the copies made. For example, a publisher may charge 50 cents per reproduction, which would then be included in the price of the overall packet, explained Foley.

According to Father Timothy Scully, assistant professor of government, "You can't find a single volume that fits the [individual professor's] analysis completely. There is just no text that provides the appropriate depth and breadth." In that sense, the course packets are a very useful tool, said Scully.

Some departments rely heavily on magazine and journal articles, and the course packets enable professors to utilize these materials in their courses without forcing students to stand in line at the reserve reading room, said Scully.

"Most major universities outside of Notre Dame long ago moved to this pedagogical device. We did it at the University of California, Berkeley when I taught there," said Scully.

The number of course packets produced by Kinko's Copies has also increased this semester, said Kinko's employee Greg Burns. However, this is due largely to an increase in requests from Indiana University, South Bend, Burns said.

The number of course packets requested by professors from Notre Dame has decreased slightly this year, said Burns. "This is probably due to the fact that we weren't able to send out notices like last year" to inform professors about this service, said Burns. Those Notre Dame professors who had used Kinko's in previous semesters continue to do so, said Burns.

"Commercial business has picked up, but business from Notre Dame students seems to be down slightly this year," said Burns. Burns said that some of the business coming from students could have gone to The Copy Shop, although many students continue to use Kinko's.

Located in the basement of LaFortune, The Copy Shop provides services beyond copying. They offer facsimile (fax) transmission services (both sending and receiving), high speed and volume copying, self-service copy machines, spiral binding, laminating, large 11"x17" copies, and blue and red toner for copying posters at costs much lower and at a faster speed than printing presses. The shop also sells computer diskettes and office supplies.

Ford resorts to outsourcing for new parts

DETROIT (AP) — Workers at Ford Motor Co.'s Cleveland engine plant recently heard some good news. The company will assemble a new engine at the huge, aging complex next to Hopkins International Airport.

But there's a catch: Some of the engine's components will be made by outside suppliers, some from outside the United States.

That bothers the United Auto Workers union, which sees the jobs of workers it represents linked to who makes the parts used in assembling Ford vehicles.

"It's a pretty big concern to us," said one UAW official at Local 1250 who asked not to be identified. "We've got some aluminum stuff coming in, and that's being done by somebody else."

UAW Vice President Stephen Yokich said so-called "outsourcing" is a critical issue in the negotiations between the UAW and the Big Three automakers. UAW contracts covering more than 450,000 workers expire at midnight Friday.

Outsourcing became a hot topic during auto talks in the 1980s. That's when automakers closed plants and laid off workers by the tens of thousands to slash costs.

Companies farm out less work now, but the issue remains. Looking to the future, federal fuel regulations and rapidly changing technology could have an impact on automakers' decisions about where to get a part or component.

Each of the Big Three has too much factory capacity for what it is manufacturing. The UAW reasons that if automakers increase self-sufficiency for parts, it could increase the number of union jobs.

Public schools earn top marks in college buys

Seven of top 10 in N.Y., N.J., FL.

NEW YORK (AP) — Cooper Union, which charges its 1,000 students just $300 a year, leads a new list of best college buys in a Money Magazine guide.

Seven of the top 10 schools that offer "the best education for the buck" are in New York, Florida or New Jersey, according to the new annual guide, "The Money Guide to the Best Colleges in America," going on sale at newsstands Monday.

The top three values — Cooper Union, California Institute of Technology and Rice University — are all private. The remaining seven in the guide's top 10 are public universities.

The 108-page publication, produced in collaboration with Peterson's Guides, lists 100 public and 100 private schools around the country that emerged as best values in a computer analysis that weighed tuition charges against 17 measures of academic performance.

The list excluded all two-year colleges and narrowly specialized or sectarian schools. It also omitted the three U.S. military academies, which are free and provide excellent education but require at least five years' military service, "thereby masking their actual cost," according to the guide.

Public universities were judged on the basis of out-of-state tuitions, and private schools were judged at their full price exclusive of any scholarships or financial aid.

Top on the list is Cooper Union for the Advancement of Science and Art, a highly selective private college located in New York City and founded by real estate magnate Peter Cooper 131 years ago. The school provides a $15,000-a-year subsidy to each student from its $100 million endowment and contributions. Students pay only a $300 activities fee.

The rest of the guide's top 10 are, in order:

•California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, Calif., ranked high despite its $13,495 price tag. The school has a teaching faculty of 274 for 799 undergraduates. Faculty and students have won 21 Nobel Prizes.

•Rice University, Houston, uses its $1 billion endowment to keep tuitions at a low $7,160 while maintaining an academic reputation rivaling Ivy League schools.

•The New College of the University of South Florida, Sarasota, combines the small feel of a private school with a public college price: $5,488 for out-of-staters, $1,515 for Floridians.

•State University of New York at Geneseo, a strong liberal arts branch of the 64-campus SUNY system, charges out-of-staters $4,925, $1,575 for New Yorkers.

•State University of New York at Binghamton, a highly competitive "public Ivy," strong in liberal arts, costs $4,914 for out-of-state students, $1,564 for in-staters.

•Trenton State College, Trenton, N.J., offers a strong core curriculum for liberal arts students, at a cost of $3,795 for out-of-staters, $2,720 for New Jersey students.

•State University of New York at Albany, with strong programs in public administration, criminal justice and other government-related career tracks, costs $4,835 for out-of-state students, $1,485 for New Yorkers.

•University of Virginia, Charlottesville, long considered one of the top state universities with particularly excellent English and economics departments, charges Virginians 2,966 and out-of-staters $8,136.

•University of Florida, Gainesville, boasts 114 majors in 52 disciplines, charges $4,630 for out-of-state students, $1,320 for Florida residents.

Propaganda fuels fire of world conflict

By Marc Conklin

A recent crisis has awoken an old psychological phenomenon. It seems that in all countries at all times, the need for an enemy exists. And this is apparent especially in times of war.

A few years ago, television stations aired a very popular study called "Faces of the Enemy," in which a psychologist found and displayed various forms of propaganda used in countries during times of war. It revealed Soviet, Iranian, and Japanese caricatures of Americans, as well as distorted American counter-portraits of these countries. Grotesque images filled the screens—greedy Uncle Sams with guns, blood-thirsty Russian bears engulfing the globe, and Japanese-looking rats crawling over and spreading their diseases throughout the world.

The message was clear: historically, countries have always used propaganda to make their supposed enemies appear sub-human, thereby making it "easier" or "more justified" to kill them in a war situation. The moral is also clear: first the question, "how could this have been done?" and then the conclusion, "certainly we are above this now."

But the disturbing fact is that we in the United States are not above this childish practice. Indications that propaganda is alive and well can be seen even in our most reputable news publications. Soon after the Gulf Crisis began, Newsweek ran a cover which ignored every aspect of journalistic objectivity. On it was a picture of Saddam Hussein—not a photograph, but clearly a drawing made from a photograph. Behind the intimidating face of Hussein were bright orange and yellow tints which obviously were placed there to evoke the image of flames. There it was, Hussein portrayed as the Devil behind the bold-faced caption "Baghdad's Bully."

Behavior such as this, especially from a national and, in fact, international publication like Newsweek, is absolutely irresponsible. But Newsweek is not the only offender. The media at large, both publications and television, have chosen to adopt a propaganda-type stance on the Middle East situation, rather than to transmit real information.

This does absolutely nothing to help the situation, and in fact only fuels the fire. Is there really any difference between a foreign country burning the American flag and the U.S. portraying the leader of another country as Satan? We in the United States proudly, yet hyp-ocritically expound our belief that such actions are barbaric and uncivilized. We like to think that we are above barbarism, and yet we advocate it in subtler forms.

In the end, something deeper in our society than the media is to blame for this. With the present situation, the media is now more than ever operating on a "give the people what they want" level. Newsweek's cover is a symptom of a disease which tells us that what we really want is an enemy—a man, a country, and finally an entire area of the world to set ourselves up against.

Since our government has become compatible and even friendly with the U.S.S.R., we have now replaced our old hatred for them with a new hatred for the Middle East. We are merely transferring an emotion from one arbitrary place to another.

We should be proud that in the United States we have enough control over our media to know the truth about all aspects surrounding a potentially violent situation such as this one. But we should be ashamed that we are throwing away the potential to become educated on the Middle East for a barbaric love to hate.

Ticket sales slight ND students

Dear Editor:

Until reading Dave Dieteman's "Devoted Football Fans" article (The Observer, Sept. 4), I was unaware that Saint Mary's students could purchase Notre Dame football tickets at the same time as Notre Dame students, thereby coming in competition for better seats.

I therefore found it offensive that a Saint Mary's student complained about the twenty-three dollar season ticket price difference in Dieteman's article, citing that the two schools are supposed to be equal. Indeed, the two schools are equal, but the fact remains that it is the University of Notre Dame football team. Actually, the ticket distribution process is unfair to Notre Dame students who logically should have the first pick of season tickets.

The athletic department and administration should review the ticket distribution process and its obvious flaw.

Americans approve use of force

Dear Editor:

This is a reply to Kurt Mills' letter which criticized The Observer article comparing the Panama invasion with the Persian Gulf intervention (The Observer, Sept. 3). Mills claimed to be "sickened" by the pro-U.S. tilt of the piece, then regurgitated a passel of liberal shibboleths to prove it. His characterization of President Endara of Panama as a "fat cat aristocrat" is cause for concern, suggesting, as it does, a harboring of unhealthy feelings of class envy. Envy is a bad thing for a human soul, and from a holistic standpoint, it does not bode well for a full recovery.

The purpose here, however, is not to cure (de-program?), but merely to offer some thoughts. First, the letter asserts that our nation's main interest in the Gulf is "control of oil which does not belong to the U.S., but which it claims as its own...." In Mills' mind, intervention aimed at securing our right to buy Arab oil is transmogrified into stealing it. This would suggest that Mills' real beef is with free trade—the "evil" cornerstone of capitalism. If this is so, his subsequent invocation of starving Ethiopians is ironic, because if there were more free trade in the world, there would be a lot less starvation.

Second, in condemning the United States for acting to retain hegemony in the Western Hemisphere, Mills confuses hubris with simple self-esteem. He calls such action "dangerous" and "outmoded," but these words are more apposite to his liberal rhetoric. He advances a diffident, guilt-ridden approach to the use of force which reminds one of America during the Carter era: a nation so ambivalent about itself that it could not even muster the will to protect its own interests. The verdict on that America was returned by the American people ten years ago this November—in the first Reagan landslide.

Kenya, Africa

McDermott experiences the poverty and faith of the Kenyan People

MARK BERRETTINI
accent writer

As Assistant Rector of Morrissey Hall, Father Tom McDermott talks about his stay in Kenya. "My room here is larger than a room that a family would live in in Kenya."

Father McDermott was a parish priest in a low-class housing neighborhood outside of Nairobi, Kenya for the last eight years. He was also Director of Formation for the Holy Cross Fathers, which helps young men become Holy Cross Priests.

The neighborhood is sponsored by the World Bank and gives the poor of the area a chance to have a stable home, running water, and a sense of community. The neighborhood, one mile long and one-half mile wide, is home to 75,000 people.

Father McDermott commented, "Kenya has the largest birthrate in the world. In the 1960's after their independence, they (Nairobi) had 200,000 people. Now they have 2 million."

The population explosion, along with a relatively new economy is causing many problems for the poor of Kenya.
Father McDermott explained that there are not enough jobs to support all of the people. A normal day for a man in Kenya would be looking for one or more day jobs. A daily job is hard to find.

For a woman, a normal day would be selling a gunny sack of oranges or tomatoes on the streets.

"A lot of people are looking for enough money just to get by," added Father McDermott.

"Back at Notre Dame . . .
[Father McDermott] is amazed at its wealth.
'Everything that used to be a lightbulb is now a chandelier,' he said."

Father McDermott also mentioned the fact that when he returned to the United States he had a greater appreciation for the feminist movement. In Kenya, women have no rights and are treated very badly.

Another difference is the Kenyan's great respect for elders. Being old in Kenya is a sign of wisdom and is an honor.

The faith and the generosity of the community stick out in Father McDermott's mind.
"Their quality of faith, growing sense of community, joy of prayer, and lively liturgies," are what Father McDermott remembers the most.

Before Father McDermott left Kenya in July, riots for more freedom broke out in his neighborhood and elsewhere around the country. The opening of Eastern Europe influenced the Kenyans to want more freedom from their one party system.

"People feel more and more economically squeezed and are forced to ask political questions they never thought of," he explains. "They want a government for the common man, and the government is unwilling to give it. Right now the riots have been suppressed and there is a surface normality, but underneath things are boiling."

Father McDermott returned to Notre Dame in July to see his nieces and nephews and to get in touch with the Holy Cross Fathers in America again.

Back at Notre Dame he is
amazed at its wealth.
"Everything that used to be a lightbulb is now a chandelier,"
he said.

Now that Father McDermott is back at Notre Dame, he is happy to be here. Although he wants to return to Africa in the future, he also wants to make his contribution to the Notre Dame community.

Nobody's Child, charity album, reaches out to homeless

PAUL PEARSON
accent writer

There is one big danger involved in putting together benefit/charity albums. They have this nasty habit of taking themselves too seriously. At best, they get silly. At worst, they sacrifice entertainment value for social conscience.

Nobody's Child: Romanian Angel Appeal slips into this sad groove occasionally, but only at its lowest points.

This album was assembled by Barbara Bach, Yoko Ono, Linda McCartney and Olivia Harrison to provide relief for the thousands of orphanages in Romania languishing in poverty, filth and AIDS.

An extremely worthwhile cause? Yes. However, a worthwhile cause is not a license to preach to an otherwise willing listener.

The album opens with the Traveling Wilburys performing the title track, "Nobody's Child."
This song, which pushes the Wilburys into the realm of country music, seems to literally speak about the orphanages in Romania. "They've long since stopped their crying / cause no one ever hears / and no one's there to notice them /
or take away their fears."

This song, like many others like it on the album is beautiful, but is also depressing. Instead of a we-can-beat-this-if we put-our-minds-to-it attitude, it seems to depend on pity to get sympathy and donations.

An even worse example is provided by ex-Eurythmic Dave Stewart and his Spiritual Cowboys. Their song, "This Week," would fit in very well at a funeral for a stillborn baby.
Stewart, with his breathy vocals and vibrato guitar chords, tries to capture the essence of John Lennon, but all he gets is the most depressing song since "I am a Rock."

In fact, when he sings, "This weak little baby is fading away," one gets the idea that Stewart wouldn't mind doing the same thing himself.

This is Nobody's Child at its worst. At its best, it contains songs that challenge, surprise and, most importantly, entertain.

The album contains a unique contribution from music history—the Paul Simon and George Harrison version of "Homeward Bound," recorded during a live broadcast of "Saturday Night Live."

This song, which seems to have more instruments than the two acoustic guitars, is proof positive that anyone who is not familiar with Simon and Garfunkel is musically illiterate.
It also provides a pleasant relief from "This Week," which is right before it.

Elton John, with "Medicine Man," strikes the perfect balance between message and music. It is one of the few songs on the album that does not hit the listener over the head like a sledgehammer.

Instead, he slips it under a danceable, piano-dominated track that would make Paula Abdul jealous. He also makes the most profound and timely statement of the entire album when he sings "Man, we need a Santa Claus."

The album ends with Guns N' Roses' latest single, "Civil War," which, along with "Homeward Bound," is worth the price of the album (even if you choose to buy the CD). Here, we find not the sexist party animals who sang "Turn around, b___, I've got a use for you," but fresh and innovative group of hard rockers who sing "You can't trust freedom when it's not in your hands / When everyone is fighting for the Promised Land."

This song presents Guns N' Roses as an important and fresh force whose music does not ask to be heard; it *demand*s to be heard.

Nobody's Child is an album that tells its message from all different angles, with mixed results. Some of the songs are not recommended for persons having a bad day, but overall, is worth hearing.

Nobody's Child is a compilation of songs donated by well-known artists in hopes of improving the poverty-stricken conditions of the orphanages in the country of Romania.

Grandmother faces jail unless she reveals granddaughters' whereabouts

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A 77-year-old grandmother faces jail on contempt charges Monday if she refuses to say where her daughter has taken her two young granddaughters.

Superior Court Judge Mark A. Pfeiffer ruled last year that Mary Pigeon helped her daughter, Elaine Yates, flee Warwick with the children five years ago and conspired to keep them from their father, Russell M. Yates Jr.

Yates had sued his mother-in-law to find out what she knows.

Mrs. Pigeon has testified that she does not know the whereabouts of her granddaughters, Kimberly and Kelly. But Pfeiffer found her in contempt of court and gave her until a hearing Monday to say where the girls are or face prison.

Mrs. Pigeon could not be reached at her home or summer residence on Sunday. Her lawyer, Daniel Schrock, was not at the office and his home number was not listed.

Yates said he was optimistic Mrs. Pigeon would break her silence.

"I've got to keep the faith and be hopeful," he said Sunday.

Kimberly was 3 years old and Kelly was 10 months when they disappeared with their mother a few weeks after Mrs. Yates found her husband in bed with another woman. Yates has said he hit his wife and cut her forehead during an argument over the infidelity.

The couple has not divorced, but Yates has legal custody of the children.

"I won't divorce her because I won't let it be easy for her to change her name or the children's," he said.

In May, Pfeiffer ordered Mrs. Pigeon to work 60 hours at an agency in Newport that searches for missing children, and she ended up serving twice that much.

Opponents set out to disgrace Bhutto

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Her opponents are determined to have Benazir Bhutto remembered as the disgraced leader of Pakistan's most corrupt and incompetent government, not as a martyr for democracy.

When she was dismissed after 20 months in office, they set out to destroy what some called "the myth" — that only a Bhutto could govern Pakistan.

In removing the prime minister and her democratically elected government Aug. 6, President Ghulam Ishaq Khan cited a long list of complaints ranging from corruption and ineptitude to abuse of power.

Bhutto called it "a constitutional coup" by the Establishment, a reference to the generals who formerly ruled Pakistan and still have enormous influence.

A caretaker government made up largely of defected allies and bitter critics of Bhutto has hurled charge after charge to an effort to discredit her Pakistan People's Party, which was founded by her father. Some say her enemies are trying to force her out of politics.

Three former Cabinet ministers have been charged in special courts set up to handle corruption cases and to disqualify candidates from elections called for Oct. 24, three years ahead of schedule.

The new government has said at least half a dozen more cases will be filed, possibly against Bhutto.

Many Pakistanis see the tribunals as "kangaroo courts" evoking memories of the process her father, Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, underwent 13 years ago after Gen. Mohammad Zia ul-Haq overthrew him. Bhutto was hanged two years later.

"There are glaring similarities with 1977, but there also are differences," Bhutto said in a recent interview at her fortress-like home in Karachi. "The wind of democracy has come across the world. There is a new future ahead, and it will not be easy for them to drag Pakistan backward."

Opponents have not presented concrete evidence to support their charges, and the family name still carries much of its old magic for many. Wherever she goes, Bhutto draws large crowds that chant "Benazir, Benazir is innocent!"

Pakistanis have become increasingly cynical about the future of their stop-and-start democracy.

Since its creation as a Moslem homeland 43 years ago, when the Indian subcontinent became independent of Britain, Pakistan has endured three wars, three internal insurgencies and three military dictators.

Two prime ministers, a president, several high-ranking generals and countless politicians and religious leaders have been assassinated. Thirteen governments have been dismissed and three constitutions written.

"Many are wondering whether there is something sick, something terminal festering deep down in the political soul of Pakistan," said political analyst Akbar Ahmed.

be Laver," Sampras said. "A lot of guys forget about that time, especially the ones who are my age. All the Australians were class individuals, and I'd like to be in that category."

Agassi, clad in neon-green with blond-streaked hair and one shiny earring, carried on the Connors-McEnroe tradition with a cursing-spitting outburst that earned him a $3,000 fine in the second round.

Sampras's victory in the first U.S. Open of the 1990s, though, may be an indication that the future of the American game may be in the hands of a player who cherishes substance over sass and talent over tantrums. He even wears plain, white out-fits.

"This is the ultimate in tennis," he said. "Whatever I do the rest of my career, I'll always be a U.S. Open champion."

Sampras played a dream match, aching Agassi 13 times and hitting 12 service winners with serves up to 124 mph.

Agassi lacked the power and accuracy he showed in beating Boris Becker in the semifinals, but he was simply overwhelmed by Sampras's pinpoint serves, deep groundstrokes and quick thrusts at the net.

"When you can hit a serve 120 mph on the line, there's not a lot (anyone) can do," Agassi said.

Sampras had too many skills, volleying brilliantly with his long arms and legs covering the entire net, his racket cutting through the air like a fencer's foil.

His first Grand Slam victory couldn't have been fashioned more slickly or completed more efficiently, all wrapped up neatly in 1 hour, 42 minutes.

His graceful, looping groundstrokes kept Agassi pinned behind the baseline or scurrying from side to side in desperate dashes.

The tenor of the match was evident when Sampras opened the second game with an ace. Two points later, the crowd of 20,746 giggled at the speed of Sampras's serve when his first serve, an inch long, sped past Agassi and nearly decapitated a linesman. Sampras loaded up again and smacked a service winner.

Sampras broke him in the next game when Agassi netted a backhand and floated a forehand long on the final two points. Sampras, loosened up now, let go with his full force, holding service with three straight aces and drawing loud, respectful applause and whistles from the crowd.

The winner, who walks with his head slightly bowed and seems always to be staring at the ground, clearly was asserting himself, and the crowd knew it was watching the coming of age of a major young talent.

When the umpire changed a fault call against Agassi midway through the second set, giving him another first serve, a fan called out, "You need all the help you can get, Agassi." Hardly anyone could disagree.

Sampras, who beat Ivan Lendl and McEnroe in the quarters and semis, has learned not to let opponents back in the match. Agassi never had a chance.

Sampras gave up a stingy three points on serve in the first set, and five points on serve in the second set.

"I'm serving so well, it puts a seed in the other guy's mind:

Play one bad game and the set could be over," Sampras said. "Today was the best I could possibly play, and it couldn't be at a better time. I controlled the match and dictated the play. I don't know if anybody could have beat me."

Agassi never broke him, and came close only three times in the third set when he had break-points in each of Sampras's first two services.

Each time, though, Sampras responded by calmly coming back to hold, winning the first game of the set with two service winners and the third game with a lunging backhand volley on a forehand pass attempt by Agassi.

That was the extent of the tension in the match, the only moments when fans who came to cheer Agassi had a chance to shout. At the end of that game, a fan yelled, "Wake up, Agassi," but clearly it was too late.

Sampras broke him at love to take a 4-2 lead, closing out the set and, for all it meant, the match with a blazing backhand down the line while Agassi stared at it with a look of exasperation.

For the next 16 weeks - 20 if you count post-season action - people will sit in front of televisions for hours on Sunday and then again Monday night. They can watch the NFL on TNT or ESPN on Sunday nights or even catch games while eating Thanksgiving dinner.

The Monday night phenomenon is the most interesting. How can people watch these games for hours on Sunday and then devote an entire weeknight to the same boredom? The worst thing to happen to Monday Night Football was when Howard Cosell left. At least Cosell added some life to what usually amounted to boring, one-sided games.

The fans of teams like Atlanta and the New York Jets provide interesting case studies. What would possess someone to buy one ticket - let alone season tickets - to watch these teams play? It's almost like a torture for some sin committed in a previous life.

But the biggest waste comes in that teams actually think they can beat Montana and the San Francisco 49ers, winners of the past two Super Bowls.

There is a team that could probably give the 49ers a game in this season's Super Bowl. But most of the 1967 Green Bay Packers are ready for retirement homes.

I'd never have believed that one little computer could make such an incredible difference in my academic and working life.

"After business school, I took a job at a large bank and used my Macintosh for producing everything from spreadsheets to a company newsletter.

"Today I use Macintosh to help me run my own management consulting firm. When I give a presentation, I can see in people's faces that they're really impressed. And that makes me feel great.

"Sometimes I take Friday off, put my Macintosh and skis in the car, and head for the mountains. I ski days and work nights. It's perfect.

Cubs, Bielecki pounded by Cards

CHICAGO (AP) — John Tudor, pitching in relief for the second time this season, won his first game in more than a month with four scoreless innings and Felix Jose and Ray Lankford each drove in a pair of runs as the St. Louis Cardinals routed the Chicago Cubs 9-2 Sunday night.

St. Louis had 13 hits and seven Cardinals drove in runs. Jose, acquired from Oakland on Aug. 30, had two hits, including a home run, and Lankford went 4-for-5 — a double and three singles.

It was the first Sunday night game in the 76-year history of Wrigley Field, which has only had lights since 1988.

Tudor (12-4), who had been suffering from a sore left shoulder, made his second relief appearance since coming the disabled list a week ago. He gave up three hits and won his first game since Aug. 5. Starter Bryn Smith, who spent the last month on the DL with a sore right shoulder, gave up two runs and six hits in four innings in his first appearance since July 27. Mike Perez pitched the ninth.

Loser Mike Bielecki (7-10), winless in his last 10 starts at home, lasted 1 2-3 innings, yielding three runs on four hits and two walks.

St. Louis chased Bielecki with a three-run second inning. Jose led off with a towering home run, his second in nine games with the Cardinals. Todd Zeile walked, Tim Jones tripled and scored on Smith's suicide squeeze.

The Cubs got a run in the third on Mark Grace's RBI single. St. Louis made it 4-1 against Steve Wilson in the fourth when Jose walked, stole second and scored on Tom Pagnozzi's double.

In the Cubs' fourth, Luis Salazar hit his 12th home run to make it 4-2. But the Cardinals added a run off Kevin Coffman in the fifth on an RBI single by Jose and broke it open with four in the sixth. Lankford had a two-run single and Vince Coleman and Pedro Guerrero had RBI hits in the inning.

Sindelar wins Hardee's Golf Classic

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — Joey Sindelar was stunned to win the Hardee's Golf Classic. And he thinks everyone else should have been, too.

"I honestly can't believe I'm sitting here. I'm kind of in shock," said Sindelar, who beat Willie Wood on the first playoff hole Sunday to capture the $180,000 first prize.

"If you watched my play, you're probably scratching your head, wondering how I got here. It wasn't pretty golf," said Sindelar, who came from three shots behind to tie Wood at the end of regulation. "I haven't found my driver and lots of time I was in the rough."

On the first extra hole,

Sindelar parred the 16th, while Wood had a bogey.

"I hit the only good drive I had today on the playoff hole," said Sindelar, whose winner's check was more than he earned all last year, when he made $77,957 on the PGA Tour. It was Sindelar's sixth PGA victory.

Wood earned $108,000.

Jim Gallagher Jr. had a 68 that put him at 11-under 269 with Australian Ian Baker-Finch, Jay Delsing, Dave Barr and Bill Britton. Baker-Finch closed with a 64, Britton a 65, Delsing a 68 and Barr a 67.

"When you can get in a situation to win, you want to win it because you don't get that many chances," said Wood, who was in his first playoff.

After both golfers hit their second shots into the rough behind the green, some 25 feet from the hole, Sindelar chipped within a foot of the cup, while Wood's shot flew six feet past.

"I thought I was dead. You don't go head-to-head chipping with Willie Wood. He's one of the best out here," Sindelar said. "I'm not a good chipper."

Wood said the club hit part of a sprinkler head on the crucial shot. He missed his attempt for par before Sindelar holed the short putt for the victory.

"It's a nice way to win. You sneak in the backdoor, so there's no pressure on you being ahead."

game four. It was 13-9 when two more blasts by Cragin closed the gap to 13-11. White dumped one down to make it 13-12 and a few moments later a Cragin blast down the line gave the Irish a 14-13 lead and brought the crowd to its feet. Fiebelkorn ended it with another block.

"We're looking for consistency," said Lambert. "We're not there yet. We're playing a new defense, a man-up defense with only two on the sides. It's difficult to learn at first. With this team we can do it. It's going to take more than two or three days."

Irish lose a pair on road trip

Special to The Observer

The Notre Dame men's soccer team's first two chances to knock off a Top 20 team this season were fruitless as the Irish fell to 10th-ranked Duke Friday night and 17th-ranked North Carolina State yesterday in the Metropolitan Life Classic in Durham, N.C.

The Blue Devils downed ND by the score of 5-2, while outshooting the Irish by 14 shots, 21-7. Notre Dame goals were scored by Kenyon Meyer, on an assist from Kevin Pendergast at the 26:31 mark of the game, and by Pendergast, with an assist by Tom Connaghan at with 40:14 gone in the game.

It was too little too late for the Irish when they faced the Wolfpack of N.C. State, as the 'Pack won 2-1. Kenyon Meyers and Kevin Pendergast hooked up for another score for ND, with Meyers tallying the only goal for the Irish after 79:14 had passed in the game. The Wolfpack also outshot the Irish, 26-11.

Dallas, Atlanta winners as NFL season opens

Cowboys 17, Chargers 14

When you are as bad as the Cowboys have been recently, you'll take any kind of gift. The Chargers delivered a whopper and Dallas converted for its first home victory under Jimmy Johnson.

Troy Aikman sneaked in from one yard with 1:58 to play after Dallas stopped a fake punt on the Cowboys' 47-yard line. Aikman took the Cowboys 53 yards after San Diego tried the fake punt on fourth-and-6 with 5:15 to play. Linebacker Gary Plummer was stopped by Bill Bates and Daniel Stubbs after a 2-yard gain.

Falcons 47, Oilers 27

At Atlanta, Glanville's new team looked a lot like the old, getting six personal-foul penalties and 16 overall for 139 yards. But the Falcons also forced six turnovers, scored three touchdowns in 1 minute, 50 seconds of the the first quarter, had three defensive scores — including an 82-yard interception return with 13 seconds left by Deion Sanders — and showed the kind of aggressiveness Glanville cultivates.

"Yeah, it sure did look familiar," said Robert Lyles, the Houston linebacker who plays that same style. "They were flying to ball, diving over the pile, talking trash on special teams."

Packers 36, Rams 24

Who needs Majik? At Green Bay, the Packers didn't as Anthony Dilweg, given the chance to play by Don Majkowski's 45-day holdout, passed for three touchdowns in his first NFL start. He hit tight end Ed West for two touchdowns and Jeff Query for one. Dilweg completed 20 of 32 passes for 248 yards in outdueling Jim Everett (24-for-40 for 340 yards but with two interceptions.)

Chris Jacke tied a Packers record with a 53-yard field goal in the third period.

Buccaneers 38, Lions 21

Testaverde threw three touchdown passes and the Tampa Bay defense sacked Rodney Peete five times. Testaverde completed 16 of 21 passes for 237 yards.

"He played like an All-American, an All-Pro, whatever," Lions coach Wayne Fontes said. "It's his fourth year. It's his time to play well, and he played well."

Giants 27, Eagles 20

The Giants ended a four-game slide against the Eagles as Dave Meggett scored on a 68-yard punt return and Phil Simms threw for two touchdowns.

The defense harassed Randall

Cunningham all game, picking off three passes and sacking him four times.

Redskins 31, Cardinals 0

The shutout was Washington's second straight — it beat Seattle 29-0 to conclude the 1989 season.

"You always want to do well in front of your teacher," Redskins tackle Jim Lachey said of Bugel. "We wanted to put on a clinic."

The defense did, with three interceptions of Timm Rosenbach that set up touchdowns and one returned by Alvin Walton for a 57-yard score.

Bears 17, Seahawks 0

At Chicago, the Bears sacked Dave Krieg twice on the Seahawks' first series, then turned intercepted passes into two first-half scores.

Neal Anderson got two touchdowns and rushed for 101 yards, and Jim Harbaugh completed 21 of 29 passes for 203 yards. Both, however, looked at the defense as the reason Chicago won easily.

"Everyone played well, but the defense pitched a shutout and anytime you do that in the in the National Football League, you're going to win," said Anderson, who scored on runs of 17 and four yards.

Bengals 25, Jets 20

Bruce Coslet, who helped build the potent offense in Cincinnati, returned there as coach of the Jets. And his new team was burned by that attack.

After the Jets took a 10-point lead, the Bengals came back for 15 fourth-quarter points in 7 1/2 minutes. Jim Breech kicked two field goals, David Fulcher sacked Ken O'Brien in the end zone and Boomer Esiason had a 3-yard TD pass to James Brooks.

Raiders 14, Broncos 9

At Los Angeles, John Elway had a miserable day, hitting only 14 of 31 passes for 157 yards and needing a respite from the heat late in the game.

Denver was victimized for third-quarter touchdowns by linebacker Jerry Robinson and cornerback Terry McDaniel. Robinson went five yards with an interception of Elway's pass to erase a 6-0 deficit. McDaniel scooped up a fumble by Vance Johnson and returned it 42 yards.

Brigham Young passing attack knocks off Miami

PROVO, Utah (AP) — College football's team of the '80s is off to a rough start in the '90s.

Top-ranked Miami, which has won three of the last seven national championships, will have a hard time repeating the feat this year after losing its opener to No. 16 Brigham Young 28-21 Saturday night.

"I'm very disappointed with the way our team played," Miami coach Dennis Erickson said. "We didn't play like we're capable of playing."

Unfortunately for the Hurricanes, BYU did.

Ty Detmer, the nation's leading passer last season, shredded the vaunted Miami defense before a national television audience and a record crowd of 66,235 at Cougar Stadium.

The slender junior completed 38 of 54 passes for 406 yards and three touchdowns to win his ballyhooed battle with Miami quarterback Craig Erickson, who completed 28 of 52 throws for 299 yards and no touchdowns. Both quarterbacks had one pass intercepted.

Detmer's amazing performance makes him the early favorite for the Heisman Trophy.

"I don't think this one game will mean I'll win the Heisman," he said. "I was just glad to play well enough for us to win."

The margin of victory would have been larger if BYU had held onto the ball. The Cougars (2-0) lost four fumbles and one of Detmer's passes was intercepted after bouncing off a BYU receiver.

"If anyone had told me before the game that we would turn the ball over five times and win, I would have given them a saliva test," BYU coach LaVell Edwards said.

Miami, which lost six starters from last year's top-ranked defense, probably wanted to give Detmer a saliva test after the game. The soft-spoken Texan frustrated the Hurricanes all night with his pinpoint passing and uncanny scrambling, which led to two of his TD tosses.

"He's just a slimy little cat," BYU halfback Matt Bellini said. "He was really moving around the pocket tonight."

Bellini, who caught a 14-yard TD pass from Detmer in the second quarter, wasn't surprised that the Cougars moved the ball so effectively against Miami.

"Our offense is as confident as you'll find in the country, and that includes the 49ers," said Bellini, who had 10 catches for 111 yards.

However, few people outside the state of Utah thought BYU had a chance to beat Miami. The Hurricanes were 13 1/2-point favorites and showed little respect for the Cougars in recent interviews.

"They laughed and joked at us," said BYU defensive lineman Mark Smith. "Who's laughing now?"

Certainly not Miami, held to six first downs and 134 yards total offense in the first half. With eight starters back from an offense that averaged 36 points a game last season, the Hurricanes expected to score a lot more than three touchdowns against a lightly regarded BYU defense.

The Cougars stopped several drives with key defensive plays, including two by cornerback

Ervin Lee late in the fourth quarter. Lee intercepted a pass in his own end zone with 6:28 left and knocked away a fourth down pass by Erickson on the BYU goal line with 1:49 remaining.

BYU also made a crucial stop in the third period. Leading 21-20, Miami went for a first down on a 4th-and-1 from its own 43.

Irish women's volleyball wins the ND Invitational

By MIKE KAMRADT
Sports Writer

The people who packed the pit of the JACC this weekend to watch the women's volleyball team host the Notre Dame Invitational expected to see results. They got what they wanted.

The Irish handily defeated Evansville Friday night 15-1, 15-8, 15-10. Saturday morning's match with Saint Louis was a tough battle, but the Irish prevailed 18-16, 9-15, 13-15, 15-12, 15-12. Notre Dame wrapped up the championship in four games (15-10, 2-15, 15-9, 15-13) Saturday night against Western Michigan.

"It feels great to be home and have the crowd behind us," said senior captain and tournament MVP Tracey Shelton. "We really pulled together."

The Irish got out of the gate quickly in Friday's first game against the Aces of Evansville. An Alicia Turner kill gave the Irish a 1-0 lead and before long it was 5-0 after a dump into the open middle by Amy White and a kill by Jessica Fiebelkorn. The Irish extended it out to 9-0 as White set Shelton for three straight blasts. The Irish continued to get a good pass, set, kill combination while Evansville floundered in a sea of errors.

Evansville jumped out to a 7-1 lead in game two before the Irish got their wake-up call.

"We can't give 7-1 leads to good teams and expect to come back," said Lambert.

After a kill off the net by Colleen Wagner closed the gap to 7-5, Shelton dipped into her arsenal for two more of her 11 kills for the match to tie the score at seven apiece.

"We feel for one another," said Shelton. "Volleyball's a team sport. When one person is on, everyone else senses it."

Turner put the Irish ahead to stay with another cross-court kill, and seconds later Fiebelkorn scored one of her three solo blocks (five total) to up the lead to 9-7.

"She [Fiebelkorn] was great," commented Shelton. "She has a really good sense of the middle."

"I was pleased with our blocking," said coach Art Lambert.

The Irish finished out the game strong to win 15-8, and they carried it over to game three, jumping out 5-0. Evansville closed to 5-4, though, and would not go away as the Irish still held the slimmest of margins, 7-6, four points later.

The Irish pulled away with the help of a service ace by Turner and a strong kill by Molly Stark. Fiebelkorn helped close things out with two more blocks down the stretch. The Irish helped their defensive effort with 34 digs for the match.

"Shelton (9 digs) was like a vacuum cleaner," said Lambert.

The Irish again got off to a slow start in the opening game of the championship match, falling behind 6-1 to Western Michigan. The Irish rallied, though behind the strong swings of Fiebelkorn and sophomore outside hitter Marilyn Cragin. A Fiebelkorn kill and block closed the gap to 6-4.

"Fiebelkorn had a good tournament here," said Lambert. "We're trying to isolate the middle with quick sets because we don't have a powerful outside hitter with Slosar out."

Cragin would beg to differ. She continued to go up and over the Bronco players, coming down with tremendous kills; she finished with 18 for the match.

"I was really pleased with Marilyn," said Lambert. "It was a big confidence builder for her."

The Irish came back to win game one 15-10, but faltered in game two, losing 15-2.

In game three, Notre Dame took a 6-5 lead on a quick-set spike from White (35 assists) to Stark (4 kills, 5 blocks). Fiebelkorn, who made the All-Tournament team, came up big down the stretch with a kill (one of 13) and two blocks.

The Irish followed that 15-9 win with a thrilling come-from-behind win for the match in

NFL can learn from the college-style of football

The National Football League—the biggest and most popular way to waste a day of the week—began Sunday.

But the diehards had four weeks of pre-season action, which consisted mostly of immature millionaires demanding more millions. Most of these players couldn't even spend most of the money they make from salaries that exceed those of professionals like doctors or lawyers.

The biggest off-field news centered on Eric Dickerson, the disgruntled

Indianapolis Colt who decided to stay in Los Angeles rather than take a physical with the team. That Dickerson does not seem to care about forfeiting more than $600,000 in salary shows just how overpaid he has been for the past few years.

The games began on Sunday and that overshadowed the fact that Don Majkowski of the Green Bay Packers just ended a 40-plus day holdout or the fact that Joe Montana of the San Francisco 49ers will make more in one season than most of his fans will make in a lifetime or the fact that an old man like Lyle Alzado of the Los Angeles Raiders actually thought he could still play a young man's game.

Sunday was a day when American families showed they don't mind being ripped off by millionaire owners by spending hundreds of dollars to view these games. You can't blame the owners for the skyrocketing salaries without blaming the fans for supporting them.

Sunday was also a day when the NFL showed it still must be the only professional sport to rely on a replay machine rather than a human being. Maybe someday owners will realize that a robot quarterback could be more effective and probably less expensive than Buffalo's Jim Kelly.

Pro football is not college football. With college football, there is excitement, pageantry, the sense that every game hinges on a possible national championship. The top-ranked teams will usually meet for the national title.

The NFL is slowly taking the course of the NBA and the NHL, where any team except those based in Florida or South America can make the playoffs. With 12 teams in this year's NFL playoffs, you get the feeling that each game is not as important, that a loss here or there is not as hard to swallow. Major League Baseball is the only sport where post-season invitations are still based on wins and losses, on being first in one of four divisions.

Seminoles take over the top spot

Observer Staff Report

The Florida State Seminoles took over the top spot vacated by Miami in the National College Sportswriters Football Poll yesterday.

The Seminoles leapfrogged the Hurricanes, who lost to Brigham Young 28-21 on Saturday, and Notre Dame to claim the number-one ranking. Florida State received 10 1/2 first place votes to Notre Dame's 8 1/2.

The poll, organized and founded by staff members of The Observer, will appear weekly in college newspapers across the country. More than 30 writers will eventually cast votes in the poll when classes begin at their respective schools.

Florida State finished just 10 points ahead of the Irish, who will play their first game of the season against Michigan on September 15. Auburn, which received three first-place votes after soundly defeating Fullerton State in its home opener, is third.

Michigan, which also has yet to play a game this season, moved up one spot to number six in the poll, while the loss to Brigham Young dropped Miami into a tie for fifth with USC. Tennessee, which defeated Mississippi State Saturday to raise its record to 2-0-1, is seventh, and Brigham Young moved up ten spots from its number 18 position in last week's poll, to number eight.

Colorado, which squeaked by Stanford by a score of 21-17 on Thursday, is ninth, and Virginia, coming off its first victory ever over Clemson in 30 tries, rounds out the top 10.

Nebraska leads off the second 10, followed by Texas A&M, Clemson, Pittsburgh, which defeated Boston College Saturday to raise its record to 2-0, and Arkansas. Oklahoma, which pummelled UCLA Saturday in the Bruins' home opener, Ohio State, Illinois, Washington and Arizona round out the top 20.

Sampras wins the U.S. Open

NEW YORK (AP) — He is a throwback to another era, a time when tennis players didn't curse or spit at officials, didn't smash their rackets or break signs.

He doesn't tour the circuit with an entourage and he doesn't have a fat endorsement contract — not yet, anyway.

Pete Sampras, loaded with talent but not full of himself, is the first American man to win the U.S. Open without barking at officials or throwing a tantrum in two decades.

At 19, the youngest men's champ in history, Sampras is as different from the man he beat, Andre Agassi, in a 6-4, 6-3, 6-2 rout, as he is from the other dominant Americans of the 1970s and 1980s — five-time winner Jimmy Connors and four-time winner John McEnroe.

Sampras's sweet exterior and laid-back Southern California calm mask his killer instincts on the court, his ability to administer, as Agassi said, "a good, old-fashioned street mugging."

The last American champion to conduct himself in such a gentlemanly manner at this most turbulent of Grand Slam tournaments was Stan Smith, another soft-spoken Southern Californian, who won in 1971.

Sampras was born that year, but he learned from tapes and talks with old pros about the stylish ways of Smith and earlier champions like Ken Rosewall, Rod Laver, and Arthur Ashe.

"If there's someone I'd like to emulate in the game, it would
