Bishops say 'No' to funerals run by laity

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Roman Catholic bishops on Tuesday showed their wariness about letting lay people invade clerical turf.

The bishops' anxieties came out as they voted down a move to allow trained lay members to conduct funerals.

In a ballot vote, the measure lost by 136 to 113, with a two-thirds majority required for passage.

Heavy floor opposition had presaged defeat of the plan.

Accepting it would signal that "the role and value of the priesthood was being questioned," said Bishop Donald Wuerl of Pittsburgh.

"Such a sweeping move has a lot of ramifications and implications," he said, likely to make substitution of laity for priests "a common practice." The measure, spurred by a sharpening priest shortage, was proposed by a liturgy committee headed by Bishop Joseph Delaney of Fort Worth, Texas.

It would have authorized local bishops to permit lay persons to preside at funerals when no ordained deacon or priest was available.

Bishop Elden Curtiss of

Helena, Mont., said the step would indicate "acceptance of priestless parishes and ascendance of the non-ordained."

"It would signal that we are moving from an ordained to a non-ordained ministry.... The time people most want a priest is when dying, at death and afterward."

A succession of bishops took the floor to assail the plan at the annual fall meeting of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

But a few bishops defended it with fervor.

Archbishop Francis Hurley of Anchorage, Alaska, said "extreme distances" and "extreme weather" there make such lay-led services vital, and added:

"It would be corporately narrow-minded and shortsighted not to allow this provision for the pastoral needs of people at one of their most poignant moments, the time of death."

Bishop Robert Sanchez of Santa Fe, New Mex., said the measure would help "us to reach out to the grieving and suffering with support" when no clergy was available.

Bill of Rights was too broad, panel says

Editor's note: Last Spring, the Legal Department of Student Government put together a document known as the Bill of University and Student Relations, or simply the Bill of Rights. This document was passed by the Student Senate, but stalled by the Campus Life Council for discrepancies in both the structure and content of the document. In this series, The Observer will examine the original Bill of Rights, why it failed, and what has become of the document this year.

By MONICA YANT
Associate News Editor

The Bill of University and Student Relations failed as a single document because it tried to do too much.

This is the assessment of members of Student Government, of the Legal Department, and of the Campus Life Council (CLC), who referred the Bill to a task force last March.

The task force has since abandoned the document itself, in favor of restructuring and preparing several of the individual rights contained in the document for approval of the Senate, CLC, and Office of Student Affairs.

While the Bill was originally presented as containing "reasonable rights that we feel are or should be granted already," there was confusion over the philosophical structure and overlapping of rights with du Lac.

Furthermore, according to Student Body President Rob Pasin, the Bill sought involvement of both students and the Administration in implementing the rights and responsibilities, without directly involving the Administration in the process of development.

The Bill of University and Student Relations was the product of the Student Government Legal Department, created during the tenure of 1989-90 Student Body President Matt Breslin. The idea of a document outlining students' rights had been discussed for several years, according to Pasin, and the new department gave Student Government an opportunity to develop this idea.

Controversy Surrounding the Content of the Bill:

"The Bill of University and Student Relations is based upon our peer institutions, du Lac, and principled beliefs," said a Legal Department summary.

The Bill was modeled loosely after the Joint Statement on Rights and Freedoms of Students, drafted in 1967 by representatives from the American Association of University Professors, U.S. National Student Association, Association of American Colleges, National Association of Student Personnel Administrators, and National Association of Women Deans and Counselors, according to Raja Singh, Executive Coordinator of the Legal Department.

The philosophical statement of the Bill says the document is "a statement of trust," alluding to the 1983 Mission Statement of the University which said, "To have a healthy relationship between the Administration and students, the element of trust must be present."

"We hold strong to the notion that students should not only be treated as adults, but also act accordingly. In order to do so, we propose the enclosed revisions on judicial procedures and general rights as students," the philosophical statement read.

The inclusion of rights within the Bill that were already mentioned in du Lac was an automatic negative feature, according to Pasin. He cited Article VII, which guaranteed "the right to carry on individual or organized activity which expresses any opinion regarding the University and/or society."

"That's already allowed," he said.

Two articles in particular, Articles II and III, were subject to debate by the CLC.

Article II of the Bill concerns

Key Points in the Student Bill of Rights

Seven rights cited in the Bill

- To due process
- To be judged by one's peers
- To open hearings
- To public disclosure of administrative hearings
- To free and uncensored press
- To freedom of assembly
- To not be collectively punished judgment by peers, saying "Students will comprise at least one-half of the panel at administrative hearings," and specifying that certain offenses will be handled specifically by residence hall judicial boards.

"If students sit on the hearing panels, they become aware of what problems exist within the Notre Dame community, how they threaten the order of the community, and how they can be resolved responsibly," the philosophical statement said.

"The community is weakened when the administrators are perceived as 'those who punish' and students are perceived as 'those who break rules.' When students are involved in hearings, students can no longer believe that any resulting punishment is the result of an unsympathetic administration."

The issue of open hearings provided the grounds for Article III. "Disciplinary hearings will be open unless the student in question requests a closed hearing, in which case the hearing shall be closed," the Bill read. "In a hearing of two or more students, any one student's request for a closed hearing shall take precedence over the request of one or more of the other students [sic] for an open hearing."

Article III continued, "In cases where the need to protect privacy is in the judgment of the parties to the charge, the administrative party may close the hearing over the objection of the charged student(s)."

"At an open hearing the administration has the discretion to limit the number of persons in attendance in order to ensure an orderly proceeding. In such instances, the administrative decision is final."

The motive behind Article III was, according to the philosophical statement, "to ensure that students receive due process in a disciplinary hearing. The public scrutiny that public hearings provide safeguards the accused student's right to due process. . . Without public record, arbitrary and subjective opinion can be given more weight."

Much confusion surrounded Article III, according to Pasin and Singh. The article said that students had the right to an open hearing, but essentially the hearing could be closed by a number of factors. If more than one student is involved, and one of the group requested a closed hearing, that student had precedence.

"If one of the students involved can close the hearing, and if the administrator always has the final word, the concept of an open hearing asserts nothing," Pasin said.

Whether an open hearing is even beneficial was subject to debate as well, according to Bill Kirk, rector of Stanford Hall. "I don't really see the benefit. . . it would be unfair to someone to be subject to that kind of scrutiny."

Administrative hearings are actually "tremendously fair," according to Kirk.

Article III also gave residence hall judicial boards extended disciplinary power. However, since there is no standardized role for each hall, such power would have been difficult to implement. The role of the judicial board is often different in men's dorms than women's, according

INSIDE COLUMN

An insider's guide to driving a bus

I was innocently walking through the local grocery on an August afternoon. Suddenly out of nowhere a tiny, youthful voice screamed "Hi bus-driver!" My eyes opened wide in horror; I meekly croaked out my hello's and snuck sadly away.

Christine Stephan
News Copy Editor

A fluke you ask? Perhaps a misidentification? I'm afraid not. I spent the summer months as a part-time bus-driver. Only recently have I been able to discuss my summer job. I was severely scarred by ill-intentioned friends introducing me as "Christine-she-drives-a-bus."

New acquaintances looked upon me as a victim of both society and school-children everywhere. Others pondered lofty images of me behind the wheel of a Greyhound in faithful service to the CTA, and my parents begged the University for a refund.

My 21st birthday left me bearing the rite to take the Commercial Driver's License examination. The test is not an easy one, so to dispel common misconceptions I shall take you through the process.

STEP 1: Three written examinations on over 100 pages of material.

STEP 2: Pre-trip inspection test including a lengthy discussion of such wonders as the hydraulic braking system and tread depth in tires.

STEP 3: Skills test, laden with orange cones and careful maneuvering.

STEP 4: (optional) Re-take of the 'backing-up' part of the test.

STEP 5: Road test, measuring my knowledge of speed laws and proper procedures for railroad crossings.

STEP 6: Drug test—no preparation necessary.

And thus, I was presented with a new commercial driver's license.

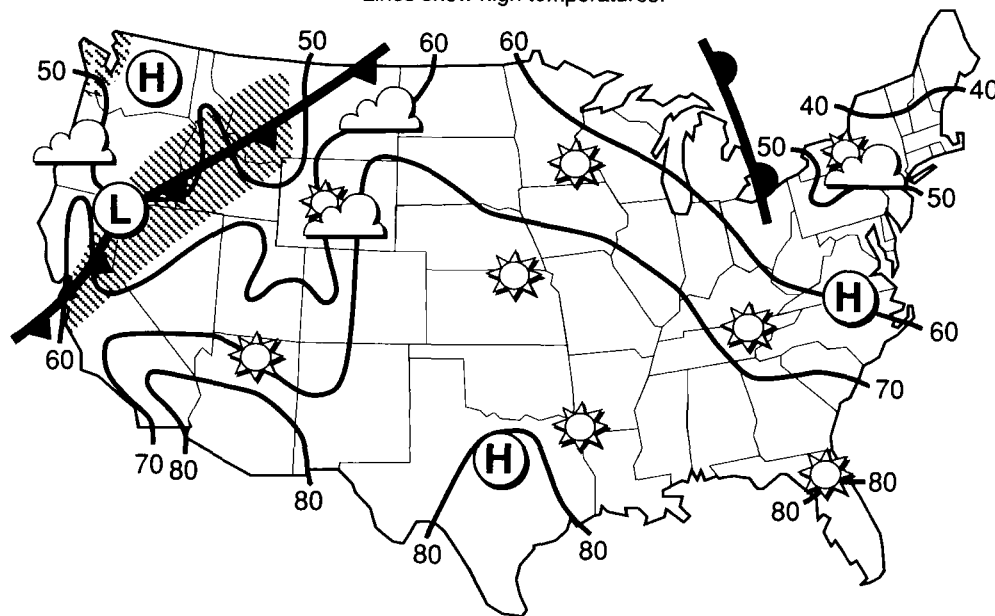

Proudly I negotiated my way through narrow streets lined with UPS trucks and family wagons. It was during these times that I learned trees were not quite as stationary as they're rumored to be. I had but one mishap with the bus, (Please recall the 'backing-up' section of the skills test) reversing into a trailer-hitch and poking a $1,000 hole in the back. Sleep easy, no injuries.

You've probably never thought about controlling 22 demonic children, especially while operating heavy machinery. And here, I would like to thank my loyal sister Cathy (a freshman here) for accompanying me on those hell-bent journeys and for taking care of the seat-belt, the brave removal of bees and cicadas and the ever-patient ear for the "you know what-ers."

My experience has granted me a new respect for the woes of school-bus drivers and my parents are ecstatic that I have promised to finish my fourth year. But there is one thing I cannot shake. I still fear the cold, impersonal, grocery-store greeting reserved only for those who are nameless, faceless bus-drivers.

Boris Yeltsin, president of the Russian republic, said Monday that Russia would not pull out of the Soviet Union and that he would try to settle his jurisdictional disputes with President Mikhail Gorbachev. Yeltsin's remarks came a day after he met behind closed doors for four hours with Gorbachev, his longtime political rival. Previous agreements between the leaders have broken down, and economists said their future cooperation is crucial to solving the country's economic crisis. Speaking to the Russian Parliament's constitutional commission, Yeltsin emphatically denied that Russia, the largest of the 15 Soviet republics, "wants to break up the union." "I'm for a strong union and union treaty," the independent Interfax News Agency quoted him as saying.

Several leaders of China's pro-democracy movement may soon face secret trials, the human rights group Amnesty International said Monday in London. They have been held without charge in harsh conditions, and hundreds of others have simply disappeared since the movement was violently smashed by authorities while demonstrating in Tiananmen Square. "These reports (of pending trials) are particularly disturbing because trials in China fall far short of international standards," said the London-based group. "They are usually a mere formality, with verdicts decided beforehand and little chance for appeal," the group said in a short statement.

Paul Wellstone, the underdog who unseated Minnesota Sen. Rudy Boschwitz last week, found one last obstacle Tuesday. The Capitol door was locked and he didn't have a key. With home-state television cameras in tow, Wellstone knew it could be an embarrassing moment for a U.S. senator-to-be. "It's pretty bad when the first time he comes in ... that the door is locked," he joked. A Capitol police officer, however, spotted his predicament, quickly opened the door and Wellstone darted through. Wellstone, 46, was the first of four newly elected senators to arrive at the Capitol Tuesday for two days of orientation sessions.

The Internal Revenue Service held the yard sale of the year Tuesday, auctioning off Nevada's oldest legal house of ill repute and a third of a century worth of memorabilia ranging from kitschy to kinky. Bidding for the two-building Mustang Ranch brothel complex got off to a slow start, with no takers as the price slumped from an asking price of $10 million to $1.4 million. The majority of more than 1,000 registered bidders huddled under a red and white tent in the parking lot of the defunct bordello waiting to bid on souvenirs and memorabilia from Nevada's best known house of prostitution. After a brief break, the brothel fetched a top bid of $1.49 million from a man who refused to reveal his name or his plans for the 330-acre property 10 miles east of Reno.

Lesbian professor talks about challenges homosexuals face in heterosexual society

By STEVE ZAVESTOSKI
News Writer

The issue of the socialization of homosexuals was addressed in a lecture by Louise Douce, a doctor of psychology at Ohio State University.

According to Douce, an admitted lesbian, a religious conflict is just one of three obstacles faced by gays and lesbians. "There are two truths in the very core [of everyone]: one truth is who you are, the other is your religious value system."

When these truths contradict, according to Douce, "one of them has got to go. They [homosexuals] usually come to a point where [they say] 'either I go or the church goes.'" Usually, said Douce, there is a return to spirituality in a process called 'identity synthesis.'

She also said that Christians are generally the only ones that have a problem with homosexuality. "It really is the Christian religions that have made this such a big issue," said Douce.

The view of most Christians towards homosexuality, continued Douce, is based on misconceptions. "One is that Christ never said anything about homosexuality," Douce asked why, "if homosexuality is such an abomination to Christ, then how come he never said anything about it?"

Another misconception Douce pointed out was the story of Sodom and Gamorrah. "It is not a story about gay and lesbian issues at all. Most Biblical scholars will agree that it is a story about elitism and selfishness," said Douce.

Douce used the apostle Paul's writings as a New Testament example. She claims Paul was not talking about same gender relationships at all.

According to Douce, homosexuals can be responsive to truth, honesty, and God's will. "If the only way to follow God's will is through the pope then we have a problem [with a homosexual being a good Catholic]."

Douce also addressed other obstacles for homosexuals in society. She said that "People cannot choose their sexuality, it is discovered." This poses a problem in a world that is predominantly heterosexual in that homosexuals feel they are unaccepted.

"Ours is a heterosexist society," Douce stated. She defined heterosexism as "the belief that it is better to be heterosexual." According to Douce, sex is used to sell anything from mouthwash to cars. Douce suggested that "anything that has to be sold that much may not be the right way of life."

Douce continued describing the process homosexuals face in 'coming out.' "There is no one for us to identify with," said Douce "most of the famous gays and lesbians in history have been erased."

McCarthy says ROTC should be discontinued

By SARAH VOIGT
News Writer

The sole goal of the ROTC program is to train people to slaughter others or to threaten to slaughter, said Coleman McCarthy, a liberal syndicated columnist for the Washington Post in a lecture Tuesday.

Yet McCarthy, a self-proclaimed pacifist who also founded and directs the Center for Teaching Peace located in Washington D.C., defines himself in relation to force.

"Ideas are a force. I am a pacifist so I love the use of force. I'm in the trenches every day teaching nonviolence."

Over the past eight years McCarthy has taught over 2,500 students about the theory and history of nonviolence. McCarthy has also attempted to organize peace studies programs at colleges and universities across the country.

According to McCarthy, peace studies programs should replace ROTC programs on college campuses. "ROTC has no place on a campus, a place where we study ideas. We must push for students to graduate from college armed with ideas, armed with truth, armed with justice; not armed with guns," McCarthy said.

"Because guns and bombs are not working," McCarthy continued, "the U.S. spends $800 million a day on war. That's $13,000 a second that the Pentagon is wasting on war."

According to McCarthy, the ROTC program shares in what he calls the "violent ethic" that pervades many aspects of American society today. "ROTC is not the problem. It's just the symptom of the problem," he said.

McCarthy cited the recent increase in numbers of battered women, teenage suicides and campus rapes as tragic symptoms of the increased levels of violence in American society today.

McCarthy does not blame ROTC or even the American government for what he considers to be their participation in the "violent ethic." "I'm to blame. You are to blame."

Yet McCarthy does blame the ROTC program for class discrimination. "Try to find children of wealthy families in that program. It's mostly lower class families, minorities, it's the only way they can get money," he said.

In order to eliminate the need for a ROTC program McCarthy said, "We must organize our hearts, souls, schools and government to offer a counterforce," said McCarthy.

For McCarthy, nonviolence represents this counterforce. "Either you believe in that ethic of violent force or you believe in nonviolent force. College is the perfect place to devote yourself to nonviolence," he claimed.

Ironically, McCarthy urged students to leave campus and to go among the victims of violence in order to best understand nonviolence. "Learn the joy of service to others. That's where you'll find your joy, where you'll find your meaning. Teach someone how to read this semester," he suggested.

"Most students that graduate from college are idea rich and experience poor. That's why students have to get off campus and find someone who's hurting," he said.

McCarthy related how he hated when his friends would ask one of his children what they wanted to be when they grew up. He said that a more relevant question would be, "How do you want to serve society when you're ready?"

"Those committed to peace and justice also know that the world will not be changed through the use of armies, fists, guns and nukes," said McCarthy.

Duggan leaves job with homeless

Special to The Observer

Dennis Duggan, executive director of the Center for the Homeless in South Bend, has resigned his position effective February 15, according to Father Richard Warner, chairman of the Center's executive committee.

Citing family reasons for his decision, Duggan informed the committee of his resignation at its Nov. 7 meeting. His wife is pursuing a doctorate in oncological nursing at the University of Texas-San Antonio and has continued to live in that city with five of the couple's six children during her husband's nine-month tenure at the Center. The Duggans' oldest child is a freshman at the University of Notre Dame.

Duggan told the board he felt he had accomplished the immediate tasks for which he was brought to the Center and that this was an appropriate time for a change in leadership.

Duggan cited the establishment of operating policies and procedures for the Center, the establishing of contacts with supporting organizations in the local community, the training of volunteers and the opening of new facilities on the Center's previously unused second floor as the major accomplishments of his tenure. The new second-floor facilities will be dedicated on November 17.

Warner expressed the executive committee's regret at Duggan's departure and its appreciation of his work as director, particularly his efforts in laying a solid operating framework for the facility. Warner said the executive committee would meet again Nov. 20 to begin planning a local and national search for Duggan's successor.

Duggan will return to San Antonio to the 250-bed homeless facility he directed before assuming his position with the South Bend Center.

a total loss, according to Singh. "The work put into it showed up in the choosing of which rights to include," he said, "This is what we've taken from it."

The formation of a task force can also be viewed as a success. "Maybe it was a good way to start this thing," Singh said.

Essentially, the issues that were raised by the Bill were its true success, according to Jochman.

But dealing with the issues was easier said than done. "Change at Notre Dame is an evolutionary process," Pasin said. "In order to bring about change, it takes the combined efforts of all members of the community."

"Unfortunately, when the Bill was first presented this had not occurred. Therefore, that's what we're doing now."

Moscow hopes for best with perestroika, historian says

By FRANK RIVERA
News Writer

Ordinary Muscovites hope for the best to come from the Soviet government's implementation of perestroika and the changes occurring in Moscow and Soviet Russia, according to Russian historian Sergei Romaniuk.

In his lecture, "Perestroika from the Perspective of an Ordinary Muscovite," Romaniuk, an historian at the Pushkin Museum and the Museum for the History and Reconstruction of Moscow, said he wanted to speak from the point of view of a citizen of Moscow and not as a political official.

"I spoke as an historian of Moscow who has the possibility to observe Moscow life," said Romaniuk, "and not a party official...but simply as an inhabitant of Moscow."

Many buildings and monuments were destroyed and replaced by the Soviet government after the Bolshevik revolution in 1917, according to Romaniuk, who is writing his third book, "Moscow Vanished," about the mutilation and vandalism by the government.

Romaniuk said he would be against the demolition of Soviet monuments to an extent. However, he said there were too many Soviet monuments than are needed and call for replacement or demolition.

Despite the widespread implementation of perestroika, there are still difficulties, most of which come as a result of the conservatives in the government, according to Romaniuk.

"The most difficulties come from our rulers who are unwilling to plunge in it," said Romaniuk. "Many of them are right-wingers and not democrats, or leftists, and they do not want it to be a complete rebuilding of our society."

Romaniuk acknowledged the possibility of totalitarianism re-establishing itself in the Soviet Union but expressed optimism in the progress of perestroika.

"I don't even know what the Soviet Union will be like tomorrow, but I would like to see it free and open like any democratic state in the world," said Romaniuk. "But, I would also like it to be free from many of the evils of the capitalist society if it is possible for a democratic society to do so."

Romaniuk is a member of the Moscow City Council of the All Russian Society for Protection of Architectural and Historic Monuments and a member of the editorial board of the magazine "Staraiia Moskva" ("Old Moscow").

The lecture was sponsored by the Institute for International Peace Studies and the Department of History.

Brandabur lectures about West Bank's 'Night of the Broken Clubs'

By SCOTT KEEGEL
News Writer

While few people at Notre Dame may attach any significance to the term, "the Night of the Broken Clubs," to a Palestinian, the phrase evokes disgust and fear.

Yesterday in the Law School, Clare Brandabur, Fulbright Fellow and former professor at the now-defunct Bir Zeit University in the West Bank, gave an account of what happened one night in the West Bank as an audience of about twenty listened in shock.

"In January of 1988, two months after the beginning of the Intifada, orders were issued that a group of soldiers go to a village...to round up twelve persons who were 'wanted.' The twelve were brought together—without resistance—and handcuffed and shackled. The locals—they're called 'locals', not 'Palestinians'—were then put on a bus," said Brandabur.

"As they drove away, the bus driver revved the engine to drown out their cries. They were led to a nearby orchard, and in groups of twos or threes they were led into the orchard, laid down, gagged with flannel, and then systematically clubbed so severely that the clubs broke."

According to Brandabur, the soldiers had orders to beat them until their arms and legs were broken. "The soldiers then took off the Palestinians' bonds and gags, and left them lying helpless in the orchard."

"What this shows...is that there is a kind of schizophrenia there [in Israel], and I would say that the reality...underlying the 'mask of democracy' is not really democratic at all," Brandabur said.

Brandabur also pointed out that this is not to say that there isn't a very strong peace movement in Israel. There is a peace movement, and it is fighting for "legal trials for the people who beat the Palestinians to death."

The audience was read a New York Times headline saying that three Israeli soldiers accused of beating Palestinians were brought to trial. Two were acquitted, and one was given a three-month sentence, "that will probably be suspended," said Brandabur. The three were also given a demotion. "Once the headlines go away," she speculated, "they'll probably be given a vacation and a promotion."

When asked about a possible solution to the problem, Brandabur said that "first of all, the United States should start listening to the Israelis who are in the peace camp, not just to their generals like Shamir and Sharon."

"The people who really want peace need to be heard as well; they're begging us to stop supporting the militarism of the Israelis. As long as the State knows that it can get billions of dollars and the aid won't be cut, they'll do just about anything. If the U.S. would cut aid substantially—50 or 75 percent—there would be peace in two weeks."

In respect to the current situation in the Persian Gulf, she stated that "there is something hopeful in this...crisis in the Gulf...because it is not true that Israel is our best ally. They're an embarrassment to our entire foreign policy."

"Perhaps this will take some emphasis away from the concept that we have to placate Israel because Israel is a bulwark of democracy. Israel is not a bulwark of democracy. Israel is a colonialist, fascist, racist, genocidal state which we are paying for, and we have part of the responsibility," Brandabur said.

"If we would listen to the peace movement in Israel...maybe we can bring about a reconciliation that is human and just on both sides."

Brandabur then quoted a writer as saying, "what shall we, as Americans, say when the trials come...if they beat the Palestinian prisoners until their bones are broken, we handed them the clubs. We are just as much to blame as they are."

to Sister Mary Louise Gude, rector of Farley Hall. While a judicial board in a women's dorm might be used strictly in hall elections, a men's board may be directly involved in disciplinary action.

"The Bill of Rights, as it applied to dorms, couldn't have been applied, because some dorms didn't have them [judicial boards], or had them only for election purposes," Kirk said.

He added, "Students aren't here to pass judgments on other students."

Further concerns were raised about factors other than content.

Pasin called the Bill "an awkward mix of philosophy and procedure. . . Empty rhetoric"

Singh said it "spoke of fostering joint relations between students and the administration, but was itself totally student-sided."

Kirk, a rector and a law student sitting on the task force, said, "a lot of the rights mentioned in it already exist."

In their haste to finish the Bill and see it ratified, it was agreed by the CLC that the Legal Department's final document was not feasible. Some contributing factors were:

- Lack of administrative input

"Neither the administration nor faculty members were consulted in the process of development of the Bill of Rights," Pasin said. Since the Bill specifically dealt with situations in which the Administration's role in student affairs would be changed, a concern about the practicality of implementing the rights was prevalent, according to Singh.

"In this sense, the Administration needed to be involved," he said.

The Bill needed more critical research about the implications of the changes it proposed, according to Sister Jeannine Jochman, rector of Lyons Hall. "While it was done by the students, it affected the lives of many other people—like rectors, security guards, and the entire community," she said.

Kirk said he could have added legal and administrative insight for the document, from the standpoint of a law student and rector. He offered his advice to the Legal Department, but was never taken up on the offer, he said.

"It was not done behind the backs of the Administration. . . but they might have discussed it [first] with the Administration," he noted.

"I know the administration on the CLC agreed that the Bill of Rights seemed real adversarial . . . seemed to take a little defensive stance," he said.

Judicial Board Coordinator Vinny Sanchez said this adversarial tone "taken by the people who wrote it" is what hurt the Bill from the start. "People had it out that the administration wouldn't comply with us, like it was an 'us versus them' thing, rather than wanting to cooperate and talk with them."

"From the beginning, I never thought it was going to work because of that [tone]."

- Conflicts with du Lac

The Bill would have been difficult to coexist with du Lac, according to Singh. Since Article II of the Bill specified that students would have to comprise at least one-half of the disciplinary hearings, and du Lac specifies that two or three administrators are to be present at these hearings, du Lac would have had to be changed.

"One would have to have been made superior, one would have had to take precedence," Singh said.

- Timing

"The timing was as bad as it could have been," Pasin said.

The document was presented in late Spring, and the authors and Legal Department were eager to see it implemented before the close of the school year. "It should have never gone to the CLC when it did," Singh said, expressing his reservation about whether the document was "rushed" through procedures without being thoroughly scrutinized.

Furthermore, that simple grammatical errors were present in the final product told Kirk that "not enough thought was put into the original document."

ND speech team falters at Bradley, flies at Ball State

By KEVIN GRUBEN
News Writer

Last weekend, the Notre Dame speech team competed with over 55 other schools in its biggest meet of the year at Bradley University.

The meet consisted of students competing in various categories including dramatic interpretation, prose speaking or narration, poetry interpretation and extemporaneous and impromptu speaking.

Notre Dame only had one student place in the top five percent of his division. Sophomore Joe Wilson placed among the top finishers in the dramatic interpretation division, which has a student act out a segment from a well-known theatrical work.

Having only one student place near the top of the Bradley tournament is not, however, indicative of how the team has been doing over the year as a whole. Early in the year, they competed in two tournaments in Washington, D.C., at George Mason and Howard Universities.

At George Mason, Wilson took second place in the solo dramatic interpretation category, and first in the duo category with senior Amy Wandstrat. Other top finishers in the tournaments included junior Mike Sayer, who placed near the top in the poetry interpretation division, junior John McKee, and Anne Marie Crane.

Two weeks ago, at a meet at Ball State University, sophomore Rob Hennings placed second in extemporaneous speaking and first in impromptu speaking. In both categories, the speaker is given a current affairs issue and asked to prepare and subsequently deliver a speech within a limited time-frame.

"Our performance this year has greatly improved over last year. Last year we had two returning members from the previous year, whereas this year we have fourteen," said Sayer when asked about the success of this year's team.

The team's next meet is December 1 at Ohio State University.

HPC passes Senate's business bill

By DAVID KINNEY
News Writer

An amendment to the Official Constitution passed by the Student Senate last night regarding the regulation of student businesses was passed unanimously by the Hall Presidents' Council (HPC) Tuesday night.

Senator Lisa Bostwick presented the proposal, which entails placing student businesses which lose $2000 in one fiscal year or conduct business unethically on probation. If the Student Senate votes to put the business on probation, the business manager must report to the Senate and follow other regulations as specified by the Senate or the Student Business Control Committee, according to Bostwick.

In other business:

- Kathryn Pirrotta and Kristin Appleget announced the 1991 Iceberg Debates, to be held between Christmas and Spring Break. The interhall debates are intended to be "a forum to talk about Social Justice issues," said Pirrotta.

- Patty Jochum announced the Holiday Host program and encouraged hall presidents to inform students who plan to stay on campus over Thanksgiving Break of this opportunity.

- Saint Mary's Representative Kelly Burke announced that the ND/SMC Relations Committee will be sponsoring a Christmas shopping trip in Chicago on December 8.

Exhibit of African art to open at Snite Museum

By PATRICK HEALY
News Writer

Notre Dame's Snite Museum will host a private art exhibition of African sculptures from Nov. 18 to Dec. 30, showcasing "objects of great quality," according to Douglas Bradley, Curator of the Arts of the Americas, Africa, and Oceania at the Snite.

The exhibition, "African Art from the Rita and John Grunwald Collection," contains pieces from the western and Atlantic coastal regions of Africa dating back to the 17th century.

Bradley said that the pieces the Grunwalds have collected were "chosen very well" and are "wonderful objects," containing some objects not found in museums.

Bradley stressed that the Grunwalds are very knowledgeable collectors who choose items of high quality in the area of sculpture they're interested in, unlike those who collect art solely for their superficial look or monetary value.

The exhibition, of which Notre Dame is the last stop on a five museum tour, was coordinated by Bradley's counterpart at Indiana University, Diane Perline. Bradley said Perline contacted the Snite about the Grunwald collection in light of the cooperation between university museums in Indiana.

There will be five lectures during the collection's display, including one by Perline at the opening on Sunday titled "Sculpting Ideals: Beauty and Appearances in African Art." Bradley will discuss the collection on Nov. 19.

Top senators call for emergency session on Persian Gulf policies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Key Senators in both parties asked President Bush on Tuesday to convene an emergency session of Congress for what Republican leader Bob Dole called a "put-up-or-shut-up" vote on administration policies in the Persian Gulf.

The White House quickly opposed the idea as unnecessary, and Senate Democratic Leader George Mitchell, too, showed little enthusiasm. But Mitchell said Senate hearings would be scheduled on the gulf crisis, probably in the next several weeks, because "the American people deserve a full national debate."

Presidential press secretary Marlin Fitzwater, voicing administration opposition to a special congressional session, said simply, "There is no war."

Mitchell, of Maine, said a special session would be justified only if the president makes a decision to go to war and that Bush's moves so far amount only to threats — which he can issue without permission from Capitol Hill.

The Democratic leader said there would be hearings soon by the Senate Foreign Relations and Armed Services committees.

But Dole, of Kansas, argued for a special session, saying the backing of Congress is needed to bolster Bush's position. And despite Fitzwater's comments, he said the president has not ruled out such an idea.

"I think it's fairly accurate to say that there has been an erosion of support" for the administration's gulf policy across America, he said. "We need to regain it."

At a dinner for Republican Senators, Dole said he had been frustrated in recent days by members of Congress taking "potshots at the president."

At the same dinner, Bush did not speak directly about a special session. He told the Senators, "I am as determined as I have ever been to hold this magnificent historic coalition together and that we not fall short of our objectives."

Apparently sensitive to criticism that any war would be a war for oil, Bush said the stakes in the Persian Gulf were not "a question simply of economic interests of the world, and they are enormous," but rather that "one big country cannot bully and beat into submission another."

The requests for an emergency session reflected increasing concern among lawmakers of both parties over the prospect of war in the Persian Gulf, where 230,000 American troops are deployed as part of an international force.

The president last week announced a major buildup in the region to provide an "offensive military option" for use against Saddam Hussein and Iraqi forces occupying Kuwait. U.S. strength is expected to swell by 200,000 troops.

Sen. Sam Nunn, the Georgia Democrat who chairs the Senate Armed Services Committee, said "Congress ought to speak on this subject" before any offensive military action by the United States.

Dole and House GOP Leader

Robert Michel of Illinois had lunch with Bush at the White House to discuss whether to call Congress back to vote on what could amount to a declaration of war, although the resolution would not be worded that bluntly.

Afterward, Michel sought to calm congressional fears. "The president is not itching for a fight and he is not trigger happy," Michel said, adding that White House policy remains one of keeping up pressure on Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., added his voice to those calling for a special session, but for a different reason — to approve a resolution barring offensive moves by the president.

"President Bush's escalation of the confrontation has put the country on a headlong course toward war without giving sanctions a fair chance to work," he said. "Silence by Congress now is an abdication of our constitutional responsibility and an acquiescence in war."

Asked whether war is inevitable, Kennedy said:

"I hope it would not be. I fear that it is."

Normally, when Congress adjourns for the year it can be called back into session only by the President. However, anticipating developments in the gulf, lawmakers this year gave their own leaders authority to call them back in the adjournment resolution passed as Congress left town Oct. 28.

Black sainthood pervades the history of the Catholic Church

Dear Editor:

On Monday, Nov. 5, The Observer contained a photograph of the exhumation of the remains of Pierre Toussaint, who is described as "the first black proposed for sainthood." This characterization of Toussaint is both inaccurate and unfortunate.

Pierre Toussaint is not the first black proposed for sainthood by a long shot. What, for example, are we to make of the innumerable North Africans martyred during the sporadic persecutions of the pagan Roman Empire? Or, if you prefer a more recent example, there are the twenty-two Ugandan martyrs who died between 1885 and 1887, and who were canonized in 1964. Toussaint may be the first black inhabitant of the United States to be recommended for sainthood, but he is not the first black saint.

There is, however, a more important issue here. Recently, the Catholic Church in the United States has faced accusations of racism, which are not entirely unfounded. The unfortunate effect of the wording of this caption is to give the impression that the Church throughout most of its nearly 2000-year history has refused to accept blacks as saints. This is patently not the case, as I have mentioned above.

This letter is by no means intended to demean the achievements of Pierre Toussaint, but is rather intended to express the hope, given the painful and vital issues involved, that in the future The Observer will take greater care with its facts.

Personal attacks undermine truth

By Father Stephen Newton

Recent national political campaigns and local letters to editors highlight a problematic trend that seems to have permeated the core of our intellectual character. In logic, this method of argumentation is called "ad hominem" or "to the person" argumentation. It's the "last resort" of the scoundrel—what one resorts to when all else has failed—when one has run out of arguments that convince or advance one's cause in and of themselves. Whatever it's called, it's the antithesis of truth and undermines the concept of truth as a fluid process.

It's represented in campaign ads when a person running for some particular office says little or nothing about what he or she believes, represents or stands for, but has plenty to say about the character and background of his/her opponent: "His family owned a savings and loan; she used to drink; that one wears a bow tie; the other was born with a silver foot in her mouth."

It's represented in letters to the editor when people attack an individual or a group in ways that appear more clever than substantive.

This trend seems to be based upon a belief that truth is static, existing independently and in isolation, surrounded by millions and millions of lies. The one truth needs no amplification, the trend would contend. Truth stands on its own and is neither to be disclosed nor examined. It's sole purpose is to stand immovable and resolute, attacking through any method anything that gets in its way.

In this form of discourse, little or nothing is revealed about truth itself. It's truth; nothing more needs to be said. But those who hold different notions or ideas or who even merely see truth from a slightly different angle than truth's own true angle are to be attacked. This is how truth is defended.

Labels help in this less than honest endeavor: liberal or conservative; homophobic or perverted; sleazy or puritanical. So do certain key words and phrases: propaganda; should; obviously; if-you-would-only-think-about-it; reckless; pot-shot; hypocrisy; pseudo; mindless; etc. The intention of these phrases seems to be to polarize. The writer's own view of truth is the only legitimate one, and any other view is a lie or delusion.

I propose for consideration that truth is not a fixed idea or entity but is a phenomenon revealed in ongoing dialogue, and that negating any person or group because it holds some other position deserves rather than serves truth's revelation. If some idea or movement or candidate is in fact in opposition to what is true, that fact can be proven on merit. Ad hominem cleverness does not add anything to what is true on its own merit—in fact, it detracts.

We already know that the Notre Dame community—student body, faculty and staff—is made up of clever persons. That's almost a requirement for membership. What is less clear but equally true is that the community is made up of intelligent persons extremely capable of investigating truth without being threatened or engaging in defensive posturing.

Sarcasm is neither satire nor parody. Sarcasm is sarcasm: contempt; derision; mockery; ridicule. It does nothing to further truth but, rather, undermines and obfuscates it.

We can't do much about national political campaigns today or tomorrow, but we can do a number of things to make sure that negativity does not dominate our media. One step would be to put sarcasm aside and indulge in more respectful and honest dialogue with one another: to discuss the merits of ideas rather than of people—Ad rem rather than Ad hominem.

Father Newton is Director of Special Projects with the Office of Campus Ministry and is a regular Viewpoint columnist.

Close-outs reflect unfair policies

Dear Editor:

We would like to voice our strong disagreement with the class registration policies of the University. Specifically, we would like to address the policy that students at Saint Mary's College are eligible to register for classes at Notre Dame before many Notre Dame students. For example, quite a few Notre Dame seniors do not register until Wednesday, Nov. 14, while a great number of Saint Mary's seniors are eligible to DART for Notre Dame classes well before that.

Due to the limitations on class sizes, we feel that students who actually pay tuition at the University of Notre Dame should have the first opportunity to register for classes at Notre Dame. It seems unfair that Notre Dame students will be closed out of classes because their spots are being taken by students from another school.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

'Every fool in error can find a passage of Scripture to back him up.'

William Shakespeare

Women & football: Do they mix?

Amidst all of the excitement caused by the football team last Saturday, (Orange Bowl here we come), I noticed a subtle yet disturbing trend. As I watched the game at our indoor section tailgater (yet more proof that Morrissey is the best dorm on campus), there was a good deal of tension between the men and women during the game.

Actually, I perceived the problem being more one sided. It appeared that while the girls seemed to enjoy being in a room filled with guys, the men did not want any women to be in the same room with them during the game.

I paused. Surely that couldn't possibly be the case at this school where "men and women get along oh so well." I wandered from room to room and made a quick survey.

Sure enough, the men were at a fever pitch with the women. How could this be? Just before game time, the two groups appeared to be getting along just fine. Yet now, during the game, those polite men had turned into heathen animals. What was it about football and women that turns grown, cultured, and civilized men into pigs?

I, being the journalist that I am, decided to pursue this further. I went around the dorm asking these same men what the problem was. One junior (all names withheld for obvious reasons) said "I had to leave the room because there were too many girls around and all they do is yap".

Others said, "They have to keep their traps shut during the game" and "I don't mind as long as they know something about the game, but not if all they're doing is looking at the players' butts."

I assume this meant that they couldn't concentrate on the game. And yet, there were plenty of guys talking during the game. Surely they couldn't think women are the only people who talk during the game. I asked if their annoyance was caused by a lack of knowledge about the game. "There are a few girls who know the game, so they're not that bad, but there aren't many girls like that".

Another gripe was that girls "jump up every ten seconds to get a drink, to gossip, or to 'freshen up' in the powder scribed his ideal game as, "sitting three feet in front of the T.V., a 'brew-ha' in one hand, the remote control in the other, no one talking or getting in my way, and the freedom to belch or swear at will." He feels that having women around doesn't allow him to accomplish any of these requirements.

I, being one to hear all sides of the issue, asked some girls noyed by the talking. The most common responses to the guy's statements were "Rude!" and "Absurd!"

How do you solve this problem? To not invite members of the opposite sex would be one solution. This idea was outvoted in about half a second however. The only other solution I thought of was to have a "Football Knowledge Quiz" which must be taken before anyone (male or female) would be allowed to watch the game.

This quiz would weed out those that need to "get on the room." One guy went so far to suggest that a special room with "The Little Mermaid" playing should be used to accommodate the girls during the game.

This particular fellow de-what they thought of these comments. One female said, "girls didn't just show up, they were invited." The girls also mentioned that "there were too many guys yelling at the T.V. trying to be Lou!" Maybe the guys weren't the only ones an-clue bus" about football. As far as the talkers, I figure anyone with enough football knowledge to pass the quiz would have seen enough football to know proper T.V. etiquette. So get out those pencils, here comes the quiz.

Well, there it is. Feel free to cut this quiz out to post on your door for the USC game. One last thing, you can't talk about tailgaters without mentioning Saint Mary's, but that's another story altogether. (No, not really. I'm just kidding. Don't call me to complain.)

Go ape at the Beaux Ball

BY JIM BONALSKY
Accent Writer

Imagine if you will, the opportunity to travel to an exotic, primitive jungle where you will witness, first-hand, the very genesis of man. Accompanying you on this journey to the creation of our species is a savage Jungle Queen, barely able to restrain her primal urges.

This fantasy can be brought to its fruition for a mere $5.00 per person, or $9.00 per couple, at the Fall Beaux Arts Ball, which will be held in the lobby of the Architecture Building on Friday, November 16.

The Ball is an annual campus-wide costume dance, the only one of its kind at Notre Dame. It is being sponsored by first and fourth year students, in conjunction with the American Institute for Architecture Students (AIAS).

This year's theme will be "The Origin of Species" and all decorations and costumes will focus around the evolution verses creation debate.

"People are encouraged to do and wear anything revolving around this theme," Jason Montgomery, the co-chairman of the event, says. "We're hoping for a lot of different approaches to the idea."

The other co-chairman, David C. Bagnoli, adds, "We will be decorating the entire lobby to look like a jungle, and the adornments will extend outside the building and up the walls, so the entire campus will be able to see us."

This is no new or local event, and the tradition goes back to 17th century Paris. The ball began at the Parisian School of Fine Arts as an annual fall mixer between faculty and students. In the spring, the undergraduates would hold a gala of their own, where they would dress up as their favorite of least favorite professors.

The first year students, however, kept their costumes more simple. They painted their naked bodies and ran through Paris, arriving at the height of the ball. This tradition continues in Paris to this day.

Have Notre Dame freshmen been as bold as their French counterparts? Bagnoli says no. "It has been pretty much controlled the past few years, and we do not anticipate any (streakers) this year."

And if some daring freshman were to arrive in his "original" outfit, what would happen? "We would probably put him on a pedestal. We do encourage creativity in all forms."

The campus reaction to this event is quite positive. Sean O'Reilly, a first year "arkie" is eagerly anticipating Friday night. "Despite the fact that I will probably be fully clothed all evening long, I hope to have a good time."

Scooter Hughes, a freshman from Grace Hall, is also looking forward to the ball. "I think it is a good idea to have a dance where we can go single, because it seems like a great place to meet new friends. Being new here makes it difficult to find someone to go with."

This year's ball promises to be just as successful as last year's, which was sold out. The doors for this all-night event will open at 9:00, and the band Generics will crank up at 9:30. Complimentary refreshments are also included. Tickets will go on sale this week in the dining halls, and space is limited, so the chairmen recommend that people buy early.

Manley to apply for NFL reinstatement

WASHINGTON (AP)—A year after being banned from the NFL, Dexter Manley is ready to resume a career that has taken him from the Super Bowl to drug and alcohol treatment centers.

But the former Pro Bowl defensive end says he has also used his time in rehabilitation to prepare himself for rejection from the league and the Washington Redskins.

"My skin has grown tough," said Manley, banished last Nov. 18 after violating the league's substance abuse policy for the third time. "The most important thing for me is to stay focused on my recovery."

NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue will meet with Manley in New York on Friday before deciding whether the defensive lineman could return. The commissioner had said he would review the case after one year.

If Manley were reinstated, the Redskins would have to decide whether to take him back for the final six weeks of his contract. Team officials, however, have said privately that isn't likely to happen.

"I'm hoping the commissioner does what's best for the league, and for the game, and I hope I play again," Manley said from Houston, where he did volunteer work at the John Lucas New Spirit substance abuse clinic. "If not, life goes on. I will accept whatever will be."

Manley has said if the Redskins don't want him, he'd be interested in playing for Miami, Denver or the Los Angeles Raiders.

Two players who were also banned by the NFL were later reinstated after a year off, though they are not playing now. Tony Collins, who played for the New England Patriots, was cut by Miami this summer; Stanley Wilson has not played since going to the Super Bowl with the Cincinnati Bengals.

Manley's attorney, Bob Woolf, said he was confident his 31-year-old client will play again somewhere.

"You don't have that kind of talent around," Woolf said. "There have got to be teams that could use him."

In nine years, Manley had 97 sacks, including a team-record 18 in 1986.

Just as important, he provided some spark to an otherwise bland team.

He called himself "Dr. D" and sported a Mohawk haircut. When San Francisco quarterback Joe Montana came to town shortly after returning from major back surgery, Manley showed no sympathy. "I'll ring his clock," he said.

But the emotions he showed on the field also took a toll on his private life. He was treated for drug and alcohol abuse in 1987 and was suspended for 30 days in July 1988 after testing positive for cocaine. It was cocaine again that did him in a year ago, and he admitted it at a news conference.

Yet he became a hero to many when he went before a congressional committee and acknowledged another problem—illiteracy.

Just this week Manley was honored by a fellow student at a special center where he learned to read as an adult.

Manley answered his banishment from football by banishing himself from his Washington home for the first half of the football season. He worked at the Houston clinic, run by former NBA player John Lucas, and has spoken to various groups around the country.

He also says he has stayed in shape.

would finish as the top two on the team that won the race, which is exactly what happened.

"I suppose that was strange, a bit of a shock," said Coyle, who finished sixth overall, running the 10-kilometer race in 31 minutes, 18 1/2 seconds. "That had to be my best race of the season—by far."

McWilliams crossed the finish line a mere 12 seconds behind, good enough for eighth place in the region. Cahill and O'Connor, both bothered by the flu, finished 20th and 23rd, respectively.

"If you watched John Coyle all year long, you wouldn't have expected that," said Notre Dame coach Joe Plane. "But he's a very solid runner, and ran a very wonderful race. For McWilliams, a freshman, for any freshman to run well at a District meet is a great performance. We all knew he had the tools, but getting it done was a major accomplishment."

By doing more than "picking up the slack" when Cahill and O'Connor were slightly ill, Coyle and McWilliams proved the extraordinary depth of the seven-member cross-country team. Coyle and McWilliams were the keys to the Irish winning the district race, a race which Notre Dame never had won in the 18-year history of the program. As a result of their success, the Irish are ranked fourth in the nation in this week's NCAA coaches' cross country poll.

"We all basically prepared for this one race all season," said Coyle. "We really came together as a team. The number-one and number-two runners were a little off, but they still had strong runs, and without them we still wouldn't have won it."

A team that is solid in each position is the team that wins races. By winning this one,

Notre Dame upset third-ranked Wisconsin and seventh-ranked Michigan, and moved ahead of them in the polls.

"Next week (at the NCAA Championships) our seventh man could be our first man and we'd still run well," said Coyle. "We're a very evenly balanced team."

Said McWilliams: "At the beginning of the year, I didn't want to say I was scared, but it was different being the fifth or sixth man on a squad. I thought I was running bad, but in reality it was just a strong team. I didn't realize how strong it was, how much depth we had. It's incredible to think, being the normal fourth man on the team, that I was beating so many teams' first man."

McWilliams's thoughts reflect an excitement that the team will be sharing when they line up for the NCAA Championships Monday in Knoxville, Tenn. And Plane has to be excited as well, as his two big hitters at the district meet were underclassmen.

"I put McWilliams in the same hotel room as Coyle in West Lafayette because he's going to have three years running with Coyle," said Plane. "It's a nucleus for a real good team in the future. But I'm not thinking about the distant future. I'm thinking about running on Monday."

Fiesta Bowl hooks Louisville for Jan. 1

(AP)—The Fiesta Bowl has decided how to fill its program on New Year's Day, setting off a chain of events that means trouble for some other bowls.

"Who would have thought the Fiesta Bowl would have affected the Independence Bowl? It is a strange world we live in," Independence Bowl chairman Brant Goyne said.

On Tuesday, Fiesta Bowl officials announced that 20th-ranked Louisville (9-1-1) will play the Southeastern Conference runner-up — No. 14 Tennessee (5-2-2), No. 15 Mississippi (8-1), No. 24 Auburn (6-2-1) or unranked Alabama (5-4).

Top-ranked Notre Dame and No. 8 Virginia already turned down the Fiesta Bowl because voters in Arizona defeated a referendum that would have made Martin Luther King's birthday a state holiday. The Fiesta Bowl is played on New Year's Day in Tempe, Ariz.

The SEC champion goes to the Sugar Bowl, also on Jan. 1, and will play Virginia (8-1). That leaves two other bowls, the Jan. 1 Gator and Dec. 29 Peach, with the third and fourth-place finishers in the SEC.

The Gator will match the Michigan-Ohio State winner against the SEC's No. 3, while the Peach gets Indiana against the SEC's No. 4 team.

There is a possible catch. Some Mississippi players have said they don't want to play in the Fiesta Bowl because of the politically explosive situation, touched off when the NFL said it would move the 1993 Super Bowl out of Phoenix.

"Our seniors expressed reservations about playing in the Fiesta Bowl, but no decision has been made," Mississippi athletic director Warner Alford said.

The school has decided to wait until after Saturday's game against Tennessee before taking a stand, if it's necessary.

"Our goal is to play in the Sugar Bowl," Alford said.

Bowl invitations can't officially go out until Nov. 24, but a lot of schools already have made their intentions clear.

Louisville's decision to play in Tempe became known on Monday when the Cardinals told All American bowl officials in Birmingham, Ala., they were withdrawing from an oral agreement with them. Louisville's bowl-day earnings immediately jumped from $600,000 to $2.6 million.

No. 25 Southern Mississippi stepped in to fill the All American Bowl void on Dec. 28, creating another void in the Independence Bowl on Dec. 15 at Shreveport, La.

"Of course, we are disappointed because we wanted Southern Miss to come, but that part of the decision is out of our control," Goyne said. "There are no hard feelings."

Southern Miss (8-3) probably will play North Carolina State (6-5) in the All American. The Independence now plans to invite Baylor (5-3-1) to play against perhaps Louisiana State (4-5) or South Carolina (5-4).

While the Fiesta was having Louisville flanker Fred Jones (90) catches a pass against Tulsa earlier this season. The Fiesta Bowl announced that it had invited Louisville and the Southeastern Conference runner-up.

its troubles, another Arizona bowl, the Copper Bowl at Tucson, breezed through its selection process. California (6-3-1) will play Wyoming (9-2) in that bowl on Dec. 31.

"Our players are as sensitive to this issue as anybody could be, but there's a strong feeling that we should go," Cal athletic director Dave Maggard said. "We could call attention to this issue and bring about change that way."

Colorado State (7-3) will play in the Freedom Bowl on Dec. 29 at Anaheim, Calif., against Oregon (7-3).

The California Bowl Dec. 8 at Fresno, Calif., likely will have Central Michigan (8-2-1) against the Big West champion, San Jose State (7-2-1) or Fresno State (8-1-1). Arizona (6-4) is ticketed for the Aloha Bowl on Christmas Day against Syracuse (5-3-2), if the Orangemen win at West Virginia on Saturday.

The Liberty Bowl on Dec. 27 at Memphis, Tenn., looks like Air Force (5-5) against the Ohio State-Michigan loser. Ohio State is 6-2-1, Michigan 6-3. The inaugural Blockbuster Bowl in Joe Robbie Stadium on Dec. 28 will match No. 9 Florida State (7-2) against No. 18 Penn State (7-2).

The Holiday Bowl on Dec. 29 at San Diego will get No. 5

Brigham Young (8-1) against either No. 7 Texas (7-1) or Texas A&M (6-2-1), while the Dec. 31 John Hancock Bowl gets Michigan State (5-3-1) against No. 19 Southern Cal (7-2-1).

In the other Jan. 1 bowls, it's No. 22 Illinois (6-3) vs. No. 17 Clemson (8-2) in the Hall of Fame, No. 4 Georgia Tech (8-0-1) vs. No. 11 Nebraska (9-1) in the Citrus, the Southwest Conference winner vs. No. 3 Miami (6-2) in the Cotton Bowl, No. 10 Washington (8-2) vs. the Big Ten winner, probably Iowa, in the Rose Bowl and No. 1 Notre Dame (8-1) vs. No. 2 Colorado (9-1-1) in the Orange Bowl.

It's a big 'Oh, Baby' at Big Apple NIT tournament

(AP)—The days of early-season blowouts may be over for many college basketball powerhouses.

Just take a look at the season-opening Big Apple NIT, which has a 16-team quality field likely to match ranked teams against each other even before Dick Vitale has gotten off his first "Oh, baby!"

Tonight, Vanderbilt is at Arkansas, one of two Final Four teams in the field; New Orleans is at Oklahoma, the No. 1 team in last year's final regular-season poll; Memphis State is at Boston College; Marquette is at No. 6 Duke, last year's NCAA runner-up; Austin Peay is at No. 3 Arizona; and East Tennessee State is at Brigham Young.

On Thursday night, Fordham is at Notre Dame and No. 19 Temple is at Iowa.

The second round is Friday and Saturday, with the semis and final set for Madison Square Garden on Nov. 21 and 23.

For the first time in its six years, the tournament is bracketed ahead of time, setting up a number of intriguing matchups between ranked teams.

Naturally, coaches followed their own handbook Monday and wouldn't talk of any game but the next one. However, the second round should bring about an Arkansas-Oklahoma matchup.

"We've never played Vandy," Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson said. "I think they will resemble North Carolina teams because Eddie (Fogler) worked with Dede (Smith). It will be a different kind of game in terms of tempo. There's no penciling in in a tournament like this."

Richardson could use ink for this one as standout guards Lee Mayberry and Todd Day and slimmed-down big man Oliver Miller return from the team that went 30-4 last season and lost to Duke in the national semifinals. Vanderbilt, which lost two of its top three scorers, is coming off the postseason NIT championship.

Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs needed a program when practice began on Oct. 15 after losing four starters, two to poor grades.

"I'm not sure we have any stars," Tubbs said. "We're short on returning players who were starters. But there are some exciting newcomers like Brent Price. He has got a chance to be one of top guards in nation. The rest are all relatively new although some have been in the program for a couple of years.

"They're hungry and excited and they have a lot to prove and I kind of like this situation."

New Orleans was 21-11 last season but the Privateers lost American South Conference player of the year Tony Harris.

There were reports Tubbs would refuse to go to Arkansas to play a second-round game. NIT president Jack Powers said the site of the second-round games would not even be determined until after the first round was completed.

"What I said was that I'd rather play all of our games in Norman," Tubbs said. "I'm trying to move all our conference games here too. It is a challenge to be out on road and play good tough teams. It's the NIT's decision. It's not my tournament and I knew that coming in."

If form holds true, the semifinals could be Duke against the Arkansas-Oklahoma winner and Arizona against Temple. That would be four ranked teams together on a weekend in November.

"I feel it's important for good tough competition early because there's no other way to find out about your ballclub," Arizona's Lute Olson said. "I'd much rather play good teams. What you're doing well will be obvious and so will what you don't do well. Being a veteran ballclub we need this early."

Duke's Mike Krzyzewski likes the tournament because his team is inexperienced.

"Eight of our 13 players are freshmen and sophomores," he said. "We play nine, 10 people and we'll have to rely on enthusiasm and hustle along with good talent. But we're young and hope we're at the level the veteran teams are going in to this tournament."

SPORTS BRIEFS

The ND/SMC Ski team will hold a meeting tonight at 8 p.m. in Rm. 127 Nieuwland Science Hall. Anyone interested in trying out for the team must attend along with those who still have business to take care of for the Christmas trip to Steamboat.

Mandatory crew meeting for both novice and varsity thin tonight at 7:30 p.m. in 204 O'Shag. Money will be collected and the Penn State concession stand will be organized.

Orlando snaps home loss streak

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP)—The Orlando Magic snapped an NBA-record 16-game home losing streak Tuesday night as Terry Catledge scored 30 points and Sam Vincent hit a jumper and two free throws in the final minute of a 109-103 victory over the Dallas Mavericks.

The victory was the first of the season for the second-year Magic (1-6), which also got 18 points from Nick Anderson and 16 from Vincent, whose jumper gave Orlando a 105-101 lead with 43 seconds to go.

Rolando Blackman scored 36 points and Derek Harper scored 26 for Dallas, which learned earlier in the day that leading scorer and rebounder Roy Tarpley will miss the remainder of the regular season because of ligament damage in his right knee.

Dallas put together an 18-1 run to overcome a 14-point fourth-quarter deficit and lead briefly before faltering down the stretch.

Bulls 84, Jazz 82

SALT LAKE CITY—Michael Jordan's jumper as time ran out gave the Chicago Bulls an 84-82 victory over the Utah Jazz on Tuesday night.

A basket by Mark Eaton gave the Jazz an 82-80 edge with 2:52 remaining, but Utah never scored again, and John Paxson's jumper tied it with 1:35 left.

Karl Malone, who scored 28 points for Utah, missed a shot with a minute to go, but Eaton blocked a shot by Scottie Pippen. Malone then missed again underneath, and the Bulls rebounded with 16 seconds remaining and called timeout.

Paxson took the inbounds pass and dribbled the clock down to less than two seconds before passing to Jordan, who was covered closely by Jeff Malone, but was able to get off the game-winning shot from about 15 feet.

Belles beat Glen Oaks in second-half surge

By CHRIS BACON

Saint Mary's Sports Editor

The Saint Mary's basketball team tested the waters last night, routing Glen Oaks Community College 80-62 in the annual scrimmage between the two teams.

First-game jitters attacked the Belles offense in the first half. The Belles, suffering from poor passing, failed to convert on scoring opportunities.

"We did terrible in the first half," said Belles head coach Marv Wood. "We had poor timing, poor positioning. Our passing was sloppy at best." While the Belles defense remained consistent through both halves, the offense rebounded in the second. Returning juniors Janet Libbing and Annie Hartzel led the Belles offense in the second-half surge.

"I was really happy with Annie. She really did the job for us on defense, and made a second-half offense contribution," said Wood. "Janet was also solid for us off the boards and defensively." Said Libbing, "I think I did well for an opener. The shots weren't hitting at first. But, I followed the shots and got the rebounds."

The Belles, anticipating a more challenging season in their new home in the NCAA Division III, are using last night's game to prepare them for the rest of the season, and particularly Saturday night's season opener at Beloit College. One of the first things the Belles hope to improve on is their rebounding.

"We did not rebound well, offensively or defensively," said Wood. "It may be a problem all year. We don't have the great size, so we'll have to have good position and really hustle on the boards."

"We're running into a veteran team on Saturday. This game definitely helped us.

Agassi whips Sampras with vastly improved serve attack

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — Since losing the U.S. Open final to Pete Sampras, Andre Agassi has been working on his serve.

It paid off Tuesday as Agassi fired 10 aces and whipped Sampras 6-4, 6-2 on the opening day of the ATP World Championships, the season-ending finals pitting the top eight players in the world.

"I was not really out to prove I can beat Pete, I was more out to prove that the U.S. Open was just a day out in New York," Agassi said after finishing off Sampras in just over an hour.

In other matches, Stefan Edberg, the No. 1 in the world, overcame a sluggish start and beat Emilio Sanchez 6-7, 6-3, 6-1, while Ivan Lendl, the No. 3, served seven aces en route to a 6-3, 6-3 victory over Thomas Muster.

Lendl needed one hour, 18 minutes to dispatch the seventh-ranked Austrian, who is coming off a three-week suspension.

Sampras beat Agassi in three sets in the U.S. Open final, becoming at 19 the youngest winner in the history of the tournament. Agassi has not forgotten the loss.

"After the U.S. Open, I realized what a tremendous asset the serve can be," Agassi said. "If you can serve that big, you don't need a lot of other things to win matches."

"I've been working on my serve since the U.S. Open."

Sampras said Agassi served "as well as he's ever served."

"His serve was the key. It was a complete opposite of the U.S. Open. He played flawless tennis," said Sampras, who is ranked fifth.

Sampras, suffering from shin splints that forced his withdrawal from a tournament at Wembley last week, started well.

Agassi, ranked fourth, was taken to four deuces before holding serve in the fourth game. But he broke Sampras in the seventh to take full control of the match.

An erratic Sampras sprayed shots wildly and Agassi notched breaks in the first and third game of the second set.

Sampras made a brief rally in the sixth game, breaking Agassi for the first time to cut the deficit to 4-2. But he dropped the next game on a double-fault and Agassi served his 10th ace to finish off the match.

"He was on fire, he beat me fair and square," Sampras said. He said he was still feeling pain in his left shin, but "healthy or not healthy I was going to get beaten."

Edberg, Agassi, Sampras and Sanchez are in the same group. After round-robin matches, the two top players from each group advance to the semifinals of the $2 million event.

Agassi and Edberg now lead their group, but Sanchez and Sampras still have a chance of making the last four.

Boris Becker, the No. 2 seed, goes into action against No. 6 Andres Gomez of Ecuador on Wednesday.

Tarpley to miss full season

DALLAS (AP)—Star forward Roy Tarpley will miss the rest of the Dallas Mavericks' season after ligament damage was discovered in his right knee Tuesday.

The damage was found during surgery. Tarpley was injured in the first quarter of Friday's 111-99 victory over Orlando, but the Mavericks thought it was just a dislocated kneecap.

Dr. Pat Evans said "the arthroscopic surgery on Roy revealed a fresh tear of the anterior cruciate ligament with complete detachment in an area of previous tearing."

"It also revealed a tear in the back portion of the lateral cartilage. The procedure went well. We expect him to have full recovery and he could be ready for the playoffs in May."

Tarpley had averaged 20 points and 11 rebounds in five games and was shooting 54 percent from the field.

"This is as big blow," said Dallas coach Richie Adubato. "It just means every player on our team will have to get better. Roy helped us control the boards. Now everyone will have to pick up his rebounding."

Tarpley previously missed more than a season when he was suspended for violating the NBA drug policy. He played in only 19 games in the 1988-89 season after being suspended on January 5, 1989 by the league's drug counselors. The previous November, he had undergone knee surgery.

Tarpley was activated from the suspended list on April 12, 1989, but was suspended again on Nov. 16 for violating his aftercare program. On Jan. 22, 1990, he was removed from the suspended list and, other than a two-game suspension by the Mavericks last April for missing practice, he had not had any more such problems.

Prior to Tarpley's surgery, Evans performed an arthroscopy on the right knee of guard Fat Lever.

It's no joke—Bob Welch wins Cy Young balloting

NEW YORK (AP)—Bob Welch had the success, if not the stats, of Roger Clemens and Dave Stewart. On Tuesday, he got the Cy Young to go with it.

Welch was the American League's biggest winner in 22 seasons, going 27-6 for the Oakland Athletics. And wins are what usually win the award for the best pitcher.

In a split vote in which no one was named on all 28 ballots, Welch got 15 first-place votes and a total of 107 points. Clemens, with an earned-run average more than a full run better than Welch, was second with eight first-place votes and 77 points.

Stewart, Welch's teammate, won 20 games for the fourth straight season, but again failed to win the Cy Young. He was third with three first-place votes and 43 points, followed by record-setting Chicago reliever Bobby Thigpen, who got the other two first-place votes and had 20 points.

Two members of the Baseball Writers Association in each AL city voted, and balloting was completed before the start of the playoffs. The National League Cy Young winner will be announced Wednesday.

Before this season, Welch had been one of baseball's most consistent pitchers for 12 years, although he had never won more than 17 games. But bolstered by Oakland's outstanding defense, the Athletics' excellent relief corps and the benefits of playing at the spacious Coliseum, he set a club record for victories as his team won the West championship. He helped himself by never losing two straight decisions.

Welch's win total was the highest in the AL since Denny McLain won 31 in 1968. Not since Steve Carlton won 27 for Philadelphia in 1972 had a major leaguer won that many.

Welch did it with a 2.95 ERA while pitching just two complete games—both shutouts—in 35 starts. In 238 innings, he walked 77, struck out 127, gave up 26 home runs and 214 hits.

Clemens, meanwhile, went 21-6 with a 1.93 ERA at Boston's tiny Fenway Park—just the second Red Sox pitcher in 73 years with an ERA of under 2.00. He missed almost all of the final month with tendinitis, although he did complete seven games, including four shutouts, in 31 starts.

Clemens, a two-time Cy Young winner, pitched 228 1-3 innings and struck out 209, walked only 54, gave up just seven home runs and allowed 193 hits.

Stewart went 22-11 with a 2.56 ERA. He pitched 11 complete games, four for shutouts, in 36 starts. In 267 innings, he struck out 166, walked 83, gave up 16 homers and 226 hits.

Stewart finished third in the Cy Young voting in 1987 after going 20-13, was fourth in 1988 after being 21-12 and was runner-up last season after going 21-9. If anything, at least

Stewart helped prevent Clemens, his longtime rival, from winning this year — Stewart won all three head-to-head meetings with Clemens; without those games, Clemens was 21-3 with a 1.71 ERA.

Welch got 10 second-place votes, three third-places and was left off one ballot. Clemens also got 10 second-places, received seven third-places and was left off by three voters.

Thigpen, who set a major league record with 57 saves in 64 chances and had a 1.83 ERA, was named on 10 ballots. Oakland's Dennis Eckersley, who got 48 saves in 50 tries and had an 0.61 ERA, received only a pair of third-place votes.

Trimmed-down Ellis prepared to be Irish go-to man

By GREG GUFFEY
Sports Editor

Notre Dame basketball coach Digger Phelps has said for the past month that junior center LaPhonso Ellis must be a dominant player this season.

And Ellis is poised to establish himself as that player Thursday night when the Irish host Fordham in the first round of the Dodge/NIT Tournament.

"I'm ready," Ellis said matter-of-factly after Tuesday's practice.

Phelps knows the performance of Ellis could determine the success of the Irish team this season.

"I think he knows his junior year, the third year of college basketball, is the time to get things going for his own individual career," Phelps said. "I thought he played well against Athletes in Action. I think you've got to look for him inside and he has the capabilities of shooting it from outside. He's got to become that dominant player for us at both ends of the floor."

Ellis has shed more than 20 pounds since practice started a month ago, going from 265 to a more comfortable 242.

In the exhibition contest against Athletes in Action last week, Ellis scored 28 points and pulled down 13 rebounds to lead the Irish to an 81-78 victory. He was seven of 12 from the field and 12 of 14 from the free-throw line.

"I think I'm in pretty good shape right now," Ellis said. "I'm excited about Thursday. I'm ready to play."

Notre Dame senior captain Tim Singleton is one player on Ellis' bandwagon after watching him perform the past month.

"I think Phonz is going to be the focal point of this team," Singleton said. "Phonz will determine how far we go. If we can get him 20 points a game, that's going to force a lot of teams to double down on him. That will open it up for everyone else."

Ellis is the leading returning rebounder in the country after averaging 12.6 boards per game last season. But after missing the first seven contests in 1989, he was actually not eligible to be ranked until the last game of the season because he had not played in 75 percent of Notre Dame's games.

Ellis is already the career Irish leader with 90 blocks and should become one of the top 15 rebounders on the all-time list early this season.

But Fordham, with two experienced big men, is on Ellis' mind right now. Forward Fred Herzog (6-9, 205 pounds) and Damon Lopez (6-9, 240 pounds) should give Ellis a test on Thursday. They combined to average 22 points and 14.1 rebounds per game last year.

"I'm really looking at every game as a big test," Ellis said. "even if he is 5-10 and 135 pounds."

N.I.T. NOTES—Tickets still remain for Thursday night's 7:30 p.m. game. This game is not part of the season ticket package. . . The game will be telecast as part of an ESPN doubleheader with Temple and Iowa meeting at 9:30 p.m.

Northwestern defeats Irish volleyball easily

By RICHARD MATHURIN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame volleyball team will not soon forget the name Kim Hanson.

The freshman pretty hitter from Northwestern recorded 12 kills in leading the Wildcats to a straight-sets victory over the Irish, 16-14, 15-10, and 15-6. An ironic twist to the story is that Hanson once wanted to attend Notre Dame, but was passed over by the Irish.

"Our coach pretty much warned us about her, but I didn't expect her to cut back that much," said Irish offensive hitter Alicia Turner. "She cut back a lot to the right. We might have had to react to her more than we thought we would."

The Irish started out well in the first game, zooming to an 8-3 lead behind the serving of sophomore Marilyn Cragin. The Wildcats were not discouraged, though, coming back to the next 10 points and lead 13-8 behind the strong spikes of Hanson. The Irish came back to tie at 14-14, but Northwestern came back to win the game 16-14 on an Irish error.

The Irish continued to play the Wildcats tough in the second game. Turner began to pick it up, killing two balls for points and adding a service ace to make the score 10-10. Once again, the Northwestern experience proved to be the difference, as senior Tricia Tadin aced the Irish three straight times to give the Wildcats a 13-10 lead. The Irish never recovered, losing the final point on another error and going down to the Wildcats 10-15.

In the final game, the Irish proceeded to hurt themselves by committing three more errors in losing the last seven points to lose the game 6-15.

Turner led the Irish, recording 11 kills (.346 attack percentage) and had 8 digs while senior Colleen Wagner contributed seven kills (.357) and three digs in her final home performance.

"It felt a lot better out there playing wise," said Turner. "I think we could have picked it up one more notch. We started a late and we didn't get going right from the beginning."

Said Head Coach Maria Perez: "It's like we shoot ourselves in the foot. I didn't think they were that awesome. We made them look great, but I think we held our own."

Irish 'Miracle on Juniper Road'

Holtz surprised by offensive line's success with injuries

By FRANK PASTOR
Associate Sports Editor

Christmas arrived early this year for Lou Holtz, with Notre Dame offensive line coach Joe Moore playing Santa Claus.

Somehow Moore has pooled together the talents of two senior linemen and three new starters and made them into a cohesive unit that has paved the way to an 8-1 record and the 12th-ranked rushing attack in the country.

"Miracle on Juniper Road," Holtz calls it. "You want to talk about a miracle, you want to talk about something I cannot explain, I cannot explain to you how our offensive line has done it this year. There hasn't been a gentleman on our offensive line who has been there every single practice during the week of a game, let alone over a whole season."

Quickly: Center Mike Heldt missed all of spring practice after dislocating his elbow in last season's Orange Bowl game. Winston Sandri replaced Gene McGuire at quick tackle when McGuire injured a knee against Purdue. Sandri, who suffered a knee sprain in the Michigan opener, started against Stanford and Air Force before McGuire returned to the starting lineup against Miami.

Sandri started the Navy game in place of quick guard Mirko Jurkovic, who missed the game due to a sprained knee. He also started at tight tackle against Tennessee when back problems limited Justin Hall to minor special-teams appearances.

Hall is expected to return to the starting lineup Saturday against Penn State (7-2), whose defense has limited opponents to 86.8 yards rushing and 13 points per game this season.

"It's a tremendous job Joe Moore has done with our offensive line," Holtz says, "and a tremendous job our offensive line has done. Usually when you have an offensive line you get very few injuries or you do not change the lineup very much. Every good offensive line I've ever been around has done this."

Until now. The Irish rushing attack has rolled over opponents the past five weeks, averaging 283.6 yards per game and recording 17 rushing touchdowns. Last week, Notre Dame rushed for 316 yards on the ground against Tennessee's stingy rush defense, bringing its season average to 259.9 yards per game.

The Irish compiled 425 rushing yards last season against Penn State, the most ever yielded by a Nittany Lion team, in Notre Dame's 34-23 win over the 17th-ranked Nittany Lions. Penn State entered the game allowing just 104 rushing yards and 9.2 points per game.

Penn State has given up no more than 21 points in a game this season, numbers that are even more outstanding considering the Nittany Lions' '90 slate, which includes Texas, Alabama and USC.

Cross country surprises all

Underclassmen excel

Sitting in room 222 of the Red Roof Inn in West Lafayette this past weekend, Notre Dame cross-country runners John Coyle and Mike McWilliams talked quietly about strategies for an upcoming race.

They didn't have conspiracy on their minds. They weren't aiming to turn their team upside-down. After all, they were underclassmen on a team led by All-America choice Mike O'Connor and senior Ryan Cahill, and most expected the senior runners to lead the team.

The race they were about to run was the NCAA Region IV Men's Cross Country Championship. And as it so happened, they were the two most instrumental runners in helping Notre Dame win the race and qualify as a team for the NCAA Cross Country Championship.

"John was telling me how he was going to run the race," said McWilliams, a freshman. "My approach going into the race with him was: no matter what, don't lose him. Grab hold of him mentally, and he'll pull me through."

It is a common practice for cross-country participants to run together, pushing each other to go faster and consequently maximizing each other's performances. Neither the sophomore Coyle nor McWilliams, however, thought they
