Attanasio named new director of peace institute

By L. PETER YOB
Assistant News Editor

John Attanasio, professor of law in the University of Notre Dame Law School, will become the new director of the University's Institute for International Peace Studies.

Attanasio will succeed John Gilligan, the former Ohio governor who has been the director of the Institute since its inception in 1985.

Attanasio said, "I'm grateful to Father Malloy and University Provost Timothy O'Meara for this opportunity."

"They are very supportive of the Institute," he said. "We have good working relations and I think this will inure to the benefit of the Institute."

"John Attanasio is an extremely energetic and creative scholar whose international experience and strong background in human rights are ideally suited to the Institute's work," O'Meara said. "He possesses all the qualities of intellect, vision and leadership necessary to guide the Institute through its next phase of development."

"I feel very happy and excited about the job," Attanasio said. "At the same time I approach the job with a tremendous sense of responsibility."

"The world situation being what it is: in flux, in a period of change, there are possibilities and problems," he said. "We have a responsibility to engage these possibilities and try to make the world a better place than it was before."

Attanasio praised Father Theodore Hesburgh, University president-emeritus, and Gilligan for their work in founding the Institute. "I feel grateful because the Institute has made a tremendous start in the short period of time it's been in existence," Attanasio said.

Attanasio said he hopes to "carry the Institute forward from this very strong foundation." He said he wants to "continue the very important teaching mission of the Institute and make it more and more influential both in scholarship and in the formation of public policy."

Attanasio returned to Notre Dame this year after a semester as a Fulbright Scholar in the Soviet Union, where he lectured to groups including deputies of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., the ethics department of the U.S.S.R. Academy of Sciences, and the Institute of International Relations of the U.S.S.R. Foreign Ministry.

He has lectured to members of the German Federal Court and continues to work with legislators and judges from the U.S.S.R. and Eastern European nations.

In Hungary, Attanasio recently presented a specially compiled book of information on market legal structures to the leadership of seven Eastern European parliaments, held meetings with the chief judge of the Hungarian constitutional court, and lectured at the University of Budapest.

At Notre Dame this year, Attanasio team-taught, with Igor Grazin, a deputy of the Supreme Soviet, a course comparing the constitutional systems of the U.S. and the U.S.S.R.

A member of the Notre Dame faculty since 1985 and named the Law School's outstanding faculty member by its students in 1988, he serves as chair of the advisory board of Notre Dame's Center for Civil and Human Rights and as faculty advisor of the Notre Dame Law Review.

Attanasio plans to continue teaching courses in Constitutional Law and First Amendment in the Law School next year.

Attanasio's writing has been published in journals. He co-edited a constitutional law case-

Nationwide railroad strike possible amid collapse of contract debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Last-ditch contract talks between freight railroads and their unions broke up Monday evening, all but assuring a coast-to-coast strike after midnight that could strand freight passengers and stop the flow of one-third of the nation's goods.

The nation's 235,000 freight workers had vowed to go on strike early Wednesday if a settlement was not reached by the midnight deadline. Several unions set the strike for 7 a.m. local time, although under federal law, workers were free to walk off their jobs anytime after midnight.

"I assume there was just no reason to go on," Jim Reiter, a spokesman for the Association of American Railroads, said about three hours before a federally imposed "cooling off" period was set to expire at midnight, Washington time.

Even as the talks broke off, unions still insisted that they were willing to try to avoid a strike.

"The unions, at this point, while we recognize that there are still a great many problems to resolve, the door is open to try to engage in meaningful negotiations," said Ed Wytkind, a spokesman for the unions.

Dan Lang, another industry spokesman, said the carriers made an 11th-hour attempt to settle by offering a new proposal. He offered no specifics, but said, "Obviously, it came to naught."

Wytkind said he was unaware of any substantive new proposal.

Earlier, Larry McFather, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, said "we feel we have no choice" but to strike. "Our people have been cut to the bone."

"We'll probably shut the whole system down," said William Fairchild of the Transportation Communication Workers' carmen's division.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the Bush administration was prepared to work with Congress on speedy legislation "to impose a settlement and end the strike."

Congressional leaders had refused to enact legislation to stop a strike before it started, but Tuesday, meeting behind closed doors, said that if a walkout occurred, they would hurry legislation to resolve the dispute.

"My feeling is that, given the nature of the economy, it is important to act in a timely fashion," said Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., chairman of the Senate Education and Labor Committee.

A House panel had already scheduled a hearing for early Wednesday, with both labor, management and Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner set to testify on the impasse.

At issue is a three-year-old dispute over wages, work rules and health care costs.

Unions contend the railroads have not offered high enough pay increases to make up for wage freezes of the past. Management argues that railroad workers' salaries are already

Archbishop discusses the importance of Catholic laity

By MEG SHUFF
News Writer

Archbishop Denis Hurley feels that social concern, lay participation, and the practice of community go hand-in-hand in the struggle for freedom and political institutions throughout the world.

Hurley, the archbishop of Durban, Republic of South Africa, was one of the numerous scholars who discussed topics concerning political institutions and the quest for freedom on the second day of "One Hundred Years of Catholic Social Thought."

During the symposium, sponsored by the University of Notre Dame and the Notre Dame Center for Ethics and Religious Values in Business, Hurley noted that the overwhelming majority of the Church is lay and it is through their influence that social concern develops.

"If social concern is to be a reality it must be so through the laity," he said "There can be no promotion of social concern without the participation of the laity."

From the beginnings of the Church and up to the Second Vatican Council, the role of the laity in the Church has been instrumental, according to Hurley. This was especially true

D-2 lot reorganization proposed

By STEVEN KRAUSS
News Writer

Dave McManus of Parking Services unveiled, at the Hall Presidents' Council (HPC) meeting last night, a new proposal by the organization concerning the D-2 parking lot.

Beginning next fall, D-2 will officially become two lots; the southern portion will be for South Quad, while North Quad residents will park in the northern part of the lot.

The idea is an effort to appease drivers from South Quad who found their parking spaces squeezed out by construction near the post office and the football stadium. These students will now have a little less of a trek to get to their cars.

Reaction to the proposal was mixed: Flanner Hall Co-president Rich Delevan called the idea unnecessary. "Adding one more level of bureaucracy in order to save people thirty steps is ludicrous."

Megan Sullivan of Badin Hall thought that the new parking plan is "a nice gesture for the people who got displaced due to the construction. It's also a good idea for north quad females to be placed in the southern lot."

Under McManus' plan, North Quad females will be permitted to park in the south lot for safety reasons, as well as to avoid overcrowding in the two North Quad lots. South Quad females would continue parking in the D-6 lot.

While McManus had the floor, he addressed questions about some current parking problems. Asked about the paving schedule for the D-6 parking lot, he said that the new part of the lot is over a swamp and must settle first. The portion that was paved prior to expansion, however, is expected to be repaved "sometime during the summer months."

McManus also stated that markers and signs to assist students in finding their cars in all lots are "on order."

In other HPC action, Joe Cassidy was introduced to the presidents as HPC moderator. When asked about his goals for next year, Cassidy said, "It's up to the presidents what they want to get accomplished. I'm here merely as a moderator." In addition to his involvement with HPC, Cassidy is director of Student Activities.

Mourning the close of freshman year

"Good bye and good luck," Mr. McNeill said to me, as he firmly shook my hand during the conclusion of my final conference with my freshman advisor.

Megan Junius
News Copy Editor

His words prompted me to think about the upcoming years in my life. Then, my thoughts turned back to the numerous advantages of having "freshman" beside my name.

At the beginning of the year, when people would ask what year I was, I would reply, "Oh, I'm JUST a freshman."

Looking back on that statement I realize all of the advantages and benefits being "just a freshman" has to offer.

As a freshman I was enrolled in required courses. Very few choices had to be made. Now, approaching my sophomore year, I am expected to select my courses myself.

Being a freshman is so much fun. Everything is planned — nice and simple.

We freshmen have our own advisors, just for freshmen. We have our own major, Freshman Year. We even have special classes labeled for "freshmen only."

At these thoughts, I realized all that Notre Dame has offered, not only me, but to all freshmen. And, I thought about all that I have already experienced on my own during freshman year.

At the beginning of the year, during football season, when I forgot my ID, all I had to do was tell the guard the name of my rector and, of course, the fact that I was a JUST a freshman. I didn't know any better — Of course, I got in.

Now, think way, way back to Orientation Weekend. What other time of your life have you had the opportunity to randomly walk up to people and find out their name, hometown and dorm?

Speaking of randomness, when else, besides freshman year, would it be acceptable to hand pick your date out of the dogbook, then have your roommate call the guy and set you both up for your SYR?

As first semester continues, the shock of college exams becomes reality. "I received a D- on my first paper for Freshman Seminar," I told my mother tearfully over the telephone. My parents, the ones I have learned to love dearly since coming to college, told me not to worry about my grades, I was still adjusting.

As freshman year comes to a close, I realize the necessity to accept the fact that life does go on. Although it may seem that I mourn the close of freshman year, in actuality, I look forward to the years to come. However, this is only because upperclassmen have guaranteed that it only gets better.

TODAY AT A GLANCE

Stolen Monet back in museum

■ PARIS— The celebrated painting by Claude Monet that lent its name to the Impressionist movement was back on display Tuesday at the museum from which it was stolen in a daring holdup more than five years ago. "Impression, Soleil Levant" (Impression, Sunrise) suffered no damage. The paintings were stolen Oct. 27, 1985, by an armed gang of seven who forced a guard and visitors to lie on the floor while they carried off the art works.

Police announced cocaine seizure

■ BOGOTA, Colombia — More than 10 tons of cocaine believed linked to the Medellin cartel was discovered by narcotics police in the nation's largest single drug seizure, authorities announced Tuesday. The cocaine, which was ready for shipment to the United States and Europe, was found hidden underground in a ranch near the town of Buenos Aires. A newspaper quoted unnamed police sources as saying the cocaine was worth $2 billion. So far this year, Colombian police have seized about 31 tons of cocaine. Last year, about 44 tons of cocaine were seized.

NATIONAL

US aids refugees in North Iraq

■ WASHINGTON— The Bush administration said Tuesday that U.S. military forces will begin moving in and out of northern Iraq, assisting Kurdish refugees fleeing the army of Saddam Hussein. The State Department estimates that as many as 1,000 Iraqi refugees are dying from disease each day along the Turkish border. Fitzwater said the United States had sent nearly 8,300 people, primarily military, to the Turkish border to aid in the relief effort.

Father given probation

■ ORLANDO, Fla. — The first person convicted under a 1989 state law designed to prevent accidental shootings of children has been sentenced to six months probation and community service. James Kallok was convicted two months ago on a misdemeanor charge of leaving a loaded firearm within easy access of a minor. His teen-age son accidentally shot a friend last year while playing with a gun he had found in a closet. Kallok was sentenced and ordered to give six speeches to community groups about keeping guns away from young people. Kallok's then-14-year-old son, John, found a loaded .32-caliber pistol and accidentally wounded another boy in the head.

INDIANA

Indiana State President resigns

■ TERRE HAUTE, Ind. — Richard Landini, who has been president of Indiana State University since 1975, will step down on June 30, 1992. Landini is the university's eighth president, and his tenure is the third-longest in the institution's history. "Because of the major role Dr. Landini has played in the institution's history, finding a successor for him will be a challenge," Green said. Landini said that after giving much thought to his retirement, he and his wife decided it was time "to point our lives in new directions."

Media challenge of war coverage restriction fails

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge on Tuesday dismissed a lawsuit by news organizations that challenged the constitutionality of Pentagon rules governing media access to combat.

U.S. District Judge Leonard Sand said the media had the right to sue the government, but he ruled he did not have enough information to decide the case now that the Persian Gulf War was over.

"Prudence dictates that a final determination of the important constitutional issues at stake be left for another day when the controversy is more sharply focused," Sand said in a written decision granting the Defense

Department's request to dismiss the case.

Pentagon rules in the war against Iraq established pool coverage, restricted descriptions of combat and required military review of combat dispatches.

Sand said the case raised new and important questions about the relationship between the First Amendment and national security, especially about the role of American journalists in wars abroad.

But he said he couldn't decide the issues because he had no way of knowing what future military conflicts would bring.

"Who can say that during the next American overseas military operation some restriction on the number of journalists granted access at a particular time to a particular battlefield may not be a reasonable time, place and manner restriction?" Sand said.

The judge complained that the news organizations never responded when he asked for alternatives to the Pentagon regulations that they thought would be constitutional.

"Plaintiffs' only response was that the press be allowed unlimited, unilateral access," Sand said.

The lawsuit was filed on behalf of The Nation, Harper's, In These Times, Pacific News Service, The Guardian, The Progressive Magazine, Mother

Jones Magazine, The L.A. Weekly and The Village Voice.

Journalists who joined in the lawsuit were Sydney Schanberg, a columnist for Newsday; Michael Klare, defense correspondent for The Nation; and novelists E.L. Doctorow and William Styron, who wrote about the Gulf War for The Nation.

Franklin Siegel, an attorney with the Center for Constitutional Rights, which prepared the lawsuit, said he was reviewing the decision and would comment later.

Sand also dismissed a separate lawsuit brought by Agence France Presse, the French news service, which raised similar constitutional claims.

The lawsuit said the Pentagon's position that the rules were adopted for security reasons was a cover for the rules' true purpose — "to control and manipulate information available to the American public."

The complaint said the practices and the rules used in the war violated or threatened to violate the news organizations' rights to freedom of press and freedom of speech and association.

It said pool coverage violated the right to freedom of press and equal protection by "giving some reporters preferential treatment and access not accorded to others."

American Express Announces A Great New Travel Program.

Now students can get the Card and get 3 roundtrips on Continental Airlines, for only $129 or $189 each.

There's only one way to cover a lot of territory without spending a lot of money. And that's by getting the American Express® Card. It's the only card that offers an exciting new travel program exclusively for students—including three roundtrip certificates on Continental Airlines.

Just look at the map and pick the place you'd like to visit. If it's on your side of the Mississippi River, you can use a certificate to fly for only $129 roundtrip. Or, you can cross the Mississippi for $189 roundtrip.

You have your pick of more than 150 cities in the 48 contiguous states. And you can fly almost anytime—because there are no blackout dates. But you must make your reservations within 14 days of the day you leave. And the maximum stay is 7 days/6 nights and must include a Saturday night.

In addition to this great travel program, you'll also enjoy all the benefits of Cardmembership as well as other exclusive student privileges. They include a quarterly magazine filled with informative articles on summer jobs, careers, campus life. Plus valuable discounts from leading retailers.

But remember, there's only one way to get all this—and that's by getting the American Express Card. Just call us (have your bank address and account number on hand). What's more, with our special student offer, it's easier to get the Card now while you're still in school than it may ever be again.

So get the Card. And get ready to cover new territory on either side of our Great Continental Divide.

Indiana military bases may be closed in proposed cuts

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — One of a series of public hearings on proposed military base closings will be held next month in Indianapolis.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney's recommendations include major changes at Fort Benjamin Harrison in Indianapolis and Grissom Air Force Base at Peru, with other personnel shifts at the Naval Avionics Center in Indianapolis and the Crane Naval Weapons Support Center.

The May 24 meeting in Indianapolis will be one of eight such hearings the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission plans to conduct nationwide.

The eight-member, independent panel has until July 1 to decide whether to approve or amend Cheney's list before forwarding it to President Bush and Congress, who are required to accept or reject the package in its entirety.

Cheney's proposal would close 43 military bases and scale back 28 other installations.

No one has been named yet to testify at the hearings, but witnesses will likely include officials from communities surrounding the affected bases. Only one or two of the part-time commissioners will attend each session.

In addition to the hearings, at least one commissioner will visit each site scheduled to be closed, Kevin Kellems, press secretary to Sen. Richard Lugar, said Tuesday. Those visits have not been scheduled, he said.

Lugar had asked commission chair James Courter to hold one of the regional hearings in Indiana.

At the commission's first hearing Monday, Army Secretary Michael Stone suggested Fort Harrison was marked for closure because it could be done cheaper than other Army facilities.

higher than most other industrial employees.

Work rules determining crew sizes and miles traveled in an 8-hour shift are other stumbling blocks. In addition, management wants workers to start paying part of their health care premiums.

Three of the 11 unions involved had reached tentative settlements, but all 235,000 freight employees were expected to honor picket lines, even if more agreements were reached and just one union wanted to strike over the impasse.

Bargainers met virtually around-the-clock on Monday and continued marathon sessions on Tuesday before the talks collapsed.

Unions had two strike options — targeting all carriers simultaneously or beginning selective strikes in which workers would try to shut down one carrier in one region of the country on a specific day and another the next.

Selective, or hit-and-run strikes, would enable the unions to make their point but still possibly avoid a national emergency that would clear the way for Congress to intervene.

A four-day rail strike in 1982 effectively shut down the nation's rail system and stalled passenger trains around the country. At the time, officials estimated the walkout cost the U.S. economy up to $1 billion a day.

"We've got a very, very precarious economy that's just on its way coming back. We cannot afford to have that recovery interrupted by an unnecessary strike," Skinner said Tuesday.

McFather said a strike would be designed to bring the carriers back to the bargaining table.

"We're not doing this to affect the economy — We're not doing this to hurt the public," McFather said.

If a nationwide strike occurred, it was expected to immediately choke the flow of one-third of the nation's goods and idle as many as 550,000 other American workers who depend on train-delivered goods to complete their jobs.

Chrysler Corp. said in a statement, "Obviously, a rail strike of any length could result in massive closings. Our industry is already facing tough times, and this would be another blow which would slow our recovery."

Production and employment levels in auto, paper, lumber, steel, coal mining, glass production, plastics and chemical industries were expected to be hardest hit, administration officials said.

Thousands of train-riding commuters and Amtrak passengers could be stranded, too.

Though the unions involved work on freight lines, most Amtrak trains, and many commuter trains such as those in the Chicago area, share tracks with freight lines and therefore service would be disrupted.

Amtrak's busiest region, the Northeast corridor from Washington to Boston, would not be affected because Amtrak owns that track.

A key issue in the negotiations is how closely railroad workers' contracts should mirror a presidential emergency board's report issued in January. That study recommended yearly pay boosts for workers, but also said they should start paying part of their health cost premiums.

Unions were highly critical of the report, saying its pay scale was not high enough in light of a wage freeze in effect since 1988.

Balihuta wins grad award

By ALICIA REALE
News Writer

Arsene Mpatswe Balihuta, a Notre Dame doctoral candidate in economics from Uganda, has been named the first recipient of the Distinguished Graduate Student Award by the University's Alumni Association.

"The award was a pleasant surprise," Balihuta said. The award called for nominations from various graduate faculty, students and staff. "Because the nominations were open to all graduate and law students and given the large and diverse student population, it was a surprise to me that I was elected," he said.

The naming of the winner of the Distinguished Graduate Student Award follows the same criteria as the Distinguished Student Award for undergraduates, according to Chuck Lennon, executive director of the Alumni Association.

The nomination committee, chaired by Chau Le, assistant vice president of the Graduate School, included Sister Jean Lenz, assistant vice president of student affairs, and James Powell and Barbara Turpin, associate deans of the Graduate School. The committee sifts through the nominations submitted and selects a winner.

Balihuta came to the University in 1986 as a Fulbright scholar. He earned his master's degree in economics in 1988 and expects to receive his doctorate in May. He has served as president of the Graduate Student Union since 1988.

Balihuta is the founder and president of the Notre Dame African Association, which he organized in 1988. He also served as a member of the board of directors of the African Association of Michiana, a group of Africans living, working and studying in the Michiana area.

Last fall, when the Notre Dame African Association organized African Week, Balihuta coordinated the visit of Major General Garba, the secretary of the United Nations General Assembly. In addition, he organized a highly praised art exhibition.

Balihuta contributed to the expansion of computing at Notre Dame as the first manager of the LaFortune Computer Cluster. He is now a student consultant at the Information Resource Center, which is under the direction of the Office Of University Computing.

The award will be given annually to graduate students along with two other alumni awards: the Graduate Student Awards for Excellence in Teaching and the Graduate Student Award for Excellence in Research. This year's recipients of the other two awards have yet to be announced.

McDonald's begins waste reduction, recycling efforts

WASHINGTON (AP) — McDonald's Corp. announced on Tuesday a plan aimed at eliminating 80 percent or more of the garbage created by its 8,500 fast-food restaurants across the nation.

The initiatives include the use of brown bags made of recycled paper, smaller paper napkins, recycling of behind-the-counter cardboard boxes, and the elimination of plastic cutlery wrappers where allowed by local health codes. And the company is trying out reusable coffee mugs, reusable coffee filters, and pump-style bulk condiment dispensers.

McDonald's, the world's largest food service organization, said also it is looking into replacing the plastic forks, spoons and knives with starch-based cutlery that could be composted. It also plans large-scale, soil-enriching composting of food and paper wastes on an experimental basis.

Parts of the plan have already been implemented, such as the switch last fall from polystyrene sandwich boxes to a thin-layered wrap. Before the changes were begun, McDonald's outlets sent 2 million pounds of garbage per day to incinerators and landfills in the United States.

The initiative was developed in collaboration with the Environmental Defense Fund, an environmental advocacy group, which set up a joint task force with McDonald's to scrutinize the company's trash.

Keith Magnuson, McDonald's director of operations development, said he was "somewhere between surprised and shocked," when he realized how much of the garbage produced at McDonald's restaurants could be reduced, reused, recycled or composted.

"It's entirely possible that we can divert more than 80 percent of our on-premises solid waste," Magnuson said in an interview. "That came as a great surprise."

The plan also has environmental goals other than waste reduction, such as converting to unbleached brown paper when possible, or to paper bleached with processes that don't use harmful chlorine.

Robert Langert, director of environmental affairs for the Perseco Co., the exclusive packaging purchaser for McDonald's, said it wasn't easy to abandon white carryout bags.

"The decision to go to a brown bag was very difficult," said Langert, one of four company representatives on the task force. "In focus groups we got more negatives than positives," he said, with people saying the brown bags seemed cheap and not as clean as they expected from McDonald's.

But once the bags were introduced in stores, along with an explanation of the environmental benefits, "what came out of the real customer opinions was 100 percent positive," Langert said.

Richard Denison, a senior scientist for EDF, said the McDonald's initiative could set a trend for the food service industry.

"They have a major role to play. They can serve as a catalyst," Denison said. "We felt if we could find solutions that would work for McDonald's, it would work for others."

Magnuson said the company does not know how much its plan will cost, but expects most of the changes it makes will break even or save money in the long run.

Terri Capatosto, director of communications, said McDonald's had no plans to promote the environmental policy to attract customers.

"We're not necessarily expecting to have a marketing edge," she said. "The majority of the things in the plan... the customer will never see."

The task force found that most of McDonald's trash comes from "behind the counter." One example is corrugated shipping boxes that can be recycled or replaced by reusable cartons.

For the remaining amounts of food and paper wastes generated at a McDonald's restaurant, the company pledged to develop large-scale composting, which would convert the garbage into marketable soil enrichers.

A pilot test involving nine McDonald's outlets in Maine began last month.

McDonald's, founded in 1948 in San Bernardino, Calif., has more than 11,000 outlets in 54 countries around the world. In the United States, more than 18 million people visit a McDonald's each day. One in every 15 working Americans gets his or her first job at McDonald's.

book with the former dean and another member of the faculty of New York University School of Law.

Attanasio was graduated Phi Beta Kappa from the University of Virginia in 1976 and earned a J.D. from the New York University School of Law in 1979. He also holds a diploma from the University of Oxford and an LL.M. from Yale Law School.

Attanasio will become the director of the Institute on July 1. He plans to "consult with people associated with the Institute and members of the wider University community on ways the Institute can best serve the University community."

He said that he has some personal interest in Eastern Europe, the Soviet Union and structural reform in those places. "This is one of a number of directions in which I would like to see the Institute go," Attanasio said. Another area he would like the Institute to explore is conflict and dispute resolution.

"This is an interdisciplinary enterprise," Attanasio said. "There are many talented people with many areas of expertise." He said he would like to enhance the scholarly component but not to the exclusion of influencing public policy, a goal he has for the Institute.

Attanasio outlined some of the many challenges facing the Institute. One of these he called, "the new world order, as yet undefined." Other challenges are not all military related, Attanasio said, citing the environment as an example.

These problems may lead to opportunities, because they "vividly impress nations with the necessity of cooperation," he said. "As Father Hesburgh says, 'we all breathe the same air,'" Attanasio added.

According to Attanasio, 100 students with undergraduate concentrations and a significant group of graduate students are connected to the Institute.

There are also 14 international peace scholars who study at the Institute and live in a place called the peace house. "They have diverse backgrounds and cultures and exchange ideas," Attanasio said.

The Peace Institute "ought to be a place where people of all the various disciplines can come together as faculty and students to exchange ideas in the pursuit of a noble enterprise, the pursuit of peace," Attanasio said.

Gilligan is leaving the directorship and retiring from his faculty position as George N. Shuster University Professor and professor of law.

"As the Peace Institute's founding director, Jack Gilligan formulated a vision and translated it into a vital academic program," O'Meara said. "He conceived its unique emphasis, developed its structure and brought together an excellent faculty," O'Meara said.

A native of Cincinnati and a 1942 Notre Dame graduate, Gilligan became nationally known for his work in urban renewal and neighborhood organization. He was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives in 1964 and in 1970 was elected governor of Ohio. President Carter appointed him administrator of the Agency for International Development in 1975.

Gilligan said there are many things that make him proud: "that we have an Institute, that it came into being."

"This is the most comprehensive program of peace studies anywhere in the world," Gilligan said. "It is organized around 20 faculty fellows."

"There is a sliding group of 19-20 faculty fellows not compensated; they do it because of their interest in the program," Gilligan said. "It is unlike anything in the University."

Gilligan said he is proud of the quality of the students, especially in the graduate program and the international scholars. "You could write a small book on the qualifications of these students," he said.

"The key question is whether the University will give adequate financial support to the development of the program," Gilligan said. "The main source of revenue now is a three year grant."

"The University gives tuition waivers at the graduate level, but other than that there is no direct University support," Gilligan added.

Attanasio said that he is "privileged to follow after Gov. Gilligan. He gave the Institute a magnificent start, tremendous leadership and something which we can build on."

Gilligan said that Attanasio is "very bright, very able," and that he will be a "marvelous director."

Archbishop of Durban, Republic of South America, Denis Hurley speaks at a symposium on the second day of "One Hundred Years of Catholic Social Thought." He discussed the Church's role in the quest for freedom throughout the world.

Hurley

during the early 1900s when the lay apostolate realized that it was not just an extension of the hierarchy, but that it had its own job to do.

Hurley said this job, which flows from baptism and is more important than the ordained ministry, was emphasized as "consecrating the world" and "promoting the full value of freedom as an integral part of social doctrine."

Today it is the Latin American Church which has been leading the world through its liberation theology and its Christian base communities, according to Hurley.

It is this Latin American experience that molds a lesson for the rest of the world. "It (the lesson) is about freedom, that most precious of human attributes, often suppressed and easily abused," said Hurley.

"Freedom and rights go hand in hand," he added. "In a way the greatest human right is freedom to serve others."

In serving others, we are social beings and cannot survive outside society, said Hurley. Without this intense practice of community, Catholic public opinion cannot be created and maintained.

It took the Catholic Church a long time to come to terms with the modern understanding of freedom and its expression in political democracy, he added.

"The theology of religious freedom took longer. The Catholic Church saw itself and still sees itself as the true Church of Christ."

Today, however, the Church has relinquished all inhibitions about promoting the full value of freedom as an integral part of social doctrine.

The symposium was held at the Center for Continuing Education.

Lean, epic filmmaker, dies

NEW YORK (AP) — When film students, critics, historians and other buffs are asked to list the best movies ever made, 'David Lean's 'Lawrence of Arabia' appears with well-deserved frequency.

It was indeed the singular masterpiece in the illustrious career of the British filmmaker, who died Tuesday at age 83.

Compared to other leaders in the movie industry, his career outpouring may be considered by some to be well, lean — he made only 16 movies. But all are rare and exquisite jewels, each in its own special way.

'From the lovely "Brief Encounter," to the the heroic "The Bridge on the River Kwai," or the passionate "Doctor Zhivago." Lean's favorite of his own movies was "Lawrence of Arabia."

"His legacy is that he's the only filmmaker to make intelligent epics, and I really think our greatest narrative filmmaker," his biographer, Stephen Silverman, said Tuesday.

"He had been in declining health since returning home to England after the 1989 re-release of 'Lawrence of Arabia,'" Silverman said.

Lean had a keen eye for detail and strove for cultural accuracy.

Japanese host Soviets to end mutual animosity

TOKYO (AP) — Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev devoted his first day in Japan on Tuesday to chipping away at the mutual animosity that has kept Tokyo from sharing its immense wealth with its impoverished neighbor.

Briefly leaving behind economic and political woes at home, Gorbachev set out to woo the Japanese as he has done with Americans and Europeans. He is the first Soviet leader to travel to Japan.

He spent the day meeting with Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu, cheerfully chatting with Emperor Akihito and shaking hands with many Tokyo residents.

But a more serious tone is expected Wednesday in Gorbachev's parliamentary address. According to an advance text of the speech, Gorbachev will warn Japanese lawmakers that his nation needs help to avert turmoil and a return to dictatorship.

The text also contained promises to reduce the Soviet military presence in the region and suggests multilateral naval reductions.

"If we don't halt the disintegration of the state — of the economy, the law and relations between republics; if we don't support the new social processes in a peaceful framework — the country could fall into the chaos that gives birth to dictatorship," Gorbachev says in the text.

"Despair and hopelessness are a serious threat to the progress of civilization. Therefore, advanced countries help themselves by helping others."

Gorbachev also was reportedly planning to present business leaders with several trade proposals, including bartering Soviet fuel and raw materials for Japanese equipment to produce consumer goods, and revival of a long-stalled $2.5 billion oil project on Sakhalin, a Soviet island north of Japan.

"It is time to do everything so that our peoples... will never again drift into the disaster of enmity," Gorbachev said at a nationally televised court banquet Tuesday night. "On the threshold of a new century and millennium, we must take from the past only that which brings us together and enriches both sides."

He was referring to the huge task of healing the wounds left from World War II, when the Soviets seized four islands off Japan's northern coast and tens of thousands of Japanese prisoners of war died in Siberian camps.

In his banquet toast, Gorbachev offered condolences to the families of the Japanese prisoners who perished, but stopped short of a formal apology. He is expected to give the Japanese a list of the dead before he leaves Friday.

That follows the tone of reconciliation he set Monday in the Siberian city of Khabarovsk, where he visited the graves of Japanese who died while being held prisoner by the Soviets.

The territorial dispute remains a formidable obstacle. Japan demands return of all four islands — known to Soviets as the Kuril Islands and to Japanese as the Northern Territories — before it will sign a treaty formally ending World War II hostilities with the Soviets, thereby clearing the way for aid.

Gorbachev faces strong opposition at home to any territorial concessions.

Half of his three-hour summit meeting with Kaifu, which was described by a Japanese official as a "frank exchange of views," was devoted to the dispute, and the leaders agreed not to divulge any details until after further talks.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Japanese economic aid was not discussed.

In the meeting, Gorbachev said Soviet relations were advancing with nations throughout the West and that bilateral ties with Tokyo "must be improved substantially," another Japanese official said. The official also spoke on condition of anonymity.

In some areas, Soviet-Japanese relations are frozen and in other areas "life can hardly be seen," Gorbachev spokesman Vitaly Ignatenko quoted the Soviet leader as saying.

An invitation from Gorbachev for Kaifu to visit Moscow was immediately accepted, and the two leaders were shown frequently on television smiling, shaking hands and sharing laughs.

Tape of alleged Mafia inductions to be used in trial

BOSTON (AP) — A secretly recorded tape of an alleged Mafia induction ceremony can be used as crucial evidence against purported crime boss Raymond Patriarca and six of his lieutenants, a federal judge ruled Tuesday.

The tape is the first of an alleged mob initiation. On it, a convicted killer and three other men are heard allegedly swearing allegiance to the Mafia with blood drawn from their trigger fingers and pledging to murder any person who could pose a threat, including their own relatives.

U.S. District Judge Mark Wolf, who ruled the tape could be admitted into evidence, acknowledged its importance to the case.

"Absent the evidence intercepted (by a hidden microphone), there may not be a prosecutable case against some of the defendants, including Raymond Patriarca, the alleged 'boss' of the Patriarca family," Wolf said.

Patriarca's lawyer said he may ask the judge to reconsider the decision.

The ruling also sets a precedent that could affect the Hartford, Conn., trial of nine other men reputed to be linked to Patriarca. Their attorneys have raised similar objections to the secret tape. Jury selection in the case begins this week. U.S. District Judge Alan Nevas also was considering whether to allow the tapes into evidence.

Procedural motions are still being heard in Patriarca's case and no trial date has been set.

Seventeen Mafia members from Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts attended the supposed induction ceremony in October 1989 at a home in suburban Medford, the government says.

"I enter alive into this organization and leave it dead," each inductee swore in a ceremony spoken mostly in Italian, the FBI said.

Defense attorneys argued that when prosecutor Diane Kottmyer got a judge's authorization to secretly bug the house, she did so without revealing information about the imminent initiation.

The lawyers argued that the Fourth Amendment protects the rights of citizens to associate without government interference.

Wolf criticized Kottmyer for the lapse, but said that was not enough to force suppression of the tapes. He said permission for the bugs probably would have been given even if Kottmyer's knowledge of the ceremony was disclosed.

Patriarca's lawyer, Martin

Weinberg, said he planned to review the judge's 127-page decision "and make a determination whether to move for reconsideration."

Kottmyer said the court prohibited her from commenting on any aspect of the case.

The FBI learned in 1989 that four new members were to be inducted into the alleged Patriarca family, including Vincent Federico, then serving a sentence for murder in a Massachusetts prison.

Digger leaves behind legacy of highlights, high standards

After 20 years, Digger Phelps, the man who put Notre Dame basketball on the map is gone.

Digger guided the Fighting Irish basketball program through a transitional period in college athletics. Phelps, who wrote a letter to then-Irish football coach Ara Parseghian relating his dream to coach at Notre Dame, endured a rough first year with the Irish. The years from then on, however, were filled with successes and milestones. In his second season, Notre Dame reached the NIT semifinals. Five years later the Irish advanced all the way to the Final Four, only to fall to Duke when Duck Williams' 12-foot jumper rimmed out as time expired.

Memories of his score-long tenure are plentiful, most notable of which are a string of stunning upsets. The green uniforms worn by Dan Devine's Irish football team in its comeback over Southern Cal were Digger's idea, as was wearing fluorescent green jerseys in this year's Syracuse game (the jerseys were a gift from the manufacturer). Jubilant alumni still recount how Digger's pep rally speech inspired fans to chant "29 and 1" disrupting a 29-0 San Francisco team visiting the JACC in March of 1977. Notre Dame won that game—the last of the season—and advanced to the NCAA Tournament.

Memories aside, Phelps was a breath of fresh air, a flamboyant yet serious coach who strived to actualize the Notre Dame ideals of academics before athletics, as is evidenced by the perfect graduation rate of his players.

Phelps was not only good for Notre Dame, he was good for college basketball. He was a clean coach with a high profile, a man who was at the same time downhome and sophisticated, classy and wild. One need only think of the tailored suits—1970s leisure-style or Armani—green carnations, exotic print ties and smile-filled advertisements to realize that Digger, the coach and the person, was truly one of a very special kind.

Even when announcing his resignation, Digger maintained his pixie-like wit and smile, joking nonchalantly with reporters. Digger, the brash and vocal New Yorker, has taken up oil painting and plans to spend time with his family, who he praised for their 20 years of support. Furthermore, he has left the game and school he loves at the time of his choosing and on his own terms. One cannot help but wish him the best.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Mideast situation is a genderless issue

Editor's note: The following will be the last response published regarding this specific debate.

Dear Editor:

I will be relatively brief. I will not append seven signatures to enhance my credibility. I will imagine that Patrick D. Gaffney may find yet another way to come at my minority status. I will respond to his epistles of Feb. 12 and April 3, first and foremost, as a human being deeply and profoundly concerned with 1) the survival of the State of Israel, the homeland for a people who have suffered more prolonged persecution and homelessness than any other people in world history, and 2) rising anti-Semitism in the United States which the Anti-Defamation League attributes largely to pro-Palestinian activity and the Persian Gulf War.

That I am a female is irrelevant to my opinions on the Mideast, Kahlil Azar's comments at a January teach-in, and anti-Semitic rhetoric (I am aware that Azar is a Semite, but any English dictionary will reveal that anti-Semitism refers to prejudice toward, discrimination against, and persecution of Jews).

The response by Gaffney and his co-signers to my Feb. 5 letter ignored the issues I raised and, instead, perpetrated an ad hominem attack on my academic responsibility, as Professors Brooks and Bartky recently stated. Nevertheless, in his recent letter, Gaffney clearly felt the pinch of what he perceived to be an ad hominem attack on himself. If gender has any relevance at all, it may be that, when a "respected" female professor is so attacked, no damage has been done. For Gaffney, a male, to feel he has suffered the same attack is another story.

In fact, Gaffney's idea that there is some connection between gender (specifically, The Year of the Woman) and the crisis in the Mideast raises many questions. He notes that two women, Ghada Tahami and I, "have occasioned lively debate." Why is our gender noteworthy? Does this imply wonder that female opinion could generate thought? What is the possible connection between gender and the Arab-Israeli conflict?

Gaffney implies sexism on the part of Brooks and Bartky for a statement they made (March 8) which he reads as misidentification of Tahami as male. Clearly, Brooks and Bartky were concerned with ideas, not gender. I recall that Gaffney fussed when the same mistake was made by an earlier letter writer. Why the obsession with making gender an issue?

I do not wish to be gender-categorized in a genderless issue. I do not need to be told to listen carefully and prudently to others as though I were a child with no sense of the gravity of the moment. I would ask Gaffney, et. al.: Would you not listen carefully and act prudently if six million of your people had been "exterminated" in recent history?

What passion might you feel for the constantly threatened homeland of a people who, for centuries, had no safe place in the world? Would you not always respond thoughtfully if each day meant surmounting prejudice and surviving, finally in an academic community where colleagues would gang up and denounce you as irresponsible simply because your opinion differs from theirs?

I have prudently waited two months to respond. I doubt if Gaffney will contemplate the situation as long.

GARRY TRUDEAU

QUOTE OF THE DAY

'The public hungers to see talented young people kill themselves.'

Paul Simon

QUOTES, P.O. Box Q, ND, IN 46556

ND must focus on students' interests, Catholic character

Editor's note: The following is part two of a two part column.

The "academic community," external as well as internal, long ago assumed the authoritative role formerly played by the teaching Church in the life of Notre Dame. At the Land O'Lakes conference in 1967, the presidents of the leading Catholic universities, including Notre Dame, declared that, "To perform its teaching and research functions effectively, the Catholic university must have a true autonomy and academic freedom in the face of authority of whatever kind, lay or clerical, external to the academic community itself." The Land O'Lakes concept tends predictably toward an institutional renunciation of the duty to affirm religious truth.

Thus, in the fall of 1989, Notre Dame sponsored a public showing of a blasphemy of Christ, in the film "The Last Temptation of Christ." That event remains crucial in the history of Notre Dame. The University decided there that the First and Second Commandments were superseded by the authority of the secular establishment. As Professor Dean Porter, Director of the Snite Museum, said, "when (the museum) was built nine years ago, we decided if a film could be seen at the Museum of Modern Art, it could be seen here" (South Bend Tribune, Sept. 29, 1989, p. C1, col. 1).

The X-rated "Desperate Living" and "The Cook, the Thief, His Wife and Her Lover" have since been shown at the Snite. The latter classic, originally rated X, was released unrated and helped precipitate the new NC-17 rating system. It was described by critic Michael Medved as a "putrid, pointless, and pretentious piece of filth." However, if the University is so unsure of itself that it cannot draw the line short of sponsoring a blasphemy of Christ Himself, X-rated films are small change; those latter showings generated no protest. To sponsor such films is the politically correct thing to do, especially at a university in danger of being considered narrow-minded because it is Catholic.

A serio-comic example of Notre Dame's tendency to endorse almost anything that is "politically correct" is the Academic Council's recent prescription for gender inclusive language. Only in the eighth decade of the twentieth century did academics ever discover that such words as "he," "man," and "mankind" caused women to feel inferior. Now, Dean Eileen Kolman of the Freshman Year of Studies believes "it would be an absolute shame if any student leaves Notre Dame in 1991 without knowing that exclusive language is simply no longer acceptable" (The Observer, March 7, 1991).

More likely, Notre Dame graduates (will they have "bachelor's" degrees?) will discover in the world outside academe a less than unlimited tolerance for the neologisms and ambiguities generated by the ideological corruption of language. Meanwhile, unfortunately, linguistic vandals will mutilate some treasures of English literature, including the Bible. Thus, "An Inclusive Lectionary," produced by the National Council of Churches, describes God as "the motherly father of the Church who comes forth" and has St. John, in 3:16, tell us, "For God so loved the world that God gave God's only Child, that whoever believes in that Child should not perish but have eternal life."

Charles E. Rice
Guest Columnist

When the Faculty Senate bestirred itself to pass the gender resolution, Professor Paul Conway, chairman of the Senate, said, "We're 10-15 years behind the others [other universities] in making this resolution" (The Observer, Feb. 6, 1991). What next? And will we ever catch up? While the gender policy represents a minor and probably transitory feminoid triumph, it does manifest the other-directed bent of an institution unsure of its heritage and beliefs.

The pursuit of PC can sometimes take priority even over the health of students. An example is the muted policy of the University on homosexual activity. The University commendably refuses to officially recognize homosexual groups on campus. The University also rightly emphasizes that the objective wrongness of homosexual activity does not warrant unjust discrimination against persons who may have homosexual tendencies. Nor does the objective wrongness of the act confer a license to judge the subjective culpability of anyone.

Homosexual activity, however, is the main factor in the onset of AIDS. One could reasonably think that if the University is going to say anything to its students on the homosexual issue, it ought to include a demand that homosexuals refrain from the objectively wrong behavior which is a menace to themselves and potentially to the health of the community. I have yet to see any such public insistence from any office of the University.

See, for example, the statements of Campus Ministry and of 39 members of the Notre Dame community on National Coming Out Day (The Observer, Oct. 11, 1990). Justice to the homosexuals as well as to the rest of the community requires an insistence on the duty to refrain from homosexual activity. Political correctness demands instead an emphasis on the evil of homophobia and on the duty of others to exercise tolerance and compassion. And that is predominantly what we hear on the subject.

The two "Research University" signs can be fairly regarded as a public acknowledgment of the other-directed pursuit of PC which has been on the Notre Dame agenda for decades. The research preoccupation and other PC examples arise from good faith judgments made by administrators and others who act in what they see as the best interest of Notre Dame. My criticism is of policies, not persons.

We ought to ask, however, where this PC trend is leading us in educational and spiritual as well as financial terms. We have lost sight of some basic realities: that undergraduate education is entitled to the primary focus at Notre Dame; that research is collateral, i.e., that Notre Dame exists mainly for the benefit of its students rather than of the government, industry, foundations or the publishing professors; that graduate education and attendant research are important to Notre Dame but that there, too, the interests of the students are paramount; that the Catholic character of Notre Dame entails a responsibility to help its students who are so minded to prepare for service to the community and the Church without having to incur prohibitive loans just to make it through college.

We need a recommitment to education in the tradition of Notre Dame, centered on the Congregation of Holy Cross, whose members founded and built this institution. In more recent years, regrettably, the Holy Cross priests have adopted, or acquiesced in, policies that have subordinated Notre Dame to the standards of the secular establishment. And they have relinquished the principal offices controlling academics, theology, student affairs and admissions. It is no reflection on the lay administrators to say that Notre Dame has lost much of its identity with none of those posts held by Holy Cross priests.

I hope, perhaps unrealistically, that Notre Dame will survive as a Catholic institution loyal to the Vicar of Christ and actively seeking the aid of the Mother of God. The pursuit of PC and of "research" greatness, however, is leading us in the opposite direction.

What matters, in truth, is not whether we are favorably regarded at Princeton, Yale, the National Organization for Women, or Beijing. What counts is the service we provide for our students. Holy Cross priests are six of the 12 Fellows of the University. It is time for them to return this institution to its historic mission, which is the education of students in the Catholic tradition.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Student targets poor publicity as reason for lack of participation at SMC/ND dinner

Dear Editor:

How much participation in the recent Saint Mary's/Notre Dame Freshwoman's dinner did the Freshman Board expect with such poor publicity about the event ("Sparse participation impairs goals of SMC/ND Freshwoman's dinner," The Observer, April 10)? On the entire Saint Mary's campus, I saw one poster announcing in the event. This poster was on the bulletin board by the steps in the dining hall (LeMans side). The poster itself was drab (the information was printed in dark letters on white posterboard with no graphics) and was hung in a poor location.

The signs concerning the recent Saint Mary's Freshman Formal were in great contrast to this poster. Formal signs were posted everywhere on campus—on practically every door, mirror and wall in sight—and were printed on light blue paper with a large graphic in the center, which made them very eye-catching.

Since the Freshman Boards are so concerned about the relations between women at the two schools, it is ironic that the formal (exclusively a Saint Mary's event) was so highly publicized while the dinner (a joint Saint Mary's/Notre Dame event) received virtually no publicity, at least on Saint Mary's campus.

I do not know how much publicity the dinner received on Notre Dame's campus, but when I asked a friend of mine from Notre Dame to come for the dinner, she responded that she had not heard anything about it. Before criticizing the poor participation of Saint Mary's and Notre Dame freshmen at a joint event, the Freshman Boards should evaluate to what extent their classmates have been informed about the event.

Ignorance perpetuates environmental problem

Dear Editor:

I find it particularly disturbing that several Saint Mary's students find it necessary to feed the squirrels that live on this campus. This may not seem like a serious problem, however, since when has any animal's diet included cereal, chips, or ice cream cones?

I suppose that the girls who do partake in feeding the squirrels with food from the dining hall don't realize that soon, come summertime, these animals will have to find their own food. Their ecosystem has been disrupted by the ignorance of a "smarter" species—the human being. This is a perfect example of the ignorance that is often the root of many larger (or smaller) environmental problems.

But is it ignorance that has perpetuated the problem? Or do these girls actually think that since small rodents eat nuts and berries, that this includes "Crunch Berries?" It is cruel to feed the squirrels. Sure, they are "cute" but it is true, they can exist in their natural environment without the aid of sugar-coated preservatives.

Both the administration and the Marriott Corporation have failed to even address the problem. But perhaps inhumane treatment of animals is not something that concerns them? Nevertheless, feeding the squirrels is a problem that needs to be stopped. These animals do not need to be fed. These animals can forage on their own and survive without our food.

Minoso deserves Fay Vincent's support to play in sixth decade

Dear Editor:

Preventing Minnie Minoso from playing in a single game in 1990 or 1991 so that he could become the only six-decade professional baseball player is dumb, stupid and an insult to real baseball fans.

The Commissioner of Baseball should realize that Minoso had, and has, more heart and competitive spirit than all of the .208 hitters that get paid millions and go to arbitration requesting more money. The Commissioner felt that it would "trivialize the game" to let Minnie Minoso play. Come on, Commissioner Vincent!

If you took a poll of all baseball fans in the U.S. and asked, "Would you like to see Minnie Minoso pinch run one time in the major league today?", I feel confident of the answer—and I'll bet—oops (no wagering allowed) that Minnie would get a standing ovation and that parents would be able to say to their daughters and sons, "He's a real ballplayer." By the way, Minnie would touch up on third and score on a fly ball with less than two outs, even today.

Live, from New York, it's...

Lectures trace the legend of Saturday Night Live throughout the years

By MEREDITH McCULLOUGH
Accent Writer

WARNING: This "is about people—highly creative and consciously eccentric people... who were operating under extreme pressure... The effects on the psyche of major stardom, though a part of popular legend, are underestimated... Keep this in mind." -Doug Hill and Jeff Weingrad.

On October 11, 1975, the National Broadcasting Company (NBC) made television history, when it launched Saturday Night Live, a program Keppler Associates described as "a potent blend of innovative comedy, irreverence and occasionally tasteless satire."

On April 18, 1991, Doug Hill and Jeff Weingrad, coauthors of the best seller "A Backstage History of 'Saturday Night,'" will retell that dynamic history to Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students in a riveting performance that Time magazine dubbed "better than reruns."

Hill and Weingrad have been brought to Notre Dame's Center for Continuing Education to "recount the tumultuous history of the show from its beginnings as an outlaw program produced by an unruly band of comedy underground renegades through its evolution into a comedy institution," according to Keppler Associates.

Armed with 40 minutes of film clips, which are not available anywhere else, these two talented speakers will be on hand to fill students in on what happened behind the scenes— to reveal such mysteries as why:

- Garrett Morris rarely appeared as a leading man in sketches.
- Eddie Murphy almost always did.
- Chevy Chase was resented by the cast.
- Bill Murray once punched out Chevy five minutes before air time.
- Dan Aykroyd trashed a wall on the 17th floor of the NBC Building.

- John Belushi disliked Lily Tomlin.
- John Belushi disliked Chevy Chase.
- John Belushi disliked "the Bees."
- For many weeks, the NBC censor had trouble sleeping.

In their presentation, Hill and Weingrad will cover the same areas they discussed in their book which was praised by the Gannett News Service for "the willingness to name names— to say who was taking drugs, who was trying to upstage who, to tell what money people were making."

The Baltimore Sun added, "For someone who has followed TV, or the show, or its stars, it is unflaggingly absorbing, frequently fascinating and occasionally amazing."

According to Hill and Weingrad, Saturday Night Live, "SNL" or "the show" as the program was more affectionately called, began somewhat vaguely.

In "Saturday Night," they describe how once the show was scheduled to air Lorne Michaels, the youthful producer, told his staff, "Do anything you want." He did, however, "lay down some ground rules:" No Carol Burnett. "There will be more integrity and respect for writing here," he said.

Once the show got on its feet it began to grow— in popularity and personality. Each performer brought something different to "Saturday Night Live" which resulted in "battles the show waged with network executive and censors, and the chaotic whirls of rewrites, tantrums, and rivalries among the cast members."

On Thursday at 8 p.m. in the auditorium of the Center for Continuing Education, Hill and Weingrad will explore the aspects of "Saturday Night Live" that made the show a television legend. Tickets are $3 and will be sold at the LaFortune information desk.

"A Backstage History of 'Saturday Night Live'" is sponsored by the Student Union Board.

Send Off to 'affirm service' for student summer volunteers

By STEVE TANKOVICH
Accent Writer

Service is a vital part of life here at Notre Dame/Saint Mary's, and many students choose to volunteer for a summer or a year after graduation. In recognition of their commitment to service, the Center for Social Concerns is sponsoring a Volunteer Send-Off service for the students, their families, and anyone else who is interested in showing their support for the students.

This is the second year for the Send-Off. The idea behind it is that it helps to "affirm service," according to Mary Ann Roemer, director of senior/alumni programs at the CSC. "There aren't enough vehicles for supporting service," says Roemer.

'There are doctors, lawyers, and a variety of other professionals who do service.'

There are doctors, lawyers, and a variety of other professionals who do service. These people integrate service into their profession. "This Send-Off helps people to see how service can be integrated into one's life," Roemer adds.

Last year, talks by former law student and year-long volunteer Irene Loftus and by President Malloy were highlights of the program. There was also a reading with a reflection and a candle lighting service. This year's service promises to be as equally impressive a program.

Jay Caponigro, a senior who will volunteer this summer in Spokane, Washington, was able to assist with and attend last year's service. "It was a useful and touching ceremony," states Caponigro.

"It was useful in that the students were recognized by their peers and parents for their work... touching in that it was the culmination of four years growth and that it was the lifestyle of service," Caponigro added.

Caponigro and Roemer both are in agreement about the importance of the Send-Off to allow the parents to learn more about and show their support for their son's or daughter's experience. "It was very healthy for the students to see the support of the parents," Caponigro stated.

Students in the program are planning to work with a variety of different organizations. Some of these include the Holy Cross Associates, the Jesuit Volunteer Program, the Peace Corps, Habitat for Humanity, and the Lutheran Volunteer Corps. They will be travelling to such diverse locations as Chile, Spokane, Washington, Chicago, Illinois, and Phoenix, Arizona.

'It was useful in that the students were recognized by their peers and parents for their work... touching in that it was the culmination of four years growth.'

Seniors who are volunteering for a year or summer of service after graduation should register for the Volunteer Send-Off at the CSC and give their parents' address so that invitations can be mailed to them. Off campus students reading this article should be doubly aware about registration, as there are no hall service commissioners to give them further reminders.

'The Senior Solution' offers alternative to formal

By AL PISA
Accent Writer

As a senior, you are faced with a problem.

Senior Formal is quickly approaching but you're not going because you just can't afford it. You start to get depressed when you think about being stuck on campus for the weekend along with the rest of the class is in Chicago. A group of seniors, along with the Office of Campus Ministry, have come up with an answer to your problem, and they call it "The Senior Solution."

"The Senior Solution" is an off-campus senior dinner/dance that will be held Friday night at St. Hedwig's Memorial Hall from 7 p.m. to midnight.

The idea for the dinner/dance first came about when a group of off-campus seniors expressed their concern to Father Tom McDermott, a member of the Office of Campus Ministry, about the high price of the Senior Formal.

"One senior said he wished there was some alternative for people who couldn't go to Senior Formal. The more we talked about it, the more we thought, 'why can't there be?'" said McDermott. McDermott explained that he got involved with the planning of the dinner/dance because, "... at times things can become too glitzy and expensive and that's not necessarily the key to having a good time. This dinner/dance will be a lot of fun while not costing much."

For only $25 a couple, "The Senior Solution" offers a sit down, family style dinner of chicken, mashed potatoes and gravy, and Polish sausage along with desserts.

Beer and wine will be served and the campus band Jester will provide the entertainment for the night. The organizers of the dinner/dance want to emphasize that the purpose of the night will be to give those who couldn't make the Prom the chance to have a good time in a more relaxed style.

So, if you haven't purchased a Senior Formal bid but want to have one more memorable time to add to the memories of your senior year, it's not too late. Tickets for "The Senior Solution" are still available from either McDermott, or off-campus presidents Mark Bettencourt and Steve Leinenweber.

Me and Paul down by the schoolyard

Paul Simon performs in concert at the ACC, with one of his many international backup musicians, who represent South Africa, Peru, Brazil, and Botswana, among other countries.

Paul Simon performs old classics along with new innovations at the ACC

By GERALDINE HAMILTON
AND AMY MILTKO
Accent Writers

It was clear from the first strains of "Obvious Child" that the audience at the Joyce ACC was in for an inspiring performance by Paul Simon last night.

The crowd that gathered to see the South Bend contingent of Paul Simon's Born at the Right Time Tour consisted of old and young fans, yet all were equally awed by the spectacular light show that highlighted the energy and enthusiasm of Paul Simon and his band members.

At times there were as many as fifteen band members on the stage. There were four percussionists and a drummer, three horn players, three back-up singers, three guitarists, a bass player and a keyboardist. The band members were from all over the world. Some of the countries represented were South Africa, Peru, Brazil, Botswana as well as the United States. As is characteristic of Paul Simon's newer music, the international mix of band members added to its unique dimension.

In the opening set of the concert Paul Simon performed songs mainly from his two most recent releases, "Graceland" and "Rhythm of the Saints." The most memorable of which were, "Days of Miracle and Wonder," "Born at the Right Time," "Graceland" and "You Can Call Me Al."

Simon surprised us by also singing many songs from the Simon and Garfunkel days. The old songs were often played with a new twist because of the more diverse sounds that the larger, international band were capable of creating.

Among the old favorites he covered were "Bridge Over Troubled Water" and "Me and Julio Down by the Schoolyard." Although the new songs have a great beat and an exciting new sound, many of the audience seemed to hold to the older songs as the true classics.

Much to the delight of the audience Simon performed three encores. He played six songs in all, the most memorable of which were "The Boxer," "Sound of Silence," and a new rendition of "Cecilia" that unfortunately left some fans longing for the old version.

The encores were undoubtedly the high point of the show. Even after the third encore the cheering crowd was still calling for more, and when they finally brought the house lights on the fans were still a little bit reluctant to admit that Paul Simon's remarkable performance was over.

In the second encore, as an introduction to "Sound of Silence," Simon made sure to tell us that this was his third visit to the University of Notre Dame. In his third and final encore Simon stated that performing yet another song was his pleasure. But we must say, and we're sure most would agree, that the pleasure was all ours.

Monkman finds opportunity in Air Force program

By ELIZABETH VIDA
Accent Writer

As all pre-professional majors know or will soon find out, medical school is expensive, with tuition alone surpassing $20,000 in most cases.

Any scholarships that cover or even defray the enormous expense of becoming a doctor are a big help. An option open to pre-meds is the Health Professions Scholar Program, offered through both the Air Force and the Navy.

The Scholar Program, which is separate from ROTC, is a full, four year scholarship to a given medical school, including tuition, board, and a stipend for food and extra costs. Approximately seven pre-professional seniors at Notre Dame have been accepted into the Program this year. The average GPA for accepted seniors is a 3.6, and the average MCAT score is a 61 on the old MCAT scale of 90.

One of this year's scholarship recipients is Lisa Monkman, a science pre-professional major from Washington. "I had known about the Health Professions Program since before my freshman year," Monkman said. "I applied to the Air Force Program before Christmas, and found out I had been accepted the first Thursday back from break. The next day I was commissioned."

At this point, Monkman has been accepted at the medical schools of Creighton and University of Vermont, and is waiting to hear from the University of Washington.

She was sworn in to the Air Force as a Second Lieutenant, the same rank ROTC students receive upon graduation from Notre Dame. After medical school, she will be promoted to captain.

For Monkman, the program begins this summer. A forty-five day crash course in basic training awaits her in San Antonio, all part of the requirements for a Health Professions Scholar spelled out in an eight page contract. The summer after her sophomore year, Monkman begins rotations, interning at different Air Force hospitals and gaining valuable experience.

"After graduation from medical school, different paths can be taken in the Program", said Monkman, depending on whether a graduate wants to specialize in a field of medicine.

Because she wants to be a family practitioner, however, Monkman will do her residency at an Air Force base hospital, offering medical services to the families of servicemen. "Doing residency with the Air Force is good because it offers much better pay than civilian residency," Monkman added.

Lisa Monkman is congratulated by her rector, Sister Patricia Clark, on the occasion of her acceptance of the Air Force Health Professions Scholarship.

After her residency, Monkman owes four years of medical service to the Air Force or Navy. Beyond that, she is not sure of what lies ahead. For the near future, however, she can state with confidence, "I think it's going to be a great opportunity."

Blues, Oilers advance in NHL playoffs

The St. Louis Blues and Edmonton Oilers advanced in the NHL playoffs with dramatic victories in their respective division semifinals on Tuesday night.

The Blues wrapped up their Norris Division series in seven games by beating the Detroit Red Wings 3-2. The Blues became only the eighth team in NHL playoff history to come back from a 3-1 deficit.

The Oilers, meanwhile, beat Calgary 5-4 in overtime to win their first-round Smythe series.

Blues 3, Red Wings 2

Brett Hull's breakaway goal snapped a tie late in the second period as the Blues completed their remarkable comeback.

In addition to Hull's league-leading eighth goal of the playoffs, Dan Quinn and Rich Sutter also scored and Adam Oates had two assists for the Blues.

The last team to come back from a 3-1 deficit was last year's Edmonton Oilers, who defeated Winnipeg en route to their fifth Stanley Cup in seven years.

Jimmy Carson scored an unassisted goal with 7:33 left when defenseman Garth Butcher fell down and lost the puck to make the finish interesting after the Blues had taken a 3-1 lead.

A delayed offside call also nullified an apparent game-tying goal by Detroit center Steve Yzerman with 44 seconds to go.

Smythe Division

Oilers 5, Flames 4, OT

Esa Tikkanen scored his third goal of the game at 6:58 of overtime to lift Edmonton over Calgary, capping a dramatic NHL playoff series.

With the Oilers reeling under a continued Calgary assault, the pesky Finnish forward scored his third goal of the game. He also had an assist in the game.

The defending Stanley Cup champion Oilers fought back from a 3-0 deficit in the first period, tying the score by the end of the second and going ahead in the third on a goal by seldom-used Soviet forward Anatoli Semenov.

But a goal by Calgary's Ron Stern with two minutes to play in the third period sent the game into overtime, an appropriate conclusion to a series that wowed hockey fans across Canada.

Digger

ing back tears. "Thanks to the greatest group of players anywhere, my dream has come true."

I was there for most of the best of Digger's Double Decades; from 1976-81. I covered those games for this newspaper. I wrote about the big wins, the dumb losses. I usually gave Digger more credit than he deserved, but only, I assured myself, to balance the unfair criticism I believed he sometimes received.

'Digger Phelps only wanted two things from his profession—to coach at Notre Dame and to bring home a national championship. That the latter never happened must not . . . detract from what is remembered about Digger's time at Notre Dame.'

I praised him for his halftime speech during a Notre Dame-Marquette game when the Irish trailed by 14 points in another must-win game. I stood in a corner of the locker room, waiting for an eruption that was sure to come. There was none.

"Hey," he said calmly, "you got 20 minutes to play and you're only seven baskets down. You ARE the better team. Now go prove it."

He was the last one to leave the locker room, except for me.

"Pretty calm," I suggested. He just winked and smiled.

Forty minutes later, when we came back to the locker room with a comeback victory, Digger winked in my direction again.

"Whatever it takes," he said, hardly containing a smile.

Let it be known, however, that he was not always so reserved. There were times—halftimes, times out, practice sessions, after-practice sessions—when he would scream so loud or berate a player with such apparent venom that you wondered why the target of his anger tolerated it.

Then, when he was done, when the message was delivered, he would wink at someone, usually someone he knew, just to let someone know that it was not for real, that he was not angry, that it was still just a game and that—

"Hey, look, I'm not REALLY like this," he wanted you to know. "I'm just trying to get everything I can out of this player, this situation, this team..."

The private times with Digger seemed to reinforce that.

The midnight flight from Raleigh, North Carolina after a tough loss to NC State. Relaxed, unwound, a philosophical Digger did not want to talk about basketball.

"Hey, Toohey," he yelled to the team's chaplain, Father William Toohey, sitting a few rows up on the chartered flight. "Hell of a homily tonight. I liked that stuff about inner strength."

The wink. "Where'd you steal it from, Toohey, the Pope?"

Father Toohey, one of Digger's closest friends, was not to be outdone.

"No, Digger," was Toohey's deadpan response. "I stole it from Al McGuire, the same guy you steal your best lines from."

Everyone laughed, Digger hardest of all.

Several months later, after Bill Toohey's sudden death, Digger and I remembered our mutual friend.

"What a guy," he said after he served his friend as pallbearer at the funeral. "No ego, no loud mouth, just a soft, quiet message that helped people understand a little bit about life."

In his own way (never, however soft, nor quiet) Digger had a similar effect on people around him. Like the Friday afternoon he called me and asked what I was doing at eight the next morning.

"It's Saturday, I'll be sleeping," was my unimaginative response.

He invited me to Logan Center with him to play basketball with handicapped children.

'A Notre Dame Man is someone who cares passionately about things that need caring about . . . who refuses to accept things that are wrong, even though accepting them would be easier . . . Someone like Digger Phelps.'

So I went. He played, I watched. He signed autographs, posed for pictures, talked to every kid and every family and it was noon when we were finished. No newspapers, no television cameras, no publicity, no credit.

"Hey, I got it lucky," he said on the way back to campus. "I'm healthy, my family is healthy, we're doing OK. What you get, sometimes, you gotta give back."

For many years Notre Dame and Digger had a give and take relationship. Notre Dame gave him fame and fortune, a platform to speak from, and, quite frankly, a lifetime's ability to earn a much-better-than-good living.

In return, Digger gave back a sense of pride in knowing that nothing that happened on his side of the ACC was illegal, or unethical or potentially embarrassing to those of us who care about such things. He gave us memories, 'moments,' and the very best years of a life and a career during the which there was never one second that any of us had to wonder whether he wanted to be somewhere else.

For you can be sure of this: Digger Phelps only wanted two things from his profession—to coach at Notre Dame and to bring home a national championship. That the latter never happened must not, in any way, tarnish or somehow detract from what is remembered about Digger's time at Notre Dame.

*"Who's a man? He's a man!
He's a Notre Dame Man!"*

-old Notre Dame cheer

You would think that somewhere in Webster's Unabridged that there would be a definition of such an oft-used phrase.

Notre Dame Man.

With all due respect to Webster (and to the women of Notre Dame who must allow me to use the phrase understanding it's generic application) I would like to offer a definition of my own.

A Notre Dame Man is someone—not necessarily a student or alumnus—who loves the place and knows that it is special. Someone who takes what good the place has to offer and gives back anything it asks.

A Notre Dame Man is someone who cares passionately about things that need caring about. Someone who refuses to accept things that are wrong, even though accepting them would be easier. Someone who yells sometimes and fights sometimes and cries sometimes and is not afraid to do any of those things when he feels a need to. Someone who doesn't always win or even come close, but who knows instinctively that trying is what counts.

Someone Notre Dame is proud of.

Someone like Digger Phelps.

You can say many things about Macintosh.

But "I can't afford it" is no longer one of them.

You can talk about how simple the Apple® Macintosh® computer is to use. Or how it can think the way you think. Or how compatible it is with other computers.

But think again when the word "expensive" comes to mind. Because it's just not true any more.

Introducing the Macintosh Classic® computer. It's the most affordable Macintosh, yet it has all the capabilities you need to handle basic applications, such as word processing and spreadsheet analysis. The Classic is a completely integrated Macintosh system. Its monitor, keyboard, mouse and system software are all included, as are extras you might not expect—such as built-in networking and the Apple SuperDrive™ disk drive, which lets the Classic read from and write to MS-DOS, OS/2, and ProDOS® files.

Stop in today. We'll show you how it's possible for nearly anyone to afford a Macintosh. Comfortably.

Patriots continue negotiations with Ismail

(AP) — The New England Patriots talked contract with Raghieb "Rocket" Ismail Tuesday while continuing to suggest they might deal the first pick in the NFL draft for the right price.

Sam Jankovich, the Patriots' new president, met with Ed Abram, the agent for Ismail who is reportedly seeking a $3 million a year contract. Ismail reportedly has been offered $6 million over two years to sign with the CFL's Toronto Argonauts.

"We're making a little progress," Jankovich said. "I feel very good about where we are and where we're going. We're continuing to make every effort to sign him."

The suspense conceivably could continue right up to the time commissioner Paul Tagliabue opens the draft at noon EDT Sunday.

The Patriots and Abram remain apart on a deal for Ismail, the first high-profile player handled by the agent and his "Team Rocket." The $3 million average deal he is seeking would be far beyond the $11.6 million over six years that Jeff George got last year from Indianapolis.

One agent who represents more than 50 NFL players said Tuesday that Abram would be making a mistake if he allows Ismail to sign with the Argonauts.

"In the long term, going to Canada would be a mistake, even if you get a little less money here," the agent said. "What are you going to tell the players you want next year? That you took your first major client to what is basically a minor league?"

Jankovich said the Patriots were exploring several options, including a trade; taking Ismail even if he's not signed, or taking another player with the first choice, probably Notre Dame cornerback Todd Lyght.

"You never say never," he said. While Jankovich didn't identify teams, sources said New England has talked with Atlanta, which has two first-round draft choices. Some football executives don't envy New England's position.

That's because while Ismail is clearly the most talented player available, he's not what's known as "a franchise player" in the strictest sense — someone around who a 1-15 team like the Patriots can rebuild. For while he averaged 14.4 yards each time he touched the ball at Notre Dame, he only got it 8-10 times a game as a receiver, returner and occasional running back.

Conversely, the first-round picks in the last two drafts, George and Troy Aikman of Dallas, are quarterbacks, whose career will span a decade or more barring injury. That gives the Cowboys and Colts more time to fill in bodies around them.

"If we felt that way, we wouldn't be doing this," Jankovich said. "Field position is important. Anyone who can get you a lot of yards quickly is hard to find. You can catch a short pass and run it a long way."

Still, he acknowledged the other options.

Atlanta is the most likely candidate for a trade because it has the third and 13th picks. It received the latter as part of the deal that gave the Colts George's rights in return for Indianapolis' first-rounder last year plus tackle Chris Hinton and wide receiver Andre Rison.

Sources said the Patriots were seeking the Falcons' No. 3 overall pick, which they would probably use on Nebraska linebacker Mike Croel. In addition, New England would get the Falcons' second-round picks both this year and next.

Ewing takes over in extra period as Knicks down 76ers

NEW YORK (AP) — Patrick Ewing scored 38 points as the New York Knicks survived 25-percent shooting in the second half to defeat the Philadelphia 76ers 108-99 in overtime.

Ewing scored eight of the 13 points scored in overtime by the Knicks, who managed only 12 points in the final period.

Hersey Hawkins, who had 30 points, scored three of the four points in the extra session for Philadelphia.

Magic 113, Hawks 106

ORLANDO, Fla. — Scott Skiles and Otis Smith each scored 25 points Tuesday to lead Orlando to a 113-106 victory over Atlanta, damaging the Hawks' hopes of finishing fifth in the Eastern Conference.

Atlanta trailed Philadelphia by one game for the fifth position in the playoffs to the loss. The fifth-place team will play the fourth-place team, likely Milwaukee. The sixth-place team will draw the No. 3 finisher, probably the defending champion Detroit Pistons.

Spurs 128, Clippers 98

SAN ANTONIO — David Robinson had 24 points, 13 rebounds and seven blocked shots as the Spurs moved another game closer to their second straight Midwest Division title.

Robinson had 13 points in the game's first 10 minutes — matching the Clippers' team total to that point. He did not play in the fourth quarter. Sean Elliott added 17 points for the Spurs.

Rangers defeat Indians 3-1; Darwin notches first AL win

CLEVELAND (AP) — Brian Downing extended his torrid start with four hits and Kevin Brown got his first victory since last July as Texas spoiled Cleveland's home opener.

Downing went 4-for-5 with a double, three singles and one RBI, making him 8-for-10 since he was activated Saturday. He missed the opening of the season after fracturing a bone in his right hand during spring training.

Brown (1-1), who had yielded 18 runs in his previous 14 2-3 innings, had a no-hitter until Albert Belle singled with two outs in the sixth inning. The right-hander allowed three hits, struck out three and walked three in seven-plus innings.

Red Sox 5, Royals 2

BOSTON — Tom Brunansky, Wade Boggs and Mike Marshall hit solo homers as Boston ended a 22-inning scoring drought, beating Kansas City 5-2 Tuesday.

Danny Darwin (1-1) got his first American League victory in five years. He allowed five hits, including Kurt Stillwell's two-run homer in the eighth, struck out seven and walked one in 7 2-3 innings.

White Sox 4, Yankees 3

NEW YORK — Chicago remained baseball's only unbeaten team as Robin Ventura delivered a run-scoring double with two outs in the 10th inning Tuesday night to give the White Sox a 4-3 victory over the New York Yankees.

With two outs in the 10th, Lance Johnson singled off Steve Farr (0-1) and Ventura hit an opposite-field double to left.

Scott Radinsky (1-0) got the last out in the ninth for the victory and Bobby Thigpen picked up his fourth save by retiring the side in the 10th.

Melido Perez, making his first start of the season, held the Yankees without a hit until Alvaro Espinoza singled to center field with one out in the fifth inning.

Tigers 6, Blue Jays 2

DETROIT — Travis Fryman hit a three-run homer and Rob Deer, moved up to third in the batting order, broke a 1-for-18 slump with a triple and double Tuesday night as the Detroit Tigers defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 6-2.

Bill Gullickson (1-0) gave up two runs on four hits before leaving the game after 6 2-3 innings when he was hit on the pitching hand by Mark Whiten's line drive. Mike Henneman went 1 1-3 innings for his second save.

National League Cubs 4, Phillies 3

CHICAGO — Damon Berryhill singled home the winning run with two outs in the 13th inning as the Chicago Cubs beat the Philadelphia Phillies 4-3 Tuesday.

It was the fourth straight victory for the Cubs and the third straight loss for Philadelphia.

Mitch Williams (0-1) hit lead-off batter Shawon Dunston with a pitch to open the 13th. Dunston went to second on a sacrifice by winning pitcher Mike Bielecki (2-0), took third as Jose Vizcaino grounded out and scored the winning run on Berryhill's line single to left.

Darren Daulton of the Phillies struck out five times, one short of the major league record for an extra inning game.

Pirates 4, Mets 2

PITTSBURGH — Andy Van Slyke hit a tie-breaking two-run homer in the sixth inning and the Pittsburgh Pirates ended a three-game losing streak by beating the New York Mets 4-2 Tuesday night.

Randy Tomlin, making his first start of the season, survived solo homers by Hubie Brooks in the fifth inning and pinch-hitter Mark Carreon in the seventh to pitch seven innings for the victory.

Braves 10, Astros 4

ATLANTA — Terry Pendleton's three-run double keyed a seven-run eighth inning Tuesday night as the Atlanta Braves won at home for the first time this season, 10-4 over the Houston Astros.

Pendleton's hit to the gap in left-center field off reliever Curt Schilling broke the Braves' three-game home losing streak.

Chicago White Sox reliever Bobby Thigpen releases another strike. Thigpen earned his fourth save of the year last night against New York.

SMC tennis team crushes U. of Chicago at home

Special to the Observer

The Saint Mary's tennis team (4-3) defeated the University of Chicago 8-1 yesterday afternoon in a home match.

The Belles were led to victory by the tandem of Sarah and Ellen Mayer. Sarah, a senior, defeated Wana Jo Watson, 6-3, 6-1, at number-one singles, while her sister Ellen, a junior, beat Mary White, 6-2, 6-3, at number-two singles.

The siblings then teamed up at number-one doubles to crush the Watson and White duo, 6-0, 6-1.

All eight of Saint Mary's victories were in straight sets, including Marie Koscielski's 6-1, 6-1 thumping of Elana Thorpe at number-three singles.

The Belles next see action this afternoon at 3:00 p.m. at home against the University of Toledo.

Men's tennis readies for final home match vs. Michigan

By JENNIFER MARTEN
Sports Writer

The seniors on the Notre Dame men's tennis team will have several goals in mind when they play in front of a home crowd for the last time today in a dual meet with Michigan.

After not being invited to the NCAA tournament last year, the team and especially the seniors would like to receive an invitation this year.

Senior Ryan Wenger would like to see the team at the NCAAs this year. "It (making the NCAAs) has been a goal of the team all year after we came so close last year. I'll do whatever I can to help the team realize that goal," he said.

The team closes their home season this afternoon just a few days after capturing the Midwestern Collegiate Conference championship. The match holds special meaning for the seniors.

"It's kind of sad. I've had four fun years playing for Notre Dame with good guys and great coaches. It hasn't really hit me yet that this is my last home match," said Wenger.

Team captain Paul Odland expressed similar feelings about his last home match.

"It's bittersweet. We control our own destiny. There's no way we'll be ashamed of our season, because we worked hard all season," he said.

The 19th-ranked Irish will have to remain intense against the Wolverines, who come to Notre Dame ranked third in the region and sporting a 10-3 overall record. With a 16-10 record, the Irish are ranked second in the region just above the Michigan squad.

Wednesday's match holds several repercussions in terms of an invitation to the NCAA tournament. A strong showing against the respected Michigan team could improve the Irish's ranking and their chances of making the tournament.

Last year, the Irish, ranked 16th in the nation, were not invited, but the 17th- and 19th-ranked teams were. Notre Dame's schedule was cited as the reason. With a tougher schedule this year, the Irish are hoping to win a bid, but still standing in their way the rest of the season are Michigan, Wisconsin, and Ball State.

Barring any unexpected problems, junior David DiLucia, sophomores Ron Rosas, Mark

Schmidt, Chuck Coleman, Andy Zurcher, and Will Forsyth will be playing for the Irish. According to the Notre Dame coach Bob Bayliss, the group is "healthy and ready to go."

They will most likely face Michigan's David Kass, Dan Brakus, Scott Cuppett, John Karzen, Mitch Rubenstein, and John Ligon.

Kass will provide a formidable threat to DiLucia. Ranked in the top 10 as a singles player all year, Kass is one of the quickest players in the country. Brakus, one of the top players in Canada, could also cause problems for the Irish.

"Michigan is a powerful team, aggressive and very dangerous," said Bayliss. "We will have to be at our best to beat them."

Maleeva cruises into third round

■ HOUSTON — Defending champion Katerina Maleeva of Bulgaria used a steady serve to overcome erratic Christina Papadaki of Greece on Tuesday night in a second-round match of the $350,000 Virginia Slims of Houston.

Maleeva, seeded fourth, lost only one point on her serve in the first set and put 70 percent of her first serves into play as she beat Papadaki, 6-3, 6-2 in a 67-minute match.

"I didn't have much fun because all she did was miss," Maleeva said. "The second set she was missing so much but I was glad we had some battles at the end."

Sabo loses in divorce trial

■ LANSING, Mich. — Chris Sabo has struck out in the Michigan Court of Appeals.

The $1.25 million-a-year Cincinnati Reds third baseman must pay 10 percent of his salary, or $125,000, as alimony to ex-wife Catherine Sabo, the court ruled in a decision released Monday.

"Given the personal sacrifices she made for his now-successful major league baseball career, and the noticeable discrepancy between their earning potentials, the amount of alimony is fair and equitable," the three-judge panel unanimously ruled.

The Sabos met at the University of Michigan, where he played baseball and studied history while she was an education major. They were married in 1983, the year he dropped out of school after being drafted into the Reds' minor league system.

The couple separated six weeks after the 1988 season began, when Sabo filed for divorce. Circuit Judge Ronald Taylor ordered him to turn over 10 percent of his salary as alimony for five years, beginning in 1989.

On appeal, Sabo argued that his ex-wife was not entitled to alimony based on the short duration of their marriage and her own professional skills and college degree.

"If Chris Sabo were injured and lost his baseball job, his only other job skill would be 'flipping burgers,'" his legal papers said.

Drexler named NBA Player of the Week

■ NEW YORK — Clyde Drexler of the Portland Trail Blazers, who led his team to four straight victories that clinched the Pacific Division title last week, has been named NBA Player of the Week.

Drexler averaged 25.5 points, 7.5 rebounds and 5.0 assists as the Blazers stretched their winning streak to 14 games, second-longest in the league this season. He shot .623 from the field, including .455 from 3-point range.

Softball splits twinbill with Sycamores

Special to the Observer

The Notre Dame softball team (19-19) split a doubleheader with Indiana State yesterday afternoon, winning the opener, 4-0 and losing the nightcap, 6-1.

In the first game, junior Missy Linn pitched her fourth shutout of the season to raise her record to 9-10. Linn gave up only four hits and did not walk a batter.

The Irish gave Linn all the support she would need in the fourth inning when Megan Fay hit a two-run single to score Ronny Alvarez and Ruth Kmak. Notre Dame tacked on two insurance runs in the sixth off losing pitcher Heather Fuller (6-9), who was hurt by three Sycamore errors.

Indiana State (11-24) made up for its lack of offense quickly in game two, scoring two runs in the first. Connie Fiems and Lisa Watkins hit back-to-back doubles with two outs off Irish starter Carrie Miller (3-5), followed by Cindy Wilson's RBI single.

Notre Dame answered back in its half of the first when Laurie Sommerlad reached on a Sycamore error, took second on a wild pitch, advanced to third on another error, and scored on Rachel Crossen's two-out single.

Indiana State put the game away in the third, scoring two more runs off Miller. The Sycamores then tallied twice in the fifth off reliever Staci Alford to account for the final score.

The Irish are next in action today at 3:30 p.m. on the Notre Dame Softball Field, hosting a doubleheader with Saint Joseph's (7-11).

Magic dishes his way to NBA assist record

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — James Worthy first met Magic Johnson when the two were teenagers — Johnson was a star at Michigan State trying to convince Worthy to join him there.

Worthy didn't, attending North Carolina instead, but Johnson made an impression on him.

"He was a real nice person then, and that hasn't changed," Worthy said Monday night after Johnson, his teammate with the Los Angeles Lakers for nine seasons, surpassed Oscar Robertson as the NBA's assist leader. "He was raised the right way, his parents deserve a lot of the credit."

"He's such a giving person. That makes this record so appropriate."

Johnson, the conductor of "Showtime" for the Lakers since 1979, got 19 assists in a 112-106 victory over the Dallas Mavericks.

Playing in his 12th NBA season, Johnson needed nine assists to break Robertson's record of 9,887.

Robertson got his total in 1,040 games over 14 seasons, averaging 9.5 assists. Johnson now has 9,898 assists in 871 games, an average of 11.4 assists per game.

The record-tying assist came with 6:46 left in the second quarter when Johnson set up Worthy for a short jump shot.

Johnson got his record-breaker with 5:44 left in the period, lobbing a pass to Terry Teagle, who made a 15-foot turnaround jumper from the right baseline.

Worthy said he wasn't disappointed he didn't get to score the record-breaking basket.

"Not at all," he said. "We just wanted to make sure he got it."

Johnson said he tried to get the ball to Worthy twice, "but he wouldn't take the shot."

Teagle said he would have preferred for either Worthy or Byron Scott to have scored the big basket because they've been Johnson's teammates for so long.

"But you have to take your shots," Teagle said. "I think it's sort of symbolic of Magic's approach. He doesn't care who makes the shot."

"It feels good to be a part of history. He broke a fabulous record. It didn't even dawn on me that I'd be the one."

Soon after Johnson surpassed Robertson's record, he was in tears during a 15-minute on-court celebration before a sellout crowd of 17,505 at the Forum.

"I figured it would be emotional," he said. "I thought about all the times we played shirts and skins, hoping one day to get into the NBA. Then finally getting into the NBA. ..."

"I cried for all the times I shoveled snow off the walk and practiced hook shots with my dad (in Michigan growing up). I cried for my dad. He's the one — he's the only reason I'm here. He explained to me how to share the basketball."

Johnson's father, Earvin Johnson Sr., watched the game via satellite from his home in Michigan.

It was a rather interesting irony that Teagle was on the receiving end of the record-breaking assist since the record wouldn't be with the Lakers right now had it not been for Johnson's generosity last September.

Freshman Greg Layson beats the throw to first in action against Xavier on Saturday. The Irish host Chicago State at Covalleski Stadium tonight.

Baseball team hopes to extend win streak tonight

By RICH SZABO
Sports Writer

Following a grueling 27-game road schedule to open up the season, the Notre Dame baseball team sought to find a rhythm in the comforts of home.

After sweeping a three-game series against Xavier this past weekend, the Irish (19-12) look to continue their solid play as they take on Chicago State in a doubleheader tonight at Covalleski Stadium, starting at 5:00 pm.

"It's great to play well," said Irish coach Pat Murphy, "and we have been starting to play with a bit of an attitude since we've been home. We had a few meetings to talk about attitude, and I think the team is taking it to heart."

The Irish have come up winners against Chicago State in 12 of their last 13 meetings, but, says Murphy, "They play tough every game, with everything to gain and nothing to lose. After a while, it can start to catch up with you a bit."

In the first game of the doubleheader, freshman Tom Price (3-2) is slated to pitch for the Irish. Price, a highly recruited freshman out of Edwardsville, Ill., has fit well into the Irish starting rotation, and Murphy feels that he can count on six quality innings every time Price pitches.

The nightcap has Pat Leahy scheduled as the probable starter. Leahy was an All-American as a freshman last year, but Murphy feels that such national success has not affected him or David Sinnes, another 1990 freshman All-American.

"We've talked about their situation," said Murphy, "and they try to block out all of those distractions. Leahy and Sinnes are having better years, but it just doesn't show up in the stats because our schedule has been so much tougher. We wanted to play this way though. If you ask the players how they feel about the schedule, they'll tell you they wanted it like this."

Matt Haas, a freshman catcher who had a home run against Xavier, said, "Coach Murphy is great, and he motivates well. Mostly, though, we motivate ourselves, and try to stay mentally tough all the time. We've competed against the best teams in the country, and we've been in just about all of the games. It's not like we went in and just got blown off the field, so our record is not frustrating. It's not frustrating when you realize that with a couple breaks, the outcome would have been different."

The Irish will be playing tonight's twinbill at Covalleski Stadium, which is the Irish home field along with Jake Kline field, but which Murphy feels is not the true home of the Irish.

"We probably get about 200 people for each game at Covalleski," said Murphy. "When we play on the road, we sometimes play in front of 5,000 to 6,000 people. It's a huge advantage to be a home team and have 5,000 people behind you, because the support does affect young people. If we had a place on campus for the students, they would get involved and would start to realize what kind of program we have."

The Irish are finally at home, but they have to face the added adversity of the weather here in South Bend. Three home games have already been rained out in the past week, but the team has stayed focused.

They Irish will have plenty of offensive firepower as they battle Chicago State. Captain Joe Binkiewicz went 4-for-9 this weekend, raising his season slugging percentage to .923. Eric Danapilis also had an impressive series, going 7-for-11 with four runs scored and six RBIs. Frank Jacobs and Greg Layson will also provide offensive sparks for Notre Dame.

Murphy recorded his 150th win at Notre Dame over the weekend, and the Irish look to add to that total against their non-conference opponent. The Irish currently stand at 19-12, seeking to strengthen their claim as one of the nation's best and prove that the NCAA made a mistake in not inviting them to the tournament last year.

Kindred to deliver Red Smith Lecture

Special to the Observer

Sports columnist Dave Kindred, associate editor of the daily sports newspaper, The National, will deliver the 1991 Red Smith Lecture in Journalism at 7:30 tonight in the auditorium of the Center for Continuing Education.

The title of Kindred's lecture will be "Ninety Feet is Perfection."

The Red Smith lectureship, annually sponsored by Coca-Cola USA, honors the 1927 Notre Dame graduate who became one of America's revered sportswriters.

Administered by the Department of American Studies, the lectureship promotes the teaching of writing and journalism and recognizes high journalistic standards. The lectureship was established in 1983, a year after Smith's death.

Kindred joined The National when it began publishing in 1990. He has been a columnist since 1969, writing for the Louisville Courier-Journal from 1966 to 1977, the Washington Post from 1977 to 1984 and the Atlanta Constitution from 1984 to 1990.

Honored 15 times in three states as Sportswriter of the Year, Kindred won the Associated Press Sports Editor award as best columnist in America in 1984. He has written four books, including "Heroes, Fools, & Other Dreamers," a 1988 collection of columns and features.

Dave Kindred

A native of Atlanta, Ill., and a graduate of Illinois Wesleyan University, Kindred has covered sporting events in 47 states and nine countries. Since becoming a columnist he has written about every World Series, Super Bowl, Kentucky Derby and NCAA Basketball Championship as well as five Olympics.

Kindred's is the first Red Smith Lecture on sportswriting. Bob Hammel, sports editor of the Bloomington (Ind.) Herald-Times and president of the National Sportscasters and Sportswriters Association, will respond to Kindred's speech during a discussion period following the lecture.

A sample of Kindred's work

Editor's Note: The following is Dave Kindred's prologue to Theismann, a biography of former Notre Dame quarterback Joe Theismann written by Theismann with Kindred.

The boy had a dream and it was always the same. He wanted to be a pro quarterback like Bart Starr and Johnny Unitas. He took their pictures out of magazines and put them up on his bedroom wall, and he would study those pictures as if there were secrets to be learned from them.

The boy's bedroom was a place built in the attic by his father. If you weren't careful, you'd hit your head on the ceiling where it slanted down to a wall. The bedroom must have been tiny, scrunched under an eave that way, but in the boy's memory it was a grand place of imagination and hopes. Next to pictures of Bart Starr and Johnny Unitas, the boy tacked up a copy of "The Champion's Creed." It began, "If you think you can, you will..."

Because he could throw better than most of his buddies, the boy was the shortstop in baseball games and the quarterback in football. He grew up in a New Jersey town of 10,000 people, an hour's drive from the big city. With his father, the boy would go to the bus station in their little town. They took the Port Authority bus into New York City. They hopped into the subway to Shea Stadium and got out behind the center-field wall. The boy stood under an open sky and looked up at how big the place was. Years later he would remember what he said the first time he saw it. He said, "Wow."

Digger's reign full of Notre Dame 'moments'

By FRANK LaGROTTA

After covering football and basketball for both The Observer and ND Sports Information, LaGrotta received his BA in American Studies (ND 1980) and his MA in Communication Arts (ND 1981) before going on to cover the NFL for Gannett Newspapers. He is currently a legislator in the Pennsylvania House of Representatives.*

You are a Notre Dame or Saint Mary's student, somewhere between the ages of 18 and 21.

You do not remember, most likely because you cannot remember, when you were three or four or six years old and the University of San Francisco had a basketball team and that basketball team had a record of 29-0. You were too young to know that Notre Dame was hosting San Francisco in a game the Irish had to win to extend its season into the NCAA playoffs.

You were not on campus the week before the game so you do not remember the atmosphere or the excitement. You didn't attend the Friday night pep rally, nor hear the coach's promise and the students' response.

"Tomorrow," the coach instructed, "be in your seat one hour before game time. All you have to do is chant 'Twenty nine - and - one!' and we'll do the rest."

Saturday the students were in their seats one hour before game time.

"Twenty nine - and - one!"

"Twenty nine - and - one!"

"Twenty nine - and - one!"

The students did their job. The coach kept his promise. The television announcers named the Notre Dame student body the game's Most Valuable Player.

Another Notre Dame 'moment' had occurred.

There were many such moments in the 20 years that Digger Phelps coached basketball at Notre Dame. Many victories, many upsets, much excitement...too many memories to stuff in the space this newspaper allows.

Lawrence, Kansas, 1978. Notre Dame defeats DePaul for its first trip to the Final Four. Digger Phelps emerges from the locker room, shirt drenched with sweat (tears?) and emotionally gives all the credit to his players.

"It's a coach's dream to go to the Final Four," he says, chok-
