Hugs for the General

General Schwarzkopf hugs family members as he returned home from the Persian Gulf to a hero's welcome at MacDill Air Force Base headquarters in Tampa, Fla., Sunday. Some 500 well-wishers waving flags and chanting "U.S.A." were on hand to greet the General.

General comes home

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf is home from the Gulf War, but that doesn't mean his job is finished.

As head of the U.S. Central Command based at MacDill Air Force Base, Schwarzkopf will continue to direct the 250,000 troops remaining in the Persian Gulf.

"They're going to be there for a while," Schwarzkopf told a cheering crowd of about 500 people who greeted his return Sunday to MacDill. "We're getting them home as fast as we can. But I ask all of you please just to keep giving the great support you've given all of us until the last American is home."

Schwarzkopf, who spent eight months away from his family as commander of the allied troops in the Persian Gulf, took his wife, Brenda, and their three children in a big bear hug as soon as he stepped back onto American soil.

"I can't describe to you the emotions in all of our hearts," Schwarzkopf told the throng. "It's great to be an American."

The turnout was smaller than expected after officials had spent several days encouraging people to stay home and avoid a crush. City and military officials had feared a logistical nightmare with up to 200,000 expected.

Awaiting his arrival were local dignitaries, base personnel, families of Operation Desert Storm troops and Kuwaiti Ambassador Saud Nasir al-Sabah.

"Mr. Ambassador, I am proud to report to you Kuwait is free," said the four-star general, standing before a 40-foot-wide American flag.

Schwarzkopf, 56, who plans to retire this summer, has been flooded with offers ranging from book contracts to a university presidency. A possible political candidacy also was mentioned.

SUFR submits new proposal to Malloy

By DAVID KINNEY
Assistant News Editor

The coalition of Students United For Respect (SUFR) announced Monday that it will accept the proposal offered by University President Father Edward Malloy last week to continue dialogue on the issue of cultural diversity, while adding an amendment to include a third-party participant in the discussions.

The coalition delivered the latest proposal to Malloy Monday at 2 p.m., announced SUFR member Beatriz Cruz at a press conference yesterday in the Foster Room of LaFortune Student Center.

SUFR called for Malloy to respond to the proposal by 3 p.m. today. If the new proposal is not accepted by Malloy, Cruz said that SUFR would have to re-evaluate their situation.

Although it may appear that the coalition is surrendering by accepting Malloy's plan, that is not the case, according to Fred Tombar, SUFR member and 1990-91 student body vice-president. The decision, he said, "is a show of good will and compromise on our part, because the most important thing to all the members of SUFR is to get the issues addressed."

The latest proposal, Tombar said, is an effort to break the stalemate in dialogue between the administration and SUFR.

Last week, SUFR staged a sit-in in the Registrar's office demanding direct negotiations with Malloy on the issue of cultural diversity. The sit-in was a result of SUFR's belief that the administration had failed to properly address their list of demands made in January, including increasing the number of ethnic faculty, building a multi-cultural facility and developing a racial harassment policy for the University.

Small group meetings with Malloy last week failed to resolve the stalemate, and on Friday Michael Nelson, the National Association for the Ad-

Sununu's travels questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House on Monday promised a full accounting of chief of staff John Sununu's travels as it sought to stem the political fallout over his extensive personal use of military jets.

Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said President Bush discussed the issue with Sununu on Monday shortly after the chief of staff returned — on an Air Force jet — from a weekend in New Hampshire.

But "There's no evidence that there's any ethical impropriety here," said Fitzwater. He said data consisting of "long lists and numbers" would affirm that judgment.

Fitzwater said the records, to be released within the next few days, would back Sununu's contentions that he had reimbursed the government for personal trips aboard military planes.

Congressional Democrats have seized on the issue and accused Sununu, whose brash manners have never won him many friends on Capitol Hill, of misusing tax dollars.

"It's probably legal. It may be technically ethical. But most certainly it is excessive," said Rep. Bob Wise, D-W.Va., chairman of the House Government Operations subcommittee on government information, justice and agriculture.

Wise welcomed the White House announcement that it would open up its books. But, he said, "that handles one question. The other is whether Air Sununu should be flying on the scale it does."

"When John Sununu isn't breaking up negotiations on the civil rights bill, apparently he's flying out to Vail to ski at the taxpayer's expense," said Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif., chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.

The latest furor surrounding the chief of staff arose with news accounts over the weekend that Sununu had taken more than 60 trips on Air Force jets — including skiing vacations and visits to his home state of New Hampshire.

"The president supports that policy" that enabled Sununu to fly aboard military planes even when on private business, Fitzwater said. "There should be no question about that."

At issue is a 1987 directive signed by then-President Reagan authorizing the White House chief of staff and the national security adviser to fly aboard military jets at all times. Former Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee was chief of staff at the time.

Administration officials say the policy is intended to make sure the top presidential aides are never out of touch.

However, the memorandum was not publicized by the White House until now.

Fitzwater said Bush had decided to make public all pertinent travel documents for both Sununu and national security adviser Brent Scowcroft. "I asked the president this morning. He said, 'release it all,'" Fitzwater said.

The spokesman insisted that Sununu had reimbursed the government for all personal trips aboard official aircraft, following well-established policy guidelines, even if the amount of reimbursement was below what it cost to use the planes.

"We don't think there's anything wrong," Fitzwater said.

The Washington Post and U.S. News & World Report reported more than five dozen trips by Sununu over the past 27 months on corporate-type military jets, almost half of them to New England, as well as such vacation spots as Vail and Aspen, Colo. The trips included both official business and personal and political travel, the accounts said.

Nearly all Sununu's flights were aboard Air Force C-20s, a 12-passenger twin-engine jet that is the military version of the Gulfstream III corporate jet.

Senate approves student budget

By MEGAN JUNIUS
News Writer

A $400,000 Student Activity Fee budget proposed by the 1991-92 Budget Committee was approved by Student Senate Monday evening.

The budget committee, chaired by Student Body Treasurer John Coffey, carefully distributed the $400,000 allotted by the Student Activities Fund. Twenty percent of these funds were distributed among clubs and organizations, while the remaining 80 percent was distributed between allocations, Student Union Board (SUB), Student Government, and a contingency fund.

Coffey said that the committee was very positive, especially with this year's limitations in the budget.

The allowance of $13,000 for the Sesquicentennial Committee and a $6,353 budget for the 24-hour lounge in LaFortune caused cutbacks in other areas, Coffey said. However, the budget committee reacted positively to the setback, he added.

According to Coffey, both Student Government and SUB suffered 10 percent losses within their budgets.

Student Body President Joseph Blanco stated the budget was well-planned considering this year's set backs.

Also approved in senate was the omission of a by-law amended by the 1990-91 Student Senate concerning the reimbursement of student election campaign costs.

The by-law, set effective for January 1, 1992, said, "Fifty percent of the money spent by candidates' tickets will be reimbursed by the Election Committee."

According to Coffey, if put into effect, this by-law would encourage joke tickets to run. "If they would be reimbursed then a joke ticket would only settle for half of the losses they would suffer without this by-law," he said.

After discussion among senate members, the by law was defeated nine to six.

Comments on the relationship between the omission of this by-law and the cutbacks in the budget were said to be unrelated, according to Coffey.

INSIDE COLUMN

Every day needs to be Earth Day

Earth Day has come and gone and, just like last year, the annual surge of avid environmentalists will soon disappear.

Although this yearly celebration of Mother Earth attempts to educate the public about environmental concerns such as global warming and the ozone hole, when the day is over the thousands of pamphlets that were distributed will be thrown into the recycling bins and be forgotten.

I am not a pessimistic person - and I do not believe that the large majority of the public is indifferent to the destruction of the environment.

As a matter of fact, I think people care. I have witnessed my hometown become environmentally conscious.

Two years ago my kitchen had one big trash can, it now has an entire wall devoted to waste disposal. There is one bin for newspapers, one for clear glass, one for colored glass and one for aluminium cans.

Yet, how many people know enough to realize that the recycling containers in their kitchens are only the very first steps to a solution to the problem?

In order for people to implement remedies, they must have a full grasp of the dangers facing the environment and the implications these dangers have on their lives.

For all those people that didn't get a chance to celebrate Earth Day here are some relevant facts about the environmental problems facing our world today:

- Although, humans only need one gallon of water per day to survive, United States' citizens use 1800 gallons of water per day.

- At the same time, underground water tables are falling and the ground water is being contaminated by pesticides in 32 of the states.

- There are nine pounds of carbon dioxide emitted into the air for each mile a car that gets 22 miles per gallon is driven.

- Each American generates 20 tons of carbon dioxide per year.

- In the mean time 31 million hectares of forest cover in industrial countries are damaged by air pollution.

- Fifty percent of skin disease among fair-skinned people is caused by the sun.

- Approximately 100,000 people in the world die of skin cancer per year.

- The growing ozone hole in the earth's atmosphere over Antarctica suggests a gradual global depletion could be starting.

Yes, Earth Day is over until next year, but the problem of the environment is not a one time a year event; it is ongoing.

Earth Day is a great start in making people aware of the dangers that we face. Yet, much more has to be done.

Primarily, people have to realize the magnitude of the problem and begin to take action even beyond recycling. The world is now most definitely in our hands.

Guerrillas killed after entering Israel

JERUSALEM — Israeli troops shot and killed two heavily armed Arab guerrillas who crossed into northern Israel from Lebanon, the army command said today. It was the first time in nearly two years that infiltrators had managed to get through an Israeli-controlled security zone and cross the Israel-Lebanon border. The guerrillas were killed Sunday night in a short exchange of gunfire about two miles north of Dan, the command said. It reported no Israeli casualties. Palestinian and Lebanese guerrillas frequently try to cross into Israel from Lebanon, but usually are stopped in the security zone, which Israel created when it withdrew most of its troops from southern Lebanon in June 1985 following a three-year occupation.

23 killed in unrest in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — At least 23 people were killed in political unrest over the weekend, including four men shot by a police patrol after allegedly smuggling weapons into South Africa, police said today. The four were killed late Sunday night near Komatipoort on the Mozambique border after they opened fire on a police patrol, police said in a statement. Police were acting on information about an arms smuggling ring, they said. A large shipment of arms was recovered from the car, including 16 AK-47 rifles, a rocket grenade launcher, several machine pistols and ammunition, the police statement said. Weapons are frequently smuggled in to South Africa from Mozambique to be sold to rival black factions for use in fighting in black townships. Police said last week they had stepped up efforts to cut off arms smuggling.

Bolling suffers fatal heart attack

WASHINGTON — Richard Walker Bolling, a Democratic Congressman from Missouri who helped pass the first civil rights legislation since Reconstruction, was found dead Sunday from an apparent heart attack. He was 74 years old. Bolling, who retired in 1982, was found in his Washington home by his wife, said Rep. Alan Wheat, D-Mo., who succeeded Bolling. Wheat said Bolling died of an apparent heart attack. Initially elected to Congress in 1948, Bolling was re-elected for 16 consecutive terms. After retiring from Congress, Bolling was a visiting professor of political science at the University of Missouri in Kansas City and a professor of politics at Boston College in Massachusetts. Bolling had said he was most proud of the role he played in winning passage in 1957 of the first civil rights legislation since Reconstruction.

Drug to treat Leukemia approved

WASHINGTON — The government today announced the approval of a new drug to treat the most common form of adult leukemia in the United States. The Food and Drug Administration said the drug, fludarabine, will be labeled for use in patients with chronic lymphocytic leukemia who are not responding to other therapies. The current treatment regimen does not cure the disease and may result in significant side effects, the FDA said. In addition, patients may stop responding to the treatment. The new drug has been available to many patients for a year under government programs that permit early use of potentially effective drugs for people with life-threatening or serious diseases.

Lenin tribute

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, center, leads a group of government leaders to the Lenin Mausoleum in Moscow Monday to pay tribute to the Soviet founder on the 121st anniversary of his birth.

Gorbachev's time runs out

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials are reluctantly concluding that Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's government is paralyzed and the initiator of world-shaking reforms at home and abroad may not hold power much longer.

Kremlin watchers in Washington are studying the most likely successors and considering what a post-Gorbachev Soviet Union may look like.

Gorbachev has enjoyed hearty support from President Bush, who made no secret of his hope that the Soviet leader would succeed. But Bush advisers and State Department analysts now say privately that Gorbachev appears unable to regain control of his fractious country and that his time may be running out.

"He's getting pretty close to the edge," said one influential Soviet affairs analyst at State. "The situation looks very precarious," said another.

One official with long experience observing Soviet affairs said the administration has received recent signals from various sources indicating that Gorbachev is in serious trouble and is "maneuvering furiously to protect his flanks and undercut the opposition."

"He's very much aware of the threat," the official said.

Administration officials are reluctant to comment openly about a subject as sensitive as Gorbachev's political survival, and those who spoke to The Associated Press did so only on the condition they remain anonymous.

Other observers injected a note of caution, saying there is much hysterical talk but little hard evidence.

John Steinbruner, director of foreign policy studies at the Brookings Institution, said, "I do not see signs of his imminent demise."

"He has balanced the overall politics in a way that doesn't make it easy to get at him," Steinbruner said, though he acknowledged, "One never quite knows where the breaking point is."

State Department Counselor Robert Zoellick, in outlining Bush administration policy on Capital Hill recently, alluded to the "increased uncertainty about the future course" of the Soviet Union.

The United States, he said, "should try to manage uncertainty by multiplying our channels of information and increasing our points of access with a rapidly changing Soviet society."

The administration is attempting to broaden its contacts at all levels of the Soviet power structure while trying not to undermine Gorbachev, whom it still regards as a friend and a positive force for change.

Consultation with Nelson and the entire SUFR membership yielded the proposal issued Monday.

The proposal is comprised of four points:

- SUFR is to be established as a recognized student organization.

- Malloy is to reaffirm his commitment to cultural diversity through a "substantive document" to be circulated throughout the University.

- "The University," said Cruz, is to "form a committee to engage in productive dialogue which will lead to tangible solutions to the problems of cultural diversity that exist at Notre Dame."

According to the proposal, SUFR is to be an active member of the dialogue resulting from Malloy's document, not only in the selection of the committee

- Those who participated in the sit-in at the Registrar's office on April 17 are to suffer "no academic or other reprisals."

Tombar stated that the University has already guaranteed that the students will not suffer any punishment for their participation in the demonstration.

The proposal is actually an amended version of the proposal presented in a statement by Malloy on April 18. The request for an impartial third-party participant in future discussions was an addition made by SUFR.

"What we saw," said Tombar, "was the entire dialogue coming to an impasse. And because the university felt so strongly about the four-point proposal, we thought that maybe this could just be some sort of starting point."

Tombar pointed out that the committee to address cultural diversity would differ from past committees formed to address the issue. Rather than simply making recommendations, it will address the problems that have been raised and formulate substantive solutions.

In addition, the committee will presumably include members of SUFR, who, according to Tombar, are dedicated to seeing that the issues are addressed.

"We hope to also, by the end of this year, maybe have all of this (committee formation and groundwork) done," said Cruz, "and also have some sort of document, in writing, of what is to come, so that when we leave this year, some thing has been done."

Engineering department grows

By PAUL PEARSON
Associate News Editor

The Notre Dame department of earth sciences will be incorporated into the department of civil engineering, creating the department of civil engineering and geological sciences, according to Associate Provost Roger Schmitz.

The new department, according to Father James Rigert, chairman of the earth sciences department, will fall under the College of Engineering. The earth sciences degree will still be offered by the College of Engineering, and there are no plans to change the requirements for the degree.

According to Schmitz, who is secretary of the Academic Council, the changes will take effect July 1. The proposal to merge the departments was approved by the Council unanimously at its meeting April 16, Schmitz said.

The idea to merge the two departments, Schmitz said, was presented to the council by Francis Castellino, dean of the College of Science, and Anthony Michel, McCloskey Dean of the College of Engineering, who said that the merger would be the best way to strengthen the two program which have common interests.

Rigert said that the College of Science had been discussing the possibility of a merger "since last fall." He believes that the earth sciences department will make an easy transition because it is a small department and it has no graduate program. "It has some very positive aspects," he said.

Next year's freshmen, Rigert said, will still be able to take Earth Sciences 101-102 to satisfy the University two-semester science requirement.

Sununu U.S. alone in camps

Presumably, the White House records will show that any reimbursements made by the chief of staff were at commercial air fare rates.

Critics of the policy claim commercial air fares would cover only a fraction of the cost of flying on a C-20 business jet. The Air Force lists the C-20s hourly operating rate at $3,945, not counting the salaries of the five-member crew.

Fitzwater said the chief of staff needs a secure phone link to the White House at all times. He said "the most extreme" case would be if the president died.

Even when Sununu leaves the military planes, "there is a portable secure communications set that goes with him," Fitzwater said.

Asked if Sununu was reconsidering being such a frequent flyer aboard official aircraft, Fitzwater said: "I don't know what Governor Sununu's plans are. ... It's up to him how he conducts himself, how he utilizes the aircraft."

Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, asked the General Accounting Office — an auditing and investigatory wing of Congress — to investigate Sununu's use of the official aircraft.

Still, congressional criticism of the practice may be muted. Lawmakers of both parties have long used military aircraft for congressional trips, often called "junkets" by public-interest groups, to distant and sometimes exotic places.

SILUPI, Turkey (AP) — U.S. military forces working Monday to construct a model camp to house Kurdish refugees in northern Iraq were watched by Iraqi police but left alone, officials said.

The U.S. soldiers, meanwhile, have received high marks from relief groups and refugees in Kurdish camps along the Turkish border.

"They are very cooperative, very willing, and they have a lot of logistical support," said Constantin Sokoloff, a field officer for the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees.

Dozens of U.S. troops have arrived the past few days at the worst-off refugee camps, at Cukurca and Uzumlu in Turkey. They will be bringing in medicine and water by helicopter, distributing food and helping pipe spring water to the hundreds of thousands of refugees at the squalid camps.

Two U.S. soldiers were injured in a land mine explosion at the Uzumlu camp Monday. The border had been mined by Turkey and Iraq before the Gulf War, and several refugees have been killed or maimed by stepping on mines.

Relief workers said the arrival of the Americans had reduced tensions among the refugees.

At Cukurca, a camp crowded with about 185,000 refugees, refugees seemed particularly pleased to see U.S. Army Special Forces on Monday. A day earlier, Turkish soldiers had fired at a crowd rioting over food distribution, killing five and seriously injuring three, according to medical workers.

Turkish officials said Sunday that one refugee was killed and five injured.

'Homo' midshipman asks judge's removal

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court was asked Monday to order a judge who called a homosexual plaintiff a "homo" in court to remove himself from the man's case challenging his dismissal from the U.S. Naval Academy.

Attorneys for Joseph Steffan asked the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit to take U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch off the case.

The judge refused to do so on April 12, saying his use of the word "homo" three times in a March 6 hearing did not mean he was biased. He said he did not intend any offense.

But Steffan's attorneys contended in court papers that if a judge is allowed to handle a case when he has used a word considered offensive by the minority group involved, "the inevitable result will be to undermine the confidence of minority groups in the ability and willingness of the judiciary to safeguard their rights to due process and equal protection of the laws."

Government attorneys have contended that Gasch did not show specific bias against Steffan and that the plaintiff must prove the judge had personal bias against him.

Because he stated he was a homosexual, Steffan was dismissed from the Naval Academy six weeks before he was to graduate in 1987. He was not accused of homosexual conduct.

He is challenging the policy of the armed forces that bans homosexuals from service.

Man recalls killing from childhood memory

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Counseling for stress triggered a long-dormant memory for a man who recalled how as a boy he watched a minister fatally beat and stab a 10-year-old girl.

The 38-year-old man, whose named was withheld by police, said he witnessed the slaying in 1962 in some woods near suburban Baldwin. He also said the minister sexually molested him. Officials will not comment further on the man's recollection. Police excavated a site the accuser showed them, but found only animal bones.

The investigation has been ongoing since the man made the accusation in December. No charges have been filed and no body has been found.

"I think the whole issue is whether a crime has been committed," Allegheny County District Attorney Robert Colville said Monday. "Do we have enough evidence to establish this?"

The man, who was 9 in 1962, went to police at the suggestion of a therapist he consulted because of job-related stress, Baldwin Police Chief Christopher Kelly said.

"He was having a hard time dealing with it, and he sought counseling, and the counselor told him he could continue to deal with it as he had, by suppressing it, or he could go forward and prosecute," Kelly said.

Presbyterian Church officials said a 59-year-old minister who worked for a church counseling service in Seattle was the subject of the investigation. The minister resigned from the service Feb. 18 for personal reasons after the death of a fellow counselor, according to newspaper reports.

The alleged victim is believed to be Mary Ann Verdecchia, who was reported missing June 7, 1962, and was never found, Kelly said.

Kelly said investigators are "comfortable that what he told us is the truth." Colville said the man's age at the time "and the question of whether it was fantasized or make-believe" must be taken into account.

"It's going to take a lot more leg work," Colville said.

Colville said a body isn't necessary to prosecute a homicide case.

"You can (prosecute) on a statement, but you're working on very slim ground," he said.

Student demands an apology from SUFR

Dear Editor:

For the past few months I have courteously listened to the diatribe and idiocies of SUFR because I feel that they are entitled to espouse their views no matter how redundant and ridiculous they may be.

I firmly believe in the freedom of expression and the this right is the hallmark of our country's political system. However, I have an equally firm belief that there is a proper time and place for such expression. The actions and displays of SUFR in the Administration Building on April 17th were unequivocally the wrong time and place.

Further, as a direct result of their impropriety, I was unable to obtain a new student ID which would have enabled me to go to lunch, dinner, and breakfast without having to charge the meals to my account. In addition, in my effort to may make may way through the bodies covering the Registrar's office, I was insulted and pushed by the members of SUFR. Therefore, I am turning the table on SUFR, and demanding that they redress this great injustice on three counts.

First, I demand that SUFR reimburse my expense for having to charge three meals. Although I do not feel that the price that the dining hall charges is warranted, the principle at stake demands that the full expense be reimbursed.

Second, I demand an apology for the lady who pushed when I entered the office. I also demand an explanation from her as to why she did not push or hinder the entrance of the student who immediately preceded my entrance. At the present time, the only explanation I have to account for such contradictory behavior is his minority status and her racist disposition.

Third, I demand an apology from the other lady who insulted myself and my mother. I hardly feel the insulting name you directed towards me could be part of any politically correct dictionary which SUFR is so vehemently trying to instill at the University of Notre Dame.

As an exchange of goodwill for the fulfillment of this redress, I will offer my advice free of charge. Of course, I will offer my advice prior to this fulfillment because I have full confidence that SUFR will right this injustice as soon as they see that I have suffered. First, such violent action is only counterproductive towards the unification of this campus. This is not Beirut, and you are not living in a Pre-Civil Rights Movement Era.

Whether you believe it or not, the Administration cares about is students, both minority and majority. Second, if you want respect, you must express yourselves in a respectful manner. Until such time, SUFR will only be students united to disgust the rest of the campus. Lastly, if my demands are not met, I will be force to take whatever actions necessary to prompt SUFR to action. In other words, I will force you to read more of my menacing letters to the editor.

SUFR ideas contradict those of King

Dear Editor:

James Madison addressed the problem raised by the SUFR's protest sit-in when, in the Federalist papers, he warned Americans to forever shun factions. Factions, said Madison, are "a number of citizens, whether amounting to a majority or minority of the whole, who are united and actuated by some common impulse of passion, or of interest, adverse to the rights to other citizens or to the permanent and aggregate interests of the community."

The sit-in staged by SUFR was surely great fun; conjuring up all those warm reminiscent images from the belligerent, radical 1960s, and then actually obtaining a meeting with Monk Malloy! Yet, the SUFR'er sit-in only proved the lesson their 60s ancestors taught us; namely that if reasonable argument is unpersuasive, throw a stomping fit until someone is intimidated enough to listen.

The message which seems to underlie SUFR activity is - contrary to the dictum of Martin Luther King, Jr. that the content of an individual's character, not the color of his skin (or cultural origin) should guide our social relations - that the University of Notre Dame should heighten "cultural or racial diversity" precisely because culture or race predominates over character (or ideas) in a learning institution.

The "permanent and aggregate interests of the community" of intellectual inquiry at Notre Dame is certainly furthered by the robust exchange of important ideas, prompted by a thoughtful and learned faculty regardless of its racial or cultural composition. Notre Dame should respond to SUFR by seeking out and hiring the brightest and most talented scholars available; regardless of skin color or cultural heritage.

To respond that race or cultural heritage, partially or wholly, controls the content of an individuals' thought is to think racially and thereby make the cardinal mistake of a racist. Notre Dame's interests as a learning institution is not furthered by the insolent conduct of a faction of insistent, passion driven students. Nor is Notre Dame's interests as a learning institution furthered by engaging in racially or culturally based hiring.

Finally, the Notre Dame students interests are not furthered by : 1) having their registration efforts obstructed, and 2) by being instructed by anyone who has hired solely to achieve "racial or cultural diversity." Notre Dame and its students should insist that SUFR read their lessons, go to their classes, and act their age.

Special treatment is not respect

Dear Editor:

Though I sympathize with the members of SUFR, I have a couple of problems with their latest exploits. First, if they want respect, they should earn it, not force it. Second, and more importantly, racism and the discrimination which it spawns will continue to be issues as long as minorities and the media continue to make them issues.

I believe that the sit-in staged by SUFR and other similar actions do more harm to minorities than good. By categorizing themselves as a distinct and separate group, minority organizations effectively make the public even more aware of their "differences" and as a result, they reinforce stereotyping and racial resentment.

As Americans, race distinctions should be irrelevant. We all have the same rights, so no "group" deserves special attention. Minority organization demanding special treatment (like equal opportunity laws, etc.) will draw pity from some, outrage from others, and respect from none. In fact, the very existence minority groups is in itself a form of "reverse racism". What would the SUFR members think if I were to form the White Catholics United for Respect or the NAAWP?

Since the Civil Rights movement began, very little has changed. Racism is just as prominent now because minorities (and the majority) have continued to stress racial differences, pointing out to each new generation that different races are to be regarded as separate entities. Indeed, racism will continue until we choose to ignore our minute differences and accept all people simply as human beings. So let's all start acting as a single race, the human race, instead of making rigid distinctions that can do nothing but divide us.

Gun control bill is a step in the right direction

Congress is currently debating the Brady bill. If enacted, the Brady bill would do two things: 1) require potential gun buyers to wait for a 7 day "cooling off" period, and 2) require law enforcement agencies to run a background check on potential gun buyers. Does the Brady bill go too far? Not far enough? Perhaps the best way to answer these questions is to critically examine the arguments of gun control opponents.

First, the NRA and other gun control foes argue that the second amendment protects the "right to bear arms," and, therefore, prohibits gun control. This is not an entirely accurate reading. The full text of the second amendment reads "A well regulated Militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear Arms, shall not be infringed."

The founding fathers clearly intended to protect state militias, not private individuals, from federal regulation. The phrase "the people" refers to the populace at large, not every individual. Thus, the right of the populace at large to keep and bear arms in the form of "a well regulated military" does not give every individual the same right. Even if the NRA's interpretation is correct, the second amendment says nothing about the right to buy guns without a waiting period or the type of guns which may be bought.

Rick Acker
In My Opinion

A second argument often made by anti-gun control forces is that easy access to guns is a great protection against criminals. On the surface this logic sounds good. According to FBI statistics, most gun carrying criminals get their weapons illegally. Therefore, runs the argument, gun control laws do nothing but make it difficult for law abiding citizens to protect themselves. The problem with this logic is that it doesn't work in practice. Countries which have tough gun control, such as Great Britain and Canada, have substantially fewer gun related crimes than America. The reason for this is simple.

A cardinal rule of black market economics is that any product which can be obtained cheaply and easily legally can be obtained cheaply and easily illegally too. nearly all of the guns used by criminal were at one point legally bought. The guns were then either stolen or illegally resold. Thus, gun control laws would probably be an excellent way to keep guns out of the hands of criminals. We should not be surprised, then that those most threatened by violent crime, the police and inner-city residents, overwhelmingly support gun control.

Moreover, according to police and FBI statistics, if you buy a gun to protect yourself or your home, your chances of being killed by a gun actually increase about eight times. The person who kills you will probably be a friend or family member of even yourself, and the gun that will be used will probably be yours. The chances of a friend or family member being shot also increase substantially. Statistically, having a gun around the house isn't a protection, it's a threat.

A third argument presented by gun control opponents is that gun control would be a heavy burden on hunters, target shooters, and collectors. This simply is not true. No legislature has ever seriously considered a gun control proposal that would seriously affect any of these groups.

The large, expensive, and slow firing guns used by nearly all target shooters and hunters will not be affected by the Brady bill or any other serious proposal. moreover, few in these groups would be hindered by a 7 day waiting period or a background check. Likewise, collectors will not be affected by the bill or any other serious proposal. In fact, licensed collectors are the only private individuals in America who can legally buy machine guns and similar weapons.

The final argument commonly used by gun control opponents is that gun control restricts freedom in a country based on freedom. This is true, but misleading. Every person's freedom may be legitimately limited when it seriously infringes on the rights of another. To use the classic example; my freedom to swing my fist ends where your nose begins. Owning, carrying, and using guns are certainly freedoms, but they too often lead to gun misuse, which infringes on the rights of others, sometimes fatally.

Reasonable gun control, such as the Brady bill, is legitimate because it limits our freedom only to the extent necessary to protect the rights of others.

Gun control is not something which comes easily to me. I have been around hunting and guns all my life and own several guns myself. Moreover, I am a right wing libertarian and, therefore, instinctively oppose any governmental attempt to restrict the freedom of individuals. Nonetheless, the case for gun control is too powerful to ignore.

The Brady bill is a step in the right direction and will hopefully be passed by Congress. As former President Reagan, a Brady bill supporter, recently said, "it is time for America to get serious about gun control."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Confrontational tactics are divisive and unproductive

Dear Editor:

I want to make a few points concerning the group SUFR and their recent actions, including those described in the Observer on April 18. These students have valid concerns to bring to the attention of the University community, and to the administration in particular, but their means of doing so are counterproductive.

Their confrontational tactics will alienate them from many people, not bring them wider support and sympathy. They claim to "demand respect" but their behavior (such as blocking students' access to University offices and defacing the campus with chalk graffiti) is itself disrespectful and undeserving of respect. Respect, one should realize, cannot be demanded, but only earned. It is something given freely, not taken by threats and force. Respect is a two-way street.

Some of SUFR's demands are worthy of debate, but they are just that — debatable. For instance, an ethnic course requirement may be a good idea, but upon what grounds can any group of students force their private agenda upon the entire student-body (and faculty)?

Maintaining a comprehensive and balanced curriculum is the responsibility of the administration and faculty — that's why they are there. Students can request such changes and argue their merit, but they have no right to demand them.

Perhaps the wheels of change do not turn as quickly as the members of SUFR would like. That, however, is not an excuse to trample the rights of others in order to get their own way. If every person or group with a grievance behaved like SUFR, the result would be anarchy. Notre Dame's role as a center for higher learning and a forum for the exchange of ideas would be shattered.

SUFR talks much of their demands, but gives few indications of being reasonable or negotiable. Few things are more frustrating, or indeed frightening, than a group of people who are absolutely certain that they are right, you are wrong, and the rest of society must conform to their viewpoint — by force if necessary.

To settle these disputes, both the administration and SUFR must be prepared to see the other's point of view and to compromise. But understand that negotiations do take time, and in a compromise, neither side ever gets everything it wants.

SUFR's ideas will hurt diversity

Dear Editor:

We are writing in response to address all the attention the group, SUFR has been receiving lately. SUFR claims its goal is an environment where students of all kinds can interact in a harmonious fashion. This is the furthest thing from the truth, or so it appears. It seems to us that what SUFR really wants is a total polarization of this campus to a point where whites and non-whites interact less than ever.

SUFR want designated space for minorities to be able to get together. This is totally adverse to the objective of "cultural diversity" which SUFR pays such lip service to.

If such space was given to minorities there would soon become two kinds of activities at Notre Dame, ones attended by whites and ones attended by non-whites. This would damage the Notre Dame social scene in that it would divide it. What is so wrong with the current system, where all student groups have access to all areas? SUFR demands more classes devoted to minority topics, and accordingly more minority faculty to teach these classes. We understand SUFR's desire to educate people to minority perspectives and concerns, but the fact is that the Notre Dame curriculum already has too many requirements, and at most only one course could be required in this area.

This means that while most students would only take the one required class in the newly created department, others, mostly minorities, would fill their schedules with such classes. This means minority students taking classes with mostly other minority students taught by minority professors. Where is the diversity in that?

Notre Dame, above all else, is a community. SUFR, with its sidewalk scribbles and sit-ins, seems determined to divide this community. Not only are they demanding things that would separate this university in effect into two campuses, but even worse they are fostering ill will between the races on this campus where it did not exist before. Of course, as anyone does when they dare to speak out on such an issue, we expect to be called ignorant, racist, etc., but we feel we have something to say.

By this letter we hope to give people an alternative viewpoint, and hope to heal the wounds that SUFR has already inflicted on the Notre Dame family. We feel that many agree with our view and we think that most students, white and minority alike, want a Notre Dame community where race and national origin mean nothing, and everyone is seen as just a person.

SUFR is perpetuating the exact opposite. So don't let SUFR do all the talking; write to the Observer, or write to us, and show you disagree with what SUFR stands for instead of telling your roommates about it. Thank you.

'Good Woman' Syburg's farewell to ND

By JEAN HAZARD
Accent Writer

Is it possible to be successful while remaining a good person, or to be a good person while achieving success?

Bertolt Brecht explores the paradox of trying to be both successful and good in his play "The Good Woman of Setzuan," which will be presented by Notre Dame Communication and Theatre in Washington Hall, Wednesday, April 24 through Sunday, April 28.

The story is about three gods who roam the world to find truly good people. They are having little luck finding a place to stay until they meet Shen Te, a prostitute. Impressed by her kindness and goodness, the gods give her a gift of 1,000 silver dollars and urge her to remain good.

Shen Te uses the money to buy a tobacco shop, but she drives the shop to the brink of ruin with her generosity. As a last resort, she disguises herself as an imaginary cousin, Shui Ta. As Shui Ta, she is a calculating businesswoman who makes the tobacco shop a profitable business.

Shui Ta also arranges a financially advantageous marriage for Shen Te. The plan fails, however, when Shen Te falls in love with a penniless pilot named Yang Sun. Yang Sun is interested in Shen Te for her money to get him flying again. When Shen Te refuses to give him money, Yang Sun refuses to marry her.

As her troubles increase, Shen Te relies more and more on the fictitious Shui Ta. Shen Te is absent for so long that Shui Ta is accused of kidnapping and murdering her. Shui Ta is put on trial with the three gods as her judges. When Shen Te reveals her disguise to the gods, they admonish her for her deception and instruct her not to call on Shui Ta again.

As the gods leave, believing they have found their good person, Shen Te finds herself in an impossible dilemma. Her last words are a cry for help.

The production has special significance for both the cast and the Communication and Theatre department. At the end of this academic year, and after 37 years of service to Notre Dame as both teacher and director, Professor Frederick Syburg will retire. "The Good Woman of Setzuan" will be Professor Syburg's final directing assignment as an active member of the department.

Syburg joined the faculty of Notre Dame in September of 1954, and through the years he has directed a diverse array of plays from the classic Greek to the contemporary, and from serious drama to farce. This diversity has kept the work fresh for him, and the opportunity to watch the achievement of young artists has kept him in academic theatre. He keeps in touch with many former students through a newsletter called "Backstage" which he publishes twice each year.

According to Tom Barkes of the Notre Dame Communications and Theater Department, Syburg found two productions of his career particularly memorable. His production of "Amadeus" in 1988 came together very close to the way he envisioned it. Audiences and critics also loved the production. "Amadeus" was the only play directed by Syburg that completely sold out before opening night.

'At the end of this academic year, and after 37 years of service to Notre Dame...Professor Frederick Syburg will retire.'

Another play, "We Bombed in New Haven," which was produced in the early 1970's, was gratifying because it brought praise from author Joseph Heller. When he heard how Professor Syburg had staged the production, Heller commented that he wished he had done the same thing in New York.

Professor Mark Pilkinton,

Chair of the Department of Communication and Theater, said, "It has been my great privilege to work with Fred Syburg over the past seven years. He is an excellent teacher, superb director, and a consummate gentleman. Most importantly, students and their needs come first with Fred. We will miss his quiet strength and astute counsel."

Syburg's current challenge is to bring Bertolt Brecht's "The Good Woman of Setzuan" to life. In his contemporary version of the medieval morality play, Brecht displays a keen wit as he satirizes those who work to appear good while ruthlessly taking advantage of others.

Brecht's "Epic Theatre" is a combination of dialogue, storytelling, songs, and occasional speeches directed to the audience. Brecht illustrates his theory that it is impossible to have good without evil; you must meet evil with evil in order to do good.

Syburg's approach in directing the play will be to let the audience relate to the characters and to become absorbed in the story. He has decided not to produce the play according to strict Brechtian theory because this technique employs an "alienation effect" to create distance between the players and the audience. Syburg believes that the play can be even more powerful if the audience is allowed to become absorbed, and hopes his production will allow audience to become as involved as they wish.

Brecht set "The Good Woman of Setzuan" in China to give an exotic flair to the play, but was not concerned with geographical accuracy. (He thought the province of Setzuan was a city.) Syburg has stayed true to the Chinese flavor of the play. The loose, Oriental-style costumes for were designed by Richard E. Donnelly.

The characters also wear masks throughout the performance. The masks serve a practical purpose for actress Siiri Scott, who alternates between her roles of Shen Te and Shui Ta. Syburg decided to have the entire cast wear masks because "Brecht was pretty bizarre," according to actor Peter Dillard, and the masks add to the exotic effect.

The set is built of old doors, window panes, tires, and posters gathered from the attics and garages of the producers. The second-hand, makeshift appearance of the set resembles the poor shanty town of Shen Te. The set is the same throughout the performance, and the multiple doors serve to represent both the inside and outside of the tobacco shop. The set and lighting will be done by Tim Brown.

The play will be performed at 8:10 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday, and at 3:10 p.m. on Sunday. Reserved seats are $7, and student and senior citizen discount tickets sell for $5 for the Wednesday, Thursday, and Sunday performances. Tickets can be purchased at the door or in advance at the LaFortune Student Center Box Office.

Simple Minds age ungracefully

By JASON L. WINSLADE
Accent Writer

In my early days of high school I had a friend who was considered "punk," mainly because she had a weird haircut. She had a picture of Jim Kerr crouched in a strange position stuck to her locker.

I had only just recently heard of Simple Minds by seeing a video in '83 for "Promised You a Miracle" on that short-lived progressive video program from L.A. called "MV3." Simple Minds were progressive pop with an indescribable edge of sentimental strangeness unlike other Scotch/Irish bands like U2.

I quickly researched the Minds' history which went back to the late 70's with their first album, "Life in a Day." After their pinnacle album in 1983, "New Gold Dream" came their harsher work, "Sparkle in the Rain." Then came the Breakfast Club, that paragon of teen flicks, with the theme song, and (gasp!) American airplay, "Don't You Forget About Me," a hit single not even written by the band.

Like OMD, Simple Minds rocketed from relative obscurity in this country to American stardom by an uninteresting song in a John Hughes film. Suddenly, Simple Minds were doing the Live-Aid, Amnesty, and Sun City thing, along with U2 and Bob Geldof. Jim got married to Chrissie Hynde of the Pretenders, the band released a lame pop effort, entitled "Once Upon a Time," and toured huge venues world-wide.

Just as "sell-out" was being screamed, the Minds came back with a predominantly session musician album, "Streetfighting Years," a work that successfully combined the band's new-found global consciousness, with complex layering of instruments in longer, more intense songs, an international sound, a Lou Reed guest vocal, and a striking cover of Peter Gabriel's "Biko."

However, what worked once does not necessarily work again.

Simple Minds' latest effort is entitled "Real Life." But if this is reality, life is pretty damn boring. With only three of the original members, Mel Gaynor on drums, Charlie Burchill on guitar, and Jim Kerr on vocals, the Minds have set the direction of their music right into the heart of VH-1 heaven.

Although the music on the album's title track is fairly tolerable, the lyrics attempt to present "Real Life" on the streets and in cities, a theme better left to Lou Reed.

All in all, most of the lyrical work on the album lacks originality of any kind, and one longs for poetry like "We were on the top and the world was spinning, we were only young in a whirlpool of warning" from "Big Sleep." Kerr has overworked his global consciousness into songs about generalities of "love" and "freedom," in "See the Lights" and "Stand by Love."

Songs such as "Ghost Rider" and "Travelling Man" try just too hard to be Top 40, and new ground is screaming to be covered. "Let the Children Speak" is a bright spot on the album, with musical layering similar to what worked in "Streetfighting Years," and vestiges of older Minds styles appear. "African Skies" adds a contrast with Kerr's breathy and impassioned vocals, and tribal percussion.

Two mellow songs, "Woman," and "Rivers of Ice," are actually romantic without stooping to cliches like the other songs on the album. The writing credit goes to MacLachlan, and with the intricate piano and acoustic guitar layering, it could be Canadian artist Sarah MacLachlan, darling of Nettwerk, Skinny Puppy's label.

The closing track, "When Two Worlds Collide" is actually impressive display of rhythm, passionate vocals, and a theme concerning tension between ideals and reality.

Despite the few interesting songs on the album, "Real Life" offers unimpressive guitar work, half-hearted enthusiasm with regard to originality and quality, and layering of instruments that just does not produce the emotional effect achieved in "Streetfighting Years."

Simple Minds seems like just another one of the products of the early 80's progressive movement that can't seem to age that gracefully.

hurt by it."

When Abram mentioned the incident to Sam Jankovich, the Patriots' chief executive officer apologized.

"Joe was under a lot of pressure," Jankovich said. "I'm sure he didn't mean to insult Rocket in any way."

Mendes won't confirm or deny that he made the remark, but says he is sorry if he offended Ismail.

"If I insulted the gentleman, I truly do apologize," Mendes said. "He's a class individual and I wish him nothing but the best."

Abram says the incident didn't play a major part in Ismail's decision to go to Canada, even though Rocket mentioned Sunday that he was impressed by the "cultural diversity" and progressive racial climate in Toronto.

"It was basically an economic decision," Abram said. "Regardless of Mr. Ismail's personal feelings, it came down to dollars and cents."

However, Abram said New England's skepticism about Ismail's potential impact also hurt the team's chances of signing him.

"When you're trying to recruit a guy as unique as the Rocket, you don't beat him down with negatives," Abram said. "We believe Rocket is an impact player and a superstar. Obviously, the Patriots didn't agree."

Jankovich denied that the Patriots minimized Ismail's talent in order to drive down his asking price of $15.5 million over five years. But he admitted the team didn't think Rocket deserved a mega-contract.

"He's not a quarterback," Jankovich said. "If you're going to ask for that kind of money, you have to handle the ball more than 10 times a game."

After negotiations broke down with the Patriots, they traded their rights to the No. 1 draft pick to Dallas. But the Cowboys also refused to meet Ismail's salary demands and decided to take Miami defensive tackle Russell Maryland.

Jankovich said he warned Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson and team owner Jerry Jones that they would have a hard time signing Ismail.

"I just thought the price was too high," Jankovich said. "Rocket's people told us we would sell 10,000 more season tickets if we signed him. Frankly, I don't think he would mean 500 season tickets."

The Patriots went 1-15 last season, the worst record in the NFL.

"The name of the game is winning, and we need a lot more good players to win," Jankovich said. "To sink all our resources into one player would have been a travesty."

One man willing to gamble on Ismail was Los Angeles Raiders owner Al Davis, who picked Rocket in the fourth round even though he had already signed with the Argonauts. The Raiders will retain the NFL rights to Ismail until the 1995 draft, about eight months after his CFL contract expires.

The same strategy was successful with Bo Jackson. The Raiders drafted Jackson in the seventh round in 1987 after he failed to sign with Tampa Bay, which had picked him a year earlier. Jackson signed with the Raiders after the Bucs' rights expired.

"It looks like Al Davis has done it again," Abram said. "He's always one step ahead of the competition."

Asked if Ismail would eventually play for the Raiders, Abram said: "Rocket has a four-year contract. At the end of four years, he's going to take a look around. If the Raiders are still interested, I'm sure Rocket will want to talk to them."

Cyclists making strides in first competitive season

By JIM VOGL

Sports Writer

The Notre Dame Cycling Club's first season has been an uphill battle.

"We've done pretty well for a first year team, considering we only organized it in January and didn't start training until about two or three weeks before the first race," said freshman Karl Etzel.

"Other established programs have a larger pool of riders to draw from and work together better," continued Etzel.

Despite the disadvantages of the late start, the team continues to make significant strides.

For instance, eight riders (four freshmen) traveled to compete in the Regional Championships meet in Miami, Ohio, last weekend.

In the C-category, Bob Kobayashi took second place, while freshman Sean Carroll finished ninth. Darren Buck also placed fifth in the B-race on Sunday.

The "road" race was run on an eight mile circuit, incorporating hilly terrain. The B race went 43 miles, while the C race went 33.

"Out of the 28 teams in the region, we finished 16th. This weekend was a moderate success, but there was a crash at the finish line," Etzel commented.

In Chicago the previous weekend, the Irish entered a criterium race, run on a mile or mile-and-a-half track, totaling about a 20-30 mile distance, which emphasized bike handling.

Rain plagued the riders, causing another wipe-out, which included Carroll (who wound up finishing ninth), Etzel, and sophomore Chris Lenhart (sixth). Rob Stevenson also took 14th in the B race. Etzel sustained a cracked rib, which forced his lung to collapse.

"We've had a lot of bad luck. Hopefully in another week or two I'll be able to start practicing again," he said.

While the Irish racing season has concluded (the nationals only accept the top two teams in the region), the team anticipates success next season.

"This year's squad had 32 riders and 14 of them were entered in races. We're looking for new riders for next year. While we will eventually form a team of eight to ten competitive riders for races, we also welcome those on the recreational level to get in shape and practice with us," said Etzel.

The Notre Dame women's track team finished in sixth place as it participated in the Indiana Intercollegiate in Indianapolis over the weekend. Indiana University won the meet scoring a total of 173 points, with Purdue finishing a distant second with 126 points.

Point scorers for Notre Dame included Lisa Gorski's fourth-place finish in the 3000-meters (10:25.80), Diana Bradley's fourth-place in the 800-meters (2:16.88—a new school record) and Latrice Waters fifth-place finish in the 100 meters (12:59).

Waters was satisfied with her performance although the weather conditions were not ideal.

"We were really cold and unprepared for the weather, making it hard to warm up," Waters said.

Although scoring only 10 points for the meet, three Irish performers were able to set new school records. Along with Bradley's 800-meter mark, Karen Harris threw the shot put 41-11 3/4 and Andrea Feaster cleared 4-9 3/4 in the high jump.

The Notre Dame women's track team travels to Muncie, Ind. on April 27, for a dual meet against Ball State.

Belles softball to host Irish today

By EILEEN MCGUIRE
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's College softball team (9-8) will play host to Notre Dame (25-19) in a double header today at 3:30 p.m.

The starting pitcher for the Belles will be Stephanie Kisscorni (8-6), who carries an ERA under 2.0 into the contest. Saint Mary's also obtains a strong batting line up with Katherine Grobner leading the team with a batting average of .323.

"Notre Dame has a strong pitching staff," praised Saint Mary's coach Maureen Hardy, "If we can get our bats going early, we have a better chance of coming out on top."

Last season Notre Dame defeated Saint Mary's 1-0 in a game consisting of five innings which had to be called because of rain.

The Irish will start pitcher Missy Linn, (10-10) who posts an ERA of 1.64.

"We're beginning to hit as a team," stated Irish coach Brian Boulac. "I think our pitching staff will establish itself. We just have to keep the ball rolling and we should do fine."

SMC track finishes second

Observer Staff Report

The Saint Mary's track team finished second overall at this past Saturday's Carthage Invitational in Kenosha, Wisc., the highest-ever finish for the team at a meet of this kind.

Overcoming 40-degree temperatures and high winds, the Belles accumulated 72 points to finish behind St. Norbert's College in the nine-team competition.

"For the conditions, everyone ran really well," junior sprinter Beth Seymour, who won the 400-meter dash, said. "We've had a rough season injury-wise, and a lot of people overcame their injuries and ran good races."

Although Seymour was their only individual winner, four Belles finished second in their respective events, including two school-record breaking performances—Katie Linehan (12.9 in the 100 meters) and Lynn Pfeiffer (33-7 1/2 in the triple jump). In addition, Pfeiffer took second in the javelin and Christy LaBarbera in the 100-meter high hurdles.

Women's golf finishes slate with optimism

By ANTHONY KING
Assistant Sports Editor

The conclusion to the Notre Dame women's golf team's season was bittersweet.

The Irish showed flashes of brilliance, as they led the Purdue Lady Boilermaker Invitational after the completion of the first round. The following two rounds were not as kind to the Irish, and they finished in fourth place with a total of 1016 strokes.

The tournament was won by Ohio State, shooting a total of 970 for the 54 holes. They were headed up by Tami Dougan, who breezed to a 239, winning the individual medal honors. Sophomore Kathy Phares and junior Allison Wojnas were the leading scorers for the Irish, both shooting a total of 254 strokes.

Keyed by excellent rounds by Phares, Wojnas, Pandora Fecko, and Cappy Mack, the Irish came out firing to a three shot lead over Ohio State. But the cold weather and poor playing conditions got to the Irish, putting a damper on their title hopes.

"I'm encouraged by the first round," said coach Tom Hanlon. "It is indicative of what we can do when we play well. It proves we can compete against the big teams."

The Irish lose two starters next year, captain Roberta Bryer and Pandora Fecko. Coach Hanlon is encouraged, however, because of the experience the team gained, and the competitiveness they showed.

"I'm looking forward to next fall," explained Hanlon. "We accomplished getting below 320 (strokes) at Michigan State. But, our objective next year is to tee it up to win every time. In order to do that, we must shoot around 320 every time."

Lax travels to Lake Forest in first of three road games

By CHRISTINE PENOTE
Saint Mary's Sports Editor

The Irish Lacrosse team has a 5-6 record with only three games left in the season. In order to return to the NCAA tournament again this year, the Irish must begin their trek with a win against Division III Lake Forest College.

"Being in the NCAA is one of the best feelings in the world and we'd like to do it again," said sophomore midfielder Brian Mayglothing, who tallied three goals and four assists in last season's contest.

Today's game against Lake Forest is the next crucial step in getting there.

Past bouts against Lake Forest have been victorious, as the Irish sports a 9-0 record in their series with the Foresters. In their last game, the Irish crushed the Foresters 22-8.

"But still, this game is not to be taken lightly," said Mayglothing.

One of the biggest concerns facing the Irish is concentration.

"Our problem is not whether or not we're playing hard; it's just mentally tiring playing a full 60 minute game," he said. "And with a sport that demands a great deal of confidence, poise and physical strength we need to concentrate."

Weather, key absences plague Irish men's track at Indy

By HUGH MUNDY
Sports Writer

After a weekend at the University of Tennessee's Dogwood Relays, the Notre Dame men's track and field team returned to its home state Saturday to participate in the Indiana Intercollegiate meet.

The meet featured top teams from across the state including Purdue, Ball State and Indiana University.

However, the contest's most formidable opponent proved to be the strong headwinds and low temperatures which hampered performances throughout the day.

While every squad was forced to deal with the inclement weather, Notre Dame's problems were compounded by the absence of many key athletes.

"It was a really lousy day," remarked assistant coach Tim Connelly. "The weather was uncooperative and we didn't have a lot of our top guys competing."

The Irish sprinting squad was depleted as several athletes stayed in South Bend to participate in spring football drills.

Also, the team was without the services of distance stand-outs Ryan Cahill and Mike O'Connor, both of whom skipped the meet to run in California's prestigious Mt. SAC Relay Carnival.

Fortunately, the team's call for veteran leadership was quickly answered by Kevin Buhrfiend, who registered a 10,000 meter personal best 31:42 in the day's opening track event.

Buhrfiend, who in his fourth year of service has become a mainstay of the Irish distance team, finished eighth overall in the race.

However, the Notre Dame senior's performance was one of few highlights as the gusting winds halted Irish momentum.

Notre Dame was revived momentarily in the final event of the day as the 4x400 team of Chris Ross, John Evans, Brian Peppard, and Phil Casper turned in a season best time of 3:17.

In the field events, the Irish received solid performances from long jumper Jeff Smith, who grabbed fourth place with a season best leap of 23 feet 8 inches.

Discus thrower Tony Smith equalled the feat of his namesake with a heave of 158 feet, marking his best effort of the season.

Next week, Notre Dame will participate in the Drake Relays, considered the premier track and field event in the Midwest.

Correction

In yesterday's Scoreboard section, two incorrect results were reported from the women's Bookstore Tournament. "D-Money & 4 New Jack Sisters" defeated "Turtle Police" 21-8 and "Hoosier Lawyers" defeated "Good for Two Periods; No Second String" 21-8. The Observer regrets the error.

Draft

Francisco Forty-Niners made him the second of ten Irish players taken.

"I know that Ricky is very happy," said Watters' mother, Mrs. Marie Watters. "Ricky left for the 49ers mini-camp this morning. San Francisco is where he really wanted to go.

"Some other teams—the Cowboys, the Dolphins and the Steelers—had called him, but he really wanted to go to the 49ers. He felt that it would be a great honor to be on a team with Joe Montana. He really got his wish."

Jones also got his wish.

"I thought that I would end up with Detroit, the New York Giants, San Francisco, the Los Angeles Raiders or the Steelers because those are the people who have been in contact with me the most," said Jones. "I'm happy because I got into a great defensive scheme. I'll play nickel-back and a little bit of strong safety because of my quickness; they said that they plan to use me on third downs to cover backs and receivers."

Yet defensive alignments were not the only reason for Jones's pleasure. George Stewart, who coached special teams at Notre Dame for several seasons before moving on to Pittsburgh, will again tutor Jones.

"Coach Stewart coached me for a year and a half. It's good to be back out with him. He's one of the major factors in my going there. Basically, he told them that I could play. They thought I'd be gone by the seventh round, but they were glad I was there and they made the choice."

Jones, however, also enjoyed the draft itself.

"It was wild," exclaimed Jones. "I was sitting in the room and waiting. The phone would ring and I'd jump up. You're just hoping that it's a team you like and want to play for. I was on pins and needles. They gave me a certain round range and it was running out when the Steelers picked me."

Kowalkowski enters a new situation with the Eagles under first-year head coach Rich Kotite, but the eighth-round pick is optimistic about his chances of making the team.

"Throughout my career, I've walked into new situations and it always seemed to work out," he said. "If that's any kind of omen, I look at it as a good one."

"For me to make the team, I'm going to have to play well on special teams. But I'll have a better idea of where I stand and of what my role will be after mini-camp starts Thursday."

Heldt, who some experts thought would go as high as the fourth or fifth rounds, was slightly disappointed that he fell all the way to the 10th. Yet like Kowalkowski, Heldt believes that he has a very good chance of making the team in San Diego.

"Everyone is pretty much even right now, and once I make the team, I'll feel a lot better," Heldt said. "I'm ready to work really hard, and with a lot of determination, I'll make it."

Lyght, Zorich, Dahl, Stonebreaker, Watters, Ryan and Ismail were all unavailable for comment.

55-meter event at the NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships last month. Also in the event will be John Drummond of Texas Christian and James Jett of West Virginia.

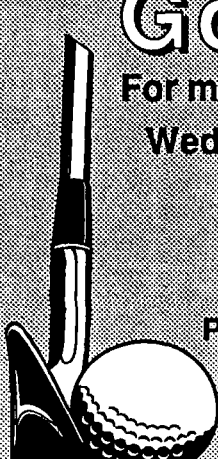

Baker assumed Ismail still was coming despite his widely heralded signing with the Toronto Argonauts.

Neither an agent for Ismail nor a spokesman for the Argonauts immediately returned a phone call for comment on whether Ismail would run at Penn.

During the recent indoor season, Ismail ran the 55 meters in 6.07 seconds, making him the 10th-fastest collegian ever. Last weekend, Ismail competed in his first 100-meter race of the season in a quadrangular meet with St. John's, Western Michigan and Drake. His winning time of 10.34 bettered the NCAA provisional qualifying time.

While Ismail's football accomplishments are well known, his track performances have not been highly publicized. But at Meyers High School in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., he was named male athlete of the year by state track and field coaches. At the state meet his senior year, he won the 100 meters (10.63), the long jump (23 feet, 4 inches) and anchored the winning 400-meter relay team.

Later in his senior year, Ismail took second in the Golden West invitational 100 meters and placed second at the TAC junior meet. His 6.28 mark in the 55 led the nation for the '88 season.

Ismail's decision to join Argos made easier by Pats

'Cultural diversity' attractive

(AP)—The Rocket's road to Canada was paved with dollar signs, but race and respect also played a part in Raghbir Ismail's decision to nix the NFL and join the CFL's Toronto Argonauts.

After the New England Patriots and Dallas Cowboys failed to meet his contract demands before the NFL draft, Ismail signed with the Argonauts for a potential $26.2 million — the biggest deal in pro football history.

But money wasn't the only reason he chose the CFL over the NFL.

During negotiations with the Patriots, Ismail was offended by what he believed was a racist remark by team executive Joe Mendes. Ismail's agent, Ed Abram, also said the Patriots tried to "browbeat" the Notre Dame wide receiver-kick returner by insisting he wasn't an impact player and didn't deserve the kind of huge contract normally reserved for star quarterbacks.

"They repeated that over and over again," Abram said Monday. "They never acted like they really wanted the Rocket."

What made matters worse was a comment by Joe Mendes, the Patriots' director of player operations. During preliminary contract talks, Mendes suggested that Ismail lower his asking price. When Ismail looked away from him, Mendes reportedly snapped, "You have the attention span of Tim Worley."

Worley, a running back for the Pittsburgh Steelers, and Ismail are black.

Abram wasn't present during the meeting, but said Ismail later told him about Mendes' remark.

"He found it quite insulting," see TORONTO/page 12

Penn Relays changes format to accomodate pro Rocket

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The impact of Raghbir "Rocket" Ismail signing a reported $26.2 million contract to play football in Canada tested the ingenuity of Penn Relays officials.

Ismail, the Notre Dame All-American wide receiver and kick returner, still is scheduled to run Saturday in the Penn Relays but under a different scenario.

Originally, Ismail, the IC4A indoor 55-meter champion this year, was to run at Penn in an Olympic Development 100-meter dash that included such standout sprinters as Andre Cason, world indoor champion this year, and Raymond Stewart of Jamaica, No. 1 outdoors two years ago.

But Olympic Development events are governed by the International Amateur Athletic Federation, and IAAF rules prohibit professional athletes from competing in international or domestic events. That could have put Ismail out of the Penn event.

But Penn officials weren't going to let the IAAF regulation cost them "The Rocket," whose appearance figures to boost attendance substantially.

Dr. Timothy Baker, Penn Relays director, and his staff simply added another 100-meter section, featuring only college runners. Under NCAA rules, Ismail is eligible to compete. Cason, Stewart and three other runners who come under the IAAF regulation will run in their own section.

The field in which Ismail will run includes Augustine Obia, a Washington State see ROCKET/page 14 junior who beat Ismail in the ## Irish baseball puts win streak on the line vs. Indiana

By RICH SZABO
Sports Writer

The 20th-ranked Irish baseball team returns to action tonight with a 7 p.m. matchup at Coveleski Stadium against Big Ten power Indiana University. Going into tonight's non-conference game against Indiana, the Notre Dame baseball team has a lot of positives on their side.

The Irish (26-12) are riding a twelve-game winning streak, a streak which has seen dominant pitching performances, as the Irish rotation has held six of its last seven opponents to two runs or less.

On Sunday, Irish coach Pat Murphy became the second winningest coach in Notre Dame history as the Irish swept a doubleheader from Butler. The wins, Murphy's 158th and 159th, pushed him past Larry Gallo into second place. In his fourth season, Murphy overtook Gallo, who coached from 1981-1987. Jake Kline is the winningest coach in ND history, chalking up 558 victories.

This week also marked the return of the Irish to the national rankings. The Irish, who were ranked 15th in the pre-season, climbed back up to 20th in the Collegiate Baseball/ESPN poll.

"Indiana is 30-13 right now," said Murphy, "and they are always tough. They have dominated Notre Dame until recently, and it would be nice for us to continue our winning ways against them. We know we can beat them, but it's just a matter of going out and executing."

The Irish have had some excellent individual performances lately. Captain Joe Binkiewicz has been on fire, hitting a torrid 25-for-46 in his last 14 games. Greg Layson has emerged as a solid leadoff hitter for the Irish, and the pitching staff has been overpowering during the winning streak.

David Sinnes is expected to start against the Hoosiers. Sinnes is 2-1 on the season, with a 5.20 ERA, but has faced some of the top teams in the country and recorded a huge win over then third-ranked Texas.

"David is throwing the ball a lot better than he threw last year. He has faced Stanford, Texas, Michigan, and UCLA among others, and though the statistics may not show it, he is pitching much better than last year," said Murphy.

During a 60-game season, there are bound to be some injuries, and the Irish have not escaped unscathed.

"Eric Danapillis missed a couple games last week," said Murphy, "and he is a walking first-aid unit. Most of the guys have some little injuries. You go through a 60-game baseball season with nagging injuries, nothing that is going to keep anyone out of the lineup, but I don't think that anybody is at full strength after playing this grueling a schedule."

The Irish have won 13 of the last 14 games, and after three non-conference games, go back to the grind of the Midwest Collegiate Conference. The Irish are currently 9-2 in the MCC, trailing Detroit, which tops the conference with a 12-2 mark.

Said Irish shortstop Craig Counsell, "We look forward to going against the best teams in the country. We don't take the MCC games lightly, because everyone is gunning for us. If we don't concentrate and play well, we're going to get beaten, so we don't let up in the MCC."

Ten chosen in NFL draft; Lyght picked 5th overall

Success breeds success.

At least, that's what the Los Angeles Rams hope is the case with cornerback Todd Lyght, one of 10 seniors picked from the 1990 Notre Dame football team in this weekend's NFL draft.

Judging from the number of Irish players drafted, NFL general managers and coaches must have been impressed by the achievements of Notre Dame's class of 1991—one national championship (1988), a runner-up finish (1989), four major bowl appearances and an overall record of 40-8.

In addition, the successful transitions of Tim Grunhard (Kansas City), Pat Terrell and Frank Stams (LA Rams) and Jeff Alm (Houston) from college to pro ball make it seem less risky for an NFL team to take a chance on a Notre Dame player.

Lyght was followed on day one by running back Ricky Watters (49ers, 2nd round), defensive tackle Chris Zorich (Bears, 2nd), offensive lineman Bob Dahl (Bengals, 3rd), and wide receiver Raghbir Ismail (Raiders, 4th).

The second day of drafting action saw offensive lineman Tim Ryan (Buccaneers, 5th), linebacker Andre Jones (Steelers, 7th), linebacker Scott Kowalkowski (Eagles, 8th), linebacker Michael Stonebreaker (Bears, 9th) and center Mike Heldt (Chargers, 10th) get their calls.

Lyght, the highest-picked Irish player, was the fifth choice overall in the draft. The choice of Lyght surprised numerous draft gurus, who had predicted the talented defensive specialist from Flint, Mich., would go to the Cleveland Browns in the second pick overall. Lyght will join fellow Notre Dame grads Frank Stams and Pat Terrell on the Rams squad.

"We thought Lyght was one of the best players in the draft...in our scheme, you have to be smart, one, and tough and aggressive, two," remarked Los Angeles defensive coordinator Jeff Fisher, quoted after Lyght's selection Sunday. "Lyght is both of those."

Watters saw his dreams become reality when the San
