First-time meeting: ND to host US and African reps

By ANN MARIE HARTMAN
News Writer

In a historical first-time conference to be held next week at the University of Notre Dame, officials of the African National Congress (ANC) will meet U.S. government representatives and executives from more than 40 major U.S. corporations to discuss a policy for investment in post-apartheid South Africa.

Over the weekend, the ANC notified Notre Dame that it invited representatives of long-time political rival, Inkatha, to join the conference, along with representatives of the Pan-Africanist Congress and the Azanian People's Organization.

The 10-person ANC delegation will be led by its director of international affairs, Thabo Mbeki, and will include treasurer general Thomas Mkobi, department of economic planning official Trevor Manual, and Penwell Manduna, member of the ANC's constitutional committee.

Representing the U.S. government will be assistant secretary of state for African affairs, Herman Cohen; Kevin Callwood, vice president of the Overseas Private Investment Corporation; and Emily Solomon, Commerce department desk officer for South Africa. Former U.S.

Ambassador to South Africa Herman Nickel and Rep. Maxine Waters (D-Cal.), a leader of the Congressional Black Caucus will also attend.

The ANC asked Father Oliver Williams, associate provost and business ethics scholar, to organize the conference. George Schroll, South African consultant for Colgate-Palmolive, is co-chair of the organization committee for the conference with Williams.

"South Africa is a tremendous place for investment, but corporations fear South Africa because of its political instability," said Williams, who has followed the situation in South Africa for the past 15 years. The idea for the conference originated during meetings Williams attended during his latest visit to South Africa last March.

"The problems in South Africa are not ideological...they come from the fact that the young people do not have jobs," Williams added.

Williams stated that political rights are currently within grasp of the South African people and that it is possible that within the next two years they will have a new constitution for their government. The focus of the South African leadership is what will happen after a new constitution is established.

The ANC at this time maintains its long-standing policy against economic engagement in South Africa until a new government is in place, but the organization and its allies are beginning to formulate approaches for new investments in a post-apartheid nation, said Denny Moore, director of Notre Dame's office of Public Relations and Information.

Given what the ANC believes to be the unjust legacy of past economic activity in South Africa, the Notre Dame meeting is designed to explore policies

Forum focuses on off-campus crime problems

By PAUL PEARSON
Assistant News Editor

Off-campus crime is a manageable problem in this community, South Bend Mayor Joe Kernan said at a student government forum Tuesday.

The forum featured Kernan; Bill Kirk, assistant vice president for Residence Life; Rex Rakow, director of Notre Dame Security; and Larry Bennett, chief of the Uniform Division of the South Bend Police.

Kernan said that the South Bend Police is working hard to reduce crime in the northeast neighborhood of South Bend, which houses a large amount of off-campus students. "The last thing we want to see is additional barriers put up," between the University and the community, he said.

Rakow said that the severity and number of incidents involving students so far this year is lower than those last year at the same time. He credited this to the "excellent" relationship between ND Security and the South Bend Police.

Bennett also called this relationship "outstanding." In his 23 years on the force, he said, there has never been a problem between the departments.

University President Father Edward Malloy gives his annual faculty address yesterday. He reflected on Notre Dame's rich history and presented his key hopes for the future.

Malloy's faculty address reflects on past and future

By CHRISTOPHER HANIFIN
News Writer

Reflection on the University's past, and hope for the future dominated University President Father Edward Malloy's annual faculty address yesterday.

"We gather in the midst of our celebration to reflect on the history of Notre Dame," he said. "The activity around us provides the opportunity to reflect on our collective past and to look forward to future opportunities."

Malloy characterized the foundation of the University as a trial of faith. "(Father) Sorin took on a daunting task with courage and conviction. His persistence was a sign of faith, of belief in God's blessings," Malloy said yesterday in Washington Hall.

Although he acknowledged criticism of modern education, including lack of grants, general attitudes of intolerance among students, and a lack of interest in teaching careers, Malloy said that today "American higher education is unparalleled in education and access."

Malloy addressed several key areas to Notre Dame's present and future:

- Beginning with finances, Malloy announced that the University was again able to maintain a balanced budget last year, through "prudent stewardship of the budget administration."

Particularly successful was the "Strategic Moment" campaign which raised in excess of $450 million, according to Malloy. The monetary success of the athletic program, especially the NBC contract, also contributed to the University's financial success last year.

"The NBC contract makes us a stronger institution due to our targeted use of the monies," he said.

The University is "in better financial health than the majority of our peer institutions," said Malloy. He vowed that Notre Dame "will not accept tradeoffs forced by economic conditions," such as staff layoffs and downsizing which have been commonplace in other institutions.

- Academically, the University "has a long way to go in recognizing the importance of outside funding," said Malloy.

Many of the physical improvements to the University, such as the Hesburgh Center for International Studies, the Marie P. DeBartolo Center for Performing Arts, and changes in the Computing Center, are

Student government promotes service organizations

Editor's note: This is the third of a three-part series concerning issues student government is addressing during the 1991-92 school year.

By MEGAN JUNIUS
News Writer

Student Government is serving as a link between the student community and social service organizations by supporting several student social services including conducting a United Way fund drive on campus, increasing awareness of date-rape, and sponsoring a sesquicentennial humanitarian week.

The United Way fund drive, sponsored by Student Government and Hall Presidents council began on Oct. 1 and will continue through Oct. 11. Representatives will be taking collections throughout the dorms and dining halls, Julie Bradley, Student Government Commissioner for Social concerns and United Way Student Campaign Chairperson said.

"The $5,000 goal is higher than in the past. We are hoping dorm collections make up the difference," Bradley said.

Along with the beginning of the United Way Drive, Student Government, in conjunction with Campus Alliance Rape Elimination (CARE), has begun date rape awareness presentations in residence halls.

"We want people to be aware that date rape does occur on the Notre Dame campus," Sheila Buckman, Student Government Commissioner for Women's Concerns said.

According to Buckman, also Co-chair for the Notre Dame chapter of CARE, two cases of date rape have been reported to

Notre Dame security during the 1991-92 school year; last year not one case was reported. "If people realize there is a problem, they will report it," she said.

The presentations are given by four to six presenters. The presenters have been trained by Sex Offense Services, a rape service in South Bend, Buckman said. There are both male and female presenters. During the presentations, students watch a video tape and then discuss potential problems and solutions, she said.

Buckman hopes to get to all of the dorms before Christmas. "Freshman women are most vulnerable to date-rape because they are most unsure of themselves. They are also in unfamiliar surroundings. Therefore, we want to conduct the presentations as soon as possible," she said.

The date-rape presentations are not required to be seen by all freshmen as are Honor Code and Alcohol Awareness presentations. The presenters must be invited by the dorm rectors, Buckman said.

"Last year a few men's dorms did not conduct the presentations. We are hoping for a 100 percent response this year," she said.

Student Government is also encouraging more dorm service projects.

A Humanitarian Week, in association with the Notre Dame Sesquicentennial, will take place in April, Julie Bradley said. "This will be a nationwide service project organized by the Alumni association. Every Notre Dame Club will sponsor a service project," she said.

"Both Student Government and Student Union Board will work together in order to conduct on campus and dorm service projects," she said.

Other service projects conducted by Student Government in conjunction with the Center for Social Concerns are Christmas in April, a lecture series, and a World Hunger Organization Seminar, Bradley stated.

"We will also be sponsoring a lecture series with the CPC on homosexuality, sexuality and racism," Bradley said.

Chauvinism rears its ugly head in the gym

My best friend is going to college in California on a football scholarship. He works out every day. And he has no body fat.

Anna Marie Tabor
SMC Accent Editor

When I asked Michael's advice on how I could start to get myself in shape he leaned forward and said in his patronizing way, "Woman, don't worry your silly little head about such male business. Go fix my dinner."

Seriously, I want to get pumped up. "Okay, go invest in a pair of Q-Tips and start with your basic curl. All right—I'll be serious. First you need to find a gym. Not one of those manicured 'fitness centers' where the geriatrics huff and puff on that pressurized junk. A real gym."

Like the kind where the spandex queens reign and men who look like marshmallows on toothpicks gawk at themselves in those full-length mirrors?

"Naw. That kind just doesn't do it either. What you need to do is find a real hole-in-the-wall with no air conditioning, bad lighting, and no water fountains. Go to the smelliest, sleeziest, rankest gym that doesn't sell T-shirts that proclaim 'Body By Buffy.'"

I have one of those shirts. "Exactly. And look at you. Serious body-builders don't work out at places like that. Those pseudo-studs flog up the mirrors too much. They're too busy admiring their reflections and the tight-bunned redhead in the next machine."

So I need to scout out a place not unlike the meat processing plant where Rocky got his start.

"Right." "I wouldn't even have to shave or shower before I work out."

"The women who lift in places like that are really ripped and hardly look female anymore. Personally, I find that unattractive."

I guess that is kind of unfeminine. But I do want to get in shape, and be taken seriously.

"Anna, that just isn't going to happen. If you join a club with the sauna, co-ed hot tub, aerobics classes, and stationary bikes, people are going to think you're there to show off and scam. Women have to look good for the men when they work out there and no one is supposed to look good when they work out."

Then I'll take my chances and go to a 'real' gym.

"They'll laugh you out of there. And besides, you don't have the time to devote to the art of bodybuilding. You have to do it every day. Just ask any of your puffed-up friends that visit GNC more than the john."

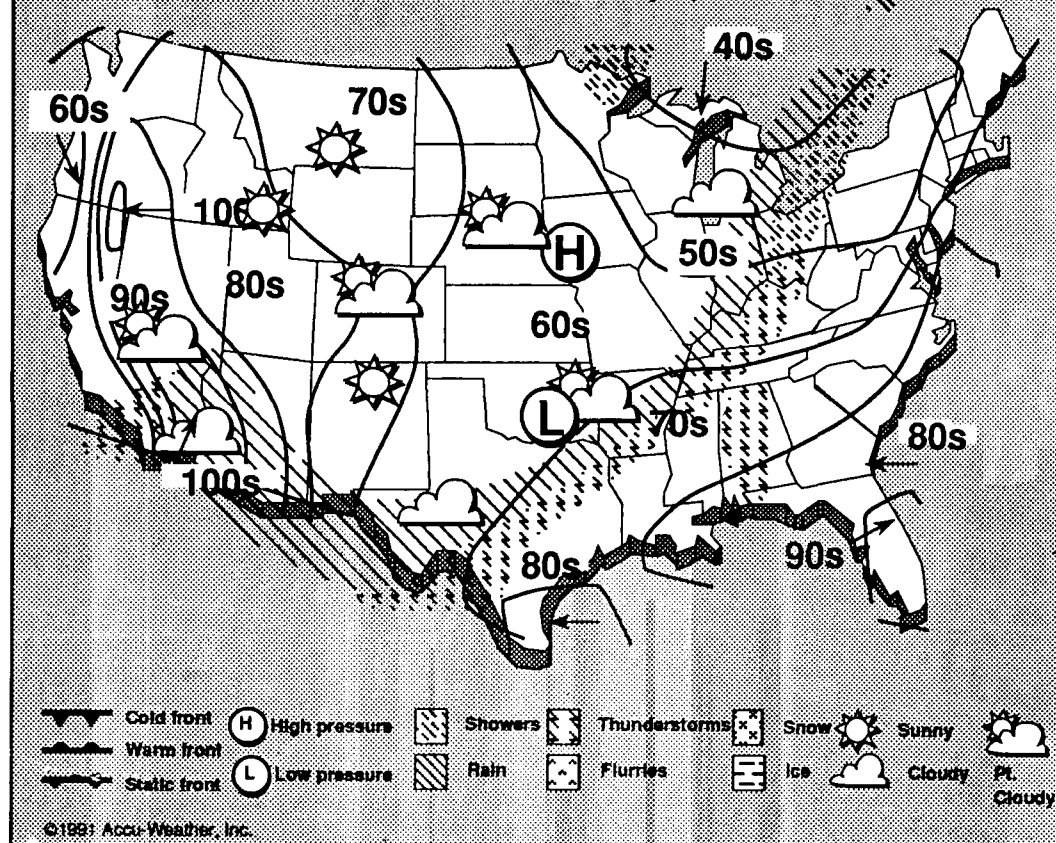

But I just want a few cuts, nothing too dramatic.

"It would take you months to see any results at all and women just don't have the patience it takes to get there. Besides, I already told you the rare ones who spend all their time pumping iron aren't attractive. Real gyms just aren't a woman's place."

Okay, Mr. Expert, where is a woman's place? "In the kitchen and in the bedroom."

AIDS increasing dramatically

■ CHICAGO — The AIDS virus appears to be spreading quickly among poor teen-agers, particularly dropouts, and is reaching especially alarming levels among girls, studies show. Experts say they have detected a dramatic increase in the level of infection among teen-agers over the past year or two. One study in Washington found that over 1 percent of the city's adolescents are now infected, and the disease appears to be spreading through heterosexual encounters in these youngsters. Blood from more than 11,000 youngsters has been tested. The infection rate grew from 0.4 percent in 1987 to 1.3 percent now. "We may be facing a heterosexual epidemic," experts say. It appears that teen-age boys in Washington are catching the virus from sex with girls and then infecting other girls, who pass it on again.

Stanford celebrates its Centennial

■ STANFORD, Calif. — Beleaguered Stanford University ended its 100th year with a splashy stadium show that combined entertainment with history. Master of ceremonies Ted Koppel and school President Donald Kennedy told the crowd of about 30,000 that Stanford will overcome its problems in its second century. Kennedy has announced he will resign next year due to a research billing scandal at Stanford. Singer Bobby McFerrin and Whoopi Goldberg were among celebrities who kept the two-hour show from dragging. Over 10,000 seats were empty despite discounts on tickets. The show culminated four days of centennial parties, parades and visits from politicians. During the past year, the school has been beset with problems, including a federal investigation into alleged overbilling of up to $200 million for research-related costs during the 1980s. Stanford University, which has denied wrongdoing, has paid back approximately $1.35 million for inappropriate bills.

Miller details 'hustling'

By JENNIFER HABRYCH
Assistant Saint Mary's Editor

The rise of white women in the work force in the late 1960's led to an increase in the number of unemployed underclass black women turning to the streets and to the "hustling" of their bodies as a source of income, according to Professor Elinor Miller.

Professor of sociology and women's studies at the University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee, Miller presented this theory at the lecture titled "Hustling: The Work of Underclass Minority Women," Tuesday evening at Saint Mary's College.

Miller, who has done research in the field of "hustling," places a particular importance on the underclass minority population. She argues that white women who entered the work force with higher credentials—namely a high school diploma—"depressed the marketability of black women." This "crowding" of the work force led to "increases in unemployment and poverty among women of color," said Miller.

As more black women turned to hustling, the crime rate also rose. This correlation led Miller to her study of hustlers. She found that the increase was mainly in street crimes—larceny, embezzlement, fraud, and forgery.

Interviewing 84 Milwaukee street hustlers, Miller found that the runaways that turned to hustling were equal in numbers of blacks and whites, and the drug abusers on the streets tended to be whites. The uneven proportion, according to Miller, occurs in the social structure and domestic network of underclass black Americans.

Miller has written one book on her theory, "Street Woman," which was awarded the American Sociological Association Criminology Section Distinguished Scholar Award. Still, she feels that her research lacks depth.

"The model works in Milwaukee, and I believe it also applies to cities like Cleveland, Minneapolis, Boston, and Cincinnati, which are relatively the same in size and values."

She said that she believes more research should be done in the area to determine how the model works in other cities, and to study the other factors such as the change from heroine to cocaine as the drug of choice in the United States.

HPC discusses WVFI, SMC, and Weekend Wheels

By STEVEN KRAUSS
News Writer

Stanford Hall Co-President Greg Butrus submitted a proposal that the Hall Presidents Council (HPC) throw its support behind WVFI 640 AM "in their efforts to become a FCC licensed FM broadcast radio station."

After spirited discussion, HPC Co-Chairman Charlie James elected to table a vote on the resolution until next week in order to let the presidents think about it, and also to give the Student Senate a chance to act on it first.

The proposal says in effect that WVFI is an asset to the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's communities, and that a move to FM "is a positive step for the University and deserves the full support of the Administration."

Also at the meeting, Saint Mary's representative Adrienne Briggs announced that the Residence Hall Association (RHA) will have their first meeting Oct. 2 at 8:30 p.m. in room 303 Haggar.

RHA is a new organization which will deal strictly with Saint Mary's residence halls and the issues affecting them. The agenda for their first meeting includes the possible restructuring of parietals, the smoking policy, and room selections. The meeting is open forum and all Saint Mary's students are welcome to attend.

Finally, the Council heard a report on Weekend Wheels' first two days of operation. According to James, 10-15 people rode the service on Friday night, and over 70 people rode on Saturday night. "Everyone at the Commons on Saturday night took Weekend Wheels back to campus at 3 a.m."

James was undaunted by the comparative low numbers for the first weekend. Some of the reasons he gave were a lack of advertising in the bars, and the fact that there is nothing identifying the United Limo bus as Weekend Wheels. Both problems should be rectified soon, however. "Once home football weekends start up again, we expect ridership to double." Weekend Wheels is a service sponsored fully by HPC in an effort to curb both drinking and driving, and the off-campus crime that results when students attempt to walk home from bars.

The buses run every Friday and Saturday between 12 and 3 a.m. The current route has the United Limo bus leaving Campus View apartments every thirty minutes beginning at 12. The bus then goes to the Linebacker, Five Corners, Club 23, Lafayette Square, down ND Ave., and makes stops at the Main Circle and the Library Circle.

Malloy

 toward a stronger academic status.
 Malloy was also quick to note that Notre Dame continues to draw high quality recruits at all levels, despite limitations in financial resources. The University clearly manifests its academic success in its ability to retain a high percentage of students, he said.
 In addition, Malloy expressed his pride in the ability of Notre Dame graduates to successfully place themselves in the job market as well as post-graduate education.
 Malloy characterized Notre Dame faculty as largely over-worked. There is a need for the faculty to address the issue of teaching versus research, and what lessons can be learned from other research universities, he said.

 •There is a deep need for continued thought about the spiritual development of the Notre Dame community, according to Malloy.
 "In my judgement, during the Sesquicentennial there is no more important area for reflection than the Catholic character of this institution," he said.
 The University shows its commitment to faith through the large number of students who actively worship at Mass, take part in retreats, and involve themselves in social service projects, according to Malloy.

 However, the faculty also plays an important role in the spiritual development of the student body. Faculty must "assume special responsibility" in nurturing faith among the students, he said.
 The Congregation of the Holy Cross must play an important role in every phase of Notre Dame life as "a sign of the community's commitment to the well being of the University," Malloy explained.
 Notre Dame should become neither "Catholic in name only" nor "dedicated to antiquated morals," as some other Catholic schools have.

•A number of issues which Malloy feels are being more successfully addressed now than in the past are cultural diversity, environmental concerns, and off-campus crime. Malloy also expressed his hope that Notre Dame will enhance its appearance internationally.
 All of these issues are part of what Malloy calls "a challenging reality" for the University.
 Malloy also announced the formation of a colloquy to "review present realities and identify the most appropriate steps for the University's future." The committee will focus on the major areas of University life, including academics, finances, student life, and the mission of Notre Dame.

Africa

Given what the ANC believes to be the unjust legacy of past economic activity in South Africa, the Notre Dame meeting is designed to explore policies that would redress this legacy, Moore said.

The most successful outcome of the conference, according to Williams, will be that U.S. businesses see South Africa to be a healthy climate for investment.

The list of U.S. businesses sending representatives to the meeting includes AT&T, Bristol-Meyers-Squibb, Coca-Cola, Colgate-Palmolive, Ford Motors, Kellogg, and Eli Lilly.

The conference will begin Sunday, October 6 and continue through Tuesday, October 8 at the Center for Continuing Education. The meetings are closed to the public.

Regarding another relationship—that between University students and the local community—Bennett said that, while the police do not want animosity, "It's a two-way street."

Kernan said that police officers do not go out looking for students to arrest. "There isn't a bounty on students. We have a responsibility to the people who pay our salaries to respond to complaints."

While admitting that some of his officers are "a little short-tempered" at times, Bennett said that he deals with problems when he knows they exist. "If I have an officer not responding properly, I want to know about it. Unless I know about it, there's not a whole lot I can do."

Kernan cited several drug prevention and housing programs which he believes benefit both the students and the community. In particular, he praised the neighborhood watch program in the northeast community. "Our goal is to take that into every neighborhood in the city," Bennett agreed, saying "You'll find none stronger (in the city)."

Kernan also praised the South Bend Police department for its efforts in clamping down on crime. "South Bend has the finest police department in Indiana because of the quality of officers we have."

However, Kernan said that the help the city is getting from Washington is "inadequate" for its needs. This year, South Bend received $3 million from the federal government, which is "less than has been available in the past."

One of the keys to reducing off-campus crime, Kernan said, is making students aware that this community "isn't Disneyland." Rakow agreed, saying that students venturing off-campus "need to be careful about going into areas with which they're not familiar."

Saint Mary's offers chance to sample career options

By JOAN CATALANO
News Writer

Students will have the opportunity to learn about career options from representatives of over 60 corporations, non-profit organizations, governmental offices and graduate schools this week at Saint Mary's.

According to Jeffrey Roberts, coordinator of placement services at Saint Mary's, the representatives will be on hand between 3 p.m. and 5:30 p.m. Thursday, October 3 in the lobby of LeMans Hall.

This event, called "Showcase of Careers '91," is open to all Saint Mary's and Notre Dame students free of charge, he said.

"Come in, explore and discover some new opportunities," said Roberts. "The showcase provides an excellent opportunity for students to begin or continue the career exploration and job search process."

Students can obtain information on careers, graduate education, volunteer positions, internships or full-time employment, according to Roberts. In addition, "some of the organizations participating in the event will be accepting resumes from job seekers," he added.

Among the more recognizable participants are the American Cancer Society, Snite Museum, Muskegon Heights and South Bend school districts, Federal Bureau of Investigation, U.S. States Department, IBM and Holy Cross Associates.

A number of SMC alumnae and several fathers of current Saint Mary's students will also be attending to represent their organizations, including the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago and Sidley & Austin law firm.

The event is sponsored by Saint Mary's Student Government, the SMC senior and junior boards, and the Saint Mary's Counseling and Career Development Center.

Prof recalls positive images of nursing

By JEANNE DE VITA
News Writer

Professor JoAnn Widerquist expressed hope that she can leave a strong legacy of pride to her nursing students in a lecture at Saint Mary's Carroll Auditorium, Tuesday.

Widerquist, chairperson and associate professor of the Saint Mary's department of Nursing, traced the significant figures in her life for an audience of both students and faculty in the second lecture in the "Life of the Mind" series.

She related the images that these individuals formed in her mind to what she called the basic values that form the integral part of the human consciousness: the body, mind, and spirit.

Beginning with her earliest childhood memories, she recalled the skeptical, and even controversial family discussions that revolved around her grandfather's political support for socialism.

"I learned early the need to question, examine issues, and defend my position," Widerquist said.

Independent thinking, even for Depression-age females, was a consistent element in Widerquist's early life. She said her personal interaction with an educated, career-oriented aunt and a "try it, you can do it," attitude encouraged her in her struggle for education.

Widerquist added that compliments such as 'you think like a man,' which she heard during her education, proved her commitment and helped make her aware of the reality of the feminine struggle.

During a slide presentation, Widerquist showed her audience pictures of women who inspired her to take up later struggles against unequal pay for female nurses and male environmentalists.

A broken wrist at the age of 15 took the Depression-age girl to the hospital for not only medical service, but a job. Hired immediately as a nurse's aid, Widerquist began a career that she said introduced her to some of the men and women who have contributed to her life.

"Nursing as an art hadn't occurred to me" at that time, Widerquist explained. She said she began her aide's job hesitant and nauseous, but found herself responding to the job that demanded more than her best work. Nursing, she said, had become a calling.

For a while, Widerquist said, her work in polio nursing forced her to ignore the individual person and concentrate strictly on healing the physical body, but the nuns she came in contact with taught her again to channel her compassion for the hurting into more than simple healing.

In her quest to serve the needs of the community around her, Widerquist said she hesitantly accepted a teaching position and again found herself overwhelmed by the personal response she had to the experience.

"Teaching is more what we are than what we know," Widerquist said. In her calling to teach, Widerquist found herself challenging the standard behavior of 1950's women by balancing both a career and family.

According to Widerquist, it wasn't until she joined the faculty at Saint Mary's that she found the profoundly spiritual aspects of nursing. She said her interaction with the young women of the college has helped her to realize that every year is the best year of one's life.

She said trips with her husband to the Princeton Theological Seminary helped reinforce the healing and ultimate possibilities of faith.

In this search for spirituality in her vocation, Widerquist took a sabbatical in London to study the writings of Florence Nightingale, whom she called a woman aware of "nursing, women, and women's work."

This personal journey helped awaken in her a pride in the nursing heritage. She urged students to ignore the opposition and degrading comments. "We need people with good minds in nursing very much," she noted.

Widerquist said this glimpse into the mind of a woman should spark the minds of other women. "The quest for knowledge relies on the eye of the mind," she said.

Japanese culture topic of discussion at fireside chat

By CHRISTI CORBETT
News Writer

The Japanese culture is obsessed with its own uniqueness, according to a professor speaking yesterday at a Multicultural Fall Festival fireside chat.

"They want to see themselves as more unique than any other country," said Michael Brownstein, ND professor of Japanese.

The similarities and differences between American and Japanese cultures are obstacles to understanding Japan, Brownstein said. Although Japanese cities look like American cities, for example, the differences within the cities are actually numerous.

"Don't be too quick to judge, and try to look beneath the surface," said Brownstein in his discussion, "Understanding Japan."

One obstruction to understanding Japan concerns stereotypes and misconceptions. The second obstacle is that Americans can only understand the Japanese through self-descriptions, which may not always be accurate for the entire country, he explained.

Brownstein illustrated this by pointing to the Japanese reputation for politeness. This perceived politeness may only be a way of keeping distance from Americans, he said.

The Japanese also have a reputation for placing great emphasis on the family. Because every culture puts some type of emphasis on the family, the Japanese are not unique for possessing this trait, he added.

Brownstein answered general questions about Japan:

•Regarding religion, Brownstein said that the "Japanese are all a little Shinto, a little Buddhist, and a little Confucian."

Less than one percent of Japanese are Christian, he said.

•Brownstein said that the Japanese use a Confucian approach to education. "I'm not sure that Americans would put up with the educational system in Japan," he said.

According to Brownstein, it's hard to get into college in Japan, but easy to graduate.

•Economically, the Japanese can attribute their success to a group-oriented attitude. The idea of individualism has a negative connotation in Japan, according to Japanese professor Isamu Fukuchi.

The Japanese are more group oriented, focusing on their company or their country. This non-individualistic attitude has helped Japan achieve great economic success, he said.

•The idea that the Japanese cannot or will not tolerate failure is a myth, according to Brownstein.

The stereotype of a Japanese person preferring death to dishonor has its roots in historical Samurai warriors killing themselves before allowing themselves to be taken prisoner.

These warriors did this, Brownstein explained, because they considered the enemy to be beneath them, and if they were caught, the torture imposed by the captors would be far worse than killing oneself.

The Japanese actually have a great a tolerance for failure as any other culture, he concluded.

WVFI deserves support of the ND/SMC community

Dear Editor:

I am writing to express my support, and in hopes to sway others, for WVFI, the voice of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's. I strongly feel that our student-run radio station is being unreasonably persecuted by the University—both by the Administration and by a majority of my peers.

First of all, I am not an employee of WVFI, therefore I am not speaking on their behalf or am I trying to express their own grievances. Secondly, due to my noninvolvement with the station, I apologize for any wrongful assumptions or generalizations that my ignorance allows me to make.

But I am familiar with the obvious commitment that WVFI has to the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's community. Their thought-provoking program challenges us to go beyond ND/SMC - take life a step further - be crazy. The assumed way to achieve this "nirvana" is through music.

WVFI presents a sampling of alternative music - challenging, powerful music in an often too closed-minded society. The "Voice of ND/SMC" is an invaluable asset to our community and is definitely worth the conversion (to be financed by WVFI) to FM.

Yes, WVFI has battled with the FCC, but that simply proves a valuable point. We, as college students, are in continual conflict with those who attempt to suppress and control. We, "leaders of the future," need to take a stand on pertinent issues - one which WVFI is making against censorship.

My stand on censorship is strong, but simple: Censorship is evil. But I'll leave that for another time. I'll leave you with this:

"We are not afraid to entrust the American people with unpleasant facts, foreign ideas, alien philosophies, and competitive values. For a nation that is afraid to let its people judge the truth and falsehood in an open market is a nation that is afraid of its people."

'Queers' are proud of rights movement

Dear Editor:

Looking through the October issue of Common Sense, you'll notice an advertisement which boldly proclaims "Where The Queers Are In '91." If the title of the ad shocks or startles you, then read on for a better understanding of what was meant by the cavalier language.

The enthusiastic adoption of the word Queer by youthful gay activists is a fairly recent development in the long struggle for gay rights. Gays and lesbians are taking this word, formerly an instrument of oppression, and turning it around, wearing it as a badge of pride.

The use of Queer as a blanket term for "lesbian, gay, and bisexual people" represents a proud young direction for gays. In using the word as their own, they are stripping it negative meaning, much as their predecessors proclaimed "gay" as their own more than a generation ago.

The gay community has done this before. The pink triangle, which is now the hallmark symbol of the gay rights movement, was originally the patch that the Nazis forced gay men to wear in World War II concentration camps.

To better understand our use of the word Queer, take a look at the larger arena of identity politics.

Much of the black community went through a long period of proving to the world that they are just as good, just as smart, strong and worthy as their white counterparts. Many asserted their validity through "assimilationist" measures, trying to be as much like white people as they could to show they could make it. But things have changed now. The black community is reclaiming the heritage it mortgaged a generation ago.

Black students now proudly embrace their African roots, celebrating the rich history and culture of their people. This same heritage was set aside or quietly remembered by their parents twenty-five years ago.

The women's movement has experienced a similar progression. First - and second-phase feminists spent the seventies and eighties convincing themselves and their male counterparts that they could survive, flourish, and triumph in a traditionally patriarchal world. Now women are reclaiming their femininity and there is a general re-appreciation of things feminine.

The gay liberation movement is following the same path. The battle in the trenches for base-level acceptance continues in many areas, but the gay community is beginning to move in another direction.

As activists continue to urge the slower-learning portions of the community to join the twentieth century and recognize homosexuality as a natural sexual variation, others are beginning to reclaim gay culture and rebuild the gay self-esteem shattered by millennia of heterosexual oppression.

Some may still ask, "But the gays used to say that words like 'queer' and 'dyke' were offensive - what's changed?" Actually, many things have. In a post-modern society, context is everything.

If a redneck starts complaining about "those Queers causing trouble again," then of course, that's a homophobic use of the word. But when a hip straight person says, "There's nothing more fun than a Queer Halloween party," then that's cool. Look at the rap group Niggers with Attitudes (N.W.A.) if you need any further evidence of the importance of context.

You'll still see us referring to ourselves as "gay, lesbian, and bisexual people" when that's most appropriate. But when we're having fun and feeling particularly proud, don't be surprised if we just call ourselves Queer.

Sesquicentennial Symposium on O'Malley worth visiting

We hear about morality, ethics, and Christian values as being part of a Notre Dame education from the first day we arrive on campus. Is it the "party line" or do these qualities rub off on even the most resistant of us?

From my experience as a resistant one, Notre Dame is a most mysterious - in the dorms and classrooms, within the alumni association, even from the depths of the community cemetery.

This weekend (Oct. 5 & 6), the University hosts the first of several Sesquicentennial Symposiums by honoring the "Mr. Chips" of Notre Dame history, Francis J. O'Malley.

You might think that he was the John Wayne of the English Department. He carried a frail frame within his turtle-neck sweaters and tan overcoat. Well then, you would think that he at least was a silver-tongued orator who could rival any forensics coach, or Lou Holtz for that matter, in motivating an audience. But he mumbled and slurred his words during class, sometimes to the point of embarrassment.

Maybe you think of O'Malley as an extroverted and gregarious chap who charmed his students. He was shy, and relied on the spirits of a bottle to nurse him through the night. He most certainly then must have loved athletics, thus fitting into Notre Dame like the final piece of a jigsaw puzzle.

In fact, he detested sports, and when asked which sport he liked, he said probably hockey "because it was played on the rocks."

So who was this mortal piper who taught five generations of ND students how to live and laugh, sing and cry, love and endure?

I lived on the third floor of Lyons Hall for four years with Frank O'Malley, enrolled in two of his courses, was one of his hall disciples, and cannot fully describe the profound influence he had on me. The best descriptions are the moments I can recall of him - his wit, his love, his suffering.

Room 327 in Lyons Hall was O'Malley's residence. In the early 1930's when he graduated, it was common to have resident professors. He never left ND after his graduation, so in the early 1970's, he was one of only two remaining professors who lived among the students.

You would think that many would be close to Frank. But life around O'Malley was one of distance and mystery. His existence seemed destined for love and suffering.

A chance encounter in the hallway usually developed into a humorous experience. We students would sit in the hallway along each wall and listen to him discuss politics, religion, society, literature, or anything that related to what he called "the work." We, "the friends of the work," always came away from those conversations more enlightened than we had ever dared to imagine.

One early morning around 2 AM, after the Wizard of Oz had played on television, we were keeping students awake by playing on a tape recorder "Follow the Yellow Brick Road" in the hallway. We also were yelling at Morrissey and probably throwing water balloons at the nearest windows. After abusing Morrissey for hours, Frank appeared on our floor from an evening with "a hopelessly dry martini" at the University Club.

He explained some of the underlying meanings of the movie, turned towards his door, paused and shook his head while he mumbled, "Lyons, Tigers, Morrissey." He left us captive undergraduates actually rolling on the floor in laughter.

On another evening at about 4 AM, I heard this constant

Gary J. Caruso
Capitol Comments

clicking from the soda machine in the basement stairwell. It was Frank trying to coax the machine to take a nickel. What was the problem I asked. Frank mumbled, "This damn nickel won't stay in the damn machine."

As I looked at his pink-colored hand, I saw that the coin was a Canadian nickel. I replied, "Mr. O'Malley, this is a Canadian nickel. That's why it won't go into the 'damn machine.'"

Peering over his horn-rimmed glasses at his slightly shaking hand, he shook his head and handed me the coin saying, "Here, put this in your archives." He then climbed the stairs quietly, still shaking his head while his four other cans of soda bulged in his overcoat pockets.

O'Malley would appear at various hours after midnight in the hallway and retreat to his room where mumbling sounds from a radio played until mid-day. Once inside he would never answer his door. In the four years I lived on that floor, I never saw him answer the door, not even during the fire at the end of my junior year.

These became Maalox moments for students who wanted to attain special permission (a small palm card that read "Thank you for Voting Democratic") to enter his classes, which instantly closed during registration.

When Frank left his room, it was not until noon for his one o'clock freshman seminar on Mondays. Other days he would stay in the room until his four o'clock upper level course. Occasionally he was seen in the hallway emptying his trash before the trek across campus to his class.

The maid seldom entered his room, and to the best of my memory, neither did most Lyons residents.

However, I once did. Frank ran into me in the hallway while emptying his trash. He asked me to step into his room where the walls were shelved with books. His overcoat lay upon his bed giving me the impression that he had not slept because "they are the only gage for measuring the campus. They are not yet corrupted."

O'Malley once said, "I receive freshmen papers which reveal underlying tones of loneliness. Give me any freshman on this floor, and I'll make him a better poet than anyone on the Juggler magazine staff." O'Malley could do that with what he said more than how he said it.

My last class at Notre Dame was O'Malley's four o'clock course on May 7th. Exactly one year later he passed away. Something compelled me to jot down his final words to us:

"I appreciate the presence, hope, and beauty of your lives. These are the last words you'll hear from me - for the time being anyway. I don't know what's in store for me in the near future or far-off future. And I hope you'll remember these words."

I have a wish and hope for you. I hope that time will never trap you, and that the world will have time for you. I hope that you will be happy forever, and that you recollect the happiness of human existence which is sometimes sorrow and suffering, and sometimes love. My love to you! Peace and thanks!"

O'Malley collected the final assignment ("in three pages tell me what you learned this term") individually as each student shook his hand. One, lonely tear slid to the middle of Frank's cheek where it stopped and glittered in the light. Another semester of spreading cheers and blessings had ended.

If you have time this weekend to visit the O'Malley Symposium at the Center for Continuing Education, please attend. The schedule is available in The Observer and around campus. I am sure that a little of O'Malley's magic will rub off on all who attend as he still touches hearts from his grave.

There are many advantages to single gender colleges

"Why do you want to go to an all-girls college?"

That's the question I kept getting asked during my senior year of high school - mainly because the mentioned high school was all-girls, and my friends didn't understand why I wanted to "put myself through that again."

In answering, first I'd tell them it was and all-women's college (which didn't make any big impression), and then I'd expound upon the many advantages of a single-gender community.

To wit:

1) You can go to class looking as if you just came through a wind-tunnel without worrying what The Guy Behind You thinks. And if you feel you simply must wear your Garfield slippers to class, no problem. High fashion is not the goal here.

2) You can concentrate better on your studies. My mother thought this one up; I'm not sure I convinced anyone else. To tell the truth, I'm not convinced. But presumably, worrying about what The Guy Behind You thinks about your hair lets you take better notes, and ergo get better grades.

Maybe.

3) There are guys - that come over Notre Dame, so that you're not totally isolated from the male species. While this is true, I used this explanation before I had all the facts - i.e., you have to be: a) practically engaged to a guy before he'll a-

Karen Albers
Guest columnist

make the mile-long hike, or b) spend fifty cents to get to SMC and back.

On the shuttle on Saturday nights, you'll find the majority of people are going from SMC to ND - rarely the other way around. I mean, my brother hardly comes over, and we're barely-related. My theory is that a campus that takes only five minutes to cross on foot makes the guys uneasy, and also that they're away from the protective power of the Dome.

4) In my particular case, I'm used to the single-gender community. That's an advantage to the students have that went to all-girls high schools - the absence of males doesn't bother them, while those who went to coed school were, I think, expecting men to pop out from behind the woodwork during the first few weeks. They've adjusted now, I'm happy to say, and doing nicely.

The one disadvantage I've found so far - and maybe I'm the only one to perceive it, and maybe it only bothers me - is a pressure to date. Because you're not in an environment that lets you be around guys long enough to become good friends - unless you're in a ND/SMC activity - dating to just be around guys becomes a big priority.

Having had little luck in the dating scene, I'm doing my best to cope when I see those happy-go-lucky, hand-holding couples around me.

But I can put up with that one problem, which is far outweighed by all the other advantages. I may not have convinced a lot of my friends back in Toledo, Ohio, but I'm satisfied that a single-gender community is the place for me.

So, say what you will about the all-women's college - I'll just forgo the make-up, slip on my Odie slippers, and sing "I Am Woman" at the top of my lungs on my way to class. Karen Albers is a freshman intending to major in writing and literature at Saint Mary's College.

Songs you'll never hear (but should)

Ah, it's fall and there's music in the air. There's music in the trees, there's music in the lakes, there's even music on WVFI, but you probably couldn't hear it even if you wanted to. But that's a column in itself.

This column is not about whether WVFI should get an FM transmitter (they should) or even if they'll play good music once they do (they won't.) This is about music—the kind of music everyone would like to hear but probably never will. We've all heard of cover versions of songs. When a new artist records a classic hit, it's called a cover version.

Sometimes covers aren't as good as the originals (like the Pet Shop Boys' version of U2's "Where the Streets Have No Names.") Other times, though, the greatness of a cover eclipses that of the original (I'm thinking, of course, of Tiffany's "When I Saw Him (her) Standing There.") That version is a classic in and of itself. NOT.

But there are some songs that just beg to be covered by somebody. With the help of some friends, The Observer has compiled this list of songs that you'll probably never hear on the radio (even on WVFI-FM.)

These songs, it is rumored, will soon be released on a K-Tel record titled "Fast Cars, Short Skirts and Warm Busch Beer."

- Oh Lord It's Hard to Be Humble (When You're Perfect in Every Way) by Lou Holtz.
  - This Land is Your Land by Yitzhak Shamir.
  - When I Think About You, I Touch Myself by Pee-Wee Herman.
  - Stayin' Alive by Jim Morrison, Elvis Presley, James Dean and Amelia Earhart.
  - Don't Drive Drunk by the Chicago Bears.
  - Ebony and Ivory by Paul Peralez and Billy Allen.
  - All My Rowdy Friends Are Coming Over Tonight by any student living in the Northeast Neighborhood.
  - Strangers in the Night by the Blue Jogger.

ND and Xavier participate in exchange program

By JIM BONALSKY
Accent Writer

Maria Newman and Keitha Hargest are students at the University of Notre Dame. Maria Newman and Keitha Hargest are students at Xavier University in New Orleans.

A contradiction, you say? Impossible, you claim?

Perhaps in the past the above statements would be mutually exclusive, but today, thanks in part to Roland Smith of Notre Dame and Charles Prejean of Xavier, they are not. The new student exchange program the two educators are in the process of forming is well on its way to evolving into a strong and lasting partnership between the two schools.

Xavier University is a small school located in New Orleans. It also happens to be the only predominantly black, Catholic college in the country. Though it has an enrollment of only 3,400 students, it is the second largest producer of Black students for medical and dental schools nationally.

"This town might be a little slower than New Orleans, but the community spirit is common to both Xavier and Notre Dame."

-Maria Newman

Eighty percent of Xavier students who apply to medical and dental schools are accepted, which is thirty percent above the national average. Fifteen percent of all Black pharmacy students are enrolled there.

These figures should give one an indication that this school is in the upper echelon of colleges, yet it is not often referred to during discussions regarding the top national schools. In fact, most people probably confuse it with Xavier of Ohio. To set the record straight, the Xavier in our exchange program did not beat Georgetown in the NCAA's.

The idea for an exchange program was fostered two years ago. The original goal was to increase the number of Blacks going on to graduate schools and to encourage Xavier students to come to Notre Dame graduate school. According to Smith, many students at Xavier go in as pre-med when their talents could perhaps be put to other use.

Another problem facing minority students is the fact that businesses lure them to work straight from college, thus eliminated graduate school. If students are exposed to the Doctorate programs at Notre Dame before they graduate, Smith believes, they will be encouraged to attend graduate school, be it here or elsewhere.

This is the pilot year of the program. There are two students from Xavier attending Notre Dame this semester, and we will send two students there next semester. The exchange can be considered similar to a foreign studies program because the Xavier students pay Xavier tuition and the classes they take transfer.

The tuition aspect is a vital one because it offers the opportunity of a semester of Notre Dame education to those who would ordinarily not be able to afford it. The average cost of a year at Xavier is around $8,000.

A faculty exchange is also part of the program. Charles Prejean is visiting from Xavier this semester to teach a civil rights course while doing research at the same time. The faculty exchange is still in the rough stages, but it will be built around the joint research.

Along with this program, Notre Dame submitted a grant to the department of education for the Ron McNair Post-Baccalaureate Program. This is designed for first generation college or minority students to pursue graduate school.

Notre Dame has sought after this grant in conjunction with Xavier and Clark/Atlanta University, another predominantly black college in Atlanta.

Students will be selected to come to Notre Dame for research. When they return to their original school, they will continue research with their old professors, while at the same time keeping in contact with the Notre Dame faculty. This will enable students and faculty to benefit from the resources of all three schools.

"Here, the faculty helps, but gives you much more personal responsibility. I think that helps prepare you better for the real world."

-Maria Newman

Last week, the department of education announced that Notre Dame will indeed receive the grant.

One might wonder about the culture shock involved when a student moves from a predominantly black to a predominantly white atmosphere.

Maria Newman, a senior exchange student from Xavier, has not found it a difficult transition.

"It hasn't really been hard because New Orleans is such a melting pot that I'm used to seeing all types of cultural diversity. Things are great and I really love it here. This town might be a little slower than New Orleans, but the community spirit is common to both Xavier and Notre Dame," she says.

"The major difference is that my old school really took care of its students," Maria continues. "If you missed a few classes or did poorly on a test, the faculty would call you and ask what was wrong. Here, the faculty helps but gives you much more personal responsibility. I think that helps prepare you better for the real world."

A journey. Far into the South American country of Chile — poblacions ("shantytowns") bordering great cities; poverty coexisting with wealth; political factions constantly in conflict.

Holy Cross Associates, a program of service and faith for graduating Notre Dame and Saint Mary's seniors, submerges its participants in the radically different culture and atmosphere of this nation, encouraging their spiritual and mental growth.

For three years, Chilean associates enter on the most trying journey of their lives — the journey to a foreign land — a journey towards understanding themselves and the extent of their faith and commitment to others.

Since 1978, Holy Cross Associates have been strong and willing enough to live in the unpredictable foreign culture of Chile, working in community with Holy Cross brothers to both help and be helped by their Chilean neighbors.

Holy Cross Associates exists in six cities across the United States and in Chile; each program is based on working in service towards others while undergoing the struggle of defining personal spiritual direction and perspective. National programs last for one year each, while the Chile program is a more extensive, three year commitment.

After an extensive application process, Chilean associates undergo almost eight months of psychological, emotional and academic preparation for the trip.

After consultation with chosen resource guides and spiritual counselors, participants gather at Moreau Seminary in South Bend during August for an extensive orientation session before embarking on the journey to Cuernavaca, Mexico for up to twelve weeks of necessary language training beginning in September.

Upon completion of the language training, associates leave together for Chile, where they live in one of two Holy Cross homes approximately two hours' travelling time apart. One house is in Santiago, the capital city; the other in Pocuro, a poblacion outside Santiago at the base of the Andes Mountains. House assignment is based on personal preference.

Similar to the United States program, the Chile program involves gathering the house members together once a week for reflection on their experiences, feelings and questions, not only about their work in Chile but about the changes they are undergoing as people and as Christians.

Associates receive no salary but are given necessary means to take care of basic needs and live simply in their communities.

The variety of work is extensive and is determined by the interests of the associates and directors in Chile, and the needs of the Holy Cross community there.

Current Associate activities include work in health education, English, Spanish and math at two Holy Cross-run

Holy Cross Associate Jack Schneider spent his time in Chile gaining a different perspective from his neighbors, as well as learning about himself.

and learn a little in the process*

schools for area children; pastoral work with women's groups and youth groups; and spending time with Parroquia St. Roque, a Holy Cross parish, in its various social and agricultural endeavors.

Associates do not escape the churning political atmosphere of Chile. Julie Dorrian, as associate at the Santiago site, has been working for over a year at the Chile Information Project (CHIP), a group in conjunction with the Catholic Vicaria, respected throughout the country and world for its work in defense of human rights under Pinochet's dictatorship.

The anxieties and the difficulties of moving into democracy are clear, she says. "It was wonderful to share in the Chilean people's celebration. But now, I get the sense that the honeymoon is over, and it will be interesting to see how an extremely politically divided country works together to resolve the social and human rights problems..."

Unlike other service programs, HCA does not propose to enter Chile as a group designed to instruct and direct: "Associates are not called and sent from the USA to 'serve the needs of the Chilean people as if Chilean lay persons might not be able to respond to many needs in their own country."

HCA assumes Chilean self-sufficiency and uniqueness of character which will serve to teach the associates about themselves and their own faith while gaining a different perspective from their neighbors.

Because they enter the program intending to learn more than to aid, Chilean associates feel a sense of humility and vulnerability to the culture of Chile; most convert that sense of helplessness to a desire to share with the people and truly grow during their time as associates.

Current associate Jan Lemmers admits the reality of his situation:

"Control for me has always been a form of security ... Now that security is gone, all I'm left with is myself and those very things that I've been able to avoid before. There's nothing I can do but meet those things face to face and challenge them. It scares me, but I have no choice."

Julie Dorrian carries Lemmer's thoughts one step further in her letter home to the Holy Cross community, when she admits: "These new challenges do not directly stem from my life in Chile, but rather they are questions which I find at the root of my being. That is to say, I'm being challenged by questions which I have asked, and will continue to ask, probably for the rest of my life."

Just as it neglects imposing superior attitudes towards the surrounding community, the Holy Cross program also neglects imposing traditional American work ethics and concepts of time on the Chilean people. For Americans, the slow-paced culture of South America is fascinating and very difficult to comprehend.

Associate Dave Carey explains, "Chileans use the term 'passing time' instead of 'spending time,' as time here is not money as it is in the USA. This viewpoint on time is something I am still trying to value and appreciate fully ... I do not have much to offer Chileans in the way of a skill or knowledge, but I can offer them my attention and interest in their lives, as they do the same for me."

"While I continue to struggle with feelings of uselessness because I do not have much to show for my time here, I am slowly chipping away at my task-oriented mentality and enjoying the time I have to be with people."

Bob Racugglia, the new director of the program, discussed the hardships of the Chilean experience. In addition to adapting to the physical obstacles like extremely cold and rainy weather combined with extremely humble housing conditions, associates must reform their mental attitudes, as well — especially attitudes about time, production, and meeting deadlines.

"The nature of working is a lot different," says Racugglia,

"a typical day involves just sitting and visiting people."

Gina Perez, an associate at the Pocuro site, grapples with her feelings on the subject of changing the speed of her lifestyle: "Often times I feel as if I should be out doing something I feel is important. But I am slowly beginning to realize that the most important thing for me to do right now is to sit and listen and talk to people. That is the only way I will become more aware and sensitive to the people and the way they live."

Submersion in the "simple life" in Chile is in fact a complicated emotional process for Holy Cross participants. Dealing with feelings of loneliness, independence, sharing with oneself and one's companions in community, may be difficult and challenging at times.

These challenges are a crucial part of the experience. Associates learn the essence of simple living, namely "prioritizing life's important elements and coming to see differently, with a different vision — with the eyes of those with whom we live and serve."

Racugglia describes HCA as a kind of "lay missionary work" with the potential to be a real, transforming experience. Both he and Mary Ann White, assistant director, agree that most participants have communicated the feeling that upon entering the Chilean experience, they are longing to give, realizing that in their lives they have been given so much. However, all return feeling they have gained as much as they have given, profoundly and positively affected by the entire experience.

The Holy Cross Associates experience has had an impact on the values and lifestyles of all of its participants. Challenging their own minds and bodies, associates have entered a foreign land, exposing themselves to the bad and good, the simple and complex, the frustrating and ultimately rewarding aspects of life in service.

Each one has come away a different person from what he or she was on the first leg of the long journey two and a half years previous at orientation in South Bend, Indiana.

Because of the intensity of the commitment, Holy Cross directors encourage a serious discernment process before applying to the Associates program. They are always eager to discuss the possibilities of the program with students from Notre Dame or Saint Mary's College, as early as the student's first year at college and as late as senior year.

In the words of Gina Perez, "Chile is nothing like I thought it would be, but just after a few months, I'm almost able to accept life in Chile for what it is and let go of my preconceived notions and expectations. It might not be what I wanted. But I think it may be what I needed."

Applications for the 1992-1994 program are due by November 5, 1991. Information can be attained at Campus Ministry, the Center for Social Concerns, or by contacting Mr. Bob Racugglia or Mary Ann White at Moreau Seminary.

Rockne mule Miller dies

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — E.E. "Rip" Miller, one of the Seven Mules who paved the way for the Four Horsemen on Knute Rockne's legendary Notre Dame teams of the mid-1920s, died Tuesday at the age of 90.

Miller, a tackle, was the last surviving member of the 1922-25 Irish teams that posted a three-year 27-2-1 record, including a national championship in 1924. In 1966, he became the first of the Seven Mules to be elected to the National Football Foundation Hall of Fame.

After graduation in 1925, Miller briefly took a job with the Studebaker Co. in South Bend, Ind., but later that fall landed an assistant coaching job at Indiana under "Navy Bill" Ingram.

In 1926, Ingram was named head coach at the Naval Academy and took Miller along as his assistant. That season they won the national championship.

Miller was instrumental in launching the Navy-Notre Dame football series, the nation's longest continuous intersectional rivalry, by getting Rockne and Ingram together. The teams will meet for the 65th consecutive year Nov. 2 in South Bend.

Miller became the head coach at Navy in 1931 and in three seasons had a 12-15-2 record, but he had the distinction of coaching the first Navy win over Notre Dame, 7-0 in 1933.

He lost his job the following year when Navy returned to a system of hiring only former academy graduates as head coach. However, Miller remained as a line coach, a position he held for the next 14 years.

In 1948, Miller was elevated to assistant director of athletics with responsibility for recruiting. He retired in 1974.

Saints enjoying perks of 5-0 start

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The biggest attraction in the French Quarter on Tuesday wasn't St. Louis Cathedral, the flower-draped balconies or the horse-drawn buggies.

It was the New Orleans Saints who were drawing a crowd.

Linebackers Mills and Pat Swilling, offensive lineman Stan Brock and Coach Jim Mora were on the patio beside Cafe DuMond to be interviewed for HBO's "Inside The NFL" program.

Murphy and several hundred camera-carrying, autograph-seeking, star-gazing fans circled the set to watch.

"This really isn't my thing," Brock said as a crew member applied makeup and hair spray. "If we didn't have the off week, I wouldn't be here. The hardest part of all of this is keeping our heads on and keeping perspective."

For Brock, the Saints' No. 1 draft choice in 1980 — the year they went 1-15, keeping perspective isn't hard.

"We know all this attention can leave just as fast as it came. A few losses and people change," he said.

For the Saints, people have changed. They've changed from long suffering fans to true-believing fanatics.

In 25 years of losing, breaking-even and recently winning, the Monday morning greeting in New Orleans has been 'How 'bout them Saints?' Over the years it's been uttered in despair, joy, and always hope. The city's love affair with the team, although strained, never broke.

In 1980, when the Saints didn't win a game until Dec. 14, the fans donned paper bag masks but still attended games — averaging 48,227 at each home game.

And there was always next year.

This year, with the team 5-0, many people think "next year" has finally arrived.

Suns' McDaniel dealt to Knicks

PHOENIX (AP) — Xavier McDaniel was traded Tuesday by the Phoenix Suns to the New York Knicks for forward Jerrod Mustaf, guard Trent Tucker and two second-round draft picks.

McDaniel, obtained from Seattle last Dec. 7, was expected to strengthen the Suns at both ends of the court, but he did not provide the necessary muscle to help the team succeed in the playoffs. Phoenix, which won one more game (55) in 1990-91 than it did the previous season, was ousted in the first round.

The Suns reportedly were one of the preferred destinations of Patrick Ewing, the Knicks' disgruntled center, but the 7-foot All-Star did not figure in the transaction. The second-round picks included in the deal are for 1992 and 1994.

"I was shocked when I heard," McDaniel said. "I thought something might happen, but I didn't know when. New York was one of the places I wanted to be traded to if I was traded."

McDaniel averaged 15.8 points and 7.2 rebounds for the Suns in 66 games. For the entire season, he averaged 17.0 points and 6.9 rebounds and has career totals of 20.0 points and 7.0 rebounds.

"I've been working on my X's and O's and we just took care of one of the X's," Knicks coach Pat Riley said. "It was a trade we had to make. We needed to complement the outside shooting of Kiki Vandeweghe and bring in a post-up small forward. It's a great trade for the Knicks because it brings in one of the best small forwards in the league, a real front-line player."

"We are pleased to obtain a quality young power forward," Fitzsimmons said of the 6-foot-10 Mustaf, 21.

Mustaf, the 17th overall pick in the 1990 college draft, entered the draft as an undergraduate after two years of college ball at Maryland. He averaged 4.3 points and 2.7 rebounds for the Knicks in 62 games last season.

The 6-5 Tucker, known for his 3-point marksmanship, spent all of his nine years in the NBA with New York, which drafted him sixth in the nation in 1982.

Irish women hope to ground Flyers

By MIKE SCRUDATO
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's soccer team will attempt to extend its winning streak to four games, and remain undefeated when the Lewis Flyers visit Alumni Field this afternoon at 4 p.m. It will be the fourth game of a five-game homestand for the Irish, who are coming off Sunday's 3-0 victory over Wisconsin-Green Bay.

"Lewis is a good Division III school," Irish coach Chris Petrucelli said, "They will be motivated to play us."

Lewis is returning eight starters from last year's team, which was defeated by Notre Dame, 4-0. However, the Flyers did lose their top two scorers from 1990's squad. This season their offense is led by junior Laurie Anderson, who finished last year with three goals and three assists.

Another big difference in this year's team is head coach Mike Crowe, who is in his first year at the helm of the Flyers. He replaced three-year coach Evan Fiffles.

"It is going to be tough to get the team up because it is a mid-week game, and I don't know if our players know too much about Lewis," Petrucelli said, "However, if we play good technical soccer, we shouldn't have to get too excited."

Petrucelli would like to accomplish two things in today's game. With three games in the next five days, he would like to get as many people as possible in the game to avoid fatigue later in the week. Freshmen Kim Gold may get her second start in goal; her first was in the Irish's 11-2 win over Siena Heights last week.

Another thing Petrucelli would like to see is the defense continue to counterattack effectively.

"I'd like to see [Irish sweeper] Gennifer [Kwiatkowski] get forward and into the attack more. She scored over 100 goals in high school, and I think she is capable of scoring a few for us," Petrucelli commented, "We have a lot of player who can score, and if we can add to that we will be even more dangerous."

Colts fire Meyer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Ron Meyer was fired as coach of the winless Indianapolis Colts today and replaced by defensive coordinator Rick Venturi.

Meyer's dismissal came two days after an embarrassing 31-3 loss to the Seattle Seahawks dropped the Colts to 0-5.

Colts general manager Jim Irsay said at a news conference that Venturi is the "head coach for the next eleven games." The 45-year-old Venturi, who coached at Northwestern from 1978-1981, joined the Colts in 1982 as linebackers coach.

The Colts also fired offensive coordinator and quarterbacks coach Leon Burtnett, who coached Purdue from 1982-86.

Meyer was not at the news conference but made his comments in a parking lot at the Colts' offices.

"I leave here with my head held high," he said. "The thing I'll miss is the relationship with the players. They're a great bunch of guys."

Asked if he was dealt with fairly, Meyer said: "That's-for people outside to make that judgment. My record speaks for itself. I'm a solid, hard-working football coach, that's all I'll say."

The Irish are looking for sophomore Gennifer Kwiatkowski, shown here against Michigan State, to lead the Irish against Lewis tomorrow.

STUDENT UNION BOARD

Men's soccer blanks Detroit

By JASON KELLY
Sports Writer

How well the Notre Dame men's soccer team fares on its current road trip will depend largely on how the freshmen respond to the challenge of playing on the road. If Tuesday afternoon's performance at Detroit is any indication, the Irish should be very successful on the road.

Freshmen Tim Oates, Tont Richardson and Jean Joseph each notched a goal and rookie goalie Bert Bader, who was rarely threatened due to the play of the Irish defense, collected his fourth shutout of the season in a 3-0 rout of Midwestern Collegiate Conference rival Detroit. With just over a third of the season completed, Bader's four shutouts equals Notre Dame's overall shutout total from a year ago. The victory improved the Irish record to 3-3-1 overall and 1-1-1 in the MCC.

Despite coming off a disappointing 3-14-0 campaign in 1990, the Titans returned 15 lettermen this season promised to be quite a threat to the youthful Irish squad.

That wasn't the case, however, as the Irish offense shelled the Titans from the opening kickoff. Detroit managed to resist the shelling until Oates knocked in his team-leading third goal of the season from eight yards out with less than a minute remaining in the first half. Soon after Oates put the Irish on the board, Detroit's Matt Marske was ejected from the game, giving the Irish a one-man advantage the rest of the way.

Twenty minutes into the second half, Joseph, just two games after returning from a leg injury, collected the rebound from Brendan Dillman's shot to record his first career goal, giving the Irish a 2-0 lead. Richardson launched a shot to the far post from 12 yards out on an assist from Rey Prado to complete Notre Dame's offensive output, which included 16 shots on goal.

Stifling defense was a key once again for the Irish as they allowed the Titans only two shots on goal, giving Bader the support he needed to collect his fourth shutout of the season.

On the opening leg of their first extended road trip, the freshmen lived up to the challenge and the Irish came away with a victory. They will have to continue to live up to the challenge in order for the Irish to continue their success on the road.

The road trip continues Friday night in Cincinnati in another MCC battle with Xavier. A visit to Dayton's Baujan Field is on the slate for Sunday before a trip to Valparaiso next Wednesday completes the road swing. The next Irish home game is scheduled for Sunday, October 13th against MCC foe Butler.

Belles smash Chicago State

By EILEEN MCGUIRE
Sports Writer

Division I Chicago State University was no match for Saint Mary's volleyball team as the Belles handily defeated Chicago State 15-4, 13-15, 15-2, 15-11 last night at Angela Athletic Facility.

"This game helped a lot in terms of confidence," Belles coach Julie Shroeder-Biek stated. "We communicated well as a team and everybody got in to play."

The Belles, definitely the stronger team, dominated the floor in all-around ability. However, in the second game, Saint Mary's neglected to show the upper hand.

"Our serve reception broke down and therefore we dug ourselves into a hole we could not get out of," Shroeder-Biek explained.

Junior captain Karen Lorton contributed 20 blocks, 13 digs, and 11 kills as junior Michelle Martino chipped in 23 assists.

"As a team, we communicated better and played a better defence than we had been playing," Lorton said. "We had bad games over the weekend but this proves we can go out and play up to our ability."

The Belles' next encounter will be against Illinois Benedictine College at Illinois on Friday.

Stanford is just another game for Irish

By DAVE DIETEMAN
Sports Editor

If you think that Notre Dame is heading to Stanford bent on avenging last year's 36-31 loss in South Bend, think again.

Where Lou Holtz and the Irish are concerned, their game with the Cardinal is significant for one reason: the Irish must come away with a victory if they are to win the rest of their games.

"You won't get ahead of anybody if you try to get even with them," said Holtz. "Revenge doesn't factor in at all on my part, and I don't think it does for the players as well. We don't ever talk about revenge. That was last year and that's over no matter what you do. I think that you have got to look forward to the future. This game's important—it's important to us because of the fact that we have some goals and objectives this year.

"But last year is history. We just don't approach it that way [from revenge]. Sure, we'd like to win the football game—you don't want anybody to beat you twice in a row, you don't want anybody to beat you once, though. But that's something that we don't even think much about, at least I don't. My main concern—and I think it's the players' as well—is how we're going to win the football game. We're going to play awfully well, and we're going to play an awfully fine football game. I don't know if we'll win this game, but we will play well."

Last season, the Irish built a 24-7 lead in the first half, only to see Stanford scramble to within 24-15 at the half, thanks to a disputed roughing the passer call on third and twelve.

In the second half, the Cardinal abused the Notre Dame defense for 21 more points. The Stanford shock troops ended the day's scoring when fullback Tommy Vardell capped a four-touchdown performance by plunging into the end zone with :36 left in the game.

The Irish, however, held out hope, and could have won the game, had not Derek Brown been unable to snatch up a Rick Mirer pass in the end zone.

Several Irish players are still licking their wounds from the season's first four games.

Troy Ridgely is expected to return to practice this week. Todd Stoker, who has been out of action since last April, is also expected to return.

Rodney Culver and Aaron Taylor are both playing with sprained ankles, but may see action against Stanford.

"We have some bumps and bruises, but overall, aside Adrian Jarrell breaking his arm last week and Rod Culver's ankle, I think we ought to be in pretty good physical condition for the game."

For those who did not see or hear Notre Dame's game against Purdue, and for those who did, there is a humorous story involving the coin toss.

For Holtz, it was the first occurrence of such an incident since his days at William and Mary. At that time, teams were not permitted to defer their choice until the second half. William and Mary's team captain, however, when told that the other team had, after winning the coin toss, elected to receive, himself elected to kick.

William and Mary, then, had to kick off into the wind. The opposition, meanwhile, not only was able to get the ball, but the choice of which end zone to defend.

Since that time, Holtz maintains that he has strived to be clear in his instructions to his captains.

"I always instruct the people before they go out, and I instruct them in front of the whole team," said Holtz. "Every single week my decision is exactly the same. If we win the toss of the coin, we will defer. If they win the toss of the coin and defer, we will take the ball. If we win the toss and defer and they take the ball, we will defend either the end zone we warmed up in, or the end zone that they warmed up in."

Despite 21 years of diligence, however, Holtz relived that incident in West Lafayette last Saturday.

"I guess that Derek Brown and Devon McDonald went out there, and Devon was the spokesman," said Holtz. "Purdue won the toss of the coin and they deferred and he chose to kick and they chose the end zone they wanted. I said 'We did what?' I thought he was confused at first because I thought he said 'They deferred and we kick.' I said 'Wait. We deferred or they deferred?' He said 'They deferred.' So I said 'Are we receiving the ball?' He said 'No. We're kicking the ball.'

"And what was scary was he was real excited about it. He was rather proud of it. I started to get upset but I patted him on the back and said 'Hey, you better go out there and play well on defense and get this off to a good start.' At halftime I joked with him about it. It's one of those things that happened. I wasn't very clear, obviously, in my instructions to them."

Finally, as Notre Dame stands at 3-1 a third of the way, Holtz looked back on his pre-season wishes of where the Irish would be at this point.

"A third of the way through, we wanted to be 4-0, and we also wanted Stanford to look very poor on film," said Holtz, "and neither one of those have happened. But I can tell you this, after we were 1-1, we wanted to go into Stanford 3-1. We just have to try and get better. We have a lot of problems. And we've solved a lot of problems. We've started about six sophomores on defense, and we're going to be a good defensive football team, and they've come along way but we still have a ways to go."
