Senate supports funding request of Right to Life

By MICHAEL SCHOLL
News Writer

The Student Senate last night rejected a resolution stating that the body violated parliamentary procedure during its debate over a funding request made by a student group opposed to abortion.

In a 9-6 vote during its December 9, 1991 meeting, the Senate agreed to transfer $600 from the Student Government's contingency fund to ND/SMC Right to Life. The group requested the money in an effort to help defray the costs of its trip to the annual Right to Life March in Washington D. C.

During that meeting, several Senators spoke in favor of attaching an amendment to the funding resolution which stated that the transfer of funds to Right to Life did not imply the Senate's support for the group's political goals. However, the amendment was rejected after Student Body Treasurer John Coffey stated that Senate Bylaws forbid the amending of appeals to the contingency fund.

Coffey's statement was denounced as "inappropriate" by District 4 Senator Joe Wilson during last night's meeting. Wilson claimed that Coffey's rejection of the amendment violated a principle of Robert's Rules of Order which states that all "principal motions" put before an assembly can be amended.

HPC recommends new charter for the coming week

By DAVID KINNEY
Associate News Editor

A Hall Presidents' Council (HPC) Charter Committee will make recommendations for a new charter in the coming week, changing the structure and function of the council in order to improve its effectiveness, according to Co-chair Charlie James.

The charter, which must be ratified by two-thirds of the dorms in HPC, will increase the number of voting dorm representatives, mandate a two-person chair and establish a policy review committee, said Molly O'Neill, co-president of Lewis Hall and member of the charter committee.

The charter committee, composed of four HPC members, has been drafting the new document since October, said

James. Although questions have been raised in the last month about parliamentary issues and the effectiveness of the council, O'Neill said "there were measures being taken to deal with inefficiencies" before the concerns were raised.

HPC has not operated under a charter or constitution in recent years; the last constitution drafted is dated 1976. There was a question whether the council is bound by the document, or only certain parts, said O'Neill.

James said that the 1976 constitution may be invalid because it was approved before the ratification of the last Student Body Constitution.

As a result, council members discovered a number of contradictions and inaccuracies in the 1976 constitution, according to James.

The preamble to the charter states the committee's hope that the proposed charter will improve HPC's ability to serve its constituents and the campus as a whole. It recognizes HPC's responsibility to improve residence life and serve as a link between the dorms and the rest of the Notre Dame community.

The current Student Body Constitution said that "the Hall Presidents' Council shall serve as an information-disseminating body and provide a forum for members to discuss common matters of residentiality."

O'Neill said that while the charter acknowledges HPC's dual role as disseminator of information and a representative of the interests of resident undergraduates, the charter enables each new group of members to determine which role should be stressed.

In past years, HPC was considered solely a channel of communication between the dorm residents and the ND community and a group to plan dorm activities, said O'Neill. Over the past two years, however, HPC has concentrated more on communicating problems in the dorms, formatting policies to deal with the problems and implementing the policies.

"Hopefully, we will keep growing in policy formation," said O'Neill.

Concern about the effectiveness of HPC is addressed in the proposed charter. First, the existence of a charter would enable the council to begin working sooner, according to Jennifer Swize, Farley Hall co-president and committee member.

There is an annual 100 percent turnover of members, with the exception of the chairs, and it takes a few months for the members of the group to coalesce and to begin to address serious issues, according to Swize. The charter would give the council members an idea from the beginning exactly what the role and the capabilities of the HPC are, she added.

Some members were unsure about their roles as a member of the HPC, said Swize, and did not realize the ability of the council to affect campus issues. For example, some on the council did not realize the impact that the council could have made with the Safe Haven resolution during the fall semester.

Swize said that it is possible that HPC can do both dorm planning and discussion of

Students express mixed feelings about civil rights

By BECKY BARNES
News Writer

In a discussion following Monday night's showing of "Montgomery to Memphis," a documentary of the political life of Martin Luther King, Jr., panel members arrived at mixed conclusions concerning the state of civil rights today and hope for the future.

Panel members included Notre Dame Law School Dean Fernand Dutile, Professors Robert Rhodes and Thomas Broden, and guests Roland Chamblee, M.D. and Norman Miles, PhD. Professor Sabrina McCarthy moderated the discussion.

McCarthy summarized the film by emphasizing King's attempts to bring spirituality into politics by fostering the development of each person's humanity through methods of love. She then opened the discussion by asking what progress our society has made since the civil rights movement of the 1960s and what hope they have for the future.

Miles answered that the most offensive forms of racism, particularly segregation, have been ended. Significant changes in society have allowed people of color to participate in the mainstream, and we have come a long way in understanding the importance of working together, he continued.

Dutile agreed that problems of a legal nature, such as segregation and voting rights have been solved, but he also wondered if King would still say today that he "has a dream."

He cited pervasive racist attitudes throughout society, especially on college campuses, economic problems, healthcare problems, and police brutality as problems yet to be solved. Dutile said that he is "not overly optimistic" about seeing any solutions soon.

According to Broden, "the United States was and is a very

JFK fuels debate on assassination

On Sept. 27, 1964, the Warren Commission Report proclaimed to the world that "The shots which killed President Kennedy and wounded Governor Connally were fired by Lee Harvey Oswald."

Dave Dietsman

The Commission went on Sports Editor to declare that its crack seven member panel, general counsel, and 14 assistant counsels had "found no evidence that either Lee Harvey Oswald or Jack Ruby was part of any conspiracy, domestic or foreign, to assassinate President Kennedy."

Case closed? Not.

As American movie-goers have learned, New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison brought a trial against alleged CIA operative Clay Shaw in the hopes of reopening the Kennedy assassination case and exposing a twisted cover-up. Garrison lost his case, however, in March of 1969.

The motion picture which is stoking dinner conversations across our beleaguered Union is JFK. The film's director, Oliver Stone has come under intense criticism from many circles, including the media and members of the Warren Commission. One member of the commission, the "greasy, beady-eyed" Sen. Arlen Specter (R-Pa.), mentioned in the film has gone so far as to threaten legal action against Stone.

Although Stone would accuse the military and high-ranking politicians of successfully executing a coup d'etat, he himself stands accused of rewriting history according to his anti-American agenda.

Stone deserves none of this criticism. The media and government deserve all of it.

Stone is accused of fabricating portions of the film, thus conniving the American public into believing in an imaginary conspiracy to pull off a modern-day version of Shakespeare's Julius Caesar.

Examination of the Warren Commission Report and other documents from the day, however, don't gel with the "Evil Oliver" theory. There are too many oddities and bizarre coincidences—not to mention the number of persons involved who suffered untimely deaths—to make it seem reasonable to shrug off Stone's cinematic gadfly.

If anything, Stone did not go far enough. Garrison's own book, as well as other books and television specials lend further credibility to Stone's conspiracy theory. At the very least, they do not support the single-bullet theory.

At any rate, the hullabaloo around JFK doesn't seem warranted. What Stone's film has served to do is reignite a heated debate over who killed John F. Kennedy. As the case against the deceased Lee Harvey Oswald stands, the charges against him are not only covered by shadows of doubt, they are ridiculous.

Rep. Henry Gonzalez (D.-Tex.) has asked the federal government to immediately release the top secret documents regarding the Kennedy assassination. They are scheduled to be released in 2029. Louis Stokes, however, chairman of the Select Committee on Assassinations, has maintained that "I don't think that anything new will emerge. This government is not in the business of cover-ups—at least the Congress isn't."

Yeltsin will give Lithuania KGB files

■ MOSCOW—Boris Yeltsin will turn KGB files on last year's military crackdown in Lithuania over to the Baltic republic's president, the Tass news agency said today. Yeltsin met with Vytautas Landsbergis on Friday at the Kremlin and agreed to turn over papers relating to the Soviet military attack on the television tower in Vilnius.

Fourteen people died in last January's attack in the Lithuanian capital. Yeltsin and Landsbergis also agreed to establish diplomatic relations in the near future and signed a communique on trade and economic. Lithuania broke away from the former Soviet Union following the August coup attempt but still relies heavily on Russia for food and energy supplies.

UC Davis students protest raised fees

■ DAVIS, Calif.—About 300 students at the University of California, Davis, occupied an auditorium after the UC regents approved at least a 24 percent increase in student fees. Five students were arrested. They remained in Freeborn Hall late Friday afternoon. Protest leaders said they would remain until Tuesday, when the state Legislature reconvenes. Five students were arrested on charges ranging from battery against a police officer to inciting a riot, police said. They were booked and released on bail. Regents met in the auditorium, but had left by the time students occupied it. The protest began about 30 minutes after the regents boosted the annual fee by $550, meaning resident undergraduate students will now pay $2,824. UC President David Gardner said the increase was needed because of tightened state support, a projected enrollment increase and California's ailing economy.

Shuttle will carry creepy-crawlies

■ CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla.—NASA's countdown clock began ticking toward Wednesday's launch of space shuttle Discovery with seven astronauts and an assortment of creepy-crawlies. Among the specimens that will be on board: roundworms, fruit flies, yeast, bacteria, slime mold, frog eggs and sperm, fetal mouse bones, oat and wheat seedlings, hamster kidney cells and human blood cells. Scientists want to see how plants respond in orbit to varying amounts of light and artificial gravity, and how animal and cell development is affected by weightlessness and space radiation. The countdown for the seven-day flight began Sunday. Liftoff is scheduled for 8:53 a.m. EST Wednesday.

SMC Board evaluates committees

By CHRISTINE SERAPHIN
News Writer

Student body and class office elections were discussed at Saint Mary's Board of Governance (BOG) meeting last night. In addition, students discussed the re-evaluation of present committees, and the formation of new committees.

Elections are tentatively set for Thursday, February 20. Campaigning will begin Sunday, February 16, and the debate will take place Monday, February 17.

The status of several standing committees and their accomplishments were discussed. The BOG members decided which committees could be disbanded since their goals had been met last semester.

The committees that were voted to be disbanded are: recycling, tradition and heritage, security, and computers and lasers. Student Alliance of Women's Colleges and Campus Improvements are the two committees that continue from last semester.

BOG voted to establish two new committees, and if the need arises, new committees can be formed throughout the semester. One of the newly established committees, that of diversity, will deal with ethnic and non-traditional students' needs. Admissions is a second new committee which will discuss the decreasing enrollment.

Americans seek gasoline alternatives for auto fuel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Facing serious air pollution, America is trying to wean its cars from gasoline. The transition toward a cleaner motor fuel won't be quick, but there are signs that gasoline's grip is loosening.

For example, President Bush marked the government's purchase of hundreds of alternative fuel vehicles by taking a spin around the White House driveway last week in a van powered by compressed natural gas.

Automakers are not only beginning to produce more such vehicles but also a limited number of cars, vans and small trucks that run on methanol. And within a few years, auto industry officials say, electric cars will come purring out of showrooms.

Alternative-fuel technology "is here today and it's ready to roll," says Claudia Baker, an executive of the energy commission in California, a state that has vigorously pushed substitute motor fuels to help ease its severe air pollution.

Some energy experts and environmentalists predict that more than 2.5 million vehicles powered by fuels other than gasoline will be on American roads by the end of the decade.

California will require as many as 40,000 electric-powered cars to be sold annually in the state by 1998 and five times that many by the year 2003. Other states, including New York, are on the verge of enacting similar requirements.

New federal clean air rules also call for 150,000 "clean fuel" vehicles to be sold annually in California — and possibly other states — by 1996 and twice that many two years after that. In addition federal law calls for phasing in alternative-fuel fleet vehicles in urban areas with the worst air pollution. At least six states already have incentives or requirements to shift operators of taxicabs, delivery trucks and other fleets away from gasoline or diesel.

In other signs of the future:

—In Jeffrey Seisler's backyard outside Washington there's a "home fueling appliance" that uses the same natural gas that heats his home to refuel the car he uses each day to go to work.

—In Sacramento, Calif., a Shell service station, in a joint program with Pacific Gas & Electric, offers not only gasoline but also compressed natural gas. It is among 14 natural gas outlets opened by PG&E, primarily for fleet-owned vehicles, in northern California.

French airplane crashes in snow

STRASBOURG, France (AP) — A French Airbus A-320 carrying 96 people crashed in snow and fog on a wooded ridge in eastern France Monday night. At least 11 survivors, including a young girl, were found in the wreckage after a four-hour search.

The girl, about 2 or 3, emerged without serious injury from the crash of the state-run Air Inter flight, and at least one of the six crew also survived, police said.

Efforts were under way to remove injured people from the wreckage, police said early Tuesday.

The plane was en route from Lyon to Strasbourg when radio contact was lost shortly before the scheduled landing at 7:25 p.m. (1:25 p.m. EST), officials said.

Shortly before midnight, officials located the crash site in the Vosges mountains near Mont Sainte-Odile, 30 miles southwest of Strasbourg.

Air Inter, which works closely with Air France, said in a communique it had no indication what caused the crash. The plane, put into service in December 1988, had no record of previous mechanical trouble, the airline said.

Rain and snow slowed the search by about 500 people in the sparsely populated area of dense pine forests and rugged hills ranging from about 2,000 feet to 3,000 feet above sea level. Logging roads provided the only access to much of the fog-shrouded area.

Two army helicopters and a Mirage F-1 jet fighter equipped with infrared surveillance equipment assisted in the search.

Flight IT-5148, which left Lyon at 6:30 p.m. (12:30 p.m. EST), was carrying 90 passengers and a crew of six, Air Inter said.

The airline set up a center at Lyon's Satolas airport for relatives of those aboard the plane. Few details about the passengers were available, although most reportedly were business travellers.

The Airbus A-320 is a twin-turboprop plane, designed for short-or medium-range flights, which went into service in 1988. Its capacity ranges from 130 to 179 passengers.

Two A320s have crashed since the aircraft when into service.

An A-320 crashed into a forest on June 26, 1988, while executing a low pass during an air show at Habsheim, France. Three passengers were killed.

On Feb. 14, 1990, a 3-month-old A-320 crashed while preparing for landing in Bangalore, India, killing 92 people.

Airbus blamed pilot error in both accidents, but some aviation officials suggested a computer malfunction. The A-320 is the only commercial aircraft that uses computers capable of operating all flight controls.

The worst plane accident in France occurred on March 3, 1974, when 360 people died in the crash of a Turkish Airlines DC-10 near Paris.

South Bend Police raid local crack house

By MONICA YANT
News Editor

South Bend Police arrested nine people Sunday known to have connections with Detroit crack dealers in the apartments in the 800 block of North Notre Dame Avenue.

The Metro Special Operations Section (MSOS) of the South Bend Police also seized "a large quantity of crack cocaine," over $1,000 in cash, an automatic assault rifle loaded with a 30-round clip of ammunition, and two .22 caliber revolvers in the raids.

Police described the apartments as a major crack distribution ring.

"The individuals involved in the dealing were very large dealers and were bringing in large shipments of crack cocaine into South Bend," said Lt. Edward Summers in an official press release.

Police said they had received many complaints about the addresses from citizens in the neighborhood, adding that the information was instrumental in the successful raids.

The arrests came after a series of five search warrants that were served beginning at about 6:30 a.m. Sunday at the apartments.

The first two search warrants were served at 820 N. Notre Dame Ave, Apt. 2A, where the individuals were arrested for charges ranging from conspiracy to deal cocaine to visiting a common nuisance. Also found in this apartment was $160 in police "bait money" used by undercover officers to purchase drugs.

Among the nine arrested was a 16-year-old South Bend boy who was released to the custody of his parents following questioning in connection with the raids.

Information gathered from the first two search warrants led officers to obtain two additional warrants for the address of 835 N. Notre Dame Ave., Apt. 2C, and for 832 N. Notre Dame Ave., Apt. 2A.

Individuals seen leaving the apartment at 832 N. Notre Dame Ave. were taken for questioning and released.

A female renting the apartment was also questioned by police. After a trained police K-9 alerted officers that the vehicle driven by the female possibly contained a controlled substance, a fifth search warrant was obtained for the vehicle.

Information about the contents of the vehicle was unavailable.

The South Bend Police Department Swat Team assisted officers in the raids because information led the police to believe that the residents may have been armed. The MSOS is composed of officers from South Bend, St. Joseph County and Mishawaka police.

Police are asking anyone in St. Joseph County who suspects a drug house in the area to contact the MSOS at 284-9406, or Crime Stoppers at 288-STOP.

racist society."

He is not disappointed in today's failures in civil rights attitudes because he said that it was "not unexpected."

However, Broden is not pessimistic about the future because he has seen that things can change. He concluded, "Keep trying, keep sending out the message...you never know what's going to happen."

Rhodes said that he has little hope for improvement in a society which holds the belief that "there are people born today who will never get a job." He has not seen a commitment to aid the underclass, 50 to 67% of which are black.

Miles also discussed the black underclass, calling today's young a "generation at risk." This generation lacks employment and a two-parent home, which Miles and others growing up during the civil rights movement had.

Miles sees hope for the future although he admits that some do not want to accept his solutions. He said, "Blacks must take on responsibility for what happens to our people. The government has let us down."

He cited education and persistent entrance into entrepreneur type fields as solutions in areas yet untapped.

Although King supported nonviolent means of action, Chamblee while calling himself a pacifist, said that he sometimes "thinks the only answer to the civil rights movement is violence." He added, "Violence does spur action on the part of the people."

Dutile responded to Chamblee that "violence is not the kind of policy that carries promise for the future."

The problems of today, such as racist attitudes, will only be increased by violence, he added.

Miles concluded, "We can do a lot better, and I believe we can make a positive change."

that Right to Life's appeal for funds should have been considered to be a "principal motion" subject to amendment. "I don't feel that there was any mistake made (in refusing to consider the amendment)," said Junior Class President Dave Cathcart.

Wilson also charged Student Body President and Senate Chairman Joseph Blanco with breaking Robert's Rules when he spoke out in favor of Right to Life's funding request before the December 9 meeting. Such a statement, Wilson argued, violated Robert's principle that the chairperson of an assembly should not take sides in its debates.

Blanco was defended by District 1 Senator Dave Certo, who contended that the chairman allowed both sides of the funding question to be adequately heard. "Joe did not conduct a biased debate," Certo said.

After intense discussion, the Senate voted 15-3 to reject a resolution submitted by Wilson which would have had the body admit that it had handled Right to Life's request improperly. However, Blanco did agree to appoint a Senate Parliamentarian to arbitrate any future disputes over procedural matters.

campus issues.

Second, the proposed charter calls for the establishment of a policy review committee (PRC) "to review the actions of the HPC, to assess its effectiveness in accomplishing its projected goals and to make recommendations on areas the committee feels the council could improve."

The PRC "could act as a judiciary element," said O'Neill, "to review how things are going in the council." Rather than going directly to the public to address a problem with the council, a member could direct concerns to this committee.

The committee would decide how the council is functioning, review how it deals with issues; finally, each year, the committee would analyze the effectiveness of the charter.

The five-member committee, which would be selected by a voluntary lottery, would "review what we (HPC) are doing and what we should be doing," said Swize.

In addition, "the PRC would also have the primary role of drafting the language of resolutions and responses. The PRC could take advantage of its small size to draft resolutions before presenting them to the rest of the HPC, according to charter committee member Rich Delevan, Flanner Hall co-president.

James said that he believes that council already has the mechanisms it needs to achieve its goals, but it can accomplish only as much as its members want.

Bush plans moratorium on federal regulations

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is expected to impose a 90-day moratorium on most new federal regulations as part of the economic recovery plan he will unveil in next Tuesday's State of the Union address, administration officials said Monday.

All executive branch agencies would be asked to review pending rules with an eye toward scrapping as many as possible or reducing their burdensome impact on business, an official said.

There will be two broad exceptions to the ban: rules required by law and new drug approvals.

The plan for a moratorium was first reported by the Wall Street Journal on Monday.

Bush ignored reporters' questions about the ban as he returned to the White House from Camp David, Md., in early afternoon. A spokesman, Sean Walsh, said Bush came back early because he had work to do preparing next week's speech and his 1993 budget.

Gary Foster, deputy White House press secretary, said, "The president is concerned that excessive regulation — red tape — is stifling economic growth and contributing to unemployment."

Bush, whose approval rating has tumbled below 50 percent in the face of the lingering recession, has said he will go before Congress to unveil a blueprint to get the economy growing again. He plans to propose tax cuts for the middle-class as well as tax breaks to help people buy health insurance.

An administration official who insisted on anonymity said the moratorium has the strong backing of Vice President Dan Quayle, who chairs a Council on Competitiveness that has been looking for ways to reduce regulatory burdens; Michael Boskin, the chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, and C. Boyden Gray, the White House counsel.

Bush has not yet formally approved their recommendation, but he is considered certain to do so, the official said.

Boskin told the Journal a moratorium is "a way of focusing the attention of the regulatory community to redouble their efforts" to cut back on burdensome regulations. He said overregulation was "one of the major impediments to a growing economy."

The Journal said White House officials are targeting eight broad areas for the regulatory ban: environment, energy, transportation, exports, telecommunications, biotechnology, access to capital and privatization.

Bush would be following the footsteps of former President Ronald Reagan, who imposed a two-month moratorium on regulations when he entered the White House in 1981.

But Reagan's aim was to stop Carter administration rules in their tracks, while Bush is concerned about the regulations his own administration is promulgating.

Bush headed a deregulatory drive in the Reagan administration, and Quayle has played that role under Bush. Quayle recently joined the commissioner of food and drugs, David Kessler, in announcing plans to speed up drug reviews.

The Food and Drug Administration boasts that it allowed 30 new drugs onto the market in 1991, seven more than the year before, and claims it has reduced the time needed to review them to 22 months from two years-plus.

Japanese decrease auto imports

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top Bush administration official said Monday that if the Japanese are backing off auto import goals they set on President Bush's trade mission there will be "a very negative reaction" in the United States.

And harsh comments were quickly forthcoming from congressional Democrats, who had already been criticizing Bush's trip.

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt said agreements with the Japanese must include penalties that will be ordered if goals are not met. Without such penalties, he said, "you'll never have the pressure you need to change the behavior."

Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa said Monday in Japan that the announcement during the Bush visit that Japanese auto makers would try to import and sell nearly 20,000 American vehicles and buy $10 billion more in auto parts was "a target rather than a firm promise."

And Toyota Chairman Eiji Toyoda said his company "will study and consider the possibility of selling GM cars. It is too much to say we will actually sell them."

J. Michael Farren, the undersecretary of commerce for international trade, said of those statements: "It may be a sign of backing off from the stated goals that they have unilaterally set for themselves."

"It is not unusual for Japanese government officials to make what looks like a fairly basic commitment and then qualify it heavily at a later date. This doesn't shock me," Farren said.

Still, he added, Japanese automakers realize there will be "a very negative reaction here in the United States if they don't expeditiously move to meet and exceed the goals."

Farren said the 20,000 figure was never included in the formal Japanese government statement — at U.S. request.

"We told them we did not want a number in there on autos," Farren said. That was because "frankly any number they might come out with would probably be low and not necessarily realistic."

But the goal of raising auto part imports from $9 billion to $19 billion by 1994 "was in the document the government put out," said Farren, who attended the Tokyo summit.

The $19 billion represented "individual commitments that the Japanese auto companies made in their voluntary plans," he said.

"This was not a government to government trade agreement. The numbers were a consequence of Japanese company decision, not an edict of the government of Japan," said Farren.

Farren said the Japanese auto makers control almost the entire parts network as well. "That is a situation we would never tolerate in this country," he said.

He added that the talks with the Japanese over auto parts and other issues are continuing. "We did not expect to come away with a solution to the closed Japanese auto market in one visit," he said.

Gephardt, D-Mo., said he was not surprised at the comments from the Japanese leaders.

"I think it's another indication that when you use traditional methods we have used to solve the problems, it doesn't work well," Gephardt said, contending there is a fundamental incompatibility between the U.S. and Japanese economies.

Gephardt is pressing legislation that would set goals for reducing the U.S. trade deficit with Japan, and if they are not met, impose quotas or other barriers to Japanese cars imported into the United States.

Florida Court removes judge over racial issues

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The state Supreme Court on Friday removed Judge John Santora as chief circuit judge in this northeast Florida district over remarks he made that were perceived as racist.

Santora, 69, will remain on the bench, however. The circuit's next most senior judge will take over as chief circuit judge, the high court ruled.

Earlier Friday, Santora had strongly objected to an attempt by 20 lawyers to have him removed over comments he made in an interview published Dec. 22 in The Florida Times-Union and in testimony in a federal trial.

In a legal brief, Santora denied that his comments have damaged the public's confidence in either the judiciary or his own impartiality.

The Supreme Court disagreed, voting 6-0 for his removal. Former Jacksonville Judge Major Harding didn't vote.

"The actions of the chief judge, both professional and personal, must be consistent with the highest ideals embodied by our law," the court's ruling said.

Santora's six-year term expires next January, and he has previously said he wouldn't seek re-election.

In the newspaper interview, he blamed school violence on integration, opposed interracial marriage and complained most welfare recipients are black.

In the trial on judicial elections, Santora said the district has enough black judges, but needs more Jewish judges to work over the Christmas holidays. He later said his comments about Jewish judges was in jest.

No one answered the telephone at Santora's office or home after the ruling. Since the controversy erupted, Santora has remained silent except for a public apology issued earlier this month.

His brief said that early in his career as a judge, he initiated efforts to desegregate Jacksonville's municipal court and subsequently won strong support from black voters.

His comments polarized the community and led to the formation of a committee to study the causes of racism and inequality.

Santora, who has been a circuit judge since 1972 and chief judge since 1985, is the top state judge in Duval, Clay and Nassau counties. Three of the 41 judges in the district are black. Twenty-one percent of the population is black.

Santora has rejected calls for his resignation. Marches both in favor of and against the judge have taken place in Jacksonville. The Rev. Jesse Jackson led two protests against Santora.

Willye Dennis, president of the Jacksonville chapter of the National Association of Colored People, said she was concerned that Santora remains on the bench.

Killer leaves behind suicide note

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A suicide note apparently written by a man killed with his 12-year-old hostage in a hail of police gunfire is strong evidence he planned to die in a clash with law officers, authorities said Friday.

The undated note by Bryan French appeared to be addressed to his mother, said Deputy State Medical Examiner Karen Gunson.

French, 20, was gunned down Thursday morning after he broke into a house and threatened to kill Nathan Thomas, 12, with a butcher knife. The child was fatally wounded in the head by the police gunfire.

Police believe the note was written shortly before French set out on a brief crime spree that included another attempted break-in and vandalism, said police spokesman Sgt. Derrick Foxworth.

Police found the four-page note Thursday night in a search of French's apartment.

"I hope to die tonight," the note said, according to Gunson.

She said the note also said, "I love you mom, it's not your fault."

Gunson's office must rule whether French's death was a suicide.

"The note is pretty good evidence of his intent to die," she said.

Police went to the neighborhood about 3:30 a.m. Thursday after receiving a call about a burglary in progress.

A police dog tracked French to a basement window that had been forced open at the home of pediatrician Greg Thomas, 38, and his wife, Martha McMurry, 45.

Officers waited while the parents went upstairs to wake up their two children. McMurry found French in her son's bed and screamed.

The parents and their other son, 8-year-old Benjamin, went into another bedroom as three officers at the foot of the stairs tried to talk French, who had moved out of the bedroom, into surrendering.

"French was very irrational, very angry, and repeatedly threatened to kill the boy," Foxworth said.

He said French, who was out of the officers' sight at the top of the stairs, shouted at the officers about the suicide note and demanded an officer's gun.

Two police officers outside the house fired at French through a window and missed. Foxworth said French then renewed his threat to kill the boy and began a countdown.

"Ten, nine, eight, seven, six," and it was clear in those officers' minds that he was in the process of killing the boy," Foxworth said.

The three officers rushed upstairs and fired at least 16 times, with 14 of the bullets hitting French and two hitting the boy. French died at the scene. The boy died three hours later at a hospital.

Gunson said the autopsy showed no evidence the boy was cut by the knife.

Assistant District Attorney John Bradley said a grand jury will decide whether the officers were justified in opening fire. Until then, they've been placed on administrative leave.

French had a history of violence and a police record including run-ins with Portland school police dating to 1983. He was last arrested Jan. 4 on a charge of menacing after he threatened a convenience store clerk, and he had been scheduled to appear in court Thursday.

Judge OKs video for murder trial

DELAND, Fla. (AP) — A jury in the trial of a prostitute accused of killing a male motorist may review a videotaped confession and other evidence detailing the slayings of six other men, a judge ruled Friday.

"The material is relevant. The material shows a planned scheme or design," Circuit Judge Uriel Blount decided after hearing 90 minutes of arguments outside the presence of the jury.

Aileen Wuornos is charged with first-degree murder in the shooting and robbery of 51-year-old Richard Mallory, whose partially decomposed body was found Dec. 13, 1989, northwest of Daytona Beach. If convicted, she could be sentenced to death.

Wuornos has been charged with first-degree murder in four other roadside killings committed during a 13-month period following Mallory's slaying. Two other deaths are under investigation.

Lawyers for Wuornos, 35, argued the evidence didn't demonstrate an elaborate scheme. They said there were differences as well as similarities in the killings and that allowing the videotape and testimony in the other murders could confuse the jury.

In a three-hour statement videotaped by investigators after her January 1991 arrest, Wuornos describes each of the killings in detail. She says several times that she shot the men in self-defense.

In the video, she cites names of victims, dates of the crimes and places where they took place. Authorities say the statement was given voluntarily by Wuornos.

Defense attorneys have said they would argue that Wuornos killed prostitution clients only after they became abusive and violent.

In addition to the lengthy videotape, prosecutors were allowed to present evidence and testimony from deputies, crime analysts and others regarding all the victims.

"What we can establish is a pattern by the defendant of killings along the highways of the state of Florida," said prosecutor David Damore. "You have a pattern here. You have a signature."

Prosecutors argued all of the victims apparently were shot with the same .22-caliber revolver, all died of multiple gunshots, the victims' cars and properties were stolen and their bodies were dumped in wooded areas.

Assistant Public Defender Billy Nolas tried to block testimony about the other killings.

"We do not try people in this country on propensity. We do not try people on character. We do not try people on anything other than the crime charged in the indictment," Nolas said.

After jurors were called back to the courtroom, the state presented a series of witnesses who testified about the murder of Richard Humphreys, 56, a state child-abuse investigator.

The former Sylacauga, Ala., police chief was shot six times, including once in the head and twice in the back.

State Attorney John Tanner quoted from a Wuornos statement about Humphreys' death, saying, "I felt sorry for him because he was gurgling. I shot him in the head to get him out of his misery."

Man gets gas chamber sentence for killing 7

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A man convicted of murdering seven people in an office rampage over an unrequited love was sentenced Friday to die in the gas chamber.

Superior Court Judge Joseph Biafore Jr. called Richard Farley a vicious killer who displayed "complete disregard for human life."

The judge rejected a lawyer's requests for a modified sentence of life in prison and a request for a new trial.

"The defendant Richard Farley is without question a killer ... who killed with the intention to prove to the object of his unrequited love that he wasn't a wimp anymore," the judge said.

Jurors on Nov. 1 recommended the death penalty for Farley in the Feb. 16, 1988, slayings at ESL Inc., a Sunnyvale defense contractor. In October, the jury found Farley, a computer engineer, guilty of killing seven people to get the attention of a former co-worker who rejected him. During the trial, prosecutors detailed Farley's 3 1/2-year-long obsessive pursuit of Laura Black. He sent her more than 100 letters, followed her day and night from work to home and to aerobics classes, left her gifts on her desk and prowled confidential personnel files to glean tidbits about her life.

Despite her repeated rejections, Farley persisted and was fired in 1987 for harassing her.

Black, 30, was shot in the shoulder during the rampage, but survived and testified against Farley.

Farley, 43, admitted the killings but pleaded innocent, saying he never planned to kill but only wished to get Black's attention or commit suicide in front of her to make her feel guilty for rejecting him.

CAMPUS MINISTRY

... considerations

All too often, our University Community is shocked by the deaths of one or more of its members. These moments of separation and sorrow are even more difficult when those who die are students. During those times, it is often our faith in the promises held out to us by Jesus that sustains us.

During the semester break, two M.S.A. graduate students and one former member of the Class of 1995 died.

Perhaps we can remember ERNESTO ALVARADO, DAVID BRITTON AND JULIE GANTHER and pray for each of them in the words the mother and best friend of Ernesto shared with grieving classmates.

Zulema Jimenez wrote from Panama:

With a pain filled heart at the unexpected parting of my son, Ernesto, I would like to express my deepest gratitude to the educational authorities, professors, classmates and friends who knew him and who loved him in this prestigious University of Notre Dame, where Ernesto was fed both spiritually and Intellectually. There he felt happy, proud and motivated to achieve his goals.

I realize God gifted me for a time with an extraordinary son whom I loved and was dedicated to. It was time to take him to his heavenly home with our mother, Mary.

I thank God for all of the gifts he gave my son and, God willing, they will serve as a stimulus for his University classmates so that all might practice the love of God and service to others, as Ernesto did.

Kimberley Shea wrote:

I would like to share a few words of peace with you, because he had a special way of speaking to all those he loved.

I would like to give thanks to God for letting me be with Ernesto before, during and after his tragic death. He did not suffer. He joined his Holy Family while we were holding hands, and I was praying the Our Father in Spanish. The few precious days we spent together in Panama were happy ones. He was with his family, in his country, with his friends and with me.

He left many beautiful memories behind including inspiring letters and photographs. He was always there with a full energetic smile when we needed him.

Shortly before his death, he wrote "Laugh, because every time you do you make God and me happy. Have faith and a lot of strength. Remember every day is beautiful and you have to live each day to the fullest."

Former Premier of Greece will run again

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — After a narrow acquittal on corruption charges, former Premier Andreas Papandreu on Friday angrily challenged the conservative government to hold early elections, suggesting he would run.

Two of Papandreu's co-defendants, both former Cabinet ministers, were convicted on related charges at the end of a trial stemming from a scandal that brought down Papandreu's government in 1989.

One of his convicted co-defendants, former Finance Minister Dimitris Tsovolas, holed up at the headquarters of the Socialist party, known as PASOK, with hundreds of supporters and challenged police to arrest him there.

"I will remain in the PASOK offices, waiting for the authorities to arrest me and take me to Korydallos prison," he told reporters. The crowd dispersed after several hours.

Papandreu's party is the main opposition to the conservative government, winning almost 40 percent of the vote in the 1990 elections. Papandreu, though 72 and in ill health, has retained full control of the party.

The 13-judge special court voted 7-6 to acquit Papandreu of instigating the loss of state company funds. He had been accused of ordering state company managers to deposit money with the Bank of Crete, whose owner, George Koskotas, is accused of embezzlement.

A central bank audit in late 1988 found that $210 million were missing from the bank.

The six dissenting judges said they believed Papandreu must have known of Koskotas's activities.

Papandreu was not in court to hear the verdict. He boycotted the trial, saying the charges against him were a conspiracy by his political enemies.

Later, in an angry television address, Papandreu claimed the verdict showed the charges against him had been trumped up by a conservative-Communist coalition that succeeded his party in 1989. He called for a new poll.

"With the excuse of a cleanup, the electoral will of the people was adulterated. The New Democracy majority is the result of the Greek people having been hoodwinked. The demand for elections is the demand of the people," Papandreu said.

Deputy Premier Athanassios Kanellopoulos called Friday for calm and unity. "Democracy cannot withstand divisions. Let us all work together ... to create a calm political climate," he said.

The trial, the last 10 months of which were televised, was more popular than most soap operas here. Streets were nearly deserted Thursday night as people stayed at home to wait for the court's verdict.

Much of the evidence against Papandreu was based on testimony by Koskotas, who will be tried separately for embezzling. The court majority said it did not believe Koskotas' testimony that Papandreu had taken bribes from him.

Papandreu could have been sentenced to a life term in prison if convicted.

Tsovolas was convicted of overriding a government procedure in settling a debt for a Papandreu friend.

Elderly singers improve Sinatra

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — At 96, Anna Main is enjoying a flourishing new career as a singer.

Main, a former church singer, is a star and senior member in an unlikely chorus of never-say-old singers who are enchanting audiences with outrageous send ups and considerable musical talents.

A recent production, a joint effort with a local theater company, re-creates the tumultuous days of the French Revolution. But they're doing it their way — with the music of Frank Sinatra.

They call the musical review "Louis Lou I — a Revolting Musical," a reference both to the French king and the rock song by the Kingsmen.

In previous shows, such as "The Devil in Ms. Main" and the satirical "Oh No! A Condo!," the amateur singers have obliterated stereotypes about the elderly.

"You see old people out there, and you expect to hear 'I Love You Truly' and 'In the Good Old Summertime,'" said Sally Rubenstone, the troupe's administrator. "Instead, you get 'Doo-wah ditty' and people shaking their hips."

Troupe members portrayed Country Joe and the Fish and their 1960s rock music at a recent re-creation of the Woodstock music festival.

The 10-year-old singing troupe, known as "The Young at Heart Chorus," provides its 30 members with a musical and social outlet. For some, it has meant more.

Marion Chagnon, at 58 the baby in the group, said she lost her confidence to sing in barbershop quartets when she began to go blind.

"I never thought I could sing again, but then 'The Young at Heart Chorus' came along and gave me the best part of my life back," she said.

"I think it adds 10 years to their life," Eileen Hall, a 78-year-old troupe member, said of her co-singers. She squeezes the chorus rehearsals into her schedule of bowling, tap and line dancing.

As she speaks, her fellow singers, bedecked in bonnets and breeches, await their fate at a 10-foot-tall wooden guillotine to strains of "When I Was 17."

Researchers reveal helpful tips for disease prevention

ST. LOUIS (AP) — We can't avoid getting older, but evidence is growing that we may be able to avoid some of the sicknesses that go along with it.

Disorders such as cardiovascular disease, hypertension and adult onset diabetes don't have to be the natural consequences of aging, says Wendy Kohrt, an associate professor of medicine at Washington University.

"We feel they are more related to physical inactivity, and that many of them could be avoided through exercise and by maintaining an active lifestyle," she said.

Kohrt recently completed a first-of-its kind, five-year study in which 110 sedentary people ages 60 to 71 were put through a rigorous exercise program. It reaped such rewards as seeing 73-year-old Clara Wolff beaming with pride after a six-mile run.

Kohrt's study group recruited 53 men and 57 women from the St. Louis area for a yearlong regimen. By year's end, all the participants were exercising 45 to 50 minutes a day, five days a week, at heart rates 80 percent to 90 percent of their maximum heart rate.

"Most were walking or jogging," Kohrt said. "The goal was to get each participant to do the equivalent of 15 to 20 miles per week by the end of the study."

All of the exercise was done under supervised conditions at the medical school's indoor track and gym.

In the later stages of the program, those who could progressed from walking to jogging. Those who continued to walk but had difficulty increasing their heart rates on a level surface exercised on treadmills with elevated grades.

And the results surprised a lot of people.

"Earlier studies had tended to show that older people were not adaptable, that they couldn't benefit from cardiovascular programs like younger people, and women were not expected to do as well as men," Kohrt said.

"But after a year in our program, both the men and the women improved their cardiovascular function 20 (percent) to 25 percent — the same improvement level typically noted in studies of much younger people," she said.

Doctors know the aging process kicks in around ages 35 to 40, when subtle declines begin in physical performance. Kohrt says she had believed her study would help pin down just when in later life the big decline begins.

"We thought the people who were closer to 70 would not respond as well to exercise as the people in their early 60s," she said. "But it didn't come out that way. Those who were 70 appeared to get the same relative benefits as those who were 60."

"It seems to me that the central message here is that older people are remarkably responsive to exercise," said William Evans, chief of the Human Physiology Laboratory at the Human Nutrition Research Center on Aging at Tufts University in Boston.

Evans' own study on high-intensity weightlifting for the elderly last year showed that even up to age 100, such exercise can triple muscle strength and cause significant increase in muscle size.

"I think there's been a myth for a very long time that at some point as we grow older, we lose our ability to respond to exercise. I think that with what Dr. Kohrt has seen and what we have seen in our strength training is that it is just that — a myth," he said in a telephone interview.

"It has become obvious that when older people resign themselves to that state, it's a downward spiral," Evans said.

About 300 applicants were screened to get the 110 participants, and they had to be ready to work hard, Kohrt says. But some people couldn't take it, she says.

"It's hard to push some people because they feel they've done a lot if they've walked a mile. We wanted them doing four miles a day," Kohrt said.

"We wanted the most vigorous exercise that we thought they could handle. I think the majority expressed some reservations at the beginning, but before it was over they were actually doing things they couldn't even imagine before they started," she said.

Every three months the participants underwent interim testing, and their exercise assignments were adjusted weekly. At the end of the study, the initial tests were repeated to determine the progress.

Not all the progress was physical.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Student finds Notre Dame elitism disconcerting

Dear Editor:

In his January 16th edition of "Capital Comments," Mr. Gary J. Caruso tells of a wonderful week in New Orleans, a week during which our football team overcame great odds to defeat Florida in the Sugar Bowl.

However, by the time I reached his final words, "The Irish...won...because we are Notre Dame and they are not," it had become obvious that the overriding theme of Mr. Caruso's article had little to do with beating the odds.

Rather, it deals with the presumption that Notre Dame students are simply better people than everyone else, and will always be. We're better, apparently, because we act "more sophisticated and classy" and possess a "humble" attitude.

It seems to me that a page devoted to patting ourselves on the back for being so "humble" contradicts itself. Moreover, it unfortunately echoes a sentiment which has grown far too prevalent at Notre Dame, and which effectively diminishes the image of the University of which we're so proud.

I was not in New Orleans for the Sugar Bowl, and I'm well aware that our fans were greatly outnumbered there, and that the Florida fans were beyond obnoxious.

At the same time I also believe that Notre Dame students would surely have been guilty of the same braggadocio had we entered New Orleans with a less "humbling" regular season record. I'm so sure of this because I've seen it time and time again.

Mr. Caruso criticizes our opponents for their loud clothing and (gasp!) "F--- ND shirts" but neglects to mention that F--- (fill in: Miami, Michigan, Penn St., etc.) shirts are widely sold on campus anytime one of those respective schools visits South Bend for a game. Jesus had something to say about casting the first stone, if I recall correctly.

Mr. Caruso goes on to describe Florida students as drunken slob, while recalling his own experiences of downing shots upon shots as if they were sacred. He says that drinking "played a major role" for Notre Dame students, but was certainly not "a major factor in our experience."

Yet a look around campus on any given weekend will make it clear that for at least most Notre Dame students, drinking plays the solitary role in having a good time. I'm sure this practice won't stop, but at the very least, we shouldn't use a double standard in a feeble attempt to convince ourselves that the rest of the colleges are made up of alcoholics, while we stand pure and innocent above them.

The article then speaks of the uniqueness of Notre Dame. "Strangers become friends in a uniquely Notre Dame way" and fans "displayed a sophistication Florida will never see." Do we honestly believe that no other people could experience such relationships or display such poise? Are we elite?

As Christians, it seems to me that Notre Dame students should strive to be examples of humility and class to the rest of the world, rather than claiming such things as our own, unattainable for the "non-Domer." The true Christian admits that he is a sinner, rather than place himself above the rest of the world.

This attitude of ours, that we're better people than everyone else, is exactly what causes our rival fans to hate us with such vehemence. It is what spurs on letters such as that sent to The Observer by one Indiana student last fall. It is also the mindset typical of racism and homophobia, both of which curiously enough are widespread sentiments on this campus.

Out of convenience, I have used Mr. Caruso's article as an example of a larger problem. I'm not singling his column out nor do I mean to place a stain on Mr. Caruso's, or anyone's experience at the Sugar Bowl. I congratulate the football team on a fantastic victory, and I commend those fans in attendance at the Sugar Bowl for rooting our team to victory.

However, I ask our students to beware of considering themselves elite, or better than anyone else. Proclaiming one's classiness and humility is neither classy or humble. This is not pride, nor is it genuine school spirit, but rather simple egotism.

Instead, students should represent Notre Dame with a truly humble attitude, in victory as in defeat, and show the world what this school is really about.

Professor thanks generous student body

Dear Editor :

I want to thank you for your generous and spirited response to my letter about John Montana, the Native American badly beaten the day after Thanksgiving, and his family.

In ways that they felt truly

Providential, your help genuinely saved (and made) the Christmas season for them. The need for such help was, in fact, even more acute than I knew when I wrote the letter. But I want you to know that I was able to take them over $500.00, a decorated Christmas tree, a Christmas turkey, an entire set of dishes, some clothes, and some baby toys. Thank you, very much.

'da Bears

SNL skit asks the question, "Are Chicagoans really like that?"

By JOHN O'BRIEN
Accent Editor

Sausage... porkchops... Ditka...
Jordan...Sausage...

Thus begin the dreams of "Bob Swirsky's Superfans," a nutty bunch of football/basketball fans from a certain Midwestern town that starts with a "C" and ends with an "o" and has "hicag" in the middle.

The Superfans made their debut last January on "Saturday Night Live," the night before 'da Bears faced the New York Giants in the NFC Playoffs. Since then, Joe Mantegna, John Goodman and George Wendt have taken their turns hosting the show, which allegedly is shot in the restaurant named after a certain coach. That coach being, of course, Ditka.

In the process of trumpeting the talents of 'da Bulls and 'da Bears, the skit has become immensely popular—even in the city that the skit pokes fun at—Chicago. Now, in addition to getting ribbed about being from the home of Al Capone, Chicagoans are teased about being from the home of 'da Bears.

But some Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students from the Chicago area don't mind being associated with the skit. Many find the Superfans quite funny and even a little accurate in their depiction of sports-crazed Chicago fans.

Rob Browne, an ND junior from the suburb of Glenview, Ill., finds the skit funny and not the least bit offensive.

"It's really an accurate description of blue-collar native Chicagoans," said Browne. "True Bears fans are almost religious," he added.

"It's funny because it's true," said

Colleen Feeley, an SMC junior also from Glenview. "The fans that go to games in below-zero weather are like that."

The skit is accurate, said Colleen Gorman, an SMC junior from Evergreen Park, Ill., but it's a little exaggerated.

"Not a majority of fans are like that, but some are," Gorman said.

So these obnoxious, beer-drinking, polish sausage-eating Superfans are an accurate depiction of Chicago fans? Yes, said ND senior Jim Cox, who comes from Arlington Heights, Ill., but they're more representative of sports fans in general.

"All sports fans are like that—everyone roots for their home team," Cox said.

Whether or not these Superfans can be found everywhere, one city—a certain Midwestern city—has opened its hearts to them.

"They get lots of publicity back home," said Bridget Carroll, an ND junior from LaGrange, Ill.

That publicity includes billboards, hats and posters promoting 'da Bulls and 'da Bears. In addition, a new commercial campaign featuring the Superfans is being aired during 'da Bulls' games.

"There's billboards using 'da' everywhere," said Lara Crosby, an ND junior from Evanston, Ill. "There's even ads for 'da ballet."

It's not just ND/SMC students that have taken a liking to the Superfans. Ditka himself has taken on the language, discussing the game between "Cleveland and 'da Bulls." What more could the Superfans ask for than a note of approval from Ditka?

Except, of course, for polish sausage...or pork chops...or beers...or bratwurst or...

Beatty's film 'Bugsy' comes up empty

By ELIZABETH HAYES
Movie Critic

This media splash is a hard one to figure. Is it a gangster movie? A star vehicle for Beatty? A probing look into the seedy lives and fascinating personae of members of organized crime in the early part of this century?

The answer is none. "Bugsy" is a movie that makes much of itself, tries too hard, and comes up empty. Warren Beatty, who used to be a wonderful actor, has again duplicated himself Dick Tracy-style into another cartoon. His portrayal of this demented, ambitious, and gullible crime boss is flat and predictable.

The movie gives us none of the requisite grit of mafia movies. These people, even Ben Kingsley (you will remember him as Gandhi), are more like movie stars than hard-boiled criminals. Warren Beatty is a poor choice for this part because he emits the aura of a politician rather than a gangster.

There is one definite plus in this movie. It shows us the way people lived in the years after World War II. The costumes, buildings, cars, and even the manners of the people are right on target. Obviously, a lot of money was spent on props and research.

Another plus is the cast. Who ever heard of Ben Kingsley, Joe Mantegna, and Elliot Gould in supporting roles? Each of these luminaries glinted in their unobtrusive places, giving the movie class.

A nice surprise came from Annette Bening who plays Bugsy's mistress/business partner. Her lines were characteristic gangster-moll drivel, but she delivered them convincingly.

She faded behind the bombastic figure of Beatty in their scenes together, but when the camera rests on her alone she is an excellent actress, capable of turning the audience to her favor even during her most uncivilized behavior.

The interesting thing about this movie is that the story is not that of a usual gangster flick. It focuses on Bugsy's legitimate enterprises, and his founding of the Hotel Flamingo, which started the glitz-palace casino rush in Las Vegas.

Further it unsurprisingly studies his relationship with a woman. What is this? A romance novel? A success story?

Actress Annette Bening, shown here in last year's film 'Guilty By Suspicion,' is now co-starring with Warren Beatty in 'Bugsy.'

Who ever said that criminals could be shown as people?

It really is an ambitious thing that Beatty has tried. He really wants us to like Bugsy, but to realize that he is still criminal. He tries to make him into a funny, loveable, silly character, who occasionally beats people to pulps. The writers, the directors, and most especially Beatty have completely missed the point.

Why do audiences love Al Pacino in "The Godfather," and Albert Finney in "Miller's Crossing," and even Dustin Hoffman in "Billy Bathgate"? Maybe they do because these characters are rotten to the core.

Evil is attractive. Real gangster movies understand that. They know that if you let the audience see that these criminals have hearts, they will no longer demand respect and adoration.

Bugsy Siegel is weak. He isn't really a gangster. He is a slightly crazy man who has been known to do illegal things to make money. This wouldn't be so bad if Beatty didn't try to make him into a gangster.

The failed attempt is worse than not trying in this case. If "Bugsy" was just supposed to show us Bugsy-the-man instead of Bugsy-the-mobster the movie would be all right. Instead, we get Bugsy-the-man and his vain attempts at evil. Nice try, Warren.

Nokes and Dibble sign new deals, avoid arbitration

The Mets' Dave Magadan, shown here tagging the Cubs' Jerome Walton in 1990, signed a one-year, $1,393,750 contract with New York.

NEW YORK (AP) — Matt Nokes tied Brian Harper for the top salary among catchers, agreeing Monday to a $7.5 million, three-year contract with the New York Yankees.

Nokes, who made $887,500 last season, gets a $750,000 signing bonus and annual salaries of $2.25 million under a deal that was essentially completed last week and announced Monday. His average annual salary of $2.5 million matches the $5 million, two-year deal that Harper and the Minnesota Twins agreed to Dec. 19.

Three other players settled Monday, leaving 130 players remaining in arbitration. Reliever Rob Dibble and Cincinnati agreed on a one-year deal for $1.4 million, while infielder Dave Magadan and the New York Mets split the difference and settled at $1,393,750.

Catcher B.J. Surhoff and Milwaukee settled for a $2.15 million, non-guaranteed contract, the same deal they agreed to last Thursday and unagreed to on Friday.

Nokes, 28, would have been eligible for free agency after the 1992 season. He hit .268 in 1991 with 77 RBIs and led the Yankees with 24 home runs, the most homers for a Yankees catcher since Elston Howard hit 28 in 1963.

"Matt was outstanding for us last season both at the plate and behind it, and we expect him to continue that success," Yankees general manager Gene Michael said. "We are very pleased he has made this commitment to the organization."

Nokes had asked for $2.6 million in arbitration last Friday while the Yankees had offered $1.9 million.

Magadan made $1.25 million in an injury-plagued 1991, when he slumped to a .258 average with four homers and 51 RBIs. The Mets had offered a 5 percent cut to $1,187,500 and the infielder had asked for $1.6 million.

"Someone would ask, 'Why did we offer a cut and give him a raise?'" Mets general manager Al Harazin said. "It's all part of the process. It's a give and take. We're just glad we got it done. It's one less possible arbitration."

Dibble, eligible for arbitration for the first time, had asked for $1.8 million and Cincinnati had offered $1 million. In addition to his base salary, Dibble would get a $50,000 bonus for appearing in 60 games. Last year, he made $500,000.

Dibble was 3-5 with a 3.17 ERA in 1991, when he appeared in 67 games and had a career-high 31 saves. It was a troubled year for the 28-year-old right-hander. National League president Bill White suspended him for three games for throwing at Eric Yelding of Houston, and four games for hitting a fan with a ball Dibble threw into the stands at Riverfront Stadium. Dibble later said he would get counseling to control his temper.

Surhoff, 27, hit .289 last season with five homers and 68 RBIs. The deal came apart last Friday over whether it would be guaranteed, and he then submitted a $2.6 arbitration request to Milwaukee's $2 million. Surhoff made $1,085,000 last season.

Mike Tyson's rape trial set to begin in Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Exchange the palm trees and balmy Gulf Stream breezes for snow drifts and freezing weather, and the rape cases against William Kennedy Smith and boxer Mike Tyson look alike.

A wealthy young man visiting from out-of-town meets a woman. They spend an evening together. He asks her over to his place. She agrees.

Then their stories diverge. She emerges from the chance acquaintance with a charge of rape, he protesting his innocence.

And from that point, a legal expert speculates, the strategies of prosecution and defense attorneys may diverge sharply from the Smith case when Tyson goes on trial for rape Monday.

A Marion Superior Court jury will judge Tyson on four charges stemming from an alleged assault July 19 against an 18-year-old contestant in the Miss Black America Pageant. If convicted, Tyson could face a 63-year prison term.

While Patricia Bowman, the woman who brought charges against Smith, was 31, the Indianapolis prosecutor's have a teen-age complainant whom they may portray as naive and too trusting, says law professor Henry C. Karlson of Indiana University-Purdue University Indianapolis. Smith was acquitted.

"They are going to try to show her as a starry-eyed young girl, away from home for the first time," Karlson said Monday.

"A famous man says, 'Look, when you're done here, why don't you come over to my hotel room for a party.' Only he doesn't tell her she's the party," he said.

And while Smith portrayed himself on the witness stand as little worse than an opportunist, Tyson's lawyers could score points by making their client appear sexually aggressive, up to a point, Karlson said.

Tyson repeatedly fondled pageant contestants, according to a lawsuit filed by pageant owner J. Morris Anderson, which labeled the former heavyweight champion a "serial buttocks fondler." Though Anderson has since dropped the suit, Rosie Jones, Miss Black America of 1990, filed a separate federal suit in New York, alleging Tyson rubbed and squeezed her buttocks.

"If I were Tyson's attorney, my defense would be to show he was grabbing everyone in sight for two days," Karlson said. "I would put it on the record to show that everyone knew what he wanted," including the 18-year-old woman who agreed to accompany Tyson to his hotel suite, he said.

Indiana's rape shield law, similar to laws in other states, will prevent the defense from presenting evidence of the alleged victim's sexual history. Court law will also prohibit evidence about Tyson's personal history, legal experts say.

Dehere's 31 lifts The Hall past No. 22 St. John's, 75-60

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — If Seton Hall manages to turn things around and earn a berth in the NCAA Tournament, the Pirates may look back to Monday night's game against No. 22 St. John's as a turning point.

"If we would have lost this going into (No. 6) Ohio State on Sunday, I don't know what would have happened," Pirates captain and senior forward Gordon Winchester said. "We would have down and it really would have been tough."

The Pirates don't have to worry about that now — because in a game they had to win, they did.

Terry Dehere scored 23 of his season-high 31 points in the first half when The Pirates took control and ended a three-game losing streak by beating St. John's 75-60.

The Big East game was the first this season for Seton Hall (10-5, 3-4) as an unranked team, and the Pirates played like a club that was desperate for a win. They hounded St. John's (10-5, 4-3) on defense, took advantage of the Redmen's manpower problems in the frontcourt, and got a big game from Dehere, whose previous season-high had been 23.

"We didn't care how we looked or how we played," Pirates coach P.J. Carlesimo said. "We needed a win, and this was a good turnaround."

Dehere, who missed a couple of minutes because of leg cramps early in the second half, capped two game-breaking spurts for Seton Hall — one in each half — and had a big assist on a basket by Arturas Karnishovas after St. John's inched within 64-58 with less than four minutes to play.

Dehere added two free throws after Karnishovas' basket to put Seton Hall up 68-58 and St. John's never threatened again in suffering its worst loss of the season. The Redmen's previous worst loss was 91-81 to No. 1 Duke on Dec. 5.

"This is definitely a confidence booster for us to get a win after dropping three in a row," said Dehere, who hit 10 of 21 from the field, mixing up his jumper with some nice drives to the hoop. "We felt this was a must-win game for us."

Malik Sealy had 19 for St. John's, which played without injured center Robert Werdann and then lost forward Shawnelle Scott to an ankle injury in the first half and backup center Mitchell Foster on fouls with 7:45 to play.

"We have three or four guys on this team who are struggling," Sealy said after the Redmen lost for the third time in five games. "We can't be concerned about Rob or Shawnelle. We have to play without them, but I'm an optimist. This can't go on forever." Seton Hall never seemed to lose control after its two big runs.

After Derek Brown got St. John's within 21-17, Karnishovas hit two free throws to start a 10-1 burst. Luther Wright and Bryan Caver added baskets and Dehere capped it with an ally-oop layup and two free throws.

Seton Hall, which led 38-31 at halftime, opened the final 20 minutes with a 7-0 burst. Karnishovas started the run with a shot in the lane and Jerry Walker followed with a free throw and a rebound basket. Dehere added a jumper to make it 45-31 and St. John's got no closer than six the rest of the way.

the Big Red will attempt to gain their first win of the season, behind the play of guards LeRon Moore and Kyle Garlitz and the inside work of forward Chris Smariga.

"It would be nice to get our first win of the season," said

Smariga. "I know that we have the talent, it's just a matter of finding the right chemistry."

Grace will rely on their transition game to carry them to their second win of the season.

"We are a lot smaller than most teams, so we have to run a lot more," said captain Shane Schoeneck. "Rebounding is the key. If we rebound, we should do well."

Perkins leads Lakers over SuperSonics, 116-110

Patrick Ewing, pictured here last season versus Detroit, scored 25 points and grabbed 14 rebounds in the Knicks 105-97 win yesterday.

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Sam Perkins scored 17 of his 25 points in the first half Monday to lead the Los Angeles Lakers to a 116-110 victory over the Seattle SuperSonics.

A.C. Green had 16 points and 16 rebounds and Sedale Threatt had 15 points for the Lakers, who have won six of their last eight games and beaten Seattle 16 consecutive times at the Forum, including playoff games.

The loss was the first for the Sonics under interim coach Bob Kloppenburg, who replaced the fired K.C. Jones last week. George Karl is expected to be named coach of the Sonics later in the week.

The Sonics had won their first two games under Kloppenburg, the second a 112-108 victory over the Lakers on Saturday night in Seattle.

Eddie Johnson led the Sonics with 29 points.

Knicks 105, Pacers 97

NEW YORK (AP) — Patrick Ewing scored 25 points and grabbed 14 rebounds and New York held Indiana to six points in the final 7:16.

New York trailed 91-87 with 7:16 remaining, but used a 9-0 spurt over the next 3:38 to gain the lead 96-91. Anthony Mason capped the run with a three-point play.

Indiana got as close as two points after that, 96-94, when Chuck Person made 1 of 2 foul shots with 2:19 left. But the Pacers hit only one field goal in the final 7:16 and were 5 of 10 from the foul line in the fourth quarter.

John Starks scored six of New York's final nine points and finished with 21, 11 in the fourth quarter. Xavier McDaniel had 16.

Celtics 107, Cavaliers 102

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Reggie Lewis scored 26 points and Robert Parish had 20 including the go-ahead hook shot with a minute left for Boston.

The win was the third straight for the injury-riddled Celtics, playing without Larry Bird and Kevin McHale. Cleveland, which was missing injured starters Larry Nance and Brad Daugherty, lost for the third time in its last four games, all at home.

The Cavaliers trailed most of the second half but scored six straight points — two by Mark Price and four by John Williams — to take a 100-99 lead on Williams' driving layup with 1:27 to go.

Parish, however, answered with a short hook shot that put the Celtics ahead for good with 1:07 left. After the Cavs' John Battle missed an 18-footer, Lewis was fouled and made both free throws for a three-point Boston lead, and Battle then fumbled away his dribble to set up a Boston fast break capped by Ed Pinckney's layup with 13.4 seconds remaining, clinching it for the Celtics.

Warriors 135, Hornets 119

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Chris Mullin scored 29 points and Golden State exploited Charlotte's sloppy play at both ends of the court to defeat the Hornets.

Golden State, which had eight players score in double-figures, riddled Charlotte's interior defense, scoring 74 points from in the key. The Warriors also grabbed 18 offensive rebounds, which led to 24 second-chance points.

On the offensive end, the Warriors forced the Hornets to commit 25 turnovers, two shy of Charlotte's season high, and converted the miscues into 34 points.

Sarunas Marciulionis added 22 points, Tyrone Hill had 17 and Victor Alexander and Mario Elie each had 16 for Golden State, which has won four in a row.

Larry Johnson scored 26 points and grabbed 11 rebounds for Charlotte, which lost its fourth in a row. Kendall Gill added 21 points for the Hornets.

No. 3 Cowboys squeak by No. 17 Sooners, 92-89

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Darwyn Alexander equaled his career high with 24 points, including two free throws with five seconds left, lifting No. 3 Oklahoma State to a thrilling 92-89 victory over No. 17 Oklahoma Monday night and giving the Cowboys their best start ever.

Oklahoma State (17-0) surpassed the mark of 16-0 set by the 1950-51 team and is 3-0 in the Big Eight for the first time since 1980-81. The Cowboys snapped an 11-game losing streak in Norman.

Oklahoma (11-3, 1-2), could not make up a 14-point second-half deficit and was held to 43-percent shooting by the Cowboy defense.

The Sooners pulled within 90-89 when Terry Evans hit a 3-pointer with 32 seconds left. The Cowboys were then able to work 27 seconds off the clock before Alexander was sent to the line.

Alexander, an 80-percent foul shooter, made both shots. Brent Price then missed a 3-pointer in the final seconds. Price led Oklahoma with 26 points, 18 of them in the second half.

Corey Williams had 21 points and Byron Houston had 17 despite foul trouble. Jeff Webster had 21 for Oklahoma, 17 in the first half, before fouling out with 6:46 remaining in the contest.

A six-point run late in the first half — sparked by a technical foul on Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs — gave the Cowboys a seven-point lead. They stretched it to eight by halftime.

Houston picked up his fourth foul 1:51 into the second half, but the Cowboys scored the next six points to take a 58-45 lead. They increased it to 14 three times and led 71-60 with 9:52 left.

Oklahoma then used a 9-2 run to make it 73-69. The Cowboys were unable to pull away again and the Sooners eventually pulled within 90-89 on Evans' 3-pointer.

Oklahoma had the tempo to its liking early and had good luck working the ball inside against the smaller Cowboys. The result was a 17-11 lead four and a half minutes into the game.

But following a timeout, the Sooners missed eight straight shots and committed two turnovers.

Meanwhile, Oklahoma State got 3-pointers from both Sean Sutton and Alexander and a drive from Houston to take a 19-17 lead.

From there, the Cowboys negated Oklahoma's running game and were content to spread the floor and work the clock.

They got a 10-3 run during one stretch — scoring on five straight possessions — to take a 34-31 lead with about three minutes left in the half.

A short time later, Houston hit a follow shot and Tubbs was called for the technical. Alexander hit the free throws and Randy Davis scored on the ensuing possession to make it 42-35.

Oklahoma closed within 42-40 on five straight points from Webster, but the Cowboys seized the momentum again by scoring the final six points before halftime.

Oklahoma State scored on 11 of its final 13 possessions of the first half and outshot the Sooners 68 percent to 35 percent in the opening 20 minutes.

Jamaicans are ready for Albertville

(AP) — Undaunted by its first adventure over the snow and ice of Calgary and the occasional crash landings that come with the territory, the Jamaican bobsled team returns next month for another go at the Olympics, this time in Albertville.

Say this for its members. They don't give up easily.

"Oh, no," said team captain Devon Harris, in the lilting singsong of the Islands. "We would not do that. It was not a stunt or a one-shot thing. It was a serious effort to show that a team from a tropical country could be competitive. We had to prove that."

"A number of people thought we were jokers, that we would be like the Swiss playing cricket and get hammered. We had to prove we were serious."

Of course, they were serious. You knew that from the reggae theme song that accompanied them through the streets of Calgary at all hours of the day and night.

In part, it went this way: "We be trainin', gainin', strainin' and painin', but we ain't complainin'."

Jamaica bobsled, ragamuffin, Jamaica bobsled, we ruff'n tuff'n.

Everything cool, mon." Nothing funny about that, right?

So Harris and his pals stayed in their sleds, running in sand and lugging pushcarts around on Caribbean concrete, then traveling to train in snow and ice in places like Calgary and Innsbruck.

Seven of them will be in Albertville, where Jamaica will enter a pair of two-man sleds and one four-man team. The four-man driver will be Dudley Stokes, and as such he gets the first look at the treacherous curves and corners. He says he is delighted with his job.

"I think it's scarier in back," Stokes said. "I have confidence in myself. When you're behind somebody else, it's tougher. In front, there's no time to worry. In back, you see it, you feel it happening. You think, 'It's coming!' You're a little light here, a little light there. The third time, you think, 'This could be it, boys!' There's too much time to think ... and to pray."

So Stokes will sit up front, thank you. Harris, also a driver, agrees with his teammate's philosophy. He was a brakeman in Calgary, where the two-man Jamaican team finished 30th among 52 teams.

And the four-man sled? "We had a mishap," Harris said sadly.

That's a mishap, as in a crash. "We were going down merrily into curve 12. The driver was late getting into the corner. We went up too high on the wall and went over on our heads. We slid for 200 meters, upside down."

This is not a comfortable condition and would be considered a perfectly good reason for Harris and his buddies to head straight for the beach back home. Instead, they made a U-turn and went back to the top of the run. "We did it again," he said. "That is the best way when you have a crash."

They caught the imagination of the Calgary crowds and the reaction spread around the world. "Mostly, Jamaicans who live overseas were affected in a positive way by what we did," Stokes said. "Overseas, Jamaicans have a siege mentality. This was something for them to hang their hats on. They were very appreciative."

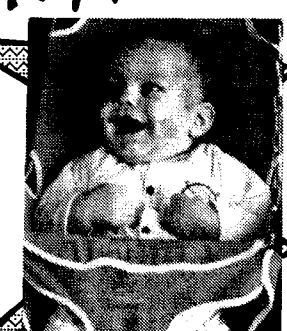

There have been other crashes, enough of them for Harris and Stokes to have lost count. Each time, the Jamaicans pick up their sled and do it over again, trying to perfect the run.

They are getting closer. "The crashes are infrequent now," Stokes said. "At Calgary, we used old, second-hand sleds. This time we will have Dresden sleds rented from Germany. They are the best sleds on the surface right now."

Their goal for Albertville is to crack the top 20 finishers in both the two-man and four-man events. And more importantly, not to look like the Swiss trying to play cricket.

Watch 'em, mon.

M.J. Fernandez and Sanchez Vicario reach semis

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Mary Joe Fernandez got through Tuesday at the Australian Open to reach the semifinals for the third straight year.

Fernandez overcame a jammed toe that needed lengthy treatment during her match against fellow American Amy Frazier, then fought back from deficits in the second set and tiebreaker to win 6-4, 7-6 (8-6).

Not so lucky was Manuela Maleeva-Fragniere, who strained tendons around the big toe of her right foot in doubles Monday and defaulted her quarterfinal singles match Tuesday against Arantxa Sanchez Vicario.

Fernandez, a runner-up to Steffi Graf here two years ago, broke Frazier twice when she served for the second set, and won four consecutive games from 2-5 to go ahead 6-5 in the second set.

Fernandez, 20, from Miami, Fla., jammed her toe late in the first set, and asked for a time out after her service was broken to 1-2 in the second set. A trainer padded the toe, but Fernandez then went through a bout of wildness on serve. She double-faulted at 40-30 and eventually was broken again when she slapped a forehand wide.

Frazier, more aggressive and taking more chances on both her groundstrokes and at the net, blew several opportunities to push the match into a third set.

"She doesn't have much margin for error," Fernandez said of Frazier's style.

The 19-year-old from Rochester Hills, Mich., hit two unforced errors on forehands after leading 5-2 in the tiebreaker. Fernandez then tied it at 5-5 with a lovely forehand dropshot on a short ball, and went ahead 6-5 on a long backhand by Frazier. Fernandez returned the favor to make it 6-6, then took the match when Frazier netted a forehand and a backhand on the next two points.

"I love playing down here," Fernandez said. "Hopefully, the third time (in the semis) will be lucky for me. I know I'm competing well and playing well, but I still don't play the way I practice. A lot of it's mental."

She said she has to be more aggressive and go for winners more than she's been doing.

"I'm not going to win the tournament if I don't," said Fernandez, who plays the winner of Jennifer Capriati-Gabriela Sabatini match Tuesday night.

Temperatures cooled down considerably on Tuesday, a day after the Australian Open turned into a colossal steam-bath — courts sizzling at 127 degrees, players wobbling out of matches, fans fainting in their seats.

Medics treated about 20 fans of all ages who passed out in the heat, and several who suffered other symptoms of heat-stroke.

Jim Courier delighted in the weather, dancing lightly in conditions that reminded him of home in Florida, complete with the same kind of lung-scalding breezes that buffet the courts where he honed his game.

Courier, the No. 2 seed, pounded shots as hard as ever to beat Marc Rosset 6-3, 6-1, 6-3, and reach his fourth consecutive Grand Slam quarterfinal. The goal now: a match against John McEnroe.

"Absolutely," Courier said. "That'd mean I'm in the final.

I'd love to play him."

Courier beat McEnroe in a tuneup tournament in Adelaide, but was more impressed with him during practice.

"He was taking my first serve early and coming in and playing well," Courier said. "He didn't do that when we played in our match. But I could see that he had pretty good feel with the balls."

McEnroe showed he also can handle hot weather when he won his five-setter Sunday against Emilio Sanchez in 124-degree courtside temperatures. Top-seeded Stefan Edberg called McEnroe "Mr. Open," just as the Swede described Jimmy Connors at the U.S. Open last summer.

While Courier escaped to the air-conditioned comfort of the player's lounge after beating Rosset, a fellow American suffered in the heat.

Aaron Krickstein, a Michigan man with a reputation as one of the game's great marathoners, felt nauseous and woozy in the fifth set against Amos Mansdorf and retired 6-2, 4-6, 1-6, 7-6 (7-4), 4-1.

Krickstein, who was fine a short while later, said he had diarrhea before the match and began feeling stomach pains during the fourth set.

"The heat sure didn't help," he said. "It was definitely the hottest day I've played since I've been here. I wasn't tired. It may have looked like it, but I actually felt OK. It was just tough to stand up out there."

Mansdorf, a former Israeli soldier used to desert heat, drank his way out of trouble.

"I felt very tired in the middle of the second set," said Mansdorf, who next meets Courier. "I felt like I was getting sunstroke, so I just made sure that I kept drinking a lot. I drank so much that I couldn't play, and I lost the third set 6-1 because I was so heavy. But then it paid off, because he was very tired at the end."

Michael Stich quenched his thirst early, then pushed sluggishly past Wally Masur, the last Australian left in the men's or women's singles, 3-6, 6-4, 7-6 (7-5), 6-4. Stich next meets Richard Krajicek, a 7-5, 7-6 (8-6), 6-3 winner at night against Christian Bergstrom.

Both the Bills and the Redskins also have excellent staffs, as evidenced by Indianapolis' interest in Buffalo offensive coordinator Ted Marchibroda and Washington defensive coordinator Richie Petitbon having been mentioned for several NFL head coaching vacancies this past month.

Edge: Even.

INTANGIBLES—The big question this week will be, are the Bills going to be the third two-time loser in the big game? Only the Broncos and the Minnesota Vikings have ever lost back-to-back Super Bowls, and Buffalo has a chance at this dubious honor Sunday.

While Bills' players and fans may brush aside these questions, the thought will be in the back of their minds, if for no other reason than it will be brought up countless times in the next week. Can Levy get his players to put the thought out of their minds, at least for three hours on Sunday? That will be his, and the Bills' challenge.

For the Redskins, it comes down to whether it can continue the NFC's dominance of the Super Bowl. Washington was the last NFC team to lose in the big game, falling to the Los Angeles Raiders 38-9 in 1984.

The key for Washington will be to downplay its role as the favorite. In that respect, having Gibbs for a coach will be a big factor. This is his fourth Super Bowl. He knows what it takes to win, and what it takes to lose. He'll have his team ready.

And what does that mean for my roommate? I hope he can make the rent.

Women's IH set to resume play

By JIM VOGL
Sports Writer

After a month long layoff, the women's interhall basketball league resumed action with mixed feelings.

"We would have liked to just have practice before break and then started the season with this semester," said Lewis senior Jill-Beth Hayes.

This season the league scheduled one game before and three games after Christmas break.

"We were out of practice and it showed," said Hayes, whose team managed a 29-18 win over Howard. "I didn't have time to adjust to my own schedule this semester."

Hayes also cited the conflict many players had preparing for basketball in the fall semester so soon after the women's interhall football season.

"I've recognized a lot of the more competitive players on the court from football," she said.

Siegfried A scored the most lopsided victory of the week by trouncing Badin A, 46-14. Freshman Ellen Burns lead Siegfried A with 20 points.

"The game started at 8 p.m., so we got together at 6:30 p.m. and went over some of the things we practiced before break," Burns said. "We were cold at first but eventually we got into it and played aggressively. We were very organized and played well defensively."

Siegfried's performance matched their dominating outing before break, when it defeated Lyons, 48-22.

"We really outplayed both teams. I really don't know what the competition is like, but I just hope we keep playing like we have been." Burns commented.

In other action, Lewis Hall downed Howard, 29-18; Lyons downed Pasquerilla West, 30-18; and Knott beat Walsh 30-24. In the Green division consisting of B teams, Farley B got off to a fast start and beat Siegfried B, 28-20. Also, Breen-Phillips B won by forfeit over Breen-Phillips B.

Football signed by Rockne stolen

LAPORTE, Ind. (AP) — Bernadette Hemphill can't name anything special about her late brother's favorite possession — except that it was made of pigskin and carried the names Rockne, Layden and Stuhldreher.

Mrs. Hemphill's brother, Paul Beckerich, cherished it and the University of Notre Dame.

He lived near the South Bend campus for most of his 78 years and became acquainted with legendary football coach Knute Rockne and four of the school's most famous players.

Mrs. Hemphill isn't sure when Rockne gave her brother the football signed by himself and two of the Four Horsemen, Elmer Layden and Harry Stuhldreher.

But she is sure that it's gone now. She's also missing a ceramic figurine of a player that was another gift from Rockne.

She discovered the items were missing about two weeks ago, and figured the alleged theft happened when she was in the hospital around Thanksgiving.

"They must have known what they were looking for because I never told a soul I had them," said Mrs. Hemphill, who kept the items in a bag in her bedroom. "I'm quite ill over it. I feel very, very badly. I treasure them not only because they came from my brother, but from Knute Rockne."

Bob Evans, owner of Sports Collectibles in South Bend, said the football is worth "maybe three thousand dollars."

"But something like that is irreplaceable," Evans said. "It's too bad someone had to take it. I'm sure she would rather have it back than the three thousand dollars."

Men's basketball to take on 11-4 Marquette tonight

Irish conclude string of nine consecutive road games

By MIKE SCRUDATO
Sports Writer

After struggling through its last two games, losses to West Virginia and Virginia, the Notre Dame men's basketball team looks to get back on track tonight against Marquette in Milwaukee.

Irish coach John MacLeod believes that the fatigue of eight consecutive road games might have caught up with his team.

"Throughout last week, we were missing something in practice," MacLeod commented. "This week the fire seems to be back, and we are playing on our toes, which we did not do against Virginia."

MacLeod hopes this will transcend into tonight's game, the last game on the road before the Irish finally return home on Thursday against Missouri.

The Warriors, members of the newly-formed Great Midwest Conference, enter the contest with a record of 11-4; however, this mark was compiled against a light schedule.

"I think Marquette's schedule is supposedly easy," MacLeod said. "They pose a young team, and wins produce confidence, which is important for a team like theirs."

The young Warrior team, which has no seniors, is leading scorer junior sixth-man Ron Curry, a transfer from Arizona. He comes into tonight's game averaging 15.5 points and 6.4 rebounds per game.

The Marquette starting five consists of three sophomores and two freshmen. This lack of experience could be a factor against Notre Dame, which starts four seniors.

"Marquette has a lot of young, but talented players," MacLeod said. "They are going to have a bright future."

MacLeod also likes what he has seen from his lone freshman starter, Billy Taylor.

"Billy has made great progress, and he had a good day against Virginia," MacLeod commented. "His tremendous speed will allow him to become a two-position player for us in the future."

With two games in three nights, MacLeod hopes to get some more minutes from his bench, especially sophomores Carl Cozen and Jon Ross. He is also concerned with the amount of time point guard Elmer Bennett has had to play thus far.

No one has emerged as the clear-cut backup to Bennett. Two candidates are freshmen Malik Russell and Lamarr Justice. Russell has seen a little time at the point, but has been inconsistent. Another drawback is that MacLeod sees him more as a forward than a guard. Justice is capable of playing either guard position, but has only played six minutes this season.

"It is very demanding to play point guard because you have to distribute the ball, read defenses and worry about the other point guard doing the same," MacLeod said. "It is a big adjustment for a player coming out of high school to make."

The reason MacLeod has had trouble finding a reserve point guard is the fact that the Irish have needed Bennett's leadership almost every minute of every game. He is hoping that his team will give him the opportunity to rest Bennett and look at the freshmen at the point tonight.

Don't bet on the Bills

As the two participants arrive in Minneapolis for Super Bowl XXVI, the line out of Las Vegas has the Washington Redskins a seven-point favorite over the Buffalo Bills in next Sunday's extravaganza.

As such, my roommate, who's from the Buffalo area, has been advising me to do as he has and "bet the house" on the Bills.

He's sure that come Sunday night, he will have made enough money to pay February's rent, plus treat his girlfriend to a night on the town—although what he'll do here in South Bend is anyone's guess.

However, I decided to compare the two teams first before I decided to make my pick on Super Bowl XXVI.

OFFENSE—These may be the two most potent offenses in the league. Buffalo's quick-strike capability means it can never be counted out of any game. The Bills have the AFC's, perhaps the NFL's, best running back in Thurman Thomas, and their passing game, led by quarterback Jim Kelly and wide receivers James Lofton and Andre Reed, is outstanding.

Washington's offense has improved this year with the maturation of Mark Rypien. Although his numbers may not overwhelm you, his 102.5 quarterback rating ranks among the league leaders. With 1,000-yard rusher Earnest Byner in the backfield and their outstanding receiving corps of Ricky Sanders, Gary Clark and Art Monk, known as "The Posse," the Redskins outscored opponents by 263 points this season.

Both teams also sport outstanding offensive lines—the Redskins' Hogs gave up a league-low nine sacks on the year. However, with Thomas in the backfield, the Bills rate a slight favorite in this area. Edge: Buffalo.

DEFENSE—Although

Buffalo's defense ranked among the worst in the NFL in yards allowed per game, it has risen to the occasion in the playoffs. The Bills held Kansas City to 213 total yards, and only allowed seven points against Denver. The two marquee names in the Buffalo defense are Bruce Smith and Cornelius Bennett, praised by Cleveland coach Bill Belichick as "two players (who) are among a select few in the league that can create havoc."

The Redskins, on the other hand, are reminiscent of Miami's "No-Name" defense of the mid-1970's. They recorded 50 sacks this season, and behind the resurgence of linebacker Wilber Marshall and end Charles Mann, were fourth in the league in total yards allowed, third in rushing yards allowed and first in points allowed. Edge: Washington.

SPECIAL TEAMS—The Bills have one of the best special teams players in the NFL in Steve Tasker. But who can forget Scott Norwood pushing that last-second field goal in last year's Super Bowl wide right?

Meanwhile, Chip Lohmiller is one of the top placekickers in the league, and Brian Mitchell returned two punts back for touchdowns this season. If Super Bowl XXVI comes down to special teams, the Redskins have the decided advantage. Edge: Washington.

COACHES—Both teams have top-notch coaches. Marv Levy has guided his team to a second straight Super Bowl, while Joe Gibbs is in his fourth NFL championship game in the last 10 years.

Karlan earns All-American honors

By JASON KELLY
Sports Writer

Janelle Karlan does not like individual awards, but after a record-setting season the sophomore setter earned second-team All-America honors for the Mideast region.

For the second straight year, the El Toro, California native posted some impressive numbers, including the new single-season assist record of 1,451, which moves her into second place in the Irish record books with 2,555 career assists. If she continues on her current pace, she will easily eclipse Taryn Collins' three-year record of 3,033.

Karlan is no stranger to those kind of numbers. In her rookie campaign, she was second on the team in digs with 226, and her 1,104 assists were the third best in Irish history. Those assist numbers included career highs of 63 against Loyola and 60 against Xavier. This season she continued her torrid pace, with 127 kills and 100 blocks to go along with the assists, but she still doesn't feel she deserves the post-season accolades.

"It's an honor, but I don't really believe in individual awards," she explained. "They (my teammates) all deserve it as much as I do, because I couldn't have done anything without them."

This season was truly a team effort, as the Irish put together their best campaign since 1987. However, Karlan's individual numbers put her not only among the best Irish players this season, but among the best of all time.

Being only a sophomore, Karlan realizes that their is still a long way to go before she can be put in that category, but she is looking forward to the challenges ahead.

"I have a lot to improve on, so I'm really looking forward to the upcoming spring season and the next couple of years," she said.

Any improvement on this season's performance would help the Irish build on the foundation they laid this season and continue their march into national prominence.

Karlan does not anticipate any changes in her game between now and next season, only continued dedication that will help her improve.

"I'm just going to keep working hard and keep doing what I've been doing," she added.

That is good news for the Notre Dame volleyball program.

Green Wave holds off Dillon A2, 49-40

By GEORGE DOHRMANN
Sports Writer

The Green Wave of Fisher held off a fourth quarter rally by the Dillon A2 squad to win 49-40 in the ACC division of men's interhall basketball Sunday night.

Fisher led comfortable the majority of the game before the Big Red turned to a pressing defense, which cut the lead to three with less than five minutes left to play. Dillon was unable to get any closer, as Fisher eventually broke the press, scoring three consecutive times in the games closing moments.

"In the end they took advantage of our press, scoring on easy layups," said Dillon captain Sean Ryan. "They also played extremely well defensively."

Paul Fulling led the Fisher attack with 11 points. Forward

Jeff Goddard scored seven for Dillon in the losing effort.

The win places Fisher atop the division with a 2-0 mark. Dillon fell to 1-2 on the season.

There are five games on tap for Tuesday night, highlighted by a meeting between unbeaten in the Big 10 division. Grace meets St. Ed's in a matchup which will be instrumental in deciding the division champion.

In last year's meeting between the two teams, Grace used a relentless press to pull out a win. St. Ed's has taken precautions so that there won't be a repeat of last year.

"We have been working on the press in practice, and we feel like we're ready," said St. Ed's captain Tim Ryan. "We just need to put it all together, and we can win."

The press is not the only weapon in the Grace arsenal.

Irish football standout Demetrius Dubose, the team's leading scorer last year, and arguably the best player in the division, will pace a high scoring offensive attack. The Grace offense has been averaging nearly 50 points a game, tops in the division.

In other Big 10 action Keenan (1-0) meets Flanner (0-2).

The only game scheduled in the ACC for tonight is a matchup between Cavanaugh and Carroll. Cavanaugh, last season's runner up, will look to the skills of guards Pete Tulchinsky and Brad Leshnock, while Carroll relies on the leadership of Pat Coleman.

In MET division Dillon A1 (0-1) meets Grace A2 (1-1), and Sorin (1-1) faces winless Alumnii.
