Saint Mary's elections head into runoff

By MARA DIVIS
News Writer

The tickets led by presidential candidates Colleen Rhattigan and Tina Carrara, will face each other in a runoff election for 1992-93 Saint Mary's student body officers on Monday, according to Lori Marucut, elections commissioner.

Because none of the candidates received the necessary 50 percent of the vote in yesterday's election, a runoff election was necessary, said Marucut.

Rhattigan's ticket, which includes Ann Grant for Vice President of Academic Affairs and Martha Marzolf for Vice President of Student Activities, received 41 percent of the vote.

Carrara's ticket, with Mary Beth Wilkinson for Vice President of Academic Affairs and Julie McCormick for Vice President of Student Activities, received 29 percent of the vote.

The ticket of Katie Damm for Student Body President, April Ehret for Vice President of Academic Affairs, and Jonna Kwiatkowski for Vice President of Student Affairs, received 28 percent of the vote.

Also undetermined are the 1992-93 officers for the senior and junior classes, said Marucut.

For the class of 1993, the ticket led by Julie Marsh took 32 percent, the ticket led by Megan Fannon received 31 percent, and the ticket led by Caroline Molnar took 28 percent.

No candidate received more than 50 percent of the vote, so Marsh and Fannon will face each other in the runoff.

The election for the class of 1994 showed the ticket led by Elizabeth Petrovic took 32 percent, Kelly Collins' ticket took 29 percent, and Diane Calta's ticket with 28 percent.

Petrovic's and Collins' tickets will also face each other in the runoff.

The election for the class of 1995, however, produced a winner in the ticket led by Megan Zimmer. Zimmer's ticket took 67 percent of the vote. The ticket led by Stephanie Rayzor received 29 percent, said Marucut.

Despite an anonymous tip that the election was fraudulent, Marucut said that the elections committee was extremely careful in tabulating the results.

"The election ran really smoothly," she said. "The poll workers are all student government members and we triple- and quadruple- checked the results."

Cultural diversity class requirement discussed

By HEATHER TREMBLAY
News Writer

The possibility of a cultural diversity requirement in the College of Arts and Letters was addressed at a forum last night.

"When asked what cultural diversity is, most people can only agree that it is good," said Jim Peterson, professor in Communication and Theatre.

The problem most felt must be addressed first was the question of what is cultural diversity. Many agreed that the range of opinion was wide.

The suggestions ranged from clear cut race, gender and class differences to differences in ideas. There was concern that cultural diversity could not be taught unless a definition was agreed upon.

Another problem that was addressed was the question of why one should study cultures. One reason given was simply to learn about another culture.

However, many felt it was very important to see oneself from the standpoint of another culture. Most people thought that one should learn about their own culture, especially that of the United States as it continually changes and diversifies.

Estevan Herrera, a senior at Notre Dame, said he believes that there is plenty of interest in "cultural" classes, having been closed out of three this year.

"The problem is that there are not enough classes," he said. That, however, raised another problem of finding enough professors who are culturally qualified to teach the classes. Many felt that the university's resources in that area are very limited.

Some students also expressed concern that, in introducing a

Physical plant director retires after 13 years

By BECKY BARNES
News Writer

Donald Dedrick, director of the physical plant of the University of Notre Dame, will retire February 29 after 13 years at the University.

Dedrick's role as physical plant director included construction of new buildings and maintenance and renovation of all University facilities.

During his tenure 18 buildings were added to the campus including The Snite Museum of Art, Stepan Chemistry Hall, Decio Faculty Hall, The Hesburgh Center for International Studies, many of the dormitories on Mod Quad and the new DeBartholo classroom facility.

Dedrick has also been in charge of additions to Rolf's Aquatic Center, the law school building, LaFortune and several others.

In addition, Dedrick has seen several renovations including those made to Sacred Heart Basilica.

Donald Dedrick

The new construction added during Dedrick's tenure totals 1.52 million square feet, and 1.45 million square feet were renovated.

Dedrick said that he works with the architects and engineers to develop a program of construction and then plans a budget, which he settles with the executive vice-president and vice-president of business affairs.

Class creates sculpture to honor Beeler and Hipp

By STEVE ZAVESTOSKI
News Writer

An art installation created by the Basic Sculpture class will honor Notre Dame swimmers Megan Beeler and Colleen Hipp, according to Greg Hendry, a member of the class.

"Frank Sipos (the class instructor) came to us with the idea," said Hendry, "and the class agreed that it was a project worth doing."

Similar to the child abuse display erected in the library concourse last fall, the art class will use the walk-through concept to display the Notre Dame community's thoughts and letters about mortality and the swim team tragedy.

"The idea is that the memorial will be a sort of reliquary," said Hendry. "Our relics, though, will be the thoughts and feelings of people about the swim team tragedy and mortality in general."

"This is not a display of talent," said Hendry, "we just wanted to make a contribution to the community—something from which people can draw strength."

To do so, the class was hoping for an outpouring of contributions from members of the Notre Dame community.

"Right now we haven't had quite the response we had hoped for," said Frank Zaffere, another class member. Nevertheless, the class plans to piece together what they can before the reliquary is constructed Saturday morning.

The installation will stand for ten days—"it is hoped that this gentle reminder of mortality and expression of various community member responses will serve to inspire thought and reflection, the greatest task of any work of art," according to the project organizers.

The project will also include a plaque with the names of all Notre Dame students who have died in the last four years.

A Notre Dame junior has contacted St. Joseph County authorities and given a statement concerning his involvement in a traffic accident which injured two Saint Mary's College sophomores earlier this week, according to Sgt. Charles Feirrell.

The driver, along with his attorney, came forward Thursday and gave traffic investigators a statement admitting that he was the driver of the car that struck the two women, said Feirrell.

Wanted: One graduation speaker

It seems that Notre Dame is having a tough time picking this year's commencement speaker.

After choosing Peter Ueberroth in 1989, Bill Cosby in 1990 and Commonweal editor Margaret O'Brien Steinfelds last year, the University has been unable to find somebody to enlighten the 1992 graduating class.

Paul Pearson
Asst. News Editor

I hope this list of possible speakers helps them out:

- Dan Quayle. I know that ND does not allow candidates to speak to the graduates, but they might want to make an exception here. After all, he needs the chance to prove that he is more than an overgrown Ken doll who, upon seeing a "help wanted" sign at a California McDonald's last month, declared that California's economy is turning itself around.

- Dan's Secret Service guard. Anyone who can hold that job for four years without losing all semblance of sanity has to know something that we should learn.

- Dr. Ruth Westheimer. I can't think of a college campus in these United States where so many graduates will need counseling before being thrown into a world with 24-hour co-ed housing and NO PARIETALS! (Besides, a woman once told me that all my alumni deal with sex in one way or another, and I'd hate to disappoint her now.)

- David Cone, pitcher for the New York Mets. Earlier this week Cone, who finished last season with a 14-14 record and a 3.29 earned-run average, won $4.25 million in arbitration for next season. Now here's a guy who knows a thing or two about making money, a goal of most of our graduates.

- Boris Yeltsin. What could help the graduates more than hearing from a straightforward, honest, get-the-tough-job-done leader? But, then again, knowing the administration and student government, that just might be too much of a shock for the typical Domer to take.

- Lee Iacocca. Seeing that many graduating seniors will have trouble finding a job, the Chrysler chairman could explain to us how he can give himself a salary seven times higher than his Japanese counterparts while his company loses millions of dollars every day. The problem is, he will be too busy blaming his problems on his Japanese counterparts instead of (gasp!) learning from them.

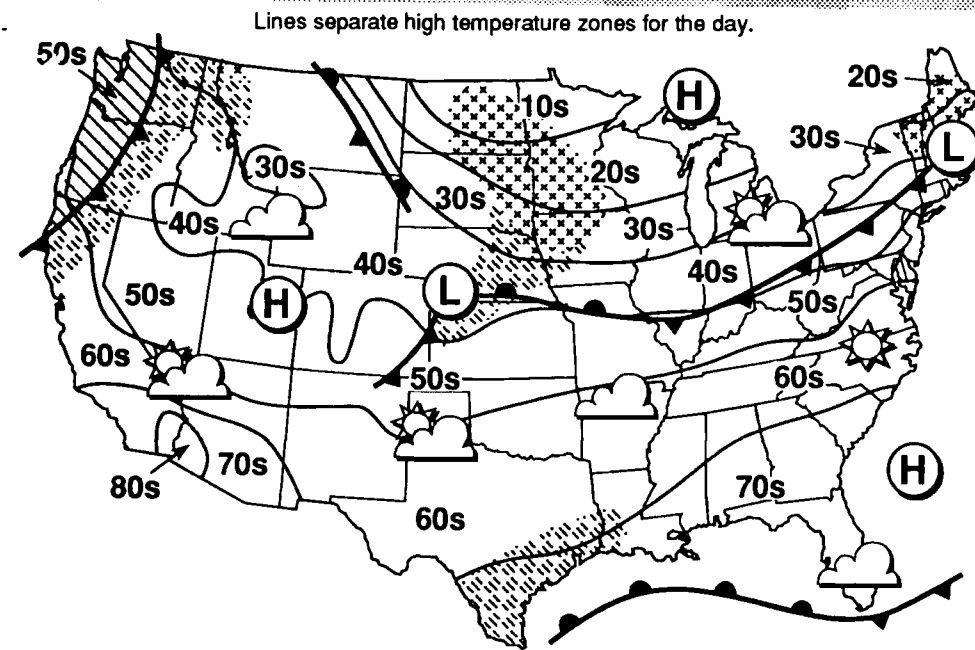

- Elvis. One report has him alive and well in Michigan, which would mean a short distance for him to travel; plus the University would not have to pay him much (just his culinary favorite, the peanut butter and 'nana sandwich).

- (I'm serious with this last one) My parents, or the parents of one of the graduating seniors. When it comes right down to it, they are the ones who always have the best advice, which is what a commencement address is supposed to be about.

It would also be a nice way for the administration to demonstrate that, despite all their episodes of closed-mindedness, insensitivity and apathy, still have their priorities straight.

The views are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

ND Student is hit by a vehicle

■NOTRE DAME, Ind.—A Morrissey Hall resident was hit by a vehicle and suffered a broken wrist last night, according to Chuck Hurley, assistant director of security. At approximately 7 p.m., the student was riding his bicycle on Bulla Road near the student parking lot. He rode into the side of a moving vehicle, according to Hurley. The only injury suffered by the student was a broken wrist. The student was transported to St. Joseph Memorial Hospital, where he was treated and released.

Navy to award Bronze Star Medals

■WASHINGTON — Navy Secretary H. Lawrence Garrett III has recommended that an estimated 4,000 Navy and Marine Corps men who fought to defend the Philippines at the outbreak of World War II be awarded the Bronze Star Medal. The move offers special recognition for those who in the two service branches were forced to take part in the infamous 70-mile Bataan Death March that claimed up to 10,000 Americans and Filipinos through starvation, thirst and maltreatment. Garrett's decision amounts to a one-time reversal of Navy policy that bars "blanket" awards of medals to entire units. The Army took a similar action in 1983 to recognize all its soldiers who participated in the campaign. The award is one of the military's highest awards for combat distinction.

Residents refuse to leave town

■CENTRALIA, Pa. — Residents who have spent their lives in this town sitting above a long-running coal-mine fire said Thursday they would stay until they die, despite an order from the state to move out within two years. State emergency officials told town leaders Wednesday that the coal-mine fire, which has been burning for 30 years, poses an "imminent danger" to the town. In letters to each of the central Pennsylvania town's 84 remaining residents, the local redevelopment authority said homes would be taken through the state's power of eminent domain if they don't accept a government buyout. Anybody who rejects the state's power will be taken to court. The coal mine fire began in 1962 and already has chased away 2,000 residents.

Graduate students to be awarded fellowships to teach frosh seminar

By COLLEEN KNIGHT
News Writer

A new program has been established in which advanced graduate students will be awarded fellowships to teach Freshman Seminar classes next year.

According to Edward Kline, director of the Freshman Writing Program, sixteen graduate students in the humanities and social sciences will be chosen for these graduate teaching fellowships. Each winner will receive a full tuition scholarship as well as an academic stipend of $8,400 for teaching two semesters.

Kline said that this fellowship program differs from the former program, in which graduate students were chosen to teach by their individual departments. In the new program, they are selected by a committee consisting of the Dean of the College of Arts and Letters and representatives from the Graduate School and the Freshman Writing Program.

Information on the new graduate teaching fellowships was sent out to all graduate students. In order to be eligible for the fellowship, Kline said that candidates must be at least in their fourth year of graduate studies. Applicants should have passed their Ph.D. candidacy examinations and currently be in the process of writing their dissertations.

Kline added that candidates must submit a course description and syllabus with their application to show the committee how they would conduct their Freshman Seminar Class. In the past, these proposals were made after the graduate students were selected; now, they will be used as criteria for selection.

According to the fellowship program application, candidates are also selected based on "overall academic performance", and "their experience or promise as a teacher."

While the program is designed to encourage graduate students to complete their dissertations, it is also geared towards the needs of freshmen. One advantage of the program, according to Kline, is that winning candidates will "most likely have had previous experience with Notre Dame undergraduates."

Kline said that while he was not dissatisfied with the teaching performance of current graduate students, the new program would raise the level and quality of instruction in the Freshman Writing Program.

"Advanced graduate students are done with coursework," he said, "so they would not neglect their freshman seminar duties."

Kline also believed that the University-wide competition for the graduate teaching fellowships would bring prestige to the winning teaching fellows, increasing their marketability for the future.

'Electronic mail' available to students

By JOSEPH RUSSO
News Writer

With the introduction of "Electronic mail" to Notre Dame, computer buffs are now able to communicate with students at universities "literally anywhere in the world," according to Joel Cooper, assistant director for networking services.

The Electronic mail system, called E-mail, is now available to Notre Dame students, faculty and staff at no cost.

"It's a campus-wide system designed to provide service for 15,000 people," Cooper said. All that is required to use the system "is a desktop computer and connection to the campus network or a modem."

Although mail systems have been available on main frame computers around campus, some people do not have the ability or desire to log-on to some other work system, Cooper said.

E-mail brings this communication potential to the keyboard of any Macintosh in any of the campus computing centers. To use E-mail, certain software, which the Office of University Computing (OUC) is providing free, is necessary.

"Electronic mail addresses have been created for every student, staff and faculty member on campus," Cooper said, "although these addresses must be activated to begin using electronic mail."

Some students have already taken advantage of E-mail by talking to friends who are studying abroad, and some are sending E-mail as far as Japan for free. On a larger scale, E-mail will make communication and computing at Notre Dame more cohesive, Cooper said, and usher the campus into the future of global electronic communication.

Self-starting guidelines for E-mail are available at the computer centers in both LaFortune and O'Shaughnessy Hall. The OUC will also provide training courses. Information is available in the Information Resource Center in Room 111 of the Computing Center/Math Building, or by calling the Resource Center at 239-8111.

Assassinations specialist discusses JFK, MLK deaths

By JENNIFER HABRYCH
Assistant Saint Mary's Editor

Jack Gordon, a 1960s assassinations specialist, discussed the conspiracy surrounding the assassinations of Martin Luther King Jr., and Robert Kennedy, and the opening of the CIA and House Select Committee on Assassinations files in a lecture last night at Saint Mary's College.

King's murder contains too many discrepancies and, while the experts say the shot was possible, but not probable according to Gordon.

"There were too many things that would have had to occur in too short a time," said Gordon.

The House Select Committee on Assassinations determined that Earl Ray killed King, and that there were conspirators, and a $50,000 bounty on King's life.

Gordon stated that more may be found if the files were opened, so that specialists could study them, and determine other possibilities to explain the assassination of King, and to determine the role the FBI could have played.

Gordon showed evidence that has determined a possible conspiracy in the murder of Robert Kennedy that was only discovered after the Los Angeles Police Department released these files concerning the assassination.

"Since the files have been opened, evidence has been trickling out," said Gordon.

Gordon believes that there will be no conclusions to the King assassination, until the files are open. "If the King files are open, several things will leak out."

Former priest Stallings to lecture

Special to The Observer

Bishop George Stallings, Jr., who was excommunicated from the Catholic Church after founding the Imani Temple African American Catholic Congregation (AACC), will lecture at the University Monday.

The lecture, "African Spirituality as a Vehicle for Liberation," begins at 7 p.m. in the auditorium of Cushing Hall.

Stallings, formerly a priest of the Catholic Archdiocese of Washington, D.C., was excommunicated from the Church two years ago after renouncing his union with his local bishop and the Pope and forming the AACC in Washington.

A subsequent Archdiocesan announcement said that Stallings' excommunication was self-inflicted and automatic.

The statement added that "his reported views on abortion and sexual morality are a tragic departure from the Church's vision of the value of human life, the dignity of the human person and our calling to live as the Lord's disciples."

Stallings, however, regards himself as a Catholic and the AACC as "a blow for religious freedom" within the Catholic Church.

"While Catholicism might be Roman," he said, "I'm proud to say ours is African-American."

He has recently established AACC congregations in Baltimore, Richmond, Philadelphia and New Orleans.

Admission is $2 for students and $3 for all others. The lecture is sponsored by the Black Cultural Arts Council.

new requirement, the University will be introducing another class to be taken just to get it out of the way. They said that students must have the choice of what classes they take.

There was the suggestion, however, of incorporating cultural diversity into the already existing requirements, such as philosophy and theology.

An argument supporting a new University requirement was that students get an opportunity to take a class they may not have been able to take otherwise. They may not have taken the course because they could not get in or they felt it was not for them. Some professors expressed that classes such as gender studies created a positive change in many students.

The general consensus at the forum was that there must be a greater effort made to incorporate cultural diversity into the University's curriculum. However, there was also agreement that, before any effective teaching of cultural diversity can be done, the elusive aspects of it, such as its definition and importance, must be pinned down.

The forum was conducted by the Collegiate Committee on Curricular Diversity.

Illinois officials choose site for third Chicago airport

CHICAGO (AP) — Illinois officials agreed Thursday on a site for a new regional airport that could bring 200,000 jobs to the city's economically depressed Southeast Side and ease traffic at O'Hare International Airport.

The agreement between Illinois Gov. Jim Edgar and Chicago Mayor Richard Daley should give the site straddling the Indiana-Illinois line near Lake Calumet the winning edge for the $10.8 billion airport.

Indiana officials prefer a site in Gary, Ind., about 10 miles away. But Edgar and Daley between them control seven of the 11 votes on a two-state commission that will recommend the final site to the U.S. Transportation Department.

"This agreement marks the start of the economic revival of Chicago, Illinois and Indiana," said Daley, an early backer of the site.

Edgar did not support it as late as Wednesday, but signed on after receiving concessions on control of a regional airport authority that will oversee O'Hare and Midway airports as well as the new one.

"Everyone recognizes the importance of a third airport," said Edgar, who announced the agreement at a news conference with Daley.

Indiana Gov. Evan Bayh issued a statement in Indianapolis expressing disappointment with Edgar's decision.

"The vote on the committee apparently will break strictly along state lines," he said.

William Moreau, Bayh's special counsel, said that while Lake Calumet also would mean economic benefits for northwest Indiana, Bayh views Gary as a better site because it would cost less to build an airport there.

"We have been expressing for many months our concerns about the technical merits of Lake Calumet, the layout, the environmental issues, and the industrial relocation issue," Moreau said.

Consultants have estimated that it would cost $3.7 billion just to remove hazardous waste from the polluted 9,800-acre Lake Calumet site.

The commission is scheduled to vote Monday. Federal officials have said they will abide by the commission's consensus on where the airport should be

University officials volunteer for police sobriety testing program

By MOLLIE MUDD
News Writer

Notre Dame Security and South Bend Police officers were trained Thursday in a sobriety testing program that relied on volunteers from Notre Dame's Student Affairs office and the Office of Alcohol and Drug Education, as well as a student volunteer and four others associated with the South Bend Police Department.

The class attempted to teach officers procedures to standardize field testing of sobriety. They were instructed in tests of eye movement and responsiveness, and balance exercises such as the one-leg stand and the walk and turn test on a white line.

The officers practiced the sobriety testing procedures on each other for two days prior to Thursday afternoon's session with the inebriated volunteers.

The volunteers consisted of seven "controlled" drinkers and one participant who had had a previous stroke that had left her "unsteady on her feet, so that she could act drunk," said Staff Sergeant Irv Sikorski of ND Security.

Three of the volunteers were members of ND administration, Jeff Shoup and Cathy Bridge, both Assistant Directors of Residence Life and Mark Pogue, coordinator of the Alcohol and Drug Education Office. There was one student volunteer, Tom Clinton, who is the student employment coordinator for Security.

"It wasn't like we were just sitting there getting everyone drunk," Sikorski said, "It was very controlled."

The volunteers' vital statistics were measured before the exercise and the amount of alcohol they were to receive was calculated using their body weight.

They were given half of their recommended amount in the first hour in a vodka mixed drink. After breaking for 20 minutes, the volunteers were given the last half of their dosage in the second hour.

Sikorski said that "we only wanted to take two people to .10 or above." The exercise and the volunteers were carefully monitored.

"Controlled" drinkers were used "because we wanted our officers to be able to spot someone who is intoxicated and for the volunteers, this is not a test you can practice for, so it is pretty true-to-life," Sikorski said.

The class was offered by the South Bend Police Regional Academy in conjunction with ND Security. Sikorski said that "we [ND Security] and the S.B.P.D. share space and training facilities a lot."

The class was offered for about 22 officers, 3 of whom were from ND security.

"All of the volunteers were great sports and every one of the officers passed the class," said Sikorski. "It was a benefit all around. The officers learned standard test and the volunteers learned their limits in a controlled setting."

Sikorski said that the class was "very positive in nature from the campus security and safety point of view, especially when these tests will be done in actuality on students."

Israeli force crosses U.N. barricade, pushes into Lebanon

TYRE, Lebanon (AP) — An Israeli tank force, backed by helicopter gunships, flattened U.N. barricades with a bulldozer Thursday and raced into two Lebanese villages to hunt down Shiite Muslim guerrillas who have been rocketing Israel.

Two Israeli soldiers and four Shiite guerrillas were killed in the thrust at the Shiite villages of Yater and Kafra, and at least 33 people were injured.

U.N. peacekeepers tried to block the Israeli advance, and fistfights broke out before the Israeli soldiers plowed through and seized Yater and Kafra. They withdrew from some positions later in the day, and Israel said it had no plans to make an extended invasion.

Hundreds of Shiite militiamen from Iran-allied Hezbollah and its one-time Shiite rival, Amal, jammed Lebanon's coastal highway headed south toward the battlefield, their vehicles bristling with AK-47 assault rifles. Some wore red-and-green headbands inscribed with the battle cry of "Allahu Akbar," God is Great.

Others, mainly civilians, packed belongings and fled north. At least 10,000 Lebanese villagers have fled since the fighting began.

Israel said it sent in the 36 tanks and three armored personnel carriers to "locate Katyusha launchers and terrorist nests" following three days of rocket attacks on Israel by Hezbollah militia. Israeli gunners fired hundreds of 155mm howitzer rounds on valleys around Kafra and nearby Tibnin, apparently to block guerrilla movements. U.N. spokesman Timur Goksel said peacekeeping positions manned by Finnish and Nepalese U.N. soldiers took direct hits from Israeli shells.

Hezbollah claimed in a communique issued in Beirut that its fighters captured an armored personnel carrier and brought it from Yater to neighboring Saddiqin with two dead Israeli soldiers still inside. The communique gave no details and could not be independently verified.

Hezbollah attacked a U.N. position in Saddiqin but was driven off by peacekeepers.

"I'm very afraid," one peacekeeper, a Fijian, told an AP reporter from behind a sand-bagged position in Saddiqin. "I want to go home. Too much boom-boom here. No good, no good."

An unconfirmed Amal report said its militiamen in Kafra destroyed an Israeli Merkava tank with an armor-piercing rocket.

By Thursday evening, the Israelis had withdrawn partially from Yater but still held the southern edge of the village. They also held Kafra and a hill overlooking the entire terrain.

Yater and Kafra face the narrowest strip in Israel's self-proclaimed security zone, from which most of the 126 rockets were fired since Monday were launched.

The latest round of fighting followed the killings of three Israeli soldiers at an Israeli army camp on Saturday and the assassination of Hezbollah leader Sheik Abbas Musawi in south Lebanon on Sunday.

The Israeli task force raced out of the security zone at 7 a.m. Thursday from the village of Beit Leif. It rolled without resistance through the Shiite village of Srobbine and headed toward Yater and Kafra.

Goksel said the Nepalese garrison at Yater, buttressed by Finnish and Irish reinforcements from the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon, blocked the road with armored vehicles to halt the advance.

Dedrick

"We start with a blank piece of paper and develop a program ... and that program develops into mortar and bricks," he said.

Dedrick has won several awards for his work at Notre Dame including a presidential citation from Father Hesburgh in 1983 and a certificate of appreciation from the Association of Physical Plant Administrators of Universities and Colleges in 1987.

He said that he is most proud of the award from Father Hesburgh.

Dedrick said that he decided to retire now because he had reached social security age so it "seemed like a good time for a change."

He plans to travel with his wife, spend more time with his grandchildren, and "be able to do some things we haven't had a chance to do over the past 40 years."

He looks forward to his retirement, but he said, "It has been a rare privilege in my life to have had the opportunity to be a member of the University of Notre Dame staff and to work with members of the Notre Dame community."

Prior to his position at Notre Dame, Dedrick held the position of business manager and physical plant director at American University in Washington, D.C. Dedrick also received his undergraduate degree at American.

According to Roger Mullins, director of human resources, the University is searching for a replacement for Dedrick.

St. Joseph County Traffic Division investigators met with the student and examined the car he was driving, he said. The student was not the owner of the car, but had borrowed it from a roommate.

As reported earlier, the car was damaged near the right front fender and was missing the right side-view mirror.

"He said he decided to come forward after reading and hearing about this incident in the media," said Feirrell. "He has been very cooperative with investigators."

"No one who wants to express their thoughts will be rejected," said Hendry.

According to the class, essays, stories, poetry and illustrations will all be accepted.

Panel recommends restricting silicone breast implants

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — A panel of experts unanimously recommended Thursday severely restricting silicone gel implants for breast enlargement but allowing easy access for women needing reconstructive surgery.

Minutes later, an officer of Dow Corning, which developed the implants, said it may stop making them.

If the Food and Drug Administration follows its panel's advice, implants would be allowed only for women who have lost a breast to cancer or have a breast deformity — or for women in tightly controlled clinical trials.

Women wanting breast enlargements represent 80 percent of the one million who now carry implants in their bodies. The rest have implants because their breasts had been deformed or were removed because of cancer.

Asked if the company was getting ready to sell its implant business, Robert Rylee, chairman of Dow Corning's health care businesses, said:

"That may be an appropriate thing for us to do." The decision, he said, will be made "fairly soon."

Nancy Dubler, a lawyer and one of nine voting members of the 24-person panel, said the recommendation of restrictions "responds to science on the one hand and compassion on the other."

Initially, five of the nine voted for the proposed restriction. The other four did not vote. But the committee then discovered that six votes were needed for passage.

The issue was reopened and, after several minutes of discussion, another vote was taken. That tally: 9-0.

An earlier vote rejecting an outright ban was also unanimous.

The panel recommended that more studies be done on the implants and on the possible effects of the silicone gel on living tissue.

While the recommendations are not binding on the FDA, the agency usually follows the recommendations of such committees. The FDA plans to issue its final decision within 60 days.

Dr. Jules Harris, a voting member, said the evidence he has seen this week did not "provide the basis to conclude that silicone gel breast implants are safe and effective."

"I do not find this evidence convincing but it is disturbing," Harris said.

Through their questions and statements over the course of the hearings, the members indicated more sympathy for women needing breast reconstruction than for those who just wanted bigger breasts.

But Dr. Mary McGrath, a non-voting member and a professor of plastic surgery at George Washington University, complained that drawing that kind of distinction was "judgmental and paternalistic."

However, Rita Freedman, a voting member, said women should not jeopardize their health for vanity.

"A woman without breasts is a total woman just as a man who has gone bald and is without hair is a total man," Freedman said.

Earlier, the group's chairman said members did not have the evidence to conclude that leaks from the implants are linked to health problems such as cancer and autoimmune disease.

"We have a possible association, and we need more research," said Dr. Elizabeth Connell, the chairman and a medical school professor.

The panel also:

—Decided the implants should not be relied upon for a lifetime and said women who have them, especially young women, should be prepared for the possibility that the devices may have to be replaced.

The committee did not come up with an expectable lifetime for the implants but urged women to consult their physicians.

—Recommended that implant patients with no symptoms of problems not begin having routine mammograms before they normally would, often around the age of 35. The committee said the dangers from repeated radiation outweighed the known risks of the implants.

—Urged that women having mammograms seek out centers where radiologists are trained to do the procedure on patients with implants.

Most of the committee members are doctors, who have complained through the three days of meetings that most of the material presented to them has been anecdotal rather than scientific.

When they weren't blinking into the bright lights of television cameras, the experts were sitting in the dark, looking at slides. Some were gruesome, showing misshapen breasts, hands and feet mangled by arthritis-like symptoms, and silicone oozing from surgical incisions or open sores.

Doctors treating patients shown on the slides told the panel that they suspected the implants as the cause of the trouble and that, in some cases, when the devices were removed the problems either went away or stabilized.

But the committee also heard the four makers of the devices say their studies did not definitively deal with such questions.

The debate has been a public relations nightmare for the four U.S. manufacturers, especially Dow Corning.

Pentagon defends budget planning studies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The vice chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff acknowledged Thursday that the Pentagon has used hypothetical studies about an East-West war in Europe and other potential conflicts for budget-planning.

Adm. David Jeremiah told the Senate Armed Services Committee that the illustrative scenarios were not factored into the fiscal 1993 budget now before Congress, but are intended for budgets from 1994 to 1999.

Jeremiah said the classified study, involving seven crisis "scenarios," including a massive NATO vs. Russia conflict, did not represent actual battle preparedness schemes. But he said they were drawn up to enable the military services to answer the question, "Are you prepared to deal with a contingency like this and what are the shortfalls?"

The vice chairman, testifying at his renomination hearing, said the Pentagon draws up some 70 contingencies and "boiled them down to a few that we thought were most typical."

Jeremiah was asked specifically about a scenario in which the United States spearheads a NATO counterattack of 24 divisions, 70 fighter squadrons and six aircraft carrier battle groups should Russia launch an invasion of Lithuania and Poland.

The classified scenarios were reported in The New York Times and The Washington Post.

"This is not the policy of the U.S. government necessarily in any of this," Jeremiah said. "We're trying to understand what our capability would be in the event that a different regime came in behind the current Democratic regime and chose to take certain actions."

The newspapers described the six other potential crisis and how the United States would respond if: Iraq invades Kuwait and Saudi Arabia; North Korea attacks the South; Iraq and North Korea invade their southern neighbors at the same time; a coup by right-wing police and "narco-terrorists" occurs in Panama; U.S. citizens are taken hostage following a coup attempt in the Philippines; a hostile superpower re-emerges, such as Russia with or without other former Soviet republics.

Members of the Senate Armed Services Committee questioned the scenarios.

"I think they're incredibly unlikely scenarios," said Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich.

Sen. John Warner of Virginia, ranking Republican on the panel, said that "Some of those scenarios would provoke debate of intense magnitude," if the administration ever submitted them to Congress.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the panel, bristled when Jeremiah told the committee that although the classified study had been leaked to two news organizations, the report could not be given to the committee.

"This is a planning document internal to the department of Defense and it is not intended to be a public document or one we would distribute," Jeremiah said.

Nunn said it was absurd to have the Armed Services

Committee debate the defense budget and not have access to the study.

"It's not a matter of us requesting it. We're really in a position of demanding it. We've got to have that," the chairman said, telling Jeremiah to pass his message along to Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and Joint Chiefs of Staff chairman Colin Powell.

"This committee is simply not going to operate on the basis that we're not entitled to that information — period," Nunn added.

At the Pentagon, spokesman Bob Hall said the scenarios "do not represent war plans. They do not represent predictions. ... They're just basically analytical tools" to help budget planners determine manpower and supply needs.

"You use the scenarios as something to bounce numbers off of. You can't develop these numbers or these decisions in the abstract. Somebody's got to sort of say, 'what if,'" he said.

At the same time, Hall acknowledged that the possibility of a massive land war in Europe

De Klerk takes gamble on South African referendum

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Through two years of lightning reform, President F.W. de Klerk has been far ahead of most white South Africans — perhaps too far ahead.

Now he is taking another huge gamble by holding a referendum to let whites decide whether to accept reforms abolishing apartheid or opt for the right-wing Conservative Party.

The government faces a major battle if it is to win.

De Klerk is taking an enormous political risk that could spell the death of his government, plunge the country into chaos and end the drive to build a multi-racial democracy.

Much will depend on how correctly de Klerk has gauged the white electorate's mood. He announced the vote Thursday after his ruling National Party was trounced by the Conservatives in a by-election.

The by-election result underlines how de Klerk has moved far too quickly for many whites, who had no idea what was coming when he took power in 1989.

Whites frightened by de Klerk's reforms have been deserting to the Conservatives in droves and the referendum result is likely to be close.

"The white electorate now knows which party speaks for the majority," said Prof. Willem Kleynhans, a retired analyst from the University of South Africa, who predicted a Conservative win in the referendum.

If defeated, de Klerk said he would resign, clearing the way for a whites-only election. A victorious Conservative Party would try to turn back the clock and reimpose some form of apartheid.

Many black groups would fight to stop such a move.

De Klerk is gambling he can defeat the right-wing in one move and remove them from the mainstream by exploding their claim they have the support of most whites.

Report: U.S. pilot killed by Soviets in Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. State Department is looking into a report that a U.S. prisoner of war shot down over Vietnam was killed by Soviet troops worried about being discovered in the country.

Spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said U.S. officials had no independent confirmation of the report by two U.S. senators who returned this week from meetings with Russian military and KGB officials in Moscow.

Ms. Tutwiler said the Russian government has been "very cooperative with the American government on tracking down these allegations and making their files and information available to us."

She noted that Secretary of State James Baker III had taken up the issue of Vietnam War prisoners with Russian President Boris Yeltsin and Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev.

Sens. John Kerry, D-Mass., and Bob Smith, R-N.H., said at a news conference Wednesday that Russian officials had agreed to hold a joint hearing by Russian and U.S. lawmakers on the issue later this year.

Kerry said the Russians were very cooperative in bringing forward Soviet military officials and soldiers who had served in Vietnam.

Kerry told of the son of a Soviet veteran who said his late father was in a Soviet camp in Vietnam when an American pilot crashed into the camp and was killed because the Soviets didn't want it known that they were there. The pilot was not identified.

An unknown number of Soviet advisers were in Vietnam during the war, and the Vietnamese have acknowledged that Soviet authorities questioned a handful of captured U.S. servicemen.

Iceberg Debates committee has overcome big obstacles

Dear Editor:

I am writing in response to the article on the Iceberg Debates (The Observer, Feb. 18). The article mentioned the confusion which seems to have plagued this year's tournament and then quoted certain competitors' opinions on this topic. I think it only fair to say that in my opinion Ana Garcia and her committee have done an excellent job running the tournament this year.

Rich Delevan argued that the Iceberg's were tainted as a tradition because of what has happened. One must understand that it is not this year's committee who has tainted the tournament's reputation, rather for the past three years the previous committees have not thanked nor properly informed faculty members of their assignments.

As a result, the faculty have become tired of helping and receiving no thanks in return. This is a situation Ana inherited and has done a tremendous job overcoming. Granted, every round has not been perfect but most have and this year's committee has been diligent in their attempts to make sure any complaints were handled properly and all judges were treated with respect and gratitude.

Given the obstacles accrued over a period of three years, I think that the committee should not be criticized but praised for a job well done.

ND Architecture not broad enough

Dear Editor:

Imagine this: Philosophy majors, beginning in the fall of 1992 your department will begin a radical educational experience. Students will exclusively study the teachings of the existentialists.

Imagine the faculty realizes the importance of other traditions of philosophy, but the school's focus will be primarily on existentialism.

Imagine that even if students wish to read other texts, they are encouraged to do so on their own time or transfer to another school. The Philosophy department wants to make a reputation for Notre Dame as the best school of existentialist thought in the country.

What?! This scenario (for the philosophy department at least) is hypothetical. Students come to this University (and pay big bucks) to receive a broad education of all traditions within our chosen major.

Philosophy students read Aquinas, Descartes, and Plato. Economics majors study Marxism and Capitalism. Architecture students are taught Classicism and . . . well, one class is offered on Frank Lloyd Wright.

Yet, somehow this strange scenario is exactly what has happened in the School of Architecture. Students are taught the Classical language of building exclusively for the first three years of their education. Almost the entire freshman year has been dedicated to the doric order alone.

This idea is radical and is making a reputation for the School of Architecture at Notre Dame, but what about the University's responsibility to the students? What about the exploration of all traditions of architectural expressions? What about that broad base of knowledge we hope to take with us to the work force or graduate school?

The broad based undergraduate education we came here for has been denied. Does the University want to have the reputation of having only Classical architects (or existentialist philosophers or Marxist economists) or the reputation of creating open minds that can rationally discuss and interpret architecture as a whole?

We would like to think the latter but somehow this basic educational ideal was lost for the School of Architecture.

We understand that Classicism is a base from which other traditions evolved. We realize that Classicism has a system of proportion, planning, and grace that could be applied to other styles.

We know that our education does not end upon graduation and will continue for the rest of our lives. What we do not understand is the almost exclusive focus on Classicism that allows little exploration of other styles such as Modernism, International, Expressionism, Postmodernism, Gothic, Santa Fe, Deconstructivism, Regionalism, etc.

It is the University's responsibility to open our minds to the expression of all of these equally important design theories, not to define the one that they expect us to study and practice.

A Bachelor of Architecture from the University of Notre Dame will soon represent the best possible education in Classical Architecture in the United States. Hopefully it will not also be a tag that says this person has developed no faculties to design or understand anything else.

Featured in this month's issue of Common Sense is an investigation of this problem written by concerned students. Please take a moment to read the article. Maybe someday you will be faced with the same situation within your own department.

The Sophomore Literary Festival is celebrating its 25th anniversary of presenting a host of literary greats to the Notre Dame family. Beginning in 1967 the festival has evolved into the week long festival that it is today.

It all began when J. Richard Rosse attended the William Faulkner Symposium held by the University of Mississippi in the summer of 1965.

That experience combined with his love of literature lead him to think Notre Dame could use a similar annual event, he said.

Originally the Festival was to be a two week event. The first week focused on the life and works of an established deceased author. The second week was to be similar to today's SLF, with current writers giving readings and participating in workshops with students.

'Clifton is a three-time nominee for the Pulitzer Prize in poetry. She received the Coretta Scott King Award in 1984. Clifton has written poems dealing with birth and death, sexuality and spirituality, and the non-white experience.'

The Sophomore Literary Festival, featuring readings by six talented writers, will kick off Sunday, Feb. 23, and will run nightly until Friday, Feb. 28.

The sessions will be held at 8 p.m. in the Hesburgh Library auditorium, and the following day the author will host an informal session in the library lounge.

This will provide a good opportunity to get to know the authors and discover what his or her views are on a personal basis. Festival Chairwoman, Betsy Harkins, said, "The authors, who are also professors, are very personable and encourage interaction."

The first presentation of this year's festival will be on Sunday by author Lucille Clifton. Clifton is a three-time nominee for the Pulitzer Prize in poetry. She received the Coretta Scott King Award in 1984.

Writers alive at Festival

Tradition continues

Over the second week possible in the first year of the festival because of lack of funding. At first, funding was a problem that kept the festival from being a reality.

A freshman in 1965, Rossie tried to get money from the government, but was told he didn't want anything to do with it. "It really made me angry," said Rossie.

Rossie turned to his friends in the student body. "My second semester election was elected as the president of the sophomore class and the sophomore class took on a lot of financial responsibility for the festival," he said.

Rossie was elected to the student senate and pushed for a resolution from the student body. "It was a very glitzy, Hollywood type of event," said Rossie.

The film "Beyond the Law", written by Norman Mailer, was premiered at Notre Dame in Stephan Center and many of the actors and actresses in the film were on hand.

The first Festival focused on the life and works of Faulkner, including films made from his books and screenplays written by Faulkner in the 30's and a photo exhibition of the author by Mark Dain.

The next year, under the direction of sophomore John Mroz the format was changed from being focused on a central topic, to bringing in a number of authors to discuss their own work with students.

This format has brought a number of distinguished authors to Notre Dame. In 1968 alone Norman Mailer and Kurt Vonnegut were on campus along with William F. Buckley Jr., Grandville Hicks Bruce, Ralph Ellison, Joseph Heller, Wright Morris and Isaac Bashevis Singer. The success of the festival led Mroz to predict that the festival would become an annual event at Notre Dame.

"It was a very glitzy, Hollywood type of event," said Rossie. The film "Beyond the Law", written by Norman Mailer, was premiered at Notre Dame in Stephan Center and many of the actors and actresses in the film were on hand.

Current committee chairman of the Festival, Betsy Harkins explains that, "in those days speaker fees were very low and authors could be talked into coming for not much more than the cost of expenses." Now she laments agents "try to get as much money as they can and the Festival is underfunded besides."

Nevertheless the SLF has a distinguished list of speakers over the years including Allen Ginsberg, Ken Kesey, W.P. Sontag, Joyce Carol Oates, Susan Williams.

Harkins says that the best part of the SLF is the chance to meet and talk to authors. "They are celebrities, but yet their just like real people because there so approachable." This year's celebrity authors are Harold Brodkey, Lucille Clifton, Allison Lurie, Toby Olson, Linda Pastan and C.K. Williams.

Harkins says that the best part of the SLF is the chance to meet and talk to authors. "They are celebrities, but yet their just like real people because there so approachable."

Features literary talent

Current Poet Laureate of Indiana, Linda Pastan, will speak on Monday. Pastan has published seven volumes of poetry, the most recent being "Heroes in the Sand" (1991). Her poems have appeared in national magazines like Harper's, The Atlantic, The New Yorker, and The Public.

Her speaker is poet, C.K. Williams. He was the 1988 winner of the National Book Critics Circle Award for "Flesh and Blood," a collection. The American Academy of Arts and Letters named him with the Morton Dauvoz Zabel prize in 1989.

Williams is a diverse writer, whose translated works by Sophocles, Issa, and Euripides and serving as script consultant for two films by David Lynch. He resides in Paris, but teaches a part of each semester at George Mason University in Virginia.

Harold Brodkey is Wednesday's featured author. He received the O. Henry short story award in 1975 and 1976. Brodkey has produced various works, including poems, short stories, novels, and essays. He has been published in The New Yorker and Esquire, and other magazines.

Brodkey was raised in Illinois and draws on his life experiences for creations on childhood, college, marriage, and parenthood. He is known for his insights on themes such as loss of innocence and the struggle for a return to grace. His works include "First Love and Other Sorrows," "Women and Angels," and his most recent pieces, "Stories in an Almost Classical Mode" and "The Runaway Soul."

On Thursday, Allison Lurie will speak about the eight novels she has written. She won the Pulitzer Prize for fiction in 1984 for "Foreign Affairs." Lurie is a professor of English at Cornell University. Her works tend to satirize the wealthy and educated classes in America.

Lurie's two latest novels are "Don't Tell the Grownups: Subversive Children's Literature" and "The Truth about Lorin James."

To complete the festival, Toby Olson will speak on Friday. The Chicago Tribune Book World described his work as "resembling D.H. Lawrence's fiction."

Olson has published sixteen books of poetry and six novels. His latest is "The Pool." Olson is a professor of English at Temple University.

In the twenty five years since this event was established writers such as Arthur Miller, Tennessee Williams, Gwendolyn Brooks, and Ken Kesey have spoken. The outstanding tradition of excellence at the Sophomore Literary Festival continues.

Jesse Jackson as a prophet for all seasons

I've just finished reading the three-part profile of Jesse Jackson, which appeared during February in The New Yorker. He looks to me like a Joshua-in-waiting, who should be asked to build us bridges over troubled waters.

The New Yorker pieces don't canonize Jackson; in an even-handed way, they picture him warts and all. He comes off as an all-American original, like Huck Finn and Captain Ahab. Being self-made, he's a product of the American Dream, which eventually trips him up; as a black, he's frustrated, like the "invisible man" in Ralph Ellison's novel.

Like Robert Penn Warren's Willy Stark, he speaks in tongues; hearing him, the naked and the dead remember what it means to be alive. As a hero, he's not the fisher-king out of Hemingway who survives alone on grace under pressure, or an old man of the sea, Christlike with endurance in his hour of trial.

"I was born out of wedlock to a teen-age mother, who was born to a teen-age mother." When Jesse wants to get into the Copperfield kind of crap, as he often does when he's talking to high school assemblies in the inner cities, he cuts their resistance to him off at the knee. "Reverend Jackson, you just don't understand what it's like. I do understand," he insists. "When I was in my mother's belly, no father to give me a last name, they called me a bastard and rejected me."

The truth is that "in his perpetuation of King's vision in the national life, in his ascent to become an almost totemic folk figure for America's black community, Jackson has proved to be probably King's single notable legatee."

Father Robert Griffin

Letters to a Lonely God

From the first, King was Jackson's spiritual father. King had adopted Gandhi's concept of the "truth force" exerted by the non-violent resistance of a subjugated people. In addition to liberating blacks, King hoped that the civil rights movement could "redeem the soul of America. It may be that through the American Negro the unadulterated message of nonviolence will be delivered to the world."

King, toward the end of his life, began perhaps to realize that his great dream was beginning to falter. This, he declared, was because America's disorder was inseparable from "an international emergency which involves the poor, the dispossessed, the exploited of the whole world."

At a time when King was becoming noteworthy as the American Gandhi, Jackson regarded King with an almost desperate adoration and awe. Asked whether he considered himself in the line of succession from Gandhi and King, Jackson replied solemnly: "It's what I aspire to." He explained: "What I am doing is carrying the moral vision of the civil-rights movement into the context of conventional politics." But how Jackson differed from King was in seeking to become a part of the processes of power in order to realize that moral vision.

Last September, as he was considering whether to run for the Presidency a third time, Jackson suddenly professed his misgivings about his venture to transfer the movement's moral vision into a competition for the Presidency.

"It's been dealing with the Devil," Jackson said... "the Way I feel now is like what Martin said the night before he died- I just wanna do God's will. I don't want to live to do the will of the Democratic party. Just wanna do God's will." He never sounded more King-like than when he said: "When the curtain finally falls on me, all I want is for history to say, 'He was part of the conscience of his time.' I'll rest then."

After a speech to the Democrats in San Francisco in 1988, a note was delivered to Jackson in his hotel room from Andrew Young, then mayor of Atlanta. "You make me feel proud and humble when I hear you speak. Martin would be proud, too. You have my full endorsement as the moral voice of our time."

You may think that I'm nominating Jesse Jackson as the next Black Christ, since he was an understudy to King as the original; however, I'm not so political. I'd be happy to see you try Jesse on for size as a prophet. The New Yorker profile reminded me of how weary all of us have become of the wimps in high places, elected as the lesser of two evils. Even as an uncrowned King, Jesse looks more promising than any of the politicians who lack a vision.

The crowds who hear Jesse on the hustings love him because he leaves them with the truths you know he must live by. "When somebody's sick, the only moral question is not 'Where is your money?' but 'Where is your pain?'"

Ask to talk about his grandmother's quilt, he says: One winter night when I was a little boy, living in this humble little house without any heat, we couldn't afford a blanket. So my grandmother had to make us a quilt, or else we'd have froze. All we had, though, was pieces of old cloth. My grandmother gathered all those patches and pieces, and when she finished sewing them together, it made a big quilt that covered us and kept us warm. And that's like America. It's not a blanket made out of just one cloth. It's a great quilt made of many patches..."

"God hasn't finished with me yet," he told the Democratic convention. "The proper question is not who we are, but Whose we are." Once we know Whose we are of course, the larger the stage is on which we work."

Recollecting the circumstances of his own birth, he may suddenly remark in mock crudity: "A teenage mother? Havin' a baby? No husband? No job? And you mean you want to go ahead and have that baby? Even raise it? Why, that's just not realistic. It's naive. What kind of life can that baby ever expect to have."

He will say: "The problem now is we got this turmoil of extremes. One group saying, 'I love children so much, if we can't provide for them or they're unwanted, don't let 'em come into the world.' The other group saying, 'I love babies so much, they must come into the world even if they have to starve.' All of 'em using the language of love."

To the Democratic party telling him, "You have such a great gift." Jesse said: -I told them, Well, why don't you use that gift?"

Don't you think that Jesse Jackson could be the greatest natural force in politics since Bobby Kennedy? Why, then, do you suppose the Democrats don't offer his candidacy for high office as a gift to the nation?"

Correction

• A graphic appearing in the Accent section on Wednesday, Feb. 19, incorrectly attributed the assassination of John F. Kennedy to Professor James Ward. The theory is one of several proposed sequences of events, but is not the theory supported by Ward.

• A book review of "Statecraft and Stagecraft: American Political Life in the Age of Personality" by Professor Robert Schmuhl that appeared in the Accent section on Thursday, Feb. 13, omitted the fact that Notre Dame Press published the book.

The Observer regrets the errors.

Icers play two with UIC

By ANTHONY KING
Associate Sports Editor

The Notre Dame hockey team will meet the Flames of Illinois-Chicago this weekend for a home-and-home series.

The Friday night match-up in Chicago will mark the first time this season this season that the Irish will appear on television. The game will be covered on SportsChannel Chicago on a taped-delay telecast at 11:00 p.m.

"It's been a long time since we've been on television," commented Irish coach Ric Schafer. "I hope we're up to it, but either way it will be good for us."

CCHA member Illinois-Chicago enters the contest with an 8-14-6 record, with only one win in their last nine games. These stats are quite deceiving, however, when examining the opponents the Flames have encountered.

UIC has met up with powers such as third-ranked Michigan State, fourth-ranked Michigan, sixth-ranked Lake Superior State, and twelfth-ranked Western Michigan. The Flames have beaten all of these teams at least once this season, and are coming off two come from behind overtime ties at Western Michigan.

"They (UIC) are a very good hockey team," complimented Schafer. "They have had some big upsets over Michigan and Michigan State."

Leading UIC is a group of talented freshman that already have made quite an impact against Flame opponents.

ND Track teams head to Purdue

By JENNIFER MARTEN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame track teams will travel to Purdue University this weekend for the Indiana Intercollegiate meet. The meet will be a stepping stone for the Alex Wilson Invitational next weekend.

"For some it will be an opportunity to get an IC4A qualifying time or to run in different events. It is preparation for the Alex Wilson meet," said Notre Dame track coach Joe Piane. "You have to be looking down the road to where you are going to be in two weeks."

The Irish will face teams from all over the state including Indiana University, Purdue, Indiana State, Ball State, Butler, and other Division II and Division III teams. There could be as many as 25 teams participating in the meet.

Several men's runners will remain behind to rest and to continue preparation for the IC4A meet.

Only 15 women's runners will travel to the Invitational. The women's team will be more in the middle of the pack in terms of the competition.

"They (the women's team) are making unbelievable improvements, but it will take time," said Piane of the team's ability to compete with the big guns at the meet.

The last time the Irish competed in the event was in 1990 when Notre Dame's men's team finished fifth behind Purdue, Indiana, Indiana State, and Ball State.

Freshman center Chris MacDonald has racked up 27 points, while freshman right wing Mark Zdan has notched 14 goals and 26 points. Senior left wing Rick Judson completes the line with a team leading 33 points.

Between the pipes for the Flames is freshman Jon Hillebrandt, who maintains an .883 save percentage and a 3.97 goals against average.

The Irish are still looking to break the current 18 game slide against CCHA opponents. Notre Dame is 0-6 for the year against the CCHA, and has been outscored 38-20.

Last weekend the Irish did manage to beat future CCHA member Kent State. Friday's game saw Notre Dame improve to 2-0 in overtime, as defenseman Matt Osiecki lit the lamp with 55 seconds left in overtime to gain the victory, 6-5.

The second contest highlighted Golden Flash goalie Paul Dixon, who stopped all but one of the Irish's 41 shots. The lone score came in the second period off the stick of Mike Curry. Kent State put in three goals and held on for a 3-1 win.

The Notre Dame power play again floundered last weekend. The power play had been up to a .283 conversion percentage, ranking the Irish fourth in the nation. Last weekend's 0 for 11 drought against the Golden Flash, however, dropped Notre Dame down to .261.

The Irish will return to the Joyce Fieldhouse for Saturday night's game, with face off slated for 7:30.

Purdue steams Wildcats

EVANSTON, Ill. — Gene Keady pretty well stuck with his seven-man rotation and his Purdue Boilermakers on Thursday night responded with an 84-68 Big Ten victory over the Northwestern Wildcats.

Craig Riley, the 6-9, 255-pound hulk at center, scored a season-high 21 points, Woody Austin came through with his usual 21 points and freshman Cuonzo Martin, getting a rare start, had a career-high 14 points.

"His only other two starts were at North Carolina and at Indiana," said Keady of Martin. "Those are not easy places to start."

Keady said "We tried to keep the tempo up, we wanted to fast break every chance we had. We've been struggling with our confidence and this was a great win for us."

It was also easy for the Boilermakers (13-11, 5-7) as they snapped a three-game losing streak in handing Northwestern (8-14, 1-11) its fourth straight defeat.

Riley started the scoring in each half as the Boilermakers coasted most of the way.

"We wanted to establish the inside game and we wanted to shoot more free throws," said Austin, who did his part by hitting 12-of-14 from the free throw lane as Purdue hit on 29 of 41 free throws.

Kevin Rankin led Northwestern with 19 points. Charles Howell finished with 15 and Cedric Neloms had 13.

The Boilermakers opened a 5-0 lead and never led by less. It was 12-4 when Howell converted a 3-point play but Purdue soon upped it to 18-9. Howell hit successive baskets but a 7-2 run upped the lead to 25-15.

A 13-7 run led by Riley made it 38-22 before Kip Kirkpatrick hit a 3-pointer to cut it to 38-25 at the half.

Riley opened the second half with a 3-point play and with balanced scoring the Boilermakers opened 51-32 in, not having a lot of experience and just having missed a front end before, I'm just very happy with her."

After Patrice Martin threw up a wild three-pointer at the other end, Notre Dame was able to run 16 seconds off before Kristin Knapp buried two foul shots with eight seconds left to seal the victory.

"Near the end, we needed to take care of the ball better than we did," said Orlosky. "But our big people did a good job of rebounding (Notre Dame out-rebounded Detroit 48-34) and getting the ball when we needed it at critical times."

"We just didn't do the job inside," said Titans' coach Fred Procter. "Defensively, I thought we did a decent job, but our interior defense broke down."

"Offensively, we didn't have enough ball movement, and that just shut down our offense. You can't beat anybody scoring just 58 points."

Now, the Irish must ready themselves for Saturday's 7:30 p.m. contest against Butler in the final home appearance for seniors Margaret Nowlin and Comalita Haysbert.

The Bulldogs, who crushed Notre Dame 77-63 one month ago down in Indianapolis, are led by junior Julie Von Dielingen (14.8 ppg, 6.9 rpg),

SMC hoops face Hornets

By EILEEN MCGUIRE Sports Writer

After the disappointing loss to Olivet College that broke their five game winning streak, the Saint Mary's basketball team will travel to Kalamazoo, Michigan tonight to face the Hornets.

Thursday's practice for the Belles consisted of an overview of the basic fundamentals. The Belles only hit only 9-of-14 free throws against Olivet as they only lost by eleven.

"It makes a difference," stated assistant coach Jo-Ann Nester. "But we were extremely intense yesterday and intense today. We're ready to rebound from the loss."

Tonight is the second game the Belles will be without one of their top players, senior forward Janet Libbing, who is out with a knee injury. She has contributed 235 points to the team, second only to senior forward Catherine Restovich, who has come through with 254 points. Nevertheless, the Belles are beginning to compensate for the loss.

"Janet's got a positive attitude, and it's tough not to have her out there, but the rest of the players are rallying to replace her," stated Nester.

Saint Mary's owns many key players necessary to win the contest against the Hornets. The team will look to junior centers Julie Snyder and Kim Holmes in leading them to their second straight win over the Hornets.

However, the Belles will have to look out for Kalamazoo's key players as well. The Hornets have five key returnees, including senior forward Dawn Fekete (10.4 ppg) and junior guard Lisa Vedmore (13.7).

"We've improved, they've improved; we can't take anything for granted," stated coach Cromer. "But after any loss, you're going to have some effect, yet we're confident enough to begin a new streak."

Cop catches Tyson in fast lane

WILLOUGHBY HILLS, OH (AP) — Boxer Mike Tyson, who faces sentencing next month on a rape conviction, was given a speeding ticket Tuesday night, police said.

Tyson, 25, was stopped by police in this Cleveland suburb for allegedly traveling 73 mph in a 55-mph zone on Interstate 90, said police Lt. David Paterson. Tyson was driving a red 1991 BMW, police said.

The arresting officer described Tyson as polite and courteous, Paterson said.

Paterson said Tyson had an Ohio driver's license showing his residence to be in Windsor Township in Ashtabula County. Tyson is scheduled to appear in Willoughby Hills Mayor's Court on March 4, but could waive the court appearance by paying a $92 fine.

Tyson was freed on $30,000 bond after his conviction last week on one count of rape and two counts of deviate sexual conduct. He faces six to 20 years in prison on each count.

He was convicted of attacking Desiree Washington, a beauty pageant contestant Tyson had met at an Indianapolis hotel.

Boxer Mike Tyson, shown in his loss to Evander Holyfield, was arrested again...for speeding on a highway outside Cleveland.

Irish swim at East Champs

By JASON KELLY
Sports Writer

After three weeks away from competition, the Notre Dame men's and women's swim teams return to action this weekend at Rutgers University in the Eastern Intercollegiate Conference Championships.

Both teams took second place in last year's event, and they will have to swim well to repeat that performance this year against a field that includes West Virginia, Cleveland State, George Washington and Saint Bonaventure along with host Rutgers.

It will be an especially challenging meet considering the Irish haven't raced since an emotional win over Illinois-Chicago on January 29, but coach Tim Welsh believes they will be successful if they concentrate on one race at a time.

"Our challenge this weekend will be to focus, concentrate and race the races as they come up," Welsh said.

The Eastern Intercollegiate Championships will also give the teams a good indication of where they stand heading into the Midwestern Collegiate Conference Championships next week at Rolf's Aquatic Center.

The women will compete with only 14 swimmers this weekend, but the small numbers shouldn't hinder the team, because the healthy swimmers have proven that they can pick up the slack for their injured teammates. Against Illinois-Chicago, the women cruised to a 124-87 win with only eleven competitors.

On the men's side, several outstanding individual performances have highlighted the 1992 season, but none have been more impressive than sophomore diver Sean Hyer. Hyer set a Rolf's Aquatic Center pool record with a score of 351.6 in the three meter diving competition, breaking a five year old record held by Mark Rourke of Alabama. On the strength of that performance, Hyer qualified for the Zone Diving Competitions to be held in Minneapolis in March.

More performances like those will be needed if the Irish are to be successful this weekend, but Welsh isn't worried about winning and losing.

Wrestlers to host OU, hit IU

By JIM VOGL
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame wrestling team faces back-to-back matches this weekend. They will host Ohio at 7:30 Friday night, and 24 hours later, will battle Indiana down in Bloomington.

In such a physically demanding sport as wrestling, rest is important. But Irish assistant head coach Rick Stewart feels his team should be prepared. "I don't think it will bother the team. At this point in the season, we've got to be ready. We've got to wrestle with confidence and just focus on the match."

If history repeats itself, ND should come out ahead in the first match. The Irish have won all three previous meetings against the Bobcats, including a 44-0 slaughtering in their first meeting. But this year, Ohio (5-3) will pose several challenges.

Three Bobcat wrestlers are ranked in the latest Amateur Wrestling News poll, all of whom will test Irish freshmen. Junior Casey Yackin (25-7) is 19th at 118 pounds, and will face Ed Jamieson (1-4); OU's 134 pound sophomore Eric Kimble, rated 10th, will lock horns with Matt Beaujon (7-10-2); and junior Paul Casey, 16th, will battle Mike Fox (8-14) at 134.

The Hoosiers appear to be struggling this year, posting a 5-10 overall record including a 2-4 mark in the Big Ten. They list only three wrestlers in their starting ten with winning records.

Irish star senior Marcus Gowens (19-4) will match up against Chris Russo (13-10-5) at 126; junior Emil Soehnlén hopes to get on track against Scott Pêche (13-9-2) at 158; and heavyweight senior Chuck Weaver will try to regain national ranking status against IU's Vito Maurici (20-10-1).

The weekend should provide a challenge for all levels of the Irish lineup.

"Both teams are tough. Our team has to hit on all cylinders and dominate the matches. At this time of year, we're making good strides and if we remain focused and keep up our intensity, we should win both."

Although wrestlers, coaches and fans pull for the team as a whole, realistically wrestling is an individual sport. And although head coach Fran McCann and his staff focus on a winning season, the wrestlers focus on preparing for the NCAA tournament and peaking at the right time.

As Stewart explained, the pressure of this weekend's back-to-back meets are nothing compared to the intensity of the NCAA Championships, which are held on three consecutive days (March 19-21).

The Irish do boast several individual standouts who have legitimate shots at earning All-American status in the National tournaments. But Stewart stressed that at this point, "anything can happen." So for Gowens, Jamie Boyd, J.J. McGrew, Weaver, and the rest of the squad, every match is important.

Junior Melissa Harris, shown here, and the women's tennis squad will be reunited with the Lady Volunteers on Saturday at the Eck

Eck, Irish to host Lady Vols

By RICH SZABO
Sports Writer

It's reunion time for the Notre Dame women's tennis team this weekend.

On Saturday afternoon, the Irish will host Tennessee's Lady Volunteers, the 15th-ranked team in the country.

These two teams are no strangers to each other. Last fall, many of the players from both squads competed in the Brown Invitational, and then capped the fall season off with a dual match here at Notre Dame.

In that match, the Irish jumped out to a 4-2 lead after the singles matches and could taste the upset victory. However, the strength of the Volunteers' doubles tandems proved to be too much for the Irish, as Tennessee swept all three matches in straight sets to escape with a 5-4 victory.

"This match will be just like the fall," said Irish coach Jay Louderback, "a tight match. We'll have to play well to beat them, but we are capable of doing it."

This dual match will feature a battle of two top-ten players, sixth-ranked Mandy Wilson of Tennessee and Notre Dame's Melissa Harris, the country's seventh-ranked player. The two split their matches in the fall, with Wilson winning in the finals at Brown and Harris coming out on top in the dual match at ND.

Following the Harris-Wilson match at first singles, the Irish will send Laura Schwab at second singles, Christy Faustmann at third, and Ann Bradshaw at sixth. Lisa Tholen and Terri Vitale will be in the fourth and fifth slots, but Louderback is not sure who will be playing in which spot.

In doubles, Notre Dame will go with Faustmann and Tholen at first, followed by Bradshaw and Eniko Bende, and then Harris and Schwab at third.

"Melissa and Laura have been playing too well for us to keep them out of the lineup," said Louderback, referring to his decision to put a new doubles team together for this contest.

Doubles will invariably be the key to the match, as both teams have strong singles players. For Tennessee, the tandem of Wilson and Shannon Kagawa, come into this match ranked 20th nationally.

The Irish, who started out the season ranked 25th in the country but fell out of the poll due to a season-opening loss at Illinois, will be looking to gain a measure of respect from the voters, and what better way to do that than by pulling off the upset win.

Notre Dame will also see the likes of Kentucky, North Carolina, Northwestern, Indiana, Clemson, South Carolina, Kansas, and Wisconsin over the course of the next month. All are in or near the poll.

"Any matches we win from here on in will be big wins for us," said Louderback, "but I think we're capable of knocking off anybody."

Men dominate Gators in 6-0 sweep

Observer Staff Report

Whether it's the Sugar Bowl or the National Team Indoor Championships Notre Dame has had it's way with the Florida Gators.

The highly regarded Gators proved to be no match for the Irish as the mens' tennis team dominated Florida 6-0. Florida had held a number five national ranking, five spots ahead of the tenth-ranked Irish.

All-American David DiLucia led the onslaught, topping Bruce Haddad 6-3, 6-1. In number two singles, Andy Zurcher won the first set 7-5, then lost the second 4-6 before an injury forced Florida's Mark Merklein to retire from the match.

In three and four singles, Will Forsyth easily handled David Blair 6-3, 6-3 and Chuck Coleman aced Gary Finnegan 6-4, 6-0. Mark Schmidt toppled Michael De Jongh 7-6, 6-3 and Chris Wojtalik won 6-3, 6-7, 6-2 over Doug Proudian in number five and six singles.

Notre Dame improved to 5-0 on the season and will face the winner of the LSU/California match in the tournaments second round today.

MacLean, Bruins invade JACC

By MIKE SCRUDATO

The Notre Dame's men's basketball team faces its latest top 25 team on Saturday when the second-ranked UCLA Bruins pay a visit to the Joyce ACC at 2 p.m.

The post-season hopes of the Irish could hinge on the outcome of the sold out contest. A win would put them one game below the .500 mark and would be their fourth win over a top 25 team.

"We've won three games in a row, and we don't have a lot of games left," Irish coach John MacLeod said. "I'd assume it would take at least 15 wins to get in (to the NCAA

The Notre Dame men's basketball team will take on UCLA on Saturday at 2 p.m. in front of a sellout crowd at the Joyce ACC.

Tournament)."

A loss would leave Notre Dame at 10-12, with tough games against 24th-ranked St. John's at home and DePaul and Evansville on the road remaining.

The Bruins entered last night's game against Stanford with a 20-1 record. Their lone loss came on January 29, when they were shocked at home by top 25 USC at the Pauley Pavilion, 86-82.

"This is another great UCLA ball club. It is going to be a tremendous challenge," MacLeod commented. "They are not an easy team to match up against because they are a small, quick team that has some great outside shooters."

As a team, UCLA has a shot 50.7 percent from the field and 42 percent from behind the three-point line. The Bruins are led by the twosome of senior Don McLean and junior Tracy Murray.

The six-foot-ten MacLean, a potential NBA lottery pick, leads UCLA in almost everything. Through 21 games, he is averaging 21.1 points and 7.8 rebounds per game, including a 38 point, nine rebound performance in the Bruins' 89-87 win at Arizona, which snapped the Wildcats' 71-game home winning streak. He is also among the nation's leaders with a 90.7 free throw percentage.

"Most teams would be lucky enough to have one forward with the ability of a Don McLean," UCLA coach Jim Harrick said. "We are lucky enough to have two forwards with that ability in Tracy (Murray) and Don. Tracy is one of the finest long range shooters in the college game today. Teams can't key on MacLean because of Tracy's offensive abilities. They complement each other very well."

Murray, who entered the Stanford game averaging 20.2 ppg and 6.6 rpg, has the ability to give the Bruins three points in a hurry whenever they need it, as he is shooting 52.9 percent from downtown.

"UCLA is a good ball club because they can kill you in so many ways," Notre Dame's leading scorer and rebounder LaPhonso Ellis said. "MacLean is a good post man, and Murray can shoot the threes."

The Irish are coming off Tuesday's sluggish performance in which they topped Marquette, 60-53. To upset the Bruins, they will have to show the ability they did in last Saturday's 101-98 win over #10 Syracuse at the Carrier Dome.

Bengal Bouts will begin Sunday

By GEORGE DOHRMANN
Sports Writer

The 62nd annual Bengal Mission Bouts will begin Sunday with quarterfinal action taking place at 2 p.m. in the JACC fieldhouse.

The Bouts have been fought since the 1930's, and have raised over $300,000 dollars for the Holy Cross Missions in Bangladesh.

Along with the charital aspect of the Bengal Bouts comes a rich tradition of top-flight boxing. This year looks to be no exception.

In the 135-lb division last year, unknown freshman Jeff Gerber stunned the field by topping Mike Jennings to capture the title. Gerber decided to add bulk and move up to the 140-lb division this year, opening the door for senior Tim Phelan. Phelan lost in the finals in the 130-lb division last year and is considered the slight favorite in a competitive weight class.

"If you go solely on experience then I guess myself and also Drew Dougherty, who has been boxing for four years also, are top contenders," said Phelan. "You never really know, sometimes there are boxers who shine in the tournament."

Gerber is the man to beat in the 140-lb class. The darkhorse could be Dan Mullen, the lone senior in a weight class filled with five sophomores. Last year's champion Joe Carrigan fell victim to injury and was advised not to compete in the bouts.

Lou Hall and Matt Mullarkey, runners-up in the 150-lb and 145-lb divisions in last year's bouts, appear headed for a matchup in the 145-lb final.

Searching for his third Bengal Bouts title will be Erik Milito. The 150-lb senior toppled Mullarkey in the 145-lb class in 1991. Milito holds an edge in both skill and experience, as he is the sole senior in the division. Dan Schmidt, in his first year of competition, and Anthony Cornetta have looked impressive during workouts.

"Eric (Milito) has to be considered the favorite," said Schmidt. "Don't count out Cornetta. He has been working hard, has nifty foot work and a lightning fast jab."

Shane Hitzman will look to hit his way into his second consecutive 155-lb final. Last year Colin Mullaney outlasted Hitzman for the title, but Mullaney's move in weight class opens the door for Hitzman.

Mullaney was the favorite in the 160-lb class the minute he tipped the scale above the 155-lb mark. The Virginia native will be challenged by an experienced field which contains six upperclassmen.

Barring an unexpected upset, Scott Mulcahy and Tim Trainor will battle for the 165-lb title, a repeat of their showdown in the 170-lb class last year. Trainor was disqualified in last year's semifinal, but was allowed to fight Trainor in a non-divisional bout. Mulcahy was given the title, but Trainor got the last word by winning a unanimous decision.

Kerry Wate added five pounds to his frame and will look to add to his total of Bengal Bout titles in the 170-lb weight class. Wate's hunt for his fourth championship will begin with sophomore Cliff Clancy. Southpaw Jim McMahon has shown promise in workouts, and could surprise the heavily favored Wate.

The Notre Dame women's basketball team took over sole possession of second place in the Midwestern Collegiate Conference with a 66-58 victory over Detroit Mercy last night at the Joyce ACC.

The win, coupled with Loyola's 61-50 victory over Dayton, moved the Irish (8-14, 5-4) a half game in front of idle Butler and a full game over the Flyers in the conference standings. Notre Dame will have a chance to stretch its lead on Saturday as the Irish host Butler (11-11, 4-4) in their final home game of the season.

"I never thought we'd be saying that we're excited to be in second place, but we're really happy with the way we're playing now," said Notre Dame coach Muffet McGraw.

The Irish were never in serious trouble in last night's game. The Lady Titans' only lead was 2-0, and that was quickly erased by two three-point bombs by sophomore Sherri Orlosky, who led all scorers with 20 points.

"Sherri came out in the first half and played extremely well," said McGraw. "She's shooting the ball with confidence, and that's all we need her to do."

"I've been relaxed going into the game," added Orlosky. "I've been playing within the offense, getting the open shots and making them."

Notre Dame shot over 53 percent in the first half, while holding Detroit (13-11, 3-6) to just 35 percent shooting.

However, 12 first-half turnovers by the Irish helped the Titans stay in the game, as ND led only 34-27 at the half.

The Irish stretched their lead coming out of the break, extending it to as much as 17, 54-37, with 9:58 remaining in the game. But they couldn't put Detroit away, as starters Letitia Bowen (who had a career-high 15 rebounds) and Margaret Nowlin each picked up their fourth fouls.

The Titans took advantage of their absence, pounding the ball inside to center Heather Longar, who led the Titans with 14 points. Notre Dame's problems were compounded when guard Coquese Washington reagravated a knee injury, and had to sit out the last 4:43 of the game.

"Coquese is a big part of our offense," noted McGraw. "She can settle us down at the end of the game, and it was hard not having her in there."

Still, Detroit was down by 13, 62-49, with 3:48 left when it made its final run. Aided by a controversial intentional foul call on Nowlin with 2:11 remaining, the Titans ran off nine straight points to close within four, 62-58, with 55 seconds to go.

But with Nowlin, the team's leading scorer, out of the game, the Irish fought back and regained the momentum. Sophomore Kara Leary hit two clutch free throws with 39 seconds on the clock to up the lead back to six.

"Those free throws were big," said McGraw. "For Kara coming
