Senators named; Off-campus elections Friday AIDS virus

By NANCY DUNN
News Writer

There will be a run off election for off-campus co-presidents Friday between the tickets of McGuire/Lanser and Bulakowski/Toohey.

The official winners of Wednesday's student senate elections are Erin King of South Quad, Jennifer Halbach of God Quad, Sean Sullivan of North Quad, and Dana Anderson of Mod Quad.

"We're just going to keep reminding people to be sure to vote on Friday," Kevin McGuire said of the run-off election. "We need to keep reiterating what we want to do for next year."

The McGuire/Lanser ticket captured 40 percent of the vote while Bulakowski/Toohey landed 34 percent of the vote. Today's election reduced the number of tickets running from four to two.

"I am very excited to have received this position and am ready to do the best job that I can," said Dana Anderson from

STUDENT SENATE ELECTIONS

District 4. Anderson expressed her frustration with being subjected to a late challenge by a write-in ticket. She said she ended up having essentially only one day to campaign.

"I am looking forward to working on the senate next year," said Sean Sullivan from District 3. He had also been an uncontested candidate until the day of the election when he was challenged by a write-in candidate. "I ran a clean and legal campaign and am glad to see that people appreciated that," said Sullivan.

"There was a high turn out for today's off-campus elections, and we hope that there will be as much interest in the run-off," said election committee co-president Andrea Sullivan.

Voting for the off-campus run-off election will be at the LaFortune Student Center from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Friday.

Pangborn chosen as best dorm on campus

By BEVIN KOVALIK
News Writer

For its outstanding service, spirit, enthusiasm and dedication to the Notre Dame campus, Pangborn Hall was awarded "Dorm of the Year," by the Hall Presidents' Council (HPC), according to Marianne Ravry, former HPC co-chair.

Tuesday night HPC honored Pangborn Hall with a plaque for the annual award recognizing the special achievements and redeeming qualities of one campus residence hall, said Ravry.

"Pangborn got off to a slow start with its transformation into an all women's dorm this year," said Ravry, "but the residents and staff have really built a name for themselves."

"Pangborn Hall is comprised of a medley of individuals who have brought their many gifts from other places," said Kathy Lohmuller, Pangborn Hall rector. "The residents have come together to form a community bond."

Many young women from dorms across campus wanted to continue to keep the tradition of Pangborn Hall alive and begin building excellence, community, and spirit, she added.

"We have done things typical of other halls, but the fact that we pulled together to sponsor some new things during our first year has helped to make Pangborn Hall a success," she said.

Over a hundred eager freshman and approximately 40 women who transferred from other campus dorms helped to kick off the year in Pangborn Hall, according to Katie Bambrick, Pangborn Hall co-president.

Pangborn has been active in several service oriented projects and members of the hall have worked to sponsor such activities as the "Snap-a Scam" and the upcoming "Price is Right" fundraiser, Bambrick said.

"Everyone, including the hall staff and our rector have worked to make it the best women's dorm during our first year, and it has really paid off," she said.

HPC accepted essays of application from all dorms, and the winner was selected by the HPC executive committee, Ravry said. Pangborn Hall co-presidents Katie Bambrick and Anne LaFleur wrote the winning essay describing why Pangborn exemplifies Notre Dame spirit.

Malcom X's widow speaks on the role of women, youth

By BRIAN SEILER

Dr. Betty Shabazz, the widow of Malcom X, told young people today they need to work together to change the conditions of the world.

"What we all need to understand is that all humans are equally endowed with dignity," she said in a guest lecture at Stepan Center.

Shabazz spoke on the topic of "Blacks and Women in Today's Society," but said, "I'm supposed to talk about blacks and women, but really we can talk about people and take care of everything."

All people, by the fact that they are human, have the rights to "dignity, options, and opportunity," she said. The young people of today must ensure these three rights because "we are our brother's keeper," she said.

"We need people to lead us and support us sovereignly into the future," Shabazz added.

The change must start with individuals, Shabazz continued, for "if change is to come, it must come through people. We have to be the gatekeepers and we have to change," she said.

Personal change involves self-reflection and realizing personal validity and concentrating on reliability, she said.

"We are where we are because of us," she quoted from Malcom X.

Education is the key to ending racism, she said. "We have institutionalized racism, and we need to dissolve it." Another part of ending racism involves equal employment opportunities, she said.

"Affirmative action is only a tool, while the goal is equal employment opportunities," she said. All concerned young people should review Affirmative Action documents and human rights documents, she added.

"Women should have experience in political activity," Shabazz said. "They should has 'latent' period

WASHINGTON (AP) — The AIDS virus can hide for years in lymph nodes before launching a final, lethal attack on its victims, scientists report in a new finding that shows the disease is never idle. The discovery may lead to earlier treatment for patients.

Two studies to be published Thursday in the journal Nature show that once a person is infected, the AIDS virus can congregate in lymphoid organs, such as the tonsils, spleen, adenoids and lymph nodes, where it steadily infects key blood cells and breaks down cells that filter out viruses.

Eventually, the filter cells in the lymph organs are destroyed and infected blood cells spill out into the body's circulation system, leading to a collapse of the immune system, the classic sign of the lethal stage of AIDS.

The researchers said the findings show that drugs must be found to combat the AIDS virus from the moment of diagnosis and that therapy cannot be relaxed during periods when there are no symptoms.

Dr. Anthony Fauci, director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases and a co-author of one of the studies, said the discovery answers one of the key mysteries about the course of the AIDS virus disease.

Fauci said that many patients infected with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS, experience an initial bloom of virus particles in their blood, a condition called viremia, within weeks of exposure. But then traces of virus disappear from blood tests and patients often live

Han, Luke, and me: Star Wars Remembered

Bill Rosemann
Accent Columnist

"A long time ago in a galaxy far, far away..."

So begins The Star Wars Saga, and a generation is forever changed. We are Star Wars babies, and George Lucas is our grandfather. We were blessed to be given the modern fairy tale on the big screen. We saw magical twins united, and a young prince defeat his corrupted king, and a galaxy saved in an interstellar epic. My childhood was filled with the glow of clashing lightsabers, the howls of wookies, and the power of the Force.

Han Solo was the coolest scoundrel alive and the only cowboy I ever wanted to be. In his prime, this Corellian smuggler could do the Kessel Run in 12 parsecs, blow away Greedo without twitching, and woo a princess.

Luke Skywalker, in the first film, was a whining dork. "But Uncle Oooowen, I was going into Tashi station to pick up some pooower converters." Who would believe that by the third installment, Luke would stride into Jabba's stronghold a complete badass?

Darth Vader, the Dark Lord of the Sith, still haunts my dreams. In the third grade I won a costume contest with a home made Vader suit which featured a handcrafted life support system box-thing on my chest. But how could someone with an aura so fearsome have, under his helmet, a head that looked like a Weeble?

The Star Wars figures and toys by Kenner were the grandest things ever forged of plastic. The trash compactor (with the little monster and Nerf garbage peices) of the Death Star play station was without an equal. I always wanted the tie-fighter with pop off wings, but I did have the landspeeder (with little wheels on the bottom to simulate hovering).

Through the years the Saga never left me. Alex Nunez, my next door neighbor, and I wake each other up every morning with Chewbacca wookiee bellows. The night before the Snow Day of '93, I dragged Alex from his bed at one o'clock into the untouched snow to act out every scene from "Empire" featuring the ice planet Hoth. The highlight of the excursion occurred when I was teaching Alex how to be a Taun-Taun and a lone female came by and asked us, "Are you two all right?"

Is it just me or is the DeBartolo building actually Cloud City? I walk through the halls waiting for a pig-like Ugnaught to scurry by clutching C-3PO's head. Whenever I'm in a boring class, I pray to hear over the intercom: "This is Lando Calrissian, the Empire has just taken control of the city. I advise anyone to leave before more Imperial troops arrive. As Billy Dee Williams, I also suggest you relax with a nice cold glass of Colt 45."

I salute all those who possesses the knowledge of the Saga that would impress a Jedi. Author's note: Thanks to Jim Sheily, who acted as my complete Star Wars reference source and can speak fluently with Chewbacca, Greedo, or Jabba the Hutt.

May the Force be with you—always.

Francois Mitterrand's term in question

■PARIS — The first crack appeared Wednesday in the right-wing alliance poised to take power as rival conservatives with their sights on the presidency bickered over whether Francois Mitterrand should quit the post now. Paris Mayor Jacques Chirac wants the Socialist president out next week. Former President Valery Giscard d'Estaing said Mitterrand ought to serve out the last two years of his term. Each is calculating on when he has the best chance of succeeding the 76-year-old president, who will likely face an overwhelmingly rightist and hostile National Assembly after run-off elections Sunday. Mitterrand's party, in power for 10 of the past 12 years, is being turned out by an electorate fed up with high unemployment and seemingly endless scandals.

Billy Graham completes crusade

■ESSEN, Germany — Evangelist Billy Graham this week completed his most far-reaching crusade, transmitted from here by satellite to more than 1,400 centers across Europe with attendance totaling 8.2 million. Of these, about 250,000 responded to Graham's invitation to accept Christ. The five-day crusade, translated in various languages and described as reaching the largest audience in Graham's 50 years of ministry, also went to sites in former communist countries. It was Graham's first crusade in Germany since the Berlin Wall came down in 1989.

Police Department sponsorship had been suggested by several officers who had been through Explorer programs. Boulder is one of three Colorado cities with gay-rights policies.

This test will take place between 10 and 11 a.m. The St. Joseph County Civil Defense Office will sound the tornado sirens at the appropriate time. The following actions are to be followed when a tornado warning sounds. Take shelter in the nearest substantial building immediately. Avoid windows, auditoriums and gyms. Go to the basement or to an interior corridor or closet. If you are in a car, pull off street and set the brakes then seek the nearest substantial building. If time does not permit, lie flat in a ravine or ditch.

Report shows rights violations

By JOHN LUCAS
Assistant News Editor

Despite the submission of a recent report detailing thousands of atrocities to the United Nations, full accountability for El Salvadoran human rights violations is unlikely, according to Margaret Crahan, Henry Ruce Professor of Religion, Power and Political Process at Occidental College in Los Angeles.

Although last year's peace settlement and establishment of a "Truth Committee" in El Salvador to enumerate and uncover evidence of gross human rights violations was a strong step toward accountability, little can be done to bring the guilty to trial, according to Crahan, who spoke yesterday at the 7th annual gathering of the Archbishop Romero lecture series.

"There was initially some reticence to testify by individuals and human rights organizations," Crahan said. "Those who were long silent, overcame fear and pressures to keep in silence and trusted the committee."

The Committee examined cases of human rights abuses by the El Salvadoran government and the revolutionary guerrilla group, the Farabundo Marti Liberation Front (FMLN). The committee and staff handled 7,000 cases on a first hand basis, while it relied on second hand sources for 18,000 more cases. The El Salvadoran government admitted the need to investigate only 50 cases, according to Crahan.

Those cases investigated involved the assassinations, disappearances and massacres of El Salvadoran civilians by the El Salvadoran military, "death squads" and FMLN guerrillas, Crahan said.

The Truth Committee produced an 800 page report which printed the names of principal violators. The report was released in El Salvador and then submitted to United Nations Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali on March 15, according to Crahan.

"The possibility of legal justice is scant. That's why the naming of names is so important... It is critical that the report named people. It is impossible to comprehend what it means to the families of the victims," she said.

Trying to prove that many abuses were planned, and not simply random violence, the Truth Committee paid particular attention to the disappearances, which reached a peak of several hundred people per month, in 1981, according to Crahan.

"The disappearances exemplify systematic patterns in gross human rights violations," she said.

The United States government has been a major hindrance to the committee, failing to produce needed documents and information, according to Crahan.

"The failure of the Pentagon, FBI, CIA, and Defence Intelligence Agency to produce documents was seen as the United States having something to cover up. Congress has ordered hearings to expedite the role of the U.S. in the Spring of 1993," she explained.

"The U.S. did eventually cooperate, but not at the expected level... The hearings, scheduled for May, bring new light to information, especially about the role of highly placed officials."

In El Salvador, the people and government must move toward reform, according to Crahan. Steps toward reform include removing those guilty of violations from office, reforming the judiciary, solidifying rule by law, and a national reconciliation.

The University of Notre Dame has received a $150,000 grant from the Texaco Foundation for graduate and undergraduate scholarships in its Center for Bioengineering and Pollution Control (CBPC).

"Support for undergraduate and graduate students is the University's top fundraising priority," said University president Father Edward Malloy. "We are especially appreciative of the Texaco Foundation's assistance with this urgent need."

According to Carl Davidson, president of the Texaco Foundation, "This grant is in line with the Texaco Foundation's longstanding support for quality education. It also strengthens our association with an institution which provides the company with its most valuable resource - our employees."

The Texaco grant will support two graduate and three undergraduate fellowships for CBPC students over a three year period, starting in 1993.

Established in 1987, the CBPC is a cooperative project of Notre Dame's colleges of science and engineering to expand its environmental engineering program.

One of the most respected programs in the country, it continues a tradition of environmental research at Notre Dame that began in the 1950's.

Growing environmental consciousness around the nation has touched off increased interest in environmental studies at most major universities.

Coordinating the disciplines of engineering, microbiology, biochemistry, physical chemistry, mathematics, and physics, it has attracted more than $11 million in funding while developing pollution control technologies.

The 29 projects in which the CBPC is currently engaged include development of periodic processes for wastewater treatment, waste reduction efforts and bio-meditation techniques.

without HIV symptoms for up to 10 years. Eventually, there is another explosion of viremia, usually followed by death from some opportunistic infection.

"Since there was little virus in the blood, it was a puzzle why this process inevitably progressed and occurred," Fauci said. "The bottom line of the study is that this virus is present in the lymph nodes...and it is actively replicating...even when there is little or no virus activity detected in the blood."

In effect, said Fauci, the period that doctors call the latent or symptomless stage of the HIV is not latent at all. The virus is thriving in the lymph nodes and insidiously eroding the body's immune system toward a final collapse.

A second study, co-authored by Dr. Ashley Haase of the University of Minnesota, confirmed that HIV thrived in the lymphoid tissue during the so-called latent period of disease. He said the virus in the lymph nodes was actively infecting lymphocytes, called CD4 T cells, that reside in the lymph nodes or which were passing through.

CD4 T cells, the so-called "helper T cells" of the immune system, are the principle targets of HIV. The level of these T cells is used as a key marker in the progress of HIV infection.

Haase said he and his colleagues found "an extraordinarily large number" of infected CD4 T cells in the lymph tissue. He said only about a tenth of these cellswere capable of growing new virus. Instead, said Haase, these cells seem to act as "a reservoir of infection."

"I estimate that perhaps as many as 100 billion cells are latently infected at any given time and perhaps a billion cells are productively infected," he said. "I liken it to a constantly erupting volcano...with latently infected cells feeding the productively infected ones."

Artifacts found on Alaskan hilltop

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Government archaeologists excavating a remote hilltop in northern Alaska said Wednesday that artifacts and carbon dating showed a camp there may be the oldest inhabited site in North America.

The find, known as the Mesa Site, was announced by the Bureau of Land Management, which oversees the unpopulated region in the Brooks Range, about 400 miles northwest of Anchorage.

BLM said spear points and wood charcoal from cooking hearths dated to 11,700 years ago, making it the first arctic site linked to paleoindians of the American Southwest.

The agency also said it had recommended the camp, near the Nigu and Ileriak rivers, for inclusion on the National Register of Historic Places.

Paul Martin, a University of Arizona professor of geoscience, said BLM's discovery "fits" with theories that early Alaskans moved into the American Southwest in as short as 500 years. Paleoindian sites in the lower 48 states date to around 10,000 to 11,000 years ago.

"It's nice in Alaska to have something a little bit older," Martin said.

The Mesa Site, within the National Petroleum Reserve, was discovered in 1978 during what BLM called routine archaeology work in connection with oil and gas exploration.

BLM officials said Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt had begun the process of withdrawing the site and 2,500 acres surrounding it from development, including mineral exploration.

Curtis Wilson, a BLM archaeologist, said researchers had long believed that early people entered the New World over the Bering Strait land bridge and moved south.

Until the Mesa Site, however, Alaska artifacts were distinct from the sophisticated spear points found in New Mexico and other southwest states.

Wilson said some spear points like those used by paleoindians had been in Alaska before. But those isolated points found earlier were lying on the surface and removed from other identifying artifacts.

Wilson said the Mesa Site points, made of rock and about 4 inches long, probably were dropped where they had been found.

New leaders emerging in Israel

JERUSALEM (AP) — Benjamin Netanyahu went into the Likud party's leadership election the overwhelming favorite Wednesday, the first of a new generation of leaders to emerge in the right-wing party and Israeli politics as a whole.

The 43-year-old Netanyahu, a former deputy foreign minister known for American-style politics and a flair for publicity, was widely expected to take over the chief opposition party after a bruising campaign marred by charges of adultery and blackmail.

Netanyahu was called an "eel" by his chief rival and onetime boss, former Foreign Minister David Levy.

Netanyahu hinted that Levy had tried to blackmail him out of the race, forcing Netanyahu into admitting on national television that he had an extramarital affair. Levy denied the charge.

It was Likud's first primary to choose a leader, replacing a party committee system, and polls predicted Netanyahu would get more than the 40 percent of the vote needed to win without a runoff.

Two other candidates were also vying for the job. Ariel Sharon, the controversial hard-line former defense minister, did not enter the Likud race, but said he might challenge the party leader before the next national election in 1996.

There was little ideological difference among the four rivals. All argued that Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's Labor Party-led government is too soft on Palestinian violence and too conciliatory on territorial compromise in the U.S.-sponsored peace talks with Arabs.

In the latest bloodshed, Israeli soldiers shot and killed a Palestinian in the occupied West Bank on Wednesday, Arab reports said, and another Palestinian was killed in the occupied Gaza Strip in unclear circumstances.

The killings brought to 21 Palestinians killed in escalating Arab-Israeli violence since the beginning of March. Eight Israelis have also died.

Netanyahu became known for his polished TV style as Israel's spokesman during the Gulf War. He once appeared in a gas mask on CNN — when Israel faced the threat of Iraqi missiles with chemical warheads, which in the end never came.

About 216,000 Likud members were eligible to vote. Polls were open until late Wednesday, and tallying was expected to stretch into Thursday.

Netanyahu's other rivals were Benjamin Begin, son of former prime minister and Likud founder Menachem Begin, and Moshe Katzav, who has 11 years of Cabinet experience.

On Wednesday, the parliament chose Ezer Weizman, an outspoken advocate of making peace with the Arabs and negotiating with the PLO, as Israel's seventh president. He was elected 66-53.

Weizman, 68, the candidate of the Labor Party, is a former fighter pilot and general who started in politics as a hawk but turned dovish in the late 1970s. He takes over the largely figurehead post in May.

Plenty of time to duck for oncoming asteroids

WASHINGTON (AP) — Somewhere in deep space there may be a mile-wide asteroid on a collision course with Earth. That's something to worry about. On the other hand, there probably will be decades or centuries of advance warning, giving scientists time to do something about it.

That was the bottom line of testimony Wednesday by two scientists who headed studies: one on how to detect asteroids; the other on how these heavenly rocks can be intercepted and steered into a benign path. "This is a real problem and we can do something about it," said NASA scientist John Rafter, who guided a workshop on handling asteroids hurtling through space toward a jolting rendezvous with our planet.

"The kinetic energy of a mountain-sized object traveling typically at 20 miles per second is so enormous that it is difficult to comprehend," Rafter told the House space subcommittee.

"The consequences could be so devastating that it is both reasonable and necessary to explore all possible means for avoiding this ultimate catastrophe," he said. "The energy of the largest nuclear weapons ever built is very small by comparison."

The report of Rafter's committee said nuclear technology offers the only hope for shoving an asteroid off a collision course. The nuclear packages would be exploded at a distance, rather than on the surface to lessen the danger of the object breaking up into multiple hazardous pieces.

The report scoffed at other suggestions, including smashing the asteroid into smithereens with kinetic energy devices, solar sails or laser deflections, saying they are either ineffectual, less desirable or require engineering programs that are unreasonably expensive.

The second scientist, David Morrison of NASA's Ames Research Center in California, said the big worry is neither extremely large asteroids — like the 6- to 10-mile rock that wiped out the dinosaurs 65 million years ago — nor small meteorites.

"Our primary focus is on impacts of intermediate size," he said. "Projectiles with diameters of a few tens of meters up to several kilometers."

The small debris burns up in the atmosphere. The somewhat larger asteroids smash into earth "and explode with the force of the largest nuclear explosives," Morrison said. He gave as an example the 1908 Tunguska airburst explosion in Siberia, which is estimated to have released 10 to 20 megatons of energy.

"Such impacts could devastate a large city," Morrison said. "Fortunately, however, most such impacts will not strike in densely populated areas of the world."

The most recent near-miss was last year when the 1- to 2-mile wide asteroid Toutatis came within 2.2 million miles of Earth, a hair-thin margin in celestial terms. If it had hit, it would have blotted out the sunlight and all plants would have died.

Serbian shelling wounds refugees

TUZLA, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — U.N. helicopters swooped into besieged Srebrenica to fly refugees to safety Wednesday, but the operation was halted after Serbs shelled some of the refugees as they waited in a soccer stadium.

The attack killed one person and injured 21, including two Canadian peacekeepers, U.N. officials said. They said 29 people, including the U.N. soldiers, were flown out before flights were stopped.

In New York, U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali deplored the casualties and called for an immediate halt to the shelling. Brigadier Roddy Cordy-Simpson, the chief of staff of the U.N. force in Bosnia, called the attack "the ultimate in despicable behavior."

Bosnian Serb military commanders issued a statement accusing the United Nations of trying to infiltrate soldiers into Srebrenica to "save Muslim criminals who committed genocide against the Serb population." It also accused U.N. soldiers of firing at Serb positions to provoke shelling.

Radovan Karadzic, the Bosnian Serb leader who approved the U.N. flights, also said that Serb forces were not responsible. He accused Bosnia's Muslim-led government of firing at the landing site, then blaming it on the Serbs.

The shelling of the landing zone and also the Tuzla airport, where the helicopters are based, called into question Karadzic's assurances that corridors would be opened to evacuate Srebrenica. Many such promises by Bosnian Serb political leaders have been ignored by their military forces.

Bosnian Serb militiamen appear intent on capturing Srebrenica, where tens of thousands of Muslims are trapped and being shelled.

If Srebrenica fell, the Muslim-dominated Tuzla region, home to more than 700,000 people, could be the next target of a relentless Serb drive that has taken more than 70 percent of Bosnia's territory since the war began 11 months ago over the republic's secession from Yugoslavia.

U.N. officials have said they hope to establish a permanent presence in Srebrenica as a deterrent. The U.N. commander in Bosnia, Gen. Philippe Morillon of France, is trying to get Serb leaders to open air and road corridors that would allow free movement of people and humanitarian supplies.

The 29 refugees flown out of Srebrenica included women, children and wounded men. U.N. peacekeepers had said before the operation was halted that they hoped to remove as many as 300 ill people in the next few days.

Maj. Martin Waters, a British peacekeeper, said the Serbs concentrated artillery fire on the Srebrenica soccer field as the wounded were assembled for evacuation.

Russian power struggle sways between leaders

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia veered between confrontation and compromise Wednesday, and President Boris Yeltsin and his legislative opponents ended up no closer to resolving their power struggle.

The fierce arguments in Moscow reverberated across Russia. Cossacks offered to form a presidential guard to defend Yeltsin and declared self-rule in their southern Don region. Siberian coal miners threatened a strike in support of the president.

Hopes for a settlement dwindled after Yeltsin's chief rival, parliament speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov, presented "rude ultimatums" for concessions during talks with the president, said Yeltsin spokesman Vyacheslav Kostikov.

"The president responded with a resolute and firm rejection," Kostikov said, according to the Interfax independent news agency.

Yet, Khasbulatov later indicated he still hoped for a compromise.

Also Wednesday, President Clinton also expressed hope for a negotiated solution, saying "It is very much in our interest to keep Russia a democracy." He met with Russian Foreign minister Andrei Kozyrev to discuss U.S. aid and the planned Clinton-Yeltsin summit in Vancouver on April 3-4.

The struggle between Yeltsin and the Communist-dominated Congress of People's Deputies had been stewing for months over the question of whether the executive or legislative branch should have more power.

The situation boiled over after Yeltsin declared emergency rule on Saturday and called for an April 25 referendum on whether a new form of parliament should be established.

Police arrest key suspect in Trade Center blast

NEW YORK (AP) — A key suspect in the World Trade Center bombing was flown back to the United States from Egypt on Wednesday to face charges, authorities said.

Mahmoud Abouhalima, a 33-year-old New York City cab driver, arrived at Stewart International Airport in Newburgh, authorities said.

The suspect faced an arraignment Thursday, said U.S. Attorney Roger Hayes.

Abouhalima has ties to radical Islamic Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman, as three others arrested in the case are believed to have, said a federal investigator, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"He is probably more involved in this bombing than any of the other ones we have arrested so far," the investigator said. He said at least two more suspects are being sought.

The motive remains unknown for the Feb. 26 blast, which killed six and injured more than 1,000.

The investigator said Abouhalima oversaw the operation in which a rented van loaded with a huge bomb was detonated in a parking garage beneath the world's second-tallest buildings.

On the morning of the blast, Abouhalima was seen riding in a van with the first man arrested in the bombing, Mohammed Salameh, according to a federal investigator in New Jersey.

Abouhalima also was spotted near the Jersey City storage warehouse where authorities recovered explosives after the blast, said the investigator, also speaking on condition of anonymity.

The investigator in New York said the suspect was "someone on the style of a consultant. He was telling others what should be done. ... (He) definitely is a key guy."

A sealed indictment was returned this week against Abouhalima by a Manhattan federal jury based on evidence seized last week at a raid of his home in Woodbridge, N.J., the investigator said.

Neighbors in Kafr el-Diwar, Egypt, a textile town on the Nile near Alexandria, said he was arrested at his family's home after returning recently from the United States.

His family wouldn't talk to reporters. "Peace be upon you," said Abouhalima's father before slamming the door. Two of Abouhalima's four children were standing inside the home.

Neighbors in Woodbridge said Abouhalima had lived since fall in one-bedroom apartment there with his German wife and four children. The neighbors said they knew little else about him.

Salameh, 25, an illegal alien of Palestinian descent living in Jersey City, and Nidal Ayyad, 25, a Palestinian-American of Maplewood, N.J., are being held without bail in the bombing.

Salameh allegedly rented the van that carried the bomb; Ayyad is a chemical engineer with bomb-building knowledge, authorities say.

A fourth man, Ibrahim El-gabrowni of Brooklyn, is charged with assaulting federal agents who searched his apartment for clues. He also is being held without bail.

Authorities believe Abouhalima worked for a while as a driver for Abdel-Rahman, who is in exile from Egypt. The blind cleric said last week he had never owned a car and has denied any involvement in the trade center blast.

Abdel-Rahman advocates an Islamic fundamentalist government in Egypt. He was acquitted in Egypt in the 1980s of sanctioning the assassination of President Anwar Sadat.

Clinton plans economic programs at home, USSR

Americans will save billions

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton asserted Wednesday that preserving democracy in Russia with injections of U.S. aid would save Americans billions of dollars that otherwise would go into maintaining a nuclear arsenal.

Clinton began his campaign for a still-undisclosed U.S. aid package at a White House meeting with Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev. He also got a firsthand account from Kozyrev of the political squeeze conservatives in Moscow are putting on President Boris N. Yeltsin.

"It is very much in our interest to keep Russia a democracy, to keep moving toward market reforms and to keep moving toward reducing the nuclear threat," Clinton said.

He did not disclose what he might offer Yeltsin when they meet at the summit in Vancouver, British Columbia, April 3-4. However, Secretary of State Warren M. Christopher said one possibility was rescheduling some of Russia's debt.

Last month, Christopher told Congress the administration would propose boosting technical aid to Russia and other former Soviet republics from $417 million currently to about $700 million.

Whatever the details, Clinton said the preservation of democracy "will save the American people billions of dollars in money we don't have to spend maintaining a nuclear arsenal if we can continue to denuclearize the world."

He is due to go to Tokyo in mid-April to work on a second, joint aid package with the foreign ministers of Japan, Germany, Britain, France, Italy and Canada.

With pressures on the U.S. budget, Congress may not readily accede to the administration's proposals.

House members, in a closed meeting with Christopher, stressed that the administration must make clear to the American people why aiding Russia is crucial to U.S. interests.

Lawmakers "are encountering a lot of questions from their constituents ... so they pressed the secretary on those very hard," said Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., the chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats rebuffed the Republicans' best shot at derailing President Clinton's economic plan on Wednesday as the Senate voted to preserve his proposed tax increase on the best-off Social Security recipients.

By rejecting the GOP effort to kill the tax increase on a 52-47 vote, the Senate put a blueprint of Clinton's deficit-reduction plan on a clear path to passage.

Majority Democrats relished the taste of imminent victory — and practically gloated before their Republican rivals.

"We tried your plan for 12 years and it didn't work," taunted Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich. "And the American people reached that judgment last November, and they sent that crowd out and they sent in a new president who came in with an economic plan for this country."

The Senate is likely to approve the outline of tax boosts on the rich, defense cuts and long-range spending increases on Thursday. The House approved a similar measure last week, and negotiators from the two chambers plan to begin crafting a compromise measure immediately. The actual tax and spending changes will be included in future legislation.

After the Social Security vote, Democrats flexed their muscle again as the chamber voted 55-44 to kill a Republican attempt at eliminating new taxes and spending boosts that Clinton wants.

But the key vote was on the Social Security amendment, which was aimed squarely at the political soft spot of Clinton's recovery plan. Party leaders couched the vote as a loyalty test for Democrats — and succeeded.

"This is a torpedo aimed at President Clinton," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine. "This is an effort to slow down the momentum that's gathering for the president in the country."

As the ultimate outcome became obvious, Republicans offered critiques of the president's package that they hoped would sway the public. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, compared its higher taxes and new federal initiatives to socialism.

"If socialism carries the day, this program will work," Gramm said. "But it has never carried the day. It has been rejected everywhere in the world except Cuba, in North Korea and China, and in Washington, D.C."

Prospects for quick approval of Clinton's accompanying $16.3 billion jobs package seemed a bit dimmer, however.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Seeking help first step to recovery

Dear Editor:

On picking up today's issue of the Observer, I was pleased to see that the Inside Column dealt with the continuing problem of eating disorders at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's. Although Jenny Marten's article was insightful, and I agree that both campuses need to acknowledge the pervasiveness of these problems, I can't imagine anyone who patronizes the campus dining halls agreeing with her statement that "it is not something you see" here.

Although I have only seen the situation at Notre Dame, association with (and knowledge of) several women with eating disorders has sensitized me to just how visible the problem actually is. In some circles, for example, bingeing and purging have been reduced to an accepted and laughable behavior. The cult of physical fitness here likewise allows compulsive exercise to be viewed as absolutely normal.

Despite the acceptance or ignorance of behaviors associated with eating disorders, anyone who knows what to look for can spot at least one sick person at any given meal in the Notre Dame dining halls: An emaciated young woman sitting alone ravenously devours a mountain of grape-nuts for dinner; or an obese student plugs quarter after quarter into the vending machine so she can gorge on junk-food in private later on; a normal-looking girl eats like a football-player, and has to use the bathroom 10 minutes later no matter what.

Although many women at both schools do stretch the definition of "naturally skinny," most do have normal eating habits. And there are a lot of happy fat people who are not compulsive eaters. By the same token, there are many bulimics who look "normal," or even "dumpy" by today's sick standards.

The point I'm trying to make is that, while eating disorders are not defined by visible body types, their effects can be seen by anyone willing to look for them. Any eating disorder manifests itself in very private behaviors that have visible effects on a person's attitude toward food.

Anyone who notices a friend or roommate who displays marked anxiety and secretiveness about eating and related behaviors should keep his or her eyes open because correct suspicions will be followed by lots of further "evidence": tons of junk-food wrappers appearing in the trash all at once, vomit traces left in the bathrooms nearby, agitation when the person is accompanied to meals or to the bathroom afterward, consistent appearance of anxiety or detachment at meals...the list could go on for columns.

Recognizing these behaviors can understandably result in a desire to "do something" for the person, but attempts at communication are likely to be met with hostility. As with alcoholism and other behavioral/physical problems, the only person who can make the sick person get well is that person herself. There is no proven formula for intervention, but nonconfrontational communication and support is the best way to show concern and possibly spur a person to seek help.

Unless physical danger seems imminent, making another's eating problems a public issue usually does more harm than good. Hall and counseling staff are good sources for handling a person with those kinds of disorders, but "ratting" on them and forcing them into meetings with "concerned third parties" usually results in alienation and resentment. The best thing to do is be a friend; nonjudgmental support allows a person to come to terms with the effects of their very private problem instead of forcing them to lie and hide their behaviors further.

To avoid sounding exclusionary, I would like to address those living with eating disorders as well. Nobody needs to be "told" that they're sick, and being lectured by friends and do-gooders usually inspires more anger and resentment than it does reform. A recovering bulimic once described her impetus for seeking help: "When you decide you want to stop, that is when you are no longer able to do it yourself." Seeking help is not an admission of weakness, and getting better is the only way to reclaim your true strength.

Thursday's Verse

Merry-Go-Round

For Tara

All the other kids ask me why I sit on this Merry-Go-Round all day
And I just answer, "Because."
Because I love feeling the warm orange-red sun on my soft skin,
And listening to the green leaves rustle,
And the birds tweet-tweeting.
Some of the other kids
(Especially little Tommy)
Even tease me and laugh,
"Ra?! Can we ride on the Merry-Go-Round with you, Ra?!"
Please?! Can we pleaseeee?! Ra! Ra! Ra! Ra!
And I just smile and say, "Because."
Because I talk to God on this Merry-Go-Round
And He tells me things.
Lots of real nice things:
Like how this cute boy named Shawn says he wants to marry me.
Shawn can still marry me, I giggle.
And how the other pretty girls want me to come play with them:
Nicole, Susan, and Amy have a brand new jump rope.
Megan wants me to play jacks with
Some blue ball that doesn't even bounce.
And Kim, Elizabeth, and Anita want me to play Ms. Mary Mack.
They can still play with me, I chuckle.
I tell God lots of things on this Merry-Go-Round too.
Lots of secret things:
I tell Him how daddy takes me to all kinds of real neat places:
The zoo, the movies, and the NutCracker too.
I always kiss daddy on his cheek
And he blushes when I say, "I love you."
And how Mommy whispers, "Chicken wings under,"
When she tucks me in.
I tell Him how the yellow rose is my favorite flower.
Yellow because when it mixes with the Light-blue sky it becomes
My favorite color... green.
Green sweaters, crayons, and Jolly Ranchers.
And how chocolate is my favorite ice-cream.
The doctor says I have a heart problem,
But I never get tired on this Merry-Go-Round.
There are lots of other kids on this ride too,
And they just smile and say, "Because,"
Like I do.

"Because this Merry-Go-Round is Mine."

The Snite exhibits rare prints by Rembrandt, Dürer, Whistler

Classic art never stays for long.

The last chance to catch the Six Great Printmakers in the Print, Drawing, and Photography Gallery at the Snite Museum of Art is approaching. The show, featuring Jacques Callot, Albrecht Durer, Rembrandt van Rijn, William Blake, Honore Daumier, and James McNeil Whistler will close on Sunday, March 28. Admission is free.

The exhibit shows works of some well known artists such as Rembrandt and Durer, Curator Stephen B. Spiro said. Also, on display are works of artists such as Blake and Whistler with which the public may not be quite as familiar, Spiro said.

In addition, the exhibit provides the first chance to see some artwork that will not be on view again for several years.

"75% of the prints being viewed have never been shown before," said Spiro. "This is a rare chance to look at something that won't be out for sometime. Any works on paper are fragile to light and humidity and can't stay exposed all that long before they are returned to protective storage."

A variety of media are represented. These include prints, engravings, woodcuts, and lithographs.

Among the 37 works are Callot's "Life of the Virgin" series, Rembrandt's biblical images, Blake's illustrated engravings of Dante's "Inferno," Daumier's lithographs which satirize the French bourgeoisie, and Whistler's prints of street scenes and figure studies.

Spiro stressed the exhibit's original nature. "There is a big difference between original prints and reproductions. 'The Great Printmakers' is an exhibit showing original works of art. These are artists who were really committed to original works of art," Spiro said.

"The artists worked with a block of wood, stone, or metal and then printed their work onto paper. It is the prints that are considered a work of art," Spiro said.

The lithograph 'A Musical Sketch' by artist Honore Daumier will be on display in the Snite Museum of Art Sunday, March 28.

About the printmakers

Editor's note: Works of the following artists, who range from artistic periods of the 16th to the 19th century, are part of the Snite's "Six Great Printmakers" display.

James McNeill Whistler
1843-1903

James McNeill Whistler is an American-born artist who is often mistaken as an European artist. At age 21 he moved to Paris and immediately embraced the European avant-garde movements.

Rembrandt Van Rijn
1606-1669

Although most commonly known as a painter and draftsman, Rembrandt was also one of the most remarkable printmakers.

Rembrandt produced nearly 300 prints, the earliest etchings dating all the way back to the late 1620's. One of these early printings, "The Good Samaritan," is on view.

Albrecht Dürer 1471-1528

Regarded as the greatest artist of the Renaissance in Northern Europe, Dürer was a painter, graphic artist, and theoretician. Dürer was the first artist to express himself primarily through engraving.

Honore Daumier 1808-1879

Honore Daumier is best known for caricatures of the politics and social manners of mid-19th-century France.

Daumier is classified as a Realist. His subjects are depicted as they ordinarily appear — sometimes with blank expressions that show they were unaware they were being observed.

Jacques Callot 1592-1635

Jacques Callot produced most of his over 1400 prints while working in the royal courts of Italy, France, and Spain. Callot is most famous for his prints of beggars. Two of these are in the collection on display at the Snite.

Morrissey Film Fest brings students to Silver Screen

By RICK DELVECCHIO
Accent Writer

The ND campus will be alive with video excitement this Friday night, as the fifth annual Morrissey film festival kicks off to benefit the St. Hedwig's Outreach Center.

"We are expecting the biggest crowd ever this year, around 1500 people," said Paul Matthews, co-chairman of the festival committee. He partly attributes this to the increase in film submissions.

"This year we had more submissions than last year. Eighteen films were entered and the best nine were selected for the show," he said.

One difference in this year's production is that more comedies have been submitted. Eight of the nine entries strive for humor.

"All sorts of people enter films, from highly polished student productions to regular students who just put together some funny scenes," Matthews said.

Some of the films are parodies, and use a cynical type of humor, according to Matthews.

Sophomore Kory Klem, whose film, "Messiah II: He's Back," pokes fun at the Notre Dame campus and "the human race in general," admits that his film has a humorous tone. He said that the inspiration for the film arose from ideas and discussions in his roommate and co-director, Jeff Bocan's, core class.

"We really haven't done a lot of video things before," he said. "We're really thrilled with it. It's an honor to be shown. We hope the audience enjoys it," Kory said.

The nine films which will be shown on Friday were chosen from a field of eighteen by a committee of judges from Morrissey.

"The panel consisted of two Assistant Rectors and a group of diverse students who could judge all the films, comedy and serious, equally," Matthews said.

The best film will be awarded a $100 prize. Trophies will also be awarded for Best Actor, Best Actress, and Best Director.

Matthews and his co-chair, Rian Akey, are grateful to many people for their contributions to the event. In particular, Matthew mentioned Mike LaSalle and Mike Martin, who put together the program for the event.

Mae Lee Johnson, Director of St. Hedwig's Outreach Center, will speak briefly to the crowd about the purpose of the organization benefitted by the event.

Admission is free, but donations will be accepted for the center. The show begins at 8, at Stepan Center.

CSC commemorates a decade of service

By COLLEEN KNIGHT
Accent Writer

At the Center for Social Concerns, service means more than spending your spring break in Appalachia or volunteering a few hours a week at the Center for the Homeless. It means thinking about the causes of poverty and homelessness and reflecting on the social problems that you encounter. At the C.S.C., service is a learning experience.

This weekend, the Center will commemorate its 10th anniversary with events for staff members, students, alumni, and community members to celebrate their commitment to service and social awareness.

Highlights include a celebration at Stepan Center on Saturday from 4 to 6:30 p.m. and the 2nd Annual Alumni Social Concerns Forum.

Established in 1983 by a group of students, faculty, and Holy Cross priests and nuns, the Center for Social Concerns now coordinates volunteer opportunities for 1600 students and over 30 service groups. For Director Father Don McNeill, however, the Center is more than just a "hive of activity."

"We hope to lead students to a reflective discernment of how to share their gifts with society, both now and when they leave," McNeill said.

Since he became director of the Center in 1983, McNeill has tried to link service with learning, focusing on the experiential aspects of social concerns, he said. The programs that have become most popular with students show the appeal of the service-learning experience.

On the Urban Plunge, for example, participants study about poverty and social justice they submit a reflection paper about their experience to the C.S.C. and receive one credit in Theology. Students participating in a Summer Service Project are also expected to prepare for their experience. During the spring, they spend time learning about the area where they will volunteer for eight weeks in the summer.

After writing a report about their project, participants must take a "Reflections on Service" Theology course in the fall.

By requiring preparation and follow-up for many of its programs and seminars, the Center for Social Concerns proves that there is more to service than merely participating in the programs.

"The Center focuses on the academic aspects of the programs," said Associate Director Gene McClory. "That way, students can study the conditions that created poverty and homelessness."

Along with offering academic credit for certain seminars, the Center for Social Concerns also involves faculty members in its educational programs.

This past fall, they sponsored a workshop on experiential education and the integration of service with academic study for faculty members and local community resource people.

In the future, McNeill would like to see more faculty involvement. "We will try to integrate social concerns in more courses," he said, "to respond to the mission of Notre Dame."

The Center will also continue to work in conjunction with the Alumni Association. Alumni sponsorship at the C.S.C. has increased dramatically due to the enormous popularity of the Summer Service Projects, which provide students with service opportunities and scholarships in alumni club cities.

The Alumni Forum this weekend will allow the 45 participating alumni to discuss other ways that the Alumni Association can serve as a valuable resource for the Center for Social Concerns in the future.

For McNeill, future service and learning opportunities will not be confined to members of the Notre Dame family and the South Bend community. He plans on getting involved in the national service program that President Clinton envisioned in his speech at Notre Dame last fall.

Sibling Revelry

Notre Dame to host sophomores' younger brothers, sisters

By TONY POTTINGER
Accent Writer

Don't be surprised this weekend if you find your dorm overrun with small children. No, they are not local South Bend kids on a field trip or child prodigies being recruited by the University.

The Annual Sophomore Sibling Weekend will bring hundreds of younger brothers and sisters to Notre Dame, according to James Penilla, Sophomore Class President.

The program will provide a unique opportunity for Notre Dame sophomores to share a few days of their collegiate life.

Their younger brothers and sisters often take the back seat during other family weekends such as this weekend's Mother-Daughter Weekend at Saint Mary's or Notre Dame's Junior Parent's Weekend.

Approximately 210 younger siblings of 175 sophomores will travel to campus for the weekend. The weekend is targeted towards 10-16 year olds.

The three day itinerary reads like a page from Freshman Orientation: a movie, an ice cream social, a guest speaker, all culminating with a dance and raffle Saturday evening and mass Sunday morning in the Morrissey chapel.

Plans for the weekend are running really well, according to committee members.

"Everything is running smoothly," said Janet Hathaway, a member of the 1993 Sophomore Sibling Committee.

"The only real problem is the South Bend weather. We've gotten lots of phone calls from parents wondering what their kids should wear."

The gala affair, whose budget is now $10,000, is financed by the participating sophomores through a registration fee. Sophomores and their brothers and sisters will receive two T-shirts and all meals for the weekend.

The sophomore hosts are responsible for all travel and lodging considerations for their siblings. Parietals will be in effect as usual.

"It is not at all like a recruitment thing," Penilla said. "It's a chance for students to show their little brothers and sisters what it's like here."

Cremins returns to South Carolina

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Bobby Cremins, intent on leaving a legacy at the school where he played basketball, changed his mind Wednesday and took the coaching job at South Carolina.

The chances of Cremins leaving Georgia Tech and returning to coach at his alma mater seemed remote Tuesday night when he called athletic director Mike McGee and turned down the South Carolina job.

Then Wednesday morning, Cremins called back and asked for more time to consider. Soon after, he accepted.

Cremins, who spent 12 seasons at Georgia Tech, replaces Steve Newton, who resigned

Jan. 18 after the school's internal report outlined five secondary NCAA violations. He inherits a team that went 9-18 last season.

The 45-year-old silver-haired coach received a five-year contract worth $106,928 per season. McGee said the deal also allows Cremins to earn outside income through television, radio and endorsements and provides for five annual contract extensions.

The arrival of Cremins set off a swarm of emotion among South Carolina fans and players looking for someone to revive a program that has languished since the 1980 retirement of Frank McGuire, the coach for whom Cremins played.

"We were watching the news, and they said he had resigned," said Gamecocks' junior forward Emmett Hall. "We jumped up, started shouting; it was a crazy time."

Cremins said he had thought often about the chance to return to South Carolina and duplicate McGuire's feats.

"It's always been a dream of mine to come back here and coach," he said. "I never really thought it would come to reality. I would like to end my college career where I started it, and that's right here in Columbia."

Cremins said he agonized about the decision.

"The last couple of days, I wanted to come, but the (Tech) players and the Georgia Tech people were holding me down," he said. "Last night, I told Mike (McGee) I really couldn't come because of my players."

But Cremins said he asked McGee if he could sleep on it one more night. McGee tried reaching Cremins on Wednesday morning. When he couldn't, South Carolina issued a statement saying the coach would remain at Georgia Tech. It did a quick about-face when Cremins called again to say he still was thinking about it.

"I told him I needed a few more hours," Cremins said.

The lure of coming back to where he played from 1968-70 finally won out.

"I like to do things instinctively, right or wrong," Cremins said. "And I made a final instinctive decision."

Cremins told Georgia Tech athletic director Homer Rice, spoke to his players, called McGee and headed to Columbia.

Ismail, White hot topics at NFL meetings

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) — The futures of Reggie White and Rocket Ismail became the focus of the NFL's annual meetings Wednesday as the owners concluded their in-house business and turned full attention to signing free agents.

In fact, the normally staid football meetings turned into something akin to baseball as Raghib Ismail the first year of free agency made player deals transcendent and pushed minor rules changes and housekeeping into the background.

On Wednesday, for example: — The San Francisco 49ers officially jumped into the sweepstakes for White by declining to match Atlanta's offer for Pierce Holt. So White's agent, Jimmy Sexton, immediately sat down with 49ers' owner Edward DeBartolo Jr. and president Carmen Policy at poolside, where DeBartolo and Policy prefer to do business.

Raghib Ismail

— Bob Woolf, the agent for Ismail, the 1990 Heisman Trophy winner, arrived to talk to Al Davis of the Los Angeles Raiders about bringing the Rocket back to the United States from Toronto, where he's spent the first two years of his four-year, $18 million deal. Now, Woolf said, Bruce McNall, owner of the Canadian Football League's Toronto Argonauts "suggested we explore what's happening with the NFL."

— Free agent quarterbacks started to move. The Minnesota Vikings announced the signing of Jim McMahon to a contract his agent, Steve Zucker, said could bring him as much as $6 million over two years — much in incentives. The Raiders scheduled a news conference for Thursday, presumably to announce the signing of Jeff Hostetler, whose agent, Marvin Demoff, confirmed that the deal was all but done.

— Leigh Steinberg, who has been parading players through all week, brought in one of the best, linebacker Derrick Thomas of Kansas City, to meet with Detroit among others.

The Irish would also benefit from Strotzman's return, but "We have lots of Advil," said Madden jokingly.

The Irish will travel to Tri-State University for the MIVA's Friday and Saturday, where Kavanaugh said the keys to a strong Irish performance would be confidence and a fast start.

"If we get frustrated early, it will hurt us and may cost us a match," said Kavanaugh. "But if we play strong and keep our confidence up, we'll advance."

"We have the talent to do really well, and we could easily make the playoffs. We just have to do it."

Upcoming matches for the Irish include a home match next Thursday, April 1, against the University of Toledo, and a weekend trip to the University of Michigan on April 3.

Mavericks win second road game

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Jim Jackson scored nine of his 27 points during a 14-2 third-quarter spurt as the Dallas Mavericks won for just the second time in 33 road games, defeating the Washington Bullets 101-98 Wednesday night.

The Mavericks improved their overall record 7-59 with their third victory in five games. The worst record in NBA history was 9-73 by Philadelphia in 1972-73.

Rex Chapman led Washington with 22 points, while Sean Rooks scored 22 for Dallas.

Celtics 115, Heat 109

BOSTON — Reggie Lewis scored 22 points and Dee Brown's basket midway through the fourth quarter gave Boston the lead for good against Miami.

After the Celtics fell behind by five points early in the fourth quarter, Brown's jumper with 6:32 remaining put Boston ahead 97-96, the 26th lead change of the game.

The Heat, who made all 30 of their free throws, were led by Glen Rice with 35 points. Robert Parish had 19 points and 14 rebounds, Brown scored 18 points and Lewis finished with 12 assists for Boston.

Bulls 113, 76ers 100

PHILADELPHIA — Michael Jordan scored 19 of his 43 points on 9-for-10 shooting in the third period, leading Chicago past Philadelphia for its fifth consecutive victory.

Scottie Pippen had 18 points, 10 rebounds and eight assists as the Bulls won for the ninth time in 11 road games despite losing coach Phil Jackson with two technical fouls 27 seconds into the game.

Clarence Weatherspoon had 21 points and Armon Gilliam 20 for Philadelphia, which has lost 21 of 25 games, dropping its home record to 11-21.

Nets 118, Hornets 116

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Derrick Coleman scored a season-high 35 points and Sam Bowie's 20-footer with 30 seconds left lifted New Jersey over Charlotte.

After Bowie's shot broke a 116-116 tie, the Nets made two big defensive plays to preserve the victory, their sixth in a row at home.

First, Rumeal Robinson stripped Larry Johnson of the ball as he tried to maneuver around Coleman with 13 seconds to play. Then, after Rafael Addison missed a pair of free throws with six seconds remaining to give the Hornets another chance, Coleman blocked Muggsy Bogues' jump shot at the buzzer.

Alonzo Mourning led the Hornets with 28 points, while Johnson scored 24. The Nets, who played without Drazen Petrovic because of a strained knee, got 28 points and 12 assists from Robinson and 14 rebounds from Coleman.

Spurs 105, T-Wolves 92

MINNEAPOLIS — David Robinson had 29 points, 11 rebounds and seven assists, lifting San Antonio over Minnesota and spoiling Sidney Lowe's official debut as head coach.

Lowe was interim coach for 34 games after taking over for the fired Jimmy Rodgers on Jan. 11. He was awarded a three-year contract Wednesday although the Timberwolves now have lost five straight games and 10 of 11.

Message from Our Lady,

Dear children! Today I bless you with my motherly blessing and invite you all to conversion. I wish that each of you decides himself for a change of life and that each of you works more in the church, not through words and thoughts but through example, so that your life may be a joyful testimony for Jesus. You cannot say that you are converted because your life must become a daily conversion. In order to understand what you have to do, little children, pray and God will give you what you concretely have to do, and where you have to change. I am with you and place you all under my mantle. Thank you for having responded to my call.

Bozeman leads youthful Cal against Kansas

ST. LOUIS (AP) — On the eve of their Midwest Regional semifinal game against Kansas, the California Golden Bears are confident, eager and enjoying themselves. They're a perfect reflection of their coach.

Only 29, Todd Bozeman has the sixth-seeded Bears on a wonderful ride through the tournament. It's one he won't allow his players to get nervous or worked up about.

"I've just tried to remind the guys that 'Hey, we've been through a lot already, so this should really be a piece of cake and we need to really keep it focused,'" Bozeman said Wednesday.

"A lot of players don't ever get an opportunity like this to play in the Sweet 16. This is a great opportunity, and you can't just let it go by without really taking full advantage of it."

Cal (21-8) is the surprise of the regional, having disposed of two-time defending champion Duke last weekend to reach the final 16 for the first time since 1960. The Bears have done it with Bozeman's steadying influence since the firing of coach Lou Campanelli on Feb. 8.

Would the Bears have been here with Campanelli? The players don't think so.

"I don't think we would have made it this far," Lamond Murray said. "At the time, our minds weren't in it and we didn't have confidence at all."

"Basketball wasn't fun anymore," said Alfred Grigsby.

Bozeman has helped make things fun again. He eats with the players. He suits up with the scout team and practices against the starters. He talks with his players, about basketball or anything else that's on their minds.

"Every coach has his own style, his own personality. I think my ability to communicate is one of my strong points," Bozeman said.

"I've taken the approach that when I was a player, there were things I wanted from a coach that I didn't necessarily get."

Alexander getting used to attention

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Virginia point guard Cory Alexander is basking in the attention he and the Cavaliers are receiving after advancing to the NCAA East Regional.

"I can't think of any writer I haven't been ready for yet," said the sophomore who leads the team with a 19.1 point scoring average and 140 assists.

And no one has to tell Alexander what an impressive showing against Cincinnati on Friday in East Rutherford, N.J., will mean for him and the team.

"You can definitely be made or broken," he said.

Alexander, a second-team all-ACC selection and first-team all-tournament choice, isn't a household name nationally.

"I'm not as well known as Bobby Hurley, but people are starting to hear about me and catch on a little bit," he said.

Alexander said the East Regional's proximity to New York City is important.

Cory Alexander

"I definitely like the attention," he said. "New York is where you want to be ... the type of situation I love to be in. When you're trying to be one of the best players in the country, you have to have people know who you are."

If he excels against Cincinnati, Alexander can look forward to all kinds of attention. "I want everybody to know how good I am," he said. "I'd like them to say, 'This kid is good, and he can be great.' It's all about respect. I just want to be the best."

There have been times Alexander's garrulous nature has gotten him in trouble. Coach Jeff Jones wasn't happy, for example, when Alexander began talking about leaving early for the NBA draft.

"I have a tendency to say things sometimes I wish I wouldn't have said, but, no, I don't think I regret anything."

...CONSIDERATIONS

Ten Years of Witness and Challenge

One of the places that is often lifted up to prove that Notre Dame is some special kind of university is the Center for Social Concerns. Founded ten years ago by a group of students and faculty, working under the direction of Fr. Don McNeill, C.S.C., this Center strives within the Notre Dame environment to promote education and action around the issues of justice and peace, through the use of the techniques of experiential learning.

Every summer, every Christmas holiday, every semester break hundreds of Notre Dame undergraduates travel to Appalachia and Florida, to Washington D.C. and Chicago, to all the inner cities of America to experience, and then reflect upon, the struggles of the poor and the structures of injustice within our society. Programs such as the Urban Plunge, the Summer Service Projects, and the various Break-time one-credit seminars invite our students to seek deeper understanding of the systemic violence and injustice within our society, and to begin to integrate the demanding implications of such realities for their own value systems and career futures.

Throughout the year dozens of student organizations offer volunteer services to the South Bend homeless, the aged, the young and the handicapped. All these groups are coordinated and supported by the staff at the Center. The impact of so many good-willed volunteers on the local situation is immense.

In recent years the Center has worked more and more successfully with various Notre Dame Alumni clubs around the country to provide the challenge and support necessary for Notre Dame alumni and their families to continue to perceive their Notre Dame experience as somehow essentially connected with the service of others. Local clubs sponsor volunteer activities, fundraising projects, and reflection seminars. This weekend a whole group of such alumni gather on campus for an "Alumni Social Concerns Forum," where they will try to help each other understand better their ongoing call to service and the special way their Notre Dame identity shapes and supports this call.

American culture seems to enjoy celebrating anniversaries. Every time you turn around it is the 35th anniversary of your local Ford dealer, or the 65th anniversary of your old high school - looking for a much-needed contribution - or the 6 month anniversary of your roommate's shaky relationship with that oh-so-cute girl from LeMans Hall, and he too is looking for a much-needed contribution, so as to afford a fancy meal down at Tippecanoe Place.

Hallmark cards is probably behind it all, sending subliminal messages to us through the television, and upping their profits in the best American tradition of creating needs.

Nevertheless, the 10th anniversary of the Center for Social Concerns is a fine opportunity to remember again the gift this institution is to the Notre Dame community. If we didn't have it, we'd have to create it.

We at Campus Ministry are strong in our salute. We know the value of the Center's work. Without their programs, and without our relationship to them, our own efforts in religious education and sacramental preparation, in liturgy planning and retreat coordination - all our works - would ring a bit hollow if they did not draw upon and feed into the "hands on" commitment to service and social action which the Center promotes. The integration of faith and action is a special challenge to us all.

Congratulations to the Center for Social Concerns on its 10th anniversary celebrations. Even if you're asking for money, most of us wouldn't dare complain. You're the best bargain around.

Knight and Crum match wits for the first time in March

Louisville head coach Denny Crum, who has won two national championships, will guide his Cardinals in the NCAA tournament tonight against...

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Given the NCAA success of Indiana and Louisville, it's hard to believe these schools with a combined seven national titles have never met before in the tournament.

But Thursday night's Midwest Regional semifinal will be the first March meeting between Bob Knight and Denny Crum.

"We both like to hunt. We both like to fish. We both like to play golf and we both like to coach," Crum said Wednesday in comparing two of the top 10 active coaches in terms of victories or winning percentage. "I guess our styles are a little different in how we teach what we teach, but we are very similar on a lot of ways."

Knight, who won three of Indiana's five national titles, brings his top-ranked and top-seeded Hoosiers (30-3) into the round of 16 off a shaky victory over Xavier, Ohio, and with injuries still a key question.

Crum, the coach both times the Cardinals won it all, has taken fourth-seeded and 15th-ranked Louisville (22-8) a long way from a 2-4 start. According to many, the Cardinals are playing their best basketball of the season.

The winner gets the winner of California-Kansas on Saturday with a Final Four berth at stake. First, there's the matter of Indiana-Louisville.

"It was more difficult to maneuver through Xavier; they were really tough for us," Knight said when asked about handling the injuries this season to guard Pat Graham and then forward Alan Henderson.

"A lot has been made, and deservedly so, of Henderson's injury. But the injury to Pat Graham has been a really big loss to our team. I really don't think Pat has been sufficiently recognized."

Love, The Howard Posse

W. Kentucky hoping for another upset

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Western Kentucky has displayed the talent to get through the NCAA Southeast Regional and into the Final Four for the first time in 22 years.

So why is Ralph Willard so nervous?

"Florida State and our team are very similar," Willard said at a news conference prior to Thursday's semifinal matchup against the Seminoles. "When I look at the game, I haven't found a spot to attack because the match-ups are very similar."

Each team can look in the backcourt if they want to try and disrupt each other's plans.

For Western Kentucky (26-5), it's Mark Bell, who has 75 steals for a team that set a school record this season with 349 thefts. The Hilltoppers reached that mark with 11 steals in the second-round victory over Seton Hall.

Supporting Bell, who also has 120 assists, are forwards Darnell Mee and Bryan Brown. Mee is the scorer of the two, averaging 18.9 points per game, and Bell is next at 16.8 points. The other starters, Brown, Darius Hall and Darrin Horn, contribute 24 points a game to the Hilltoppers attack.

Western Kentucky also can make a shambles of a team's offense. It forces 22 turnovers a game.

The man who makes Florida State (24-9) click is Charlie Ward, playing with a slight dislocation of his left shoulder which makes it necessary for him to wear a brace in practice and in games. The inconvenience hasn't slowed him in the postseason, however.

Ward, the quarterback for coach Bobby Bowden's team, got 15 points, five assists and four steals in the first-round victory over Evansville. In beating Tulane, Ward had only eight points, but handed out six assists. He's hit nine of his 14 field-goal attempts so far.

Still nervous, Ralph?

"With the other teams we have played, there has been one player which we could key on to try and stop the opponent's attack," he said. "But, Florida State is very well balanced and has a potent offense. We must play good team defense."

Here is where Willard may start to worry. Ward is the only one of Florida State's starters who averages in single figures.

Bob Sura, the 1992 ACC rookie of the year currently struggling with his shooting, is still averaging 20 points per game.

Big East clash heads NIT action

BOSTON (AP) — Providence, snubbed by the NCAA tournament, moved into the semifinals of the NIT as Dickey Simpkins matched his career-high of 23 points in a 75-58 victory Wednesday night over Boston College.

The Friars (20-11) capped the first half with an 8-0 run that made the score 31-22 and led by at least nine points the rest of the way.

Gerrod Abram

Boston College (18-13) closed to within 56-45 on Gerrod Abram's 3-pointer with 6:31 left. Then Simpkins and Michael Smith each hit two free throws, and the Eagles never threatened again.

Providence used its superior height to outrebound Boston College 45-23 and win its third game in three tries this season against its Big East rival.

The teams tied for fourth in the conference with Pittsburgh and Connecticut. Pittsburgh was the only one of the four to get to the NCAAs although Providence won seven of its nine games before the selection.

The Friars have won their three games since then, setting up a Monday night semifinal matchup in New York against the winner of Wednesday night's Minnesota-Southern California game. Providence and Georgetown, also in the NIT, are the only Big East teams still playing.

Smith had a game-high 18 rebounds for Providence, whose 21 offensive rebounds were just two fewer than the Eagles' total. Simpkins added nine rebounds. The Friars have four starters 6-foot-7 or taller, while Boston College has three starters 6-4 or shorter.

Malcolm Huckaby and Abram led Boston College with 14 points each.

Minnesota 76, USC 58

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — Voshon Lenard scored 25 points and ignited a decisive 18-7 run Wednesday night as the Minnesota Gophers advanced to the NIT semifinals with a 76-58 victory over Southern Cal.

The Gophers (20-10) will play in New York on Monday against Providence, a 75-58 winner over Boston College in another quarterfinal matchup Wednesday.

The win gave Minnesota 20 wins for the sixth time, the first since 1989-90 when the Gophers were 23-9 and reached the quarterfinals of the NCAA tournament.

USC (18-12) shot 32 percent (17 of 53) from the floor, including 7 of 34 on 3-pointers. The Gophers held Oklahoma to 31.3 percent shooting in their second-round NIT victory.

Minnesota took a 30-28 lead with 56.7 seconds left in the first half when USC's Lorenzo Orr was called for goaltending on Lenard's layup. Townsend Orr gave the Gophers a four-point halftime lead with a driving layup with 4.3 seconds left.

After Orr scored to open the second half to make it 30-28, Minnesota outscored the Trojans 14-2 to lead 46-33 with 12:53 to play.

Alabama-Birmingham 61, SW Missouri St. 52

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Flu-ridden Robert Shannon scored 18 points and Alabama-Birmingham finally had an NIT game that wasn't decided in the final seconds, defeating Southwest Missouri State 61-52 in the quarterfinals Wednesday.

The Blazers (20-13) advanced to the semifinals Monday at Madison Square Garden, where they will play the winner of Thursday's game between Georgetown and Miami of Ohio. It also gave coach Gene Bartow his 10th 20-win season in 15 years as UAB coach.

The Blazers, who reached the NIT final four in 1989, won their first two tournament games this year by a total of three points.

Southwest Missouri State (20-11) started off quickly in the second half, going up 35-30 with an 8-2 run. The Blazers responded with four straight baskets and went ahead for good on Clarence Thrash's layup with 8:12 remaining.

The Bears got within 55-52 on Tony Graves' two free throws with 2:39 left, but that was their final points. Southwest Missouri failed to score on its final five trips down the floor.

Senior Chuck Coleman's absence from last night's match almost cost the Irish a victory, as Michigan State gave them all they could handle in a 4-3 thriller.

Irish sneak past Spartans

By JONATHAN JENSEN

The Notre Dame men's tennis team survived a scare by the Michigan State Spartans last night, as Will Forsyth fought off a stubborn Mashiska Washington in the top singles match to wrap up a 4-3 win for the 16th-ranked Irish in front of a boisterous home crowd.

Though the Spartans are not ranked, they are one of the strongest teams in the Midwest, and they more than proved that fact last night.

Forsyth's match against Washington was the only one to go into three sets all night, as Forsyth came back after losing the first set 6-4 to dominate Washington 6-2, 6-3 in the final two stanzas.

Washington is the MSU's top-ranked player and usually plays two-singles, but the freshman played up a notch for coach Gene Orlando and almost pulled off the upset. With the Irish's two-singles player, Chuck Coleman, having to sit out since he played in an extra tournament this year and was above the amount of matches allowed by the NCAA, Orlando put Washington at one-singles in an attempt to clinch the match.

The Irish started the match by winning all three doubles matches and winning the doubles point. Forsyth played with junior Allan Lopez, who was selected for El Salvador's Davis Cup team, and the two disposed of Wade Martin and Brad Pancer, 9-7. Mark Schmidt and Todd Wilson then won a tiebreaker 7-5 to salt a 9-8 win at two-singles and Ron Rosas and Chris Wojtalik pulled out an 8-5 victory at the three spot.

Where the Irish got into trouble was at the three through five spots in the singles lineup. Irish coach Bob Bayliss had warned of the Spartans' talent at the middle-to-upper slots, saying, "They

Kentucky battles Wake Forest tonight in NCAs

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — For 31 games this season, Kentucky's Wildcats have done pretty much whatever they've wanted. Coach Rick Pitino figures that's about to change.

■ More NCAs/ pages 16-17

Wake Forest's bump-and-bruise, in-your-face style had Pitino sounding concerned on the eve of their meeting in Thursday's Southeast Regional semifinals.

"They're very, very physical," Pitino said. "If you want to cut, they don't let you cut. They hold you off with their forearms — and their forearms are very big. They body you quite a bit. They're very aggressive inside."

"When you've seen wins on the road like they've had, you know they're a very physical team."

That list includes Atlantic Coast Conference victories at Duke, Virginia and Georgia Tech.

"They have survived the very tough ACC and survived it well," Pitino said.

Now the Demon Deacons (21-8) get to try to slow a Kentucky team that loves to run and averages nearly 10 3-pointers per game.

"We're going to try to speed it up as much as possible," said Pitino, whose Wildcats (28-3) have won eight in a row. "But we've got to make sure that whether we play fast or slow, we must take good shots. That will be the key because I think this is a team that matches up very well with us."

Nowhere is that matchup more evident than at the power forward spot, where all eyes will be on Kentucky's Jamal Mashburn and Wake Forest's Rodney Rogers.

Men's volleyball falls to 14-5 with loss

By KEVIN DOLAN
Sports Writer

It was a good news/bad news story for the Irish men's volleyball team Tuesday night.

The bad news came at the end of the third game, when Wisconsin-Milwaukee finished off a three-game sweep (15-6, 15-12, 15-10) to drop the Irish's record to 14-5.

The good news, according to assistant coach Dan Kavanaugh, is that the seeds are being sown for a strong performance at the weekend's MIVA tournament.

Despite the sweep, "We played a lot better than we did Friday night," said Kavanaugh, referring to a spotty 3-2 loss to Central Michigan. "We hit a lot smarter tonight, as opposed to Friday."

The Irish knew that UW-Milwaukee, their first varsity opponent in some time, would be a formidable opponent, but players and coach felt that the Irish's performance was more than satisfactory.

"The only way we could beat them was to do the basic things really well," said Kavanaugh. "We did, which gives me a good feeling about the tourney this weekend."

Despite the tough opponent, the Irish were undaunted during the match, the importance of which was not lost on Kavanaugh and outside hitter Brian Ceponis.

"We handled ourselves really well," said Ceponis. "We weren't too intimidated."

Kavanaugh added, "A lot of club teams come in with a lousy attitude because of the difference between a varsity and a club team."

However, "UW's coach (Mike Fried) said that he was really impressed with how we maintained our composure. We stood right up to them."

The Irish were handicapped from the start. Middle hitter Matt Strottman was hobbled by a bad knee, which he re-injured in the match, and saw limited duty. The Irish were also without the services of backup Chris Murdy, who flew home Tuesday to attend his grandfather's funeral.

The Irish hung tough against UW-Milwaukee in the early moments of game one. The score was knotted at 4-4, and both teams went through two serving rotations before scoring.

However, when UW scored, they scored in bunches. Their disciplined, consistent play, fueled by yet another Irish passing breakdown, led to a 15-6 UW victory.

UW pulled their starters in the second game, and the Irish were able to jump to a 10-6 lead. "We were serving well," said Ceponis, "which took their offense out of it." The game was tied at 12-12, but, as Pat Madden said, "Three hits later, they won it," due again to passing errors.

Game three, a loose affair, saw Leo Casas move to the middle to replace Strottman, opening up the outside for rookies Miguel Ascencio and Bill Raney. The Irish were beaten 15-10 to end the match in three games.

According to coach Kavanaugh, passing and defense will have to improve for the Irish to make an impact at the MIVA's.

"Our passing has been spotty... we have to get some consistency there. And our anticipation could be better on defense."
