Speakers differ widely in the AIDS argument

BY TRACY CRINION
News Writer

The third part in the Blessed Mother Lecture Series, "The Compassion of the Sorrowful Mother," held last night in the Hesburgh Library Auditorium featured five lectures on AIDS by speakers from both Notre Dame and the local community.

Father Thomas McDermott, director of Campus Ministries, said that the Feast of Our Lady of the Seven Sorrows was the ideal moment to bring to mind AIDS, "truly one of the great sorrows of the present day." McDermott felt that the feast should be used to show "love, quiet union and sympathy for those who suffer."

Featured speakers were Fr. Ronald Raab of St. Joseph Parish, also chairman of the Religion Committee of AIDS ministries, Sr. Ethne Kennedy, associate director of AIDS Ministries/AIDS Assist, Carol Seager, director of University Health Services, Professor Charles Rice of the Notre Dame Law School and Dr. Robert Devetski, an infectious diseases clinician in South Bend.

Raab, involved in AIDS ministries for over seven years, urges people to "break open their hearts a bit more" to break through the walls of fear and silence surrounding the AIDS epidemic. For each of Our Lady's Seven Sorrows, he offered a fear regarding AIDS.

Raab said he prays that those who have turned away from those in need will overcome their fears and show compassion.

Kennedy offered an ecumenical response to the AIDS crisis. The Catholic Network has over twenty-four groups that provide education, information and support for AIDS patients or anyone interested.

While many cases of AIDS are contracted by means which the Church finds immoral, said Kennedy, "the AIDS experience confronts Christians with humanity, the meaning of life, the meaning of death," and there is much to be learned about God through compassion for the sick.

Seager, University Health Services Director, spoke of a rising tide of change on campus with regard to the AIDS crisis. "We (UHS) used to go around on campus to speak about AIDS—and no one would show up."

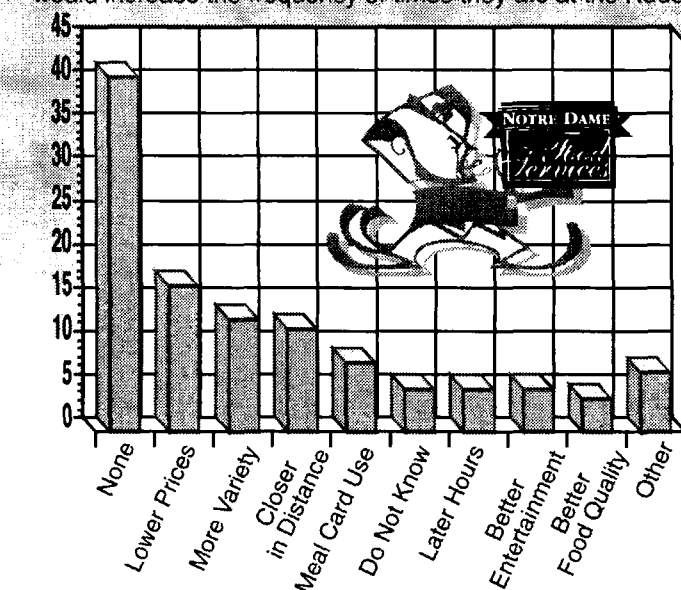

However, she said at the Notre Dame Student Activities Night, over sixty people signed up for Students With AIDS Training (SWAT) as volunteers willing to work with AIDS

Bruno's rejected thus far at the Huddle

A proposal to open a branch of Bruno's Pizza in the Huddle has recently been rejected by the Office of Business Affairs and University Food Services.

Bruno's co-owner John Cataldo drafted and submitted the proposal in July after two meetings with Student Body President Frank Flynn. Although this proposal has been turned down, discussion over bringing outside vendors to campus continues. Currently, efforts are underway to create a survey to gauge customer interest in commercial vendors at LaFortune.

"Originally, the intention was to sit down and talk about what we wanted, but there was no clear reasoning defending our choice of Bruno's. The University needs the research before they can make an investment," said Flynn.

Bruno's proposal was rejected for a number of reasons, according to Dave Prentkowski, director of food services.

"It would have been a financial drain on Notre Dame. Our primary objectives are satisfying the customer. Customer satisfaction is more than just bringing in a popular item. It's how much that item costs," said Prentkowski.

Greider lectures ND on democracy

By DAVID CLAIRMONT
News Writer

With concerned optimism and with a challenge for all Americans who hope for change, William Greider, political columnist for Rolling Stone magazine, presented the sixteenth annual Joseph Molony Memorial Lecture.

"We have lost our set of operating principles which we call democracy," said Greider. This proposal, the thesis of his new book, "Who Will Tell the People: The Betrayal of American Democracy," captivated a packed auditorium yesterday evening in the Kroc Institute for International Peace Studies.

Greider identified a "crucible for the country," signals with which to contact those people both disenchanted and confused with the politics of modern government. His discussion began by citing the end of the Cold War as a dispersal of the American spirits, united for so many years by the former Soviet Union, a common enemy.

He said the past forty-five years could be categorized as a period of "militaristic socialism," during which time considerable amounts of the United States' time and resources were spent constructing an arsenal which is not helping us to fight, or at best peaceably coexist with, our new enemy.

Greider said the restructured global economy, our newest and most complex adversary to date, exhibits two characteristics which, although fundamental, are just beginning to appear: the mobility of business capital and the immobility of labor.

With the lowering of the Iron Curtain, and three billion people entering the global economy's labor force, all business is in transition, according to Greider. He identifies the split of our society into two divisions. Those involved with corporate decision making and control, as well as the many established professionals, are finding these changes quite profitable while the rest of the labor force is adjusting to a declining level of prosperity, he said.

American democracy is failing, Greider said, as a result of the transfer of power in governmental decision making. To no one's surprise, the political parties of the United States have abandoned their primary responsibility to maintain the connection between society and the government which decides its condition.

The key shift in political power has been to the multinational corporations, which, unchecked by a debilitated organization of labor, has been "doing our politics for us," said Greider. The representation of varying interests, he said, is becoming more difficult because the immigrant groups, predominantly Asian and Hispanic, are not embraced by the current power structure.

Reviving democracy will be a long and difficult, though not impossible task, said Greider. A newly invigorated labor movement is necessary to "enforce shared prosperity" and unite the world's helpless into a core of political ideals. Corporations will remain a stumbling block as they consistently seek what Greider characterized as the "lowest common denominator," the cheapest labor and the least environmental and legal restrictions.

"If we don't work to pull the bottom up," said Greider, "the bottom will pull us down." American business must take care to train unskilled laborers for introduction into the workplace, because the rest of the world is already busy with exactly that task.

Greider said to his audience that the changes which must come will be historical plateaus. A new civic duty has arrived hand in hand, he said, with a new global environment to "reexamine the conventional wisdom," whether it has passed from the previous generation or been confirmed by a media which has sold to the highest bidder. He challenged that all must be ready to evaluate what has come before and speak, with vision, of what is to come.

T-shirts won't sell if Irish win (or not)

Saturday's victory over Michigan pleased everyone throughout the country, with two notable exceptions: the Michigan fans, of course, and the t-shirt companies.

The t-shirt companies? Yep.

They're not very happy, and they have good reasons not to be. Notre Dame is now one big game closer to going undefeated and winning the national title. And you know what winning the national title means? Prestige? Glory? National recognition? No. It means t-shirts.

Blue ones, green ones, white ones. The Bookstore even sells...red ones?

Brian Seiler
Viewpoint Copy
Editor

Naturally, you would think, a national championship for Notre Dame would make the t-shirt companies jubilant, for that's their cue to start churning out trendy t-shirts to Irish fans everywhere, even the red ones.

But if Notre Dame goes undefeated, the most profitable shirts will go the way of the dinosaurs. They only show up when Notre Dame does not win the national championship.

Those shirts, that require a river of expensive inks read like this: "Notre Dame beat Kalamazoo, and Kalamazoo beat Florida State, and Florida State beat Eastern Southern Iowa Tech Northern, and ESITN forfeited their last two games, so naturally, by all standards of logic, Notre Dame should be crowned as high and mighty king of the sport of football." These shirts are a gold mine for T-shirt manufacturers, both legal and illegal operations included.

They also make me want to puke.

Any school that has to whine like a starving baby about unfair rankings deserves to be ridiculed in the national spotlight. Talk about an inferiority complex! A great University should not have to tell everyone how great it is.

That's part of the Notre Dame mystique. We have always been silent underdogs, not pitiful spoiled brats who burst into tears at the devastating calamity of being mis-ranked by a bunch of cigar-chomping, Irish-bashing AP tyrants.

The underdog savors the flavor of victory much more deeply than the favorite. The University has always thrived on surprise, come-from-behind victories instigated by the underdog mentality to over-achieve. The "cry-baby" shirts work against the underdog ethos. Plus, nobody ever stands still long enough for me to read the damn things.

So I guess I have to design my own shirt for you silly people to wear. You know what it will look like? No scores, no helmets, no nasty comments about those Trojans, or those Hurricanes, or those Gators.

Just plain blue with "Notre Dame" printed across the top in green letters. Below the school name it will have "Underdogs" written proudly in gold capital letters.

And on the back? Well, it has to be something modest and simple, humble yet elegant. One word which says what we all feel...like a great big "NOT!"

Execution pace highest since 1962

WASHINGTON

States already have executed 32 prisoners this year, 14 in Texas alone, and more than in any year since 1962. The pace likely will quicken because federal courts are "more and more willing to let states pull the switch," one death penalty foe said Wednesday.

When 31-year-old murderer Joe Louis Wise went to Virginia's electric chair late Tuesday, he became the 220th person executed in America since 1977, when Gary Gilmore's death before a Utah firing squad ended a 10-year hiatus for capital punishment.

Last year there were 31 executions.

"The death penalty is the violent response of a violent society to the violence it both fears and is fascinated by," said Herman Schwartz, an American University law professor. "Violence in movies and television is pervasive, so it must be a popular commodity. The death penalty represents revenge against vicious people whose exploits are portrayed in movies and on television."

Schwartz called death penalty opponents "a feeble minority."

Leigh Dingerson of the National Coalition to Abolish the Death Penalty called the rising numbers of executions "discouraging but not wholly unexpected... The number of men and women on death rows is approaching 3,000. It's inevitable more of them will be exhausting their appeals," she said.

Dingerson said the nation's courts have grown impatient with capital punishment disputes. "We're seeing more and more cases tossed out of the courts, especially federal courts, that would have been heard five years ago," she said. "The courts are more and more willing to let states pull the switch."

Man involved in sting sues Perot

DALLAS

A California man sued Ross Perot on Wednesday, claiming the Texas billionaire never paid him for investigating reports of Republican dirty tricks allegedly played on Perot during last year's presidential campaign.

Scott Barnes, a former police officer whose credibility has been questioned by authorities, said he told the Perot campaign that the Bush-Quayle camp was trying to get tapes of Perot's conversations.

The FBI mounted an undercover operation but said the decision was based on more than just information from Barnes, who the agency said it believed was "unreliable."

As part of the FBI investigation, an undercover agent told the head of the Bush-Quayle Texas campaign that he could give him secret tapes of Perot's conversations. The agent was rebuffed.

At one point during the campaign, Perot said he believed the Republicans were trying to smear him and his family and disrupt his daughter's wedding. He said he briefly dropped out of the race because of the fears about the wedding.

Former President Bush dismissed the allegations as "crazy."

Barnes filed another federal lawsuit against Perot earlier this year but dropped it.

Perot spokeswoman Sharon Holman said she had not seen a copy of the latest lawsuit.

"I would assume it's the same thing that was involved before, and there's just not a single shred of truth to support what he's saying," she said.

The lawsuit seeks unspecified damages.

Barnes said that between May and November 1992 Perot had him "maintain covert contact with senior ranking individuals of the Bush-Quayle Re-election and Campaign Committee" to investigate dirty tricks allegations.

Hijacked jetliner lands, air pirates surrender

ULLENSAKER

Grenade-wielding hijackers, believed to be Iranians, forced a Russian passenger jet to fly to Norway, then surrendered Thursday after authorities promised to consider their demand for political asylum.

All passengers and crew were released unharmed, said government spokeswoman Kjersti Skjaerven. Justice Minister Grete Faremo told a news conference in Oslo that 58 people in all were aboard the jetliner.

The twin-engine Tupolev-134 was seized over southern Russia on Wednesday, outward bound from Azerbaijan. It stopped in Kiev, Ukraine to refuel, then landed at Gardermoen charter airport at Ullensaker, 25 miles north of Oslo.

After hours of negotiations, four air pirates descended the steps of the Aeroflot jet smiling, with their hands in the air and jackets over their heads, government spokesman Gunnar Angeltveit reported.

The jet had sat for hours in the dark, surrounded by ambulances, fire engines, and armored vehicles. About 300 heavily armed military and police troops were deployed at the airport.

The Justice Minister said there were three hijackers and "one presumed accomplice whose role in the hijacking is still not known."

Three of the men sought asylum, but the fourth did not, Regional Police Chief Knut Austad reported.

Another government official at the airport, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said he saw all four with grenades taped to their bodies. Police said dogs were sent aboard the plane, parked near a forest, to search for explosives.

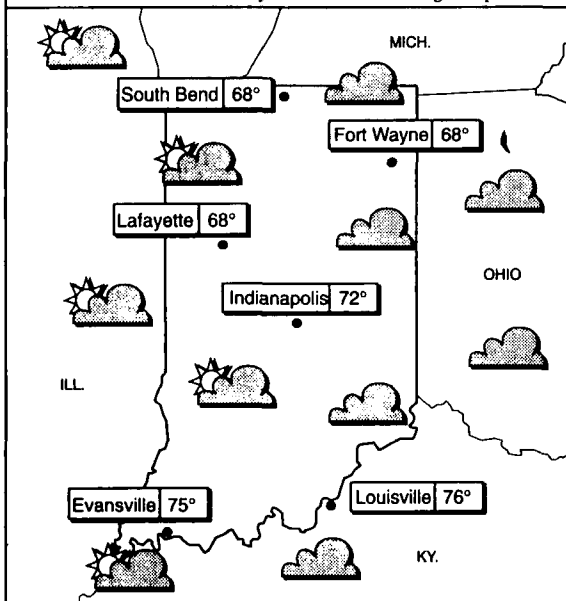

The pilot, Capt. Mikhail Osavin, said the hijackers had threatened the crew with hand grenades and explosives, said a Russian security spokesman, Alexei Zakharov.

Ukrainian and Azerbaijani officials said the hijackers were Iranians, but Norwegian officials refused to say where the hijackers were from.

SMC's FUERZA to reorganize for 1993

BY BERNADETTE PAMPUCH
News Writer

FUERZA, Spanish for "strength," a multi-cultural organization at Saint Mary's has reorganized after disbanding one year ago to unite women of Hispanic backgrounds on campus, according to Co-President Teresa Marquez.

Founded by 1993 alumna Delia Garcia in the spring of 1992, lack of participation forced the group to dissolve during the 1992-93 school year. Under the leadership of co-presidents Marquez and Gloria Garza, the club is attempting to once again promote increased diversity in the Saint Mary's community and an understanding of a common cultural heritage within the group itself.

"I know people don't want the stereotype that Saint Mary's is a homogeneous campus," Garza said. "We're different, but I think in one aspect we all have common backgrounds," she said in reference to Hispanic students.

FUERZA aims to give members a sense of belonging that is often hard to find on campus, according to Marquez.

"It's very difficult being a minority, or what you would (call) a person of color on this campus because there's not as many people that understand where you're coming from," Marquez said. "Sometimes when you're with people of your same culture it makes you feel stronger, it makes you feel a little more comfortable in what you're doing."

By focusing on both the Saint Mary's and Notre Dame communities, FUERZA is trying to change some of the perceptions about students from both schools.

"I'm trying to make sure we forget about the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's 'stigma' and remember that we're just Hispanics and we're all here trying to get a higher education and we're all trying to do something better for ourselves as a people," Garza said.

FUERZA will hold an organizational meeting at 6:15 p.m. in the Holy Cross Hall parlor to plan activities for the year and involvement in community activities.

"The basic premise right now is to get ourselves strong, situated as a club on campus, make ourselves known, and give the underclassmen the opportunity to feel out what they want to do and make it stronger so that (FUERZA) will be able to stay a club for the following years," Marquez said.

Gunmen wound 11 U.N. people

MOGADISHU

Gunmen wounded 11 people inside U.N. peacekeeping headquarters in the Somali capital on Wednesday, and helicopter-borne American forces killed two Somali militiamen in a separate encounter.

Italian U.N. peacekeepers also suffered casualties when they came under fire Wednesday evening at Mogadishu port, said Maj. David Stockwell, a U.N. military spokesman. He said he had no details, but unconfirmed reports said one Italian was killed and another seriously wounded.

Other mortar attacks by Somalis killed a Somali child and wounded 17 other Somalis, U.N. peacekeepers said.

The State Department, meanwhile, warned Americans not to travel in the country after receiving reports that Somali warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid has ordered his militia to take U.S. citizens hostage if he is captured.

Stockwell said the daylight mortar attacks could signal a new phase of the assault on U.N. peacekeepers. He noted that mortars have often been fired at the U.N. compound, but only at night.

Stockwell said the attackers who fired on the U.N. compound Wednesday were believed to be followers of Aidid. They are blamed for previous attacks that have killed 48 peacekeepers and wounded more than 175.

Rival guerillas gun down 87 tribal people in India

Associated Press

NEW DELHI

Suspected tribal insurgents in northeastern India lined up people of a rival tribe and raked them with gunfire, killing at least 87, a news agency reported Wednesday.

The massacre in the remote hilly state of Manipur, on the border with Burma, occurred Tuesday night, United News of India said. The region is 1,500 miles east of New Delhi.

Police suspect militants from the outlawed Nationalist Socialist Council of Nagaland who want to set up a separate nation comprising parts of Manipur and the neighboring Indian state of Nagaland.

The guerrillas, from the Naga tribe, surrounded a village inhabited by Kuki tribespeople at dawn, dragged the men out of their huts, lined them up and shot them, Manipur's police Deputy Inspector General W. K. Lenjun was quoted as saying. At least 87 people were killed.

The Huddle now operates with the intent to break even, according to Prentkowski. Any arrangement with a third party introduces the goal of making a profit and may increase prices, he said.

"If you allow a company to come in and run it, they're not going to be in the customer service mode," said Prentkowski.

"We don't have to have a surplus and we don't want to zero out. We're not in the business to make a profit, and we know for a fact that students don't want prices to go up."

Prentkowski cited a food services survey taken last October to support his claims.

Prepared by Jill Riggs, project coordinator, the survey was intended to gather information about current and potential Huddle customers.

According to the survey, 76 percent of students said that price was the biggest influence in their pizza buying decisions. In the long run, the University is concerned that students will not be willing to pay higher prices for food if commercial vendors are brought to the Huddle, Prentkowski said.

"The only thing that Bruno's has going for it is that it is known by current Notre Dame students and they have quality product. But is there enough new revenue?" said Prentkowski.

The initial draft of Bruno's proposal asked that Notre Dame supply any non-food products, some new equipment, utilities, and beverages to the operations, and also employ students to work each shift. Bruno's would furnish the managers as well as the ingredients for the pizza.

The pioneer menu would only have pizza, but Bruno's would later expand to ravioli or other pasta. Although prices were not determined in this proposal, Bruno's suggested that the University receive 30 percent of the revenue and Bruno's the remaining 70 percent.

Flynn acknowledged that the initial proposal was clearly a first draft and was "obviously slanted towards Bruno's."

"They had no clue what the University wanted," said Flynn.

Bruno's presented its proposition on July 15 after it was approached by Flynn and given a tour of the Huddle facilities. The plan to bring a commercial vendor to LaFortune originated in Flynn's campaign for student government president last year, he said.

A Student Senate task force on university food services was established at the end of the 1992-93 school year, and efforts to set up meetings with Bruno's followed.

Flynn then sent the proposal to Vice President for Business Affairs James Lyphout's office, who subsequently gave it to Prentkowski for evaluation.

"We didn't really consider it a proposition we wanted to pursue," said Lyphout. "I think we really need to look at why students are interested in off-campus restaurants. I think students go off campus to get a change of scenery and also to purchase alcohol. They can't do that on campus."

Prentkowski echoed Lyphout's concern.

A Bruno's operation at the Huddle may not be as successful or popular as the off-campus restaurants because of the need to escape from campus, he said.

"Our research shows that people go to Bruno's because it's a getaway," said Prentkowski.

According to Cataldo, during its 17 years of operation, Bruno's has successfully established a sizable clientele in the Notre Dame community. He credits the family atmosphere and the quality of the Bruno's products for its success.

"When we heard about this, we were very excited about it. It's just a huge opportunity. Bruno's could create a different atmosphere in LaFortune," said Cataldo.

The student senate task force is preparing to work with food services and a marketing graduate student on a Huddle survey.

"You can find out a lot from a survey. We may find out that the menu itself needs to be changed, not necessarily that we need to bring in outside vendors," said Lyphout. "[The idea] is not inherently bad, but we just have to make sure we know what we're getting into."

AIDS

Patients.

UHS movement for AIDS testing, the sale of AIDS victim ID bracelets by student government, and other trends on campus mark increased tolerance and sympathy for victims of the fatal disease, according to Kennedy.

Rice spoke on aspects of legal discrimination against AIDS patients, saying that while AIDS patients deserve compassion, intra-venous drug users and homosexuals are generally not legally entitled to the rights granted to others.

Citing Bible passages and a statute passed by King Henry VIII against homosexuals, Rice supported legal discrimination against homosexuals, whether they have AIDS or not, in the military, day care, adoption and foster care.

"Homosexual relationships cannot be put on the same par with married heterosexual couples without undermining the American family," said Rice.

Devetski, a South Bend infectious diseases clinician showed slides portraying the terrible growth of AIDS since the first officially reported case in 1981. The total number of AIDS cases has increased from 35,238 in 1989 to 47,106.

Other disturbing increases in AIDS cases, said Devetski, are where the child contracts the virus in the womb of the mother (perinatal). He said that since 1989, perinatal cases have increased 27 percent. Cases where the victims were not aware of any risks they had taken to contract the virus have increased 88 percent, he added.

Tug-of-war develops in Middle East over peace

By SALAH NASRAWI

Associated Press

TUNIS

Palestinian opponents of Yasser Arafat's fledgling peace deal with Israel pursued their campaign against it on Wednesday, hoping to overturn it by democratic or violent means.

Arafat, facing the deepest split in the Palestine Liberation Organization since it was formed nearly 30 years ago, returned to his headquarters and called immediate meetings on how to rally support and heal the leadership rift.

His return came two days after he signed the landmark peace treaty with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin in Washington. The accord grants limited self-rule to Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip and the West Bank town of Jericho and sets up a timetable for expanding autonomy to other areas and negotiating a permanent agreement.

Opponents consider it seriously flawed, complaining that it does not guarantee the creation of an independent state or the return of refugees and ignores the critical issue of the status of Jerusalem.

Arafat scheduled meetings with senior aides to discuss the crisis, PLO officials said.

He also was to call meetings soon of the PLO Executive Committee, which has suffered five defections because of the accord, and the 18-member ruling Central Committee of his own mainstream Fatah faction.

"God willing, it (the accord) will pave the way for similar peace accord on all Arab fronts," Arafat said on his return.

"It started with Palestine. Yesterday (Tuesday) it was Jordan, and later on it will be Syria and Lebanon," he predicted.

Two of the pact's staunchest opponents, George Habash and Nayef Hawatmeh, met in Tripoli with Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi. Gadhafi has criticized the pact and has said in a nationally televised speech that Libya "will not keep quiet about this mockery."

Protesting farmers block the traffic around Paris

By TERRIL JONES
Associated Press

PARIS
Thousands of farmers disgruntled over a European-American trade accord blocked roads and rail lines around Paris with hay bales, cars and farm equipment Wednesday, disrupting traffic.

The farmers vowed to block traffic again Thursday, after setting up 20 roadblocks and obstacles along major highways leading to Paris and blocking some train lines, including one high-speed TGV line, on Wednesday.

The farmers are protesting an agreement reached last November between the 12-nation European Community and the United States on agricultural subsidies.

Under the accord, EC governments will lower subsidies to farmers, reduce harvests of certain grain crops and cut exports of subsidized agricultural products by 21 percent.

The French government has threatened to veto the accord, but farm groups want to be sure it doesn't back down at a crucial Sept. 20 meeting of EC foreign and agricultural ministers called to discuss the EC-U.S. accord.

France argues the accord is unfair because it requires more concessions from the EC than from the United States, which refuses to renegotiate it.

Agriculture Minister Jean Puech on Wednesday urged France's EC partners to reach a "clear, clean decision to reopen negotiations with the Americans."

On Wednesday, about 10,000 farmers participated in the protest, said Jacques Laigneau, president of Rural Coordination, the grassroots group organizing the protest.

Cuba announces it has a major farm reform plan

By JOHN RICE
Associated Press

MEXICO CITY
Communist Cuba took another step into market economics Wednesday, saying it will set up cooperatives on state land and let farmers share the profits.

Cuba's Catholic bishops, meanwhile, came forth with their boldest criticism of Fidel Castro in decades and challenged the government to make political as well as economic reforms.

The cooperatives, announced on the front page of the Communist Party daily Granma, are the latest in a series of retreats from pure socialism.

Castro is trying to shore up the economy, which deteriorated sharply after Cuba lost its trade partners renounced Communism.

"This is the first time the Cuban government steps back from an effort to expand state control over agriculture," said Jorge Dominguez, a Cuba expert at the Inter-American Dialogue in Washington, D.C. "Instead, it is creating an important zone of independence."

The party Politburo said cooperatives will be set up on state farms, using the land for an indefinite period. They will still sell all of their harvest to the state, which will tell them what main crops to grow and also set production goals.

But the farmers will split the profits among themselves and will have a greater share in managing the enterprise, handling their own banking and buying materials on credit.

"If they have long-term, indefinite tenure, that gives them virtually all of the incentives that private ownership does," said economist Archibald Ritter, a Cuba expert at Carlton University in Ottawa, Canada.

Most of Cuba's land is held in massive state farms. It was not immediately clear how much would be converted to cooperatives.

The announcement said the party hopes "to make agriculture more efficient . . . by applying formulas that motivate and give incentives to men . . . to achieve greater volumes of production."

It was a major shift from Cuban Communists' long efforts to boost output with moral exhortations rather than money.

But Cuba's farm sector, like the rest of its economy, is in crisis due to a lack of fuel and fertilizer that once came from the Soviet Union and other allies. Critics claim it is also inefficient and mismanaged.

This year's crucial sugar harvest was the worst in 30 years and food production has not been enough to keep most Cubans from losing weight, even though the socialist system distributes food fairly evenly.

Castro announced in July that Cuba would be forced to move away from the socialist path it prefers in order to save its political system.

Since then, Cuba has legalized possession of foreign currency as well as a broad array of occupations that had been state monopolies.

On Tuesday, the island's Roman Catholic bishops issued a 17-page letter suggesting the government "should eradicate some irritating policies," such as "the exclusive and omnipotent character of the official ideology" and "the limitations imposed on self-liberty."

Would-be President faxes home

By FRANK AIGBOGUN
Associated Press

LAGOS
The would-be president of Nigeria faxed his people a message on Wednesday urging them to be patient with his embarrassing six-week absence.

The extended stay abroad of Moshood Abiola, once heralded as the savior of democracy in this country, prompted his top supporters to leave Wednesday for London to persuade him to come back.

The delegation is being led by his running mate, Baba Gana Kingibe, who has urged Abiola to return to the country to claim his mandate.

Abiola's critics have used his absence to try to argue that he lacks presidential mettle.

The wealthy publishing and transportation magnate was the apparent winner of the June 12 presidential election that was to return this nation of 90 million people to civilian government after a decade of military rule.

Days after the election, dictator Gen. Ibrahim Babangida annulled the results, plunging the nation into political paralysis and widespread strikes that crippled the economy.

Babangida resigned under pressure on Aug. 26, naming a government of civilian supporters that have scheduled new presidential elections on Feb. 19.

Abiola left the country at the height of the crisis on Aug. 3 and has repeatedly reneged on promises to return home, saying he feared for his life.

While away he has lobbied Washington and other Western governments for support.

Rights groups fault Clinton

By SONYA ROSS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON

Black members of Congress accused President Clinton Wednesday of failing to combat rising American racism and said he lacks a civil rights policy.

The politicians and other prominent blacks attending the Congressional Black Caucus' annual meeting also pointed to bittersweet census figures that told of solid educational progress among blacks, but dimmer prospects for a better life overall.

The caucus said Clinton's positions on foreign policy, housing, crime and the North American Free Trade Agreement all pose problems for blacks.

"It begs the question: Where are we as a people? And what flag of registry does this ship of state fly?" asked Rep. Kweisi Mfume, D-Md., the caucus chairman. "We are, at this moment, a nation in grave distress."

Timed for the caucus' gathering, the Census Bureau reported Wednesday that more black Americans got college degrees in the 1980s, but they still receive lower pay than white graduates for many jobs.

Census figures show the number of black men 25 and over with at least a bachelor's degree rose from 7.7 percent in 1980 to 11.9 percent in 1992. Among black women, the rate rose from 8.1 percent to 12 percent.

But the annual median salary for black college graduates was $30,910, while the median salary for white college graduates was $37,490.

A larger proportion of white men than black men were employed in executive, administrative and managerial jobs, 32 percent to 26 percent. Black male college graduates in these fields were paid about 77 percent of the amount earned by white male college grads.

Also, 30 percent of black families were poor, with unemployment rates for blacks running more than twice that of whites, 14 percent to 6 percent.

"Our condition has always been two-fold: too much poverty, not enough self-love," said Cornel West, professor of black and religious studies at Princeton University. "We've been between a rock and a hard place since we've been here."

That's why Clinton needs to take an immediate, firm stance on civil rights enforcement, said Lani Guinier.

Clinton seeks support for NAFTA around country

By NANCY BENAC

NEW ORLEANS

With crates of potential exports towering over him, President Clinton promoted a free-trade pact before friendly dockworkers Wednesday and bristled at all the attention being paid to Ross Perot's counteroffensive.

Visiting the bustling New Orleans port less than a year after George Bush made the same trip to promote the same trade pact — and his re-election — Clinton told a warehouse crowd: "This is a good deal. It's a winner. We ought to take it."

In opening his fall drive to get North American Free Trade Agreement through a recalcitrant Congress, Clinton was clearly seeking to counter the rhetorical fire of Perot.

Without mentioning the Texas billionaire by name, Clinton told his audience: "The people who are afraid of this agreement are quite well organized. Some of them have a dollar or two, as you may know, and they need to hear from you."

GOP unveils Health Care plans for a deal

By KAREN BALL
Associated Press

WASHINGTON

Republicans in Congress prescribed their own health care plans Wednesday, pitching them as easier-to-swallow alternatives to President Clinton's that would gradually cover all Americans without forcing new costs on business.

House and Senate Republicans outlined separate packages aimed at making it more affordable for the uninsured to get coverage — but not requiring companies to pick up 80 percent of their workers' premiums as the White House package would do.

Clinton will officially propose his reform package in a speech to Congress next week, but details have been surfacing in advance.

About 20 Senate Republicans are supporting a plan by Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., that aims to eventually force all Americans to purchase their own insurance. Poor people would get help through government vouchers.

A Prospective Trade Center juror biased

By LARRY NEUMEISTER
Associated Press

NEW YORK Bias and anger about the bombing of the World Trade Center spilled over Wednesday during interviews with prospective jurors, with one suggesting the defendants be hanged.

The second day of jury selection in the conspiracy case against four Muslim fundamentalists included several would-be jurors with biases so strong that U.S. District Judge Kevin Duffy lectured them before letting them go.

Even so, those who expressed fears and bias were in the minority and lawyers said they expected jury selection to be completed next week.

"I am very biased," said one of the potential anonymous jurors. They were identified by numbers only.

When the judge asked him to elaborate, he said, "They're guilty, hang them out in an island someplace." He was among several dozen jurors to tell the judge and lawyers why they wanted out.

Transcripts of closed-door questioning of jurors at the heavily guarded federal courthouse were released afterward.

"I'm convinced of the guilt of the defendants," said another possible juror. "I'm . . . Jewish, I'm a Zionist, and major, a substantial contributor to Israel."

Other prospective jurors said they witnessed the chaos around the Trade Center on Feb. 26 when a bomb in a van tore a 150-foot-wide crater beneath the second-tallest building in the world. Six people were killed and more than 1,000 injured.

Fugitive lived a mostly normal life

CORVALLIS

Alice Metzinger, cook, restaurant owner, wife and mother, took a deep breath at a going-away party for three dozen friends and uttered the awful truth she had concealed for 23 years.

Back in 1970, she drove a getaway car for a gang of Vietnam War opponents who killed a policeman during a Boston bank robbery. She had evaded capture by hiding out in women's communes, then by starting a new life here in 1977.

And now it was time to take responsibility, she told her stunned audience, and turn herself in.

"It really floored me. Not the crimes so much for me but that she was able to hide it for so long," said a co-worker, Lynette Adkins.

The details emerged three days later, in a Boston courthouse on Wednesday. Metzinger's real name is Katherine Ann Power, 44, a fugitive who spent 14 years on the FBI most-wanted list until investigators declared the case unsolved.

"She reached a point in her life that she felt she needed to be truthful with the people that she knew," said another friend Marilyn Schwader. "She wanted to reconnect with her family."

The decision to surrender was not a hasty one. Power decided months ago to begin negotiations with prosecutors. Charged with first-degree murder, she pleaded guilty

Wednesday to reduced charges of manslaughter and armed robbery.

Her attorney, Rikki Klieman, suggested Power would spend less than five years in prison. Authorities declined to say whether they had agreed to seek a lenient sentence. Sentencing was set for Oct. 6.

Power was reunited Friday with her parents and sister, Claudia.

"We didn't know if she was alive or not," said her mother, Marjorie Power, 71, of Grand Junction, Colo. "It was a thrill. We showed her all the family that she hasn't seen. We had scrapbooks and everything."

Power was a product of the late 1960s, when sentiment against the Vietnam War mushroomed into a nationwide movement. Thousands joined in emotional and often violent street protests. Radical factions turned to bank robberies and bombings.

Power admitted her role in the robbery of Boston's State Street Bank on Sept. 23, 1970. She wasn't there when the robbers took $26,000 from the bank, shooting to death Officer Walter Schroeder Sr. as they escaped. But she drove the "switch car," the second getaway car parked about a mile from the bank.

Investigators found a cache of rifles, detonators and ammunition in her apartment.

Those who knew her as Alice Metzinger in this languid college town, where she taught cooking at a community college, served as consultant to restaurants and cooked at M's Tea &

Coffee House, described her as a kind, loving woman.

"If you had a problem and you needed to talk to somebody, you should always talk to Alice because she could always turn it around and make it so it wasn't so bad," Adkins said.

Until recently, she was co-owner of a restaurant-bakery in nearby Eugene. She sold her share and gave most of the profits to a hunger relief charity, said her therapist, Linda Carroll.

She also helped write textbooks and was working on a book of recipes.

"She was an absolutely outstanding employee," said Brian Brown, dean of college service at Linn-Benton Community College, where Metzinger was an instructional assistant from 1985 through 1989.

It was during a talk about the recipe book a year ago that Metzinger told Schwader the truth. "I just listened to what she was saying. It was obvious she needed to tell someone about it."

But she left out the details, which are just now becoming public.

Before moving to Oregon, Power had used three or four different aliases, her attorneys said. Then she found the name of a baby who had died about the time she was born. Using the baby's name, Alice Louise Metzinger, she obtained a birth certificate, then a Social Security number and a driver's license.

Along the way, she had a son and moved to Oregon. The boy, Jaime, is now 14 years old. He learned of her secret just weeks ago.

WHY I AM A GNOMON

Few decent people object to real love, when it seems to be true

Gary Trudeau's Doonesbury, which appears on the bottom of this page, has a unique place among American comic strips. The various dead people, office workers, etc. of The Family Circus, Cathy, and other strips have to live back by the auto section, but Doonesbury's characters often appear on the editorial page. The feeling seems to be that they touch a nerve; the strip is a cultural barometer of sorts.

That is why I was rattled by last week's storyline. I assume that a lot of people were, and that that accounts for its early dismissal; but for the record, here is what Gary Trudeau considered a diverting misadventure: Mark, one of the lead characters, is visited in a dream by an AIDS victim, who informs him that he may be gay. He is unsure. A crisis ensues.

Trudeau milks the situation for sitcom-style gags, e.g. "Do you still like sports?" meant to show up the prejudices of liberal middlebrows. Mark says he isn't ready. J.J., Mike's wife, says she thought she may have been a lesbian. And so on. The whole episode is about as funny as hemorrhoids, and Trudeau was right to drop it. But it was typical of a well-meaning trend in recent years to minimize homosexuality by blending it into comics (Doonesbury), thrillers (The Crying Game), sitcoms, (the Seinfeld "outing" episode) and so on. And it never quite works.

Because it's hard to figure out homosexuality. I realize that as a columnist, I am expected to weigh in with a cogent position, but I am as baffled as the next man. On the one hand, it's perfectly obvious that homosexuality is no mere personality quirk or leisure activity.

To an ordinary heterosexual, particularly a man, it wouldn't be too much to say that it is the worst thing in the world. For people born gay, the choices are either secrecy, fear, and fugitive intimacy, or (worse yet, from a social point of view) a place in the gay subculture, which despite the efforts of a few solid citizens still largely revolves around sanctimoniousness, disease, and unbelievably squalid sex.

Now, these are hard words, I realize, and I suppose that some Observer readers may find them abusive. But this is largely an expression of sympathy on my part; see what I have looming on the other side.

As a Catholic, I am committed to more or less seriously consider Church teachings. The Church has no doubt at all about the place of homosexual acts. These acts are considered wrong and gravely sinful. The sooner homosexuals get on board for the big win, the better off the universe will be. But it's serious business to tell someone that they can never make love again. Serious enough when you have taken holy orders, and that much worse when you are only trying to muddle through the world like the rest of us.

As with birth control, the Holy See offers the troops little in the way of explanation. Go to the papal encyclicals and ask why this terrible burden must be borne, and you are liable to get some answer along the lines of, "if we consider the nature of sex we find there is primarily a procreative as well as unitive function of human sexuality that marks it as analogous to..." Pretty thin soup, but a papal encyclical is not something you can just blow off if you call yourself a Catholic.

So here we are, with RuPaul on one side, and stern abstractions where we need them least on the other. Compounding the problem is the almost bottomless mirth and contempt most men feel towards male homosexuality. Women seem to be less troubled by female homosexuality, for some reason or other. (Neither are men any too revolted by lesbianism; far from it, if the truth be known.) On a planet of women, maybe homosexuality wouldn't be a social problem. But this is not a planet of women. Homosexuality is becoming a significant part of our society, and we're going to have to figure out how to deal with it.

I for one would like to see some moral assimilation. If there's going to be homosexuality on a wide scale in America, and there's going to be, I would like to see it at least keep pace with American mores. Things are slipping fast, but it's still more or less shameful to sleep with dozens of people a year, and a sex act per se is still nothing to boast about. The lovelessness which lies behind the gay lifestyle is what people find objectionable, a magnified mirror of heterosexual vice. Few decent people, I think, really have anything against real love, whatever its mode, when it seems to be true—or at least tries.

Josh Ozersky is a graduate student in History. His article on underground comics appears in this month's issue of Zone.

Members of Oliver Syndrome get set to play a free concert Friday night at Saint Mary's.

Oliver Syndrome prepares to rock Saint Mary's campus this weekend

By MARY GOOD

Accent Writer

Alas, real entertainment is rolling into town and you won't have to be twenty-one to enjoy it.

This Friday night you will not need a fake I.D., only a valid college I.D., to jam to the covers and originals played by the up-and-coming Indiana band, Oliver Syndrome.

From 8 p.m. until 11 p.m. the band will be playing at Saint Mary's in the field behind Havican Hall.

To top it all off, admission is free and refreshments will be available. All this thanks to the Saint Mary's Student Activities Board and Saint Mary's Student Government.

This year Saint Mary's students are paying an increased student activities fee. According to Jill Hotek, Student Activities Board coordinator, this concert is a "direct result of the increased fee." The increase makes it possible for SMC Student Government to "bring such programs and concerts."

The event is expected to be a success Hotek said.

It has been in the planning since MaryBeth Wilkinson was elected Student Body President last spring.

It began as an idea prompted by Oliver Syndrome's reputation in the college circuit and their appearances at Heartland and a few other local nightclubs, according to Hotek.

Over the summer Student Activities together with Student Government made it a realistic project that will pay off Friday night.

Oliver Syndrome primarily plays for a college-age audience and they know how to entertain.

Their song list includes the usual range of covers from Brown Eyed Girl to Suck My Kiss and Two Princes is not missing from the list.

According to lead vocalist and keyboard master, Oliver Morris, in an interview with The Indianapolis Star, the band plays to a college following because, "They can be very loyal. They also talk among themselves substantially more than the 'townies' do."

Oliver Syndrome has quite a reputation after three years of appearances in and around Indianapolis.

The group has proven to be a hit at Purdue University, Indiana University, and many other Midwest schools.

The band is based in Indianapolis. Their gigs usually land them no further than five hours from home. They usually play no more than three or four nights a week.

Their decision to abandon the rock star image and stick close to Indianapolis has allowed them more time and money to work with, according to Morris in an interview with Marc Allan.

Morris is working hard to lead the band through a transition from cover group to what he told The Purdue Exponent was "a real band".

They have used their saved resources to build their own studio, Studio 512, in Indianapolis. At the studio they spend time rehearsing and creating a sound of their own.

The composition and the age of the group contributes to their popularity.

For Oliver Morris, 24, this band has been his dream since he was 15 years old. He is responsible for getting the guys together and launching their careers.

He is supported on guitar by David Edmonds, 25, whose experience lies in funk bands. Brent McNamara, 29, is the band's bassist, and Wade Parish, 23, does the drums. Parish's background also includes some time playing with thrash bands.

This combination of talent is only beginning to bud as the Saint Mary's/Notre Dame community will find out this weekend.

Although Saint Mary's and Notre Dame students love covers as much as the next student body, they should also be looking forward to a sound uniquely Oliver.

In January, Oliver Syndrome, released a disc called Say Something that was comprised of twelve of Oliver Syndrome's originals. These songs will be incorporated into Friday's outdoor event.

It is not often that such a rising rage comes to town, and on a football weekend no less. So, come on out to Havican Field with that college I.D. and your dancing shoes Friday night.

At the rate this group is going, you will be lucky to someday be able to say that you saw them when.

Comparisons to past greats cramp Styles

By RUSTY MILLER
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Lorenzo Styles says to forget the comparisons to Marcus Marek, Pepper Johnson, Chris Spielman or Steve Tovar.

Instead, he asks to merely be considered on his own merit as Ohio State's latest anchor at linebacker.

"There's been a lot of good middle linebackers here at Ohio State, but I just want to be my own person. Show my skills as Lorenzo Styles, not as a Pepper Johnson or Steve Tovar type. I just want to be myself," Styles said earlier this week.

So far, being Lorenzo Styles is enough. He leads 11th-ranked Ohio State with 23 tackles as the Buckeyes' defense has permitted two touchdowns in two games, including one in Saturday's 21-12 victory over Washington.

This week, Styles will again be in his high-profile position when the Buckeyes travel to Pittsburgh.

Styles, a 6-foot-2, 242-pound sophomore, knows a thing or two about Pittsburgh. He played high school playoff games in Three Rivers Stadium during his last year at Farrell (Pa.) High School. His hometown was 40 miles away from the Steel City.

Styles, who lived in Columbus from the sixth through 10th grades, said he's going to need a lot of tickets to accommodate all the family and friends coming out to see him play.

"I've got almost 20," he said of the tickets he has set aside. Asked how many more he needs, he laughed, "No limit."

Pitt recruited him, but he decided to return to Columbus.

"I never cared too much about the university," he said about Pitt. "The surroundings are too much in the city, too much to do, too much to get in trouble with. So I decided to come down here. I like the atmosphere better. The campus is apart from the city."

Styles started the spring as an outside linebacker, but was moved inside to fill the vacancy left by NFL draftee Tovar. So far, he hasn't disappointed anyone.

"It's nice having a guy like Lorenzo Styles that you can move from backup outside linebacker to the middle and strengthen your football team," said OSU coach John Cooper.

"Lorenzo's earned that position; that's a message that needs to go loud and clear. ... Lorenzo stayed here this summer and outworked the other guys. Until somebody plays better than he's playing right now, he's the middle linebacker."

Styles said the change in position didn't require a major adjustment.

"It hasn't really been tough. I just had to have the perspective to attack the ball from inside out instead of from outside in," he said.

Now he is making the transition from a part-time role player last year to being the central defender for the Buckeyes.

"We believed all along we had one of the top defenses in the country," he said. "Now we're just going out to prove it every night, to put our words on the line."

He said there were major differences from last year's team, which ended up fourth in the nation in points allowed, and this year's squad.

"Last year we had a lot of talent on defense, but we lacked that killer instinct," he said. "This year we're more, 'Get 'em down and kick 'em while they're down.'"

Michigan's Gary Moeller responds to boos, rebounds from loss

By HARRY ATKINS
Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — With 6:48 left in the third quarter, Tyrone Wheatley slammed over left tackle for 3 yards. A chorus of boos cascaded down from the fans in Michigan Stadium.

Gary Moeller

The Bronx cheer wasn't aimed at Wheatley, of course. The boos were for Michigan coach Gary Moeller.

Notre Dame had just pulled ahead 27-10, and no Michigan team has ever overcome more than a 14-point deficit to win a football game. The boo-birds wanted Moeller to open things up.

"I didn't hear them," Moeller says. "That's not Michigan, anyway."

It really didn't matter. Moeller didn't plan to sit on the ball. Two snaps later, quarterback Todd Collins threw the second of his three interceptions that afternoon.

"I'd sure like to take back the plays that didn't work," Moeller says. "I'd like to have been in position to run the ball a little more. But we didn't perform like we should have."

What the vocal fans apparently failed to realize is that the passing game, at which Collins has become so adept, isn't very effective unless the defense can be kept honest by the threat of a runner like Wheatley.

"You always second guess yourself," Moeller says. "But, no, I wouldn't change much."

The Wolverines (1-1), who dropped from third to 10th in the AP poll after the 27-23 defeat, are idle this week. The game they would have played, against Washington State, was moved up to Sept. 4. Michigan will return to action next week when Houston (0-2) visits Ann Arbor.

Moeller is using the down time to re-evaluate the players on Michigan's special teams.

Mike Miller's 56-yard punt return for a Notre Dame touchdown marked the second straight game in which an opponent earned a special teams TD. In the season opener, Washington State's Kevin Hicks returned a kickoff 97 yards for a score.

"We're going to be looking at lineup changes," Moeller says. "We may have to get some depth from some of our freshmen. There definitely may be some new faces on the punt team."

Yet, on the whole, Moeller isn't as unhappy with this team as the 106,851 folks who had to pay their way in last week. Frankly, there is much to like about the Wolverines.

They outgained Notre Dame in every offensive area, finishing with 402 total yards to 371 for the Irish. They simply couldn't overcome three interceptions and some uninspired tackling.

Any team with Wheatley, Collins and a fleet of receivers that is at least five deep, is going to win a lot of games.

With 318 all-purpose yards against Notre Dame — the fourth-highest single game total in Michigan history — Wheatley boosted his career total to 3,054 yards, the 10th-most in school history.

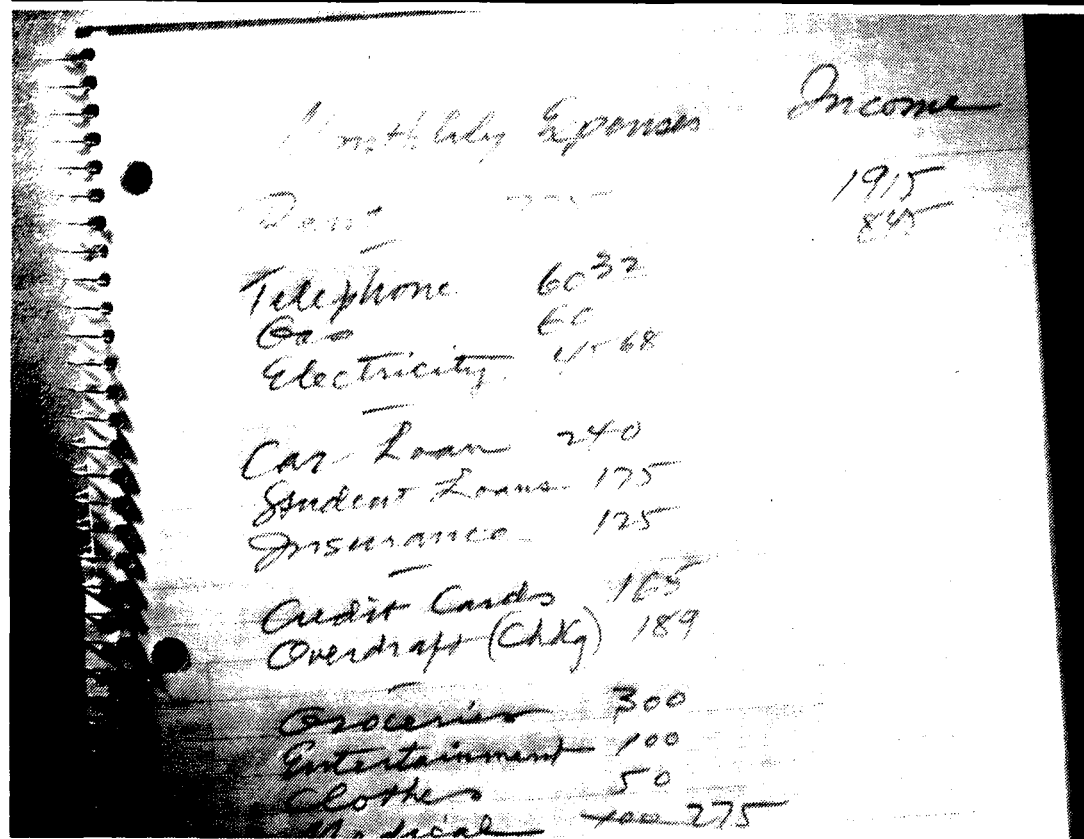

Collins completed 22 of 37 passes for 251 yards, including a 13-yard touchdown toss to Mercury Hayes with 34 seconds left in the game. Collins has passed for more than 200 yards in all four of his starts.

Collins, a junior, also is maturing in other ways. He is learning there is a correct way to respond both on and off the field. He recently apologized for the "fairy quarterback" quip he made following the Washington State game.

When asked during postgame interviews about his ability to stand in the pocket and take hits, Collins tried to explain that he actually enjoyed that aspect of the game.

"I like to stand in there and take a hit just as I let one go for a completion," he said. "I like to take a hit. It makes me feel like a football player instead of a fairy quarterback."

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

IRONICALLY, THE TIME TO START SAVING FOR RETIREMENT IS WHEN IT LOOKS LIKE YOU CAN LEAST AFFORD IT.

Can't afford to save for retirement? The truth is, you can't afford not to. Not when you realize that your retirement can last 20 to 30 years or more. You'll want to live at least as comfortably then as you do now. And that takes planning.

By starting to save now, you can take advantage of tax-deferral and give your money time to compound and grow. Consider this: set aside just $100 each month beginning at age 30 and you can accumulate over $172,109* by the time you reach age 65. But wait ten years and you'll have to budget $219 each month to reach the same goal.

Even if you're not counting the years to retirement, you can count on TIAA-CREF to help you build the future you deserve—with flexible retirement and tax-deferred annuity plans, a diverse portfolio of investment choices, and a record of personal service that spans 75 years.

Over a million people in education and research put TIAA-CREF at the top of their list for retirement planning. Why not join them?

Long road ahead for Belles soccer

Weekend road trips to test team's endurance

By CHERYL GILLILAND
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's soccer team will be on the road today as they head to Rockford College in Illinois.

The Belles, 1-1, are "off to a good start," said senior Megan Dalsaso. "This is our first away game during the week and playing after a long bus trip will be tough. This game will be a good test for us."

Coach Tom Van Meter is pleased with the season so far. "I'm really happy coming off Sunday's win. Saturday's loss was a hard one, but I feel the team is playing very well."

Van Meter is concerned about the length of the trips, yet optimistic about what the Belles will do.

"The next two games are going to be difficult ones with traveling distances of three to five hours. There will be pressure to play well after a long ride."

"I feel that the team has progressed thoroughly in the last couple of weeks," said senior Jenny Kaplan. "Today will prepare us for a tough weekend. We hope to improve on many of our faults."

The Belles are looking to improve on defensive skills in their upcoming games.

"We have a tendency not to attack the ball defensively," noted Van Meter. "We need to be more aggressive in the future."

Kaplan agreed, noting that, "we have been working on our defensive positioning and trapping."

Another long trip will test the Belles on Sunday when they visit Heidelberg for the first time ever.

"We have never played them before, but they are going to be a tough team," said Dalsaso. "We really need to get geared up for Sunday's game."

Dalsaso is the leading scorer for the Belles, with two out of the three goals this season.

"We are really fortunate to have Megan," said Van Meter. "The seniors have all been playing really well. We just need to be consistent and keep working."

Former Notre Dame star Rod Smith learned a valuable lesson from coach Lou Holtz that he has carried over to his pro career.

Rod Smith takes Holtz's lesson to the pros

By HOWARD ULMAN
Associated Press

FOXBORO, Mass. Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz acted swiftly when defensive back Rod Smith missed a tackle on Michigan's Desmond Howard in 1990. He benched Smith for most of the season.

Smith thinks that lesson can help him overcome a similar benching by New England Patriots coach Bill Parcells.

"It was probably one of the toughest moments I've had in my life," he said Wednesday of his demotion by Holtz. "Having gotten through it, I look back at it now as a very positive thing and ended up gaining a lot from it."

Andre Reed burned Smith for two fourth-quarter touchdowns as Buffalo won the season opener over the Patriots, 38-14. Last Sunday, Smith played only on special teams and in goal-line defenses in the Patriots 19-16 loss to Detroit.

"It was a very similar situation and feeling to being at Notre Dame," the cornerback said. "There are so many good people that guys get moved around an awful lot and the coach is always searching for the best combination."

As a junior at Notre Dame, Smith couldn't bring down Heisman Trophy winner Howard. Holtz wasn't happy.

"I got benched for seven games and had to work my way back in and made some big plays and held my spot after that," Smith said.

He said mental strength helps a player survive the stressful environment at Notre Dame, where coaches challenge players and talented teammates threaten their jobs.

Holtz is criticized in a just-published book, "Under the Tarnished Dome."

"I'm only on page 137, but there's really not a whole lot to the book, really. There's not a whole lot of facts. There are a lot of opinions," Smith said. "I'm not sure what (the authors') point was to prove."

"From a different angle, it looks a little better. From a different angle, it looks a little worse. Every program has its problems."

Smith, who said he wasn't interviewed for the book, admitted that Holtz is a very demanding coach.

"The kids who made it through that place and who were reasonably successful are the guys who had a large amount of mental toughness," he said. "You were challenged every day, and a lot of people break down under those type of conditions."

"You had to be able to work through the pressure," he added. "I never wilted. I had good support from my family and friends."

Smith played every game as a reserve cornerback in his sophomore season. Although he was in every game as a junior, his diminished playing time left him with just 29 tackle.

He was a starter in his final season and had 69 tackles and three interceptions. The Patriots took him with the second pick of the 1992 draft and he started one of the 16 games he played for that 2-14 team.

Now he's not starting for a team that is 0-2.

"There's not really that much to talk about" concerning Smith's play, Parcells said. "He's playing well for us on special teams and right now he's backing up Maurice Hurst at cornerback."

CAMPUS MINISTRY...

...CONSIDERATIONS

Nobody Goes to Heaven All Alone

One of the great promises of the fancy recruitment brochures is that Notre Dame and St. Mary's are places where people will experience "community." As could be found at many other renowned institutions, here we know that we have great professors, anxious to teach, and anxious to learn, and anxious to push the edges of research grantdom. Like so many of our sister institutions, here we take it for granted that there are talented, competitive students, full of energy and creativity, traversing our everupgraded sidewalks. Like almost no place else around, here we are grateful to share in a beautiful, peaceful environment for study and for growth.

Still beyond all of that, around here we proclaim that everybody is somehow hooked together, somehow dependent upon each other for the success of our deepest mission, somehow blessed to be sharing together in the call to community.

This makes a difference in how we work. It makes a difference in how we learn. If someone is suddenly fired from his or her job, it feels like we have broken a covenant. If someone is forced to withdraw from the university because they can't make their tuition payments, it feels like we have all suffered a defeat.

Most alumni, when they return for the ever more popular five year reunions, talk about the friendships they made while living in the dorms. They remember people who were honest, people who shared - in ways that they may have seldom experienced since. Perhaps it was their age, perhaps it was their constant togetherness. Somehow they were 'bonded.'

Most alumni, when questioned about the experience of their college years, will talk about professors who cared about their minds and their hearts, who shared their lives openly with them, and who wanted them to grow. Somehow they were 'taught.'

In these days of enhanced academic excellence, the faculty is flashier and better paid than ever, while at the same time teaching fewer hours per semester than their ancestors. In these days of limited resources, many students are squeezed by a competitive job market and an endless quest to be #1, while working part-time jobs to offset their ever-growing educational loans.

These conditions can work against that elusive, yet oh-so-valued experience of community.

Last semester a large group of students joined together in a project called "Communities ND." Every other week they met together, in small groups in the dorms, to talk about the experiences of their lives, to reflect together upon the Gospel of the upcoming Sunday, and to become reliable friends who shared a commitment to something beyond themselves. For many, it was a very powerful experience.

Last Sunday, the remnant of that group gathered in LaFortune Ballroom to continue their struggle for community. Twelve of the original eighteen groups survived. Some of their folks have gone off to London, or Innsbruck, or Rome. Others became bored, or tired, or busy with other things. But among those who chose to continue, there was a sense that they have tasted something good, and need to follow it to its conclusion.

In January of this school year, new groups of students will be formed. First year students especially will be targeted for the invitation to community. In the meantime, on Monday night, September 20, the first of several information meetings will be held at 9:00 pm in the Faculty Dining Room, upstairs in the South Dining Hall. All interested students should attend.

On Wednesday, September 29, the first of several dinner meetings for faculty will be held in that same room, upstairs in the South Dining Hall. Campus Ministry and the Center for Social Concerns have invited interested professors and their spouses for a conversation about the relationship between their faith and their professional lives.

Somehow I bet "community" will again be a powerful word at those tables.

Realignment complete, Pirates agree to join NL Central

By ALAN ROBINSON
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH

The National League's new three-division alignment fell into place Wednesday when the Pittsburgh Pirates, the East's most successful team since division play began in 1969, moved to the new Central Division.

The alignment was left undecided during the major league owners meetings at Boston last week after Pittsburgh and Atlanta sought to be in the East. The expansion Florida Marlins offered to move to the Central, if necessary.

But, swayed by a balanced schedule that gives them as many games against traditional rivals Philadelphia and New York as their new divisional opponents, the Pirates averted a possible confrontation by moving.

The new alignment, which takes effect next season:

—NL East: Atlanta, Florida, Montreal, New York, Philadelphia.

—NL Central: Chicago, Cincinnati, Houston, Pittsburgh, St. Louis.

—NL West: Colorado, Los Angeles, San Diego, San Francisco.

The new East makeup continues rivalries such as the Phillies-Mets as well as creating the new deep-South rivalry between the Braves and Marlins that Atlanta desperately sought. Until this season, no other NL franchise was even remotely close to Atlanta.

"The fact that Pittsburgh has

Andy VanSlyke and the Pittsburgh Pirates will play in the National League Central Division next season when realignment takes effect. AP File Photo agreed to go to the Central makes a lot of sense," Marlins owner H. Wayne Huizenga said. "They were the farthest to the West and the closest to those (Midwest) teams."

Pirates president Mark Sauer pointed out that Cleveland, the closest franchise to Pittsburgh, also chose the Central when faced with the same East vs. Central decision last week.

"We received no arm twisting on this at all," Sauer said. "There's a lot at stake here ... and, after we got back from Boston, the decision fell into place very quickly. It just made sense. We talked with (the Braves and Marlins), but we made our own decision."

The Pirates were initially adamant about not leaving the East, but Sauer dropped his opposition when American League owners won a continuation of the current balanced schedule through 1997. AL West franchises such as Texas and Oakland want to retain the twice-a-season visits by the big Eastern drawing cards, New York and Boston.

Currently, NL teams play 13 games against each division opponent and 12 each against the other division. Exactly how the balanced schedule will continue with three divisions rather than two still hasn't been decided.

"From a balanced schedule standpoint, it really won't affect any rivalries," Sauer said. "Our main concern about the realignment was the start of television games and playing too many games in the Central time zone. That part really doesn't matter now."

Toronto's lead grows, Orioles falter

DETROIT

Toronto won its fifth straight game and increased its AL East lead to 2 1/2 games.

Paul Molitor drove in four runs as the Blue Jays matched their longest winning streak since the All-Star break and won the season series with the Tigers for the sixth consecutive year.

Molitor had an RBI double and a two-run homer, his 21st, and Tony Fernandez went 4-for-4. The Blue Jays collected 19 hits and nine runs off eight Detroit pitchers.

Toronto starter Todd Stottlemyre (10-10) gave up three runs on six hits over 5 2/3 innings. Duane Ward got the last four outs for his 40th save.

Mike Moore (12-9), who gave up eight hits in four innings, took the loss.

BOSTON

Roger Clemens struggled to his first home win in eight weeks as Boston prevented Baltimore from moving into second place in the AL East.

Tim Lincecum drove in three runs with a pair of doubles for Boston, which won at home for only the third time in 13 games.

Clemens (11-13) lasted just five innings, allowing five runs on six hits and three walks. Mike Mussina (14-6) lasted just 3 2/3 innings.

MINNEAPOLIS

Dave Winfield singled for his 2,998th career hit, but Minnesota still lost as Scott Brosius and Ruben Sierra drove in five runs apiece for Oakland.

Winfield, trying to become the 19th player in baseball history to get 3,000 hits, went 1-for-4 and has only 18 hits in his last 110 at-bats. He was robbed of a second-inning single on a diving stop by second baseman Brent Gates.

His line-drive single to left-center off Todd Van Poppel (5-5) in the fourth moved him past Mel Ott into 11th place in total bases with 5,042.

Minnesota's Willie Banks (9-11) gave up six hits, five runs and three walks in four innings.

ST. LOUIS

St. Louis stopped the Expos' charge for at least one night as Bernard Gilkey's two-out single in the ninth broke the final tie.

The loss ended the Expos' eight-game winning streak and put them 5 1/2 games behind of first-place Philadelphia in the NL East.

week's game, but playing adds a lot to the excitement.

"It's neat for me because I could have been there instead of here," said Kinder.

Because of his familiarity with some of the Spartan players, some might think he would make a good scout, but not Kinder. Most of the guys he knows aren't likely to factor in the game.

Lou Holtz isn't looking for any tips either.

"Coach Holtz accused me of trying to throw the game after some mistakes in practice," said Kinder.

On Saturday, Kinder will only be trying to throw another win into the Irish record books. He'd like to go home for Christmas.

Improving North Park to challenge Belles volleyball

By JENNIFER GUSTAFSON
Saint Mary's Sports Editor

The Saint Mary's volleyball team is hoping that history repeats itself tonight at 7 p.m. in Angela Athletic Facility as the Belles take on North Park College in the season home opener.

Last year, the Belles defeated North Park in three games, 16-14, 15-3, 15-10. However, Belles' coach Julie Schroeder-Biek realizes that a repeat will not be easy.

North Park wasn't much of a match for the Belles last season but Schroeder-Biek felt they improved a great deal from the year before under a new coach. She's expecting that improvement to continue.

Another strength for North Park is their serving. To counter this, "We have been working, and will continue to work on our serve reception," said Schroeder-Biek, something that the Belles rarely stress in practice.

Schroeder-Biek also noted that offense has been a focus for the team in the past week.

"We are really working on quickening our offense," she said. "But we need the pass to be able to do so."

Although the Belles will be playing without last year's star Karen Lorton, several players have stepped up to fill the void.

Transfer student Erica Freithe provided 56 points for the Belles in their six game tournament last weekend.

The team will also turn to senior tri-captain Michelle Martino, who leads the team in assists and senior tri-captain Kim Branstetter who contributed 53 digs in last weekend's effort.

Momentum will also be a factor for the Belles in tonight's contest.

Assists leader Michelle Martino will try to help the Belles outlast an improving North Park team tonight at Angela.

After a disappointing finish in their opening tournament at Kalamazoo College, the Belles placed an impressive third place out of 18 teams at last weekend's Oberlin College Tournament.

The Belles appeared to be a much improved team at the Oberlin tournament, something they credit to increased game experience.

"We got to know each other better and were able to play more as a team," senior tri-captain Sara Stronczek said after last weekend's matches.

After another week of practice, the Belles are looking to continue this improvement as they gain experience.

Hometown fans don't hinder Kinder

By JENNY MARTEN
Senior Sports Writer

"That's the kid from Michigan. I think he's from somewhere near Lansing. You know the one who left and went to Notre Dame," was overheard from a Wolverine fan during last Saturday's game.

Michigan residents all over the stadium were whispering similar comments as Irish freshman running back Randy Kinder entered the game in the second half. Some of the whispers turned to cheers when Kinder was dropped for a loss on his first carry.

As a prep standout at East Lansing High, Kinder had narrowed his choice of colleges down to three: Notre Dame, Michigan and Michigan State. By choosing Notre Dame, Kinder managed to disappoint the entire state of Michigan making enemies with Wolverine as well as Spartan fans.

And the fans are not about to forget.

On Saturday, a lot of eyes will be on Kinder as his hometown team, Michigan State, comes to Notre Dame Stadium.

"It's going to be a real special game for me. As a kid, I grew up loving Michigan State and thinking I was going to be a Spartan," said the freshman.

For Kinder, the game will be special because about 20 members of his family including his grandfather will be attending the game and because he has played with or against several guys on the team.

He is looking forward to seeing those players again and catching up with them, but winning is a must.

"I'm still looking at it as just another game. Any loss at this

The Observer/John Bingham

There will be some extra emotion for East Lansing, Mich. native Randy Kinder in Saturday's game against Michigan State.

point could cost us our national championship," said Kinder. "(The abuse is) another reason we have to win this game. I can't go home for like the next 40 years of my life if we lose."

Going into the game, Kinder has the same attitude he has had before every game. He is focused on giving 100 percent and maybe a little more.

As a freshman, Kinder has proved a pleasant surprise for a running corps that lost Jerome Bettis and Reggie Brooks a.k.a "Thunder and Lightning." In the Northwestern game, Kinder got his first collegiate carry and much more. He got the call four times and turned in solid runs including a 21-yard carry. Against Michigan, Kinder had a long run of five yards on three carries.

Although he never tried to predict whether he'd get a chance to play in his freshman campaign, Kinder was looking forward to this game and last

Mellow McDougal unfazed by increased media attention

By BRIAN KUBICKI
Associate Sports Editor

Kevin McDougal, you just led your team to its biggest upset in years. What are you going to do now?

Whatever Notre Dame's quarterback decides to do next, it surely will not be out of character. He will remain quiet, hard working, and patient.

The senior thrust himself into the national spotlight with last Saturday's win over Michigan.

McDougal's performance against the Wolverines, then ranked No. 3, was seen in person by the largest crowd in NCAA history as well as on national television.

Irish head coach Lou Holtz even called the new hero into his office to warn him about success. "You're not going to be the same person off the field. People will not treat you the same, but you better be the same person on the field," the coach said of his warning at Tuesday's press conference.

McDougal posted near-Heisman like numbers against Michigan with 208 yards on 12 of 21 passing and leading the Irish in rushing with 66 yards on nine carries.

As much as he shone on the field, he has been equally patient off the field. That is one trait that even Holtz doesn't believe McDougal will give up amidst all the attention.

"Kevin has never changed since the day he arrived on campus in his attitude. He has never done anything except try to work hard. Kevin is just very, very patient and unassuming," said the coach.

McDougal has had to be patient and unassuming. His first three years at Notre Dame were spent waiting behind eventual first-round draft pick Rick Mirer for a chance to start.

"That was very difficult," admitted McDougal. "Coming in here you think you can play, but it is sort of O.K. because Rick is a great quarterback."

Even with Mirer out of the picture, McDougal was not the immediate go-to guy. Despite an excellent spring camp, the senior came out of it virtually tied with junior Paul Fails for the starting job.

With freshman Ron Powlus out of the picture due to a broken collar bone, Fails and McDougal both played in the opener against Northwestern. Neither had an outstanding game, but it was McDougal who finally got the offense moving.

He alone kept it moving against the Wolverines as Fails watched from the sidelines with a jammed thumb.

And even now after McDougal appeared to prove himself as the only starter, Holtz plans on playing both quarterbacks against Michigan State.

"Paul had a great spring. He had a great fall. I still think he deserves to play," he said. "I'm not worried about that."

What he is worried about is the Spartans and what he needs to do to help the team beat them.

"I don't want to have a let-down. I still have a lot to prove," he said.
