Alumni Hall helps to support students in Bangladesh

By THERESA ALEMAN
Assistant News Editor

An $8500 donation from Alumni Hall will go toward assisting ninety five boarding students with education costs through a work-study program at Notre Dame College in Dhaka, Bangladesh, according to Alumni Hall rector, Father George Rozum.

For the past thirteen years, Alumni Hall has made a substantial donation to the residents of Martin Hall dormitory at Notre Dame College in Dhaka, Rozum said in a speech at a recent Alumni Hall mass. The hall collects money from residents at mass on football weekends and at Sunday masses during the school year.

The men of Martin Hall whom the money benefits, are mostly Christian converts in a country which is roughly ninety five percent Muslim. Martin Hall students are looked down on for their Christian faith. They come from profoundly impoverished villages and would probably not be able to receive a higher education were it not for the donations of Alumni Hall, according to Rozum.

"The students whom the work-study programs benefit are highly recommended by priests from area villages as promising students who cannot afford to pay tuition or to rent rooms in the city while they attend the school," said Father James Ferguson, a Holy Cross priest who has worked extensively with the students of Notre Dame College and with the people of surrounding villages. "Through Notre Dame College's work study program, these Christians, who are rarely given opportunities for higher education, are given a chance to overcome their oppression while helping the surrounding community," said Ferguson.

In the work-study program, Martin Hall students teach the youths of neighboring villages who would otherwise probably not receive formal schooling. The youths range from ages six to twenty seven. These young villagers cannot attend school during the day because they must work, but they choose to attend school at night, taught by the students of Notre Dame College, according to Ferguson.

Holy Cross priests and brothers established Notre Dame College forty three years ago. Since then, it has grown from a few students to more than 2,800 students he said.

"The priests and brothers who teach at Notre Dame College are mostly - make that all - graduates of the University of Notre Dame. Notre Dame College has extensive ties to the University. With the work-study program established by Alumni Hall, ninety five students are given the opportunity to attend school while helping the community," said Ferguson.

SMC changes dining hall

By MEG MURPHY
News Writer

"To better serve the needs of the students" is the motto for the changes made earlier this year and those that are in the planning stages for the Saint Mary's Dining Hall, according to Kevin Kirwan, director of the Saint Mary's Dining Hall.

Besides the new hours of operation, the Dining Hall now offers a selection called "Healthy Choice" for the health conscious and those students who are vegetarians. This consists of a vegetarian/healthy entree at each meal, usually found in the Traditions section.

Also being offered at every lunch and dinner is a pasta selection, in the Grill Bar Line.

Almost nothing but positive feedback has been received in accordance with these changes.

"I am very pleased with the changes that have been made. The extended hours of operation make the Dining Hall more accessible to the students' schedules," said sophomore, Claire Gibson.

New ideas are still in the works for the Dining Hall, according to Kirwan.

"Originally, plans were to add fryers and a grill to the Grill Bar. But because of the ventilation and building structure, it would be too expensive for the college to add the system," he said.

One addition the Dining Hall hopes to implement by the spring is that of permanent hot food warming wells. These would take the place of the temporary food warmers now found in the Traditions line.

Senate rejects election reform amendment

By ANALISE TAYLOR
News Writer

An amendment to a Sept. 27 resolution on election reform failed at last night's Student Senate meeting, stirring debate among student senators.

STUDENT SENATE

The proposed amendment, which would have allowed the Student Senate to determine what written appeals would have appeared before the Senate, would have yielded more power to the Student Senate instead of the president of the Student Senate.

The Sept. 27 resolution allows the president of the Student Senate to determine whether a candidate's written election appeal satisfies two conditions: a procedural defect in the Election Committee's decision, or substantial new evidence not considered in the Election Committee's reconsideration.

Some senators dislike this part of the proposal because it may give more responsibility to the president and it may not allow the Student Senate to discuss the cases brought to the Judicial Council, said South Quad Senator Erin King.

The Election Committee was formed to handle student appeals and the president is a non-voting member of the Senate, according to Student Body President Frank Flynn.

King submitted a reform proposal last night that would allow the entire Student Senate to determine whether a candidate's written appeal satisfies the conditions of the resolution.

Aside from the election reform debate, both the wording and principle of the new directive concerning the annual snowball fight caused concern among some senators. The senators suggested a warning to students saying they may participate in the activity but are responsible for damage to property or persons.

In addition, the Student Senate discussed security at the upcoming Florida State vs. Notre Dame game. The proposal states:

"Whereas only ten days ago, more than 70 people were injured, some critically, at the University of Wisconsin's Camp Randall Stadium as a result of the student body's rushing onto the playing field after an upset victory over the University of Michigan, We the members of the Student Senate remind the members of the student body of the dangers involved in trying to and succeeding in rushing onto the playing field."

Panel discusses female, married priests in open forum

By HONORA BUCKLEY
News Writer

To help students recognize issues of ministry and gender in the Catholic Church, and to emphasize that they are in the hearts and minds of people in our student body, a panel presentation and open forum were held in the Hesburgh Library lounge last night, according to Anne La Fleur, one of the organizers of the presentation and forum.

ND Women and Men Speakout panel consisted of six Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students; Katie Bergin, Bridget Deegan, Ed Hahnenberg, Megan McDermott, Melissa Whelan, and Greg Zuschlag.

"All of us (as Christians) have a call and all of us must follow it to make this church whole," according to McDermott, a freshman from Lyons Hall.

The most pressing problem the panel addressed is finding what each individual's call is and how it fits into the church.

McDermott, for example, feels the call to the priesthood, but because of her gender, the Church will not allow her to be ordained a priest.

The ND Women and Men Speakout panel listens to questions from the audience at the Hesburgh Library Lounge. Women's possible future in the priesthood was one of the main topics discussed.

"What about my call?", she questioned. "Does it have a place in the Church?"

Whelan, a senior from Saint

Mary's, believes that by denying women the right to receive the seventh sacrament, the church does not fully recognize women. "The church must recognize all people in the community [both men and women] who do have that calling," explained Whelan.

Zuschlag, a graduate student in the Masters of Divinity program, addressed the issues of women in the priesthood as well as married priests.

INSIDE COLUMN

Boy, I wish I could dream up an idea...

The call came in early evening. "Kev, how about the Inside Column tomorrow?" I held my breath, hoping the Inquisitor would simply hang up. He did not. His teeth grated as my bones shook. He would not leave me alone this time. "The Inside Column for tomorrow?" I asked. Nothing, just those teeth.

Kevin Hardman
Managing Editor

Not me, I can't. I simply don't have the time. I began to feel trapped, suffocated. No response, just the teeth.

Can I do it? "I can do it," I thought. My columns have graced these pages before. Why such fear? What else do I have to do? I can put off my plans. Line dancing at Heartland can wait. The Achy-Breaky will still be there in an hour.

"I'll do it," I shouted with enthusiastic fervor. My time is now.

With Jesus Christ Superstar as my inspiration and my Bic Fine Point as my instrument, I sat down at my desk to work my magic.

No magic.

Instead my Bic Fine Point turned into a drum stick that whaled on the imaginary drum set in front of me. Man how I love those early 70's funky beats. Amazingly, my drum solo didn't produce any ideas for the Inside Column.

Finding no inspiration at my desk, I looked around the room. A British flag, an Italian flag, a bike, assorted posters, a baby blue carpet, the world's most comfortable couch and a refrigerator filled with Mountain Dew and Little Kings Creme Ale.

I gaze back to my desk. My collection of photos stare me down. "Hey friends, help me out, don't let me down now." Nothing, no inspiration there.

Yet, as I stare at my photos, I can't help but become sad at my state of affairs. I just wanted to write an Inside Column. I didn't want to get upset and scared. Too late, senior year has a tendency to do this.

As each day passes, I can't help but become anxious for my graduation in May. It signifies the end of a life I have known for twenty-one years, and the beginning of, hell, who knows what.

I'm going to have a job, responsibilities and a new home. Taxes, car insurance, and medical bills. An assortment of ties will need to be added to my wardrobe and the Grateful Dead t-shirts will have to be weeded out.

But this fear for the future is minuscule in comparison with my fear of what I will leave behind.

I am wrapping up what those older adults coin "The greatest years of your life." Next year, I will be one of those older adults. "Ya know kids, college was the greatest time of my life." Sounds so contrived, but so realistic to a senior approaching graduation.

The last four years have given me relationships that I am not willing to lose. Yet, people who are my closest friends now, will be scattered across the country next year. To lose them now seems inconceivable but unfortunately inevitable. College offers us an enticing situation—to become closer and have deeper friendships to more people than you will ever have in your life. Now that phase of my life is coming to a close.

I turn away from the photos, tap my Bic Fine Point to Jesus Christ Superstar and stare at the ceiling. Boy, I wish I could think of an idea for the Inside Column.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

"Heat of the Night" actor arrested

CONYERS, Ga. Howard Rollins, co-star of the television series "In the Heat of the Night," was released from the Rockdale County jail Mon. after a weekend arrest for allegedly driving under the influence. A friend posted a $10,000 bond for Rollins, who had been in jail since Sat. Also Mon., the case was sent to state court for a possible jury trial. Rollins, 42, was arrested Sat. after his car was seen weaving in traffic. Police Chief Roland Vaughn said. It was his fifth arrest in a year and a half for allegedly driving drunk, recklessly or too fast. Rollins plays attorney and ex-policeman Virgil Tibbs in the TV series, which is filmed in nearby Covington and stars Carroll O'Connor. His character was reintroduced to the series just last week after an absence caused by Rollins' recent five-week jail term for a probation violation.

Case questions marital rape

MANASSAS, Va. A woman who cut off her husband's penis sobbed on the witness stand Monday as she told the jury he pinned her to the bed and raped her. After he fell asleep, she said, "I lifted the sheets and I cut it." John Bobbitt, 26, is accused of marital sexual assault. Mrs. Bobbitt faces her own trial Nov. 29 for the mutilation. Each could be sentenced to 20 years in prison if convicted. The prosecutor in the rape trial told the jury of nine women and three men that Bobbitt frequently forced his wife to have sex. The defense said the sex was consensual and Lorena Bobbitt leveled a false accusation because she was jealous and dissatisfied with his lovemaking. A few dozen curiosity-seekers turned out to watch the first day of testimony at the trial, which has attracted international media attention and put a spotlight on men's and women's attitudes about rape.

Winning Lotto ticket sold in Lafayette

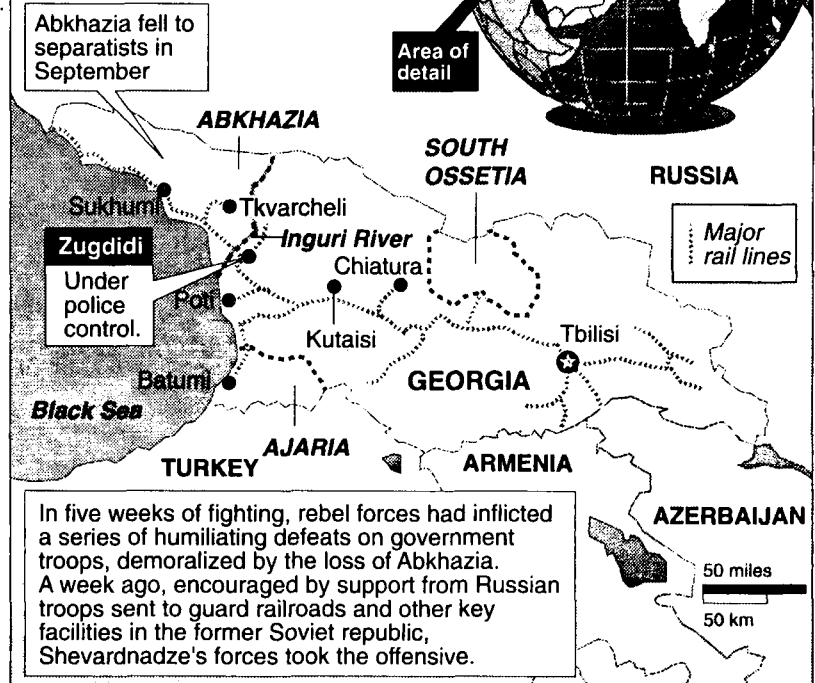

INDIANAPOLIS A Lafayette doctor and his wife who won the $1.5 million Lotto Cash jackpot said Monday they plan to pay off their mortgage and put the rest of the money in the bank. Dr. Grayson Davis and his wife Lorraine picked up their winnings Monday — $1.08 million after taxes. Davis, 76, said he has no plans to retire from the family medicine practice he has had for forty one years. "It's a little hard to believe," Davis said. "This must be the luckiest moment that we ever had." The Davis' ticket was a $5 quick-pick purchased Friday at Wells Yeager Best Co. and matched all six winning numbers drawn Saturday night: 5, 6, 7, 8, 21 and 28.

Ex-President's son begins campaign

HOUSTON Republican George Bush began a twenty seven city tour of Texas on Mon. to announce his intention to unseat Democratic Gov. Ann Richards. Former President Bush's eldest son, who served as both an adviser and confidante in his father's campaigns, said his campaign would focus on education, crime and the growth of state government. "I worry about the future of our state. I think Texas is changing, and not for the best. My drive is to make the future for my kids bright. I like the Texas of dreamers and doers," Bush said. Bush, the 47-year-old managing partner of the Texas Rangers baseball team, was born in Connecticut and grew up in Texas. He earned a master's degree in business administration from Harvard and started an oil and gas exploration company in Midland.

More charges stem from Tailhook

NORFOLK, Va. Attorneys for a Navy commander facing a Tailhook court-martial said Mon. they have witnesses placing Chief of Naval Operations Adm. Frank Kelso in an area where women were grabbed during the rowdy convention. Cmdr. Thomas Miller allegedly knew women were being groped by junior officers on a third-floor patio of the Las Vegas Hilton on the convention's final night, Sept. 7, 1991, but did nothing to stop it, prosecutors said. Kelso has said he was at the patio on Sept. 6, 1991, a night before dozens of women were sexually assaulted by Navy and Marine Corps aviators. Miller's lawyer said two Navy admirals and a commander have given statements placing Kelso in the same area as Miller on the convention's final night. Cmdr. Steve Pietropaoli, a Navy spokesman at the Pentagon, said Kelso's attendance at Tailhook has been thoroughly investigated and the admiral stands by his statements that he was not on the third floor the night of Sept. 7.

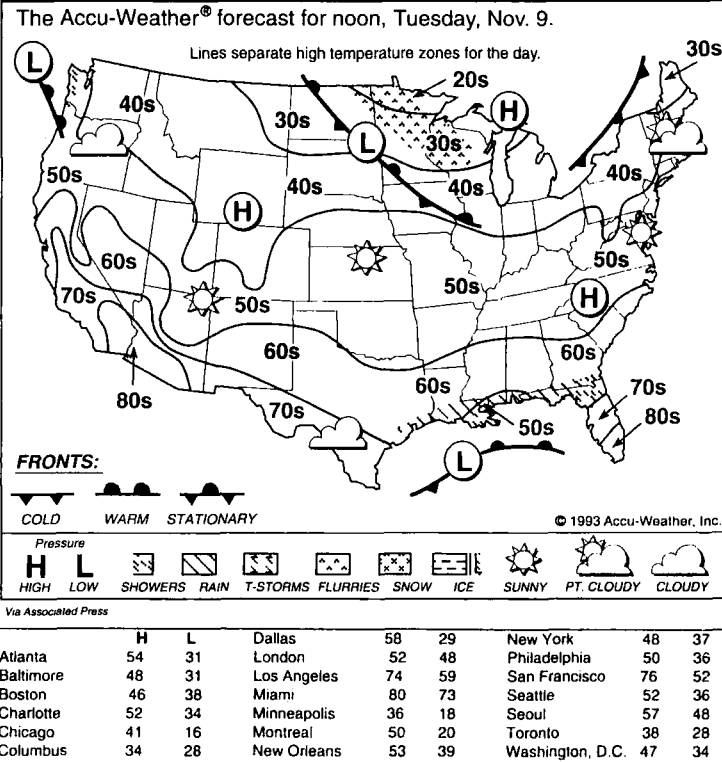

Man charged with threatening arson

MALIBU, Calif. A convicted child molester was charged Monday with threatening to set wildfires in revenge for the seizure of his property, but prosecutors said they hadn't linked him to any of the recent arson firestorms. Firefighters, meanwhile, stamped out hot spots in the 19,000-acre Malibu wildfire, and schools reopened for the first time since the blaze struck. Thomas Larsen, 43, was charged with one count of mailing a threat to damage or destroy by means of fire, said Carole Levitzky, a spokeswoman for the U.S. attorney. The threat was in letters mailed to police agencies and homes. Larsen, who was arrested Sun., appeared before U.S. Magistrate Judge Charles Eick late Monday and was ordered held without bail. The charge carries a maximum punishment of five years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Students polish skills in leadership exercise, lecture

By ROBERT CAHILL
News Writer

In an attempt to improve leadership skills and enable students to more effectively lead organizations, Student Government and SUB sponsored a lecture entitled "Problem Solving and Decision Making" last night in the Notre Dame Room of LaFortune.

Gayle Spencer, assistant director of Student Activities, led participants through an exercise entitled "Desert Survival Situation" as part of the ongoing leadership series.

All of those present participated in the exercise. The scenario of the situation was that the participants were members of a group of survivors of a plane crash in the desert. Each team went through a list of fifteen items and rated its importance to their survival.

The exercise was a demonstration for a six part problem solving method, which is:

- Assess the Situation.
- Identify the Problem.
- Define the Goal.
- Analyze the Forces.
- Generate Alternate Strategies.
- Implement/Evaluate the Plan.

"The exercise really gave me some good insights into working with the class council," said Cathy Basque, Freshman Class Vice President.

The results of the exercise showed conclusively that people work better in groups than as individuals. Of the nine participants, only one person scored better than her group.

Haiti blames negotiator for failed talks

By MICHAEL NORTON
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE
The army blamed U.N. chief negotiator Dante Caputo for the breakdown of talks to restore democracy in Haiti, but indicated Mon. that it was open to further negotiations.

It was the first time since the talks broke off Fri. that the military said it was willing to resume the negotiations aimed at ending the standoff over the return of exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

"The failure of the meeting can in no way be imputed to the army," army spokesman Col. Joseph Antoine said, reading a communique to reporters at army headquarters.

The army failed to attend a meeting set up by Caputo Fri. to search for ways to fulfill a July 3 agreement between Aristide and army chief Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras.

Aristide, the country's first freely elected president, was ousted by the army in Sept. 1991. He was to have returned Oct. 30 under the U.N.-brokered accord.

After the military failed to attend the meeting, Caputo criticized military leaders. Caputo's accusation that the army bore the entire responsibility for the breakdown was supported by representatives of the international community.

Antoine said Aristide's demand that the entire military high command and the capital police chief step down does not figure in the July 3 agreement. He said the army wrote Caputo about this on the eve of the meeting, but that Caputo "preferred to ignore the army's concern."

EPA chief calls for overhaul of superfund

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press

WASHINGTON
Communities will have a bigger say in cleaning up the nation's most toxic waste sites, and in some cases that may mean less cleanup, Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Carol Browner said Monday.

The much maligned Superfund law is "perhaps the most important" environmental statute the nation has, but it needs a dramatic overhaul, Browner said in a speech in Cleveland.

The administration wants to speed up the cleaning process, minimize hardship on small businesses that may have contributed to hazardous waste and allow greater community involvement in deciding remedies.

"Too many communities feel shut out. They feel they're only consulted after some distant bureaucracy has already decided what to do," she said.

"Where an industrial plan is going to move in, it may not make sense to clean up every trace of contamination, but if you're planning to build a school or a home or a playground on that site, that's a different story," she said. Already EPA is supposed to consult with the community around a Superfund site, but Browner said the law should require the community be brought into the process sooner.

The administration is beginning to discuss with key Congress members its proposals for changing the law, and will work with the lawmakers to develop legislation by early next year, officials said. That is a change from the initial strategy under which the administration was to prepare its own package and submit it to Congress.

Kevorkian freed after non-supporter posts bond

By JULIA PRODIS
Associated Press

DETROIT

Dr. Jack Kevorkian was getting so much attention from his jail-house hunger strike that a lawyer who doesn't support his role in assisted suicides put up $2,000 Monday and bailed him out.

Kevorkian, who went to jail Friday rather than post bond himself, said he was disappointed to be leaving but added, "there's no way I could refuse. That would be unconscionably headstrong."

Lawyer John DeMoss, who posted $2,000 in cash for the $20,000 bond, said he doesn't represent Kevorkian. DeMoss said he is sympathetic to terminally ill people who want to end their lives but does not support Kevorkian and his backers.

"I think they've reduced the issue of suicide and assisted suicide to a hysterical bunch of rhetoric that has no meaning," DeMoss said from his office in Mount Clemens. "If I can get him out of jail and get those people to stop protesting in front of the jail and saying 'free Jack' and so forth, then I think my $2,000 is well spent."

Later Monday at a news conference in the Southfield office of his attorney, Geoffrey Fieger, Kevorkian said he expects to be jailed again within days, this time for his role in the death of an Ann Arbor woman at his Royal Oak apartment.

If jailed again, Kevorkian said he would resume the juice and water fast he began Friday to protest being taken into custody. The retired pathologist went limp and had to be dragged off to jail when Detroit Recorder's Court Judge Thomas E. Jackson levied a cash bond for Kevorkian's alleged involvement in an Aug. 4 suicide.

Kevorkian said he wouldn't post bond because it was forcing him to buy his freedom.

Fieger said Sunday that the side effects of the hunger strike were already affecting his 65-year-old client. His problems include nausea and a low-grade headache, his lawyer said.

But on leaving jail Kevorkian said: "I feel all right. I met lots of nice people."

A few hours later, about 150 people attended a meeting of the Michigan Commission on Death and Dying to discuss Michigan's assisted suicide ban. The commission will make a recommendation to the state Legislature on whether to uphold, abolish or modify the 8-month-old law.

"Will the right to kill be followed by the duty to kill? Will the right to die be followed by the duty to die?" asked retired nurse Madeline Satwicz, adding that physician-assisted suicide "invites the end of compassionate health care."

Laura Lopus, who said she was a health care professional, told the commission assisted suicide should be legalized. "This isn't about Jack Kevorkian or Geoffrey Fieger. This is about personal choice to say when enough is enough," she said.

Michigan passed a ban on assisted suicides in response to Kevorkian's activities. He has been present at 19 suicides since June 1990. The new law carries a maximum sentence of four years in prison.

Gore, Perot showdown expected

By FRAZIER MOORE
Associated Press

NEW YORK

When Ross Perot and Vice President Al Gore lock horns Tuesday, will it be a debate or a publicity stunt?

The professionals of broadcast news, commenting from the sidelines, disagree about the importance of the special edition of CNN's "Larry King Live," which stages the Perot-Gore showdown over the North American Free Trade Agreement from 9 p.m. to 10:30 p.m. EST.

"King gets this debate because he's got an active and ongoing forum, and he is by and large a benign force," said NBC anchor Tom Brokaw, "and if Larry King hosting this debate offends some journalistic purists — give me a break!"

But Brokaw's boss, NBC News President Andrew Lack, accused Perot of ducking a mass viewing audience.

"For whatever reasons, I think he is afraid to come on REAL national television and have at this issue," Lack said.

Average "Larry King Live" viewer ship is about 700,000 households, with 3.5 million households tuned to Perot's pre-Election Day appearance last year. Even with Tuesday's edition shared with some 350 CNN Television broadcast affiliates for airing live or tape-delayed, the total audience will be small compared with the Big Three networks.

"Only the cognoscenti within the Beltway will likely see the program," Lack said.

That's OK, contends ABC News correspondent Jeff Greenfield. "This debate is not taking place in a vacuum," he said. "These two men go head-to-head, and then the rest of us can get our hands on them when we analyze what they said."

From a dollars-and-cents perspective, the Big Three broadcast networks might be happy to give cable's CNN this exclusive, particularly now, when they are locked in the November sweeps for ratings.

The debate would almost certainly draw fewer viewers than prime-time shows would. On the East Coast, the debate goes up against ABC's "Roseanne" and "Coach" and a Barbara Walters special. The film "Die Hard 2" will be on CBS. NBC is airing the final hour of "Victim of Love," a made-for-TV movie, and "Dateline NBC."

But ratings are beside the point, said CBS News Vice President Lane Venardos, who questions the news value of the debate.

"In my wildest dreams I don't see this as something CBS would break into its prime-time programming to cover live," Venardos said. "Here's a debate about a topic that is inherently boring and in which there has been precious little interest across the country."

U.S., Pakistan fail to agree on key issues

By GREG MYRE
Associated Press

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan

A top U.S. official met Pakistani leaders Mon. but failed to achieve any breakthroughs on the most pressing regional issues — nuclear weapons and the disputed land of Kashmir.

Robin Raphel, an assistant secretary of state, held talks with President Wasim Sajjad on Mon., a day after meeting with Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto.

Bhutto, who's been in office less than a month, says her top foreign policy aim is to improve frayed relations with the U.S.

"A window of opportunity has been opened for improved and positive relations," Bhutto was quoted as saying by a spokesman.

However, no substantive progress was reported on the two main issues, according to U.S. and Pakistani officials.

Pakistan and rival India are both considered capable of building nuclear weapons. The United States wants the nations to end atomic programs.

The United States has held separate talks with both sides recently, but neither country has shown any intention of signing the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, according to a senior U.S. official.

Raphel heads a new State Department bureau devoted to South Asian affairs, and the nuclear build-up in the region is presently the top priority, said U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

U.S.-Pakistan ties have been strained since 1990, when Washington cut aid to Pakistan over the nuclear issue. Pakistan badly wants a resumption of aid, but Bhutto has made clear that Pakistan will preserve its nuclear capability as long as India does.

"A lot of us are at a frustrated level. We haven't decided how we should go about thinking and acting (on our calls to ministry)," he said.

Zuchlag also commented that religious life and formation need to be reconceived to fulfill their function.

Another question raised asked if priests could relate to their community while living a celibate life.

Deegan, a graduate student in the Masters of Arts and Theology program stated, "It is important for priests to have intimate relationships with women, whether by friendship or married love, before they can know what [the community] is all about."

The Speakout was sponsored by The Committee on Notre Dame's Position on the Ordination of Women, Student Advocates for Inclusive Ministry, the Theology Department, the Women's Resource Center, Women United for Justice and Peace, and Gender Studies.

Local chieftans victorious in Jordan

By TERRY LEONARD
Associated Press

AMMAN — Jordanians flocked to the polls Mon. in the first multi-party elections since 1956, giving King Hussein the heavy turnout he sought to thwart powerful Muslim fundamentalists opposed to the Middle East peace process.

Hussein's secular, pro-Western government had feared a low turnout would favor well-organized fundamentalists, already the largest bloc in Parliament, and possibly deny the king a free hand in negotiating with Israel.

But the Interior Ministry said sixty eight percent of the country's 1.2 million registered voters cast ballots, surpassing the 1989 turnout of sixty two percent.

Lines of voters were so long at some polling places that they spilled into the streets and blocked traffic. Turnout was heaviest in rural areas where Bedouin tribesmen, some firing their rifles skyward in celebration, crowded into polling stations to support local chieftans.

First returns showed fundamentalists set to lose six of the twenty two seats they held in the previous parliament. The results also showed one of Jordan's three women candidates, Toujan Faisal, leading.

The first returns were too incomplete to forecast a trend. The Interior Ministry said definitive results from the hand-counting of paper ballots would not be available until Tuesday.

Hours before the polls closed, the king again appealed publicly for a Parliament that would back his peace efforts.

"I hope that we will see lawmakers who will be able to carry out their duties because we all have to bear the responsibilities in this sensitive time toward the future," Hussein said.

None of the twenty diverse and largely ill-defined parties had enough strength to win a majority and could hope only for bargaining power in forging a coalition.

Despite the possible consequences for Arab-Israeli peace, the election was without a central, galvanizing issue, one that offered bewildering choices between 534 candidates — most with only loose party affiliations and vague campaign platforms.

Balloting was only for the eighty seats in the lower house. The forty-member upper house is appointed by the king.

Yeltsin favors strengthened draft

By JULIA RUBIN
Associated Press

MOSCOW

Boris Yeltsin set out his design for the new post-Soviet Russia on Mon., with a draft constitution that bolsters his presidency and keeps a tight rein on Russia's restive regions.

The constitution, which is to go before voters next month, lets Yeltsin serve out his five-year term until 1996 but sets lawmakers' terms at two years — half the length proposed earlier.

The shorter terms and Yeltsin's retreat from a promise to hold early presidential elections in June have fed criticism that he is strengthening his own power at the expense of the legislative branch. Since disbanding parliament and crushing resisters in early Oct., Yeltsin has wielded virtually absolute power.

Supporters say the president, elected in 1991 and backed by a second popular vote in April, should serve out his term for stability's sake. They say parliament, on the other hand, should turn over more rapidly to ensure a smoother transition while Russia undergoes tumultuous changes.

Parliament will be chosen in national elections on Dec. 12, the same day as the referendum on the constitution.

There is some anxiety that the new parliament's legitimacy may be compromised by a short campaign, the recent political violence, and Yeltsin's banning of several hard-line parties and publications.

The old Supreme Soviet legislature had five-year terms, and Yeltsin stepped outside the constitution and disbanded it to stop it from blocking his free-market reforms and eroding his authority.

He has long sought a new constitution to reflect the changes Russia has undergone since the 1991 Soviet collapse and provide a framework for more.

The new document codifies much of what the post-Soviet legislature or Yeltsin already did by amendment or decree, such as abolishing censorship, guaranteeing privacy, and ensuring the right to buy and sell land.

According to a working draft made public early this month, the president could declare a state of emergency and temporarily cut back on civil freedoms. It said, however, that laws spelling out the conditions under which he can declare a state of emergency have to be passed by the new parliament.

The final draft of the constitution is to be made public on Tuesday.

The early draft also gives the president the right to disband the lower chamber if it rejects his candidate for prime minister three times.

A constitutional convention Yeltsin hand-picked in June has been drafting the charter.

Working on the national holiday observing Revolution Day, Yeltsin said Monday that he signed the draft with "a few amendments."

His spokesman Anatoly Krasikov said he could not comment on any changes, and that the full text of the draft would be published Tuesday.

But a presidential aide, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the only major amendment was to abolish regional citizenships, meaning people would be citizens of the Russian Federation only.

University Club forges mark of excellence with anniversary

By DAVID CLAIRMONT
Business Writer

This past Saturday evening the University Club held a special dinner and dance in celebration of the club's silver anniversary. But this is not the only reason the club has to celebrate. Since its founding in 1968, it has forged itself into the Notre Dame community as one of the prime dining locations on campus.

The University Club of Notre Dame has been, for 25 years, "a place of hospitality" for its members according to John Deguara, the club's manager for the past 12 years.

Deguara stated that the club has a current member list of 7600 people and has "grown considerably" since the current facility opened. Club members include University faculty and professional staff, alumni, and members of the University's Sorin Society and the Law School's St. Thomas Moore Society.

Annual membership dues range from $10 for retired faculty to $120 for alumni and associate members. As opposed to The Huddle or The Morris Inn, all funding comes from membership dues and profits from dining revenues. According to Deguara, the University Club is faced with a unique position because, although it is on campus, it is not affiliated with the University.

Due to its autonomy from University Food Services, it enjoys no special buying privileges. This also allows the club to do its own payroll and as a result is able to end the year with a profit, according to Deguara.

All revenue is collected through a billing procedure which is done through the club's office. All meal and drink charges are made by account numbers which are printed on membership cards, which also serve as entrance keys.

Because of the club's membership policy and its position as a service to the Notre Dame community, the club is not seen as having any direct competition.

"The prosperity of the club for the past quarter century can be attributed to a commitment to quality and being personable, gracious, and getting to know our members," said Deguara.

"We see ourselves as a private restaurant...but even with this exclusivity, there is no way we could accommodate everyone who wishes to use the club."

Deguara added that making reservations is a near impossibility particularly on home football weekends. For example, reservations for Friday and Saturday nights are made the Monday before and are completely filled by the end of the day.

So as to continue its close relationship with its members, the club attempts to keep its patrons well informed. "Our newsletter is basically the only means of marketing the club," stated Deguara.

The club's greatest difficulty to date has been finding enough parking space. Current parking accommodates only a fraction of the club's contingent of regular attendees which numbers 2500 members. Deguara said that the club will be less profitable this year than it has been in the past because of the large annual parking fee it must pay to the University and because of the membership discounts offered this year for the twenty-fifth anniversary.

Looking to the future, Deguara sees plans for expanding the current facilities. Expanding the dining area with an atrium would be a likely consideration to enhance and complement the display of 350 steins and tankards collected by Gore from all over the world.

In addition, an entrance on the East side of the building would allow access from the new Debartolo Quad and is likely to be considered once the new business building has been completed.

"What we do we do our best, and we know it," he said. As he enters his thirteenth year as manager and the club continues to expand, Deguara is confident that the club will continue to things the old-fashioned was instead of the easy way.

The club was founded in 1958 as the Faculty Club of Notre Dame, a gift from the late Robert Gore, a former Governor of Puerto Rico and member of the advisory council for the College of Business Administration.

House members undecided on NAFTA

By RON FOURNIER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON

Opponents of the North American Free Trade Agreement nervously claimed the votes Monday to scuttle the pact, even as President Clinton pressed for support among wavering House members.

"We have the votes now, but of course we need more," said House Democratic whip David Bonior, in comments indicating Clinton might be able to peel away some opponents.

The president conducted three meetings at the White House with two or three lawmakers at a time, then invited 15 or 20 more over for dinner. He conceded Sunday the treaty was about 30 votes shy of a House majority, but the administration's predictions were upbeat.

"I think we'll pull it off," Secretary of Treasury Lloyd Bentsen stated. "We've got the momentum on our side," said chief of staff Mack McLarty.

With a House vote set for next Wednesday, three lawmakers announced their opposition during the day to the treaty that is designed to create a free-trade zone for the United States, Canada and Mexico.

One, Rep. Pat Williams, D-Mont., said he was doing so because a 5-year-old Canadian free trade agreement has "turned out to be bad, very bad for Montana's agriculture producers. Primarily for that reason I will vote no on NAFTA."

A second, Rep. Jim Saxton, R-N.J., noted concerns over short-term job losses, environmental safeguards and "national sovereignty" in announcing his decision.

The third, Rep. Peter Blute,

R-Mass., announced his decision while visiting a New Bedford, Mass., manufacturing plant.

Supporters of the pact said neither side could yet count enough votes to be sure of prevailing. "Basically, it's hand-to-hand combat for every undecided member," said Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M., a leading supporter.

Bonior's comments were echoed by a leading GOP opponent of the treaty.

"We're at 220 (votes) ... It's dead if everybody holds," said Rep. Gerald Solomon of New York. He added, "Don't underestimate the power of the White House."

Adding spice to the showdown was Tuesday night's televised debate between Vice President Al Gore and Ross Perot. The two will appear on CNN's "Larry King Live."

Airline requests gambling on international flights

By PHILIP BRASHER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON

Northwest Airlines asked Congress on Monday to allow gambling on international flights so it can compete with the casino games of two foreign carriers.

Gambling could be added to an interactive video system that Northwest installed on six of its planes, Richard Hirst, general counsel of the Eagan, Minn.-based airline, told the Senate aviation subcommittee.

Passengers would activate the games with cards purchased at the gate or from flight attendants and then redeem their winnings on arrival. The video screens are controlled by an on-board computer.

Virgin Atlantic Airways, a British carrier, and Singapore Airlines are going to provide video poker, blackjack and other games on their flights.

Virgin Atlantic competes with Northwest on between Boston and London; the Singapore carrier competes with Northwest in Asia.

"Games of chance, whether you like them or not, have become a very important part of our culture," said Hirst.

Flight attendants worry that in-flight gambling could saddle them with unruly, agitated passengers.

"The entertainment of a few could interfere with the rights of many," said Dee Maki, president of the Association of Flight Attendants.

Making a united stand against their trading partners, European Community nations blamed the United States, Canada and Japan for holding up a global trade deal. Foreign ministers of the dozen EC nations called on Washington Monday to speed up talks to meet a Dec. 15 deadline for ending the Uruguay Round of trade negotiations, sponsored by the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, or GATT.

ARLINGTON

Flight attendants at American Airlines plan to strike earlier than originally planned, setting a deadline of Nov. 18, one week before Thanksgiving, union leaders said. The 21,000 members of the Association of Professional Flight Attendants at the carrier had been threatening to strike by Nov. 22 if a new contract agreement was not reached. American and the union broke off negotiations on Oct. 30. The new strike deadline was announced Monday.

NEW YORK

Officials from 16 states asked fast-food restaurants to ban smoking, saying it is hurting young customers and workers. Attorneys general from 15 states and the Hawaii Office of Consumer Protection issued a report Monday entitled "Fast Food, Growing Children and Passive Smoke: A Dangerous Menu." But a spokesman for Kentucky Fried Chicken Corp. said the request to ban smoking is misdirected.

Supreme Court steers clear of the abortion issue

Last month the United States Supreme Court declined to hear a New Jersey case, J.M. v. V.C., which would have given the Court a real chance to show its moxie and do justice. Despite establishing a woman's "liberty interest" in procuring an abortion, which appears firm with pro-choice Justice Ginsburg's ascension to the Court replacing anti-Roe Justice White, the Supreme Court has not addressed the real question in its 20 years of abortion jurisprudence. What is an unborn child? Is it a life or not? In evading the question, a question that so often also stops pro-choicers in their tracks, the Court has muddled its thinking on abortion. J.M. would have resolved the question.

J.M., a 38-year-old man, impregnated his 32-year-old girlfriend, V.C., and V.C. then announced her intention to abort the child. J.M. protested and was willing to marry V.C. or, in the alternative, separately raise the child. Consequently, he filed suit to prevent V.C. from having the abortion.

New Jersey Superior Court Judge Patrick McGann recognized the U.S. Supreme Court's shortcoming, and while his injunction to prevent the abortion was reversed, he was willing to oversee a trial to resolve the factual question of when life begins.

This, however, required that the father have legal standing to assert his and the unborn (and now dead) child's rights. Those competing arguments proceeded through the courts (against the father) until, without comment, the U.S. Supreme Court declined to hear the case; thus the issue of when life begins remains legally unresolved. Scientifically, however, the question seems beyond doubt.

First, however, it would be instructive to briefly survey what our Supreme Court has stated over the years on the life issue. First, 20 years ago in Roe v. Wade, the Court curiously held on the one hand that, "the word 'person,' as used in the Fourteenth Amendment, does not include the unborn." Nearly in the same breath, however, the court then said, "We need not resolve the difficult question of when life begins."

Finally, the Court solidified its confusion by maintaining, "In short, the unborn have never been recognized in the law as persons in the whole sense." While factually a true statement, that hardly leaves one reassured that the Justices were comfortable with the grounding of their statement. Nevertheless, it became one of the justifications for last year's reaffirmation of "Roe's central holding" in Planned Parenthood v. Casey.

In his separate opinion there and in reference to Roe, Justice Stevens explained, "as a matter of federal constitutional law, a developing organism that is not yet a 'person' does not have what is sometimes described as a 'right to life.' This has been and, by the Court's holding today, remains a fundamental premise of our constitutional law governing reproductive autonomy."

'In short, the unborn have never been recognized.... as persons in the whole sense.'

Most egregiously, however, the Court pointed out the "no change in Roe's factual underpinning has left its central holding obsolete, and none supports an argument for overruling it." This is to say that today we do not know anything more about the beginning of life than we knew 20 years ago; or at least not enough to warrant a different decision. This is not true.

Notre Dame Law Professor Douglas W. Kmiec, a former Assistant Attorney General of the United States, has pointed out that recombinant DNA technology and DNA fingerprinting have been used in much advanced scientific work over the last five years to prove that human life begins at conception. Dr. Jerome LeJeune, a French geneticist who discovered the chromosomal abnormality resulting in Down Syndrome, had been instrumental in this work and has testified to its results. Or consider a simpler concept, that once the 23 chromosomes from the sperm have fertilized the 23 chromosomes from the ovum, all genetic information is in place. None is gained or lost.

Can anybody determine a point in time after conception when something happens to change the status of an unborn child? Viability, as a possible answer, is relative to medicine's capabilities. Live birth, as another possible answer, is artificial since children are just as dependent after birth as they are before. Only growth and development take place from conception forward; no change in nature occurs. These are not theological or moral edicts, rather scientific conclusions combined with philosophical realism.

But the Court's abdication on this issue is problematic for another reason as well. Why is it that the Court has rejected a father's interest in seeing that his child be born, and yet courts routinely hold fathers responsible monetarily via paternity suits? Since the decision was made in Planned Parenthood v. Danforth (a 1976 case whose ruling was reaffirmed and extended last year in Casey) that "we cannot hold that the State has the constitutional authority to give the spouse unilaterally the ability to prohibit the wife from terminating her pregnancy, when the State itself lacks that right," consistency would dictate that, therefore, men cannot be held against their will responsible for raising children. Women who do not want to be responsible for their children may abort them; what corollary "right" does a man have?

Of course, Danforth is wrong on a much more fundamental ground as well. Is it acceptable that the State (and only the State) grants us our rights, or does God give them to us as the Declaration of Independence says ("that all Men... are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights...")?

Casey and Roe point out many concurring which legislators would have to address if an unborn child were declared life within the meaning of the 14th Amendment, but that is precisely what our representatives are paid to do. And it is the Judiciary's job to "say what the Constitution means." This requires a good faith effort which the Court has passed on once again. The slaughter continues.

Frank Pimentel is a 1987 Notre Dame graduate and currently a third-year student in the Law School.

GARRY TRUDEAU QUOTE OF THE DAY

'U hhhhhh.....huh,huh....
huh,huh,huh....What?'

Butthead

Is the prohibition of female ordination a heresy?

Dear Editor:

George Santayana, the Spanish-born American philosopher, prophetically penned in 1905, "Those who cannot remember the past are condemned to repeat it."

Unfortunately, today the Roman Catholic Church stands on the brink of violating Santayana's wise dictum. Recent events like the resounding Vatican denunciation of the move by the Church of England to ordain women as priests, as well as the meeting of the United States Catholic Bishops to discuss their pastoral letter on women, have brought the prohibition against the ordination of women in the Roman Catholic Church to the front burner once again in contemporary times. While there have been several sound and persuasive challenges to this exclusionary practice, both theological and ecclesial, there exists an authoritative, Scripturally chronicled, historical parallel—the controversy over the inclusion of the Gentiles at the Council of Jerusalem as detailed in Acts and Galatians. If an interpretation of this parallel carries undeniable weight, the prohibition against the ordination of women in the Roman Catholic Church could be analogously understood as a denial of the reality of the Resurrection—in essence, a heresy against Christ.

According to Paul's and Luke's slightly different accounts of the story, in response to the growing conversion of the Gentiles, a delegation of converted Jews, or "Judaizers," (Luke calls them "certain individuals from Judea" in Acts 15:1 and "believers who belonged to the sect of the Pharisees" in Acts 15:5. Paul calls them "false believers" in Gal 2:4.) began declaring that observance of the Mosaic law, specifically the custom of circumcision, was prerequisite for salvation in Christ. After all, was not the Lord from the house of David? Had He not said, "I was sent only to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." (Matt. 15:24) Had He not commanded His apostles to, "Go nowhere among the Gentiles, and enter no town of the Samaritans," but instead to the Jews alone? (Matt. 10:5-6b) Surely, the Judaizers reasoned, and had even temporarily persuaded Peter and Barnabas, the only way a Gentile could enter the Kingdom of God was by circumcision. In essence, one must become a Jew.

Paul, however, a once zealous member of the Pharisees, recognized the inherent fallacy of the Judaizers' claim. Not only did such a claim reverse Paul's understanding of the law as a mechanism for spiritual bondage, it fundamentally denied the reality of the Resurrection. Part of the universal salvific significance of Jesus being raised from the dead resided in the revelation that in Christ the old separation between Jew and Gentile had been permanently vanquished (See Gal. 3:28). In his understanding of the Resurrection, Paul recognized that God had extended the promise of Abraham to everyone. Circumcision of the heart, not of the penis, made one a child in the House of Israel. Though the Judaizers persisted in thwarting Paul's apostolic efforts in Asia Minor, his understanding of an inclusive salvation won the day at the Council of Jerusalem, thereby altering the course of Christianity forever.

In a sense, many of today's Roman Catholic religious authorities, especially in Rome, have adopted the logic of the Judaizers. In response to the vigorous challenge in the later part of this century by those who question the policy of exclusion, the official hierarchical magisterium has cited two arguments, one ecclesial, the other theological, to insure its continued prohibition against women to the ordained ministry. The ecclesial argument, cited by the U.S. Catholic Bishops from their 1972 conference, states that the constant tradition and practice of the church not to ordain women is divine law. This argument invokes the richness of Catholicism's notions concerning the sacredness of tradition and the supremacy of the Church to interpret revelation (e.g. Scripture-in-tradition) in an unerring manner in regards to faith. The interpretation of the historical precedence of Jesus' actions during his ministry (i.e. Jesus chose men and not women to be his apostles) provides the foundation for their argument. This claim captures similar attitudes held by most, including Peter, in the Jerusalem Church around the time of the Council: followers of Christ should maintain their identification with Judaism. After all, they probably reasoned, had not Jesus, whom they called Rabbi, entrusted only Jews with His ministry? With all due charity, one has to wonder if the Bishops have forgotten one of the most crucial events in sacred tradition; the outcome of the controversy at the Council of Jerusalem.

Though the ecclesial argument relies on the authority of tradition in history, it avoids more serious theological issues. The Vatican, on the other hand, has drawn a more rigid theological line in the sand with the sword of "Inter Insigniores" ("Declaration on the Question of the Admission of Women to the Ministerial Priesthood"), the 1976 document published by the Sacred Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith under the leadership of Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger. Under the aegis of in persona Christi, in the person of Christ this document restates the age old theological argument that because women naturally bear no resemblance to Jesus Christ, a biological male, God therefore did not intend for women to be priests. Following Aquinas' sacramental logic that every sacramental sign must represent what it signifies by a natural resemblance, "Inter Insigniores" reasons that because the priest at the words of institution of the Eucharist represents Christ, no woman could therefore perform such an act. Such a justification of exclusion strikes at the same chords the Judaizers of long ago played, sounding such harsh cacophony in the ears of Paul. Does the magisterium only recognize the first and second part (one could argue that the social justice papal encyclicals demonstrate an acknowledgment that there is neither "slave or free") of Galatians and not the third where it is also claimed that in Christ there is neither male nor female? Further, by predicating both their ecclesial and theological arguments upon events during Jesus' lifetime, the hierarchical magisterium has presumed that the Resurrection is nonessential to faith in Christ and has no bearing on ongoing Church practices. With Paul, one could argue that such a denial of the reality of resurrection is blatantly antithetical to Christian faith. And finally, just for the sake of argument, if the magisterium fully adopted the logic of the Judaizers, only circumcised males, preferably of Jewish descent, could be ordained as priests in the Church of Jesus Christ. Such a standard might even call into question the Pope's own ordination status.

The comparisons between today's controversy and the one of almost two thousand years ago are striking. One might even say that the similarities are incontrovertible. Yet, just as the Holy Spirit triumphed in history at the Council of Jerusalem, most likely the Spirit will endure over time in this matter as well. Perhaps the only thing still needed is a Paul to oppose Peter to his face for his blatant hypocrisy (Gal. 2:13). History, especially sacred, scriptural history, must not be forgotten.

Observer disserves Student Government

Dear Editor:

The Observer did a great disservice to Student Government and the Student Body by their harsh analysis of The Guide (The Observer, Nov. 5). Admittedly, the booklet is small, but this is due not to a lack of enthusiasm by the studiscretion. In addition, the absence of summaries pertaining to a few of the courses was normally due to a lack of responses received from the students in that class.

I hope that after viewing The Guide, professors will find it to be a fair and professionally written evaluation and will choose to participate in upcoming semesters. Yes, improvements do need to be made, and the constructive comments of The Observer and the Student Body are welcome and will be considered, but The Observer did a great disservice to the Student Body by criticizing the efforts of Student Government to improve undergraduate education rather than encouraging more professors to participate in The Guide. By criticizing this first publication of The Guide, the Observer chose to focus on the negative aspects of a first attempt instead of encouraging the expansion and development of the project. The Observer, as a student newspaper, missed an opportunity to utilize its potential to be the voice of the students.

Observer free to speak or guilty of libel?

Dear Editor:

When does freedom of the press end and the legal charge of libel begin? Perhaps this question should be debated by the Notre Dame Law School. Or perhaps legal charges should be brought against The Observer and its wildly out of control Editor-in-Chief. Or maybe it is just time that the Notre Dame community rally to tell this newspaper that it ought to use more discretion in its reporting.

Three weeks ago I was improperly apprehended by a SUDS officer in conjunction with a raid of an off-campus party. When the officer discovered I was over twenty-one and could not be charged with underage drinking, he charged me with "Disorderly Conduct". The charge was fallacious and was promptly dropped when reviewed the next week. My record was expunged and as far as the police are concerned, the event never occurred.

However in the eyes of The Observer and its Editor-in-Chief, David Kinney, I was guilty when charged. Despite being told that the charge was incorrect and was being dropped, Mr. Kinney maliciously printed my name in an article about the raid, feeling that the real facts should not get in the way of a story. Who was I to try to spoil his desire to drag another student's reputation down (in fact, two students in this case) with the "rest of the story."

You see, fellow students, I explained the "rest of the story" to Mr. Kinney the evening before the story ran. So did another student who has the same name as me but in news print cannot be distinguished and therefore was doubly wronged by this. Mr. Kinney's callous justification for printing this misleading story was: "We printed a similar story last year when Rick Mirer and Demetrius DuRose were arrested. We must adhere to this precedent or be accused of discrimination." That's the defense Mr. Kinney used when confronted with the real truth.

To make matters worse, when both Keith Anderson (the other student) and I asked that The Observer print a follow up story to attempt to right the wrong that was done by this demeaning story, Mr. Kinney stated unequivocally that another policy of The Observer was to not print follow up stories in these situations. Wow!

My fellow students, I was wronged. So was the other Keith Anderson. If you agree, it is time you speak up with your opinion about Mr. Kinney, whose head has gotten too big for his position.

KEITH W. ANDERSON

Senior

Off-Campus

Editor's note: The Observer identified Mr. Anderson as "Keith W. Anderson, an off-campus resident," to avoid confusion.

While The Observer generally is not notified when charges against a student are dropped, it does not have a policy against running such information.

dent body, nor because of a lack of effort by Student Government. Rather, it must be stressed that participation in The Guide was voluntary and completely up to professors.

All undergraduate professors were contacted during the Spring Semester, 1993, asking for their participation in The Guide. Those who returned neither a positive nor a negative response were personally contacted. Although we highly encouraged each professor's involvement, we were not permitted to make it mandatory and participation was left solely to the individual professor's

Students take action to assist flood victims

By TOM MORAN
Accent Writer

Many Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students see fall break as an opportunity to spend a restful week at home with family and friends. Badin senior Aimée Lafrenière, instead, saw it as an opportunity to help those less fortunate than herself.

She originated the idea of a collection of Notre Dame students and alumni traveling to the Midwest to help the victims of this summer's devastating floods. Over fall break, 83 Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students (including myself) trekked to St. Louis to turn this

"If you found a personal item, like a teddy bear or a baseball card, it just reminded you that people lived there before. We're tearing down the walls of these people's houses..."

idea into a reality.

Lafrenière, a Maine native, was not directly affected by the flood. However, she was deeply affected by what she saw on television. Her journal entry for August 3 reads "The more pictures I see on TV, and the more I think, the more I want to go to Iowa or Missouri and do some social work for a week. This is the year for me to do some good for someone else. I'm sick of worrying about myself and my own problems."

Lafrenière's desire to help others was echoed by all the students that went along on the trip. Flanner senior Eric Schimmel saw it as a choice between "something fun to do versus something meaningful to do."

Darrin Cook, another Flanner senior and a member of the trip's planning committee, saw that something needed to be done to help the flood victims. "So many people forget or don't realize that there is still a lot of work down there. They're still in the process of dealing with a disaster." The majority of us on the trip were not personally affected by the disaster; we simply saw a chance to help some people very much in need.

Lafrenière brought the idea to Father Tom McDermott and Student Body President Frank Flynn. These 3, along with a planning committee consisting of Cook, Meg Brennan, Suzy Fodor, Liz Clifton, and Jen Tilghman, outlined the plans for the expedition. Brennan secured the help of the Alumni Association, which was very crucial to the trip's success. Alumni donations helped defray a large amount of the cost of the trip, and several alumni worked in St. Louis alongside the students.

On Sunday evening, we arrived by bus at our place of lodging, a seminary outside of St. Louis. Our accommodations were more than adequate, but we all knew that we weren't in St. Louis to be comfortable. We went off to work on Monday morning.

The Salvation Army, which coordinated our relief efforts, split us up into ten groups and drove us off to flood-ravaged areas. It was at the Salvation Army headquarters that we were first told the nature of our work. We would essentially spend the week assisting homeowners in throwing away damaged items and cleaning thick river mud from their houses. My group headed to a marina on the outskirts of the town of Elsberry, right on the Mississippi River.

What we saw was a scene of devastation. The houses had been built on 15-foot stilts to protect them from floods, but the water had still risen into the homes. The houses still stood, but their interiors were ruined. Some had been filled with water for months, and every object inside them was not salvageable. Even the interior walls, which were covered with mold, had to be ripped out. Lawns that had once been neatly manicured were now cracked expanses of thick river mud. A once prosperous community had been turned into a practically uninhabited expanse of ruined homes.

Some of my group stayed at the marina and began cleaning the ubiquitous mud out of houses. Two other students and myself traveled to a nearby community, only to behold an even greater scene of devastation. The house I worked at had lost over half of its walls and its floor had begun to collapse. Several nearby houses had been reduced to two-dimensional piles of debris with roofs on top of them.

Before that day I could not fully comprehend just what a true disaster the flood had been, but the sight of houses that had been simply demolished truly opened my eyes. All week long, we saw nothing but houses ruined by the flood, some so badly they were destined to be bulldozed. The flood may have dropped from the headlines, but anyone who went on this expedition can say that the Midwest is by no means back to normal.

Several things about the work stand out to the students who took part in the trip. Cook found the work emotionally draining: "If you found a personal item, like a teddy bear or a baseball card, it just reminded you that people lived there before. We're tearing down the walls of these people's houses..."

Remains such as this church were encountered by the students who volunteered in St. Louis over October break.

Badin sophomore Holly Campbell summed up her work experience: "Physically, it was strenuous, but it wasn't hard because of what we were doing. It wasn't unrewarding." She also felt that the work was more fulfilling "when the homeowners were there and I found out about their lives."

One of the most amazing aspects of the trip, though, did not deal with the work at all. The group of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students that went to St. Louis was, in my opinion, the greatest group of people with whom I have ever had the pleasure of working.

Others from the trip agreed with my sentiments. Lafrenière said that "the people were really cooperative" and "always willing to help."

Schimmel said that the "congeniality and openness struck me."

I can't help but agree wholeheartedly with Campbell when she called the flood relief trip "One of the best weeks in my life."

Lafrenière summed up the trip perfectly in saying "Not only did we do a lot of work and help a lot of people, but I feel like I've made 82 new friends."

Accelerated nursing program facilitates career change

By PATTI CARSON
Accent Writer

According to Indianapolis Monthly Magazine, the average American changes jobs five times in his or her life span. That switch, however, is often a long and demanding transition. Saint Mary's College is offering a solution to this problem for those women seeking a career change involving nursing.

Registration is currently open for the accelerated nursing program at Saint Mary's. This 13 month program leads to the degree of bachelor of science with a major in nursing.

It is especially designed for those who have already received a bachelors degree or advanced degrees in non-nursing areas. The program is also ideal for older students, individuals looking for a change of careers or those who have taken time out to raise a family.

The program will run from June of 1994 to the summer of 1995, as opposed to the two full years required for the undergraduate nursing program at Saint Mary's. Those with previous degrees which do not have a heavy concentration in science must fulfill certain science requirements before taking part in the program. One such student is Kristina Fierens of Mishawaka.

Fierens, a graduate of Catholic University with an English major, at age 26 decided to go back to school to obtain a nursing degree.

"The only drawback is that you must put your life on hold for that year since the program is so rigorous. There's no time for anything except school."

Kristina Fierens

Because of her specialization in the field of English, she fulfilled the science necessary to enroll in the accelerated program by attending classes at a nearby college in Michigan.

Fierens is currently enrolled in the program with five other students whose ages range from 22-35. Debra Pullen, who graduated from Western Michigan, is another student involved in the program. Though most of her professional experience lies in the field of dance, she has decided to pursue a career in nursing.

From a variety of different backgrounds, these women are in the classroom together for at least nine hours a day three times a week. Their other two weekdays are spent working in a hospital. These six women must also fulfill the nursing clinical requirements of the state of Indiana in combination with their 17-20 semester credit hours.

Upon completion of the program, students are eligible to take the National Council Licensure Examination (NCLEX-RN) to become registered nurses.

"The cost of the program is about the same as a year's tuition at Saint Mary's—close to $20,000," said Fierens. "Though it's costly, it's an excellent program for those seeking to make a career change within a year."

"The only drawback is that you must put your life on hold for that year since the program is so rigorous. There's no time for anything except school," said Fierens.

In the words of the famous writer George Allen, however, leisure time is the five or six hours when you sleep at night.

Keenan's comeback attempt falls short against Stanford

By G.R. NELSON
Sports Writer

After recovering a fumble deep in Stanford territory, Keenan was on the verge of stealing another game from Stanford. With his team trailing 10-7, Keenan's Matt Makowski was streaking through the Stanford secondary until he collided with Mike Miller.

Full women's interhall coverage will appear in tomorrow's Observer.

Miller delivered a ferocious game-saving blow which jarred the ball loose. Stanford recovered and had escaped. "This game was sweet redemption for us," said Stanford hero Mike Miller.

This game should never have come down to the final moments. Stanford controlled the first 3 1/2 quarters of action in taking a 10-0 lead. Stanford amassed 241 yards of total offense and had limited Keenan to just two first downs.

Stanford scored on its first offensive play, a 75 yard run off a trap play by freshman fullback Chris Pollina. "The offensive line created a huge hole," said Pollina, "And all I had to do was run." And run he did. Pollina rushed for 105 yards on only five carries and also caught two passes for 66 yards.

Before the end of the half, Stanford drove 55 yards to set up a 24 yard Chad Smock field goal. On that drive, quarterback Mike Brown completed two fourth down passes, one to Bob Baxter and the other to Matt Coles.

With the game seemingly over, Keenan launched a terrific comeback. Keenan drove 67 yards, culminating with a Matt Makowski 11 yard touch down run. Then Keenan forced a fumble, giving themselves a chance to win, an opportunity they failed to convert on.

"We came out a little flat," said Keenan captain Matt Makowski, "but we came back strong and have nothing to hang our heads about."

Stanford players were pleased, but not satisfied. "We played well," said Pollina, "But there's more to accomplish."

Fisher 22 Alumni 0

Fisher played a near flawless football game in trouncing Alumni 22-0 Sunday at Stepan Field.

"We ran and threw the ball well," said Fisher captain Jeff Biever, "And our defense was great."

Fisher took advantage of several costly Alumni mistakes in taking a 16-0 lead. A botched Alumni punt snap set up Fisher's first score, a quarterback sneak by Biever.

On its next possession, Alumni botched another punt snap. This time, Fisher scored through the air. Biever completed a 30-yard touch down pass to Dan McGinty, and the route was on.

Fisher added another score in the third quarter on a 25-yard pass from Biever to Mark Troske.

Alumni was forced to play catch-up early, and this made it very easy for the Fisher defense. Fisher generated a strong pass rush and forced an interception.

"We were in too big a hole," said Alumni captain Paul Zachlin, "Against a very good team."

"We came ready to play," said Fisher captain Biever, "And took our first step."

Morrissey stomps Dillon; Zahm defeats Cavanaugh

By JOE VILLINSKI
Sports Writer

Despite the freezing cold weather last Sunday, Morrissey was able to mix up the run and the pass, and pull away from Dillon in a 24-7 victory.

However, the score does not really reflect the game played Sunday. The Dillon defense came out fired up and made a defensive stand to start the game. After the Dillon punt was blocked, Morrissey found themselves just 20 yards out. But the Big Red defense kept the high-powered Morrissey offense to a field goal by Scott Palumbo.

Feeding off the defensive energy, the offense came out determined to run the ball. Following a 20-yard gain by freshman Pete Meyers and a 15-yard scamper by junior Mike Schreck, Meyers went to work again. Taking the sweep and cutting back right, the freshman spun off a tackler for the score and the first TD against the Morrissey defense all year.

For the first time all year, Morrissey found themselves trailing, but they knew what they had to do. After quarterback Scott Taylor hit junior Tom Fitzpatrick, he found senior Justin Kruer down the sidelines for a 40-yard pass to the Dillon 9-yard line. From there, Kruer took it in for the score giving Morrissey a lead they would never relinquish.

"Everybody was kind of down after the TD. I was real impressed with the way we bounced back," said Taylor.

After recovering a fumble on the Dillon 14-yard line it was time for Taylor to take it in himself. Calling his own number, the senior captain took it in for a 17-6 lead on the naked bootleg. Following a big gain by Avelino Verceles, senior Paul Lopach then capped off the offensive barrage with a 7-yard touchdown jaunt.

"We feel we have the best offensive line in interhall," added Kruer.

Zahm 12, Cavanaugh 6

In a game riddled by turnovers and penalties, Zahm earned the right to play Morrissey next week with a 12-6 win over a fiery Cavanaugh squad.

Cavanaugh's three fumbles did not lead to any scores, but kept the offense out of synch all day. Both teams also had difficulty punting the ball as a Zahm punt was blocked and a bad snap by Naugh led to the Rabid Bats's winning score.

Freshman Matt Bundick preceded to capitalize on the Naugh error as he ran it straight up the middle in the third quarter for what proved to be the decisive margin of victory.

"We were keying on the outside protecting against the option," said Cavanaugh's sophomore rusher and safety, Mike Norbut, who provided some rushing fireworks of his own.

Positioning themselves at the 50-yard line, Norbut took it through a wide hole on the line for a quick dash that tied things at six apiece.

"In the first half we were not focused, but at halftime we talked about what this game meant and turned things around," said Zahm coach Fitzpatrick.

On Zahm's first offensive series quarterback Randy Swatland hit junior Peter Couri for a 40-yard gain to set up the first score. Two plays later, Swatland hooked up with sophomore Mike Wigton in the corner of the end zone for the TD, but the point after was blocked by sophomore Paul Townley keeping the deficit at six.

Cavanaugh did have their chances in the first half as they came out in the no-huddle offense directed by sophomore Charlie Algier. He threw to Kevin Jackson and Greg Bieg for key first downs, but it all fell apart as Naugh fumbled on Zahm's 4-yard line.

This will mark the first year since 1988 that Notre Dame will compete in the NCAA tournament.

The last time an Irish men's soccer team competed in the NCAA tournament was in 1988. The squad posted a 17-4-2 record, with a victory in the MCC championships. They fell in the first round, however, to Southern Methodist by the score of 2-0.

The Irish received their tournament bid after capturing the Midwestern Collegiate Conference Title last weekend, defeating Detroit Mercy in the final game 2-0. Sophomore Bill Lanza and Chris Mathis both scored in the contest, while goalie Bert Bader recorded five saves for the shutout.

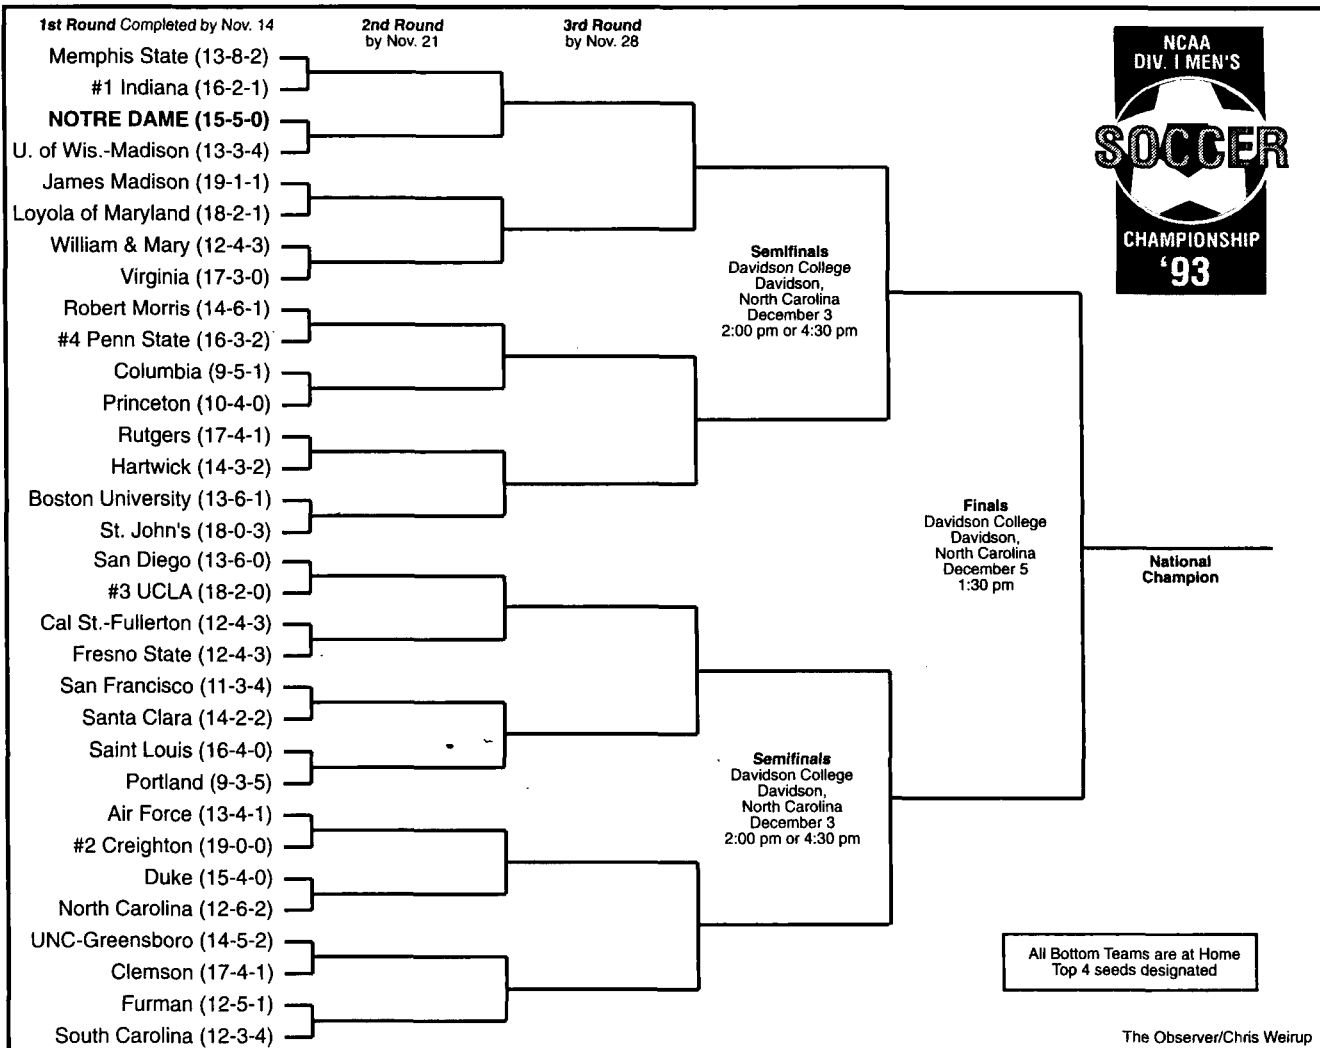

Indiana received the No. 1 seed in the tournament, and will host Memphis State in the first round. The winner of the game will face the victor of the Notre Dame-Wisconsin game. The Irish faced the Hoosiers earlier this year during the regular season, falling 3-0.

Anything can happen come tournament time, however.

"It's a clean slate," said Bader, who was named the defensive MVP of last weekend's tournament. "Any team can win on any given day."

Notre Dame, who has shut out eight of their last ten opponents, will concentrate on perfecting the basics this week in preparation for this weekend's contest.

"It's nice because you have a little bit of time to prepare for this," continued Berticelli. "You want to make sure you're in tune with the things you do best."

most likely due to the fact that Florida State would be playing Notre Dame this weekend in perhaps the most important collegiate football game this decade.

The NCAA was likely concerned with logistical problems such as parking, traffic, and hotel accommodations as well as the notion that it didn't want the tournament to play second fiddle to another sporting event.

However, the University had already found rooms in Elkhart for opposing teams and Petrucelli said all other problems had been resolved.

The notion that it would be detrimental to have the tournament played in conjunction with the Florida State game is foolish. What better exposure could women's soccer officials hope for than a weekend at site which already has a contingency of nearly 300 media representatives?

With about ten thousand students and well over fifty thousand alumni and other fans coming to campus for the football match-up, Saturday's 11am game and both of Sunday's games would likely have witnessed unprecedented attendances.

The decision to allow Wisconsin to host the tournament is ridiculous because it not only intensifies the problem of inclement weather, but it also moves the games to facilities which are inferior to those of Notre Dame.

"Our facilities are better than any of the other teams," said Petrucelli, "and our attendance is better than any of them too."

He added, "It would have been an unbelievable weekend on our campus to have had both."

Indeed, it would have.

Irish sweep at first fall fencing festival

By JOE VILLINSKI
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame Men's fencing team swept to a 5-0 finish last weekend in the first ever Fall Fencing festival held at Notre Dame. The Irish picked up the broom and defeated such top teams as Lawrence, Michigan State, Northwestern, Chicago, and Michigan.

"This was the first meet we have held in the fall and I think it went very well," said head coach Mike DeCicco, now in his 33rd year at Notre Dame. "We were anxious to see how the fencers would do under fire, since we have been only practicing for three weeks," added DeCicco.

The men's foil squad led the way for Notre Dame in their 21-6 over Lawrence. Juniors Stan Brunner and Conor Power both won their two bouts for the foilists as they beat the Lawrence foil 8-1.

Northwestern proved to be the toughest test of the day for the Irish as Notre Dame came back to edge the Wildcats 14-13. Brunner, Power, and junior Jordan Maggio all had two wins for the foilists, while senior Greg Wozniak went 3-0 for the epee squad.

The sabre team led the Irish in their 19-8 victory over Chicago and 20-7 win over Michigan. Graduate Bernard Baez, senior Chris Hajnik, and freshman Bill Lester each won two bouts against Chicago and freshman Jeff Wartgow joined Baez and Hajnik with two wins against the Wolverines. Coach DeCicco also got to give valuable time to younger players in the foil match vs. Chicago where the Irish prevailed 5-4.

Wozniak capped off the day by highlighting Notre Dame's 19-8 win over Michigan State as he won two bouts against the Spartans and went 12-0 overall in the festival.

"The early season match did several things for us," said DeCicco. "It gave us an idea of where we are compared to some of the top teams in the midwest we will see later in the year. It also showed us what we can work on to be prepared for the heart of our schedule in January in order to come out on top in the midwest," he commented.

The women's fencing team missed the near sweep in the festival as the foil team finished 5-0 and the epee team, in their first year of competition, prevailed 2-1.

In their first ever bout, the epee team defeated Michigan 6-3 with seniors Marit Fischer and Maura Gallagher and sophomore Amy Smorek earning wins. The epee team crushed Lawrence 9-0 to win the meet, but fell short against Northwestern in a close 5-4 loss. The women's foil squad followed the men by going 5-0, defeating Lawrence 15-1, Michigan State 14-2, Northwestern 10-6, Chicago 16-0, and Michigan 15-1. Seniors Corinne Dougherty and Kim Arndt and sophomores Claudette De Bruin and Mindi Kalogera helped to preserve the sweep against stiff competition.

Women drown Bowling Green, 143-100

By KELLY CORNELIS
Sports Writer

The men's and women's swimming teams traveled to Bowling Green State University in Ohio on Friday to challenge the Falcon swimmers and divers. The women drowned their opponents, 143-100, but the men fell short in a close meet, 127-105.

Sophomore sensation Jesslyn Peterson, and newcomer Erin Brooks led the way for the Irish women. Peterson and Brooks collaborated with freshman teammates Karen Foley and Karen Daylor to win the 400 Medley in 4:01.38. Peterson also won the 200 Individual Medley and the 200 Breaststroke. Freshman Brooks contributed to the Irish victory by placing first in the 200 backstroke as well.

In the 200 Freestyle, junior Jennifer Dahl came from behind to win the event in a fast unshaved time of 1:56.1. She caught her opponent in the second 100 yards in an exciting race.

The Irish divers dominated the three-meter event, with sophomore Liane Gallagher and senior Angela Gugle placing first and second respectively.

After the first segment of events, the women held only a three-point lead, but after the break, they really came out strong. "The meet was put together really well," said senior captain Kristin Heath. The victory showed the depth of this team, as they conquered the individual events, as well as winning both the medley and free relays.

The Irish men suffered a defeat at the hands of the Falcons, but swam competitively overall.

Bowling Green demonstrated their strength in the backstroke and breaststroke events, as well as winning the 400 Medley Relay, which hurt the Irish chances. The absence of successful diver Sean Hyer also contributed to the deficit in the team's point total.

Sophomore Ry Beville was a double winner, earning first place finishes in the 200 free and the 200 fly. His butterfly race gave the Irish a boost in the second half of the meet, but they could not recover enough team points.

Senior captain Dave Nathe won the 100 free, and sophomores Dave Doherty and Rob Flynn placed second and third in the 200 Individual Medley. Mike Keeley put forth a great racing effort in the 500 free, coming from behind to finish second.

Women's soccer earns bittersweet berth

By BRYAN CONNOLLY
Assistant Sports Editor

After four years of continuous improvement under the tutelage of head coach Chris Petrucelli, the Notre Dame women's soccer team earned its first ever NCAA tournament bid yesterday.

The third-ranked Irish were given the top seed in the Central Region sectional and will face off Saturday afternoon against George Mason at Wisconsin-Madison's Dan McClinton Memorial Track.

"We're really excited about having the chance to play in the NAAs," Petrucelli said. "Earning a tournament berth was a preseason goal and now we are ready to set more goals."

The Irish won an unprecedented 19 games this season while losing only twice. The losses came at the hands of No. 1 North Carolina and second-ranked Stanford.

George Mason is currently 16-2-1 and ranked 10th in the nation. It will be the first ever match-up between the teams.

The winner of the contest will face off on Sunday against the winner of Friday's Wisconsin-Madison/William & Mary game.

The Badgers, owners of a 15-3 record, are ranked eighth in the nation and third in the Central Region. The Irish knocked off Wisconsin 3-1 at Madison in September.

Notre Dame dominated William & Mary later that month in a 1-0 victory. The Tribe is now 12-4-1, sixth in the nation, and second in the region.

After posting a dismal 1-5-1 record against ranked opponents last year, the Irish proved they were deserving of national recognition this season by going 5-2 against Top 20 teams.

"We remained focused all season," Petrucelli said, "and if we can continue to do so in the tournament it could be exciting."

The Irish were disappointed after yesterday morning's announcement of the seedings when they discovered that they were not awarded the right to host the Central Region Sectional. The squad is unbeaten in its last 38 games versus Central Region opponents and has defeated the number two and three teams in the region earlier this season.

Notre Dame was also the only top seed not granted the home field advantage.

"I'm extremely disappointed," said Petrucelli. "We were shown a lack of respect."

Petrucelli said that the main reasons why the NCAA stripped Notre Dame of the right to host the first two rounds of the tournament are the conflicts caused by Saturday's scheduled football game with Florida State at Notre Dame Stadium.

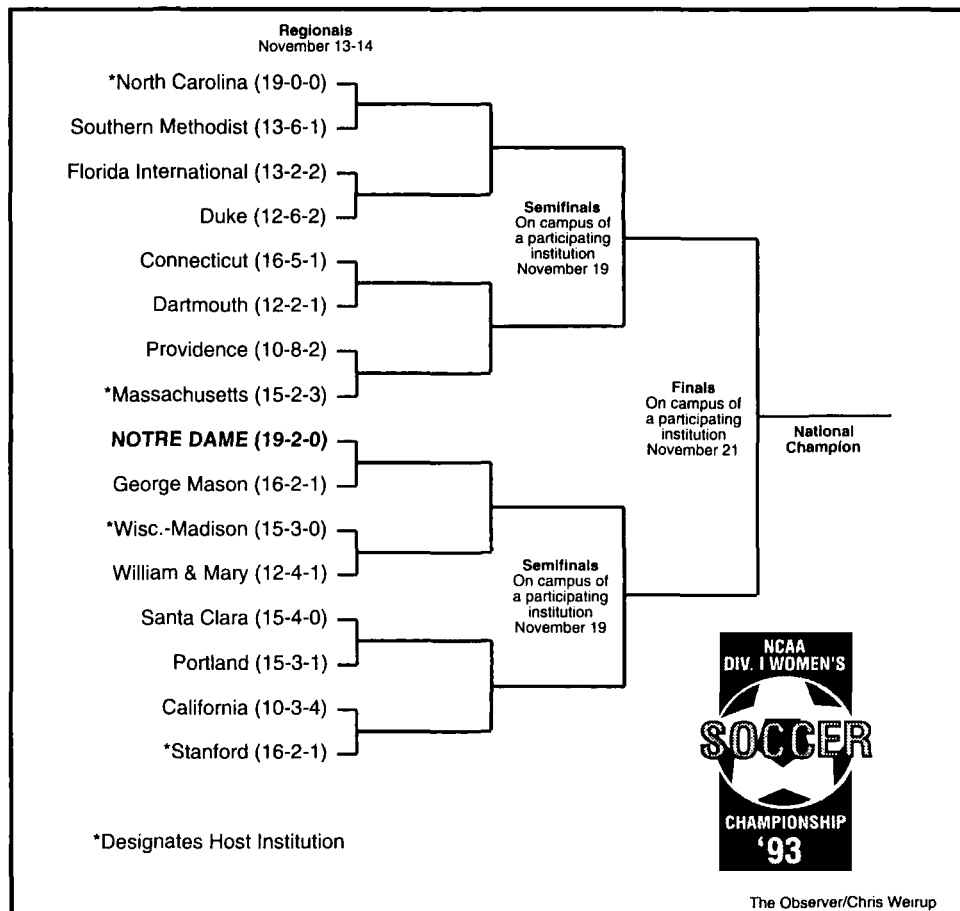

He believed that the NCAA was concerned with logistical problems such as parking, traffic and hotel accommodations. However, the University had already successfully resolved these problems.

"Our University and our administration put together a package that was impossible to pass up," said Petrucelli. "I'm extremely disappointed that we're not hosting. I don't think the committee researched it enough."

"I think we would have liked to have had it here," said Irish tri-captain Andi Kurek, "but it really doesn't matter. We're in, and that's the important thing."

Irish robbed of home field

How would you reward a team that qualified for its first NCAA tournament by achieving an astonishing 19-2 record and a third-place national ranking?

How would you reward a team which defeated five of the seven Top 20 teams it faced while losing only to the top two teams in the nation?

How would you reward a team which has defeated its top two regional rivals and is undefeated in its last 38 matches against its regional opponents?

Well, if you're the NCAA committee in charge assigning home sites for the 1993 national women's soccer tournament, you would do so by unfairly stripping that team of its well deserved right to host its regional games.

Even though the Notre Dame women's soccer team managed to accomplish all of the above feats this season, it was told yesterday that it will have to travel to the home field of the Wisconsin-Madison Badgers, a team which the Irish handily defeated in September, for the first two rounds of the NCAA tournament this weekend.

An extremely disappointed Chris Petrucelli, head coach of the women's squad, explained that the decision was

No. 19 Zurcher captures two titles

By PHIL LANGER
Sports Writer

This weekend, Andy Zurcher, No. 19 in the nation, capped off a terrific showing by the Notre Dame men's tennis team at the Rolex, by capturing both the Midwest singles and doubles crowns.

The top 96 players in the Midwest region were present at the Eck Pavillion to witness Zurcher seemingly complete his hard fought comeback from last year's wrist surgery by beating top Michigan player Dan Brackus 6-1, 3-6, 6-4.

"It is a terrific achievement for him," said Irish head coach Bob Bayliss. "He's the embodiment of everything Notre Dame stands for."

It has been a long, painful road for Zurcher to regain his former status as a threat in collegiate tennis. After undergoing surgery, Zurcher cross-trained to stay in shape, but it wasn't until September that he was able to play a full set of singles. Last night, however, Zurcher proved to himself and to the Midwest region that his adverse road of rehabilitation is seemingly over by beating Dan Brackus, the No. 1 player in the Irish compete in second NCAA tournament ever

By MIKE NORBUT
Sports Writer

The drought has finally ended.

Yesterday, the Notre Dame men's soccer team found out that they would be only the second men's soccer team in Irish history to compete in the NCAA tournament, which starts this weekend.

Notre Dame will open the tournament at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. The Badgers, a team the Irish have not yet faced, fought off several tough Big Ten foes and finished the season with a 13-3-4 record. The game is scheduled to begin at 2:30 pm Sunday afternoon.

"I'm really pleased," said

Irish head coach Mike Berticelli, who will be making his first NCAA tournament appearance since 1989, his last year with Old Dominion. "I was hoping we'd get to play someone we haven't seen."

The Badgers have been ranked in and out of the top ten all season, and currently hold the No. 13 spot in the ISAA poll. Notre Dame is ranked 22nd in the same poll.

The fact that the Irish have to travel four hours away to play against a higher ranked team does not seem to bother Berticelli.

"I'd prefer to be the underdog in a game like this," continued the coach. "The players have more motivation."
