Weekend Wheels terminated

By BRAD PRENDERGAST
Assistant News Editor

Weekend Wheels has finally been derailed for good.

After months of discussion and debate concerning its future, the Hall Presidents' Council decided last Tuesday to terminate the service effective immediately.

Citing low ridership, the council voted 26-3 to end the four year old program that had been designed to help students at off-campus bars and parties return home safely.

"It was a waste of money," said Jeff Dix, co-president of Stanford Hall. "It was costing us $230 per night, and nobody was riding it."

On Saturday, November 12, no persons utilized the service, and two people used it the night before, according to United Limo, which ran the service's buses.

"That was the weekend that sort of clinched it for everyone," Dix said.

The council voted on October 4 to continue Weekend Wheels throughout the school year, but after several consecutive

Rice to deliver address at commencement

Alumna, former Bush advisor "honored"

Condoleezza Rice, provost of Stanford University and a former foreign policy advisor to President George Bush, will deliver the principal address at the University of Notre Dame's 150th commencement exercises next May 21, the University announced yesterday.

In its December 5th issue Time Magazine named Rice to its list of the fifty most influential American leaders under the age of forty.

Rice received her master's degree in government and international studies from Notre Dame in 1975 and has been a member of the advisory council for Notre Dame's College of Arts and Letters since 1991.

In a telephone interview from her Stanford office, Rice said she said was "absolutely very honored to be asked to speak."

"I have always held Notre Dame in the highest regard. I'm looking forward to the opportunity to speak," said Rice.

University President Father Edward Malloy said he thought the pairing of Rice and Notre Dame was a "perfect fit."

"Condoleezza Rice is an outstanding leader at one of the world's great universities. She's a Notre Dame graduate who has made contributions at the university level and in government service," said Malloy. "She's an example, a model leader for our graduates, and I'm sure her reflections will be most insightful."

As provost, Rice is Stanford's top academic and budget officer. Appointed in 1993 at age 38, she became the youngest provost in Stanford's history. Rice is also the first woman and first African-American to hold the post. A member of the Stanford faculty since 1981, she is a professor of political science and a two-time recipient of university awards for excellence in teaching.

Rice was President Bush's special assistant for national security affairs from 1989 to 1991. During that time, she also served as the National Security Council's senior director for Soviet affairs. Rice's knowledge of the Soviet military and Russian language was put to use in summit negotiations on arms control, trade, the Soviet military presence in Lithuania, and other issues pertaining to the end of the Cold War. Brent Scowcroft, national security adviser to President Bush, described her in press reports as "brilliant," "indispensable," and "absolutely invaluable to our deliberations."

A native of Birmingham, Alabama, Rice grew up there and in Denver, where her father

Members of the senior class didn't quite know what to make of Tuesday's announcement of Stanford University provost Condoleezza Rice as principal speaker at Notre Dame's commencement next May.

Several seniors expressed emotions ranging from disappointment to interest as word of the choice reached campus.

"I've never heard of her," said Alisha Eisert who lives Off Campus. "I was hoping for someone more relevant to us as a class."

Eisert said she is intrigued by the choice of a non celebrity or politician. "People have come here in the past and given speeches from their soap boxes, so I'm glad she (Rice) isn't coming to do that," she said.

Roger Feo of Flanner Hall said the choice Rice intrigued him. "I hope since she's not a politician that her speech will be helpful, that she'll give some good advice."

Some seniors said they didn't have an opinion on the choice because of their limited knowledge of Rice.

"I don't anything about her, so I can't really say anything informative," said Siegfried Michelle Martinez.

Melinda Balli, of Howard Hall, said the choice disappointed her. "I guess I was hoping for some one more popular," she said.

was vice chancellor at the University of Denver. She entered the university at age 15, anticipating a career as a concert pianist. The name "Condoleezza" is in fact derived from the Italian musical direction "con dolce," which means "with sweetness."

Becoming intrigued with international politics, she earned a bachelor's degree in political science cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa in 1974. At age nineteen she enrolled in graduate school at Notre Dame.

Rice said that Notre Dame has always occupied a special place in her heart.

"Even though I wasn't there as an undergraduate, Notre Dame has always felt more like my alma mater because I came here at such a young age," said Rice.

Saint Mary's government joins to announce goals

By LAURA FERGUSON
Saint Mary's News Editor

At last night's Board of Governance (BOG) panel, representatives from the four main governmental bodies at Saint Mary's met to explain their major accomplishments and goals and to answer questions from the floor.

Melissa Peters, vice president for Academic Affairs and College Relations, said that the Student Academic Council (SAC) has worked this year to establish their name at Saint Mary's. One of SAC's other focuses is on creating a book listing all of the senior comprehensive requirements and advanced "W" requirements for each department.

"This book will be helpful for students who have not decided on a major," she said.

Peters expects the book to be completed in January and distributed to freshmen and sophomores, and a copy will be kept as a resource in Counseling and Career Development.

Over the past year, SAC has also organized Women's Week, which will take place the week of January 23. Events such as a lecture by a Saint Mary's alumna, a self-defense class, and an aerobics night will lead up to the annual Play of the Mind conference at the end of the week.

Audry Comrie, coordinator for the Student Activities Board (SAB), said her goals for the year were to sponsor a variety of events on campus which students would enjoy and become active in as well as to increase the awareness of SAB.

In the past semester SAB has brought more vendors to campus, the Twilight Tailgate featuring human bowling and fake tattoos, relationship expert Ellen Gootblatt, and various movie marathons. This winter, a Christmas giving tree will be displayed on campus. According to Comrie, the purpose of this tree is to help kids in need through Madison Center.

Activities for next semester include the return of virtual reality and game show known as "Blizzard of Bucks".

The Residence Hall Association (RHA), led by president Jennifer Cherubini, has already donated $250 for maintaining the sand volleyball courts near Angela, and sponsored Alcohol Awareness Week.

According to Cherubini, RHA will continue to have contact with the Hall Presidents' Council at Notre Dame in order to avoid conflicting events be-

Kirk addresses university's future

By AMY SCHMIDT
News Writer

Addressing issues ranging from the future of Flanner to the power of student government, Assistant Vice President for Resident Life William Kirk spoke at a question and answer session last night sponsored by Toastmaster's International.

According to Kirk, although need for administrative spaces prompted the conversion of Grace, he sees no changes in store for Flanner in the near future.

"I know of no plans to take over the use of Flanner," he said.

However, he did not rule out the possibility for changes, depending on donors, construction plans, and university needs.

Kirk said that the present administration is doing "a great job," considering the nine month term with which they have to work.

"As long as they come in with realistic expectations, they can be successful," he said.

Possible reforms being examined, include an increase in study space during exams and making it easier for non-Notre Dame students, primarily friends of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students, to get tickets for home football games, Kirk said.

Regarding student security in light of recent attacks on perimeter areas of campus, Kirk said that undercover ef-orts, surveillance, and extra staffing are steps toward a solution.

"I think we have a good handle on it," he said.

Kirk said that the issues present at Notre Dame parallel the unique situation of the university itself.

"Everything that you (the students) do takes place under theegis of the Office of Student Affairs," Kirk said.

He noted three things that set

Notre Dame apart from other universities across the country: the role of the Congregation of the Holy Cross, its fairly conservative climate, and the "tremendous athletic tradition" associated with the school.

Kirk noted the importance of knowing the university's mission and how things happen on campus. He said that, above all, Notre Dame is involved in "the pursuit and sharing of truth."

A pre-winter night's dream

Eric Ruethling

With the first snow already past us, and cold winds passing through the South Bend area, one cannot debate the fact that winter is definitely on its way. The weatherman on Monday night talked about the awful winter coming, and how fortunate we are to have avoided its nastiness for as long as we have.

Although sub-zero temperatures and streets of ice are things no one likes, I find it difficult to label winter as "awful." I have had many great times during the winter, and as far as the seasons go it is my favorite.

When I was younger, winter meant sledding and snowball wars. The typical sledding hill was only two doors down, but a larger and far more wavy mountain existed only a couple of blocks from my house. When the first thick snows covered the ground, all the kids in the neighborhood would rush to these two hills. At first, it would be just "normal" sledding. This would give way to making a ramp and sending ourselves over it. The kids with less patience would start jumping and sledding down the ramp with other sledders. Soon the entire hill became a chaotic zone of sled-ders—each running over the other, leaving only the wrecked bodies behind.

Smash-em-up derbies would develop, with "teams" of sledders. All the sledders would start at once, and as each team tried to prevent the other from reaching the bottom of the hill all memory of mom's warnings would soon be forgotten. Kicks were delivered to opponents sleds, sending the victims careening towards certain death with a chain link fence, a tree, or the ramp. Other brave souls would jump from a tandem sled, and attempt to land on a opposing sled—a favorite tactic of mine. This would hopefully knock off all the enemy riders and control of the sled would belong to the jumper. However, this usually ended up turning the sled and its riders into a spinning mess of humanity and plastic as it rolled uncontrollably down the hill—taking out other sledders as they climbed back up for more.

The carnage would continue with snowball wars. While sledding required much preparation, vast snowball wars could erupt at any time. On several occasions small skirmishes with junior and high school students would develop into mass battles ranging over to the nearest street. The two sides would hide behind the snow banks created by the passing plows, and the street in between would become a no-mans land of ice chunks and forgotten gloves and hats.

Even today, I look forward to winter. The call for snow football begins during the Thanksgiving season, with us playing on the frozen turf. Here, the lake-effect snows create a veritable snow football paradise, with a good six inch to foot layer covering the ground. Seeing the snow flurries on Monday brought back memories of my friend J.B. making "the catch"—leaping three feet for the ball then landing on a snow bank for the touchdown. I have yet to see better elsewhere.

10 die in Indian election violence, vote may be delayed

NEW DELHI

Urugonda
Land mines explode killing police and civilians

Land mines believed planted by a militant Maoist group killed at least eight policemen and two civilians today in the southern state of Andhra Pradesh. The explosion was the second in four days in Andhra Pradesh, where the Peoples War Group apparently is trying to disrupt Monday's state elections. On Saturday, land mines killed 19 Indian commandos sent to the state to maintain order during the elections. Elections officials said they may have to postpone the vote if the violence continues. Andhra Pradesh is one of the four states electing state assemblies. The results are seen as a bellwether for India's parliamentary elections in 1996. Today's explosion occurred during a police patrol in Urugonda, 930 miles south of New Delhi, the United News of India news agency said. In addition to eight policemen, two unidentified men were with police at the time. Twelve people were injured, including five policemen hospitalized with serious injuries, the agency said. The Peoples War group has been leading a peasants' rebellion in Andhra Pradesh for several years. Peasants make up the majority of the poor in the predominantly rural state.

House approves world trade agreement

WASHINGTON

The House, brushing off critics who protested the legitimacy of a vote by a lame-duck Congress, passed a sweeping world trade agreement Tuesday. President Clinton hailed it as a "historic vote for American workers, farmers and families." The House voted 288-146 for the rewrite of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, sending the measure to the Senate, where supporters were still searching for the votes needed for passage. The four hours of debate were brought to a close by House Speaker Thomas Foley, who in his final speech in the chamber where he had served for 30 years urged his colleagues to pass the measure. Foley was one of 85 House members who were either defeated or chose not to seek re-election participating in the first lame-duck session of Congress in 12 years, a fact that GATT opponents pointed to often during the debate. The GATT accord would cut tariffs by 38 percent worldwide, expand the rules of world trade to new areas such as agriculture and services and create a new, more powerful World Trade Organization to referee disputes. The administration estimated that the reduced tariffs equate to a $744 billion global tax cut over a decade. For Americans, it would represent a $70 billion cut in border taxes on imported goods and services over 10 years. Opponents charged, however, that lowering U.S. barriers would mean America's factories would face even more competition from low-wage foreign workers. They said the new WTO represents an unprecedented infringement on America's sovereignty, and they accused supporters of railroading the legislation through the lame-duck session. The bipartisan vote included 167 Democrats and 121 Republicans in favor of the accord and 89 Democrats, 56 Republicans against it.

House passes GATT

288 for, 146 against

What the accord means

- Tariffs on food, electronics, cars and clothing will be cut by about 38 percent worldwide.
- Beer, toys and paper products will ultimately become duty-free.
- GATT rules will apply to agriculture, copyrights and patents.
- A World Trade Organization will be created to oversee trade disputes.

Jenny Craig accused of discrimination

BOSTON

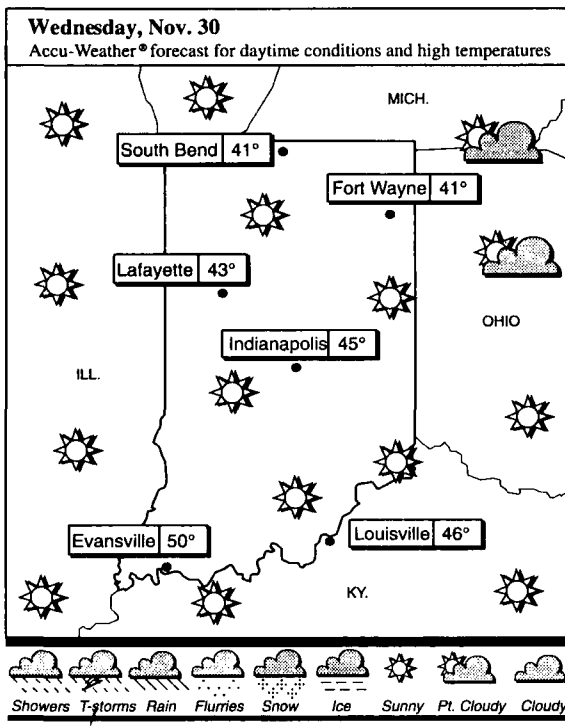

Tracy Tinkham says he wanted to move up the corporate ladder at Jenny Craig Inc. But when he was told he'd "either have to have a sex change or a push-up bra" to get ahead, he decided the price of advancement was too high. On Tuesday, the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination said it had found probable cause that three men had been discriminated against. Three other cases were still under investigation, while two of the complainants missed filing deadlines. MCAD case workers will mediate negotiations between the company and the men, like Joseph Egan of Boston. All eight men claim they were denied promotions because of their sex and that they were given poor sales assignments, ordered to perform demeaning tasks and sexually harassed. Egan, 28, said his female co-workers commented on his impressive biceps and nice eyes, and that another female supervisor told him she had dreamed about him naked. Company officials said that the allegations were unwarranted and they were confident of being exonerated.

Hope for breast cancer victims

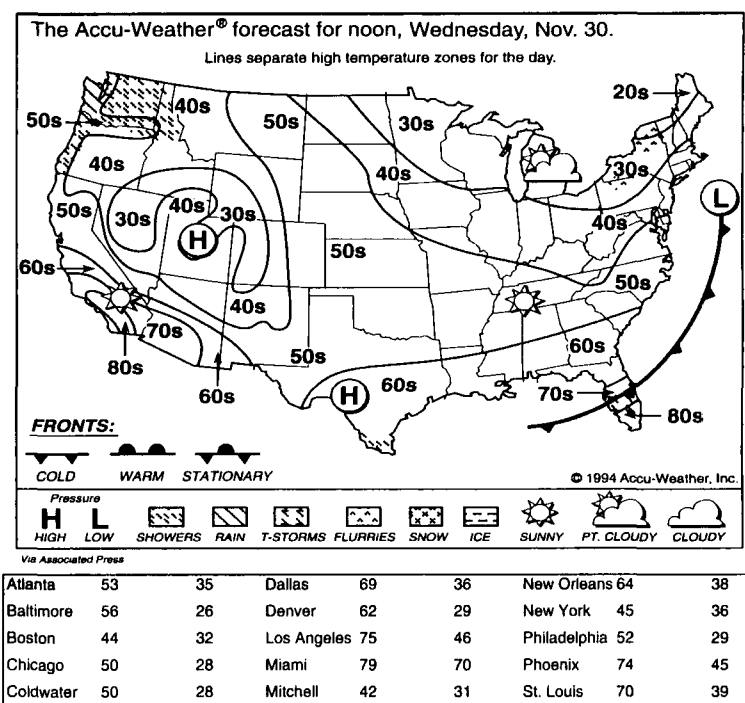

CHICAGO

A radioactive tracer injected into women who may have breast cancer makes malignancies "light up" on a detector and could cut in half the number of biopsies needed in this country, a researcher said Tuesday. If the technique is proved effective, it could save millions of dollars and spare hundreds of thousands of women the pain and scarring that can accompany biopsies, said the UCLA researcher, Dr. Iraj Khalkhali. The technique was 90 percent accurate in identifying breast cancer in women who were afflicted, Khalkhali and colleagues reported. "Mammography is very sensitive at detecting most abnormalities in the breast, but only one out of every four or five suspicious lesions seen on a mammogram turns out to be a cancer," said Khalkhali. The new and still experimental technique, called scintimammography, costs about $600, compared to the $1,500-$3,000 for a mamogram, and employs a radioactive tracer first used to detect heart disease. About 700,000 biopsies year are done to evaluate breast lumps.

Mexican employment in need of change

By DEBORAH SCHULTZ
News Writer

There is a need for a change in employment structures in Mexico, according to Enrique Dussel Peters, a professor from the University of California, San Diego and La Universidad Autonoma e Mexico.

"From the period of 1982 to 1987, the economic system had high social costs. The distribution of income deteriorated, and there were low investments, so at the end of 1987 the government began a complete liberalization," said Peters, summarizing the economic policies of Mexico from 1982 to 1994.

He said that with this, the government became the center of social structure, reducing inflation through real wages and an increase of trade.

However, instead of liberalization working as it was supposed to, it produced an overkill of employment.

"A shift from an export oriented industrialization to an import oriented industrialization occurred, producing a wide trade deficit," said Peters. Because of this, a fall in domestic inputs followed, forcing employment to suffer.

Mexico's problems with unemployment are severe because "they have no unemployment insurance to support the unemployed; therefore, without a job people do not survive."

Due to a growth rate of population and a drop in mortality rates, the number of jobs is lower than the increase of economic rates, Peters said.

"In order for the gap between the economically active population and the number of generated jobs to decrease, the growth rate of employment needs to increase by 5 percent annually to be able to accommodate this change" said Peters. "Since the economy can not handle this change, 900,000 people per year find themselves without a job."

Part of the reason that this deficit occurs is that out of Mexico's 73 economic branches, only 3 have generated enough jobs for the 5% increase.

"After the liberalization change in 1987, manufacturing was the only branch to recover significantly. The branches that generated the most employment had the lowest recovery rates," said Peters.

According to Peters, "There is not a solution in the short run due to the challenge of the problem, but that an export oriented industry will increase employment."

Security to store bicycles

By LIZ FORAN
Associate News Editor

Winter is coming, and with it worries about bicycles rusting or being ripped off.

Instead of hauling it home, Notre Dame Security is offering to store your bike indoors for all of winter, and for free, said Lt. Irvin Sikorski.

"This is not just to prevent theft," he said, "but also to prevent weather damage to the bike. Then when it comes out of storage, very little maintenance is required."

Sikorski said that for the past few years, Security has only had about 20 to 30 bicycles stored per winter. He added that he would like to see increased student response. It doesn't cost anything and may prevent a damaged or stolen bike, he said.

Interested students can bring their bicycles to the north side of the Security Building by the garage doors on Thursday from 3 to 6 p.m. and again on Friday from 3 to 6 p.m.

Bicycles will be released to students as soon as the weather breaks in the spring, Sikorski said.

Holy Cross Sisters remembered

By BETH VAN TIEM
News Writer

The Sisters of the Holy Cross made a significant contribution to the nursing field during the Spanish American War, according to Barbara Wall, associate professor of nursing at Saint Mary's College.

"Let everything be clean, clean, clean," is what Wall humorously referred to as the first mission statement of the Sisters of the Holy Cross.

The Sisters, who arrived at Camp Hamilton in Lexington, Ky. on Sept. 4, 1898, overcame many hardships. Living conditions were rough, and they were surrounded by more than 600 sick men.

Sister Valentine Reid, C.S.C., present at Camp Hamilton, talked not about the war with Cuba, but the "war with typhoid cases." Unsanitary conditions and poor water and milk supplies led to serious illness, according to Wall.

The Sisters of the Holy Cross, who were primarily in the teaching field, worked without formal training, to save the lives of American soldiers.

"The Sisters' vow of discipline, self sacrifice, and obedience fit the model of a trained nurse," said Wall.

In addition to creating an atmosphere of cleanliness, their duties included applying antiseptic, treating wounds, comforting patients, and fulfilling dietary needs. They were in contact with the patient's families and provided spiritual care.

Often they worked twelve hour days tending to the sick.

"This (Camp Hamilton) is not a place to send one that does not know how to do all that is required of a trained nurse," said Reid.

Under the administration of Sister Lydia Clifford C.S.C., the Sisters of the Holy Cross worked as nurses at Camp Conrad, in Columbia, Ga.

Clifford was under the scrutiny of Dr. Williams, who believed she should be in charge of a dormitory, at most. Like many other Sisters, she proved male doctors and trained nurses wrong. She was a competent leader, a remarkable accomplishment for a female of the time, according to Wall.

Some Sisters were even sent to Cuba for a brief period.

As the United States began to recognize women as equals, women nurses won the respect from many people in the medical field, including the surgeon general.

Three of the eight nurse training schools established in the early 1900s were founded by the Sisters of the Holy Cross who aided in the Spanish American War.

Letters and diaries of their experiences can be found in Saint Mary's archives today.

Wheels

weekends with an average ridership of 10 per night, Dix and Dennis McCarthy of Flanner Hall presented a resolution to the council on November 22 about the program.

Dix and McCarthy proposed that the program be given six weeks when school was in session to achieve an average nightly ridership of 50 students.

If this goal could not be achieved, then Dix and McCarthy would suggest that the program be terminated.

"The resolution was a compromise to people who still wanted to give it a chance," Dix said.

But while the council was discussing the resolution, the members gradually came to a decision that they should decide the fate of Weekend Wheels at that meeting, according to Rich Palermo, co-chairperson of the council.

"We've worked on the program as much as we could," Palermo said, "but due to constraints from the University and the low ridership, we felt that nothing more could be done."

According to Palermo and Dix, the University's policy that students could not use the service to go to the bars hindered the number of riders.

"(If HPC allowed students to use the service to get to the bars,) the University would think of it as an endorsement of drinking," Dix said.

"I don't think the administration has a serious commitment to stopping drunk driving if that's their attitude," Dix continued. "Their policy was the main impediment."

The money saved from ending Weekend Wheels may be used to fund a new program to combat drunk driving, Dix and Palermo said.

"We're going to look into alternatives," Palermo said, "but nothing will happen until next semester."

No alternatives have been officially presented, Palermo said.

The council set aside about $12,000 for the Weekend Wheels program this year, and just over $5,000 has been spent so far.

A clause in the contract between HPC and United Limo allows the council to cancel at any time, thus letting the council save the remaining $7,000.

tween the two campuses.

Noha El-Ganzouri, student body president, addressed the issue of renovation of Haggar College Center.

"Students want a social space that will be theirs, not taken over by faculty," she said.

Earlier this year, BOG distributed a survey and the majority of students responded that Haggar was not currently used as a social space. According to El-Ganzouri, 75 percent of the students expressed their wish for cable TV to be installed in Haggar.

Other BOG activities this semester have included the continuing efforts of WVFI to gain an FM frequency.

"Now it seems that WVFI will take more than two years to go FM so we are thinking about fixing our AM transmitter," said El-Ganzouri. A student survey on this may be distributed later in the year.

El-Ganzouri mentioned that a representative from the Notre Dame Relations Committee is sitting in on the planning of the Keenan Revue.

In the future, BOG may also look into updating the student government constitution.

Robin Walsh commented on SURV's effort to get more people to be committed to regular service projects. "It is hard because we send out bulletins but we don't get much of a response."

Quayle placed in hospital

By LISA SHAPIRO
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS

Former Vice President Dan Quayle underwent treatment Tuesday for a dangerous blood clot in his lung just weeks before he was expected to announce whether he will run for president in 1996.

"The doctors are very optimistic about Mr. Quayle's condition right now. He's doing extremely well and he is progressing very nicely," said Pam Perry, a spokeswoman for Indiana University Medical Center.

The 47-year-old Quayle was expected to make a full recovery, the spokeswoman said.

He was being treated with anti-coagulants to prevent further clotting while natural enzymes in Quayle's body dissolve the lodged clot, said the physician treating him, Dr. Homer Twigg.

The clot was considered life threatening because it could have interfered with his breathing, Perry said.

Twigg said at a news conference that Quayle is otherwise in excellent health.

Twigg said it isn't known what causes such clots, called pulmonary embolisms. They often occur in people who are sedentary for long stretches, such as truck drivers, and can be hereditary, but Quayle had no such predisposition, the doctor said.

Quayle has been promoting his book "Standing Firm" and appearing frequently on behalf of Republican candidates over the last year.

"Long term he'll be fine and this shouldn't affect his political future at all," said Ann Hathaway, executive director of his political action committee.

Quayle went to the emergency room for a chest X-ray Sunday because he wasn't feeling well and was diagnosed with walking pneumonia, Hathaway said.

He was sent home with a prescription but returned to the hospital Monday after complaining of shortness of breath, and doctors found that a blood clot had traveled to his lung, Perry said.

Pulmonary embolisms start in the calf of a leg and work their way up the body, through the heart and become lodged in the pulmonary vein of one of the lungs.

If Quayle's health is fine otherwise, chances are "he would never have another one," Bates said.

Quayle was deemed in excellent condition after in physical in 1989.

the University extends beyond her graduate experience. Rice's father knew University President Emeritus Father Theodore Hesburgh from Hesburgh's work on the Civil Rights Commission.

"We went to South Bend to say hello to Father Hesburgh, and I just fell in love with Notre Dame," Rice wrote in an article in the Spring 1994 Notre Dame Magazine. "I moved to South Bend and was really on my own for the first time. I was 19 and loved it."

After earning her master's degree with a concentration in Soviet and Eastern European studies, Rice returned to the University of Denver and was awarded her doctorate in 1981.

Rice is the author of "The Soviet Union and the Czechoslovak Army" and, with Alexander Dallin, "The Gorbachev Era." She has also written numerous articles on Soviet and Eastern European foreign and defense policies and is at work with Phillip Zelikow on a book concerning German reunification.

Rice is a member of the American Political Science Association and of the American Association for the Advancement of Slavic Studies.

She also has been a Hoover Institution Fellow, a senior fellow at the Institute for International Studies, and a member of the Center for International Studies and Arms Control. She is member of the board of directors of Transamerica Corporations and Chevron, and is a former trustee of the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Balli said she was troubled by the choice of a second speaker from the Bush administration in recent years. President Bush spoke at 1992 commencement.

Off Campus resident Ryan Hallford said he was indifferent to the choice.

"I'd just as soon have (eccentric Guns-n-Roses lead singer) Axl Rose speak," he said. "I just want to hurry up and graduate."

Carroll Hall's Michael Angaiak said the lack of name recognition or celebrity status in a speaker is not something he finds necessarily bad. "Just because I don't know her doesn't mean she's going to be a bad speaker," he said. Angaiak said he hopes to hear a good speech.

University President Rev. Edward Malloy says that's just what graduating seniors will hear.

Malloy praised Rice as an excellent speaker and leader in her field. "I think Condoleezza Rice is a perfect fit for this speech," he said.

"I would give her high marks," Wolfgram said. "I think she'll give a great speech."

Pataki commends Giuliani

Associated Press

NEW YORK

After three weeks of unreturned phone calls, rebuffed invitations and huffy exchanges through third parties, they've finally made up.

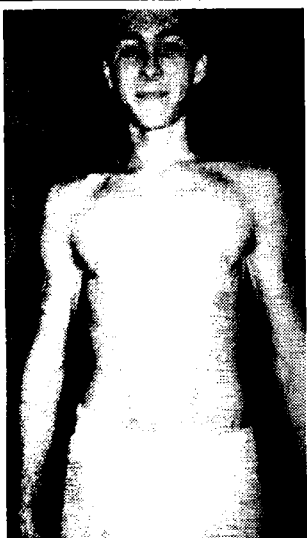

Gov.-elect George Pataki finally accepted congratulations today from Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, who crossed party lines to endorse Pataki's opponent.

"The campaign is over, the politics is over. It's now policy and working together," Pataki said as he and Giuliani stood together after their hour-long meeting.

"We both feel exactly the same way," Giuliani said.

It was the first time they had spoken since Giuliani stunned GOP leaders by endorsing Democratic Gov. Mario Cuomo in October.

Pataki declined to accept Giuliani's congratulatory telephone calls on election night, and Giuliani declined Pataki's suggestion to call back during business hours. Then Giuliani refused to attend Monday's get-acquainted meeting between Pataki and top city officials, mostly Democrats, because he wanted a private meeting.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Women's soccer thanks ND

Dear Editor:

I am writing on behalf of our women's soccer team. We would like to thank the many members of the Notre Dame community who have supported us during our run for the final game. Although we did not return with the championship trophy, we do return with a great amount of appreciation for everyone's support. Without the help of those in the bleachers during our regional games, I do not believe we would have made it to Portland.

A special thanks goes to our Athletic Department for going out of its way to help us reach our goals. The work the stadium crew put in to prepare our field for the regionals will be forever appreciated. Also, the efforts made by our athletic administrators and Father Beauchamp to be with us in Portland have not gone unnoticed. We could not have done it without any of you.

The tremendous coverage this season by Rian Akey and the Observer staff has also made a lasting impression on our team. Many of these articles and pictures will fill our scrap books and give us fond memories.

Personally I would like to thank the 23 young women who have made this all possible. These young ladies epitomize the Notre Dame spirit. Not once during this long season did they give up regardless of the situation. They have lived, breathed, and sweat soccer over the last three months and have done it with smiles on their faces. No where is there a group of people with more pride in their University or class in their actions. I feel honored to have had the opportunity to work with this special group.

As we turn our focus to next year, we will not forget the many exciting moments that took place this year. We are happy that we could share those moments with so many of our friends.

CHRIS PETRUCELLI
Head Women's Soccer Coach

Inaccuracies noted in Timely Topic's commentary on population control

Dear Editor:

Chris Corrente's coverage of the Timely Topic's discussion: "Population: After Cairo, Where?" ("Church May Examine Stand," Nov. 17) is generally very fine. However, Corrente quotes me inaccurately in three places.

- He writes that I said "While the Church has never approved of the use of artificial birth control, it has supported limiting the population. I actually said that while the Church does not approve of the use of artificial birth control, it does support procreative responsibility.

- He claims that I said "The Church has long presupposed what Cairo called a new consensus, that 'birth rate control programs are an inadequate and inappropriate substitution for an international commitment' to solving the problem." In fact, I said that the Church has long presupposed... that birth rate control programs are an inadequate and inappropriate substitution for an international commitment to sustainable and just development.

- He attributes to me the claim that "The Church has failed to take serious and active means of controlling population." What I claimed is that the "Church has failed to take seriously the relation between access to safe and effective means of controlling reproduction and women's full participation in social, political and economic life."

To his credit, Corrente made a sincere attempt to reach me before submitting his column. Nonetheless, the record should show that the article contains significant inaccuracies, however subtle.

Media, liberals incorporate new political slant on Christianity

Dear Editor:

The mainstream media's criticism of the Republican agenda has generally taken the form of various concerns about the results of implementing Republican programs deemed by liberals to be uncaring, selfish, and mean-spirited.

These judgments assigned to the motives of conservative voters, and to the politicians that represent them, intentionally omit the fact that the real issue in this debate is not whether or not there is a need for compassionate, sacrificial care for the needy, but how such care can, and should be, provided.

The irony of this new slant in the news is that Christian ethics are being included in this discussion, not by the conservatives, but by the liberals. Although liberal ideology asserts that one of the greatest threats to freedom in our nation is the blurring of the separation of Church and State, we now should understand that the State is in fact where true Christianity finds its home! The media questions where the Christ-like compassion and sacrifice on behalf of the needy is in a "Contract with America" that proposes to cut welfare payments, give tax breaks to the well-to-do, and diminish the size of the vehicle (government) through which compassion and caring are delivered.

In this way, conservative ideology is being painted by the mainstream media as brazenly unchristian. It is astonishing, while we as individuals find our religious liberties being eroded, that the government takes the liberty to impose what it considers to be Christian principles upon society at large. I submit that the State is attempting to take on the traditional role of the Church and family in society.

Liberalism dictates that government power, government policy, and government programs are the avenues by which care and compassion should be delivered to the needy, but conservatism asserts that the power of personal relationships, individual choice, and community programs are the avenues through which care and compassion are best administered. Newt Gingrich stated that this past election was about some big ideas. I wholeheartedly agree.

At issue is how we the people should implement Christian ethics in our society. Do we want greater government involvement, or is it time to try a different mode of distribution of care to the needy?

■ FASHION FOLLIES

Winter Wear Warms Up

The Observer/ Brandon Candura

Fashion flows into practicality: as these models demonstrate, a selection of winter coats exists, including wool capes, leather jackets, and pea coats.

Think soft and extra warm for this winter's apparel. If you are new to the South Bend area this year it will not take you very long to figure out why.

Before you know it, temperatures will be falling and you will not want to be caught ill-prepared. This season's styles offer some very cozy solutions.

Veronica Torres
Accent Columnist

Everything on your wish list for the upcoming cold, winter months should spell out p-r-a-c-t-i-c-a-l-i-t-y. Although sweaters and coats are repeat performances of former styles, the popularity of the different materials being used is the stirring excitement in winter dressing. Angora, cashmere, mohair, and even silk are making their way onto everything from sweaters to coats to dresses to hats.

Sweaters, this season, are falling to all lengths. Some are worn cropped above the belly button while others are taking dives below the hips. For the latter, narrow, turtleneck sweaters and shapely V-necks are the most flattering. Similar to the fall wear, the look remains defined for winter.

If you have been taken in by the revival of mohair, remember that while thin versions of the material are pleasing to the eye, thicker styles can add unwanted inches. One major bonus for mohair, however, is that compared to cashmere (another seasonal favorite) it is relatively inexpensive because of its abundance. Plan on seeing it around for some time to come.

For those who wish to wear lighter materials or for those who simply cannot suffer the allergies that some knits can cause, an alternative is the silk, ribbed sweater. Nevertheless, whatever you prefer color is key. Winter clothing should be festive and the best way to show spirit is by indulging in bright, bordering on fluorescent, colors.

The Observer/ Brandon Candura

There are many options this season when it comes to selecting a winter coat. For long, or short, natural or synthetic fibers are all up for grabs. However, pea coats are making a big comeback. They are shorter than most traditional coats and usually look best worn for casual occasions. This time though, navy blue is not your only choice. Just look around, different colored coats with a variety of buttons are everywhere.

If you are in the market for something dressier, double-breasted coats in cashmere or mohair provide elegance for a night on the town. Long or short lengths are equally charming. Also, wool capes this holiday season add a dramatic touch but have not yet received the attention they should. So, if you are willing to go out on a limb, invest in one.

Sports is a sure influence for winter gear these days. More and more, avid skiers are finding their barest essentials for a day on the slopes right on the fashion runways. Comfortable nylon ski jackets filled with duck down are racing to the stores everywhere. Paired with spandex leggings and ear warmers they are perfect for the season.

If none of the above appeal to you, leather, as always, is a basic favorite. Whether it is motorcycle inspired with silver buckles and buttons, or the sophisticated jacket that ties at the waist, you cannot go wrong with leather.

The great thing about coats and sweaters this season is that they can go with anything including jeans, wool-tweed mini-skirts or even your favorite dress. The materials are so neutral that they are appropriate for any occasion, dressy or casual. Coinciding with this year's desire for women's dress to be more glamorous, the materials offered also help to define and flatter.

To top the outfit off, would you believe that six inch, open-toe heels are still the rage for snowy, wet winter months? Well, believe it. And with no end in sight, I see it my duty to offer something for those who cannot fathom the idea of walking around in a pair of stilettos. My solution: to-the-knee, leather riding boots or your most comfortable pair of hiking boots. Happy Holidays!

OSU's Cooper talks to LSU

Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio
Ohio State coach John Cooper has talked with Louisiana State officials about the head coaching job at LSU, a television station reported Tuesday night.

WBNS-TV in Columbus reported that Cooper said he met Tuesday with LSU officials in Atlanta. LSU fired head coach Curley Hallman after four years.

Cooper, who has one year remaining at his Ohio State contract, and athletics director Andy Geiger could not be reached for comment.

Neither returned telephone calls Tuesday night. Another message was left for sports information director Steve Snapp.

Ohio State and Cooper have discussed a contract extension, but no agreement has been reached. Geiger told WTVN radio in Columbus Tuesday that he expected the talks to end soon.

"I'm very hopeful we'll come to closure very soon," Geiger told the station.

Ohio State went 9-3 during the regular season, capped by a 22-6 victory over Michigan. It was Cooper's only victory over Ohio State's arch-rival in eight years. Cooper is 54-25-4 at Ohio State.

Eagles set to fly to Hawaii for Aloha

By HOWARD ULMAN

BOSTON

The trumpet players won't make the trip. Some loyal alumni might be left behind. The Boston College football team will be making the expensive journey to Hawaii for a bowl game that wasn't its first choice.

Boston College (6-4-1) accepted on Tuesday a berth in the Aloha Bowl on Christmas Day against 11th-ranked Kansas State (9-2). Losses in their last two games cost the Eagles a good shot at the Fiesta Bowl. And the Carquest Bowl chose West Virginia (7-4).

The Aloha Bowl pays $750,000 to each school. The prestigious Fiesta Bowl in Tempe, Ariz., has a $3 million payday and the Carquest Bowl in Miami has a $1 million jackpot.

"Our preference was a post-season game," Boston College athletic director Chet Gladchuk said Tuesday, putting a positive spin on the situation.

"That's what we have shot for, and it's mission accomplished."

He said the school wouldn't lose money on the trip. It has to cut corners, though.

such a win. Ever since the end of last season, the momentum surrounding this program has been growing.

First, the announcement that the Irish would join the Big East was a tremendous shot in the arm for MacLeod's club. More recently, the recruiting class that MacLeod has put together for next season added more positive energy.

But all that was for the future. This win is for the present. Not only does it build on the momentum, it gives the Irish reason to believe for this season.

"This is a great opportunity,"

MacLeod noted. "It is a building block for this team. We have the opportunity to make our move."

Even in the past, the big wins the Irish did earn came pretty well after the season has been defined. This game can serve as a different definition point.

"We haven't started off year like this," senior tri-captain Billy Taylor said. "We've been working for this and can keep building with it."

That notion of building is an important one. The Irish know that they still have a long way to go on the road back to respectability.

"We're making a move," said MacLeod. "We're just starting, trying to climb back and gain respect and credibility."

Not a bad start.

we're digging."

They tossed aside one big shovelful Tuesday, finally finishing one of their familiar upset bids, which always seemed to fall short in the past.

This time, the roles were reversed.

It was Indiana that fired an air ball on a shot that could have won the game at the end of regulation. And it was the Hoosiers without a buck to buy a free throw in overtime. Familiar foibles for Irish fans.

Meanwhile, Notre Dame did its best Indiana impersonation, draining clutch shots from long distance and sealing the victory from the free throw line. The Irish also had just five turnovers in the final 25 minutes.

Keith Kurowski and Ryan Hoover each scored 16 points. Freshman Pat Garrity had his second straight strong outing, scoring 14 points and providing a potent physical presence. And Matt Gotsch and Marcus Young each showed marked improvement with their play in the post.

"This shows we've got a good group of youngsters who have been working their tails off," MacLeod said. "It was a good gut-check for this group."

Notre Dame had that sinking feeling in its gut at halftime, down 11 points and just a Hoosier bucket or two from oblivion.

But the Irish tied the game in less than five minutes. Billy Taylor hit two of his three 3-point shots to spark the spurt, and Justice scored five points, including a layup off a steal to knot the game at 50 with 15:34 remaining.

"I've always said that the most important five minutes of any game are the first five minutes of the second half," Indiana coach Bobby Knight said. "In that time Notre Dame took a game we had fairly well controlled and turned it back into a basketball game."

Hoosier center Alan Henderson was handcuffed in the second half, scoring just eight of his game-high 23 points before fouling out with 3:46 left. And Taylor tightened the clamps on perimeter threat Brian Evans, who scored just 10 points on 3-for-11 shooting from the field.

Notre Dame's offense opened—and the gap closed—thanks to the Hoosiers' woes.

"Fortunately, Indiana began to miss and we were able to pop it out defensively and get some good looks," MacLeod said. "The game changed early in the second half and from that point on it was just a great college basketball game."

State rival Purdue pays visit to Joyce Center

By K.C. GOYER
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's basketball team is looking forward to today's game for more reasons than one.

The home opener for the 1994-95 squad will be against 12th ranked Purdue. The team is eagerly awaiting tip off not just because its the first home game of the regular season, but also because of an established rivalry between the two teams. Last year, the Irish were leading the then third ranked Boilermakers at the half, only to have their shooting percentage slip in the second, missing pulling off the upset by less than two buckets.

Now with the home court advantage, Notre Dame's team looks to break the trend as Purdue has won all five of their previous meetings.

Letitia Bowen, the ND captain and only senior, expects a fast paced and physical game.

"One of Purdue's greatest strengths as a team is that they are all very athletic," Bowen said, "I think they'll try and run us pretty hard."

Notre Dame will have an extra punch of determination tonight after a disappointing loss on the road Saturday to Seton Hall (#25). Although enjoying a fourteen point lead earlier in the game, the team lost 60-65 in overtime.

Despite the loss, the team had continued strong performances off the bench. Depth may become the Irish's secret weapon this season.

Purdue's player to watch is Leslie Johnson, a beefy center who will endure the continuous onslaught of Notre Dame's inside game. The Irish post position is notably deep, consisting of co-captain Carey Poor, Katryna Gaither, Rosanne Bohman, and Kelly Heath. Both Gaither and Bohman have scored double digits coming off the bench this season.

Although the Irish are young this year, they will not be easily intimidated.

"We're going to try to control the tempo, play our game, and be aggressive," Bowen said.

Coach Muffet McGraw has been working on execution on offense as well as denial defense in preparation for tonight's big game. With continued intensity and impressive talent, the Irish hope to send Purdue back to Lafayette with a broken trend and little to less to look forward to.

Inspired Irish squeak past Indiana in OT

By JASON KELLY
Associate Sports Editor

Senior captains Lamarr Justice, Billy Taylor and Jason Williams were wrapped in an exultant midcourt embrace, sharing a sweet sense of satisfaction after their improbable 80-79 overtime victory over Indiana.

Soon they were swarmed by their teammates and a mob of finally-fulfilled fans. All the pent up frustration from recent seasons exploded in an impromptu celebration.

"We've had big wins before, but usually later in the season when we didn't really have anything to play for," Taylor said. "But this is something we can keep building on. It can be a springboard for our season."

Humbled three times already this season, the Hoosiers could only hang their heads as they trudged past the party toward their locker room.

The Irish, unblemished after the Indiana game for the first time in six seasons, danced a jig toward theirs.

"This was a great win for our program," Notre Dame coach John MacLeod said. "We've been trying like heck to climb out of this hole, to gain respect and credibility. It's a long road, but

For the Notre Dame basketball team, playing games like this is nothing new. Winning them is another story.

In years past, the Irish battled perennial powers like North Carolina, Louisville, and Kentucky to the end, yet always found themselves wondering what went wrong in the end. That was the old Notre Dame.

Last night, their 80-79 thrilling win over the Indiana Hoosiers was something different. The new Notre Dame basketball.

"That was a great game for our program," said a proud John MacLeod. "It was great to finally get a win of that magnitude."

Not only was the actual victory crucial for the team, the way in which it was won was key.

They showed they could win against a big name school, and win it down the stretch.

"Two years ago, we lost to them in a heart-breaker," senior tri-captain Billy Taylor remembered. "I was thinking about that as we came down the stretch."

But this time the stretch was friendly for the Irish and they picked a very good time to get
