THE INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER SERVING NOTRE DAME AND SAINT MARY'S

Involvement encouraged by candidates

Increased participation in student government by students was the dominant theme of the majority of tickets in the student government presidential debates last night.

Candidates began by stating their campaign platforms and then answering questions from Scholastic, WSND and The Observer. Ranging from security concerns to student celebrations, all candidates expressed a desire to involve more students in deciding what student government can do for them.

Centering on concerns about forced finals and taxi coupons, the Alejandro Montoya and George Fischer ticket asked what students really want from student government.

"Ask yourself, are these really things that I want or need?" Montoya said. As far as plans toward their goals were concerned, Montoya stated that the plan for not requiring all professors to give a final exam grew from a sociology project.

Montoya said that the results of the project showed "many professors don't want to give finals," yet the University requires them.

"We have already spoken to different deans, the CSC, and Monk (University President Father Edward Malloy) himself," Montoya said, "and they are willing to work with us. Give the professors a chance. Many of them are willing to try the idea if the students are willing."

Security was one of the main concerns addressed by the Stacey Kielbasa/Todd Leahy ticket, along with a proposal to start a program allowing students to spend a day in the office with an alumni of their career interest. A 72 hour guarantee, which promised that any comments from students would be answered within the three day period, was also proposed.

Kielbasa and Leahy also proposed a taxi service as part of a Safe Ride program which would allow students "to go out and have fun, without having to worry about safety."

"If you let us worry about security, you can go off campus, relax, and have a good time," Kielbasa said.

The Jonathan Patrick/Dennis McCarthy ticket promised to help WVFI in their pursuit to become an FM radio station and to have weekly "fireside chats" to discuss issues and ideas with students.

"We want to amplify the voices not being represented as well as they should be," Patrick said.

Patrick said that he and McCarthy have already spoken with officials at WVFI about what needs to be done to achieve this goal. "The administration needs to be shown that there is student support for

The platform of Kevin Klau and Larissa Herczeg seeks to increase the collective student voice in administrative matters by pushing for a student representative on the Board of Trustees. "They spend our money; they organize the schedule of events. We want a say in that."

The ticket was also in favor of installing access to cable television in all dorm rooms and has done research on the cost of

CAMPUS LIFE COUNCIL

GLND/SMC recognized in vote

O'Hara called on to explain decision

By EDWARD IMBUS
News Writer

The CLC wasted no time in initiating discussion regarding the administration's decision to expel the Gay and Lesbians of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's College (GLND/SMC) from the University Counseling Center last week as well as the larger issues that decision sparked.

The Council voted to recognize and support the efforts of GLND/SMC and to ask Vice-President of Student Affairs and ex officio CLC member Patricia O'Hara to attend the next meeting in order to explain in person her decision not to recognize GLND/SMC.

O'Hara must respond to the approved resolutions within seven days, in accordance with the CLC guidelines, which were written and approved by the Board of Trustees in order to facilitate official discussion between students and the administration on matters affecting student affairs.

The initial proposal called upon the CLC to "recognize, support, and respect the efforts of GLND/SMC," and the second asked the CLC to "condemn the University's action to expel GLND/SMC from campus and call upon the University to recognize GLND/SMC as an integral part of the Notre Dame community deserving of all rights and privileges afforded other campus groups."

It was signed by GLND/SMC chairman John Blandford, Student Body Vice President Matt Orsagh, and CLC members Nikole Neidlinger, the off-campus co-president, Bridget Conley, the Student Union Board (SUB) Manager, Dean of the College of Arts and Letters Ava Collins, Hall Presidents' Council co-chair Rich Palermo, and Student Body President Dave Hungeling.

The Council approved the first resolution 13-2, with one abstention, but rejected the second by a vote of 8-3 with five abstentions. The resolution requesting O'Hara to attend the next meeting was orally proposed in the course of yesterday's meeting, and was passed 15-1.

Because of the CLC's authority to serve as the official catalyst between the students and the administration, all resolutions must have a two-thirds majority of the voting members present, as ordered by the Trustees.

Blandford charged that the administration, by no longer allowing the unofficial club to use the Counseling Center, had taken away the only "safe space," in his words, on campus for gays and lesbians to meet as a support group.

He argued that allowing GLND/SMC to use the Health Center was similar to the typical responses of other Catholic universities in the United States, which he described as the "don't ask, don't tell" policy, alluding to the US military policy's simplified nickname.

Continuing, Blandford said that gays and lesbian groups had been officially recognized at other Catholic Universities as well, naming Georgetown, Fordham, and Catholic University as examples.

Noting the "disproportionate rates of suicide, alcoholism, and drug use," among homosexuals, Blandford said that a gay and lesbian club would be extremely helpful for homosexuals at Notre Dame as a support group in order to fill the pastoral need he claimed was lacking through Campus Ministry.

Assistant Vice President for Resident Life William Kirk, the senior administration official on the Council, stated that the University had not shifted its standing policy towards GLND/SMC. He said that the administration had misunderstood the way the Counseling

Hollywood offers us heroines

In light of last semester's eruption of gender tension, it might be interesting to see what many women value and look for in role models. Contrary to popular opinion and prime-time broadcasting, it is not Lindsey Wagner in a Ford or starring in the latest Danielle Steele novel/mini-series—sex objects and dependent wives just aren't what I had in mind. Strength, integrity, self-assurance, grace, elegance and compassion are just a few characteristics that make a true leading lady. Michelle Pfeiffer and Sharon Stones come and go, while only a few have the right stuff of legends like Katherine Hepburn and Lauren Bacall.

Suzy Fry
Viewpoint Editor

We have all heard stories about there not being enough quality scripts out there for strong leading women, but there is something to this recurring problem—a problem that goes far beyond the screen. Maybe it is because of their popularity or high visibility, but actresses—in recent years—have led the way for women's rights and respect in ways that corporate executives, community leaders, politicians and popular authors have failed.

But what does this have to do with gender relations at ND? Plenty. These women did not one day wake up and decide to run the show. These women experienced what almost every woman in the western world encounters at some point in her life—feelings of forced inferiority, sexual harassment or stereotyping, or the "little woman" syndrome. This is not to infer that every guy is a chauvinist pig and that every woman should be Gloria Steinem. Only that there is a reason why so many women look up to Susan Sarandon, Glenn Close, Jodie Foster, Winona Ryder, Oprah Winfrey. These are real women who not only have succeeded in a bastion of male influence, but have also demonstrated the unlimited potential of every person—male or female.

Now is not the time to recount the centuries of chauvinism, but it is the time to think about and look beyond the seeming annoyance of inclusive language and awareness to see the real issue: oppression. After all, who would even think of writing "nigger" instead of "African American" today? The issue is the same. While we're at it, let's not make the same mistakes today at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's by being exclusive to our gay and lesbian friends and family. The issue is the same.

Maybe I'm reading too much into the influence of these Hollywood heroes, but in a time that sees so much cultural destruction and digression I find it refreshing and hopeful. I would like to think I get my money's worth when I go to the movies, and I know I have when I see films like "Thelma and Louise," "When a Man Loves a Woman," "Little Women," "The Prince of Tides," "The Silence of the Lambs."

Popular culture has much to offer us, if we are willing to look with care and concern. Despite the O.J. debacle and other sordid stories that pass themselves for entertainment, Hollywood does produce art—art that makes us feel and think and change. Don't let hall notes and anti-gay graffiti scare you off.

Republicans see close vote for budget amendment

WASHINGTON
The Senate enters its second week of debate on the balanced budget amendment with Democrats demanding to know how the budget will be balanced and a key Republican saying today that "we're really close" to getting the needed votes.

"We've got almost all the Republicans voting for it. All we need are 15 Democrats," Sen. Orrin Hatch, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said today. "If we can get 15 Democrats we'll pass it," he said. "We're pretty confident that we're close to that and I believe the people throughout this country are going to raise such Cain that they'll get enough Democrats for us to pass it this time," Hatch said on "CBS This Morning."

The White House, which released its 1996 budget proposal today, reiterated its opposition to the amendment, saying Republicans have refused to specify how they would balance the budget.

Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., the principal opponent of the constitutional amendment, said Sunday that making the cuts necessary to balance the budget would devastate programs for the elderly, veterans and the environment. Byrd said he would not try to stall action on the amendment, as he did last month on legislation to end unfunded federal mandates but promised it would take another "three or four or five weeks" to make sure Americans understood the consequences of requiring a balanced budget.

This week, Democrats are likely to propose changes in the amendment that would exempt Social Security from future budget considerations and demand that Congress explain what cuts will be made to balance the budget by 2002. Republicans label both as diversionary tactics meant to prevent passage of the amendment.

The House passed the amendment on Jan. 26 by 300-132, eight votes more than the two-thirds majority needed. If 67 senators vote for it, the amendment will go to the states, where three-fourths of state legislatures must ratify it for it to become the 28th amendment to the Constitution.

Byrd concurred with Republican leaders in predicting that the vote "could go either way."

Senate Majority Whip Trent Lott, R-Miss., told CBS' "Face the Nation" that 52 Republicans — all but Sen. Mark Hatfield of Oregon — are committed to the amendment.

With Democratic help, the yes votes number between 65 and 70, he estimated.

Lott agreed with Byrd that Senate debate may continue for another three or four weeks, but pledged, "We are going to do whatever it takes to get it passed, and in the end we will get the 67 votes required."

Pope considers writing an encyclical

VATICAN CITY
Encouraged by landmark progress in Jewish-Catholic relations, an American Jewish group asked Pope John Paul II to write an encyclical enshrining church opposition to anti-Semitism. The pope "listened to me very patiently," American Jewish Committee president Robert S. Rifkind said Monday of the group's audience with the pope. John Paul said the request would be "very carefully studied in the Vatican. He said that twice," Rifkind said. An encyclical is reserved for the most important papal declarations. The New York-based group also urged the pope to grant Jewish scholars and Catholic historians access to documents about the Holocaust contained in Vatican archives and said both sides should unite against revisionists who sow doubts about the mass extermination of Jews. Monday's audience, the group's third in 10 years, was granted to mark the 30th anniversary of a Church document that paved the way for overcoming 2,000 years of mistrust between Jews and Catholics. That led to establishment of formal Vatican-Israeli ties in late 1993.

Fraternity house burns in Ohio

ADA, Ohio
A fire raced through an Ohio Northern University fraternity house early today, injuring 15 people, five seriously. The cause of the fire was not known but it appeared to have started on the second floor of the three-story Sigma Pi house, Fire Chief Jay Eply said. He described the floor, where the students sleep, as "unlivable." Three students were being treated for burns and smoke inhalation at Memorial Hospital in Lima. They were admitted in serious condition but have since been upgraded to fair, university spokesman Monty Siekerman said. He identified those students as Dave Mortimer, 18, Stephen Fugi, 20, and Michael Basile, 20. Two other students, David Gatchel, 21, and Michael Conofare, 21, were in serious condition in the burn unit at St. Vincent Hospital in Toledo, Siekerman said. Nine students and a security guard who complained of chest pains were treated at hospitals and released.

Hero wants to meet Marion Barry

KANSAS CITY, Mo.
When 16-year-old Mychael Ramsey learned he had been invited to Washington to receive a hero's medal for pulling three people from a burning house, he had a special request: a meeting with Mayor Marion Barry. What has happened to Mychael since then sounds like something out of Barry's own life. He's been arrested for marijuana possession, and the honor he covets may be taken away. Last month, the Justice Department said it was reconsidering its announcement that Mychael would get a 1993 Young American Medal for Bravery. Now Mychael's playing a waiting game, bracing for another blow in a life that's already seen more than its share of hardship. He professes a lack of concern about getting the award. "I just think if I do, I do," Mychael said in an interview last week. "If I don't, I don't. It's not like I'm going to go back home and cry or something. I just be thankful for all the other awards I got." Still, he doesn't hide his excitement. "How many young black people do you know get the opportunity of a lifetime to go to Washington, to sit down and talk with the president, eat with him, do stuff like that?" he asked.

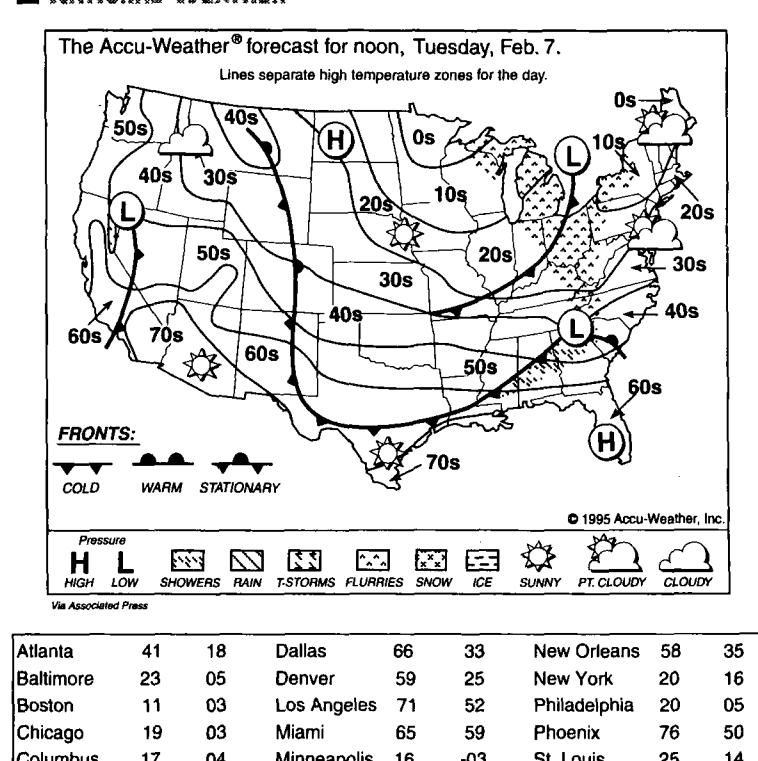

'Free Willy' whale moving to Oregon

MEXICO CITY
This time he has a reason to leap. Keiko, the killer whale made famous by the film "Free Willy," is heading toward a new home in Oregon and eventual freedom, his owners announced Monday. The Reino Aventura amusement park where Keiko has lived for the past decade signed an agreement donating the 3.5-ton mammal to the Free Willy-Keiko Foundation, which plans to eventually free him in waters off Iceland after a rehabilitation period at the Oregon Coast Aquarium in Newport. The amusement park said the 15-year-old whale, captured off Iceland at age 2, has performed for some 12 million visitors over the past 10 years. Efforts to free him have been underway since the Warner Bros. film was released in 1993. "Keiko will be the only captive orca whale that doesn't have to do shows or perform," David Phillips, director of the foundation, said at a news conference Monday.

BOG will sponsor Shakespeare play

By MYRNA MALONEY
Assistant Saint Mary's Editor

The Not So Royal Shakespeare Company's production of "As You Like It" will be co-sponsored by the Saint Mary's Board of Governance (BOG) after a unanimous vote was reached at yesterday's BOG meeting.

The Notre Dame/Saint Mary's student run club will perform the play at the Saint Mary's campus clubhouse on March 24-26, free of charge to all students this year as in years past, according to Amanda Rafuse, a Company representative.

"BOG will donate $250, which will help to finance the publicity and rental equipment for the company," said Student Body President Noha El-Ganzouri.

Because BOG will co-sponsor the performances along with the Notre Dame London Program, the Not So Royal Shakespeare Company will not be required to pay the $75 per night rental fee for the clubhouse, according to Rafuse.

In other BOG Business:

•All students should watch for upcoming information about a faculty moderated forum between Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students.

•An informational meeting for students who wish to run for 1995-96 class officer positions will be held February 8 and 9 in Haggar Parlor. Elections will be February 21.

•Saint Mary's club representatives who wish to have upcoming events listed on the calendar in Haggar College Center should fill out information sheets located at all residence hall front desks.

•The Saint Mary's Senior Formal will be held at Century Center on April 22.

Catholic theologian speaks out

VATICAN CITY

Calling euthanasia part of a "culture of death," a Roman Catholic theologian on Monday denounced the acquittal of an American father who unhooked his premature baby's respirator.

"With this sentence, the first headstone has been placed in another monstrous cemetery for the burial of unwanted newborns ... dependent on artificial support systems," wrote Gino Concetti in L'Osservatore Romano, the official Vatican newspaper.

Concetti said "euthanasia's culture of death has no limits, just like that of abortion, which is even legitimized as a means of birth control."

A Lansing, Mich., court on Thursday acquitted Dr. Gregory Messenger of manslaughter after he pulled the plug on the machine keeping alive his son, born 15 weeks premature. Messenger, would have faced up to 15 years prison if convicted.

Pope's funding checked

By STEVEN PAULSON
Associated Press

DENVER

Federal investigators have been asked to look into the use of city airport funds to pay for a documentary of Pope John Paul II's 1993 visit.

Two vouchers totaling $7,500 were issued to the video company Let's Be Frank Productions and billed to airport operating funds, sources speaking on condition of anonymity told The Associated Press on Monday.

The money was used to make a 60-minute documentary on the pope's visit. It was shown on Channel 8, the city's cable television channel.

Amy Lingg, spokeswoman for the city's Department of Public Works, confirmed part of the video's $61,000 total cost came from city airport funds, and defended the spending as justified.

"The airport played a large role in the management of the pope's visit," Lingg said, noting the airport handled the arrival of the pope and President Clinton, along with 200,000 visitors and dignitaries.

Federal rules require that revenue raised at airports be spent only for airport purposes.

The questioned vouchers were turned over to the Inspector General's Office of the U.S. Department of Transportation, the sources said.

Documentary producer Frank Hogan said Stapleton International Airport wasn't central to the story.

"We really didn't focus on the airport other than the arrival," Hogan said.

The latest investigation is one of a half-dozen by federal authorities into possible diversion of airport funds for other city uses.

Powell jokes of candidacy

By JOHN KING
Associated Press

WASHINGTON

Retired Gen. Colin Powell teased a Washington audience Monday night by disclaiming any passion for politics but then suggesting an independent candidacy might "throw some more fun" into the 1996 presidential race.

Powell gave no indication he wanted — or planned — to be such a candidate. But he didn't flatly rule out the prospect, either, saying he would decide about his future after finishing his memoirs.

In an hour-long speech followed by several questions from his audience, Powell shed little new ground. He followed the script of a speech he has given dozens of times since retiring in September 1993 as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and joining the lucrative lecture circuit.

He has said in the past that an independent candidacy might be good for the country, and has also stuck to his pledge to finish his book before talking about his own political prospects.

Yet Powell had his audience hanging on most every word Monday night, particularly when the subject turned to politics, this city's official business.

"There is no particular passion in me for politics," he said after the speech.

Center was being used, and did not know that it had been used for official GLND/SMC meetings.

When OSA discovered that GLND/SMC was using the Counseling Center for meetings after GLND/SMC had advertised them last semester, it revoked its use in accordance with its standing policy as formed in 1986 by the former Vice President of Student Affairs Father James Tyson and sustained in 1992 by O'Hara upon a new application by GLND/SMC.

"There was a misunderstanding by the director of the University Counseling Center ... as to what the Office of Student Affairs had meant in their policy," he said, explaining why GLND/SMC had been allowed to use the Health Center facilities for nine years without the knowledge of OSA.

The stated rationale for that policy, according to Kirk, was that the administration felt that allowing GLND/SMC official recognition as a club was contrary to the mission of the University, fearing that recognition would implicitly "sanction homosexual lifestyles, which are definitely contrary to the University's mission."

The policy towards GLND/SMC, however restrictive, also affirmed "the University's determination to maintain an environment free from harassment for all students," Kirk said.

All CLC members had questions and comments to make on the resolutions. Collins argued that "the University is different than the administration. People should not ally the two. The (Faculty) Senate, the GSU (Graduate Student Union) and the Theological Union have all issued resolutions supporting a gay and lesbian group on campus."

She also stated that O'Hara had given the rationale for her decision to a subcommittee of the Faculty Senate, but the Senate then rejected it as part of their resolution.

Other members wanted more information before voting to approve the second resolution, such as the GLND/SMC constitution and the bylaws of gay and lesbian organizations officially recognized at other Catholic universities. They also wanted to hear O'Hara give her reasons for denying GLND/SMC in case more reasons existed than what were presented at their meeting. Especially encouraging more discussion and acquiring more information were Rectors Father George Rozum, Father Terrence Linton, and Father Patrick Sullivan, and Judicial Commissioner Andrew Alfes.

Alfes noted that though the resolution was defeated yesterday, "it can be presented again to the Council by the voting members."

Indeed, Sullivan strongly hinted that more members would be willing to vote for a resolution encouraging the administration to recognize GLND/SMC if more information was presented for review.

The exact position of the Catholic Church was also discussed heatedly by several members, including rectors and student members. North Quad Student Senator Sean Sullivan asked what clergy members of the Council felt would be the position of the Church hierarchy, but the members in question declined to speculate.

Alfes brought up the possibility of a special CLC meeting for next week, but it was unclear whether or not the Council would indeed meet then or continue with its regular bi-weekly schedule.

Terrorist demands freedom from French

By CHRISTOPHER BURNS
Associated Press

PARIS

Nearly six months after his capture, Carlos the terrorist appeared in court Monday to demand his freedom, saying that the French government had kidnapped him in Sudan.

In a closed-door hearing, the court rejected the request and turned down Carlos' demand that proceedings be open to the public. His lawyers said they would appeal.

Arriving in a heavily guarded blue van, Carlos was whisked inside the Palace of Justice as edgy police with bulletproof vests and submachine guns stood guard.

The hearing concerned a train bombing that killed three people and injured 26 in December 1983. A related attack in the Marseille train station the same day left two dead there.

The court rejected Carlos' plea to be released pending trial, his lawyers said. It also denied his request to open the proceedings on grounds of "public security."

U.S.-Russian rendezvous first in twenty years

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Two 100-ton spaceships — the biggest ever to converge in space — flew in formation just 37 feet apart Monday in the first U.S.-Russian rendezvous in 20 years.

"Unbelievable," Discovery's commander said.

"Almost like a fairy tale," Mir's commander said.

It almost didn't happen. Russian space officials gave in at the last minute, allowing Discovery and its crew of six to creep close despite fears that a leaking jet would damage equipment on Mir.

"We are bringing our spaceships closer together. We are bringing our nations closer together," Discovery's commander, James Wetherbee, said at the moment of closest approach in the mission, a dress rehearsal for the first shuttle-Mir docking in June.

Wetherbee repeated his message in Russian for the benefit of the three Mir cosmonauts, and station commander Alexander Viktorenko replied that all nine space travelers were involved in the "greatest profession God could give anyone."

The moment, he said, was "almost like a fairy tale ... almost too good to be true."

Later, after it was all over, President Clinton called Discovery from the Oval Office to congratulate the astronauts.

"We're all so impressed," Clinton said. "This really proves, I think, that Russians and Americans can work together and that we can make this international space station project successful. I can't tell you how much I appreciate all the work that all of you have done to that end."

The encounter began 245 miles above the Pacific Ocean and lasted just 13 minutes, climaxing at 2:20 p.m. EST as both spaceships circled Earth at 17,500 mph.

Spectacular video scenes beamed down from Mir showed Discovery just 400 feet away and closing.

A corner of the sprawling Mir station could be seen in some shots, with a cloud-covered, blue planet as the backdrop.

At the same time, Discovery's cameras zoomed in on Mir. NASA simultaneously broadcast both images on its television circuit.

Discovery's Russian crew member, Vladimir Titov, was seen smiling and waving from a shuttle window at the Mir cosmonauts.

Titov, who spent a year on Mir in the late 1980s, talked almost continuously with the cosmonauts via ship-to-ship radio to keep them informed of Discovery's movements.

It was the first encounter between U.S. and Russian spacecraft since the 1975 Apollo-Soyuz docking and required some of the most precise steering in 14 years of space shuttle flight. The Apollo and Soyuz capsules were considerably smaller.

It was Discovery's 57th orbit, the 51,263rd for Mir, part of which has been in orbit for nine years.

After the close approach, Wetherbee backed the shuttle 400 feet away and began a fly-around of Mir so his crew could photograph the entire station. NASA wants these photos to prepare for the June docking by Atlantis.

installation as well as individual student costs.

"We will work so that you can have the channels you want at the price you want," Klau said.

Simplicity is the main premise of the Matthew Golish and Robert Brett campaign. By cutting the student budget and allowing students to vote for how the money is to be spent, they advocated "giving student government back to students."

Golish told the audience that he and Dave Hungeling had spent many hours going over the student government budget. "They give away money to anyone who asks," he said.

The ticket claims that by cutting wasteful expenditures, they can save $40,000 in a $70,000 budget.

"It's your money," Golish said. "You pay $55 a year and about $20,000 in tuition, and we want you to decide what to spend it on."

The Golish/Brett ticket also proposes to buy off-campus houses in the same area in order to have communities of students living in the same area.

"This would increase the social aspects of off-campus living," he said. However the major problem lies in the zoning laws.

"Most of the area from Hill Street to Peter Street (the proposed sight) is an A zoning district, which means that only two unrelated people can live in one house," he said.

In order to have student houses in the area, the South Bend zoning laws would need to be changed to B zones, which would allow for up to six unrelated people in one home.

Jennifer Allen and James Delaney want to put government "back in your hands," with efforts to increase contact with students and their involvement in decisions.

Through a cab coupon program, an ATM machine in the Mod Quad and a Winter Festival sponsored by the Student Union Board, the ticket seeks to address the needs of students.

Coupon books, of which students would be required to pay half of the cost, would be sold at LaFortune as an alternative to driving after a night out.

"We want to be a hands-on resource," Allen said. "We want to hear from you and work with you."

The Michelle Mudry/Jennifer Szarek ticket centers on social issues on campus, including dating and gathering concerns. The team proposed a dance club in LaFortune and a campus wide dating service.

"The ND Love Connection," as the service would be known, and the dance club would "encourage healthy atmosphere for all students and make it easier for students to interact," the team claimed.

"We think gender issues on campus are very important," Szarek said.

When debate was opened to the floor for questions, the issue regarding the disqualification of the Patrick and McCarthy ticket was raised.

Patrick and McCarthy were originally disqualified by the Student Government Election Committee after four other tickets petitioned to have them removed from the ballot. The petition was based on the fact that Patrick and McCarthy had turned in forms declaring their intent to run 48 hours after the scheduled deadline.

Patrick and McCarthy appealed to the to the Student Senate and their disqualification was overturned.

The four tickets who signed to petition were asked to acknowledge themselves and questioned regarding their reasons for the petition.

The tickets of Allen and Delaney, Klau and Herczeg, and Montoya and Fischer admitted signing the petition on the premise that it was only a complaint and noted that the Election Committee made the final decision.

The ticket of Kielbasa and Leahy later commented that those who signed the petition agreed not to disclose names and that they "didn't want to make it a personal issue."

The Mudry and Szarek ticket also commented later that they did not sign the petition on the basis that they felt "the issue was not a big deal and they didn't want to keep anyone from running."

All tickets were asked how they would help to foster relations between the Administration and the GLND/SMC community. Most groups addressed the fact that the issue deals with church doctrine but that compassion should at least allow the GLND/SMC community a place to meet.

Kielbasa and Leahy suggested an "open discussion format to deal with the animosity and to reach a compromise."

Klau referred to his campaigns proposal of student forums and a representative on the Board of Trustees to bring "student impact and student voice" to the administration.

The ticket of Golish and Brett claimed that "you can have all the forums and write all the letters you want but there can be no compromise; it's a fact of simple human decency." They said that if elected, they would allow GLND/SMC to meet in the student government office.

Citing it as part of their platform, Patrick and McCarthy hope to "voice the concerns of the student body; especially minorities." Amplifying minority concerns, they feel that "compassion must be shown to the GLND/SMC community."

The issue of cable installation was also brought to the floor. Klau and Herczeg were asked, since the cable issue is a major part of their platform, what they would do should the cable question be determined assume their leadership roles if elected.

Herczeg claimed that the referendum for cable installation will provide the administration with numbers regarding student body preference but will not determine the final outcome.

Current Student Body President and Vice President, "Hungeling and Orsagh, have been very persistent," said Herczeg. And she feels that the administration will need to be continually pressed on the issue of cable installation, if indeed that is what the majority of the student body wants.

Extremists' bomb kills four in Austria

By GEORGE JAHN
Associated Press

VIENNA, Austria
A bomb exploded inside a playground garbage container Monday in an ethnically mixed village, wounding a municipal worker in the latest attack attributed to anti-foreigner extremists.

The blast, which followed a weekend bomb nearby that killed four Gypsies, was the deadliest terrorist act in Austria since 1985.

The Austrian Interior Ministry said the weekend blast was probably the work of rightist extremists, but had no further information. It was likely, however, that Monday's explosion in the village of Stinatz, near the Hungarian border, also was the work of radical rightists.

Austrian radio said a letter was found that claimed responsibility and expressed anti-Croatian and anti-foreigner sentiments. Half of the villagers are ethnic Croats.

The explosion mangled the right hand of a man emptying the container, the radio report said.

The bombs were the latest in a series, attributed to radical xenophobes, that first rocked Austria more than a year ago.

Minimum wage discussed

By JOHN CUNNIFF
Associated Press

NEW YORK
It's probably too much to hope that politically tinged decisions can produce desirable economic results, but that will never stop the effort.

A raise in the minimum wage is again up for discussion.

It is an easy proposal to make, and sometimes only a bit harder to turn it into law. It is much more difficult, and some critics say impossible, to bring about the desired economic and social benefits from doing so.

Politically, a sound argument exists for raising the minimum wage beyond its $4.25 level, which President Clinton says will be at a 40-year low in terms of purchasing power by next year. An increase would seem only fair.

In economic terms, however, the case is much more complex. One argument says it is ineffective, since price increases will negate any increase. Another states that any increase actually will be destructive.

This second argument is based partly on reasoning, partly on fact. If you're a small-business owner, it is argued, you would be disinclined to offer a rudimentary job to a willing but totally unskilled youngster if you had to meet standards set down by the government.

The initial cost to you, the employer, would not be the only one. You would have expenses for training, paperwork and perhaps insurance. You would pay the bill for errors. And, who knows, in today's society you might get sued.

There are about 2.5 million workers affected by the minimum wage, and not all are poor. Some, in fact, are not badly off at all, but simply like the idea of earning extra income.

But many are indeed poor, and they need the money. According to those who back minimum-wage proposals, these defenseless people need the U.S. government to support their right to live decently. It is a sentiment widely shared.

The difficulty with the contention is that it isn't fully supported by the facts. Teen-age unemployment in some inner-city areas is 50 percent or higher, and it has stayed there despite dozens of government programs.

Is it likely that minimum wages can help such areas? They haven't in the past. It seems entirely likely that they might even cause some potential employers to eliminate jobs.

In short, the need for jobs and a decent wage is very real, but the idea of meeting the need by minimum-wage legislation is somewhat less real, and maybe altogether unreal.

While wage by mandate has a poor record of effectiveness, the record could become even worse. Compelled by a more competitive marketplace, companies are learning to produce more with fewer workers, and that trend is destined to continue.

Those without skills are likely to find fewer opportunities in the future, no matter how good or bad business conditions might be, while those with skills will be in demand. It is a trend that still has a very long way to go.

Jury splits blame in lawsuit against hospital

By SAMUEL MAULL
Associated Press

NEW YORK
A jury split the blame Monday in a lawsuit brought by writer Sidney Zion against the hospital where his 18-year-old daughter died, accepting a defense that the young woman failed to reveal she had used cocaine.

The jury technically awarded Zion and his wife, Elsa, $750,000 for their daughter's pain and suffering. But a finding that Libby Zion was 50 percent responsible for her own 1984 death means the Zions will get half that amount, $375,000.

The jury also awarded $1 in damages. It assessed no punitive damages against New York Hospital and the four doctors sued by the Zions. Defense lawyer Luke Pittoni said the defendants might appeal.

Sidney Zion, a former federal prosecutor, newspaper columnist and author of several books, crusaded for more than a decade to avenge his daughter's death. Long before his negligence lawsuit came to trial, his daughter's death became a case study in how big city teaching hospitals treat their patients.

Zion charged that New York Hospital overworked and undersupervised its young doctors in training. The case helped lead to New York becoming the first state to regulate intern and resident hours. It also required more supervision by senior physicians.

The Zions' lawyer, Thomas Moore, had said that hospital doctors erred when they gave Zion the painkiller Demerol to relieve her chills and fever while she was on the antidepressant Nardil. The two drugs produce a lethal reaction, and the jury found that the interaction may have contributed to the death.

Defense lawyers said the care given to Libby Zion was proper, given what was known about her condition. They suggested throughout the 11-week trial that her death was caused by a cocaine reaction, possibly aggravated by other drugs.

The jury found that Libby Zion was negligent in not telling hospital emergency room personnel that she also had used cocaine.

A freshman at Vermont's Bennington College, she entered New York Hospital the night of March 4, 1984 with a high fever and earache. She died of undetermined causes the next morning, strapped to her bed because she had been thrashing about in convulsions.

"It was an outrageous verdict," an angry Sidney Zion said Monday. "I think this jury disgraced themselves with this verdict. They disgraced justice."

"The cruelest cut of all was the cocaine," he said. "New York Hospital, by putting out the big lie many years ago, they scored with it."

EDITORIAL

What about the issues?

Effective leadership begins with the ability to define the problems and issues facing Notre Dame students. Multiculturalism, gender relations, the GLND/SMC controversy and Notre Dame-Saint Mary's relations are all at the forefront of campus concerns.

Unfortunately, at last night's Student Body Presidential Debate, many of the competing tickets failed to even recognize the real problems, let alone begin to propose solutions to solve them.

For instance, it seems a little odd that the 14 people running for the highest student-held offices on campus could completely forget to talk about something as important as multiculturalism and its effect on the ND campus. During the two hour-long debate, the issue was not mentioned in candidate speeches or platforms.

Were we to assume that under the grand plans for a Mod-Quad ATM and a campus-wide dating game there is a blueprint to help improve cultural diversity? Or, are the seven tickets so short-sighted and hung-up on minor ideas that they completely forgot to consider the importance of issues beyond Grab and Go and a "Blowout Bash?"

While some focus was placed on essential problems such as safe transportation, the conversion of WVFI to FM, social activities and improved communications, these less important issues tended to dominate the discussion.

Although they also fell into the trap of focusing on ideas over issues, the platform of Kevin Klau and Larissa Herczeg, was the most qualified, organized, and effective. Their ticket proposed implementable and solid ideas, but without the necessary vision that should be required from student leaders. Still, they earn the Observer's endorsement in a what has proven to be a disappointing field.

Particularly impressive is their notion of placing a student on the Board of Trustees. The idea of students being able to initiate contact with the Board is important in developing a student voice in what has been a traditionally been a closed group. A fundamental grasp of the issues is essential for the student body to be properly represented.

Klau's and Herczeg's experience in Student Union Board and Student Government will further define the respective roles that each organization should assume in the planning of student events. We laud the idea of streamlining organizations to improve both in terms of efficiency and effectiveness.

The idea of producing Student Government accountability within its internal structure is important for creating improved responsiveness to student needs. This, along with student forums creates the open atmosphere necessary for effective government.

Patrick and McCarthy should be commended for recognizing the need for student support of an important issue gripping the campus. Student Government represents the needs and interests of all students, and the incoming ticket must address the current GLND/SMC situation in an effort to find a compromise, if not a solution.

A word of caution about the Golish/Brett plan to give money back to the students by slashing the Student Government budget—the platform lacks anything resembling an original idea. Financial responsibility sounds admirable and the "blank check" approach of giving students what they want might sound attractive. Still, it is not likely that a Student Senate laundry list of expenditures would produce results in solving any of the problems plaguing the campus. While Golish's cynicism was much needed at the debate, it might hinder an effective student-administration relationship.

The Observer endorses Klau and Herczeg on the strength of their experience and ideas presented at the debate. Their plans for improved communications between students and their government helps lay the groundwork for an effective student government. The Observer also expresses regret that the tickets failed to identify and address many important issues. Let's hope that next year the candidates come prepared.

LIFE AFTER FINALS

Stereotypes mute ND voice

When people find out that I'm a member of the media, they aren't surprised to find out that I lean a little to the political left. After all, we media elite types are biased liberals who never met a Republican they didn't hate. When they find out that I'm also a graduate of Notre Dame, the "Catholics' Harvard," most of them go to their pocket to make sure I haven't just lifted their wallet.

You see, down here in the South,

Catholic, it would be ridiculous to believe that they all think a certain way. Besides, I don't think Christ would want us all to be unquestioning in our beliefs. Does God get glory from the praise of mindless monotones?

Is it evil to question a Church Official's authority? Is there a special circle waiting for us in the inferno?

When you get right down to it, the whole Catholic faith can be boiled down to one single commandment, "Love one another as I have loved you." (John 15:12) I think that is the one thing upon which the entire Church should be based.

Now, when half the Church's population is disqualified from priesthood because of their gender, is that loving? When a Biblical passage is used to rationalize hatred, is that loving? I don't think so.

Notre Dame alumni may not all think the same way, but they all have a mission to defend the word of God as they see fit. It may make for a few arguments, but it also makes for a better Church, in the long run.

Be it liberal or conservative, radical or conventional, our thoughts should be voiced. If we are the light of the world, then let's shine our light brightly, so that everyone, including those of us in our own see what we do and give glory to God (and Notre Dame).

Does all this make me unworthy to wear the blue and gold? I hope not.

where the Baptists are still the majority, there's a nasty rumor out that all Catholics are conservatives, and that we follow the Pope blindly like the good sheep we are. This may help explain why there has been only one Catholic in the White House in U.S. History.

In fact, one person who comes to our office regularly told me once, "I'd like you a lot better if you weren't Catholic." She hardly knows me, but I guess that's hardly a requirement for judging someone, isn't it?

This rumor applies especially to those of us who wear the ND ring, which seems to be the equivalent of a Papal Police Badge. We are all supposed to be ambassadors of the Catholic faith, defending our Church the same way dittoheads defend Rush Limbaugh's receding hairline.

This stereotype, of course, is silly. After all, even if everyone at Notre Dame was a Roman

High in Sugar Low in Nutrition Cult Favorites

By RYAN J. GRABOW
N.R.E.M.T.

Let's face it, we all like to eat! Unfortunately, for most of us, taste comes first. Sometimes we get lucky and like the taste of something that's good for us; however, more often we like the taste of things that just don't do our bodies any good. Hopefully the following information will be helpful for you in sorting out some of your favorite foods and how often they should be a part of your diet.

I Scream You Scream We all Scream for Yo Cream

It's common knowledge that this "dessert of the gods" contains no fat or cholesterol and only a mere 16 calories per ounce, but to most of us the secret of this frozen miracle has remained a mystery... Until now! The secret to Yo Cream's non-fattening fame is surprisingly simple: Skim milk and non-fat milk solids. Unlike ice cream, which is usually made from fattening whole milk, Yo is made from skim milk, which contains so little fat that it isn't even listed. But remember, go easy on the Yo if your activity level resembles that of couch potato - it still has about 120 calories per cone (and that's not including the cone!)

Chips & Salsa When to Say When

Whether you're waiting for your dinner at Chi-Chi's or dipping in your dorm, there's not a huge difference in calories or fat content between various brands of Tortilla Chips, unless you are choosing between those that are fried (average 16 calories per chip, 40% from fat) or those that are baked (average 7.5 calories per chip, 11% from fat).

If you consider an average portion of 20 chips, the difference between baked and fried is striking. While the average serving of baked chips contains only 150 calories, the total for chips that are fried is a whopping 320 calories. When it comes to choosing your salsa, most brands fall between 5-8 calories per table spoon, all of these calories coming from sugar.

Fat, Fat Go Away SnackWell's Done It! Oreos and Chips Ahoy! are on the way

Those amazing fat-free SnackWell cookies have taken the cookie industry by storm. By leaving vegetable shortening (oil) out of their recipe and adding thickeners and emulsifiers to give their cookies body, SnackWell is able to produce a 50 calorie fat-free cookie that actually does taste good. Compared to the best-selling Oreo (53 calories each, 37% from fat) and Chips Ahoy! (53 calories, 43% fat), SnackWell cookies are a much better alternative.

However, for those of us who don't want to sacrifice our old favorites because of concerns about fat content, Oreo and Chips Ahoy have come out in Reduced Fat versions as well. The slimmer Oreo has only 46 calories per cookie, with 32% of those coming from fat, while the lighter Chips Ahoy! has trimmed down to 50 calories a cookie, with 33% of those calories derived from fat. In a blind taste test, it's pretty easy to tell the difference between the original and more healthful versions of these two favorites, but if you don't have both on hand to compare, you probably won't be able to tell.

Diet Soda/Pop - Is there Really that Big a Difference?

Since we've come to college, many of us have become Caffeine Junkies, consuming two liters or more of our favorite carbonated beverage daily. When this amount is taken into consideration, it makes sense that so many of us have turned or should turn to the diet version of our favorite drink.

Compare the differences:
Regular: Mountain Dew - 170 calories, Dr. Pepper - 160 cals, Pepsi - 150 cals, Coke - 140 cals
Diet: Mountain Dew, Dr. Pepper, Pepsi, Coke = 0 calories
If you have one or two cans a day, no big deal. However, if you're putting away six or seven cans a day we're talking 980 calories for Coke and 1190 calories for Mountain Dew.

Got the Munchies? ... Be Careful What You Reach For

Most would agree that Doritos, Pringles, and Chee-tos are tasty snacks that are bad for us, but just how bad they are depends on what we're reaching for. In the Potato Chip category, we find a 60% fat content across the board. Lays brand leads the way as "Best of the Worst" with only 8 calories per chip; while Ruffles, Pringles, and most other brands give you 13 calories per chip. In the "Mystery Cheese Substance" category, Chee-tos are only 7 calories per piece, while Cheese Curls/Puffs are in the 10 calorie range; both of these products unfortunately contain 53% fat.

Your best bet by far in the munchie category is to stick with "unbuttered" pretzels. Dan-Dee Pretzel Rods are a slender 33 calories each, with only 10% coming from fat. What about Rice Cakes? Hands down, they are the best munchie with zero fat and only 35 calories; unfortunately many think they have zero taste as well. If you do happen to be a fan of rice cakes, stick with spices or fruit for flavoring - two tablespoons of peanut butter adds 100 calories to your snack, and 60% of these calories are fat!

Going Out to Eat? ... Steer Clear of the Border, Ronald, and the King.

Fun Food Facts The numbers speak for themselves

Taco Bell

Regular Taco - 180 calories, 100 from fat = 55% fat; Soft Taco - 223 cals, 100 from fat = 45% fat; Beef Burrito - 432 cals, 40% fat; Chicken Burrito - 345 cals, 30% fat.

McDonald's

Hamburger - 250 cals, 32% fat; Quarter Pounder with Cheese - 490 cals, 51% fat; Big Mac - 490 cals, 49% fat; Chicken McNuggets (6) - 270 cals, 51% fat; Large Fries - 400 cals, 50% fat; Small Fries - 220 cals, 50% fat; Vanilla Shake (small) - 310 cals, 15% fat.

Burger King

Hamburger - 260 cals, 35% fat; Double Cheeseburger - 600 cals, 55% fat; Whopper - 630 cals, 55% fat; Medium Fries - 400 cals, 45% fat; Vanilla shake - 310 cals, 20% fat

It's definitely a pain to read food labels and count calories and fat content, but consider this: Would you rather count calories and fat, or count inches and pounds? It's up to you!

The World Wide Web is part of the immense collection of data on just about anything we call the Internet. It resides on the systems of thousands of institutions throughout the entire world. Usually accessed through Mosaic or Netscape, "The Web," as opposed to other browsers of the Internet such as Gopher and FTP, is simple, graphical, and employs a hypertext format which links one "page" to another through a simple point and click method.

It's not as complicated as it might seem. E-mail is the best way to start and one of the easiest ways to familiarize yourself with the Internet environment: Anyone who's anyone e-mails on this campus nowadays and there are plenty of people around willing and able to get you started. Once you've familiarized yourself with the basics of e-mail, you just might want to go on to consider bigger and better things. You have the whole world at your fingers. That's right, with the help of the World Wide Web, you can do just about anything.

One of the best ways to browse and search the Web is through The Yahoo Server, a Stanford University based Web Site that is just about the neatest thing you'll ever lay pointer on. Got a friend's birthday coming up that you know you will be home for? What better way to find a great hometown chow-spot than launching Netscape? That's right, launch Netscape and start cruising. "Regional Data" is the place to go for local "Fine Dining," price lists included. As it's your friend's 21st birthday, it would probably be a good idea if you picked out a couple of worthy brands of gut rot ahead of time. Head on over to the Beer Page for that one.

Ack, dinner might be covered, but you still have to do that birthday shopping. Point your browser to the "Shopping 2000" Home Page and browse a little. Everyone loves music so proceed directly to the Tower Records Homepage. Stop a moment to listen to a sound clip of the gift of choice (through your earphones of course), jot down the price, and move on. While you're on the Shopping Link, do a little browsing for yourself.

You could probably use a pair of Winter boots. Mom and Dad will spring for it eventually once you're home, so do a little pricing. What's this? Eighty dollars for REI Sorel Snowbear Boots? That's perfect...Mom and Dad will definitely go for that.

Whoops, don't forget what you came to the lab to do in the first place: homework. If you've got a mega Theology paper to do on Cults and Christianity, point your browser to the David Koresh Page and print out the letter he sent out to the public during his standoff and the professional analysis that comes with it. With that, you'll be done with your paper in no time. Better check the latest Stock Market figures before class tomorrow so you can impress your Finance Professor. Link up to DowVision, check out the headlines of the Wall Street Journal, and get the figures of the Mutual Fund you've been tracking. Nothing but good news. If you had any real money, maybe you could invest it and make a buck or two.

Well, it's time to get down to the nitty gritty and start typing, but the fact that you can't figure out the lyrics to the song you're listening to is really bugging you. Why couldn't Jimmy Buffet have sung just a little bit clearer in "Pencil Thin Mustache"? Ah, here we go, the Song Lyric Browser on your favorite music page, the Mammoth Music Meta List put out by VIBE magazine. Here it is: "Yeah, and Rama of the jungle was everyone's Bawana, but only jazz musicians were smoking..." Uh, what the heck was Jimmy thinking on that one? Oh well, you will just have to log into the Buffet newsgroup and see if any other Buffett fans know (More about that next time.)

You may never get to that Theology paper.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J.

Chris Morris sparked a decisive rally by hitting a shot while falling down, and Armon Gilliam scored a season-high 28 points Monday night, leading New Jersey to a 101-97 victory over Detroit.

The win was just the seventh in 22 games for the Nets, and they accomplished it with Derrick Coleman and Kenny Anderson sidelined with injuries.

New Jersey overcame their absence by outrebounding the Pistons 69-40 and outscoring them from the foul line 38-19. Backup center Jayson Williams matched his career-high with 14 rebounds, and Gilliam added 11.

Joe Dumars led Detroit with 27 points, and rookie All-Star Grant Hill had 23.

Morris, who had 19 points, provided the highlight of the night in the waning seconds of the third quarter with New Jersey leading 73-72.

Pistons guard Mark Macon stole the ball and started up-court. Morris knocked the ball away and started to go up for a shot while falling away as Macon grabbed him. Morris still got the ball off while falling down, and the shot banked in.

A laughing Morris missed the ensuing free throw, but the shot sparked a 10-4 spurt that gave New Jersey an 83-76 lead on a three-point play by Sleepy Floyd with 8:51 left in the game.

Detroit, which won four of its previous five, closed to 90-85 on a 3-pointer by Dumars with 4:16 left, and whittled the lead to 100-97 on a 3-pointer by Terry Mills with 29 seconds to go.

Thirty-three ROTC teams competed in the Flying Irish Invitational this weekend in the JACC.

Defense decides game for Atlanta

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA

A halftime discussion about defense paid off handsomely for the Atlanta Hawks on Monday night.

Trailing 51-44 at halftime, the Hawks outscored Philadelphia 32-13 in the third quarter on their way to a 107-92 victory over the 76ers. Steve Smith led the rally, scoring 15 of his 22 points in the third period.

"That was a great second half for us," Atlanta coach Lenny Wilkens said.

"At halftime, we talked a lot about defense and we really saw results."

Atlanta used its defense to set up several fastbreak baskets in the third period.

"We got our running game going and really moved the ball," Wilkens said. "I don't think there's any question that the defense turned things around for us."

Also sparking the Atlanta surge was Mookie Blaylock, who finished with 21 points and 16 assists.

"I haven't been getting many assists lately," Blaylock said,

"but when we get our running game going, the assists seem to come naturally."

Philadelphia coach John Lucas saw his team lose its eighth game in 11 outings.

"The third quarter killed us and it's very frustrating. We were lethargic all night," he said. "I'm also very concerned about the turnovers (18). We've got to do something about that."

Craig Ehlo scored 18 points and Andrew Lang tied his season high with 17 for the Hawks, who converted 43 of 82 shots (52.4 percent).

ROTC holds tourney

Special to The Observer

For the ninth consecutive year the Notre Dame hosted the Flying Irish Invitational Basketball Tournament, gathering 23 men's and 10 women's teams from detachments across the nation.

Notre Dame's Air Force ROTC sponsored the tourney over the weekend at the JACC. Saturday was a round robin tournament which determined the semi-finalists. The champions were determined in single elimination championship play on Sunday.

The Men's division was dominated by Notre Dame teams. Three of the four semi-finalists were undefeated Notre Dame teams; one from each service. In the final round after a close battle, ND Air Force lost to Michigan Air Force by a three point margin.

The semi-finalists in the women's division were Marquette Army, Bowling Green State, Michigan Air Force, and South Dakota State Air Force. Marquette defeated South Dakota State to win the championship.

The MVP's, as voted on by the tournament coaches, were Tim Nelson and Tanya Eirinson. Tim Nelson, a junior in Carroll Hall, played for Notre Dame Air Force, and Tanya played for Marquette.

Baseball players, owners, and mediator given another day to settle by President

By RONALD BLUM
Associated Press

WASHINGTON

President Clinton gave baseball one more day to settle its strike after mediator W.J. Utery said Monday he needed more time to complete his own proposal to end the 179-day walkout.

The president hoped the additional time would allow players and owners to settle things themselves, but there appeared to be little hope.

"On this 100th anniversary of Babe Ruth's birth, the Babe would not be enormously optimistic for any quick settlement right now," Labor Secretary Robert Reich said after Clinton extended the deadline.

Utery, a former Labor Secretary appointed to mediate by Clinton last Oct. 14, said he would again try to cajole the sides into a voluntary solution.

"I refuse to be pessimistic," Utery said, "although it is very difficult to seem to find a voluntary agreement between the parties."

Utery has led the sides through six rounds of negotiations with little movement.

"He didn't want to leave any stone unturned," Reich said, "didn't want to really risk not thinking of and not giving both parties a full opportunity for resolving this dispute. The president agreed to wait until 3 o'clock tomorrow for former secretary Utery's final report and recommendation."

Neither side knew what Clinton would do if they rejected the plan.

The president could propose special legislation to enact terms of a settlement or binding arbitration, but both types of bills would have to be approved by the House and Senate.

"Certainly from public comments by members of Congress, we sense that they share the president's sense of frustration that the strike has continued for too long," White House spokesman Mike McCurry said. "We detect among many members of Congress a desire to see baseball get back on the boards for 1995."

Near the end of his news conference, Utery dropped a hint that his plan might become legislation.

"When you have to write a recommendation that goes to the president of the United States and may be used other ways, it takes a lot of time to do that," he said.

Utery said he began his day at 4:30 a.m., three hours after going to sleep, but still couldn't finish his proposal in time.

"After discussions with the parties, and especially with the player representatives, I felt it incumbent upon me that I spend some more time talking with them," Utery said. "Not only have I listened them out, I listened them out very much today, including carrying a letter to the president that the players had given me."

Clinton had demanded a settlement or progress by Monday, 179th day of the strike.

"They're working at least," Clinton said before meeting Utery. "I just keep telling them to play ball."

"It's just a few hundred folks trying to figure out how to divide nearly $2 billion. They ought to be able to figure that out," Clinton said.

Both sides thought Clinton was the only one with the ability to force a quick end to the mess.

Hours after presenting a $1.61 trillion budget to Congress, the president found himself in the middle of a dispute that has disturbed fans for half a year.

Owners also demanded salary caps during negotiations in 1985 and 1990, but commissioners Peter Ueberroth and Fay Vincent forced them to push those plans aside.

The dispute cost Vincent his job 2 1/2 years ago and left players with no one to turn to other than the government and the courts.

Players and owners broke off joint talks Saturday and didn't talk Sunday, ignoring Clinton's order that they try to resolve things themselves. No talks were held Monday before Utery's second trip to the White House in two days.

On Jan. 26, six days after owners adopted plans to start spring training with replacement players, Clinton announced his Feb. 6 deadline for a settlement with the sides still billions of dollars apart.

The strike, baseball's eighth work stoppage since 1972, canceled the final 52 days and 669 games of the season and wiped out the World Series for the first time since 1904.

Owners forced Vincent to resign on Sept. 7, 1992, and began formulating their plan to control player salaries, which averaged nearly $1.2 million last season.

Negotiations began Jan. 13, 1993, but players resolutely refused to consider the cap, saying limits would crush free agency, a right they won in 1975 — a century after owners adopted a reserve clause that bound a player to negotiate with only one team at a time.

Illini's Clark caught again by police

Associated Press

CHAMPAIGN, Ill.

Illinois center Shelly Clark had his third run-in with the law since October when he was arrested on traffic charges last weekend.

Clark, 22, was charged of driving with a suspended license Sunday, according to a Champaign police report.

Police stopped his car because it had no license plates, Deputy Police Chief Jim Luecking said. Clark initially claimed to be someone else but later told police who he was, Luecking said.

Clark posted bond and was released, he said.

Clark also was arrested Dec. 6 on charges of driving with a suspended license, having no proof of insurance and disobeying a stop sign. The charges are still pending.

And in October, Clark was arrested on a domestic disturbance involving his girlfriend and her male friend.

He was placed in an adult diversion program after a grand jury refused to indict him.

Illinois coach Lou Henson said Clark would not start in Wednesday's home game against Penn State.

Strawberry suspended, released from Giants

Associated Press

NEW YORK

Darryl Strawberry was suspended from baseball today for violating his aftercare program and immediately released by the San Francisco Giants.

"It was made very clear to Darryl upon his signing last June that any violation of this nature would automatically terminate his contract with the team," Giants general manager Bob Quinn said in statement today.

Strawberry, also facing federal tax-evasion charges, was suspended for 60 days by major league baseball. The outfielder and his agent Eric Goldschmidt were not immediately available for comment.

Quinn said the Giants told Strawberry that "since receiving the test results," he no longer is with the team. He did not, however, indicate when Strawberry was last tested.

"We told Darryl that, although he will no longer be a Giant, we will continue to make available to him our after-care and counseling problems," Quinn said.

Eugene Orza, general counsel for the Players' Association, said the union wouldn't make any decisions until after meeting with Strawberry and the doctors from both sides.

"After that, we'll decide what happens next," Orza said in Washington at the baseball labor talks.

Although this is the first time Strawberry has been suspended by major-league baseball, he has a long record of problems. Last season, he avoided suspension by entering a rehab program after he told the Los Angeles Dodgers he had a substance abuse problem. The admission came after he failed to show up for the team's final spring training game, April 3, at Anaheim, Calif.

Strawberry was released by the Dodgers after undergoing treatment, and later signed with the Giants. He signed for the major-league minimum, and would have played this season for the Giants under terms of the final year of a five-year contract he signed with the Dodgers in 1991.

"We are deeply saddened by today's news," Quinn said.

"Over the past nine months, we have come to know Darryl not only as a baseball player but as a warm and caring person.

"However, quite obviously, there are many problems in his life. While he's overcome some of these hurdles, unfortunately he still has more to conquer."

Strawberry's substance abuse problems first became known in 1990, when he agreed to enter Smithers Clinic in New York for alcohol rehabilitation. That came on Feb. 2, just a week after he was arrested during an argument with his wife.

Strawberry, one of the stars of the New York Mets' team that won the 1986 World Series, missed most of the 1992 and 1993 seasons with a chronic back problem.

The day after he failed to show up for the final 1994 exhibition game, against the California Angels, Strawberry announced he had a substance abuse problem. The Dodgers placed him on the disabled list.

On April 8, 1994, Strawberry entered the Betty Ford Clinic in Rancho Mirage, Calif., for treatment of the problem.

Strawberry finished his 28-day stay at Betty Ford on May 6. Three weeks later, the Dodgers released him.

The Giants signed him as a free agent on June 19.

Strawberry pleaded innocent Dec. 18, in U.S. District Court in White Plains, N.Y., to tax evasion charges. Goldschmidt, also pleaded innocent to felony tax evasion, which carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

The 32-year-old Strawberry is accused of evading $146,000 in income tax by allegedly not reporting more than $500,000 in cash payments from autograph shows and personal appearances.

An indictment charges Strawberry and Goldschmidt concealed existence of a bank account from accountants so a substantial proportion of their income from card shows would not appear on their 1989 and 1990 tax returns.

Connecticut crunches Pitt

By CHRISTINE HANLEY

Associated Press

STORRS, Conn.

Ray Allen scored 24 points and No. 3 Connecticut remained unbeaten in the Big East with a 90-61 victory over Pittsburgh on Monday night.

Allen scored seven points in a 14-0 run early in the second half that gave the Huskies (18-1, 11-0) a 62-37 lead and they went on to extend their own record with their 16th consecutive Big East regular-season win.

Allen, the conference's leading scorer, also continued to be impressive from long range, going 6-for-9 from 3-point range. That made him 18-for-27 from beyond the arc over the last three games.

Donny Marshall and Brian Fair each had 15 points for Connecticut, which extended its home winning streak to 27 games, while Doron Sheffer added 13.

Jaime Peterson, who scored Pittsburgh's only two field goals in the first 12 minutes of the second half, finished with 16 points. Jason Maile had all but two of his 16 points in the first half for the Panthers (5-15, 1-11).

The Huskies, who had struggled against Pittsburgh's 1-3-1 zone the last time the teams met — falling behind by as many 25 points in that game — had no trouble handling the same defense this time.

Hull scoring big for Blues

By R.B. FALLSTROM
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS

The goals are coming in bunches again for Brett Hull. Looking around in the St. Louis Blues' locker room, he says it's easy to see why.

"Everybody keeps talking about the changed Brett Hull," said Hull, who's tied for the NHL lead with nine goals in eight games. "When you've got these new players around you and a new coach and a new style, everybody looks like they're playing better."

Under new GM-coach Mike Keenan, the Blues are gearing up for a run at the franchise's first Stanley Cup. The team has seven players and a coach with 20 Cup rings among them. Last season, the Blues had no rings.

The latest addition was free-agent right wing Glenn Anderson on Saturday.

"I don't even care how old or how many cups he's won, he's a great player," Hull said. "When he comes here, you will see that without a doubt he'll be the most talented guy out there."

Anderson has been on six Stanley Cup winners. Sometime Hull linemate Esa Tikkanen has been on five. There's also Greg Gilbert (3), Guy Carbonneau (2), Al MacInnis (1), Doug Lidster (1), Donald Dufresne (1) and Keenan (1).

Still, it all revolves around Hull.

"There must be eight or nine different players," said Stars coach Bob Gainey, whose team swept the Blues in the first round of the playoffs last season. "But I think their key players are still here."

In his seventh season with the Blues, Hull is enjoying a resurgence. He got the tying and go-ahead goals while recording his 22nd career hat trick in Saturday's 7-4 victory over Dallas. He also got the game-winner in the Blues' previous game, an overtime victory at Winnipeg.

Hull scored 86 goals in 1990-91, but tailed off — for him — to 54 and 57 the last two seasons while in mourning for traded center and best friend Adam Oates. At this rate, Hull could end up around 50 again despite the NHL's 48-game strike-delayed season.

"I don't look at fast starts or slow starts, I just go out and play," Hull said. "The team's going good, that's the most important thing."

Heading into Tuesday's game against Los Angeles, the Blues were 6-2 and in a three-way tie for first place in the Central Division. It's one of the fastest starts in franchise history and a refreshing change for Hull, whose teams have never made it past the second round of the playoffs.

Kareem, Miller to go into Hall of Fame

By TRUDY TYNAN
Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mass.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the NBA's all-time leading scorer who played on nine championship teams in college and in the pros, was voted into the Basketball Hall of Fame today along with six others.

Also voted into the Hall were women's Olympic and college stars Cheryl Miller and Anne Donovan, former Soviet coach Aleksandr Gomelsky, former NBA official Earl Strom, forward Vern Mikkelsen and coach John Kundla.

Mikkelsen was one of the NBA's first power forwards, while Kundla coached Mikkelsen and also led the Minneapolis Lakers to six pro championships in the 1940s and '50s.

"I'm just happy things worked out," Abdul-Jabbar said today from an Atlanta hotel after being informed he had been elected to the Hall. "It hasn't sunk in yet."

"It is, of course, an honor for Kareem to be inducted into the Hall of Fame," said Hall of Famer Jerry West, an executive vice president with the Los Angeles Lakers. "It's also an honor for the Hall to have Kareem as a member. He is without a doubt the most consummate professional I've ever seen and, if not the greatest player of all time, certainly one of two of three greatest."

"Six world championship rings. Six MVP awards. I can't think of anyone, who could be more deserving," Lakers owner Jerry Buss said.

There were also 19 All-Star appearances for the NBA's all-time leader in scoring with 44,149 points. He also holds records for games played (1,797) and blocked shots (3,189).

From the time Abdul-Jabbar, then known as Lew Alcindor, stepped onto the Power Memorial High School court in New York City in 1961, through his three NCAA championships at UCLA and 20 years in the NBA with Milwaukee and Los Angeles, he dominated the game as few men have.

His high school teams lost six games. His college teams were defeated twice. Yet he was ridiculed because of his height.

"He was subjected to things that, had it been me, I would have really flared up," former UCLA coach John Wooden said. "But he didn't."

And in the tall young man's "intelligence, unselfishness and amazing self-control," Wooden said he found some lessons.

"I learned more from Lewis, as I called him then, than from any other one player I ever had," Wooden said. "I am not talking about basketball now, but about man's inhumanity to man."

Wooden, who guided UCLA to 10 NCAA titles, called Abdul-Jabbar "the most valuable player the college game has ever had. On or off the court."

Donovan, a 6-foot-8 center, led Old Dominion to the AIAW national championship in 1980 and helped boost the U.S. women's Olympic team to gold medals in 1984 and 1988. She is now an assistant coach at Old Dominion.

Miller, also a member of the '84 Olympic team, led Southern Cal to two NCAA championships in '83 and '84 and ranks second only to Hall of Famer Carol Blazejowski in scoring. She is now the coach at Southern Cal. Her brother, Reggie, is an All-Star guard for the Indiana Pacers.

Suns suffer key loss, Manning out for season

By MEL REISNER
Associated Press

PHOENIX

Danny Manning tore a knee ligament during practice Monday and the Phoenix Suns star will miss the rest of the season.

Manning fell during the morning workout and had to be carried from the court. Team doctor Richard Emerson said the 6-foot-10 forward tore the anterior cruciate ligament of his left knee.

He is to undergo surgery at an unspecified date. Such an injury can sideline a player for a year.

"It certainly gives us a big hole to fill," said coach Paul Westphal, whose team has been hit by injuries. "You really can't replace a guy like that, but we'll do the best we can."

Manning's rookie season with the Los Angeles Clippers was cut short at 26 games when he injured the anterior cruciate ligament of his right knee on Jan. 4, 1989.

Manning had played in all 46 games this season, his first with the Suns after leaving the Atlanta Hawks. A former No. 1 draft pick (1988) and two-time All-Star, Manning passed up his chance to command an estimated $5 million per year as a free agent and signed a one-year contract with the Suns for $1 million during the offseason.

He started 19 games this season, including two at center and the last four in a row, averaging 23 points and 8.8 rebounds in those contests. Earlier, Westphal liked Manning coming off the bench.

His shooting improved throughout the season, markedly in the last 16 games, when he hit 57 percent of his shots. For the season, Manning ranked 10th in the NBA at 55 percent.

Westphal said he hadn't decided on an alternate lineup. Danny Schayes, Charles Barkley, Dan Majerle and Elliot Perry started the last two games with Manning, but Wayman Tisdale was in the post the first two.

Tisdale separated rib cartilage Wednesday night against the Los Angeles Lakers and has missed the last two. To compound the Suns' problems, he aggravated the injury again early Tuesday when he sneezed while at his wife's bedside as she gave birth Monday to their fourth child.

"(Trainer) Joe Proski said that's the worst thing you can do is sneeze," said Tisdale, who will be out at least through the All-Star break.

A.C. Green, one potential replacement for Manning, said he was ready if Westphal decides to increase his playing time.

Mavericks find gem in CBA

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

DALLAS

George McCloud is back from professional basketball's bush leagues for one more shot at the big time.

The former first-round pick of the Indiana Pacers played four years in the NBA without distinction before heading for Europe to play for Scavolin Pesaro.

The desperate Dallas Mavericks found him recently with the Rapid City Thrillers of the CBA.

"He has played great for us, but I keep wondering if he is real," said Dallas coach Dick Motta. "(Assistant coach) Brad Davis tells me he is for real. So far, so good."

McCloud, the seventh player taken in the 1989 draft, was acquired on Jan. 30 by the Mavs, who needed bench help because Roy Tarpley has been on the injury list.

So far the 6-foot-8 forward has shot 72 percent from the field. On Saturday night, in a 119-98 victory over Utah, McCloud hit nine of 11 shots, including three 3-pointers, for 22 points.

"He's been shooting the eyes out of it," Motta said. "It really helps our offense when we have somebody who can shoot like that."

"Teams have been doubling down on Jim Jackson and Jamal Mashburn. They can't do that if we can dish the ball out to big George."

McCloud is on a 10-day contract, which is likely to be renewed for another 10-day contract.

Then Dallas has to make a decision whether to keep him.

"I think I can play in the NBA," McCloud said. "That wasn't a question my first four years in the league. I was hurt a lot and I had a lot of personal problems."

"I lost my mother and my father. I kind of lost my desire to play."

McCloud has the desire now. He was hustling downcourt on defense against the Jazz and had two steals and a blocked shot. He also collected four rebounds in his 21 minutes on the floor.

"I think George is really going to help us," Jackson said. "He's a great shooter. He makes other teams play us more honest than they have been. If they double us, George can burn them."

McCloud attended his third practice on Monday, and still doesn't have all the plays down. He's watched a lot of videotape.

"I've just about learned them all," McCloud said. "I'm a quick study."

Keith Grant, Mavericks director of player personnel, said the team took a chance because "our scouts said he was playing well. So far he has been a good fit with the team."

McCloud said he may have found the perfect team to play for.

"Teams double Jim and Jamal a lot, and that leaves me wide open for my strength, the jump shot," McCloud said.

Miler Emily Husted leads the competition at the Meyo Invitational held this weekend in the Loftus Sports Center.

Records fall at Meyo Invitational; Irish runner qualifies for NCAA's

Husted and Rossum set records

By LARRY VOIGT
Sports Writer

The Irish track team successfully competed in the Meyo Invitational held at the Loftus Sports Center on Saturday afternoon with a mix of the old and the new.

A crowd of nearly 1,000 fans attended the event.

Senior Emily Husted provided leadership and experience as she won her heat in the women's mile in a time of 5:00.47. With this time, Husted set a Notre Dame record in the event.

The new and fresh face of freshman Allan Rossum showed some spark in the 55 meters race.

Rossum provisionally qualified for the NCAA Indoor Championships with a time of 6.24. It is the second week in a row that he has won a 55-meter competition as well as provisionally qualifying for the championships.

Noteworthy feats were accomplished and records were shattered on Saturday as other athletes competed against the Irish.

One such highlight was turned in by Kevin Sullivan from Michigan who not only won the mile with a 3:55.90 time, but also set a Meyo Invitational and Meyo track record.

This time stands second on the all-time collegiate mile list behind North Carolina's Tony Waldrop time of 3:55.0 set in 1974.

It also was the 29th fastest all-time indoor mile and the fastest indoor mile run in the state of Indiana.

Eastern Michigan's Paul McMullen finished second in the event with a time of 3:57.34. McMullen's time ranks as the eighth fastest collegiate mile in history and the 48th fastest indoor mile of all-time.

Both McMullen and Sullivan automatically qualified for the NCAA Indoor Championships.

A Meyo meet and track record was also set by Michigan's John Royce with a leap of 7-4 1/2 in the high jump.

■ FENCING

Irish Fencing teams visit MIT for tournament

By JOE VILLINSKI
Sports Writer

For the Notre Dame fencing team, last weekend provided both good news and bad.

Let's start with the good.

The women's team set a new all-time winning streak as they went 5-0 on Saturday, running their consecutive win mark to 46 matches, breaking the old record of 42 that was set from 1986-1988. Their record now stands at 17-0.

"We're really excited," senior foilist Liz Caruso said. "It's like making a thumbprint on the sidewalk when the cement is wet."

"I am very happy for this team," women's head coach Yves Auriol said. "They had great spirit and teamwork and came up with big performances when we needed them. They really earned this."

One of the biggest performances came against Princeton as the Tigers roared to leads of 4-0 and 9-5 before the Irish rallied for a 17-15 win. Once again the women's teamwork secured the victory as the epee team lost 11-5 leaving it up to the foil team.

"I told the girls you have to win as much as possible because we need every touch we can get," foil captain Maria Panyi said.

The foilists were prepared as juniors Panyi and Mindi Kalogera and freshman Anne Hoos added critical wins to prevail 12-4 and keep the unbeaten streak alive.

"The epee team was down 9-2 and we knew we would have to pick up the slack," Caruso added.

"What a performance," marveled Auriol. "This tells me a lot about our team, all of it good."

Led by 4-0 records from Panyi, Kalogera, Hoos, and freshman Elizabeth Nieboer, the Irish started the day by cruising past MIT 29-3. The women also downed NYU and Brown by identical 26-6 scores and finished off Brandeis 24-8 behind Claudette de Bruin's four wins.

"The women as a whole are fencing like the men and women were last year," men's head coach Mike DeCicco said.

Now for the bad.

The men lost for the second week in a row as NYU defeated them, this time 16-11, dropping the Irish to 12-2.

This marks the first time since 1983 that the men's team has lost more than one match in a season.

"It seems like they are lacking confidence," assistant coach Ed Baguer said. "If there's a team that's pumped to fence them, they have trouble with that team."

In the NYU match, the foil and epee teams lost by identical 5-4 scores, while the sabre team was defeated 6-3.

"It was like last week all over again," DeCicco said.

However, the Irish managed to sandwich three wins around

Sophomore Jeremy Siek and the men's team finished the weekend 3-1 at MIT. The Irish have lost two matches this season, the most losses for the team since 1983.

the loss to go 3-1 at MIT. The men started the day by coming from behind to down Princeton 15-12, and then handled Brown easily, 24-3. After the loss to NYU, the Irish polished off a tough Brandeis team 19-8.

"Brandeis has got some good fencers, but after losing to NYU they got mad," DeCicco added.

"However, they have got to learn to get mad earlier."

In the Princeton match, the Irish were down 12-10, but rallied for five wins in a row to defeat the 4th place finisher at last year's NCAA championships.

Senior Conor Power won the deciding bout, while sophomore

Jeremy Siek finished off the tigers. Freshman epeeist Carl Jackson also provided a bright spot as he went 8-2 on the weekend.

"If Notre Dame is to have a respectable season, the captains must provide leadership both on and off the strip," DeCicco added.
