Rogers lauds U.N. Red China decision, hits Nationalist ouster; Congress reacts

Washington, Oct. 26 - The Nixon administration welcomed today communist China's admission to the United Nations but said the decision to expel Nationalist China was "a mistake of major proportion" by the world body.

In a carefully-worded statement approved by President Nixon, Secretary of State William P. Rogers sought to express the administration's disappointment with its defeat in the United Nations without damaging its own plans to improve ties with Peking.

Rogers, speaking at a news conference at the State Department, also pledged that American support for the Taiwan government would remain "unaffected" by last night's United Nations General Assembly action in admitting Peking and expelling Taiwan by a 76-35 vote, with 17 abstentions.

Aware of concern and anger expressed on Capitol Hill over the U.N. vote, Rogers argued against any move to cut off American support for the United Nations in direct retaliation for the Taiwan expulsion.

But he indicated that the administration might not oppose a reduction in United States allocations on other grounds because he said the United Nations may be spending too much money and be "living beyond its resources."

Warms climate of Peking trip

The mood within the administration was described by a key official as one of disappointment with the final vote, but not one of anger or resentment. He said the administration's main problem will be to combat an erosion of American support for the United Nations, which he said had been weakened by the crushing defeat of the United States last night.

At the same time, he said, plans will go ahead with Nixon's plans to visit Peking. The U.N. vote, in a sense, improves the climate for that trip.

Henry A. Kissinger, the President's National Security Affairs Adviser, arrived this afternoon at nearby Andrews Air Force Base after spending six days in Peking making final arrangements with premier Chou En-Lai and other Chinese officials for the President's visit.

He was to have his first formal session with Nixon and Rogers tomorrow morning, but was expected to meet privately with the President tonight.

Although the administration as recently as last Friday had asserted confidence that it would carry the issue in the United Nations, Rogers said that yesterday "we got reports that there was some slippage."

"And before the vote was taken, I felt that the outcome was probably pretty well determined against us," he said.

'Will of majority'

He said that the administration, which thought it would win by two votes last Friday, was not trying to deceive the public. Rather, he said, some nations changed their minds, in some cases without informing the United States.

Rogers, noting that the administration had backed Peking's admission to the United Nations while seeking to keep Taiwan also represented, said in his opening statement that last night's decision was "consistent with the policy of the United States."

"President Nixon hopes that this action, which will bring into the United Nations representatives of more than 700 million people, will result in a reduction of tensions in the Pacific area."

"At the same time, the United States deeply regrets the action taken by the United Nations to deprive the Republic of China of Representation in that organization," he said "We think that this precedent, which has the effect of expelling 14 million people on Taiwan from representation in the United Nations, is a most unfortunate one which will have many adverse effects in the future."

But he said that although the United States believed "a mistake of major proportion has been made in expelling the Republic of China from the United Nations, the United States recognizes that the will of a majority of the members has been expressed."

Congress eyes U.N. fund cuts

Washington, Oct 26 - In an emotional, often angry reaction to the expulsion of nationalist China from the United Nations, a strong sentiment developed in Congress today to reduce contributions by the United States to various United Nations agencies.

The initiative was coming from the conservative side, where Sen. James L. Buckley, Conservative, of New York, teamed up with Sen. Peter H. Dominick, R-Colo., in drafting an amendment to the Foreign Aid authorization bill to reduce U.S. contributions to specialized agencies of the United Nations.

But significantly the movement to cut back on U.S. contributions to the United Nations was supported by senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield and Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott, both of whom stressed that their position was not related to the ouster of the Taiwan Government.

What appeared to be developing was a coalescing of forces between senators who wanted to take reprisal for expulsion of the Nationalist government and senators who for some time have felt the United States was carrying too much of the financial burden of the United Nations.

The administration did not appear to be discouraging this congressional mood to reduce U.S. contributions, which now total about $300 million annually.

At a news conference at the State department, Secretary of State William P. Rogers suggested that the United Nations was "spending too much money," complained that the United States has "probably contributed more than our share" and indicated that the administration would not be opposed to reductions in the U.S. contributions so long as they were not made in retaliation for the General Assembly vote ousting the Taiwan government.

The South Bend children in the Neighborhood Study Help Program and the Logan Center won't be able to watch Notre Dame play Navy unless 450 more students volunteer their tickets. Many children already planning to attend the game will be disappointed if the students don't come through.

The ACC ticket office has agreed to voluntarily extend the ticket deadline for one last day. Students may turn their tickets in between one and four tomorrow afternoon at the ticket office in the Convo.

The Observer urges all students to help make this program a success. All the Observer editors have donated their tickets to the game.

SMC committed to merger - Sr. Alma

Sister Alma Peter, CSC President of Saint Mary's College stressed last night the fact that St. Mary's College is definitely committed to the joint statement on unification that the Trustees issued in May, 1971.

Sister Alma stated in a meeting with fifteen students in the Carroll Hall auditorium that this fact was stressed at the Trustees meeting last weekend. She read the gathering a memo that had been issued to the faculty of SMC from the Board of Trustees, concerning the status of the unification. The memo consisted of three parts.

--SMC is still committed to the unification statement of last May. The merger is hopefully to be completed by 1974-75.

--Notre Dame has asked for a separate budget for 1972-73 to allow for their accountants to finish the studies that are being done on the effect unification will have on the budget. The SMC budget report has been completed but a combined budget cannot be drawn up until both reports are finished.

--The faculty of St. Mary's was asked to submit, in writing, any difficulties they observe in the merger plans to Sister Alma by November 10. These difficulties will be submitted to the meeting of the Ad Hoc Committee on Unification at their next meeting.

The plans for the merger are moving ahead, Sister Alma said. The financial problems have slowed it down slightly but that is "not unusual" in this type of merger.

Students asked to donate meal money

New Pakistan relief drive begins

by Bill Sohn

Three separate drives for Pakistan Relief will occur in the next two weeks, according to Tom Hamilton, co-director of the Student World Concern. What he called the potential deaths of 25 million people, Hamilton said, "We can't overemphasize the urgency of this."

The S.W.C. will co-sponsor a National Fast Day on November 3, along with Project Relief and Ox-fam Inc. Hamilton said that students on over 500 college campuses across the nation will sign away their meals for this day and the money will be sent to Pakistan Relief.

At Notre Dame this will not occur because, according to Hamilton, "The University has forbidden us the right to have students sign away their meals and receive repatriation by the food services on the November third fast day. The University cited as a reason a $300,000 loss by the food services last year."

Hamilton said that the S.W.C. is asking all people on campus who buy their meals to fast and donate the money they would have spent to Pakistan Relief.

A door to door campaign will take place on the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's campuses on November 2nd. Hamilton felt that a minimum of $10,000 should be collected from this drive alone.

Plans also call for a Halloween drive by the school children of South Bend this weekend.

The S.W.C. held a hot dog sale last weekend. 7-up, Kreamo Bakery and several other South Bend companies donated the hot dogs, buns and soda.

Hamilton also mentioned a possible benefit concert to be co-sponsored by SWC and the Student Union. Don Mooney, Student Union Social Commissioner commented that they would like to have their share of the profits from concerts given to Pakistan Relief after they have reached their University-set Union profit ceiling. However, he said the approval of the Administration is needed before they can do this.

Mooney added that University President Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh has expressed interest in helping out the Bengali Relief Fund, he hopes approval for this project can be obtained.

LeMan's hall parietals proposal sent back to committee by SAC

by Sue Pendergast

The St. Mary's Student Affairs Council has sent the Le Mans Hall parietals proposal back to the Student Affairs Committee.

The proposal was voted back to committee until valid evaluation can be made of existing policy. Existing SMC parietal policy is that boys are allowed in the living areas of the dorm on Sunday afternoons from one to five p.m.

The council raised two major objections to the proposal. First, the objection was raised that the students were abusing their Sunday privilege by having men in the living areas of the dorms at times other than on Sunday. According to Jean Seymour, student representative to the Council, it was the Council's feeling that if the students aren't responsible under existing rules, then how can the existing rules be extended.

The second objection to the proposal was based on a number of complaints received by the Dean of Students office. These concerned widespread use of drugs and alcohol at parties during the Sunday parietals.

Miss Seymour commented that, "I was really surprised at this turn of events. I got the feeling at the meeting that something had happened over the weekend and now I can see why these objections have to be raised."

Folk II benefit

Vintage Folk II, a benefit concert for the Notre Dame InPIRG organization, will "happen" tonight in the LaFortune Ballroom.

The Folk show, which features some of Notre Dame's finest talent in that field, is co-sponsored by InPIRG and the Student Union Social Commission, according to InPIRG leaders John Bachman and Bill Rahner.

Bachman, who will be one of the performers said that all of the talent had donated their time. "The concert," he said "is a benefit performance for InPIRG."

The show runs from 7:30 until Midnight tonight and the donation is 25 cents.

Creaney: Tight end by default

by E. J. Kinkopf '72

How does one get to be the starting tight end for the University of Notre Dame football team?

The way Mike Creaney tells it, I guess you just stand around and wait until you win by default.

You see, Mike Creaney starred in high school as an interior lineman on both offense and defense. But around the fall of last year, Mike found a big 91 pasted it on the front and back of his jersey, grabbed a helmet with a cage mask (hiding that boyish, cherubic smile) planted himself on the end of the offensive sets, and promptly became the biggest surprise of the '70 season.

"In high school I was an interior lineman on both offense and defense. And when I started playing here that's where I was tested. But after my freshman year, Dewey Poskon and Tom Lawson, the starting tight ends were graduating. Scott Williams left school, and the year before that Jim Winegardner had graduated. At first the coaches tried Gary Kos at tight end, but he was needed at guard. So they moved Jim O'Malley from his linebacker spot for a shot at end. But he too was too valuable at his regular position."

"So in the space of two years, about four tight ends had left or graduated. The other experiments didn't work out, so I kind of won by default."

And for somebody who claims to have won a starting position by default, Creaney had some pretty impressive statistics for a rookie tight end.

second only to John Dampier in total playing time last season,

Jim Donaldson

The Irish Eye

Better late than never

I remember one night last spring at Louie's, when Jim Humbert jokingly asked me why he and the rest of Notre Dame's offensive linemen "never" got any publicity in the Observer. I agreed that the interior linemen often toiled diligently for little recognition and promised him that the first lineman the Observer would feature this year would be none other than James Humbert.

I was late making good on that promise and now, it's too late. Too late because Jim Humbert won't be playing any more football for Notre Dame. His senior season was brought to an abrupt end Saturday afternoon when he suffered torn ligaments in his knee against Southern California. He'll undergo surgery today to repair the damage.

Humbert is no stranger to the operating room. Twice before in his collegiate career, the young man from Cincinnati had surgery performed on an injured knee. And each time, he battled back to play a major role in Notre Dame's football successes of the past few seasons.

Coming back from a knee injury isn't easy to do. It requires hard work, lots of hard work, and the guts to withstand pain in order to progress from a convalescent to a starting tackle. It requires courage. And Jim Humbert has never been short on courage.

Humbert's first operation came after his freshman season but he whipped himself back into shape and logged 56 minutes of playing time, at guard, as a sophomore.

But, the injury jinx struck him again and he went through a second operation. He came back last season and filled in capably for Larry Dinardo when the All-American guard was forced out of the lineup with a knee injury of his own.

In Notre Dame's 24-11 Cotton Bowl victory over Texas on New Year's Day, Jim Humbert was in the lineup, doing his job quietly and efficiently, and he was a big factor in the offensive success of the Irish against the tough Longhorn defense.

This season, Humbert came into his own. He no longer had to come off the bench, but was a starter in his own right. He had been switched from guard to tackle during last spring's drills and had won a first team berth.

On each of the lineup sheets sent out by Notre Dame's Sports Information Department for the first six games this season, the name of Jim Humbert (6'2, 225), could be found opposite the letters LT. It won't be there any more.

Jim Humbert may not of gotten a lot of public recognition. But the coaches, and his teammates, knew he was in there, every game, every play, carrying out his assignment. He was tough, he was courageous, he was talented. And he'll be missed.

finished as the number two receiver with 18 catches for 418 yards, a 23.4 average and two TD's, and recorded the longest TD pass of the season with the reception of a 78 yard Theismann bomb against Pittsburgh.

Stats like those are nice. But they really don't mean a thing come the following season when you have to begin proving yourself all over again.

And Creaney, picked by Sport Magazine as an All-American candidate for tight end, has been proving himself over and over. He hasn't seen the ball as much this year, but his crunching blocks have been important for the success of the Irish ground game.

But the Irish team as a whole has to begin proving itself all over again come this Saturday afternoon. And, as Mike says, "it's time to start picking up the pieces and start all over again."

Don't snicker about the upcoming Navy game. The Navy team downed a good, solid Duke team...that upset Stanford...that whipped USC.

ND ranked 11th and 12th

Despite Oklahoma's 75-28 destruction of Kansas State's Wildcats, the nation's coaches and writers continued to honor college football's reigning king, Nebraska, in their latest wire-service polls. This week's standings feature a near-consensus on the top ten teams, which did not include the Fighting Irish.

Defending champion Nebraska (7-0) took 26 of 34 first-place votes in the UPI poll (with Oklahoma taking the rest), and

"Yeah we're supposed to lose according to that thing. But seriously, the Navy team is pretty good. They have a lot of quick, little people that never stay down after being blocked out. They keep coming back, and swarm all over you. And they are a well conditioned football team. It is virtually impossible to outthrust the Middies. Last year, our roughest week of preparation was before the Navy game."

As for the game last Saturday, Mike felt that the Irish offense could have beaten the USC defense.

"We felt we could run the ball. We were having success with power plays off tackle, and the sweeps. We knew we could run the ball. They didn't do any stunting, and we didn't have any blocking problems. They just got ahead too fast. We still tried to control the game on offense, but we finally had to abandon our game plan."

The only other team to challenge the Irish this year, before SC, was Purdue. But Mike hedged a little before making a comparison of the two squads.

31 of 55 AP votes. Oklahoma (6-0) remained a strong second, with 21 of the remaining first-place AP votes. Third-rated Michigan (7-0), 4th-rated Alabama (7-0), and 5th-rated Auburn (6-0) each received single first-place votes in the AP grid race.

Georgia and Penn State, both undefeated, flip-flopped sixth and seventh places, the Bulldogs taking 6th in the UPI poll, the Nittany Lions 6th with AP's poll. Filling out the top ten, in the same order in both polls, were: No. 8 Arkansas (6-1), No. 9 Colorado (6-1), and No. 10 Ohio State (5-1).

Notre Dame, following its loss to old nemesis Southern Cal, was ousted from the Top Ten, but remains in contention by virtue of its 11th-place UPI standing and 12th-place AP standing. Incidentally, USC crept into 20th place in this week's AP balloting.

Other teams rated by both wire services include future Irish opponent LSU, still-undefeated Toledo, Arizona State, Tennessee, Texas, Florida State, and the Air Force Academy. Only 18 teams received votes in this week's UPI poll.

Mike Creaney, Irish tight end, hauls in a pass

"Well, they're both big, and good. But it's really hard to compare them, because we played Purdue in the mud. And you really don't see the real team under conditions like that. Then again, maybe if we had played SC in the mud it would've been different. I don't know. But one thing I do know for sure, is that Southern Cal has the best assemblage of natural talent of any team I've seen. And they're not even as big as Purdue."

And how about that LSU game?

"Everybody, most of the students, seem to be looking past Navy, Pitt and Tulane. And as I said before, this Navy team isn't too bad. Nobody on the team is even thinking LSU until we begin drilling for them. Our goal now is 9-1. And that means playing every game one by one. The LSU game will mean nothing if we lose to Navy, Pitt or Tulane."

Beyond the regular season are the bowls. Seemingly a shoo-in for the Orange Classic as late as last Friday night, Irish fans are now beginning to wonder about a post-season bid.

"There was a real blow to our chances last Saturday in that loss. The possibility for a bid is still there, but of course the chances aren't as good as they were before the SC game. But if you remember, we went to the Cotton Bowl in '70 with an 8-1 record, and last year we returned to Dallas with a 9-1 slate. With Nebraska having to play Colorado and Oklahoma yet, and 'Bama and Auburn still scheduled to meet, I wouldn't rule us out at all."

If everyone on the team has that kind of attitude, maybe there are still a few miracles left...

Navy cites ND stars

Ten Notre Dame players, six of whom are on the Irish roster again this season, were named to Navy's 1970 All-Opponent team. The Middies selected five Irish standouts to the offensive club and five to the defensive unit.

Returning Irish Notre Dame players honored by the Midshipmen are Tom Gatewood, split end Mike Creaney, tight end, Walt Patulski, defensive end, Greg Marx, defensive tackle, and Ralph Stepaniak and Clarence Ellis, defensive backs.

Tackle Mike Martin, guard Gary Kos, linebacker Tim Kelly and quarterback Joe Theisman, all seniors last season, were also cited for their performance against Navy.

SMC grads may ask for ND degrees

by Ann Conway

The St. Mary's Board of Trustees yesterday announced that it has decided to allow two SMC seniors to petition the University of Notre Dame for their degrees. The Board reached its decision at a meeting held October 23, according to the announcement acting Sr. Alma Peter read at a meeting of the SMC Academic Affairs Council. She did not release the names of the two seniors.

The resolution also gives all SMC seniors credit for courses they have taken at Notre Dame. SMC seniors who have Notre Dame majors will have their ND majors noted on their transcript.

According to Sr. Alma, the trustees made their decision when they learned that the two girls in question are getting specialized degrees which are not conferred by St. Mary's College. According to the SMC administrator, it would "Seem very strange" if the college granted degrees in departments which do not exist there. She said that other SMC seniors had applied for ND degrees in majors from the colleges of arts and sciences, but that "St. Mary's has been granting similar degrees for several years," and it will continue to do so this year.

In other Council action, Sr.

Alma presented a list of 18 possible commencement speakers. The Council examined the eighteen and announced that it will contact them to determine their availability. The Council will announce their selections when final commitments are made.

Transcripts to be altered

The Notre Dame Registrar has agreed to alter the transcripts of all graduating seniors to designate co-exchange classes taken during the last four years, according to Greta Anderson and Student Government Ombudsman Paul Dziedzic.

Although the transcripts have not yet been altered to include the co-exchange designation, the move, which originated in the St. Mary's Student Assembly, was approved by Notre Dame Provost Reverend James Burtchaell.

In a letter to the Provost, the stated that "Notre Dame Assesembly representatives diplomas will not be rewarded to the St. Mary's class of 1972 and yet many women have accumulated semester hours of Notre Dame courses. We feel that recognition should be given to the co-exchange program."

Meetings between the representatives and both Notre Dame Registrar Richard Sullivan and Burtchaell proved fruitful and they agreed to have the mechanics of altering the transcripts completed by the time the class of 1972 graduates.

Anderson and Dziedzic said in a joint statement, "We are pleased with the outcome because it provides just recognition for courses taken through the co-exchange program".

SMC committed to merger

"Many of the stories going around are false" Sr. Alma stated.

The Sisters of Holy Cross receive nothing from St. Mary's but the salaries they earn, which are the same as the salaries of the lay persons working for the college. In the past half of these salaries were turned back over to the college. Tuition received is used for academic purposes, Sr. Alma stated, none of this money is used to take care of the Sisters.

St. Mary's is not mortgaged. "We have been operating in the black for the past two years and next year's projected budget is also in the black," Sr. Alma said. The college buildings at SMC are valued at approximately $21 million.

Sister Alma reiterated a previous statement that St. Mary's was non-negotiable at the present time. Above the Board of Trustees there is the Sisters of the Holy Cross Incorporated, a body of 1,300 sisters. For the buildings of St. Mary's to be sold a meeting of this incorporation must be held and a vote taken. The incorporation meets every third summer, she stated. The next meeting is scheduled for the summer of 1973, though it is conceivable that a meeting may be called before this time.

If the budgets are not combined the St. Mary's faculty will remain associates to the Notre Dame faculty. Rumors that Notre Dame will refuse to accept St. Mary's faculty are false, Sr. Alma stated.

Sister Alma stated that she didn't believe that the failure of the budgets to combine would hinder the movement to combine the student governments or the progress toward mixed housing. Saga Food services will remain at SMC thru next year probably.

Notre Dame degrees will be awarded to SMC students beginning next year unless St. Mary's degrees are specifically requested.
