Chou reveals China's cautious U.N. policy

By Richard Halloran
(c) 1971 New York Times

TOKYO, NOV. 8 - Premier Chou En-Lai of Communist China has told a Japanese editor that the Chinese delegation to the United Nations will take a "very cautious" approach.

Chou, in an interview in Peking with Moto Goto, Managing Editor of the Asahi Shimbun, a leading daily here, said: "There is an old Chinese saying, which goes, 'Be careful when facing a problem.' We do not have too much knowledge about the United Nations and are not too conversant with the new situation which has arisen in the United Nations."

"We must be very cautious," Chou was reported to have said. "This does not mean, however, that we do not have self-confidence; it means that caution is required and that we must not be indiscreet and haphazard."

Chou's remarks, published in an English transcript here today, appeared to confirm earlier speculation in New York that Communist China planned to move carefully during its first days as a member of the United Nations.

Chou received Goto on Oct. 28, three days after the United Nations voted to replace Taiwan with Communist China. In an earlier article, Goto said the record of the interview was checked by the Chinese foreign Ministry for one week and therefore constituted an "official record."

Goto also said that there was an agreement that the content of the interview would be released at an "appropriate time."

Its publication today coincided with the arrival of the advance party of the Communist Chinese Delegation in New York.

Chou, who met with Goto for two hours in the Great Hall of the People, also indicated that the Chinese Delegation would align itself with the less-developed nations of Asia, Africa, and Latin America.

"We are opposed to the 'major powers,' to power politics, and to domination," Chou said. "We will not become a major power under any circumstances." The Chinese have often accused the Soviet Union and the United States of collusion in an attempt at world domination.

"All countries must be uniformly equal," Chou was reported to have said. "We must particularly and without fail respect the opinions of the small and medium-sized nations."

"If the statements of the small and medium-sized countries are ignored and if things are decided only on the basis of statements by the major powers," Chou continued, "this violates the premise that small, medium and major nations are uniformly equal."

Chou told Goto that the Chinese government was undertaking a careful analysis of the United Nations vote but indicated that the way a nation voted on the Chinese representation issue would have only a marginal effect on China's attitudes.

Among the 76 nations that voted for Communist China, Chou said, "there are some countries that cannot have official governmental relations with China."

He singled out Israel, which he asserted had "started an aggressive war in the Middle East."

Although he had friendly words for the Israeli people, Chou said "There must be no ambiguity in outlining one's position and drawing the line."

"Portugal voted for us also," he noted. "Portugal has colonies in Africa but China supports the national liberation movement of the peoples in Angola, Mozambique, and Guinea. Because of this, Portugal may be thinking as follows: We have supported China, so China should not attack us on the colonial question in the U.N. Security Council."

"This, however, is something we cannot agree to," Chou said.

He said that China and Japan "must go forward in the direction of restoration of diplomatic relations." But the statement appeared to be a generality and he gave no details.

Chicano recruitment

How hard does ND really try?

Armando Alonzo:

"Recruitment of Chicanos by the University is really ineffective...if they don't know us, they cannot do an effective job."

by Jerry Lutkus

Observer News Editor

(This is the first part of a four part series covering university recruitment of minority groups. Today's installment covers the recruitment of Chicanos by Notre Dame.)

Armando Alonzo, campus leader of MECHA, spoke quickly but thoughtfully as his meal rapidly grew cold beneath him. "Recruitment of Chicanos by this University is really ineffective."

The Mexican-American leader from Edinburg, Texas confided that what this University really needs is a Spanish-speaking member of the admissions office. It needs this man to recruit Chicanos.

Observer Insight

According to Alonzo, in meetings last year with Rev. James Burtchell, the Provost could see no reason for such a hiring. But Alonzo said that it was necessary because "the recruiters don't know who we are."

"If they don't know us, they cannot do an effective job," he commented.

As it stands, the members of the Admissions Department generally go where to alumni requests them to come. Alonzo contends that since the alumni are largely middle to upper class, the requests send the recruiters to middle and upper class schools.

"California and Texas combined have 5 million Chicanos, yet where do the recruiters go---suburbia!" Alonzo complained.

He continued, "I'm not saying that the recruiters shouldn't go there, but we too want to become part of this school, this society. We want to share in its opportunities."

Alonzo noted further that the university presently draws all of its Chicano members from the Southwest. Out of the entire university Mexican-American population, only three members come from the Midwest. Yet Chicago and New York have some of the nation's highest-percentage Chicano populations, he said.

MECHA's leader said that "we have to make a better effort to get Chicanos from the Midwest and East; Chicago-Gary, Detroit, New York, Cleveland."

MECHA made an effort to do precisely that over the weekend as they brought approximately 40 Mexican-American high school students from the Chicago area to the campus. The effort was co-ordinated with the Mexican American Council on Education (MACE).

MACE is a group of parents and young adults who are concerned with Mexican-American education. They brought the organization's president, vice-president, and 3 of the organization's counselors, who aid the group, to Notre Dame along with the students.

It was a co-ed group who came to get acquainted with the university in general, but more specifically with its programs on scholarships and financial aid. Alonzo said that the Chicanos can meet university academic requirements, but that they need financial help.

Financial aid is imperative to a Chicano's attendance, according to Alonzo. As of now, the University gives aid out of the Cotton Bowl funds and from the interest on an endowment given the university by the Knights of Columbus. Alonzo estimates the

by Ann-Therese Darin

Lines of students waiting for meals yesterday ran out of the front doors of the North Dining Hall and lolled around the South Dining Hall lobby as a result of the food-service clampdown on forged tickets. Director of food services Edmund T. Price confirmed the clampdown, diagnosing. "It's pretty bad. I wouldn't be doing it if I didn't have to."

Although Price could not give an exact dollar and cent figure for the losses due to the illegality, he termed it "a significant amount." He inferred the number of tickets forged is under 100.

For each forged meal ticket,

Price said, the service loses $300.00.

Price maintained that it was difficult to determine the amount lost because there are several degrees of forgery ranging from inked-in numbers to completely forged cards.

Food service is now checking meal-card numbers against master sheets as students enter the dining hall, and randomly confiscating cards for a day in order to investigate their make.

As of four o'clock yesterday afternoon, Price related that his workers had confiscated "five" or "six" illegal meal cards.

"I am not a disciplinarian," he claimed. "This is not our function, our function is simply to serve food."

Sense and Insense: Fakes (A symposium discussing 'Authenticity') will be sponsored Wednesday, November 10 and Thursday, November 11, at Carroll Hall, Madeleva Memorial, by the Saint Mary's and Notre Dame art departments. Louis Pomerantz, conservator, John Keefe, assistant curator, post-Renaissance European decorative arts, Chicago Art Museum, and William Pettit, head, foreign department, Rare Coin Co. of America, are only a few of the people participating in the symposium. Tickets, available from SMC art majors, ND art dept., or at the door are $1.50 for the series or $.50 for each lecture.

interest return at $40,000 a year. Last year, 11 undergraduate Mexican Americans were given aid. This year the number has climbed to 19. "The Provost says this is progress," claims Alonzo. "We question his estimation of progress."

"We have the highest birth rate in the U.S. and we're also the poorest," said Alonzo. "What's so paradoxical," he continued, "is that Fr. Hesburgh knows all this. He knows our problems. He says we're (Notre Dame is) committed to total equality."

Alonzo argued that all they have to base this "total equality" on is the "visible record."

"When the visible record shows an increase of 11 Chicanos to 19 Chicanos to the university's population, we question the commitment," Alonzo said.

"That, to us, is not progress," he stated. MECHA hopes to see 50 more Mexican Americans on campus next year. "If we keep going on this 10-15, 15-20 rate, we're never going to catch up," says Alonzo.

Alonzo also made note of the Chicano population at St. Mary's. As of the present, there are only "3 or 4" Mexican American girls at SMC and he terms this situation "not very normal."

"We'd like to see girls here," he said.

He also attacked the argument that admission of more Chicanos would lower a university's standards. Alonzo called this belief "totally unfounded."

"You can cite tests, stats, anything, often we score higher," he said.

"Most of us are bilingual, bicultural," he continued, "and this is something that test scores don't indicate."

Alonzo revealed that the Mexican Americans have been working with student Government and the Office of Admissions, and that they intend to continue. "It's all part of a program, an action that has to be done by all of us."

MECHA needs people to help them, Alonzo said. They need people to gather information and to write alumni concerning funds to aid them. Alonzo says that they even need people to help work with the Chicanos in South Bend.

But he emphasized that people is not the real problem. They need money. "The problem has never been our wanting to come here, but our being able to afford it. We're not asking for all the money, we're reasonable. We'll take anything...loans. But we need help."

United Nations, N.Y.—A six man advance party for the new Chinese United Nations delegation arrived Monday to begin making arrangements for security, housing and office space for the full delegation. They were met at Kennedy Airport by members of the Albanian and Rumanian delegations and then given a police escort to their hotel.

Washington—President Nixon rejected a Pentagon proposal that would have withdrawn the only American division from South Korea and reduced the army to 11 divisions. According to administration sources, the proposal, which was made in the course of hammering out a new defense budget, was turned down after it had been opposed by the State Department and White House officials.

London—Amnesty International, a respected private organization that acts in behalf of political prisoners throughout the world, published charges that imprisoned men in Northern Ireland had been subjected to "savage beatings" and "torture" by British soldiers. The home office refused any comment on the report.

Interhall loop set for playoffs

by Stan Urankar '73

An exciting final week of Interhall Football 1971 saw last year's finalists, Dillon and Keenan, both win to earn playoff berths. Pangborn-Fisher and Morrissey round out this year's post-season contingent.

Keenan 14 Flanner 6

The League Three championship rode on the outcome of this contest. As the clubs felt each other out in the opening minutes, Flanner fumbled at its own 35 where John Hession recovered for Keenan. The defending North Quad titlists then drove for the score, with fullback Don Adesso carrying in from the one. The High-Risers bounced back in the second period when QB Carl Oberzut lofted a 35 yard bomb to Bill Hietanen to knot the score at 6-6. The decisive fourth quarter turned into a battle of mistakes.

The Graduate View

Waiting in the weeds

So now John Shumate is out too.

The best freshman, the toughest rebounder, potentially the highest scorer, the rock upon which to build the Phelps dynasty, will not play this season. Neither will captain Doug Gemmell who would have provided a much-needed steadying influence as well as a few points and rebounds.

This winter, I'll be leaving the basketball reporting and analyzing to the rest of the staff, but the Shumate tragedy has prompted a few reflections before "Digger's" first, and probably traumatic year.

Phelps will field a young, inexperienced team, made younger and less experienced by injuries and the policies of last season. Take Jim Regelean and Don Silinski. Both showed flashes of excellence last year, especially Silinski who always seemed to excel in the "garbage" portion of the games he got into. Regelean is a wealth of height and raw talent.

But these two saw all too limited action last year. Faced with his unusually tough schedule, former coach Johnny Dee had very few chances to clear his bench and give Regelean, in particular, the game experience he needed.

Phelps must bank heavily on sophomores, a prospect no coach particularly welcomes, given traditional soph propensity to error. This year's crop is a good one, even without Shumate, but it is a small one. Another rough schedule, too many sophomores, and inexperienced upperclassmen all adds up to a painful winter for "Digger" Phelps.

This column is directed to all you Irish fans who have plunked down your cash for a season ticket. If you think you are going to see a high-scoring Irish team blowing opponents out of the gym, you are wrong. If you think you are going to see some Irish player average 40 points per game, you are wrong.

What you will undoubtedly see will be ND teams making errors, getting pounded on the boards and getting smacked on the scoreboard.

But if you boo, if you jeer "Bullshit", if you put "Dump Digger" signs on your doors, then you will be showing a serious lack of class. This is the year that the basketball team will need solid fan support.

I'm willing to guarantee that if you attend the home contests this year, you will see a small, out-mannered Irish quintet go out and out-hustle even the best teams. You'll see tough defense, played all over the court and a squad that will not give up. And I'm sure Digger Phelps will out-coach a few people also.

In fact, with the same fan cheering that helped boost the Irish over UCLA last season, I'm convinced you'll see several top-ranked teams forced to fight for their lives. And just as you'll probably see a few one-sided Irish defeats, you'll probably also see some stunning Irish upsets.

This year, ND will be waiting in the weeds.

It is getting close to bowl invitation time. There are three unbeaten SEC teams, two unbeaten Big Eight teams and Penn State in contention for the five major bowl slots open (discounting Rose). The prospects are good that the Irish will not be offered one of them.

But the prospects are excellent for ND getting a bid to one of any number of second-rank attractions: Liberty, Gator, Astro-Bluebonnet. And this situation, if it arises, will force the Irish to make a decision that gets more complex the more I look at it.

The Irish may feel that a second-rate date with a 10-1 or 9-2 opponent would be worthless, meaning no chance to knock off an unbeaten powerhouse, no chance to move up significantly in the polls. They could turn the invitation down. This would mean a December without burdensome practices, a Christmas season spent at home, a chance for the talented seniors to play in some All-Star games. Take a 9-1 season and watch the big boys on the tube.

There is, however, another side to this. I seem to recall that part of the justification for the Cotton Bowl junkets was cold, hard cash, badly needed for important university programs. Now, the Gator Bowl obviously couldn't match the Cotton Bowl receipts. But anything would help. I'm sure that even after those expenses for the team, band, official ND party, etc., etc., are skimmed off the top, there would be enough left over to pay a few bills.

For once, I'm not pushing any opinion; I'm just pointing out some food for thought. Let's hope that somehow, someway, the Irish get a bowl invitation that means something.

I'd hate to have the team facing what could become an agonizing decision.

Keenan drove 70 yards in four minutes, only to fumble on the two. With three minutes left, Flanner tried to move, but fumbled on the six, with Keenan's Tom Hannigan grabbing the loose ball. Three plays later, with only 1:45 to go, Tom Ewing dove

Harriers lose

Michigan State runners captured the first five places, posting a perfect score, and trounced the Notre Dame cross country team, 15-44, Friday afternoon on the Burke Memorial course. It was the final dual meet of the year for the Irish.

The Spartans' Ken Popejoy, Randy Kilpatrick, Robin Crol and Dave Dieters tied for first place in 30:19.8. Ron Croll of MSU finished fifth. Marty Hill was Notre Dame's top finisher, placing sixth.

in from the one, with Joe Reams adding the extra points. Keenan now faces Morrissey in one of next week's playoff battles.

Dillon 12 Walsh 6

A do-or-die game for last year's titlists saw them drive 65 yards the first time they got the ball, with junior Randy Stasik sneaking home from the one. As Dillon muffed continual scoring opportunities, the defenses battled till late in the fourth quarter. With Dillon driving again, Stasik attempted a screen pass for Bill Hoy, but linebacker Mike O'Neill stepped in to pick off the aerial and race 60 yards to tie

Rugger's split

Notre Dame's "A" and "B" rugby teams collided with the Cleveland Blues Saturday at Stepan Center, and both of the games between the two clubs were decided as shutouts.

In the first game, the "A" squad suffered from generally lackluster play, and absorbed a 12-0 blanketing at the hands of the much larger Blues. But in the day's second contest, the "B" team earned a split for the Irish by downing their Cleveland opponents 28-0.

Fred Bell, John O'Connor, Ed O'Connell, Larry Gillespie, Pete Frantz, and Lee Pallardy all scored on tries for the "B" unit, and Ed O'Connell rounded out the scoring by booting a pair of conversions.

Walt's better

Recent medical reports show that Walt Patulski, Notre Dame's co-captain and All-American defensive end who was injured against Pittsburgh last Saturday, may be able to play next weekend against Tulane.

Irish coach Ara Parseghian said yesterday that, "X-rays at St. Joseph's Hospital showed that the kneecap was either bruised or pulled a little. There was some fluid, but we are hopeful that he'll improve each day and be ready for Tulane."

Open B-ball practice slated

The Irish basketball team will hold an open practice Tuesday, Nov. 8th, at 4 p.m. All interested persons are invited to the practice, which will be held in the ACC.

the game. Dillon was not out, however. Stasik worked the same play to Hoy for 50 yards to the Walsh seven. With a third and two for a touchdown, Stasik rolled out and fired for Hoy in the end zone, but was intercepted. Walsh, with the ball at the 20, tried to move to a score, but cornerback Jay Long intercepted at the 20 with only 35 seconds remaining. With the clock running out on Dillon's title hopes and only one play left, Stasik fired a bullet to Hoy in the middle of the end zone for, possibly, their biggest win of the season.

Pangborn-Fisher 18 Off-Campus 0

P-F rolled to a League One tie-clinching triumph. Chuck Voelker capped a 65 yard opening period drive with a quarterback sneak for a 6-0 lead. With their defense holding O-C to only one first down for the game, P-F played control ball till the final period, when Phil Dunn tallied on a three yard run, and Voelker clicked with All-Campus receiver Pete Farbatko on a 15 yard touchdown pass. P-F and Dillon now square off next week for a place in the finals.

Sorin over Alumni

A scheduling misunderstanding led to this forfeit victory for Sorin, as both clubs eventually showed up, but at different times.

Zahm 21 Lyons 0

Losers only to rugged Morrissey this year, Zahm finished with a respectable 3-1 mark, good for second place in League Two. Kip Browne hauled in touchdown aeriols of 15 and 80 yards from quarterback Paul Tufts. Jack Leicht scored on a 30 yard draw play, while Mike Murtaugh added three extra points.

Booters bow

The Notre Dame soccer team suffered their sixth defeat of the season Saturday, bowing to Western Illinois, 3-0. The setback left the Irish booters with a 2-6-1 record.

Western Illinois netted one goal in each of the first three periods while holding the visiting Irish scoreless.

Notre Dame will wind up their season this weekend, hosting traditional rival, Cincinnati.

Barkett: co-ed dorms next year are out

Student Body President John Barkett last night evaluated his first seven months in office as "a pretty good year so far."

SBP Barkett spoke in the Keenan Hall chapel at the invitation of the Hall's Academic Commission, mentioning what he termed "several successes" he had experienced so far but predicting that "chances look pretty poor" for co-ed dorms by next year.

The SBP contended that coeducation is bound to come to the Notre Dame campus, arguing that the merger was "too far advanced" to be put off for very long or to be reversed. He said that for "political reasons," co-ed dorms would probably not come to Notre Dame next year.

"Too many minds would have to be changed," he opined.

The SBP said that current plans call for two Notre Dame dorms to become women's dorms next fall, although the University has not yet determined which dorms they will be, since, he said, "no one seems to want to leave where they are right now."

Barkett listed as his successes "the $10,000 Student Life Fund, scheduled to be distributed to the halls through the Senate-instigated Student Life Committee, the promise received from the Board of Trustees for money for social facilities, the eight halls that he had been able to visit, and "certain improvements in academics."

Barkett said that the establishment of a grade committee, a new Freshman Year Dean, and a proposed mid-first semester break for next year all constituted progress in that area.

He was also "happy for the success of the Day Care Center" and the Charity Basketball Game to take place the week of Thanksgiving.

Other successes, he contended, were the recently established Security Board and Dining Hall Commission, both of which were recommended last Spring by the Student Government.

In response to a question about the effects of the Trustees rejection of the SLC's parietal recommendation on the SLC, Barkett said, "In talking to the members, I've found that none of them feel slighted." However, he contended that the concept of an SLC may have been damaged somewhat.

"I couldn't help feeling," he said, "that they (the Trustees) didn't understand what the SLC was trying to tell them."

First is what he called the "historical framework in which they look at things, including the situation of the past few years and the sudden move from no parietals to de facto 24-hour parietals last year.

"Second," he said, "there's a bad taste in people's mouth about some of the things that went on in the residence halls last year."

Third, Barkett contended that the Board, while admitting that current hall leadership is good, fears failure in that leadership in coming years.

Finally, Barkett said that the Board is so busy with other things, such as the financial straits of the University, that they are just not interested in talking parietals.

SAC meets

by Jodi Campbell

The St. Mary's Student Affairs Committee last night heard a report on the progress of the hall parietal bill, made a few changes in house rules, and sent the Coffee House Bill back to the Student Union for reexamination.

Committee chairman and student body vice-president Missy Underman reported that she was "pleased" with what she termed the "acceptance of the parietal proposal by the Student Affairs Council." The Student Affairs Council has deferred voting on the bill, which would give each hall the power to determine its own parietal regulations.

The Committee sent the proposed extension of the St. Mary's Coffee shop's hours back to the Student Union for further investigation. The committee charged the Union to pay particular attention to hiring a new guard, a move deemed "necessary" if the coffee house is to remain open after dorm-closing.

to get as much for your money as possible when shopping for stereo. But be sure you are getting good value when you buy something. Even if that something is offered at a big discount.

We've found, in our experience in the stereo business, that things seldom get sold for less than what they're worth. Which is to say, it doesn't make sense to buy a 90 dollar speaker for 72 dollars when you can get a better one for $70.

When you shop stereo at RMS we won't be offering you any big red-hot discount deals. What we will offer you is more good value for the money than you can buy anywhere else in town.

We have Sony receivers, priced from $150 up. They are probably the best available for the money. We have Advent loudspeakers, priced at $70 and $102. Likewise.
