Badin Rector concerned

Priorities committee hears no coed voices

by Mike O'Hare
Observer Staff Reporter

The absence of women and Student Affairs representatives to the Committee on University Priorities had prompted Badin Hall Rector Miss Kathleen Cekanski to express her concern to University Provost Fr. James T. Burtchaell.

In a letter sent to Fr. Burtchaell, Miss Cekanski stated, "I question the notable absence of anyone from the Student Affairs Office and anyone representing the new voices of Notre Dame...the coeds." The letter questioned the insight any of the present members on the priorities committee would have on the future of student life and coeducation at Notre Dame, if none of their backgrounds reflect such expertise.

Miss Cekanski's letter noted that she has been impressed with the forward looking views and plans set forth by Dr. Phillip Faccenda and Fr. James Flanigan of the Student Affairs Office and Fr. William Toohey, Campus Ministry Director. It continued to state that "coeducation is here at Notre Dame and should not be inadvertently overlooked when setting priorities." While Miss Cekanski didn't feel that her letter would alter the composition of the current committee, she hoped it might have some impact on future committee selection.

Miss Joanne Szafrank rector of Walsh Hall, echoed Miss Cekanski's concern over the make-up of the committee on priorities. "If the deep twofold concern with academics and student life is something unique to Notre Dame, why wasn't this concern with student life represented on the committee," questioned Miss Szafrank.

Concerning the absence of women on the committee, she feels that there are many women in the university qualified to sit on such a group, and cited Sr. John Miriam Jones, Assistant to the Provost, as such a woman.

St. John Miriam, while disappointed at the lack of female and student life representatives, believes that the people who selected the committee were sincere and that "there was no overt effort to exclude women." She expressed hope that it would not be too late to add a woman to the committee and correct this "oversight."

Sr. Miriam believes that the reaction over the absence of women and Student Affairs representatives on the committee should "serve as a gentle reminder that we should have some voice on future priorities." She feels it would help to have a person present to voice the views of coeducation and student life.

The assistant to the Provost is optimistic that the committee on priorities "will be anxious to lend an ear to our views. I assume the good will of the people on the committee and believe that coeducation will be a high priority."

Although sorry that there are no women on the committee, Mrs. Sue Roberts, educational consultant, believes that coeducation is so visible that "the committee will bend over backwards to allow our viewpoint to be heard."

She doesn't think that it will be a closed committee, but will "seek out every aspect of the University community" and allow for input from these various segments. Mrs. Roberts mentioned the idea of creating satellite committees to provide the necessary expertise and input into the central committee. And despite the lack of women, she remains optimistic about the future of the committee.

Cekanski: notable absence of coeds.

Sr. J.M. Jones and Roberts: disappointment and visibility

Szafrank: concern with student life

Kissinger continues private peace talks

By Bernard Gwertzman
(C) New York Times

Washington, Oct. 8--Presidential foreign policy adviser Henry A. Kissinger held another private meeting in Paris today with North Vietnam's top negotiators. The White House, in making the announcement, left open the possibility that they might meet again tomorrow.

As usual, no substantive details on the session were made public, either here or in Paris. This was Kissinger's 19th such trip to the French capital since August, 1969, when he began the series of private Vietnam negotiations.

It followed by less than two weeks his meetings on Sept. 26 and 27 with the same two men, Le Duc Tho, the Hanoi Politburo member charged with Vietnam negotiations, and Xuan Thuy, Hanoi's regular chief delegate to the Paris talks.

A new factor today was the presence for the first time on the American side of Maj. Gen. Alexander M. Haig, Jr., who serves as Kissinger's deputy, and who held talks last week in Saigon with President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam. No reason for Haig's attendance at the talks was given by Ronald L. Ziegler, the White House press secretary, who made the announcement of the session this morning.

But another White House aide suggested that because Haig had an up-to-date understanding of Thieu's views, he would be of help to Kissinger if the talks, as expected, dealt with a possible political settlement in Saigon.

President Nixon, in his most recent Vietnam comments at a news conference three days ago, said that "The negotiations are in a sensitive stage."

From what has been said publicly, a settlement has been blocked largely because of serious disagreements over what kind of government might emerge in Saigon.

Nixon said at his news conference that the settlement "will come just as soon as we can possibly get a settlement which is right-right for the South Vietnamese, the North Vietnamese, and for us, one that will have in mind our goals of preventing the imposition by force of a communist government in South Vietnam and, of course, a goal that is particularly close to our hearts, in a humanitarian sense, the return of our prisoners of war."

In their most recent public proposals, the North Vietnamese and the Vietcong have insisted that their proposal for an interim, tripartite government would not impose communist rule on South Vietnam, but would also prevent continued Pro-American rule.

Under that three-pronged government, Thieu would resign and a coalition, made up of Vietcong, Saigon officials and neutralists would take over power, write a new constitution, and hold new elections for a permanent government.

Publicly the United States has rejected the communist proposal as a smokescreen for a Vietcong takeover, and Thieu last night, in a national broadcast, called the proposal "a wicked design" in which the communists, have failed to win militarily, were seeking to take over politically.

Saigon—As fighting between government troops and communist guerillas continued within ten miles of Saigon Sunday, military spokesman said South Vietnamese forces had failed to drive the infiltrators from the three hamlets they have controlled all weekend. Field reports said the fighting was not on a large scale, but thousands of civilians fled the combat area east of route 13 in search of safety. Meanwhile, one American plane and its two-man crew were reported lost as United States bombing continued at a high level over the weekend.

Washington—Henry A. Kissinger had another meeting with North Vietnam's chief negotiators in Paris, but no important details of the session were made public. It was Kissinger's 19th such visit to Paris since the presidential foreign policy adviser began his series of private negotiations in 1969. A new element in the latest meeting was the presence of Major General Alexander M Haig Jr., Kissinger's deputy, who met recently with South Vietnamese president Nguyen Van Thieu.

Washington—A senate subcommittee investigating the extent of civilian damage caused by American bombing of North Vietnam has been told by a senior military officer that field reports of so-called collateral damage are not sent to the Pentagon. In secret testimony released to the New York Times, Major General John W. Pauly told a subcommittee headed by Sen Edward M. Kennedy that "lucrative targets are often rejected" if examination shows that civilian damage would be substantial.

Civilian losses unreported

(c) 1972 New York Times

Washington, Oct. 8—A senior military officer has testified in secret before a Senate panel that the Pentagon and the Administration are not "necessarily" informed in specific reports of civilian damage and casualties resulting from United States air strikes in North Vietnam.

Maj. Gen. John W. Pauly, Vice Director for Operations of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told the Senate subcommittee on refugees in executive session on Sept. 28, that although United States air commanders in Vietnam conduct field "critiques" on the results of the raids, these studies are not sent to Washington.

The transcript of the executive session hearings, with security deletions imposed by the Defense Department, was made available to the New York Times today by the subcommittee, which is headed by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. The hearings were called in an effort to determine the extent of civilian damage in North Vietnam stemming from American raids on military targets there.

Using a Pentagon term of "collateral damage" to describe hits on civilian targets, Pauly said that "our policy has been established that only military targets will be struck, and that civilian casualties be minimized."

"Lucrative targets are often rejected if, as a result of examination, we found that the collateral damage would be substantial," he said.

Reconnaissance is put in to identify what damage has been done to the target, and to identify, where possible, any collateral damage that has been done."

"The critiques are done by the commanders and the crews alike with the idea of refining not only our capability of taking out the targets we are after, but likewise to minimize any possible collateral damage," he said.

But under questioning by Kennedy, the general said that "we do not get distribution on the actual critiques. They do not come to our level. It is handled out in the field and the type reports that are kept, I am not sure of at this time."

"We get regular reports in the system back here—the report of the strike and then the day after, a resume of the strike," Pauly testified.

"When they do not necessarily in all cases contain any indication of collateral damage," he said. "In one case that I will point out, we did find in those reports that were identified, mention of collateral damage, the crews pulled off as they released because a SAM (surface-to-air missile) had been detected; it was an accident and that was identified. But the regular critiques are done at unit level."

Asked by Kennedy whether reports on "collateral damage" were submitted to the "top level" in Washington Pauly replied: "No, sir, not as a specific report."

In a comment on Pauly's testimony, Kennedy said today that "it is apparent from the record that at the highest levels of our government—where the decisions for the massive bombing and shelling of North Vietnam are made—there is no regular procedure for observing and monitoring the damage being done to civilian populated areas."

"Spokesmen for the Administration can talk with great precision about the number of bridges and roads and supply depots knocked out—but the damage done to schools and hospitals and housing and civilian installations generally is

Kennedy visit hectic and productive

by Jerry Lutkus
Observer News Editor

Early press releases claimed that Senator Edward Kennedy would spend "a jam-packed" four hours in the Third Congressional District of Indiana. And they weren't kidding.

The key word of the Kennedy visit had to be "packed."

Kennedy arrived Thursday night at the Elkhart airport—much to the consternation of Observer reporters and ND-SMC students for McGovern. The McGovern organization informed us late Thursday that Kennedy would be arriving at the South Bend airport. Needless to say, the small crowd that formed at the South Bend airport was thwarted.

breakfast at 7:45

Kennedy and John Brademas, the Third District Congressman who toured with Kennedy rose early enough on Friday to attend the fund raising breakfast at 7:45 at the Indiana Club in South Bend.

The breakfast was mobbed and the Senator's departure was late. He went directly to the studios of WNDU where a 30 minute campaign program was taped. It was billed as a conversation between Senator Kennedy and Congressman Brademas. Included in the program were 12 students from the ND-SMC campus.

The students were ushered into the studio 15 minutes before Kennedy and Brademas arrived. All of them had received security clearance earlier in the week and as they entered the studio ID's were required.

security precautions

As they sat waiting for Kennedy to arrive, the security became noticeably tighter. Kennedy is equipped with a corps of Secret Service men for his protection.

The Secret Service had the Academic Council to discuss revision of faculty manual

The Academic Council will meet in a closed session today at 4:00 pm in rooms 102 and 104 in the Center for Continuing Education. The Council which is composed of 26 members of the administration, 26 faculty members and seven students, is the governing academic body of the university.

At the meeting, a new Steering Committee is expected to be elected. The major undertaking will be the revision of the faculty manual with today's meeting devoted to the procedure for this revision. The manual, which hasn't been revised since 1966, contains the bylaws of the administrative and academic structure of the university. The purpose of the academic council is to determine all academic policies of the university.

Senator Edward Kennedy

Observer Insight

WNDU building more or less cordoned off. Admittance was given only to those with security clearance. All staff personnel wore red tags indicating their clearance. They informed the students that any move toward Kennedy would be stopped. It was a different story though if Kennedy offered the initiative and made a move toward anyone.

When he finally arrived in the studio, the Kennedy magic just exploded. He, along with Brademas, addressed all the students, shaking hands and speaking with each. WNDU staff members flashed pictures of the Massachusetts Senator and some asked for autographs.

When he finally settled into his seat on the set, Kennedy appeared nervous. He fidgeted in his seat and played with his microphone. But when the cameras began to roll, the Senator turned on the Kennedy charm. He flamed, he reasoned, he smiled that Kennedy smile.

After the show was taped, he shot two endorsement commercials, one for Floyd Fithian, Democratic candidate from the Second District, and the other for Brademas. (He had to shoot each twice because of on-camera goofs.)

on to Stepan

The Secret Service then rushed him out of the studio into the lobby where he was detained by picture shooting and autographing. The exit route was through the back doors of WNDU into the waiting car that took him to Stepan.

Kennedy appeared on stage almost immediately after he arrived at Stepan. As he walked onstage, the ovation was thundering. It was an electric moment and the Kennedy magic wand worked its magic.

From the start, Kennedy seemed to have the crowd in his hand, particularly those students that ringed the stage. They all had arrived hours before so that they might get a seat close to the stage. (Before Stepan opened, the line stretched back to the Towers.)

There was no question that those students who were first in line were wrapped up in the Kennedy charisma, but the looks of idolation that they cast toward the stage were phenomenal. Kennedy to them was John, Robert, and Ted all wrapped into one.

Kennedy was a different man then he was a few short minutes earlier. He thumped his podium, he hollered, he raged, he built up the crowd's emotions. He slashed out at Nixon and the Republicans, all the time ignoring his 5-page prepared text.

Kennedy mobbed

The speech was short, shorter than had been intended, but he was late. Its completion met with another huge cheer and he made his way for the exit only to be closed in by the crowd. He was forced to go backstage at Stepan to avoid the pushing crowd, but when he again tried to leave he was mobbed.

Finally, the entourage made it into cars and headed east for Elkhart's airport. From Elkhart, Kennedy flew to Fort Wayne, Muncie, and Indianapolis making campaign stops in each.

It was a dynamic day at Notre Dame. One of the sons of one of Notre Dame's favorite families returned to the Dome. Kennedy's father Joseph was at one time Trustee of the University and his brothers Jack and Robert served on Notre Dame advisory councils. Now Ted came to Notre Dame.

preparations began early

The preparation for the visit started days in advance—particularly on the press end. All reporters who would be in the vicinity of Kennedy must have security clearances. They turned in to the Secret Service their name, date of birth, and Social Security numbers. Once cleared, their names were placed on a list to gain their entrance into all the activities.

Brademas headquarters in town handled all the press passes for the area. Originally they offered a single pass to the Observer, but after an afternoon of haggling, a second one for a photographer was obtained. Just an example of how tight the security really was.

he came, he saw...

Teddy Kennedy came and went at Notre Dame. He was on campus for a little over 1½ hours, but the effect will be felt for many days to come. That relaxed confident smile as he climbed the stage will be remembered. That easy, affable wave to the crowd, the strong, warm handshake, the severe attacks on President Nixon will remain in the minds of many for quite awhile.

Yes, Ted Kennedy came to Notre Dame.

Veni, vidi, vici.

Carberry appointed

Dr. James J. Carberry, professor of chemical engineering at the University of Notre Dame, has been appointed to the Working Committee on Chemical Catalysis.

The group of seven United States scientists was organized recently as a consequence of President Richard M. Nixon's trip to Moscow, and his commitment to establish a program of cooperative scientific exchange between the U.S.S.R. and the U.S.A. The U.S. scientists will meet at regular intervals with Soviet scientists.

Carberry has also been elected to the Yale Alumni Board, now known as the Association of Yale Alumni. The current president of the Yale Club of Michiana, Carberry received his undergraduate education at Notre Dame and his Ph.D. at Yale. In 1968 he received the Yale Engineering Association Award for the Advancement of Pure and Applied Sciences.

Enough Talk

At 4:00 today the Student Life Council and the University Academic Council will hold their initial meetings. No insignificant coincidence. The two councils bear the responsibility of determining the future direction of the governance of the university. There are two options.

First, they can continue along the track of the past. The administration will dominate the Academic Council and bypass or veto the SLC whenever it is convenient to do so. Such actions assert the inherent ability of administrators to take a more long range and objective view of the problems that affect Notre Dame than any other group.

Alternatively, the two councils can use effective faculty and student input to develop genuine community legislative bodies. It won't be easy. The Academic Council will have to be streamlined with students, faculty and administration given votes commensurate with their relative importance. In other words, the deck should be unstacked. The SLC, under the direction of a new and hopefully more capable chairman, must assert its right to function as the critical legislative body on all matters of student life, broadly construed. This means holding the Vice-President of Student Affairs directly responsible for any administrative veto.

Politically, it's a question of replacing influence with clout. All the talk in the world about the wonder and beauty of community government will not transform the SLC into the policy-making body on questions of student life.

Community government has been battered about often in the last few years, it's time to make it work.

European Tripping Bar-hopping Perugia-style ann mccarry

Perugia, Italy—Bar-hopping Perugia-style is something that we were not completely prepared for upon our arrival in the Appenines. We came to this small university town to be oriented into Italian society gradually, to avoid "culture shock." Whether we were expecting to find a Nicky's, Louie's or Shula's on the Perugian main-drag, I am not quite sure. What we did find are the Cafe Turreno, the Cafe Lilli, and the Club 2000, a discotheque.

The Turreno and the Lilli are pretty much the same. "The Turreno is located in the center of town, making it an excellent place to meet students who study in Perugia's five universities and institutes. Included in this number is our temporary alma mater, La Universita Italiana per Stranieri, or as we affectionately call it, "Stranieri U." Stranieri is attended by students from all parts of Europe, the Middle East and Africa.

One night at the Turreno, in conversation with a Somalian student, the old "What's your major? Where do you come from?" line cropped up. For a minute I thought some miracle had transported me to the Senior Bar. Recovering my composure, I told him I lived near Chicago and was surprised to find he knew where it is located.

"Ah, Chicago!" he cried. "Yes, Yes. How is the what-do-you-call-it? ... Syndicate?"

I laughed, expecting him to imitate a submachine gun as the Alitalia pilots had when I answered the same question on the flight over. I calmly told him that Al Capone and Frank Nitty had been dead for many years.

"Oh, no. That's all back in the 1920's." He joined in my amusement. "I mean now. You know, Daley ... King Richard?"

No Domer at the Senior Bar ever had a comeback like that one. The Lilli is located on the other side of town in the Piazza Partigiani. It's not as lively as the Turreno but features great service and a quiet back room that is perfect for surprise parties.

The Italian Bar

The Italian bar, in itself, is far removed from its American counterpart. First of all, Italian bars open early in the morning and close around midnight. They serve every kind of food imaginable from ice cream and bubblegum to pizza to crumbled eggs, tea and toast. Available beverages range from mineral water to Coke to imported liquor, the most expensive of which is U.S. whiskey.

The clientele is greatly varied. A typical customer may be anywhere from 3 to 93 years old. Two old men may stop to reminisce over espresso before buying their morning papers at the corner newstand. Meanwhile, their grandsons will pause on their way to school to buy bubblegum and cookies. It is customary for married couples to come in around 10:30 p.m. with their young children. They will have several glasses of Campare, an Italian liquor served with soda, while their kids slurp happily on chocolate ice cream cones and play with the bartender.

Prices are very surprising. Only at the fancier bars is there a charge for table service. Coke or beer cost the same, around 45 cents per glass. A glass of good wine, however, costs only 15 cents. Mixed drinks sell from 60 cents to a dollar, depending on the type of liquor used. A large pizza and half a bottle of wine can be bought for 1.30.

The people are not rowdy. One rarely encounters a crowd or a party except on weekends. It is also unusual to find a jukebox playing; most are out of order. When they do work, the music is basically American. The big hits this month are "Thick as a Brick", "Alone Again, Naturally", and the ever-popular theme from "The Godfather". The Motown sound is also very popular in Italy. And old Beatles' songs fill one-third of a typical machine.

The Italian Shula's

The closest thing Perugia has to compare with the ever popular Shula's is the Club 2000. The 2000 is a bit swankier than Shula's. The walls are paneled, the booths upholstered and the dance floors polished. Frequented by the 18-25 group, this discotheque features an abundance of American Top Forty. On Saturdays and Sundays (the hot nights in Perugia), the management brings in rock bands. Their programs are substantially soul and old American Bandstand hits.

In this joint, you pay for the atmosphere. There is no admission charge, but everyone must order at least one drink. Coke and mixed drinks are the only beverages served. Each sells for a flat rate of 1000 lire or $1.80.

Going drinking in Perugia is not quite the same as a Wednesday night at Nicky's, a Friday night at Shula's or a Sunday night at Kubiak's. If you are with your friends, you can still have a good time, even if you are a little short on money.

There is one other advantage - NO CARDING!
So, if the going gets rough in Sout Bend during the election year crack-down, why not try Italy next weekend instead of NILES?

Letter . . .

. . . on the war

Editor:

Four years ago America was engaged in a holy war to save South Vietnam from the evils of Communism. The American conscience was struck because our cure seemed as bad as the evil we sought to eradicate. It was an election year, and we voted in a new administration that promised to bring peace.

Nixon has brought troops home and now carries on a more sophisticated war. For Americans the war has lost much of its pain, but still it goes on. Perhaps our cure is too simple because after killing an incalculable number of Communists we apparently still have not saved Vietnam.

Thieu and Nixon have rejected the Communist proposal for a coalition government that wouldn't be dominated by either side; so it now seems that the purpose of our holy war has clearly been broadened to save South Vietnam from a Neutral as well as a Communist government.

Again it is election year. Does Smrtiva still have a conscience?

Sincerely,
Frank Berkemeier

cac dance and drama series opens with 'the birds'

The 1972-73 Dance and Drama Series of the Cultural Arts Commission will begin this year on October 17th with Walter Kerr's adaptation of Aristophanes' classic comedy The Birds, presented by the National Players of Washington, D.C. Now, one may say that they were just here last year performing The Trial and the year before with Arms and the Man. Well, the National Players deserve to be back, with the longest touring classical theatre company in the country, and also approximately a ninety per cent average of requests for return engagements. So Notre Dame-SMC will not be the only campus to have seen them more than once. Playing approximately 150 dates each year from coast to coast, the National Players are dedicated to bringing the magic and excitement of theatre to the current stage in as many towns, cities, and universities as possible. Dedication is the trademark of all National Players ensembles, achieved both through its staging, costuming, and lighting, but also by their performed works: sometimes reviving masterpieces, such as the Birds; sometimes by introducing modern plays or adding other classics to their large repertoire.

The National Players production of The Birds is based on an 'acting version' written by Walter Kerr, the New York City critic. Mr. Kerr reduces the original lines to their simplest meanings, and then recasts them, in his zany style, in a colloquial vein that is of the text, sometimes compensating for this loss by extending an idea of the original in his own style. This production follows Mr. Kerr's aim in trying to get the joke of Aristophanes out of where we can hear or see it, and not on any obscure 'classical' idea.

In the play itself, Pithetaerus and Eulpides are two clumsy Greeks who are fed up with the frauds, bores, and quacks of Athenian society, so they leave Athens in an effort to found a better society among the birds (Cloud Cuckooland). Once they begin to build their new society they are besieged by all the Athenian characters they had just tried to escape: a poet, a prophet, a real-estate man, a tax inspector, a lawyer and so on, and alas by all the Olympian gods. Since Cloud Cuckooland lies between Mount Olympus and earth, the birds demand that the gods pay tribute when they are passing through their territory en route to earth. This tribute comes in the form of Iris—a flighty goddess who also happens to fall in love with the mortal Pithetaerus—before fleeing back to Zeus. Of course, the gods of Olympus protest over this tribute, but the birds' society eventually triumphs: the gods acquiesce, Pithetaerus marries Iris, and all is happiness in Cloud Cuckooland. The whole effect of the play is a manner similar to our musical revues and burlesque.

And for all you critics out there who already are at work at this synopsis of the play, there is a warning in this production, as the cast are lined up on the stage. (It is paraphrased here.) As they all are birds, they say that they will be forever thankful if you like the play. But if you don't and you plan to walk down the street tomorrow... they advise you wear a hat.

Remember: The National Players will be here October 17th at 8:00 P.M. at O'Laughlin Auditorium with Walter Kerr's adaptation of The Birds. Patron card holders must present their patron cards at a ticket outlet or at the box office to obtain your ticket for this event. Individual tickets and Patron cards will both be on sale at the ticket outlet and at O'Laughlin box office the night of the performance. For any further information please call 283-3797 between 12-3 on Monday through Fridays. The Cultural Arts Commission hopes you all plan on a hatless evening at O'Laughlin Auditorium on October 17.

Little Big Screen

The networks are trying to make up for the lack of good pictures (with a few exceptions) they presented last week by giving the viewer some good solid action flicks this week. No schmaltz, no comedy but a few screen favorites make the majority of the movie watching worth one's interest. Skip the football game tonight in favor for the first NBC classic to air on Monday (with apologies to all Raider and Oilers fans). James Stewart and Henry Fonda pair off against each other in Firecreek—a western that has the usual violence and plot (gang of freebooters terrorizing a town) but it still stays a cut above any John Wayne flick short of Stagecoach and True Grit. The bullets begin to fly at 8:00.

Thursday at 8:00 on 22 James Garner plays the Ray Chandler sleuth Philip Marlowe in Marlowe, a role created by Humphrey Bogart in The Big Sleep and subsequently followed by Dick Powell and Robert Montgomery. For those who like a little of the classic Bogart mixed with some Maverick and a little Untouchables action thrown in for good measure, don't miss this flick. On Friday night, we can view Sidney Poitier for the third time in a month on prime time TV. He returns as Lt. Virgil Tibbs in The Heat of the Night, in They Call Me Mister Tibbs!, this time as a San Francisco detective (they should take a poll to see how many crime busters of the cinema and TV have been based in the great city by the bay and Los Angeles, the city with the purple sky) on a typical murder case. They have given Tibbs a wife in the person of Barbara McNair but her acting does not supply the counterpoint by Poitier Rod Steiger did three years earlier.

Also, Friday on the late movie on 22, the life of Ernie Pyle, the great journalist of WWII who wrote about the lives of servicemen abroad with truth and compassion, will be told in the 1945 film The Story of G.I. Joe, one of the best movies to come out of the war. Again, the three made for TV movies look bad so pass by Night of Terror (Tues., 28), Visions (Tues., 22), and Lt. Schuster's Wife (Wed., 28). Also, go out and celebrate Saturday night because the Robert Mitchum and Cliff Robertson war flick The Devil's Brigade is not worth the powder it would take to blow it to you-know-where.

Trivia and Plugs. I will gladly review any picture appearing on campus the following week (thereby getting some free publicity) providing I get proper notice of the flick a week and a half in advance. Leave any notice in my box at The Observer office. However, I will not pass any information over to the ad department nor will I give a good review simply because the movie is for a worthwhile cause (but a little graft never hurt anybody).

Once again, Stan Urankar, Observer and WSND sports commentator extraordinaire wins the free plug since he was the only one to answer correctly (if fact the only one to answer at all) the name of the actor who played the fourth Maverick. It was Robert Colbert who also starred in an atrocious TV entity called The Time Tunnel with James Darren. Since it is plug time, I hope everyone got a good laugh when Observer news editor Jerry Lutkus and campus editor Ann T. Darin asked questions of Sen. Ted Kennedy Friday on WNDU (16). Thank God they are top writers and not TV commentators. They were not as bad as I make them out to be, but, for example, if Jerry was to have his own TV news show, it would be very reminiscent of the fictional Ted Baxter show on Mary Tyler Moore. Besides, I, along with 2,000 other ND students, beat them out with a national debut on First Tuesday two years ago.

Trivia Question Time. Last night El Dorado aired on ABC. It was actually a remake of Rio Bravo with different characters; example, the drifter in El Dorado was called Mississippi; in Rio Bravo, Colorado. So, in this multi-part question please answer

- a.) who played John Wayne's part in Rio Bravo (a giveaway)
- b.) who played Robert Mitchum's part as the drunk (hint) but reformed sheriff in Rio Bravo?
- c.) who played James Caan's (Mississippi) part as Colorado in Rio Bravo?
- d.) and who played the old deputy in Rio Bravo?

Answers to the Trivia Quiz:
a.) John Wayne b.) Dean Martin c.) Rick Nelson d.) Walter Brennan

mayall at the civic

I find it rather difficult to give a competent review on someone like John Mayall considering I've never listened to any of his music. I know of him as the King of the British blues; the man who broke in Eric Clapton, Jack Bruce, Pete Green, Mark Almond, and a score of others; and I know that he has progressed in more different musical directions than any other group or individual, save the Byrds. Disregarding all of these types, I tried to maintain a fairly critical attitude toward him, which should have been easy considering I'm not into jazz-blues that much. However, I wasn't too successful as Mayall and his band were tremendous.

Mayall has once again assembled another group of really talented musicians. His lineup features Blue Mitchell on trumpet and flugelhorn, Fred Clark on alto, tenor, and baritone sax, Victor Gaskins on a big double bass, Freddy Robinson on guitar, former Mayall Bluesbreaker Keef Hartley on drums, and himself on rhythm guitar, keyboards, and harmonica. All proved themselves quite competent soloists, but Fred Clark stole the show with his sax solos and his all-around rapport with the crowd.

Most of the music was jazz-blues. The songs would start off bluesy and the horn solos would take them into jazz. The only straight blues number that was played all night featured Freddy Robinson on the vocal and guitar solo while the horns were relegated to the background. It was great. Although I am admittedly very partial to the blues, still I think Mayall could drop his horn players and have a great band.

Probably the best song all night was Mayall's "Exercise in C" which featured Mayall on harmonica playing in his famous style of using his tongue and his breathing for percussion while backing himself up on organ. He received a great standing ovation from the audience who ate up all of his music the whole night.

The rest of the material that was performed was excellent. They opened with "Messin' Around" which was sort of bluesy and featured a trumpet and a sax solo. "Goodtime Boogie" was a solo-fest in which everyone except the drummer soloed. The band also played "Things Go Wrong" which was a rock-jazz number from their soon-to-be-released-album. The last cut was another soloists' exhibition in which everyone got their licks in. Blue Mitchell played a good extended trumpet solo on the last number. They encored with "Will I Be True."

Although I've had nothing but praise for Mayall, there is one thing that they were lacking: togetherness. The band functioned quite well as soloists but they didn't appear to be a really tight, polished band. This was fairly noticeable on the part of Blue Mitchell. However, the music still came off alright.

On the whole, it was very satisfying experience. Mayall proved himself a definite non-ego tripper by the way he let his musicians solo through most of the show. One can easily see why he has gone through so many personnel changes. However, he has the knack of selecting really talented musicians as I can honestly say that I was not in the least bored by any of the solos. I can't say the same about the time I saw Butterfield and his horns.

While admitting that the band was great, I remain a devoted lover of the blues and I wouldn't object to Mayall returning solely to the blues.

Rap Center: share problems

by Maude Pytynia
Observer Staff Reporter

The Rap Center, located at 527 W. Colfac Ave., is really an "everything" place - a place where you can bring your problems and talk them out with a number of people who work with the Center.

Established in 1970, the Rap Center has been housed in three different buildings. At the present time its staffers are looking for a building of their own, and the funds and people needed to stabilize its foundations.

Mike Alford, a recent ND graduate and a staff member explained that individuals participate in both group and one-to-one encounters at the Center. It is in this way that people are able to communicate with others of their peer group when considering problems which usually stem from drug involvement and the legal and medical aspects of this involvement. This "rapping" can be done both in person and over the telephone.

The Rap Center has also sponsored bi-weekly summer concerts in Howard Park. Last April it was involved in organizing a People's Fair which allowed people to view an arts and crafts show, and also a concert.

Members of the Rap Center staff, now numbering ten, undergo a three-week training program before they get to observe and actually participate in the Center's many functions. These training sessions involve encounter groups and lectures on such varied subjects as transactional analysis and suicide prevention. At times a panel discussion revolving around the life and habits of a person well into the drug culture will be utilized. Sessions on "role-playing" and talking down people on trips are common.

Each of the staff members have an equal vote in all decision-making.

Although the Rap Center is an autonomous organization, it works with NIDAS, a drug rescue and counseling service. The Center itself does not go out from its walls for drug rescue, but its staffers do go out on free speaking tours if asked.

'LeCorbusier' tonight

The 55-minute color art film, "LeCorbusier," to be screened tonight at 8 and 10 p.m. at the Notre Dame Engineering Auditorium as part of the "Museum Without Walls" film series, will bring to viewers the most complete motion picture to date on the internationally great architect.

The film was made by Carlos Vilardebo, one of the architect's collaborators, and has commentary by CDouglas Cooper, British art historian and collector.

Le Corbusier's great impact on architectural development throughout the world is dramatically portrayed in the film. His concern for the urbanized man revolutionized architectural design during his lifetime and continues to have a strong impact.

The center of heated discussions in the architectural world because of his revolutionary building concepts. Le Corbusier developed a series of standardized elements which could be combined in many ways to erect a building. His ideas were a foretaste of modern construction methods. He made no concessions at the outset of his career and was frustrated during the war years, so Le Corbusier waited until he was almost 60 to realize the important conceptions which he evolved in his youth. In spite of dozens of unfulfilled plans, such as designs for idea. cities for New York, Antwerp and Berlin, the great architect persisted: "Of this I am sure," he said, "I am right."

"Le Corbusier" has footage on such dramatic building innovations as the Swiss Students Dormitory at the Paris University; the Salvation Army Hostel, the Villa Savoie, also in Paris; the Millowners building; and the Heidi-Weber Museum.

SLC to hold meeting today

Today at 4:00 pm in the Center for Continuing Education, the Student Life Council will hold its first meeting of the semester. The major concern will be to judge the direction the body will be taking this year. The election of a chairman and the appointment of members to standing committees will also be handled. No issues will be decided because all projects must first go to committees.

Kennedy talk lifts supporters' spirits

by Mike Baum

McGovern campaign workers here and in South Bend expressed enthusiasm over Sen. Edward Kennedy's speech here Friday, citing Kennedy's attack on corruption in the Nixon Administration as his most important point. At the same time, a recent Students for McGovern poll shows McGovern holding an 8 per cent lead over Nixon among students of Notre Dame - St. Mary's.

Students for McGovern organizer Al Cramer noted that he was "pleased with the turnout" at the Kennedy Speech in Stepan Center. The crowd was estimated at four thousand.

"I think the most important point he leveled was corruption in the Nixon Administration," Cramer observed, "The McGovern movement has been on the defensive to much. We have to force Nixon to defend his policies."

Kennedy leveled serious charges of corruption in the Nixon Administration, citing the ITT anti-trust case, Russian grain deals, and the Watergate incident.

Jack Pfaffinger, another member of the Students for McGovern organization, remarked, "I think it (Kennedy's speech) was quite a boost to the campus...the reaction was very enthusiastic from the crowd..." Pfaffinger thought Kennedy's comments on the war and domestic issues such as education and health care to be his most important points.

Paul Scherer, co-chairperson of the South Bend McGovern - Brademas organization, agreed that corruption in government was the "most important point," adding that, "Rampant corruption in the Nixon Administration, I think, will be the hallmark of the Nixon Administration in history."

While Scherer felt this to be "intrinsically most important," he noted that "economic issues and the war in Vietnam" most concerned the people at present.

Commenting on the success of Kennedy's stay, Scherer remarked, "I think that the community reaction has been tremendous, noting that it was impressive to get 1,000 people out at 7:00 am for a $25.00 breakfast."

Meanwhile, in a poll taken recently by Notre Dame-St. Mary's Students for McGovern, the McGovern-Shriver ticket ran 8 per cent ahead of the incumbent Republican candidates.

The poll, possibly the most extensive poll thus far, was taken door to door in the halls on both campuses, attempting to contact every person. Responses were obtained from 4121 persons, 3318 at Notre Dame and 803 at St. Mary's.

The breakdown showed McGovern with 1402 votes at Notre Dame and 380 at St. Mary's, or about 43.2 per cent. Nixon totalled 1121 at Notre Dame and 330 at St. Mary's, or about 35.2 per cent, the rest undecided. Cramer noted that the class that went heaviest for the Republican ticket was Freshmen. Hall by hall totals, Cramer announced, are available for inspection at McGovern headquarters in the Tom Dooley Room of LaFortune Student Center. The room is open from 11am to midnight Monday through Friday, or may be reached by phone at 283-8415. The newly opened St. Mary's headquarters is in 105 Regina North and is open from 4 to 6 pm Monday through Friday.

Interested S. Mary's students should call either Pat Murphy at 4124 or Ann McDonald at 4629.

Action recruiters here

by John Culligan

Beginning October 9 and continuing until October 13, four representatives from Action will be at the Memorial Library Concourse from 9 am till 5 pm.

The purpose of their visit is to provide general information about Action to those students that are interested. They will also conduct interviews with any student that is interested in joining.

Action is an organization that is comprised of the Peace Corps, Vista, and other smaller groups which are interested in the betterment of mankind. The representatives here are interested in students wishing to take part in either the Peace Corps or Vista program.

The Peace Corps is a two year program that sends volunteers to other countries that need their help. Vista volunteers provide service to people in this country. Participants in Vista serve for only one year.

Mr. Herman DeBose, a return volunteer from Kenya, is in charge of the group that will be here for the next few days. Like Mr. DeBose, the other three representatives have also had experience in either the Peace Corps or Vista. All four stress the point that a degree or a specialty is not needed in order for someone to participate in one of these programs.

This is the only time this year that the group will visit the ND campus. Anyone having questions or wanting to join one of the groups should stop in at the Library during the specified hours this week. Also, the Action representatives are available for class or club lectures and can be reached at the library or by calling 8183.

Sociology prof dies

Dr. John J. Kane, former head of the sociology departments at the University of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's College, died Friday, October 6 in Philadelphia. He was 63.

A native of Philadelphia, Dr. Kane received his undergraduate training at St. Joseph's College, his M.A. from Temple University, and his Ph.D. from the University of Pennsylvania, all in Philadelphia. Last year, he left Notre Dame's faculty to become chairman of the sociology department at St. Joseph's.

Before joining Notre Dame's faculty in 1948, he taught two years at St. Joseph's College. He headed Notre Dame's sociology department from 1953 to 1963 and later served as chairman of St. Mary's sociology department while also remaining on Notre Dame's faculty. He served as president of the American Catholic Sociology Society in 1952 and was active in the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

A specialist in the family, Dr. Kane was the author of four books in that area and for many years wrote a syndicated column,

"family clinic" which appeared in many diocesan and secular papers.

A wake will be held Tuesday night at Toppetzers Funeral Home in Drexel Hill, Pa., with a funeral Mass scheduled for 10 am Wednesday in St. Charles Church in Drexel Hill.

He was survived by two daughters.

Civilian casualties not reported

unavailable, even in executive session," the senator said.

He said that Pentagon officials "seem to operate on the assumption that because it is not our government's policy and intention to hit civilian areas, we therefore don't—except accidentally. How many so-called accidents occur, is apparently unknown."

The transcript of the hearings quoted Kennedy as asking Pauly if there is "any reason we cannot have the aerial photography" of areas where civilian damage was inflicted. A note in the transcript said that "the witness's answer is classified." It added that "not photography was shown to the subcommittee, however, and none, apparently, will be made available."

Several other senators acquainted with the transcript of the hearings expressed privately their view that Pauly's testimony appeared to raise again the problem of command control in the conduct of the Vietnam war.

They said that the failure by field commanders to forward civilian damage reports to Washington could lead to situations similar to the unauthorized strikes on North Vietnam last year by Maj. Gen. John D. Lavelle, the demoted commander of the Seventh Air Force.

Irish outdefense Spartans, 16-0

by Vic Dorr

Lured by a Notre Dame-Michigan State football game, 77,828 fans crammed themselves into Spartan Stadium on Saturday afternoon.

The few non-partisans present were treated to a thrilling display of defensive football, and saw a game that wasn't decided until well into the final period of play. Michigan State backers, who made up a large majority of the crowd, saw their team rebound from last week's USC debacle by harassing the Irish for most of the afternoon.

But Notre Dame's fans saw their team win, 16-0. They saw junior placekicker Bob Thomas hit three field goals, they saw fullback Andy Huff score a last minute touchdown from eight yards out, and they saw the Irish defense hold the Spartans to no points, only six first downs, and less than 200 yards in total offense.

Notre Dame's defensive team enjoyed great success against the MSU wishbone, and after they had blunted Michigan State's first drive of the game, the Irish offense took over at its own 31. Runs by Andy Huff and Darryll Dewan and quick passes to Dewan and split end Willie Townsend moved the ball to the State 30, but there the drive stalled and Thomas came on to put the Irish on the scoreboard with a 47-yard field goal.

The Spartan defense tightened after ND's first score, and the Irish were able to mount only one more serious threat in the first half—also resulting in a field goal. Ken Schlezes' 22-yard return of Michigan State's third punt of the game set the Irish up on MSU's 28, and from there the ND offense drove to the Spartan eight.

But on third—and—five from the eight, Eric Penick was dropped well short of the first down, and Thomas had to kick his second three—pointer, this one from the 14. Notre Dame's second field goal came with 14:23 left in the second period, but it was the last scoring of the first half.

"I was very impressed by their defense," said Irish coach Ara Parseghian. "John McKay said it's the best defensive team he's played, and I told Duffy (Daugherty) his kids played a really great game."

"They did a good job scouting us and a good job preparing for the game, and I thought Duffy was doggone smart the way he played it."

Basketball team lists tryouts

Tryouts for Notre Dame's varsity basketball team will be held next Monday and Tuesday, October 16-17 in the main arena of the Athletic and Convocation Center.

Candidates should bring their own equipment and use the student lockers in the ACC.

The way the Spartans played it was to rely on a quick, pursuit-conscious defense, and on a kicking game that kept Notre Dame in a hole for much of the game. Notre Dame's offense wasn't totally shackled—the Irish attack gained 338 yards in total offense—but it could only move in spurts against the fired-up Spartans.

Michigan State's offense, on the other hand, was completely shackled by the Irish "d". The Spartans were able to cross midfield only once, and then they penetrated only to the Notre Dame 44-yard line. MSU's lone drive into ND territory came early in the fourth period, with the Irish still nursing their slim 6-0 margin.

State recovered Eric Penick's fumble on the MSU 21, and, keeping to the ground, quickly slashed to the ND 44. On third—and six from there, Spartan quarterback Mark Neisen tried to throw over the middle to his tight end, Billy Joe Dupree. But Irish defensive back Ken Schlezes diagnosed the play perfectly. He stepped in front of Dupree, intercepted the pass, and returned it 16 yards to midfield.

"We knew that Dupree was their main receiver," said Schlezes. "I had a back to cover, but when he stood back to block I was sort of looking for a pass to Dupree. I knew he was on the left, and from past game films I figured he'd run a crossing pattern."

The Irish offense didn't waste the opportunity. After quarterback Tom Clements was stopped for no gain on a keeper, Penick skipped through the left side of the Spartan line for a 26-yard gain to the 18. Three plays later, with 4:37 left, Bob Thomas sealed Notre Dame's victory by drilling his third field goal of the day, a 26-yarder.

Wrestling tryouts scheduled Tues.

There will be a meeting for all wrestlers and anyone interested in joining the wrestling team Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 pm in the auditorium of the Athletic and Convocation Center.

Andy Huff powers through a gaping hole to score Notre Dame's only touchdown late in the fourth quarter Saturday at Michigan State.

But ND wasn't through. After Reggie Barnett intercepted Neisen at the State 39, the Irish drove to their only touchdown of the game. A 17-yard gain by Clements on a keeper highlighted the drive, but it was Andy Huff who kept it alive. Huff picked up two yards on a fourth—and—two from the 11, and four plays later, fought his way into the end zone on fourth—and—goal from the eight.

Thomas' placement gave the Irish their final point, and Tim Rudnick's interception on State's first play following the score—a desperation, 60-yard bomb—iced the win.

"Our kicking game and our pass defense both held up well today," said Parseghian. "We made some mistakes on offense, but still I was pleased with our performance under these conditions."

"We really needed this sort of game. We had to prove we could play it to the hilt after two relatively easy games. The defense knew they had to stop the Spartans, and they did."

The victory was the third straight for the Irish, who next weekend meet Pittsburgh in Notre Dame Stadium. Michigan State is 1-3.

The Irish Eye

The defense rests

The trial of Notre Dame's young defense, which began September 23 in Evanston, Illinois, came to a close Saturday in East Lansing, Michigan, when a largely hostile jury of 77,828 begrudgingly adjudged the Irish not guilty of any of the charges made against them.

Prior to the start of the season, the Irish defensive unit was accused of vulnerability. The front line was said to be porous, the linebackers, inadequate, and the secondary, helpless to stop opposing passers. The evidence on which these charges were based, the fact that only three starters were returning from last year's veteran defensive team, was circumstantial, but the accusers felt that their claims would be proven true once the Irish were brought to trial.

Notre Dame's first hearing was just over two weeks ago against Northwestern and its opening arguments were impressive. The Irish defense's shut out of the Wildcats was duly presented as Exhibit "A", but was considered to be insubstantial evidence on which to render a verdict.

Charges might have been dropped after the Purdue game of September 30th, had not Notre Dame, after holding the Boilermakers scoreless for three quarters, given up 14 points in the fourth quarter. The judges ruled that the case should be continued to the following Saturday.

With Duffy Daugherty's Spartans waiting to turn State's evidence, Notre Dame's detractors felt confident that the Irish would be found guilty and sentenced to defeat. Even Notre Dame's most ardent backers wondered if the Irish could prove themselves innocent. Either way, a decision seemed imminent last Saturday in East Lansing.

The Irish were faced with a difficult task. The atmosphere in Spartan Stadium was hostile and Daugherty, in the role of prosecutor, ruthlessly sought a conviction.

But Notre Dame, in the finest traditions of Clarence Darrow and Ara Parseghian, Louis Nizer and Knute Rockne, presented a brilliant defense on its own behalf, shutting out Michigan State, 16-0, and was proclaimed innocent beyond the shadow of a doubt.

The Irish defense was outstanding under trying conditions. It allowed Michigan State to cross the 50-yard line just once, in the fourth quarter, and then stopped that penetration at the 44-yard line.

The Spartans were only able to pick up 191 yards in total offense, 163 of those yards coming on the ground. They recorded just six first downs in the ball game.

And the key play in Notre Dame's victory, its third of the year without a loss, was made by a defensive player, halfback Kenny Schlezes.

With the Irish clinging to a tenuous 6-0 lead midway through the fourth quarter and M.S.U. making its deepest penetration into Notre Dame territory, Schlezes stepped in front of a Mark Niesen pass intended for tight end Billy Joe Dupree at the Irish 34 and returned the ball to midfield.

Notre Dame subsequently moved to State's 19, setting up Bob Thomas for his third field goal, a 26-yarder which insured the Irish win.

The Irish defense against the Spartans hinged on one principle: keep State's fleet halfbacks inside and, if possible, make the quarterback carry the ball.

As evidenced by the M.S.U. point total, or lack of, the strategy worked perfectly. Although quarterback Niesen gained 95 yards in 16 carries and fullback Arnold Morgado rushed 15 times for 51 yards, halfbacks Diamond Mays and Jim Bond gained only 17 yards in seven carries, combined. And the Spartans didn't score.

"We made the quarterback the runner to take away the outside because that's where you get beat," explained Parseghian afterwards.

With their standout performance against the Spartans, Notre Dame's defense won a ball game, and the case against its detractors. The charges leveled against its abilities were proven false. The Irish have a defensive unit to be proud of, one that will carry the burden, if again called upon to do so, in future games.

Eleven scoreless quarters in 12 played, coupled with Saturday's showing, is more than ample evidence of its capabilities. The defense rests.
