

Hickey outlines new goals for St. Mary's

by Mary Janca
St. Mary's Editor

Revisions in Student Affairs, a change in the college by-laws and governance structure, and the institution of new majors and course options are among goals outlined by St. Mary's Acting President Dr. William Hickey, for this year.

Hickey contends that his is an "acting", and not "caretaker" administration while a permanent president for the college is being sought.

"This will be an administration which acts and which is active in giving encouragement and support to individuals and departments," he stated.

The governance of the college and its relation to the Board of Regents, and to the Corporate Board of the Congregation of the Holy Cross is one issue up for consideration and revision by the administration.

Presently, the acting President stated, "the college is engaged in a serious study, which will result in a revision of the college by-laws, and will clarify the lines of responsibility between the Board of Regents and the college itself.

"For the first time, faculty and administration will have clear, defined statement of the relationships between the Congregation of the Sisters of the Holy Cross, and St. Mary's College, and of the College's Board of Regents," he said.

Through departmental planning on a 3-5 year basis, Hickey hopes to develop new course options and major programs, particularly those majors which would involve several disciplines.

"On a 3-5 year basis, we can project the needs of the academic departments in terms of course options, new majors, faculty needs as related to program needs, and facility needs."

"At the same time," he continued, "we will be able to evaluate the financial implications of these undertakings, and realistically determine what we can do as a college.

The Student Affairs office is conducting a study, which will project things we would like to start in the areas of dorm life and recreational activities," he said.

Hickey foresees "the incorporation of the educational experience into the dorm situation, through seminars conducted in the dorms on problems facing students, such as religious attitudes, and moral questions of sex and drugs." The seminar programs would be offered in conjunction with Notre Dame, he said.

In addition, he added that some classes might be held in the dorms. "Some classes lend themselves quite well to a more informal atmosphere which the halls could provide," he explained.

"Our relationship with Notre Dame has been an important consideration over the past two years. We expect co-operation to continue and are looking for new ways to continue this co-operation."

Hickey continued by listing several events which he feels are indicative of an improving relationship between ND and SMC. St. Mary's Education Department's Ed-

Macheca replies

SLC students react to alcohol directive

by Bill Brink
Senior Night Editor

Dean of Students John Macheca yesterday clarified his alcohol directive issued last Wednesday with an explanation of the proscribed penalties for on-campus, underage drinking.

The clarification was made by Macheca in response to the reactions of several students on the Student Life Council.

SLC student members maintained that their council should have been consulted before the specifications of the penalties issued. Four SLC district representatives and Pat McLaughlin, Student Body President, expressed disenchantment with the maximum $50 fine as punishment for underage drinking.

Darlene Palma, District 11 representative, questioned Macheca's authority to enact such a rule. She joined other representatives in conceding that Macheca had the right to issue a directive.

"But I don't think he has the constitutional power to prosecute," Palma said.

She pointed out that the SLC was called into an emergency session last year to suspend the current party rules, "so it follows logically that the SLC should be called and consulted now."

Dennis Sullivan, District IV representative, also feels the SLC should have been consulted before the rule was put into effect. He said it would be one of the first things brought up at the SLC meeting.

Sullivan is concerned with the vagueness of the directive. He said that the way it is worded leaves it too general.

"We want to know definite instances where the $50 fine could be imposed. . . when does it apply?"

District III representative, Brian Hegarty, expressed similar concern about the consequences of such general rules for punishment. In most cases we won't have trouble, but we have to protect the few students who might encounter trouble."

McLaughlin agreed with the views of the other students regarding the vagueness of the directive. "We've got to have something where the students know where they stand," he said. He stated the vagueness might result in only one or two problems a semester, but added that the students involved must be protected.

In reference to his recent letter to Macheca, McLaughlin said that the rules were subject to review by the SLC.

This year's first SLC meeting, tentatively scheduled for next Monday, will confront the new alcohol directive.

Faculty gives their views

by Ken Bradford
Staff Reporter

Faculty representatives on the Student Life Council yesterday expressed interest in evaluating at the next SLC meeting the Dean of Students John Macheca's directive halting all underage drinking at Notre Dame.

Dr. Julian Pleasants commented that SLC rules and Dean of Students guidelines often overlap and that it is difficult to determine who has jurisdiction in a specific problem area.

Pleasants, a Microbiology professor, pointed out that last year the SLC wrote the rules concerning student drinking while the Dean of Students determined guidelines for parties and student discipline.

"I would suspect that the directive falls within the jurisdiction of the Dean of Students," Pleasants said.

"The University obviously needs to impose some penalties to protect itself. Small penalties may help us to avoid severe problems," he added.

Librarian Maureen Gleason stated the SLC will announce its views after a meeting tentatively scheduled for Monday, September 9.

Gleason noted that she would have to reread the Macheca statement and review the SLC bylaws before commenting on the situation.

New SLC representative Dr. Walter Nigorski stated that the Macheca directive "appears to be a reasonable ruling in light of the interpretation of Indiana law he's been given."

Nigorski, a General Program professor, said he does not have enough background on SLC procedures to determine whether the directive infringes upon SLC policies.

Government Professor Dr. Michael Francis, also a new SLC representative, said he has not had the opportunity to effectively evaluate the situation. Other faculty representatives including Thomas Werge, William Sexton, Paul Conway, and Daniel Winicur, could not be reached for comment.

Church boycott advocated

NEW YORK UPI—Birth control advocate William Baird called Wednesday for an economic boycott of the Roman Catholic Church because of its refusal to baptize a baby whose mother supported "free choice" on abortion and because of disciplinary action against the priest who finally baptized the infant.

Baird, director of the Parents Aid Society, an abortion clinic in Hempstead, N. Y., held a news conference on the steps of St. Patrick's Cathedral with the baby's mother, Carol Morreale of Marlboro, Mass.

"The Pope and the Cardinal Boston Cardinal Humberto Medeiros have committed a crime in utter violation of the teachings of Christ, which are love, compassion and mercy," he said.

Baird said Marlboro priests refused to baptize Nathaniel Ryan Morreale after his mother was quoted as saying she supported Baird when he arrived in Marlboro to address the Town Council about opening an abortion clinic.

"We are calling for a national economic boycott of Roman Catholic churches," Baird said. "In mail we are getting from around the nation, people are saying that the church is dead wrong to have penalized this family.

"If people would boycott the church economically, since the church understands clearly what money is all about, it would force them to reconsider their punishment."

Baird also said he had offered "to give the baptism back," saying he and Mrs. Morreale would "publicly baptize the baby ourselves" if the church would agree to reinstate O'Rourke.

Baird said the Rev. Joseph O'Rourke, a Jesuit from New York who performed the baptism, was "defrocked this morning on the orders of the Pope for performing the baptism."

The Boston Globe reported Wednesday that the Rev. O'Rourke had been dismissed from the Society of Jesus for performing the baptism, but that the action had not been announced because confirmation had not been received from Pedro Arrupe, superior general of the Jesuits in Rome.

Officials of the Catholic Archdiocese could not be reached for comment. But a spokesman for the Jesuit order said, "The issue is not defrocking him. At issue is whether he remains in the Society of Jesus, not if he is to be removed from the priesthood. I don't know the answer to that."

Ehrlichman seeks Nixon files

WASHINGTON UPI - John D. Ehrlichman, who already has subpoenaed former President Richard Nixon to testify at the Watergate cover-up trial, now has subpoenaed the Secret Service to surrender hundreds of Nixon-era documents still locked in White House vaults, it was disclosed Wednesday.

The subpoena, issued Aug. 29 and made public late Wednesday, orders that the papers be delivered in federal court at 10 a.m. EDT on September 16.

It is addressed to H. S. Knight, director of the United States Secret Service, "as custodian of presidential papers White House files."

Though court records indicated the subpoena has not yet been served, a spokesman for the Secret Service said it was received Wednesday afternoon.

Although the Secret Service is in charge of safe-keeping of Nixon's tapes and files, it is unclear who has legal custody and the White House has asked Attorney General William B. Saxbe for a formal opinion.

Ehrlichman demanded that Knight come to court and bring with him vast numbers of papers from the period of June 17, 1972 through May 1, 1973.

June 17 was the day five men were arrested with bugging gear at the Watergate offices of the Democratic National committee and May 1, 1973, was the day following a major upheaval in the White House staff in the wake of scandal-including the resignations of Ehrlichman and H. R. Haldeman and the firing of John W. Dean III.

For that period, Ehrlichman asked for:

-His notes of meetings with Nixon, "which are stored in reddish-brown binders."

-A chronological file of his correspondence.

All his personal papers relating to the Watergate burglary and the intelligence-gathering operation at the Nixon campaign that led to it, the activities of political saboteur Donald H. Segretti, the investigation of the "Watergate affair" and Nixon's taped conversations about it.

Also subpoenaed for the same period were all telephone and appointment logs of Nixon, Haldeman and Ehrlichman and "any and all records of any paper person maintained at the White House which refer to or relate to the "Watergate matter."

Ehrlichman has waged a sofar unsuccessful battle to postpone the cover-up trial at least until January. His last-ditch appeal is now being considered by Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas.

Once Nixon's No. 2 aide, Ehrlichman was convicted this summer for conspiracy and perjury in the Ellsberg break-in case and sentenced to from 20 months to 5 years in prison. He is appealing.

He succeeded in stalling that trial briefly by subpoenaing vast amounts of White House materials, many of which were ruled irrelevant by the court.

Earlier Wednesday, U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica ordered prosecutors and defense lawyers in the cover-up case to give him names of witnesses they plan to call no later than September 23.

Congress examines finances

Investigation started

WASHINGTON UPI Chairman Howard Cannon of the Senate Rules Committee raised the possibility Wednesday that vice presidential nominee Nelson A. Rockefeller may not be forced to place any of his extensive holdings on the market or in a blind trust.

"The vice president is not in a policy-making position like the defense secretary and I don't believe he has ever been required in the past to divest himself of any holdings," said the Nevada Democrat.

"But of course with a man like this you have a special case and it will be up to the committee to decide how far we go - do we require disclosure, a blind trust or require divestiture?"

After studying a complete summary of Rockefeller's finances-including seven years of income tax returns- Cannon told reporters his committee would meet next week to decide procedural matters related to the Rockefeller confirmation hearings.

Cannon said one matter that might be decided during the procedural session was whether Rockefeller, a multimillionaire, would be required to place his extensive holdings in a blind trust or to sell some of them in order to win confirmation to the nation's second-highest office.

"I don't know what we will decide," he said. "We might decide that just disclosure would be enough."

A committee spokesman said Rockefeller has provided the summary of his finances and the voluminous tax returns to the Senate Rules and House Judiciary Committees, the two congressional bodies which will act on his nomination as vice president.

Committee sources refused to disclose Rockefeller's net worth, saying the records would be given only to members of the two committees. But a Rockefeller spokesman said earlier that a single year's tax return for Rockefeller was about the size of a small city telephone book.

Cannon also refused to disclose the amount of Rockefeller's net worth, but said with a smile, "I knew he was a wealthy man, and he is a wealthy man."

He said the financial accounting obviously doesn't reflect a lot of the trusts or the full extent of the Rockefeller fortune.

Cannon predicted Congress would act on Rockefeller's confirmation before it adjourns in mid-October.

"I cannot conceive of us recessing and leaving this up in mid-air," he said.

FBI agents already have completed much of their investigation of Rockefeller, Cannon said. He said he would meet Thursday with the agents to discuss their findings.

Opinion:

Responsibility and the new drinking rules

Editor:

Because the University has chosen an in loco parentis role towards its students, it has also assumed responsibility for the students. With the recent Indiana Supreme Court ruling, any incident involving a minor who has been drinking, also involves those who are responsible for the minor's behavior.

Because most of the students here are under age, in compliance with the law, we are no longer allowed to drink on campus. Simple. We now drink off-campus. The mass exodus this weekend down Notre Dame Ave. to the local bars and apartment parties showed that ND students are hardly "on the wagon."

Legally, this may be acceptable to the University. They cannot be held accountable for student drinking off-campus. Someone else, perhaps the owner of a bar or a student who served an underage friend some beer at his party, would then be responsible for any mishaps.

In my home state of New Jersey, I became thirsty before I became legal. Fortunately, New York sympathized with my thirst, and within their borders, I could quench it at age eighteen. A journey across the state line seemed like a reasonable exchange for a few beers with the guys-until my parents found out. To them, drinking and driving was very foolish. They were responsible for me, and said, if I wanted a beer, to take it from the refrigerator. In other words, if I wanted to drink, then drink at home.

Given a choice, they would rather have me stagger from the living room to my bedroom, than from New York back home to Jersey. When anyone is seeing double, a flight of stairs is much easier to negotiate, than a dark stretch of highway. I doubt if the thought of us walking to the dorm after a night of drinking at Louie's, or worse yet, driving from Kubiak's back to campus is a reassuring one for our parents.

Watching students swarm down Notre Dame Ave. last weekend and seeing drivers speeding in their cars. I fear that someone is going to be injured seriously, perhaps fatally. Some night a car won't make it all the way down Rt. 31. Neither will its passengers.

I'm not suggesting that the University ignore the Indiana law and allow us to drink in our dorms, again. Heaven forbid. Just help us to change it. As students, it has become painfully obvious that few people listen to us, but as the University of Notre Dame somebody might.

I am not too sure how much pull Fr. Hesburgh has in Indianapolis (I often read about him in the New York Times), but I am certain his is a voice that would be heard in the State Capitol. Perhaps a brief letter from our university President to the Governor, now, may save him the entire ND community the pain of having to write one later, to the grieving parents of one of our students who never made it back from a good time.

J. Patrick Boyle observance of the crowd-control procedures and their orderly conduct enabled us to process over 9,000 ticket exchanges with a minimum of confusion and problems.

I will certainly appreciate this same cooperation in the future.

Senior class officers: to do everything possible to insure a bar reopening

In response to Tom Drape's September 4th editorial entitled "Seniors Barred", we feel the need to respond to the reasons and implications listed for the suspension of the Alumni Club commonly referred to as the Senior Bar. He stated the Bar's opening was suspended because of "mixed feelings among alumni on their involvement, the absence of an Executive Director of the Alumni Association", plus, "the lack of an assumption of responsibility by the Alumni Club and the Senior Class Officers". This information is incorrect. We have been working with the Alumni Association ever since we sponsored Junior Night at the Alumni Club last spring. We were notified that at the spring meeting of the Alumni Board of Directors, a resolution was passed requesting information concerning the legal implications of the bar to the Alumni Association in light of the new Indiana ruling of the Brattain Case. This summer was spent working with the Alumni Association in conjunction with the University attorneys to arrive at this legal decision. That legal decision has come down in the last few days. With this decision the Office of Student Affairs has expressed an interest in the management of the Alumni Club. In light of Brother Just's statement that there are no plans to close the Alumni Club, its status looks favorable. At present we are establishing guidelines for the operation of the Alumni Club which will be reviewed by the Student Affairs staff. We have done, and will continue to do everything possible to insure the reopening of the Club.

Signed,
The Senior Class Officers

Hitchhiking is a dead end road

by David Smothers

UPI Senior Editor

The girl standing on the shoulder of the road may be thumbing her way to rape or even death.

In many areas—particularly around college towns—hitchhiking by girls is almost the in thing to do. It is a cheap way to get around. For pretty girls, it's easy. It can be scary, but for perhaps that reason it can also be exciting.

Sure, bad things can happen, the reasoning seems to go. But it won't happen to me.

Maybe not. But "hitchhiking is the major avenue to rape now," according to Ralph Page, a spokesman for the Dade County, Fla. sheriff's office. Too often, he said, officers "wind up with the end results of hitchhiking, which frequently is a girl in a field somewhere, beaten, sexually molested, and sometimes dead."

Last year, Edmund Kemper III was convicted of killing six coeds he had picked up in the Santa Cruz, Calif., area. Kemper, now under a life sentence, was not only a necrophiliac but used the decapitated head of one victim for dart practice and kept another in his closet so he could talk to it.

In Boston, a city crowded with college students, the sight of girl hitchhikers is common. Police figure seven of them have been killed in the last year or so.

Two West Virginia coeds left their dormitory Jan. 18, 1970, saying they were going to a movie and would thumb their way back. Their headless bodies were found 10 miles south of Morgantown, W. Va., four months later.

In the late '60s, five coeds and two other young women were killed around or between the campuses of the University of Michigan and Eastern Michigan University, seven miles apart. Hitchhiking was practically a way of life at the two schools. Police couldn't be sure, but said most of the victims appeared to be ride hitchers.

In July, 1973, a 15-year-old girl and her 16-year old boy friend were hitchhiking in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. They got a ride from Alfred Brust, who drove them to his home. There he decapitated the boy, chained the girl to a wall, and subjected her to repeated sexual and sadistic attacks for 22 hours before releasing her. When police came to get Brust, they found him lying in a lawn chair, dead of a dose of strychnine.

The New Jersey slayings scared off many girls from taking the thumb route to where they want to go—as a particularly sensational tragedy is likely to do for a while. But not all.

"I've been nervous a couple of times," Delia Marshall, 14, South Orange, N.J., said. "When you hitch, the driver usually looks you up and down and that makes me nervous. I'm going to keep right on hitchhiking, though. It's the only way to get where I'm going."

A friend said, "Sure, the deaths scare me, but I'm as careful as you can be. I'm not a weakling and I always sit by the door. I know what can happen. It's just a risk I take."

Sgt. John Flanagan of the Pittsburgh, Pa., Youth Squad said, "I have found in at least two situations—where girls who have been victims of rape at the hands of a guy who gives them a lift—that those girls continued to hitch. I think it's a fad, a matter of peer pressure and peer fad—do what the other kids do."

Dr. John Burkett, dean of students at Boston University, said students feel, "Well, these sort of things happen, but never to me. They feel it is their inalienable right to hitchhike."

The Bill Devine family in Seattle, Wash., tried after Katherine Merry Devine, 14, went missing last Nov. 26. She was found, her throat cut, Dec. 6 in a campground near Olympia, Wash.

The Devines started a campaign to repeal a new state law allowing hitchhiking except on interstate highways. They got 80,000 signatures on their petition. They needed 118,000 to get the issue on the ballot. Mrs. Devine said Katherine would never have hitched a ride if it had been illegal.

Hitchhiking is illegal, in a very limited degree, in many states. Prohibitions generally apply to interstate highways and tollroads. In some states there are also prohibitions against stepping into the road to solicit a ride.

Hitchers don't appear to pay much attention to whatever laws there are and, police confess they often can't do much about it.

Tom Lyons, spokesman for the Pennsylvania State Police outlined the problem there: "Hitching is outlawed in Pennsylvania and it isn't," he said. "A person may not solicit a ride from the travel portion of a highway. It's not too hard to figure out that you can hitchhike from the shoulder of the road. Very few are ever arrested."

Instead, many officers try to head off trouble by picking up the hitchers themselves.

In Florida's Dade County, Page said, "Our men often see young people—especially girls—hitchhiking and give them bus fare or cab fare out of their own pockets." A spokesman for the Cook County, Ill., Chicago sheriff's office said, "Usually, when we see them hitchhiking, we take them directly to their parents."

Leslie Durante is an attractive 21-year-old who works as a cocktail waitress in Philadelphia. In her teens, she was a regular hitcher. No more.

"I'm scared to death of it," she said. "I guess it's because I'm getting older and I'm not as brazen any more."

"It was exciting because you always wondered who you were going to meet. You can gain a lot of knowledge out of it if you're picked up by the right people."

One, she said, she dated for five months afterwards. Another said, "You have very nice breasts" as he grabbed one of them. She managed to get out at the next corner.

"I always carried some kind of weapon, usually a little knife, when I hitchhiked," she said, "and I always lit a cigarette when I got in a car. A friend of mine told me to stick it right in somebody's face if they tried anything."

"Thank goodness I'm still alive to tell you all about this."

Seven indicted in Texas

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. UPI—A Walker County grand jury Wednesday indicted seven persons, including would-be escapee Ignacio Cuevas, on capital murder charges in connection with the attempted breakout of three inmates from the Huntsville State Penitentiary and the shooting death of a woman hostage.

Ignacio Cuevas, 45, the only inmate to survive a shootout with officers in the aborted escape plot, was charged with killing Julia Standley, 43, one of two hostages shot to death. Inmate Fred Gomex Carrasco, and Rudolfo Dominguez also died in the Aug. 3 shooting in the prison courtyard.

Among those indicted for aiding the escape attempt were four current inmates of the prison, Lawrence J. Hall, a trusty, Fred "Liko" Perales, Adolpho "Shorty" Alonzo, and Pedro Alonzo.

Benito Alonzo, a parolee, was arrested and returned to prison Friday. George Cisneros, the seventh person indicted, was at large.

"They were indicted for capital murder, involving the supply of guns," a Walker County district attorney's office spokesman said. "Acting as parties to Carrasco, Dominguez, and Cuevas while they attempted to escape, they caused the death of Julia Standley."

District Attorney Jerry Sandel said Tuesday that Hall, serving a life sentence as an habitual criminal, smuggled three pistols into the prison and gave them to other convicts who in turn passed them to Carrasco.

Sandel said Hall agreed to smuggle the guns in exchange for money.

"Hall was given a small amount of money and was told that his wife would get additional cash," Sandel said. "The total amount came to less than $2,000, but he decided to take the risk. Now, as a result, he faces a murder charge which could bring the death penalty."

The district attorney said Hall worked in the home of an assistant prison director, and made numerous trips to and from the prison.

"This gave him a chance to smuggle the three pistols and a supply of ammunition to the other convicts who were in a position to deliver them to Carrasco."

The prison siege ended Aug. 3, after the inmates held 12 hostages in the prison library for 11 days.

Also killed in the shootout was Elizabeth Beseda, a Huntsville teacher.

Senior officers meet with administration

Student Affairs debates Senior Bar

by Andy Praschak
Staff Reporter

The Office of Student Affairs is generally in favor of reopening the Senior Bar, Father Dave Schlaver, director of Student Activities said today. "I have a tremendous amount of confidence in Greg Ericksen and the other senior class officers," commented Schlaver when asked about a possible coalition management between senior class officers and the Office of Student Affairs.

Fr. Schlaver: Foresees possible solution for Senior Bar.

Schlaver, however foresaw many complications that must be worked out before the Senior Bar can be reinstated.

The Senior Bar, originally founded as a meeting place for students, faculty, and alumni, has gradually become entirely student oriented. Schlaver cited this as the main reason for the negative attitude the Alumni Association has expressed toward the bar's reopening.

He added that many legal arrangements must also be worked out before the bar can be reestablished. A concentrated effort must also be made to insure that all the patrons of the bar have reached the legal Indiana drinking age of 21.

Schlaver said that if Student Affairs accepted responsibility of the bar, more insurance would have to be purchased on the establishment, than in the past. Also, the Office of Student Affairs must look into the licensing of the bar before it can be opened, according to Schlaver.

Schlaver said that until all of these problems have been researched and resolved, it would be impossible for his office to make a definite statement concerning the Office of Student Affairs's role in the reopening of the institution.

Schlaver and other university officials have scheduled a tour of the building containing the Senior Bar, in order to decide upon any necessary remodeling.

Greg Ericksen senior class president, also expressed confidence that "the Alumni Club" (Senior Bar) will be reopened under the joint management of senior class officers and the Office of Student Affairs." When asked what work has been done so far on the reopening of the bar, Ericksen said, "We have been working with the Alumni Association on legal aspects of the situation throughout the summer."

Ericksen agreed with Schlaver that many problems have to be worked out before the bar can become a positive part of the Notre Dame community.

Joe Henderlong, senior class treasurer, and Chris Fenn, senior class secretary, said that one of the main concerns was with changing the image of the Senior Bar. "It must be able to offer constructive social interaction as well as a place for seniors to drink," interjected Fenn.

The officers felt that it had been abused in the past and are presently preparing a list of concrete suggestions that they feel are necessary in renovating the Senior Bar and its image.

"Student managers and hired staff are the most important considerations when attempting to enhance the image of the Senior Bar," Henderlong said.

Ericksen concluded that "We as a class have proved that we are responsible enough to work together with the Office of Student Affairs to make the Alumni Club a place where students, faculty, and alumni can gather together for any social activity."

Greg Ericksen: Hopeful that the Senior Bar will soon be open.

Pre-Law Society meets

by Doug Meyers
Staff Reporter

A new program allowing undergraduates to sit in on law school classes highlighted the first meeting of the year for the Pre-Law Society last night in the library auditorium.

This is the first of some new programs that will let members see the law school in action and it marks the first time the society and law school have worked together on such a project.

Speakers at last night's meeting included Rom Demco, president of the Society, Dean Waddick, faculty advisor, Dean Faccio, Prof. Houck, and Chauncy Veek, president of the Student Bar Association. One Topic discussed was the deadline for taking the LSAT, during this October. All law students planning to take the test this October must register by October 12.

Every year the Pre-Law Society invites deans of other law schools to visit the Notre Dame Campus. They also arrange interviews with students for them These interviews will occur in the next few months.

Anyone who did not make the meeting and would like to join the society can contact either Dean Waddick or Tom Demco.

Rocky reports to Congress

by Clay F. Richards

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Nelson A. Rockefeller has turned over a complete financial summary of his holdings, including seven years of income tax returns, to the two congressional committees which will act on his nomination as vice-president, a committee spokesman said Wednesday.

Committee sources refused to reveal Rockefeller's net worth, and said the records would be given only to the members of the Senate Rules and House Judiciary Committee.

A spokesman for the Rules Committee said no timetable has been set for public hearings on the Rockefeller nomination.

"That will depend on how long the FBI and other investigations take," he said.

When Gerald R. Ford was nominated as vice-president, the three-week FBI investigation involved 350 agents who took 1000 interviews and filed a 1700 page confidential report.

In addition to the financial data received from Rockefeller, the committees have asked the Joint Tax Committee to review the original tax returns on file with the Internal Revenue Service, the spokesman said.

This is the same committee which studied the tax returns of President Nixon and concluded he owed more than $400,000 in back taxes.

Special congressional investigators have been assigned to

SLC reaction to Macheca

"We'll push for a new rule on penalties," he said.

All the SLC members said that student proposals will be taken into account before a definite course of action is decided upon.

Macheca said his authority to impose penalties was "completely within my power as Dean of Students."

"However, it is not a hard and fast rule and wasn't meant to be. I'm trying to let people have some idea of what they can expect if they break a rule. It's not just a lot of lip service."

Macheca said that a $50 fine would not be the usual penalty for violations of the alcohol rules. He said minor violations would be handled by the hall staff or rector.

"If a serious violation of the alcohol rules occurred, or if repeated incidents of violations were evident, the maximum fine would be considered," Macheca said.

The Dean made it clear that discretion was important in all cases involving the imposition of penalties.

He said that any case serious enough to come before him or a University Board would be looked at with descretion, and the penalty decided upon accordingly.

Macheca stressed the importance of student attitude stating that "attitude is the real key. The students must care."

The dean denied that he had overlooked a responsibility to consult the SLC. "The hall staffs had to know how to deal with it for the first few weeks of school," Macheca said.

Macheca also said that the new rules were not hard and fast ones that he tried to implement without consulting the SLC, but were just intended to let the students know what they can look for.

the Rockefeller case, the spokesman said. He added that both Special Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski and Chairman Sam Ervin of the Senate Watergate committee have been asked if their investigations have turned up anything related to Rockefeller.

Rockefeller gave the committee his federal income tax returns for the years 1967-73, one year more than requested. He also turned over records of his New York State and New York City taxes.

A Rockefeller spokesman said earlier that Rockefeller's annual tax return was about the size of a small city telephone book. When he was governor of New York, Rockefeller said he paid an annual income tax "in seven figures."

White Sox trip slated

by John Corrao
Staff Reporter

The Student Union Social Commission is sponsoring a bus trip to see the Chicago White Sox take on the California Angels on Sunday, Sept. 15 at Comiskey Park in Chicago. Cost for the trip is $9.00, which includes reserved seats and round trip bus fare.

Tickets will be available at the Student Union Ticket Office and the Dining Halls. Buses will leave from the circle at 10:00 A.M. on the morning of the game and will return sometime early in the evening.

Future trips to Chicago may be offered if there is sufficient student interest. For further information, Contact Rick Gultman at Student Union, 7757.

ward Campanale was named to the position of Coordinator of Undergraduate Education of both schools. A tuition exchange program, whereby children of full-time faculty members may chose which of the two schools they wish to attend, free of charge was approved. A new Women's Council has been established to improve relationships among women students at ND and SMC.

"If you look at many colleges and Catholic institutions," the Acting President commented, "you will see that St. Mary's is clearly in a minority as far as enrollment trends are concerned."

Enrollment at SMC is up more than 11 per cent over last year, he explained, with 1646 students registered.

This year's freshman class with 534 members, is the largest in the history of the school. There is a corresponding increase of 13 per cent in full-time faculty, thus raising the total to 100, while there are currently 40 part-time faculty members, which include members of the administration who also teach, he noted.

Hickey stated that the length of his term as acting president depends upon when a permanent president can be selected and approved by the Board of Regents. Most candidates being considered for the position by the search committee are presently in administrative positions at other institutions, he said. Therefore, the earliest that a new president can take over would be January 1, or more probably, he said, June 1.

Tech tests ND's 'new' secondary

by Pete McHugh

If a plague were to befall what remains of coach Paul Shoult's defensive backfield, he shouldn't be surprised, considering what has happened to the Notre Dame secondary since last year's Sugar Bowl victory.

First, there was the graduation of All-American safety Mike Townsend and cornerback Tim Rudnick. Over the summer came the disciplinary action against strong safety Luther Bradley suspending him for the year. And finally, as Shoult's worked to patch up the depleted secondary in early fall practice, potential starters Bob Zanot and Tim Simon suffered knee injuries disabling them for the season.

Now only four days before the season opener against Georgia Tech, coach Shoult's has again set up a tentative lineup for his backfield. "If we had to play tomorrow," said Shoult's, "we'd have Reggie Barnett at the left corner, Randy Payne at right cornerback, John Dubenetzky at strong safety, and freshman Randy Harrison at free safety."

Of those four, only Barnett has any game experience. Payne (5-9 180), a junior from Palmer Park, Maryland, and Dubenetzky (6-5 216), a sophomore from Hobart, Indiana, started for the Notre Dame junior varsity last season. Harrison (6-2 195) played for Hammond High in Hammond, Indiana a year ago and should be the lone freshman starter Monday night.

Shoult's listed freshman Ronnie Cullins (6-1 185) and junior Tom Lopienski (6-1 185) as presently in backup positions to Barnett and Payne respectively. At the safety positions, sophomore Mike Banks (6-2 195) will spot Dubenetzky, while freshmen Ted Burgmeier (6-0 183) and Ross Christensen (6-2 185) are behind Harrison.

The loss of Simon and Zanot also created vacancies on the punt return squad. Senior halfback Ron Goodman (5-11 192) along with Harrison will handle the receiving chores. Cullins and Burgmeier will backup these positions also. In evaluating the freshmen defenders Shoult's stated, "There is no Luther Bradley this year. But Randy (Harrison) has the ability to play. He has demonstrated his toughness and his speed (4.5-40 yds.). Overall, we're going to be young and inexperienced."

Looking toward the Georgia Tech game Monday night, Shoult's stressed that Pepper Rodgers' wishbone attack at UCLA last year led the nation in rushing, ranked second in scoring and third in total offense. He does expect the Yellow Jackets' new coach to throw the ball out of the three back offense, "The whole problem with the wishbone is they run, run, run. Then, they run-action fake and throw the ball to their split end or tight end."

Shoult's main concern, however, is not the opposition but the reaction of his inexperienced secondary. "There's a big difference between the practice field and Monday night or Saturday afternoon game conditions. We can't tell how the kids will handle that pressure." In four days, Pepper Rodgers' wishbone will at least provide a clue.

Coach Paul Shoult's casts a watchful eye over his defensive backfield.

Preseason polls

Preseason polls are usually inaccurate, often misleading and frequently a coach's nightmare. Many a head football coach would prefer the obscurity of an unranked team to the hot spot of a top five position. Rising from number 20 to number ten somehow looks better than dropping from two to six. Finally, preseason polls hold as much significance for a coach in the fall as the Harris poll held for Richard Nixon three years ago. In the words of Ara Parseghian, "I don't give a damn what the polls say in September. It's who's on top in January that matters."

Nonetheless, preseason polls are interesting and their release is always the first big news for anxiously waiting college football fans. The 1974 college football season will again have its share of surprises, a la Notre Dame a year ago; disappointments, Texas in '73; upsets, Tulane over LSU, and surely, a jumbling of the final rankings.

Four months ago the best team in the nation was Notre Dame. Now, it may be Notre Dame. But Oklahoma looms fearsome and hungry, as does Ohio State. And Alabama again returns a prolific offensive machine. Michigan is out for revenge, and John McKay again has some super sophs at Southern Cal. Of course Penn State will claim the title if they go 12-0 for the second straight year. In the process, however, The Nittany Lions will overlook the fact that they have the easiest schedule in the nation.

On top of that, there are some newcomers to college football prominence who will again make headlines. Pittsburgh may actually prove to be the best team in the East, while the Red Raiders of Texas Tech are putting Lubbock on the map. Arizona and Arizona State will have a head to head intrastate battle, and maybe, if miracles do indeed happen, the Big Ten will become respectable. It all starts on September 7.

For now, The Irish Eye's top twenty.

Harriers seek '74 success

by Pat Reidy

Coach Don Faley opens his third season as Notre Dame cross country coach on a note of cautious optimism. "Potentially, this is the best team since I've been here," Faley said. With the top five runners returning from last season, that should be the case. Returning from last year's 2-4 team are senior co-captains Mike Gahagan and Mike Housley, juniors Joe Yates and Jim Hurt, and sophomore Jim Reinhart. Freshman John Boivin, a Bellville, Illinois, product, has been a pleasant surprise in early workouts.

This season, Faley is being assisted by Joe Pione, a former distance runner at Loras College in Dubuque, Iowa. Pione gained coaching experience in Nigeria while doing a tour of duty with the Peace Corps. Coach Faley is shooting for 90 to 100 miles a week with two workouts a day.

Faley expressed confidence in co-captains Gahagan and Housley as being smart, experienced runners, and good leaders. He cited also, the work of Joe Yates, who was named Correy Award Winner last year as Most Improved Track Athlete.

The cross country schedule includes eight meets, involving mostly Big 10 opponents. The first meet is a home triangular meet (Burke Golf Course) on Sept. 14 with Illinois Normal and Purdue. The only other home meet, and one of the highlights of the season will be the 19th Annual Notre Dame Invitational on Oct. 11. The Invitational usually involves about 35-40 teams and in the past has featured such prominent names as Dave Wottle, Gordon Minty, and Notre Dame's own world record holder Rick Wolhuter.

Booters to open next weekend

The '74-'75 soccer team is confident that it will improve upon last year's record of two wins, seven losses and three ties. This confidence is based on a big turnout of dedicated freshmen, and an early starting time for practice.

Commenting on the early practice sessions, captain Shaun Carroll said, "Sixty people came out for our first practice, and quite a few were freshmen. No one quit the team, and we were forced for the first time to cut people from the squad. Right now, we have 45 people, and on Saturday we'll cut the squad down to 30 or 35 players. The turnout, the attitude and the early start have really helped the team."

The soccer team is being coached this year by Bob Ralph, club president, Tom Pollihan and Carroll. The trio replaces Arno Zoske, who relinquished his position because of phys-ed and football duties.

The team plays a 14 game schedule this fall with home and away games split evenly. Most home games will be played on Cartier field, the evening before home football games.

Discussing the schedule, Carroll said, "We have a good schedule and some tough opponents, especially Indiana, Purdue, Goshen and Wabash."

The Irish open the season at Indiana on September 13, with the first home match slated for September 27 against Purdue.

SMC tennis

by Kathi Paterno

The St. Mary's tennis team tryouts were held this past weekend, drawing a field of well over fifty contestants. Twelve girls were chosen for the team by double elimination in ten game pro sets.

The following girls are members of the 1974 fall team: Monica Cordes, Sheila Finneran (co-captains), Lynn Griffin, Elly Heil, Ann Houser (co-captain), Maureen Luxem, Sally Obringer, Louise Purcell, Kathy Sheedy, Sue Starck, Barb Timm, and Mary Vieha.

The fall schedule begins September 14 with an away meet at Valparaiso and this year includes a state wide college tournament for women at Ball State.
