Corby's awaits verdict

by John M. Higgins

INDIANAPOLIS — South Bend city officials wound up testimony in the state hearings concerning the renewal of the liquor license of Corby's Tavern yesterday. City Attorney Richard Hill appeared before the Indiana Alcoholic Beverage Commission to dispute earlier testimony that the city is engaging in a conspiracy against Corby's and other "public nuisance." Final briefs will be submitted by both sides to the Commission on October 21.

Under direct examination by Assistant City Attorney James Masters, Hill refuted accusations by Corby's Tavern Industries (CTI) officer Harold Rowley that Hill, Mayor Roger Parent, and other city officials have conspired to shut down Corby's. Hill said that he and Parent had never discussed Corby's specifically, but rather the five-points bar situation in general.

Hill outlined the procedures his office follows when a license comes up for renewal before the local ABC. When the renewal hearing nears, Hill said, the Police Department forwards to his office any information regarding legal violations concerning the license in question, noting that "in normal course, such reports do not come up until renewal." This information is then presented before the local board.

Hill also stated that although he had discussed with Parent special efforts to increase police bars in the "five-points area" on Eddy and Corby Streets.

The hearing was the conclusion of a series of hearings stemming from the local ABC's recommendation last April that Corby's license not be renewed because of the number of violations of liquor laws and numerous complaints from neighborhood residents that Corby's is a

'Paper Lion' recalls professional adventures

By David Sarphie

George Plimpton, also known as "The Paper Lion," entertained a capacity crowd last night at the Library auditorium with tales of his many experiences involving professional sports and show business.

Plimpton, a graduate of Harvard and Cambridge, described his occupation as "participatory journalism." As a writer for Sports Illustrated, Plimpton has received a first-hand look at such diverse activities as quarterbacking a professional football team, pitching in an All-Star game, and boxing the world light heavy-weight champion.

Plimpton was introduced to this odd profession while a student at Harvard. As an initiation to the campus comedy journal, Harvard Lampoon, Plimpton was required to run in the Boston Marathon.

Plimpton, however, deviously managed to avoid the first 25 miles of the race. In true Rosie Ruiz fashion, he entered the race several strides behind the leader and only a block from the finish. Although he was out-kicked by the distance runner, Plimpton had discovered a unique way to get close to the professionals.

In his speech Plimpton also described his first meeting with the great boxer, Muhammed Ali. He had scheduled a three-round exhibition match with the champ.

NDSG discusses new constitution

By Dan LeDuc
Staff Reporter

The Hall Presidents Council met last night at Dillon Hall to debate the proposed Constitution. Student Body President Paul Riehle put the new plan before the council and fielded questions from the group.

A hand count of the hall representatives showed that thirteen of the necessary sixteen dorms had already passed the Constitutional amendment allowing the October 9 vote. A referendum before the entire student body is necessary for passage of the new Constitution. Over fifty percent of the student body must vote on the referendum, and two-thirds must vote in favor of the revised Constitution for the referendum to pass.

The new Constitution replaces the Board of Commissioners with a re-defined 24-member Student Senate. Major objections to the Student Senate focus around the fact that the Senate will also virtually eliminate the Campus Life Council.

"I would say that this body would replace the CLC," said Riehle. However, if there is a future need for the CLC it may be reactivated.

The SBP said, "the CLC hasn't been the student voice to the administration." Only nine of the nineteen members of the CLC are students. Riehle complained that a majority of the time last year the CLC couldn't get a quorum and couldn't accomplish anything.

Dillon Hall President and HPC Executive Coordinator, Pat Conklin, expressed concern with "going in circles" between the

Sending planes

U.S. to protect Mideast oil

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is rushing four special early warning radar planes to Saudi Arabia to help strengthen the oil-rich country's air defense against a possible spread of the war between Iraq and Iran, the Pentagon announced Tuesday.

In announcing the shipment of the highly sophisticated planes, U.S. officials said the deployment is temporary and stressed that the move does not mean the U.S. is taking sides in the Iran-Iraq war.

"The United States government unequivocally reaffirms its position of neutrality," said Pentagon spokesman Thomas B. Ross.

"This deployment is purely for defensive purposes. It is designed to track aircraft for the purpose of providing additional warning for Saudi Arabian defenses," Ross said.

Saudi Arabia has indicated its support for Iraq in the fighting with Iran. However, U.S. defense officials said they have no reason to believe the Saudis will be relaying to Iraq any military data provided by the American radar planes, known as AWACS.

Ross told a Pentagon press briefing the decision to deploy the aircraft was made "in response to a request from the government of Saudi Arabia."

Defense officials said one of the big AWACS planes already had taken off from Tinker Air Force Base in Oklahoma and that the remaining three would be leaving for Saudi Arabia within hours.

They said the planes were to fly directly to Saudi Arabia with in-flight refueling, covering the distance in 17 to 18 hours.

The deployment will involve a total of about 300 military personnel, defense officials said. They added that American cargo planes would be making flights to deliver supplies to Saudi ground facilities being used by the AWACS aircraft.

The AWACS planes, which are modified Boeing 707 jets, carry a flight crew of four plus up to 24 Air Force technical personnel to monitor radar and other electronic gear.

Defense officials said that after the AWACS planes reach Saudi Arabia, they would be flying their early warning patrols wholly within Saudi airspace. They declined to identify where in Saudi Arabia the planes will be based.

The AWACS deployment came in response to a formal request made by the Saudi government on Monday, Pentagon officials said, noting that the request followed several days of intensive consultations.

The U.S. officials said the AWACS planes, with a "look-down down" radar range of 250 nautical miles, will be particularly helpful in bolstering Saudi Arabia's defenses against any possible attack by low flying aircraft.

Sex barges have been approved by Rotterdam's city hall as part of an all-out effort to cope with prostitution. A spokesman said the Netherlands project will be managed by a non-profit foundation, called "Exploitation and Management of Eros and Pleasure Centers," set up by a group of city residents. He said plans called for the barges, concrete-hulled and engineless, to have about 20 rooms each, along with bars and small movie theaters. The two barges will be moored in central areas of this bustling port. City hall will review the project in 10 months. — AP

Making farming profitable would be the principal goal of his agricultural policies as president, Ronald Reagan said in an address to Iowa farmers. "I am convinced that farmers have no desire to return to the policies we had when government, not farmers, decided what would be planted and how much to grow," Reagan said. "But we will not turn our backs on programs that have sought to assure the farmer a reasonable income and the consumer an abundant and reasonably priced supply of food and fiber." In what aides described as a major farm policy address, Reagan described Carter administration farm policies as "Carter's Seven Deadly Agricultural Sins." It was, he said, "a record of indifference, incompetence and inflation. It is a national disgrace." — AP

A military judge said that an independently appointed board of psychiatrists will examine Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood before his courtmartial on charges of desertion and collaboration with the enemy in Vietnam. The judge, Col. R.E. Switzer, on Monday granted a request by prosecutors to require the 34-year-old Marine to undergo another psychiatric examination if he intends to use insanity as a defense. Switzer stipulated that the director of the National Naval Medical Center at Bethesda, Md., will name the board. He said at least one member will be a doctor with experience in dealing with prisoners of war. Pointing out that Garwood has undergone several mental examinations, lawyers for the Indiana native have opposed the move for another series of tests. — AP

Veterans of Foreign Wars have vowed to block a Communist Party USA rally at Detroit's Veteran Memorial Building, but the director of the Detroit Civic Center says the city has no reason to reject the political party's permit. The Communist Party has rented the building for its planned Oct. 12 rally for the party's presidential ticket of Gus Hall and Angela Davis. But the VFW, which has about 80,000 members in the state, plans to lobby city officials to prevent the communists from using the building, said Paul Savage, VFW state commander. — AP

The two-fisted rebel of the silver screen, James Dean, has been dead longer than he was alive. But the army of faithful fans that flocks to his grave every Sept. 30 says James Dean lives on. "When we saw him, it was like magic. Something hit us, and then we were addicted," Marie Giusti, president of the oldest existing James Dean Fan Club, said. The 33-year-old New York woman was one of about 1,000 people who journeyed yesterday to Frankfort, a central-northeast Indiana community of combines, cows and cornfields, to remember Dean on the 25th anniversary of his death in a California car accident. — AP

No rapes have occurred at Notre Dame since school began in September said Dean of Students James Roemer. In a publicly released announcement, Roemer said the rumors that two rapes have occurred are "completely without foundation." "We have absolutely no evidence of any kind of sexual assault having taken place," he said. Roemer said he decided to refute the rumors publicly because they were being widely circulated on campus. — The Observer

October. A month set aside for bier gartens, the World Series and midterms. And at Notre Dame, October kicks off the annual United Way campaign.

Each year at this time students can be seen scurrying around campus carrying small change as donations to United Way; money that would otherwise be spent "chowing down" at food sales or drinking a few rounds at Senior Bar. This is quite admirable and everyone who contributes should be commended. After all, proceeds go to a charitable organization and Notre Dame is an institution steeped in charity.

Those in charge of the 1980 Notre Dame campaign project 100 percent participation effort among both students and faculty members. In fact, each student is expected to pledge two dollars and faculty members are expected to pledge a small percentage of their month's earnings in support of the drive.

There is a problem, however. For many years, alongside Notre Dame, Saint Mary's was also an avid supporter of United Way, and together both schools pooled a substantial and significant donation. This noteworthy sum was then handed over to the local St. Joseph chapter of United Way, which then distributed the money to organizations such as YMCA, Girl/Boy Scouts, and 35 other groups in the area that aid the poor, the handicapped and the elderly.

The problem is that on September 15 the Saint Mary's Board of Governance single-handedly ruled to boycott this year's United Way campaign. This undemocratic decision, needless to say, has generated much disbelief, disapproval and plain disgust among students, faculty members and administrators who view United Way as a worthwhile and meaningful campus endeavor. United Way, they are arguing, has proved to be a vital human improvement organization in the South Bend area.

The Board's reasons for rejecting United Way are twofold: 1.) students in the past never had the opportunity to vote whether they wanted United Way as their college charity and 2.) a few of the board members questioned the validity of some of the organizations that are funded through United Way claiming that abortions are available through these groups.

It is reasonably safe to say that the St. Joseph chapter of United Way is "legitimate," a fact many South Bend residents will attest to. There are no shady, underhanded, aspects to this United Way branch. So what's wrong with giving to this specific branch?

Lately, a cloud of confusion seems to be hovering over Saint Mary's, and it's only fair to point out that the student government leaders are doing nothing to improve the situation. The Board of Governance has decided to endorse a charity other than a United Way affiliate, which, board members promise, will be announced at a future date. So how do they justify righting one wrong with another wrong?

It was wrong that students in the past did not have a voice in choosing United Way as the college-sponsored charity, but it is doubly wrong for the Board of Governance to reject this year's United Way campaign without a student referendum.

So despite continuous urgings by faculty members (who live in the South Bend community and would be the best judges of the effectiveness of United Way) and some administrators who view the United Way drive as their "personal pet project," including SMC President John Duggan, the Board has stood steadfast by its decision.

Many are extremely disappointed that, as Saint Mary's students, they were denied the right to vote for what charity they would or would not like to endorse. There are approximately 2,000 students attending the college — students capable of voting on an issue that does affect them, and it seems that the Board has decided to ignore this fact.

Consequently, students have banded together under the direction of Dr. Clarence Dineen, a biology professor at Saint Mary's, in organizing a United Way drive on campus. Students volunteering their time and effort will be collecting money from all five dorms during the week. At least some interested Saint Mary's students are making sure that a "charitable" campaign does exist on campus despite what fellow students rashly decide for them.

The month of October. Save those dollars. United Way is back in town. Just look at the ugly billboard in front of the Administration building if you have any doubts

Marosen questions friendship

By David Rickabaugh

"I felt I could ease the relations between Security and the students," said former Main Gate Security Guard Steve Maroszan of the events surrounding his resignation in April.

The circumstances surrounding the resignation led Maroszan to claim he was forced to forfeit his position.

"They (Security) wanted me to conduct a prison-like operation. I couldn't do this to the students, they were my friends, not prisoners," commented Maroszan.

Maroszan thinks other members of the security staff complained about the number of students visiting him at the gate. He also feels the other guards watched his post to find him disobeying the rules.

Maroszan supposedly did not have a good relationship with some members of Security because they allegedly felt the students were "jock straps that couldn't open the doors of their dorms." "I didn't remain silent and let this untrue bigotry continue. I supported the students. So, the students drink and get a little rowdy; they need some way to relieve the pressure. That does not make them secondclass citizens."

Despite his friendly attitude, the enforcement of the rules was not disregarded by Maroszan.

"Everyone received the same kind of treatment," he stated. "Of course I stepped on some toes, maybe that's why I'm not working there now."

Maroszan gave up Social Security Disability and unemployment compensation when he accepted the job at the University. However, after his resignation he became ineligible to receive his previous benefits.

The loss of an income has cost "Boog" more than the expected monetary loss. His wife of 30 years filed for divorce over the lack of income.

In an attempt to prove he was forced to resign Maroszan took his case to the Indiana Employment Security Commission in July. The commission concluded that he voluntarily left his employment without good cause.

Due to the embarrassment he feels due to the incident, he no longer is a parishioner of Sacred Heart. He feels the clergy of the University could have supported, or at least consoled, him during his time of crisis. "Boog" asks, "Do they know what hell I was going through?"

When asked about the developments, Security Director Glenn Terry stated, "The Commission confirmed what we have been saying all along."

Terry also commented that, "I am displeased that The Observer is reporting this story. It happened six months ago and is no longer important."

Maroszan feels it is an attempt to continue the policy of sweeping the incident under the rug. He still does not know what became of the student petition protesting his resignation. "It seems it fell on deaf ears," he observed.

"Not one of the students has visited me since the incident. I am beginning to wonder if my position of friendship was worth the price I've paid."

Maroszan's residence is one block from the Notre Dame campus.

Pangborn falls victim to crime

By Mary Fran Callahan
Senior Staff Reporter

More campus crime was discovered last night when a theft of two watches and a class ring was reported to The Observer by Pangborn residents, who said the theft occurred during the Michigan football game.

The students, who wished to have their names withheld from publication, said their room doors were unlocked.

One of the watches taken was "valuable," according to a resident. The other watch was engraved, and the owner intimated that the article was of sentimental value, as was the stolen class ring.

A victim expressed a reluctance to accept the reality of campus crime when he said, "I never bothered to report it to Security because I knew nothing would ever turn up."

Floor residents said they saw a "suspicious" man standing in their stairwell shortly after the Michigan game.

"We asked him what he was doing, and he said he was" trying to find the way out," a resident stated.

Thus far, Security has been unable to apprehend any suspects in the recent wave of campus crimes. The department, however, does have officers working on the thefts.

Last week, Security officers questioned a group of South Bend residents emerging from Pangborn Hall. No suspects were taken into custody, however.

Earlier in the week, a recent robbery at Fisher Hall prompted Security Officer William Hedl to advise students to lock their doors "even if they just go take a shower."

visibility in the five-points area during the week before St. Patrick's Day in anticipation of large crowds, any form of arrest quota was not contemplated.

"In fact, police were instructed not to make any special efforts to arrest bar patrons on St. Patrick's Day," Hill said. "We didn't want a situation where 3 or 4 officers would try to make mass arrests. We didn't want to create a dangerous situation."

Corby's had "broken its promise"

Also appearing was Myron Busby of the Northeast Neighborhood Council, who testified that despite efforts to create a cooperative atmosphere, Corby's had "broken its promise" to try and keep the disruptive force of the bar to a minimum. Busby said that the management of Corby's had not fulfilled promises it made in an 1978 agreement with the Council to control some of the disruptive effects the bar had on the neighborhood. "We're pretty much fed up with unkept promises," Busby said, noting that the management of other area bars, Bridget McGuire's, Nickies and the now-closed Goose's Nest had fulfilled the terms of the agreement even after its expiration in April 1979.

Labels warn public

Life seems to be turning into a giant warning label.

There's a danger sign at every corner these days. In the air we breathe, the food we eat, the drugs we take.

Consider this label: "Caution: not meant for puncture wounds, serious burns or cuts. If redness or swelling develops, consult physician promptly. Protect from light." The product: petroleum jelly. The label on a spray can of furniture polish has a dual purpose. First, reassurance: "Use with confidence. Contains no fluorocarbons claimed to harm the ozone layer."

Then, warning: "caution: do not use near fire or flame. Do not set or store container where temperature exceeds 120 degrees Fahrenheit as container may burst. Do not puncture or incinerate. Do not spray or use on floors. Keep out of reach of children."

The latest alert involves toxic shock syndrome, a rare, but sometimes fatal disease associated with the use of tampons. The Food and Drug Administration has asked manufacturers to label tampons with a warning of possible dangers.

A more familiar label is the sign on cigarette packages, prompted by a 1954 report: "Warning: the Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking is Dangerous to Your Health."

A call to the FDA yesterday to ask just how many products are required to carry warning labels was answered with confusion. "Literally hundreds." The agency regulates six separate areas. "You'll have to be more specific."

How about drugs? The FDA's Ed Nida said "almost all over-the-counter drugs" carry warning labels. Most prescription drugs do not; the warnings go to the physicians rather than to the Student Senate and the CLC. Notre Dame had a Student Senate in the past, before the Student Life Council which preceded the CLC. Conklin wondered why Riehle was reverting back to something that was so unsuccessful in 1968 that it was voted out of existence by the students. He inquired as to how the new Student Senate would be perceived by the administration.

Conklin thought that the semester used getting the Senate into operation might be more effectively used working on the already formed CLC.

Riehle responded that he would have no qualms convening the CLC next semester but wants to work on the Senate this semester. Though he will not convene the CLC, his designate may call the group into session. Riehle has made Fr. Van Wolvlear his designate. Fr. Van Wolvlear plans on convening the CLC this semester.

Riehle stressed that the Senate is a student senate and that administration and faculty are not included in the membership so that the students alone may have a voice. In the past, many resolutions never passed the CLC because of the administration membership.

The Senate would be only an advisory group, but passage of a resolution would be by students, and the resolution would be presented to the administration. Thus, if the resolutions were not adopted, it would be clear that the administration was unwilling to accept them — not that the students were unable to organize and present them.

Riehle said the formation of the Senate would more clearly define the roles of student government.

Riehle expressed concern that the CLC and the Student Senate operating concurrently would confuse the students over who had the say in student government. The CLC works on hall life; the Senate would work on campus life. Riehle said that the Senate would include elected members rather than the CLC's appointed members.

Flanner Hall President Mike Shepardson pointed out that student senates at other schools are efficient, and that as proposed the Senate can form committees to include faculty input. Also, monthly or bi-monthly forums could be created to allow student-administration dialogue.

Student Government Executive Coordinator Don Murday said the Senate would bring the students together rather than going to the administration in a "piecemeal" fashion. Conklin agreed, saying that the Board of Trustees tends to support the students when they are united in matters such as this.

In other HPC activity:

— HPC President Phil Vanderhoff announced that this may be the last year for gambling to be included in Mardi Gras. It is against Indiana law for charitable groups to engage in gambling as fund-raising activities.

— A Student Government Social Life Survey is being distributed in the dorms this week. Results will be compiled early next week and presented at the next Board of Trustees meeting. It is hoped that the information compiled will be the basis for specific arguments on how to improve social life for students.

— A paper and aluminum recycling project will begin in two weeks. Newspapers and aluminum cans will be picked up weekly at the dorms. The funds raised will go into a charity fund.

— The HPC has been allotted $18,000 earmarked for permanent hall improvements.

Industrial pollution Carter eases standards

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, preparing to take his battle for re-election to the nation's industrial heartland, announced Tuesday he will seek extended environmental deadlines to help ailing steel manufacturers compete with overseas manufacturers.

Saying "a healthy and modernized steel industry is vital to our nation's economy and also to our nation's security," Carter also unveiled a liberalized tax depreciation schedule for steel-makers.

The measures could result in domestic steel prices rising by as much as 25 percent, industry officials said.

The president announced the measures at the Executive Office Building next to the White House just before he begins campaign visits to several key steel-producing states. The nation's five leading steel states — three of which Carter will visit Wednesday and Thursday have 112 electoral votes out of the 270 needed to win.

Carter will make campaign visits to Michigan, Ohio and Pennsylvania on Wednesday and Thursday. The other two leading steel states are Illinois and Indiana.

Plants have been closing, workers have been laid off, and Democrats in Congress have warned Carter that he could fare poorly in industrial states if there is no program to restore some of the lost jobs.

In an apparent reference to those who advocate a reduced government role in business, Carter said: "the comprehensive steel agreement that we've reached is proof that the proper role of government is to be a partner in economic change, not an impediment and also not an unwitting or indifferent spectator."

"In today's real world, a quick fix for one particular problem easily means quick trouble...for others," the president said.

The industry has been hurt in recent years by rapidly rising wages, reduced product demand, a lag in capital investment and import competition from Japan and Europe.

Administration officials, from the president on down, were quick to deny that the new environmental plans amounted to a relaxation of air and water pollution standards. Instead, they used the phrase "stretch-out" — more commonly called upon to describe an industrial system in which workers produce more without an increase in pay.

Advancement Does Not Require An Advanced Degree

You can spend another two to three years in graduate school or you can turn four years of liberal arts education into a practical, challenging and rewarding career in just three months—as an Employee Benefit Specialist.

Benefits today amount from 30 to 35 percent of wages and salaries. Recent pension legislation has created even more demand for trained specialists. As an Employee Benefit Specialist you'll be called upon to exercise your own judgement, initiative and intelligence in a challenging, professional environment with progressive responsibility.

The Institute for Employee Benefits Training is the first and most prestigious school in the United States, training Employee Benefits and Pension Specialists. This is a dynamic, growing career field in which advancement does not require an advanced degree. Our graduates are in demand by law firms, pension consulting firms, insurance companies, banks, and personnel and benefits departments of corporations. The Institute's Placement Service will place you too. If not, you will be eligible for a substantial tuition refund.

Furthermore, you will earn graduate credit towards a Master of Arts in Legal Studies through Antioch School of Law for all course work completed at The Institute.

If you're a senior of high academic standing and looking for a meaningful career, contact your Placement Office for our catalog and arrange to have an interview with our representative.

In the weeks prior to the fight, Plimpton was continuously annoyed by calls from Ali predicting the tragedy that was to befall his opponent. "You is gonna fall during ring instructions," Ali would whisper.

Plimpton recounted other unusual adventures. Several years ago as a Boston Celtic, Plimpton was put into the final minutes of a game with the Atlanta Hawks, down by fifteen points and with little hope of winning.

Seeing the odd man come onto the court, Plimpton's teammates were revitalized momentarily and fought back to within two points of the opponents. At that point Plimpton was replaced by John Havlicek, the All-Star power forward. This turned out to be a mistake, however, as the Celtics went on to lose the game.

Plimpton's career has ventured off the playing field as well. As a percussionist for the New York Philharmonic, Plimpton ruined an entire performance one night, sending Leonard Bernstein into a rage.

Known as "The Flying Telephone Pole," Plimpton was once a circus trapeze artist. Although his performances in the center ring were less than perfect, Plimpton did not go totally unnoticed. Minutes before one show was to begin, wearing only his pink leotards, Plimpton went to see a doctor about a shoulder ache. Upon hearing that his strangely-dressed patient was a "flyer," the doctor replied, "the human body is a cathedral and you've desecrated it." Plimpton was refused treatment.

Perhaps Plimpton's unusual career was summed up best by the young lady who introduced him last night. To the delight of the crowd, she announced that Plimpton, "Has done almost anything I can think of."

patients. "Our biggest worry right now is getting people to read the label," Nida said. "If we could get one thing across to consumers — read the label — we'd figure our work was done. All we'd have to do is watch the manufacturers." Nida is optimistic, however. "Consumers are picking up on the language of the medical field," he said. "Side effects' is not a term that's an exclusive property of doctors anymore." In recent months, the FDA has announced that warning labels will be required on bubble bath. "Excessive use or prolonged exposure may cause irritation to skin and urinary tract."

It has ordered warnings on products ranging from sunlamps to hair dyes. It warned pregnant women to curtail or stop drinking coffee, tea and colas because of a possible link between caffeine and birth defects. The agency found no scientific evidence to back up claims that Bendectin, a drug used to treat morning sickness, causes birth defects. But it recommended, nonetheless, that manufacturers include "patient package inserts" to give customers more information. Look around the house. The skull and crossbones that used to be confined to containers of rat poison and weed killer has been replaced by fine print and has spread through the rooms. The print seems to get smaller as the warnings get longer. "For external use only. Keep away from children."

Throwing away your vote

Anthony Walton

I have a recurring nightmare: It's November 4, and I calmly stroll into the voting booth, confidently totting my first presidential ballot. I pick up the "tool" and scan the ballot. "Carter, Reagan, Anderson." I knit my brow. "Reagan, Carter, Anderson." I begin to sweat. "Anderson, Carter, Reagan." I awake violently, screaming, "Where is none of the above?"

that the candidates seem to be getting more mediocre each time around. In a little over 25 years we have gone from JFK and Adlai Stevenson to Carter and Reagan. This thought is particularly unsettling in view of the situations that await us in the '80s. There are all sorts of reasons for the rise of these candidates, everything from the current structure of the primary and conven-more conservative than Reagan in several respects, especially in areas of civil rights and women's liberation. In the '60s and early '70s Carter prided himself on being a protege of Sen. Dick Russell, an infamous segregationist from Georgia. He was quoted as saying he got votes from the same type of people as did George Wallace and Lester Maddox, and once "smeared" an thing to sit around Charley's Barbershop and talk about "what should be done to straighten us out" and quite another to say the same things as the presidential candidate of a major political party. No amount of cosmetic alterations on the part of Reagan's campaign staff can change this. His misinformation and verbal theatrics make a great show and good press, but this is the Garden." Not to mention his criticisms and distortions of Reagan, which often amount to the "pot calling the kettle black."

So what are we left with? Good old John B. Anderson, the white-haired panacea. (Ed Clark, Barry Commoner, and the others truly represent throwing your vote away.) The only problem is that Anderson revealed himself as more of a self-

☐ Jimmy Carter

☐ Ronald Reagan

☐ John Anderson

☐ None of the above

I'll tell you what — I hope it isn't this bad every four years, because if it is I think I'll just bag it now. I mean this will be my first time inside the voting booth and there's nobody with a bandwagon that I want to jump on, nobody that I can spend my college years fanatically supporting as an idealistic undergrad. Eugene McCarthy, George McGovern, Morris Udall, heck, even Edward Kennedy, where are you? When I was a kid I used to put my Humphrey and McGovern bumper stickers on my bicycle and school folders and be the most politically hip 10-year-old in town. But now I can finally vote, and there's nobody to vote for.

Seriously, who can any self-respecting 20-year-old liberal vote for this year? (I know, I know, John Anderson, but I'll get to him later). This is a year for the "Don't vote, it only encourages them" t-shirts in tion system (they make it necessary for a serious candidate to be unemployed or else ignore his job) to the loss of esteem that politics and politicians have suffered in the last 20 years. (Why be in politics when it is nothing but a miasma of worries and not as economically rewarding as private business?) Through combinations of these and other reasons, we are left with the basic choice of Carter or Reagan, which is really no choice at all.

First of all, there is no real ideological difference between Carter and Reagan. Carter is a bit more intelligent, as such is slicker and more sophisticated, but he is really a moderate Republican in Democrat's clothing. The only real difference appears to be on certain social issues such as abortion and ERA, and Carter could not oppose these without losing a large segment of his constituency. Historically, Carter is opponent by circulating a picture of him hugging a black man. Carter's economic policies are much more traditionally Republican than Democratic, and he is also a proponent of the traditional Republican concerns such as deregulation and military strength.

Reagan, on the other hand, appears daily to be nothing more than a good-intentioned, though definitely not harmless, old man who would be better off back in Dixon, Illinois, telling stories to his grandchildren. I do not mean this in any sort of discriminatory way (pertaining to age), but in the sense that Reagan's background, qualifications, and experience in no way prepare him to be President of the United States. It is a very strong comment upon the situation of the electoral system of the country, and the electorate itself, that he has been allowed to come this far. It's one future of the world we're talking about. In a way, if Reagan is elected (or for that matter, Carter), it will serve a sort of twisted justice, because America will get the kind of leadership it deserves.

As far as personalities go, I actually prefer Reagan's because I think that he is at least sincere. I disagree with most of what he says and openly fear the potential implications of his presidency, but he is a much nicer person than Carter, who, while presenting his pious exterior, has been one of the most ruthless, cynical and politically-motivated chief executives ever. His manipulation of the White House, Iran, Afghanistan, Russia, China, energy, and countless other issues has been disgusting. This has been much more disturbing than his alleged incompetence. For example, consider the Stealth bomber leak, and his use of the Iranian issue "to hide in the Rose righteous sycophant than the concerned intellectual the media have portrayed him as. He also has no real credibility (he didn't win a primary) outside of the media, and lacks the strong organization to seriously challenge and win. The only thing that Anderson can do is what I hope happens, and that is throw the election into the House. While I do feel he doesn't have a chance, if everyone who is saying, "I'd vote for him, but he doesn't have a chance and I don't want to throw my vote away" would vote for him, he could probably send it to the House. This would be better than either Carter or Reagan.

All of this brings several questions to mind, the most prominent being "Isn't there a better way?" There is a leadership crisis in this country, and we need strong leaders to govern, but first we need viable choices to create dialogue in which to decode these issues. Our current situation is another bitter fruit of television, in that Iowa and New Hampshire get to have a 90 percent share in determining who becomes president. By being strong there, the Reagans and Carters get their head starts and become media "front-runners". Perhaps it is time for a parliamentary system. But that is another article. In the end, all I can say is "Where have you gone, Pat Paulsen and Harold Stassen, a nation turns its lonely hearts to you."

On Wednesday, Oct. 8 the World Hunger Coalition in conjunction with the ND FLOC Support Committee will be co-sponsoring a "Quarter Night." During dinner hours at the ND and SMC dining halls, each student is asked to donate a quarter (s), which will help support the Midwestern farmworkers in their struggle for justice and basic human rights. Bring your quarters!

Ohio State Senator Zimmerf described these people as "men, women and children who do back-breaking work for 10-12 hours a day." Despite the fact that their stoop labor helps to put food on every American's table, the senator noted, the farmworkers are "treated like animals, deprived of dignity" and their children are forced to "play in the stench of outhouses."

Irish perform magic at home

by David Wilson
Sports Writer

Notre Dame's field hockey team just may have decided not to kiss the Blarney Stone, but rather the astroturf on Cartier Field.

After beating Lake Forest at home last Friday, 1-0, the Irish retain their unblemished winning streak at home.

This weekend the Irish will have to journey away from their magical field and travel to Taylor this afternoon and the Depauw Classic on Saturday.

"We'll be up for the weekend, as always," says freshman stand-out Clare Henry, who stresses the tournament will be a real challenge for her team.

The Irish have yet to win a game on the road, as is reflected in an even 3-3 record. The losses came at the hands of Indiana University, University of Toledo, and most recently, a 2-0 setback at Ohio Wesleyan.

Henry doesn't feel that a poor team performance contributed to the Ohio loss. "The bus ride was long and we're not used to the grass fields such as the one at Ohio Wesleyan."

The Irish field hockey team sports an undefeated record on Cartier Field.

His statistics last year give solid evidence to the praises of Toman. He led the team in pass receiving with 28 catches for 428 yards.

A member of the trio who has been touted as Notre Dame's best receiving corps ever and the nation's best in 1980 along with wide receiver Tony Hunter and flanker Pete Holohan, Masztak also fulfills the role of a blocker quite adequately, according to Toman.

"He is much improved from last year; of course that comes with experience.

"Dean is a super guy; he's a great asset to the program on and off the field. There's no question about it," concludes Toman.

Who taught Masztak the art of refining his natural skills?

"If I had to name my best coach, it would be my dad," says the Morrissey Hall resident. "He has really helped. He always knows what to say and do at the right times.

"If my head was getting big, he knew how to get the air out. And I really appreciate all he's done."

Masztak's father, still a big Irish fan and one who has found the time to make it to nearly every Notre Dame game since his son arrived in 1978, remains a steadying influence on Dean.

"Once I didn't think he was going to make it to the Navy game in Cleveland," says the 20-year-old Masztak. "But I heard a yell from the stands, there were 80,000 people there. It was my father. I heard him above all those other people. I looked around and there he was.

"He's always been there; I always hear him, don't ask me how."

Masztak, who was named to prep All-American squads by Coach and Coach & Athlete, says the change from high school play to collegiate competition was a major one for him.

"It was a big transition. When I got here everyone was so much bigger, so much faster and hit so much harder. You had to hang your head low so it didn't get taken off."

A two-time prep letter winner in both basketball and track, teams he captained his senior year, Masztak has helped to compile a long and impressive list of memorabilia to that treasured Notre Dame tradition: the near comeback-win versus Southern California in his freshman year (four grabs for 82 yards); the brilliant win over Houston that same year at the Cotton Bowl (three catches for 49 yards); and the 18-17 steal from South Carolina last year, a game in which he hauled in the game-winning 14-yard pass with less than a minute to play (just one of his six aerial receipts on the day for a team-leading 1979 mark). They are just a few contests that stand out most in Masztak's mind.

But, of course, he does not omit the recent wonder-win over Michigan from his memories.

"I was just concentrating on getting the guys blocked so Harry could kick it," says the member of last year's Butcher Brothers in Bookstore Basketball with fellow grid standouts Kevin Hart and John Scully. "I was thinking, 'Come on, Harry,' but I never lost faith.

"When it went up I thought, 'It's there.' I was on my knees watching and I was just kind of bringing my hands up slowly as it was going, and then finally, I brought them all the way up when it was good.

"You could see how close we (the team) were then — everyone on the sidelines was giving support. It was good, and everyone was a part of that win. Even if it wasn't good, everyone would have been a part of it."

Masztak stresses that the aura of closeness is still there, despite a week's layoff from play, and that it has to be with the team preparing for Michigan State.

"We can't take them lightly," says Masztak of the Spartans. "We're Notre Dame; people will always be coming out after Notre Dame the whole season. They have nothing to lose; we have everything to lose.

"It's not going to be a roller-coaster ride to Alabama. I'm going to take the games one at a time and prepare the best I can."

Though Dean Masztak admits the season gets long, it gets tough to prepare for games and he gets tired, he's also quick to assure everyone of one special thing.

"I love it here, I wouldn't be happy any other place."

It's doubtful the Irish team and fans could be as happy if the talented Masztak were any other place but under that Dome that mesmerized him nearly three years ago.

Water polo splashes into Rock

By Armand Kornfeld
Sports Writer

It has taken three years of dedicated effort, but at last Notre Dame fields a competitive water polo club. Although forced to practice in St. Joe's Lake early in the season, the team persevered and finally secured a slot in the Rockne Memorial's already overcrowded pool.

The club president and head coach, senior Mick Corbisiero, has managed to leave the hardships behind and is enthusiastic about the club's first season. "We have a good team, and a lot of enthusiasm. It's only a matter of time before we take off and really do well."

The scores of the club's first two games certainly support Corbisiero's statement. The Irish bombed Western Michigan and Purdue by respective scores of 16-8 and 20-3, leaving little doubt of their potential to excel. But this weekend the team travels to Ohio State for a tournament which will include powerhouses like Kentucky, Indiana, and Michigan — all fielding varsity teams composed of scholarship players. The Irish, meanwhile, have no one on scholarship and have achieved only club status.

However, the club's founders, Corbisiero and vice president Cam Clitheroe remain undaunted. "If Notre Dame went varsity and brought in a coach we could really dominate this area. We have a great chance of making the Mid-West Conference championships this year," said Corbisiero.

The Irish are in their first year as a member of that conference which includes nationally ranked Loyola of Chicago, Purdue, Iowa State, Southern Illinois, Ohio State, Kentucky, Indiana and Michigan.

It is difficult to refute Corbisiero's claims of great things to come when one takes a look at the roster. The Austgen brothers, Tom and Dave, both played high school water polo in Texas. Tom was an honorable mention all-American and Dave played for the Junior National Team. Michael Lee adds valuable experience, having played for the Jamaican National Water Polo Team. Rounding out the talented team is John Smith, who made all-league in Southern California — the water polo capital of the United States.

In fact, many west coast teams aided the Irish in laying a solid foundation. "UCLA and Berkley helped us a great deal," explains Corbisiero. They gave us books of plays and some game films. Heck, one of UCLA's assistant coaches was even ready to come out here and coach for us.

"The problem," Corbisiero notes, "is that we have a lot of seniors and next year's team is going to be hurting a bit if we don't come up with some more players. Anyone can come out."

The club will travel to Ohio State this weekend to participate in its first conference tournament. Indiana, Kentucky and Michigan will be among the featured squads. Following the Buckeye tournament the Irish will be idle until November 1 when they will host Michigan and Ohio State in a tri-meet season finale.

Masztak: traditionalist at heart

by Beth Huffman
Sports Editor

It was a cold, snowy day in January of 1978 when Dean Masztak first came to Notre Dame. He had looked at Michigan, a school less than an hour from his Toledo, Ohio, home, and had been impressed. He was determined, though, to keep an open mind about the all-important decision of which college to choose. Yet, the quiet junior who led all Irish receivers in playing time last year says it didn't take him long on that occasion to realize he belonged in an Irish, not a Wolverine, uniform.

"I put my foot down from the car, looked up at the Dome and said, 'This is it,'" reflects the 6-4, 227-pound tight end who has caught five passes for a total of 74 yards in Notre Dame's two games this season.

With the Irish tradition imbedded in his mind by a subway alum father, numerous miracles performed by men in blue — and then green — on his television set, the Central Catholic High School graduate was determined to preserve at least one relic of Notre Dame history.

Visions of Mike Creaney and then Ken MacAfee clad in the blue and gold shadowed Masztak's mind when he prepared for his first season as an Irish player. The "Green Wave" image produced by the Southern California victory didn't set well with the freshman destined to back up Dennis Grindinger in the 1978 campaign. As Grindinger's fill-in he played in all 11 Irish games and hauled in 13 aerials for 236 yards.

Masztak devised his own way to preserve his memory of "the way it used to be." Given his choice, he'd wear the traditional blue and gold instead of green. He also has shunned the flashy white Nikes and opted for the "old-time" black Adidas.

"Kids dream to be a part of this," says the junior finance major. "I got here; I am a part of it. I figured as long as I have the opportunity I should do something."

"My father said if I should get hassled I should tell them it was so my grandmother could see me on the field. But, the coaches just told me to wear anything I feel comfortable in."

No matter what superstitions

Masztak surrenders to, no matter what he wears on the field, he does his job as Notre Dame's starting tight end, and he does it well.

"He has real good hands," says Ron Toman, Notre Dame's quarterback and receiving coach. "He has good speed for a tight end and does a good job after he catches the ball."

It's a hobby but...

Kelly Wenchel excels in martial arts

by Kelly Sullivan
Women's Sports Editor

On Cartier Field, the ACC ice, or the courts of the Rock, the desire is the same — to be the best that you can. Day after day, Notre Dame's skilled and not so skilled athletes go at it, from rugby to racketball, sharing a common dream in the back of their minds — to someday be number one.

Amidst all the athletes and all the action taking place after classes, one is apt to overlook a diminutive figure in the corner of the Rock taking part in her own and rather unique athletic endeavor. But this is one competitor who should not go unnoticed.

Her name is Kelly Wenchel. She looks like your typical Notre Dame freshman. Yet there's nothing typical about her sport or her feats.

True, Kelly shares every athlete's goal of reaching the top, but unlike most, she has accomplished that task, and at age 18 yet.

The sport? Martial arts, known to many as karate.

The accomplishments? National Champion for the '79-'80 season in both black belt and sparring divisions.

Kelly hardly lives, eats, and breathes karate as one might assume a champion would. In fact, the Pittsburgh, Pa., native didn't even get started in martial arts for athletic purposes.

"My mom and dad felt I needed to learn self-defense," she relates. "I just thought of it as something to do — more of a pastime than anything else."

Wenchel joined the Academy of Martial Arts when she was 10 and by age 17, had earned her black belt — the highest competitive division of karate.

After two seasons of various regional and junior championships in brown belt, Wenchel's pastime seemed to be developing into an occupation, but she insists it never dominated her life.

"Oh, it's just one part of my life. I wouldn't want to do it full time. I don't even think about it that much. It's kind of a reflex to me now," she says matter-of-factly.

Wenchel works-out at the Rock every-other day for about two hours, perfecting her form and style in the kata competition, an individual routine evaluated by judges.

"Karate has done a lot for my self-discipline, both physically and academically," says Wenchel.

The Breen-Phillips resident had no intention of continuing in martial arts at Notre Dame until she received word in June that her point total during the year had propelled her into the country's top slot.

"I couldn't give it up when I found out I was first," she smiles.

And who could blame her? Most would concur that defending a national title at age 18 is not the worst prospect the engineering student ever will face.

"I'd like to repeat as national champ, but," she emphasizes, "my real goal is to be nominated to the Trias International Society — that's really big." The Society is an elite group of black belt members of the United States Karate Association.

With off-campus crime climbing at a frightening rate, the South Bend Police Dept. may check in to the services of another of Notre Dame's national champions. "Kelly Wenchel is one girl," says a friend, "that I wouldn't mind walking around with late at night."

The picture at right attests to Kelly Wenchel's success in the martial arts.

Irish Items by Bill Marquard

OUT OF THE BLOCKS — Notre Dame's 2-0 record this season in football marks its best start since Dan Devine's first squad went 3-0 in 1975. That year the Irish defeated Boston College (17-3), Purdue (17-0) and Northwestern (31-7) before losing to Michigan State (10-3).

Notre Dame has scored more points in its first two games this season than in any other year under Devine. Their 60-point total is most closely matched by the 34-point sum in '75 and '79.

OPEN UP — A glance at the records might convince Notre Dame's schedule makers to pencil a few more open dates into the Irish slate. Since Knute Rockne became coach in 1918, Notre Dame has posted a 17-6-2 record in games played following open dates. Nine of those games have been season-ending clashes with Southern Cal, in which Notre Dame is 2-5-2. Since Devine has been under the Golden Dome, the Irish are 4-1 after open weekends, losing only to Michigan (28-14) in 1978.

DEVINE INTERVENTION — Following Notre Dame's aweinspiring victory over Michigan State, the Michigan student newspaper indulged in some posthumousevangelizing. The headlines in their Monday edition read "Michigan 27, Notre Dame 26, God 3."

IT CAN'T HURT — Creighton Miller, star halfback for Notre Dame in the mid-40's and now a lawyer in Cleveland, recalls that there may be more truth than myth when it comes to divine intervention for the Irish. Miller remembers his coach, Frank Leahy, taking the entire squad to the cemetery before big games to say a rosary at Rockne's grave.

"I'm not sure if it helped," remarks Miller, "but it didn't hurt."

TWO-MINUTE WARNING — There have been only eight occasions in the history of Notre Dame football when the Irish have been deprived of victory in the last two minutes of a football game, the most recent being Southern Cal's field goal with two seconds left to nip the Irish 27-25 in 1978.

On the other side of the winner's circle, the Irish have scored the winning or tying points after the two-minute warning in 14 games. Southern Cal and Iowa have been the victims three times apiece.

KNIGHT-LESS KNICKS — The NBA's New York Knicks announced last week that Toby Knight, who played for the Irish from 1974-78, will be sidelined for the entire NBA season because of ligament damage to his left knee. Knight, who averaged 19 points last year and has been a starting forward for the Knicks for the past three seasons, was injured during an exhibition game last Tuesday. He'll be in a leg cast for three months and will spend the next three to six months undergoing rehabilitation.

CROSS COUNTRY FROM ACROSS THE COUNTRY — Notre Dame's Irish Invitational, the largest collegiate cross country meet in the nation, will boast five of the top-twenty harrying (is that a word?) squads in the country. According to the most recent issue of The Harrier, the bible of American cross country, Auburn is rated third nationally, Michigan seventh, Indiana eighth, Florida 19th and Illinois State 20th. All five of those teams, plus the host Irish and some 50 other schools, will take to the Burke Memorial Golf Course course (huh?) starting at 2 p.m. Saturday.

SPEAKING OF INVITATIONALS — The Notre Dame men's tennis team will see its only action of the fall when the Irish host the eight-team Notre Dame Invitational. Surprisingly enough, the same teams will be back this year that competed last fall. Four-time defending champion Miami (Ohio) will be among the pre-tourney favorites, along with the host Irish who finished their spring campaign with a brilliant 20-3 record and the Eastern Collegiate Tennis Championship. Play begins Friday morning at 9 a.m. and runs through late-Saturday afternoon.

JV JUNKED — Notre Dame's final junior varsity football game of the season has been cancelled. Originally scheduled for Sunday afternoon in East Lansing against Michigan State, the game was scrubbed because the Irish did not have enough personnel to field a team. All NCAA football players are limited to playing in 11 games (either JV or varsity) during the regular season, and JV Coach Gene Smith explained that some of those JV players might have to be called on later in the season for the varsity.
