U.S. marine killed as Beirut rages on

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — U.S. Marines battled Shiite Moslem militiamen yesterday with tank cannon, mortar and machine-gun fire in a daylong series of clashes that killed one Marine. U.S. fire reportedly killed a 9-year-old girl and two other civilians.

Three Marines and two school children were among 29 reported wounded during the three battles that broke out at 9:10 a.m. and lasted past nightfall.

The Marine spokesman, Maj. Dennis Brooks, said one of two Marines wounded in an afternoon clash died while waiting to be evacuated. The other was flown by helicopter to the amphibious assault ship Guam off the Beirut coast.

Two Marines suffered slight injuries in midmorning clashes with militia. They were treated and returned to duty, Brooks said.

The Marine who died was the 259th American serviceman to die in combat in Lebanon since the Marines were sent to Beirut in September 1982. Brooks withheld his name until his family is notified. A Marine guard died in a bombing of the U.S. Embassy last April.

Brooks said in each of the clashes, the Marines fired only after they were attacked.

"We have no way of knowing what we hit, and what casualties there were," Brooks said. "We are sorry about any civilian casualties, but the bottom line is that we are taking fire from the area and we have to defend ourselves."

Spokesmen for Amal, the main Shiite militia group, and hospitals in southern Beirut said Marine fire killed three civilians, including the girl, and wounded 22 people, including two schoolchildren and one militiaman.

In the Shiite neighborhood of Hay el-Sellum, Amal fighters showed AP reporters a blue-green school bus with four large-caliber bullet holes in one side and fresh blood on two of the 12 seats. The bus was carrying children from the Shiite Ahlieh School in nearby Bourj el-Barajneh when it was hit, the Amal militia said.

Lebanon state radio said one of the two Marines injured in the afternoon clash had been shot in the chest. Brooks refused to provide details or name any of the injured Marines.

Brooks said in an unrelated incident, a Marine guarding the U.S. Embassy in Beirut shot himself in the foot. He was treated at the American University Hospital.

Airport officials said four other Lebanese civilians suffered shrapnel wounds in shelling that forced suspension of air traffic for two hours in the morning and one hour in the afternoon.

Beaux Arts Ball's rules restructured

By MARK POTTER

Staff Reporter

This spring's Beaux Arts Ball will be a lot different from last November's well-attended Ball.

A move from its traditional home in the Architecture Building, advance ticket sales only, and increased security are a few changes that will be made for this spring's event. Security and crowd control problems, as well as the great popularity of the biannual event are the major reasons for these changes.

Initially the administration was going to ban any further Beaux Arts Balls because of security problems in November. Dean of Students James Roemer said, "Security had a series of serious problems with the affair; they estimated that at least 50 bottles of alcohol were taken into the ball."

There were also problems with people outside on the steps waiting to get into the dance. Security caught several people with open containers of alcohol outside and five students were subsequently fined $100 each for that offense. The large number of people at the dance was also a problem causing a fire hazard and what Roemer called a "near riot inside and outside."

After November's affair, Roemer talked with Robert Amico, the chairman of the Architecture Department, and they agreed that future Beaux Arts Balls would be forbidden. This decision was then given to the American Institute of Architects (AIA), a group of architecture students who are responsible for the Ball.

The AIA subsequently submitted a set of proposed changes to Roemer in an effort to change the decision. After a change in the number of security personnel to be present was made, the administration agreed to allow a Beaux Arts Ball this spring.

The changes include a new site for the dance, probably LaFortune, no ticket selling at the door, and the presence of at least three security officers. The letter from Roemer to the AIA also states there must be "effective publicity by Beaux Arts about the no-alcohol policy." Any students who are found to be in possession of alcohol will be fined $100. The letter continues on to say "If the above conditions are not met or if security advises the Dean of Students that alcohol was observed at the Ball, then there will be no Beaux

"Thou shall not steal" is a commandment Frank Gorch, manager of the LaFortune Student Center, wishes more Notre Dame students would live by.

Several articles were stolen from the building Saturday night, including a grey couch, three maple chairs, a purple easy chair, and a picture of a marine killed in action. Although the purple easy chair and the picture were recovered, the couch, valued at $300 and the three maple chairs which cost $40 a piece have not been found. "I feel whoever took the couch could not have gone far because they (couches) are very heavy," explained Gorch. Although Gorch does not rule out the possibility of someone off campus using a vehicle to take the items, he is confident the thieves were students.

Glenn Terry, director of security, is also certain the culprits were students. "Every once in awhile things are taken by students, but I am confident the articles will turn up eventually," said Terry. Security does have workers patrolling the campus, but Terry states it is hard for them to be everywhere at once.

Gorch feels the same about the students employees who are on duty to watch LaFortune at night, and he believes it was in the confusion of closing that the items were taken. "We are presently trying to get a better system of student security and a better locking up procedure," said Gorch.

Housing contracts due on Feb. 2 deadline

By MARY HEILMANN

News Staff

The February 2 deadline for the return of housing contracts is nearing, and those students who fail to meet this deadline will face off-campus housing next year, according to Father Michael Heppen, director of Student Residences.

In an interview yesterday, Heppen stressed that no exceptions will be made for students who still have not returned their contracts in person by Thursday. Students are not permitted to mail their contracts due to the possibility of their being lost in campus mail.

"It is our usual policy to request contracts every year at approximately this time. We have to set a deadline, and this year February 2 has been designated the final date for acceptance of the contracts," Heppen explained.

According to Heppen, the possibility of a housing lottery is dependent upon how many cards are returned. If the demand for on-campus housing exceeds the available dormitory facilities, a lottery may be deemed necessary. However, Heppen could not ascertain the probability of a lottery, nor would he say how such a lottery would be run.

"No lotteries have been necessary during my tenure with the Department of Student Residences," Heppen said. He added that details of the lottery procedure would be made available if and when a lottery occurs.

A pharmaceuticals heir who pleaded no contest to criminal sexual conduct in an incident involving his stepdaughter was sentenced yesterday to be chemically "castrated" with a drug made by his family's company. Roger A. Gauntlett, 41, an heir to the Upjohn Co. fortune, was sentenced to one year in jail and ordered to undergo treatment with the controversial drug Depo-Provera for five years to diminish his sex drive. Defense and prosecution attorneys said they would appeal the sentence. Kalamazoo County Circuit Judge Robert L. Borsal ordered Gauntlett to begin treatments within 30 days and said use of the drug, made by Upjohn, amounted to "castration by chemical." But the judge said the effects can be reversed. —AP

The American actor Anthony Perkins was in Yorkshire yesterday to shoot the television movie "The Glory Boys," after being charged with smuggling marijuana and LSD into the country. Perkins, 51, was arrested Sunday at Heathrow Airport when he returned from Los Angeles, where he had gone during a break in filming the $2.8 million movie for Independent Television. He was released without bail and ordered to appear in court Thursday to face charges of smuggling eight grams of marijuana and three small doses of LSD. Perkins, star of the movies "Psycho" and "Psycho II," plays a British security agent assigned to look after an important Israeli professor played by Rod Steiger in the three-hour thriller. —AP

The calculus professor from Purdue University Calumet who was shot Friday in his office, allegedly by a student angry about a "D" grade in his class, had a bullet removed from his left lung by doctors in Hammond yesterday. Meanwhile, the Lake County prosecutor filed an attempted murder charge yesterday with the Lake County clerk's office against Purdue Calumet student Joel G. Pittman, 26, of Gary in the shooting. Spokesman Lance S. Dodson of St. Margaret Hospital said Professor Ronald J. Wagenblast, 51, was in serious condition when he entered surgery late yesterday morning. But, Dodson said, "The surgery was deemed successful by the physicians, and he seems to be doing well." —AP

A Britt Airways twin-engine turboprop commuter plane crashed in a ball of fire while taking off in fog and rain yesterday in Terre Haute, killing two pilots and an airline representative aboard. The Swearingen Metro aircraft carried no commercial passengers. The airplane, which can seat up to 18 people, was being ferried to Evansville to be used as a standby. The victims were identified by state police as the pilot, Delbert Huffman, 64, of Terre Haute; copilot Gary Gerber, 55, of Evansville, and Bryan Leahy, 25, of Evansville, an airline service representative. Huffman was a retired Air Force colonel with more than 19,000 hours flying time. The cause of the crash was not immediately known, but witnesses reported that the plane "sounded sick" just before the 6:30 a.m. crash. —AP

The quadrennial ritual

More than a thousand members of the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's community will descend on Stepan Center April 4. Crowded under the curved roof, they will spend hours cheering, chanting and listening to speeches.

A springtime pep rally, perhaps? No, but a Notre Dame tradition, nonetheless — a tradition that has occurred only ten times in the past 44 years.

These students, faculty members, administrators and honored guests will meet with one goal in mind — to choose the Democratic candidate for the United States presidential election.

While the final decision will not have much impact on the 1984 election as a whole, it will have a great and lasting impact on the people who participate.

The Mock Convention has become a valuable and fascinating addition to the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's education process since the event was started in 1940.

The convention is one of the oldest in the country and remains one of the most realistic.

The fact that it is a quadrennial ritual makes it even more valuable. It also demands a fresh approach to each convention. "It has to be sold new every four years," says Convention Coordinator Tom O'Leary. "It is a tradition that no one knows about."

It is an opportunity that should not be overlooked.

The tentative platform for the April convention will be ready by early March, according to O'Leary. This is simply a preliminary step — the platform will be debated, amended and voted on at the convention. Campus special interest groups will soon begin debating election issues in order to prepare prospective delegates for the event. All students will receive information about becoming a delegate through the mail in mid-February.

The coordinators are planning as realistic a convention as possible. Stepan will contain all the banners, balloons and hoopla that will pervade the Democratic Convention in San Francisco this summer. Each delegate will represent his or her actual homestate. O'Leary's planning committee is working on getting at least one of the Democratic candidates to come to ND for the convention. The convention will continue until it reaches a consensus — even if that takes until 4:20 a.m., like it did in 1972 when Hubert Humphrey was nominated.

Notre Dame, Indiana, often seems far removed from the bigtime world of campaign trails and political rhetoric. With the majority of the student body from out of state, perhaps students lose touch with the political process — to the point most don't even bother to vote absentees in their home state elections. Perhaps students become too immersed in campus happenings and social concerns to recognize the importance of the election process. Maybe they are weary of annually voting for student representatives who are accorded little authority in the collegiate setting.

Although it is called the "Mock" Convention, the results it produces are very real for Notre Dame and Saint Mary's. Rather than simply trying to predict who the Democratic candidate will be, the convention is a chance to state the choice of the student body. The 1984 Democratic candidates are a colorful crowd and should not be ignored. The Mock Convention allows students the time and setting to examine candidates and issues — and to make plans for their personal decision in November.

The issues are the essence of the convention. While the mock convention nominee will pull little weight in the national race, the decision students make on issues while participating will have far-reaching effects. By the final day of the convention, April 7, approximately a thousand student delegates will have produced a platform that represents the goals and ideals of the 1984 student body.

There is virtually no other way to gain such an overview of the current generation. No other form of gathering such information — even a referendum, a phone poll or personal interviews — could be as exciting or as accurate as the Mock Convention.

Politicians and their campaigns are often cynically dismissed in the academic setting. The Mock Convention provides the forum to scrutinize candidates and issues in an uncommon setting. Without the adherent biases of television or newspapers to obscure the event, participants can view the presidential race in a fresh, and perhaps encouraging manner.

U.S. negotiator Rowny anticipates arms talks with Soviets very soon

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. negotiator Edward Rowny said yesterday the United States would consider any serious Soviet proposals, including curbs on new U.S. nuclear missiles in Europe, in an effort to work out a strategic arms control agreement.

After a half-hour meeting with President Reagan, Rowny told reporters he has a number of U.S. approaches or "trade-offs" to present if the Soviets agree to resume discussions in Geneva, Switzerland.

"It's in their interest to come back," Rowny said. "We are now in a position, when we return to the table, to make a breakthrough."

Negotiations to curb medium-range missiles in Europe and separate talks on controlling intercontinental nuclear weapons are stalemated. The Soviets disrupted both discussions to protest installation of U.S. Pershing 2 missiles in West Germany and cruise missiles in Britain.

"We have some concrete proposals on trade-offs," Rowny said.

Rowny was unwilling to predict whether the Soviets would agree to fix a date for another round of the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks.

"There are all kinds of signals coming out," said Rowny, who heads the U.S. delegation to the START talks.

Rowny said Reagan agreed a settlement might be based on trimming the U.S. lead in some weapons if the Soviets gave ground on others.

For instance, the U.S. negotiator said, "we believe our advantages in bombers and cruise missiles can be traded off for their advantages in ballistic missiles."

In the past, the United States has resisted Soviet efforts to include European-based missiles in the START discussions. But Rowny said that "if the Soviets say they want to talk and they begin bringing up other issues, we're going to listen to any proposal they have."

The White House meeting followed Reagan's announcement Sunday night that he was seeking reelection. Rowny denied there was a political motive in the timing of Reagan's focus on arms-reduction talks.

In another development, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said U.S. nuclear tests will be announced only when they are considered "significant."

He said the criteria were the importance of the test and the effect on the area surrounding the Nevada test site near Las Vegas.

A White House official, who spoke only on condition that he not be identified, said the decision was based on "growing concern over site security, heightened by partially successful attempts by anti-nuclear groups to penetrate the test site."

Soviet-American agreements permit only underground nuclear tests and limit them to 150 kilotons. For several years, U.S. tests were disclosed to the public.

Until now, the Reagan administration has refrained from making new proposals aimed at wooing the Soviets back to Geneva. But, in a statement, Rowny said Reagan agreed that "we are now in a position, when we return to the table..."

Critics of the U.S. strategy of keeping the European missile talks separate from those on intercontinental weapons say that merging the two sets of negotiations and putting all issues on the table at once could improve prospects for a trade-off.

Three arms control experts, two Americans and one West German, said at a news conference yesterday the medium-range and strategic arms talks should have been merged in the first place.

Paul Warnke, chief U.S. negotiator of the SALT II treaty, said the medium-range talks "were always on the respirator and once the NATO deployment began, the plug was pulled."

William Hyland, former deputy assistant national security adviser to President Ford, said separation of the talks "was a mistake."

Saint Mary's Board reviews coming events

By FRANK LIPO

The need for a Sunday mass at LeMans Hall was among the topics discussed at last night's Saint Mary's Board of Governance meeting.

Student Body President Elaine Hoctor also announced upcoming Student Government sponsored events.

A post-Keenan Review party will be held this Friday from 11 p.m. to 3 a.m. in the Haggar College Center. Student Government elections are scheduled Feb. 9 from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m., also in the Haggar Center. These elections have in the past been held in the dining hall. In other news, a new copy machine is now at the Haggar Center through the efforts of Student Government. The traditional "Little Sibling Weekend" is scheduled for April 6-7. The Board will discuss this event at a future meeting.

Saint Mary's Student Government is sponsoring a lecture by humorist Fran Lebowitz at 8 p.m., Feb. 7 at Carroll Hall. Lebowitz is the author of two best-selling books and is currently a columnist for Mademoiselle magazine. The lecture is free to the public.

The Board also discussed the possibility of a Sunday mass at LeMans Hall. Although there are approximately 500 residents of LeMans, they can only attend masses at Regina or Holy Cross. Of the 313 students surveyed by the Board, 253 or 81%, would prefer a mass at LeMans. The obstacles to a Lemans mass are poor acoustics in the chapel there as well as an awkward physical layout. Solutions such as remodeling or moving a Sunday mass from Regina to Stapleton Lounge in LeMans were discussed. This issue will be looked at again before any proposals are made.

Student Senate gives go ahead to resolution granting academic credit

By CAROL CAMP
Senior Staff Reporter

A resolution granting academic credit for Student Government and Student Union members was passed at last night's Student Senate meeting.

The proposal, which is subject to the approval of administration officials, did not specify who should receive credit or how many hours of credit would be awarded. Senators merely concurred that students involved in Student Government and Student Union should receive some type of non-financial compensation for their efforts.

In addition, the Senate adopted an official policy concerning the use of alcohol on campus. A committee comprised of Student Body President Brian Callaghan, Vice President Peggy Prevoznik, and Senators Chris Tayback, Rob Bertino, Suzy Joyce, Mike Flint, and Jim Slatt created a policy calling for:

which would reprimand the alcohol abuser on an individual basis.

Ensuring that previously adopted guidelines for food and other non-alcoholic items at parties would be uniformly enforced in all dorms on campus.

Increasing student activity fees and hall taxes in order to provide Student Union and individual hall councils with additional revenue for planning functions which provide alternatives to drinking.

In effect, the Senate proposal emphasizes stricter enforcement of the rules which presently govern alcohol use. Callaghan noted the policy "is not earth-shattering, but it does propose some changes; namely, to enforce the existing rules."

He added, "Once the public report comes out, we can key in on specific areas - this is more theoretical."

The Senate policy will be presented at the Board of Trustees meeting in Key Biscayne February 9-10 and to the Committee on Alcohol Awareness prior to the release of its final report.

U.S.-Iranian exchange tops $1 billion mark

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Trade between the United States and Iran, recently condemned by the Reagan administration as a sponsor of terrorism, topped $1 billion in 1983, at least double the previous year.

But two-way trade is still less than one-fifth of the level in 1978, the year before the Islamic revolution replaced the Shah of Iran with Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. And most of the trade involves U.S. oil purchases on the spot market, and thus is not direct between the two nations.

Before the revolution, the United States shipped arms and machinery to the shah's government while Iranian tankers loaded with oil, caviar and intricate rugs arrived on American shores.

In 1978, trade soared to $6.6 billion, with the United States selling $3.7 billion worth of goods, more than to any other nation outside Western Europe and Japan.

Those commercial ties ended abruptly when Khomeini came to power, expropriated American companies and later seized the U.S. embassy in Tehran. Former President Jimmy Carter imposed restrictions on trade, but the trade embargo was lifted in January 1981 as part of agreement releasing the American hostages.

Even so, trade between the two countries was so low in 1981 the Commerce Department didn't bother to keep figures.

Since then, there's been a modest upswing, and officials say the figures may underestimate the actual trade because many dealings are probably done through third parties.

"There may be more trade, but it doesn't show up in the statistics," said Kathleen Keim, a specialist on Iran at the Commerce Department. If for example, a U.S. company sold machinery to a broker in West Germany, who in turn sold it to Iran, the export transaction would be recorded between the United States and West Germany.

Exports to Iran are still small, amounting to $170 million from January through November 1983. That compares with $101 million in 1982. The exports were primarily machinery parts for motor vehicles, aircraft and oil exploration.

Imports from Iran to the United States totaled $1 billion for the first 11 months of 1983, more than double the 1982 level of $461 million. Ninety percent was oil and special petroleum products.

A State Department official, speaking anonymously, said there are no legal contracts between American companies and Iran for oil because the Iranians have barred them. So, all of the oil is bought through traders on the spot market.

Iran, the official said, barter oil with countries other than the United States, and that oil often ends up on the free market where it might be bought by an American firm at a good price.

The Reagan administration intends to make it even harder to do business with Iran. On Jan. 23, the administration branded Iran as a country that exports terrorism and imposed tighter export controls.

Iran joins Syria, Cuba, Libya and South Yemen on the list of terrorist countries.

Joe Reap, a State Department official, said the decision was "based on an accumulation of evidence, including but not limited to the bombings in Lebanon."

Reagan planning active campaign, looking forward to debating Dems

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan is planning an active campaign outside the Rose Garden this spring, although he faces no opposition for his party's presidential nomination, and he said yesterday he favors a debate with his Democratic opponent.

Reagan, who will battle for many of the same labor votes that helped him win the 1980 election, argued his tax cut program benefited a wider range of Americans than did an extensive tax reduction offered by President John F. Kennedy 22 years ago.

"Our tax program was fair," said Reagan. "It was fair across the board."

With Sunday's formal announcement of his candidacy behind him, Reagan began a busy schedule that includes several trips out of Washington each month and speeches in the capital.

Yesterday, the audience was the National Religious Broadcasters' convention. Today he will fly to Chicago for a 10-minute speech to a convention of the sand and gravel industry.

Asked yesterday whether he would debate his Democratic opponent, when nominated, Reagan replied: "In principle, I support debates. I favor that idea."

Edward J. Rollins, director of the Reagan campaign organization, said, "Today if the election were held, it would be far more of a rout than it was in 1980."

He said Reagan's longtime political advisers "could not find four states in the country in which we are trailing." He said an election now would show Reagan winning 45 or 46 states with 55 percent to 57 percent of the vote.

The Reagan campaign organization has 140 fulltime employees on its staff, 100 state chairmen and co-chairmen in place, and two stories of rented space in an office building at the foot of Capitol Hill.

It includes several former White House staff members, beginning with Rollins, the president's former political adviser, and Rollins' deputy, Lee Atwater.

Michael K. Deaver, the deputy chief of the White House staff and one of Reagan's closest advisers, said Reagan will seek to appeal to blue-collar workers, who proved to be a key element in his landslide electoral victory in 1980.

Deaver and other Reagan aides are quick to express their admiration for the support former Vice President Walter F. Mondale is getting from the AFL-CIO, as well as for the highly charged state of his campaign organization.

"With that organization and a full-time commitment (from organized labor), we have a lot to be concerned about," said Jim Lake, spokesman for the Reagan-Bush '84 re-election committee. "Mondale's very tough and he's also very careful. He doesn't make mistakes."

The Reagan campaign won't send the president to the Iowa and New Hampshire primaries as a lone voice against the Democrats. He will studiously avoid the sites of battle in the Democrats' campaign, sending surrogate campaigners to respond to the charges.

A major share of the Reagan organization's $26 million primary campaign budget will go to voter registration projects, which Lake said would be "very critical to Ronald Reagan's re-election."

Arts Balls in the future."

Both the administration and the AIA seem to be happy about the proposed solution. Roemer said "I think it (the proposal) was a good solution." Dan Rachtenwald, a senior architecture student who is vice-president of the AIA, said, "We're pretty much in agreement with the administration on the proposal."

Rachtenwald added the "proposal to move the dance was made last year but we decided to try to hold it in the Architecture Building one more year because it has been traditionally held there." The proposal to move was made last year because the Architecture Building couldn't hold the large numbers of people at the dance. Roemer hopes the change in location will help lessen the alcohol problem in that it will "break the tradition of people taking alcohol into the dance," by changing the dance and people's attitudes towards it.

"Advance ticket sales is a control measure" according to Roemer because it will allow the number of people at the dance to be more closely controlled. Rachtenwald also likes the idea, saying it "is the best way to prepare for the dance because the AIA will then know how many people to expect for the dance."

The AIA proposed that some form of security be present at the dance because it didn't feel students could properly enforce the alcohol rule. Roemer agrees with this and he suggested that three security guards be used instead of the two that the AIA's proposal called for. Two of the guards will be inside the dance to make sure alcohol is not smuggled into the affair.

Rachtenwald said the AIA is going to be "prepared to handle whatever happens" at this spring's Ball.

cooperation of the hall rectors. "If public notice is given and rectors or rectresses spread the word to the hall staff to keep an eye out for the items it would really help," said Gorch. Terry and Gorch both agree that Notre Dame is not a police state and a room-to-room search is out of the question.

Terry believes adding a few more security guards would not really help the problem of student theft. "If each student had a more respectful and responsible attitude toward obeying the law there would be no need for more security," he said.

Gorch feels since most of the objects in LaFortune were gifts to the University, the students should have more appreciation for them.

Arabs give Jackson $100,000 gift

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An organization headed by the Rev. Jesse Jackson received a $100,000 contribution from the Arab League, the second $100,000 donation from the league to a group connected with the Democratic presidential candidate, a spokesman said Monday.

John Bustamante, Jackson's personal attorney, told reporters that PUSH for Excellence Inc. got the money in 1981 or 1982 from Clovis Maksoud, the Arab League's permanent observer at the United Nations.

"The Arab League did make a gift of $100,000 to PUSH-Excel," Bustamante said. "It was a perfectly legitimate, legal gift."

Bustamante attacked The New York Times and other media organizations for singling out the contributions from the Arab League, an official group of Arab governments, as unfair, un-American and defamatory. The Times reported Sunday that the PUSH foundation received a $100,000 donation from the Arab League in 1981.

"It is part of an organized attempt to make Arab gifts seem different and unacceptable compared with other gifts," he said.

Bustamante said the second Arab League contribution turned up when Jackson asked him to review the records of several of the PUSH groups.

"I don't think he knew about it,"

Bustamante said when asked about Jackson's knowledge of the gift to PUSH-Excel.

Jackson has been an official of PUSH-Excel from its beginnings.

The attorney, who is general counsel of the foundation and Operation PUSH, said none of the money from any of the PUSH groups has gone to Jackson's presidential campaign.

The contributions to the groups connected with Jackson have caused controversy, especially with Jewish groups who say Jackson is too dependent on money from Arab donors. Bustamante rejected such criticism, saying it "perpetuates ethnic defamation."

"The foundation has received many unrestricted gifts from Arabs, Jews, blacks and others," he said. "The New York Times sought to malign the foundation and defame some of its donors."

Bustamante said the two $100,000 gifts came after the foundation sent a letter to all the ambassadors on the "Diplomatic List" asking for donations for the foundation to help with drought relief in Africa and for PUSH-Excel. He said Jackson had no role in the solicitation.

Bustamante admitted Jackson encouraged him to set up the foundation to gather contributions to fund Jackson's work. Much of the foundation's money — just how much Bustamante could not say — has gone to PUSH groups in various grants.

Before becoming a Democratic presidential candidate in November, Jackson was president of Operation PUSH (People United to Serve Humanity), the Chicago-based civil rights group that served as the cornerstone of Jackson's work.

PUSH-Excel was founded by Jackson in 1977 to run programs aimed at improving education in many schools, particularly inner-city public schools. Jackson has been variously described as its unpaid chairman and as its unpaid president.

Black-white apartment switch not a headache

Associated Press

CLARKSVILLE, Texas — There was anger and frustration when a federal judge ordered some whites and blacks in public housing here to switch apartments. But six weeks later the mostly elderly residents are settled down — and many say they're getting along well with their new neighbors.

Rosemary Caviness, crossing her fingers, said a sense of calm acceptance and even racial harmony, has settled over the two projects in this small East Texas town.

Caviness, the housing authority director, had the task of implementing the order that 26 tenants of an all-black housing complex trade apartments by Dec. 15 with 26 tenants from a complex in the white section of town.

"So far, it has gone real well. I think it's going to work," she told the Dallas Morning News.

Doris Holder was the first white to move into the formerly all-black complex. She said after a few weeks of feeling terrified, she now feels more at ease.

"The neighborhood is all right. It's mostly just living alone that bothers me," she said. "I do get out some, and nobody has ever bothered me over here."

"I've met some colored people around here and we get along fine," said Lynn Davidson, who moved into the formerly all-black apartments.

"They know I won't put up with any nonsense. I've got something right here that will stop any bull," he said, pointing to a shotgun propped against the wall by his bed.

Until last month, the housing authority operated 52 apartments for whites in a predominantly white area of town and 52 apartments for blacks in a predominantly black area.

Officials said they didn't segregate by policy, but that applicants always chose to live with their own race.

But two black families filed suit in 1980 claiming they were denied housing because of the segregation. They won and U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler ordered the apartment swap. He also ordered the housing authority to maintain a 50-50 racial balance in both complexes.

Many white residents, however, found new homes rather than transfer to the formerly black housing project.

As of last week, the formerly all-white complex had 26 white households, 24 black, one Mexican-American and one vacancy, Caviness said.

The formerly all-black complex had 29 black families, 10 white and 13 vacancies.

Caviness said she doubts she will ever be able to meet the court-ordered racial balance.

"It was the hardest thing I've ever done," said Carrie Middleton, 77, one of the black residents ordered to move.

Meteorologist explains bad winter

By JAMES JANSEN
News Staff

South Bend weather has never been anything to write home about. But according to National Weather Service specialist Tom Arnold, things are noticeably different than last winter.

"What we have seen this past year in regard to temperatures was a complete reversal of last year," Arnold said.

In December of 1982, the average air temperature was 39 degrees with 2.5 inches of snow while this past

December the average temperature was 18 degrees and the average snowfall was 35.6 inches.

Lake Michigan plays a significant role in South Bend's weather, Arnold continued. Depending on wind direction much of the precipitation for this area is due to the lake effect. The relative difference in temperature between Lake Michigan and the atmosphere causes this phenomenon, he explained.

The month of December, 1983 will go into the record books as the coldest ever. "This was largely due to the jet stream bringing Arctic air across Siberia and Canada into the United States," Arnold continued. "This particular trajectory normally means cold weather. Now it has moved to the East hopefully resulting in a general warming trend."

Precipitation bands are sharper in winter with the result being heavy snowfall in comparison to light summer rains. "We receive twice as much snowfall as Indianapolis due to both Lake Michigan and common Northwest winds," added Channel 22 weekend meteorologist Tom Abell.

Housing contracts: signing away alcohol?

Notre Dame students who plan to live on campus next year must return their housing contracts to the Office of Student Residences by Thursday.

Because the University guarantees housing for all incoming freshman, the housing office must know how many current students plan to live in the dorms next year. Only then can they decide whether there is enough space, and what steps they should take if more space is needed.

Usually panic sets in around February and March when students request more housing than the University can provide. Talk of off-campus lotteries has become almost as much a part of spring as Bookstore Basketball and An Tostal. But this spring may be different.

Ever since rumors of a dry campus began to circulate, many students have considered moving off-campus. But many are in limbo, knowing that the University wants to do something next year, though no one is quite sure what.

The executive committee of the Board of Trustees will review the commission's report later this February. According to Father Beauchamp, they could take several actions — give their approval, tell the commission to start over again, leave the matter to the discretion of administrators or wait for the entire Board of Trustees to consider the matter.

But once again students have been put in an unfair position. To get a spot on campus next semester they must sign a contract and put $200 on the line. Those who plan to be resident assistants must swear allegiance to a policy which hasn't been formulated yet.

To be fair to those who have submitted contracts, the University should either delay implementation of the policy, or better, allow students to move off-campus without having to pay the $200 penalty.

Parental guilt and computer commercials

"For the first time in his life, he's struggling." So began a recent commercial for computers that proves nothing about the efficacy of computers and everything about the bad taste of the advertising industry.

Richard Cohen

The "he" is a boy of cosmic cuteness, standing perplexed before a blackboard doing math problems. He is looking downtrodden, glum, which, as far as I'm concerned, is the appropriate demeanor for math, and we are told what we can easily see: He is having a hard time at it.

The remedy? A computer, of course. He gets one and next we see a chortling, happy, well-adjusted kid, clearly on his way to success in math and everything else. He sits before a computer screen just rejoicing in how much fun awful arithmetic can be. The message? If you love your kid, you will get him or her a computer.

As commercials go, this was about as low as they get. It preys on parental guilt and the fear that the future will belong to those who are, as the expression goes, computer literate — surely a contradiction in terms.

As if to prove what happens, there was yet another commercial about a young man who prematurely returns from college, a flunk-out because he knew nothing about computers. He comes home by train, proving his ignorance is boundless.

The advertisers, as usual, have their fingers on the pulse of the public. Anxiety about computers turns up in just about every public-opinion poll or, for that matter, any conversation with a cab driver.

A Louis Harris poll, for instance, shows great apprehension about both computers and their adjunct, the robot. At the same time that the public welcomes these innovations, it recognizes that they mean a loss of jobs — some of them forever.

But if a columnist is entitled to a guess, there is another kind of anxiety fueling the computer boom and it has little to do with jobs. That anxiety is the one parents have for children who come home from school and find no adult there — or, almost worse, an adult so fagged out by a day at the office that he or she could just as well not be there.

What is most interesting about the commercial about the struggling kid is that neither when he stands perplexed before the blackboard nor when he sits before the computer is there an adult around — neither a parent nor a teacher. The kid is "struggling" in a world bereft of adults, a world in which adults are either too expensive (school) or too busy (home) to take time with him.

This computer then is nothing less than a baby-sitter cum tutor. It is an electronic pacifier that will help junior with his homework when both parents are either at work or too fatigued when at home to grapple with their child's homework. The anxiety that the computer alleviates has only partly to do with a child's learning difficulties. It also has to do with the trouble working parents have in finding time to deal with their child's difficulty.

If that is the case, then the computer will turn out to be nothing more than a gussied up

TV set. Time was when television was going to be the Great Teacher, when kids would be taught by it in the classroom and they would return home to even more instruction. Instead, they come home to soap operas; now a whole generation of kids know all there is to know about adultery — and little else.

A computer will not teach adultery, but there is little reason to think that by itself it will teach motivation or discipline. It will hardly sit the kid down and make him or her work and it will not dial the phone to call the office if junior decides his homework can wait, but the TV cannot. As wonderful as the tutorial programs are, they are no substitute for either teacher or parent — especially if the learning is coming hard.

So back to the kid in the commercial. Not for the last time in his life is he struggling — computer or no computer. In fact, we're all struggling — struggling both at our jobs and at parenting and knowing, sometimes reluctantly, that there really is a "device" for struggling children. Most homes and schools already have one. It's called an adult. It's programmed to teach.

Billy Sims' testimony continues

By MARTI AHERN
Associated Press

Billy Sims admitted yesterday that he wanted to help his friend and agent Jerry Argovitz build a football team, but said he signed with the United States Football League Houston Gamblers only because Argovitz lied to him.

Sims said in U.S. District Court he signed the Gamblers contract because he wanted to help Argovitz and because "I didn't want to go to a team that didn't want me."

Sims signed contracts last year with both the USFL expansion team and the National Football League Detroit Lions. He later sued the Gamblers and part-owner Argovitz on the grounds that Argovitz misrepresented him in both sets of contract negotiations.

When asked by Argovitz' attorney, Steve Susman, whether he felt his former agent "intentionally lied to you to get you to sign," Sims replied, "intentionally, yes."

Earlier in the trial, the running back testified that Argovitz had led him to believe contract talks with the Lions had ended before he signed with the Gamblers.

Sims said he felt his agent acted improperly "due to the fact that ongoing negotiations were going on with the Lions when I signed."

Argovitz was "not being fair with me from the beginning," Sims said.

Fencers are looking sharper all the time

By MICHAEL J. CHMIEL
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's and women's fencing teams improved their records as they went undefeated over the weekend in Columbus, Ohio.

The Irish men knocked off North Carolina State 23-4, Miami of Ohio 24-3, and highly touted North Carolina 18-9. The victories improved their record to 9-0 while extending their undefeated streak to 16 meets 16 meets going back to February 9, 1983, when they lost to Wayne State, 14-13.

"We're on a roll right now," explained Head Coach Mike DeCicco. "We picked up an impressive win over a strong North Carolina squad (and the team) is fencing with confidence."

The Irish sabre squad boosted its impressive record to 77-11 as they went 19-3 against the three teams. Junior captain Mike Janis (21-1 on the season) lost his first bout of the year against North Carolina while improving his lifetime record to 96-22 (fifth on the all-time Irish sabre squad list).

Sophomore John Edwards remained undefeated at 14-0 as he was 6-0 on Saturday, and sophomore Tony Consoli also was unbeaten over the weekend at 3-0 (16-2 on the season).

The epee squad full of youth and determination improved its season mark to a surprising 70-18 at Columbus. Junior captain Andy Quaroni (18-1 on the season) led the epeeists despite losing his first bout also to the Tarheels. He did improve his lifetime ledger to 81-15 (he is sixth on the all-time epee list). Also impressive was freshman John Haugh, 4-1 (12-1 on the season) and sophomore Brian St. Clair, 5-1 (14-5).

The foil squad led by freshman Charles Higgs-Coulthard, 7-0, and sophomore Mike Van der Velden, 4-2, improved its season record to 60-28. Higgs-Coulthard, who is 26-1 for the year, is undefeated in his last 24 bouts. Dave Router also went undefeated at 3-0 (11-6 on the season).

DeCicco is impressed with his team's effort this far but believes that his men must avoid a letdown as they are only halfway through their season.

The Irish ladies were also successful on Saturday as they lost only two bouts in downing North Carolina State, 14-2, and Miami of Ohio, 16-0.

"I was proud of the way the women responded after the heartbreaking loss to Wisconsin," explained DeCicco. "We were able to fence a lot of people (and) our depth may become a factor later this season."

Leading the way for the Irish was freshman Cindy Weeks who posted a spotless 5-0 (7-3 on the season). Janet Sullivan and Sharon DiNicola also posted solid victories of 3-0 and 2-0 respectively.

"Cindy (Weeks) really came through this weekend," said DeCicco. "Hopefully, her performance in Columbus will help build some confidence."

The Irish fencers will take their show back on the road on Saturday, February 4 when they travel to Angola where they will duel Tri-State, Wisconsin-Parkside, and Cleveland State.

Skaters arrive

Associated Press

An 18-member U.S. speed skating team flew into Sarajevo last night, the first American athletes to arrive for the XIV winter Olympics starting here next week.

Three members of the squad and the team's head coach, Dianne Holum, did not make it. They competed in the women's World All-around Championships in Deventer, Holland, during the weekend and failed to join the team as planned.

"I don't know if they're still in Amsterdam or if they got to Zagreb," said Bill Cushman, manager of the U.S. speed skating team, as the Americans checked into the Olympic Village.

Among the missing U.S. skaters was Mary Docter of Madison, Wis., who won a bronze medal in the 3,000 meters in Deventer but finished a lowly 10th overall.

Most of the U.S. team, including the women's sprint skaters, has been working out in Davos, Switzerland, before the Olympics.

Only three members on the team have skated here before, Danny Jansen of West Allis, Wis., and Dave Silk of Butte, Mont., and Jane Goldman of Glenview, Ill. They competed in the World Junior Championships last year.

All-Star Game is tonight in New Jersey

By BOB SANSEVERE
Associated Press

The National Hockey League plays a less than star-studded all-star game tonight night, with six big names out with injuries, and the biggest star of all — Wayne Gretzky — playing with a sore shoulder.

When the teams take the ice at the Brendan Byrne Arena, among the missing will be five high-scoring forwards — Mike Bossy and Bryan Trottier, maintays of the four-time NHL champion New York Islanders; Jari Kurri of the Edmonton Oilers, Tony Tanti of the Vancouver Canucks and Marcel Dionne of the Los Angeles Kings.

Goalie Al Jensen of the Washington Capitals also is sidelined with an injury.

Gretzky, far out in front of the NHL with 61 goals and 92 assists for 153 points, said yesterday that a sprained right shoulder had left him at "half-strength." But he said he would sit out the game only if the pain in his shoulder worsened during a practice session today with his Campbell Conference teammates.

"Of course, it's sore. But I can play. I'll be a bit more careful than usual," said Gretzky, who will serve as captain for the Campbell Conference squad.

Gretzky stopped short of blaming his shoulder for the end of his 51-game scoring streak, halted Saturday night by the Los Angeles Kings.

Gretzky was injured Jan. 21. Playing in his fifth All-Star Game at the age of 23, he triggered the Campbell Conference to a 9-3 victory in last year's All-Star Game by scoring four times in the third period.

Bossy and Trottier, ranked third and sixth among NHL scoring leaders and key figures in the Islanders' bid to capture their fifth straight Stanley Cup crown, both have knee injuries. Jensen, replaced by Glenn "Chico" Resch of the host New Jersey Devils, will join them on the Wales Conference casualty list.

The other absentees are from the Campbell. Kurri, the NHL's second-leading scorer behind teammate Gretzky, has a groin injury; Dionne has an ankle injury and Tanti cut his thumb in an accident last week at his home.

The Oilers, who have the NHL's best record, are represented by a league-high six players — gretzky, Messier, Coffey, Fuhr, Kevin Lowe and Glenn Anderson.

New Jersey Devil's goaltender Glenn Resch will be playing in front of a home crowd tonight when the NHL All-Star Game takes place. Six of the stars will be absent from the contest as the story on the left explains.

tant win, but she felt that this one was important for different reasons.

"This was a big win for us because it got us out of a rut," said the Irish coach. "It's a little early to say whether or not this victory will turn things around for us, but there were a lot of positive signs. We needed people to play well, to play hard, to produce a total team effort. We got that tonight."

Schueth, who like the rest of the team, is playing solidly of late, cited the team's progress as well.

"We're really starting to play well together," said the junior center. "It's too bad that it's this late in the season, but we've still got enough games left to win our conference (the Irish are currently in second place).

"It was important for us to avenge the earlier defeat to DePaul. Personally, I'm feeling more comfortable with my inside game, and I'm playing hard. The team is playing tough too, and everyone is feeling comfortable. We're staring to gell now."

Irish women solidly defeat rival DePaul

By LARRY BURKE
Sports Writer

Going into last night's game at the ACC, the Notre Dame women's basketball team had a lot in common with the Lady Blue Demons of DePaul. Both teams had records of 2-2 in the North Star Conference, and both were 7-10 overall. Both teams were also struggling to find a consistent winning combination.

There was, however, one major difference between the two teams. The difference was DePaul's 16-point victory the last time the two teams met on Jan. 21 in Chicago.

The Irish were out to even the score last night, and did just that, pulling away from De Paul in the second half to win by a 78-62 score.

"I definitely believe that we had a score to settle with DePaul," said Irish Coach Mary DiStanislaw. "I was pleased that the team felt that way also. I think we played better because of it."

Things started out slowly for the Irish, as they had trouble with a stingy DePaul defense. Notre Dame matched the Lady Blue Demons basket-for-basket until the seven-minute mark of the first half, when DePaul forwards Janine Douglas and Mary Lou O'Brien combined to score six straight points, giving the visitors a 25-19 lead.

DiStanislaw called for a timeout at that moment, and it proved to be the turning point of the game. The Irish stormed back with nine unanswered points (six by sophomore forward Trena Keys) to take a 28-25 lead. They never trailed again.

Notre Dame had a 34-30 lead at the half, but came out looking for more. Led by Keys' sharpshooting and the tough inside play of junior center Mary Beth Schueth, the Irish began to pull away, taking a 13-point lead midway through the second half.

"What we've needed all along is one or two dominant players, the kind that come through under pressure," said DiStanislaw. "Tonight we got that kind of performance. Trena knew it was on her shoulders, and she came through for us. The same goes for Mary Beth, who along with Lavetta (Willis) and Carrie (Bates), really controlled the boards."

In addition to the dominant play of leading scorers Keys (21 points) and Schueth (20 points), DiStanislaw had a lot more to be happy about.

"We got good perimeter shooting from Vonnie (Thompson) and Lynn (Ebben)," said the Irish coach. "Lynn also played very well defensively, and Vonnie is improving with every game, showing grace under pressure. Ruth (Kaiser) also played well for us."

DePaul was unable to rally in the second half, as the Irish took control at both ends of the court and won going away. Junior guard Laura Dougherty hit two free throws in the final minute to put the Irish up by 14. In the process, Dougherty added to her nation-leading foul shooting statistics that now read 41 for 43 (.953). Following a DePaul basket, Thompson and Bates each sank a pair of free throws to forge the final score.

DiStanislaw was hesitant to call the victory the biggest win of the season for the Irish, citing Notre Dame's 70-61 victory over UCLA as an impor-

SIU loses out

Fastest mile relay time disallowed

Associated Press

A world's-best indoor clocking in the mile relay cannot be recognized as either a world or American record, a spokesman for The Athletics Congress said yesterday.

The team of Perry Duncan, Tony Adams, Elvis Forde and Michael Franks was clocked at 3 minutes, 8.94 seconds during a triangular meet with host Indiana and Wisconsin at the IU fieldhouse on Saturday.

Although the Southern Illinois time is considered a world's best, it is not recognized as a world's record by the International Amateur Athletic Federation because of a great disparity in indoor tracks.

"It's almost like comparing apples and oranges," TAC spokesman Pete Cava said.

He also said the time "cannot be recognized as an American record because Forde (who is from Barbados) is a foreigner."

The quarter-mile splits on Indiana's regulation track were hand-clocked. Duncan was timed at 47.25, Adams at 48.49, Forde at 46.74 and Franks at 46.25.

Franks, who only began running the quarter-mile last summer, qualified for the NCAA finals last season and competed internationally for several U.S. amateur squads.

His progress, according to Coach Lew Hartzog, has been doubly impressive because SIU does not have an indoor track facility and the team does its training outdoors, even in the winter months.

The former world indoor best was 3:09.4 by the Pacific Coast Club at a meet in Pocatello, Idaho, on Feb. 27, 1971, according to Dave Johnson of Track and Field News.

Indiana won Saturday's meet with 65 points. Southern Illinois was second at 59.5, and Wisconsin was third at 36.5 points.

Notre Dame swimmers are successful out East

By MARY SIEGER
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's swim team returned to South Bend late yesterday afternoon with its season record slightly tarnished. The Irish moved from a perfect 4-0 record to a 5-1 mark after the team fell to Johns Hopkins University 69-44 and later defeated Georgetown University 70-35 this past weekend.

Two hours after the Irish arrived in Maryland on Friday, they found an extremely enthusiastic Johns Hopkins squad waiting for them. With more than 200 noisy fans watching the meet, Johns Hopkins took advantage of an early lead. "They out Irished us," explained junior Brian Casey.

Friday's meet saw several exciting and competitive races, but Johns Hopkins always managed to pull away from the Irish in the last half lap.

"We were stunned at first," said Casey. "They had a slight edge and they were a lot more enthused."

Although the Irish only won three first place finishes on Friday, the team did win several of second and third places.

"There were a number of good races and they're a good school academically," said Notre Dame head coach Dennis Stark. "But we didn't expect them to dominate the meet that much."

Judging from Johns Hopkins erratic performances earlier this season, the Irish didn't expect them to be as well prepared for Friday's meet as they were. "We really couldn't tell what we were getting into and we didn't expect them to be that psyched for us," said Casey.

According to Stark, Johns Hopkins saw Friday's meet as their chance to beat Notre Dame and was pointing their season to Friday's match since it was scheduled.

"One of the Johns Hopkins students pointed to our bus and said to his friend, 'this is THE Notre Dame,'" mused Stark.

In Saturday's competition against Georgetown, the Irish were looking for an opportunity to make up for the loss to Johns Hopkins and dominated most of the meet.

"We were a much fresher team against Georgetown because we had a night to rest before the meet," said Casey.

Depth was an important factor on Saturday and the meet gave some of the less experienced swimmers a chance to compete in a dual meet. "Everyone was able to pull through for the team on Saturday and it allowed the swimmers to swim different events," said Stark.

Junior diver Rich Yohon competed well in both meets this weekend and has shown improvement in recent meets. According to Casey, he has adequately adapted to his new role as Notre Dame's top diver.

"Rich had his best meet in two years at Johns Hopkins and has filled in and really came through for the team," said Casey.

Although the team is disappointed to see its record drop, the Irish still feel they have enjoyed an exceptional season so far and are optimistic about the future. Casey described the team's first loss of the season as "a lesson well learned - now we will always expect a strong meet."

Despite Notre Dame's loss to Johns Hopkins, Casey believed the weekend occurred during this meet.

"It was the first the team really came together, even though it was a little too late," he said.

This Saturday, the Irish will travel to Bowling Green, Ohio to face squads from Kalamazoo College and Bowling Green. Casey expects a tough meet against Bowling Green but thinks, "we should take them both."

Mark Benning, seen here scoring against St. Norberts, was part of a praiseworthy defense this weekend that lead the Irish in sweeping Iowa State. For more details, see John Mennell's story below.

'Underdog' Belles surprise DePauw

By KATHLEEN NICHOLSON
Sports Writer

Lefty Driesell and his Maryland Terps weren't the only team to be upset by the underdog in competition this past Saturday, as a spirited St. Mary's swim team travelled to DePauw University to teach its swimmers a few things about winning. The aggressive Belles defeated DePauw 74-65 in what has been the sweetest victory for the team this season.

At the meets conclusion, DePauw Coach Joe Condon summed things up best by saying, "St. Mary's has definitely taught us a lesson today."

The Belles not only taught their opponent DePauw the perils of under-estimating the competition, but they established themselves as a team with both strength and depth.

In the first event of the meet, the 200-yard medley relay, the Belles took a quick lead by placing first and second, while at the same time qualifying for Nationals in the event. The first place team comprised of Rosie Whalen, Gail Casey, Amy Studer and Ellen Byrne. The three talented women lead the rest of the team in individual success with a slew of victories.

Senior Whalen placed first in her specialties, the 50 and 100 back-strokes, qualifying for national competition in the latter event.

During the course of the meet, captain Casey added another three events to her list of national qualifications by placing first in the 50 and 100 freestyle and second in the 200 freestyle.

Sophomore Studer again showed her versatility and strength when she captured firsts in the 100 butterfly, breaststroke, and I.M. She qualified for national competition in the second two events.

Junior Byrne, the last member of the national bound relay, also anchored the second place 200 freestyle relay team.

Freshman diver Jennifer Hirschfeld captured two seconds in the diving events, smashing her own varsity record on the three meter and qualifying for nationals on the one-meter board.

Pleased with the team as a whole, Coach Trees commended the younger swimmers for their improvements over the season.

"Some of the best performances came from unexpected sources," he said.

These unexpected sources included newcomer diver MaryClare Sheerin who placed third on the one-meter board, as well as sophomore Jean Weigand who placed second and third in the 200 and 100 IM events, respectively.

Equally impressive were distance freestylers Julie Gschwind and Anne Cushing who placed second and third in the 500 freestyle.

Sprinter Joyce Murtagh placed third in the 50 freestyle and freshman Corrine Jackson took another third in the 50 breaststroke.

"Although these girls (the unexpected sources) don't receive much publicity, they sparked the team by greatly improving their times and touching out their heavily favored opponents," said Trees.

The team, more confident after their victory on Saturday, should be able to use their leftover energy and enthusiasm in the pursuit of their next opponent, Kalamazoo College, when they meet on Friday in Kalamazoo. Trees, confident with his new 3-2 record, will be sure not to underestimate his competition — something he has learned from experience — a good experience.

Hockey team nets two more victories

Notre Dame's hockey team has returned to its winning ways. The Irish bounced back from their loss to Lake Forest last week by defeating Iowa State 4-3 on Friday and 6-4 on Saturday.

The two victories in Ames, Iowa bring Notre Dame's record to 17-1-0 overall and 11-0-0 in the Central States Collegiate Hockey League.

On Friday night, the Irish jumped out to a 3-1 lead on goals by Bob Thebeau, Tony Bonadio, and Dave Waldbillig. Iowa St. came back to tie the game at 3-3.

In the third period, Adam Parsons scored the winning goal on a deflection.

"After getting home late on Wednesday night and driving for half of Thursday night, the kids played quite well," said to coach Charles "Lefty" Smith.

The travelling wasn't the only problem that the Irish had to overcome. According to many of the players, the conditions of the ice weren't up to par.

"We're used to fast and hard ice at the ACC," sophomore Mark Benning said. "The ice in Iowa was brutal. There was lots of snow on it, and chips and divets. It wasn't smooth at all."

Tim Lukenda protected the goal for the Irish collecting 24 saves and bringing his record to 10-1.

On Saturday, the Irish again got of to an early lead, this time 4-1 on goals by Brent Chapman, Mike Metzler, Joe Bowie and Tim Reilly. Iowa St. struck once more before Chapman and Bonadio had the last say for the Irish.

The puck got by Irish goalie Al Haverkamp two more times to end the game at 6-4. In all, Haverkamp collected 26 saves.

"The games had to be played on a private arena where they had some problems with the ice," Smith said. "Neither team could show its full capabilities."

"We had exceptional defense from Thebeau, Bonadio, and (Mark) Benning. They carried the full brunt of it."

Somebody had to pull the brunt of it. When captain Joe Bowie moved up to offense, the defensive corps was left with only five members — Rob Ricci and Greg Duncan adding to list Smith mentioned above.

"I guess we had to pull together, and we knew it," Bonadio said. "With the loss of Joe (Bowie) to the offense there were only five of us left. We knew we had to motivate, and we all did our part."

Next weekend, the Irish will have a home-and-home series with Marquette. The first game of the weekend is on Warrior territory at 8:30 p.m. Friday. The following day, the Irish return home for an afternoon game scheduled for 2:30 p.m. at the ACC.

Mary Beth Schueth, who poured in 20 points last night against De Paul, goes up for two in action earlier this season with Loyola. The Irish easily avenged an earlier defeat to the Lady Blue Demons last night. For more on the game, see Larry Burke's story on page 10.
