Healy and Lawrence ticket victorious in election

44 percent of students cast ballots yesterday; voter turnout proves the lowest in five years

By MARY CAROL CREADON
Senior Staff Reporter

Bill Healy and Duane Lawrence carried all but three dorms in yesterday's race for student body president and vice president, handily defeating the controversial ticket of Pat Browne and Joanie Cahill.

Healy and Lawrence received 1,796 votes, 55 percent of the votes cast. Browne and Cahill tallied 1,015 votes or 31 percent. The other 14 percent of the vote included write-ins and abstentions.

Voter turnout was the lowest in at least five years, totaling 44 percent, compared to a turnout of 55.1 percent last year.

Browne and Cahill received a total of 31 percent of the vote, carrying their home dorms of Stanford and Lyons in addition to Keenan Hall.

Healy and Lawrence generated overwhelming support from their own dorms, Dillon (194-5) and St. Edward's (190-18), respectively. They were also well represented in Flanner, Grace, and Pasquerilla East.

Healy was extremely happy with the results, saying he wasn't really sure which way the vote would go. Lawrence said he was "relieved" after hearing they had won. Healy said he was "thrilled to death about the senators who won" as well, and is confident that they will add much credibility to student government as well as being great for their districts.

In light of the recent controversy concerning OBUD's withdrawal and Student Senate's subsequent reinstatement of the Browne-Cahill candidacy, Healy said he would like to "leave it all behind now. The senate decided to throw it to the students and the students made their decision." Healy also said this will be the "last word I will say about anything that happened."

Healy and Lawrence agreed it will take some time to regain the students' confidence in the credibility of student government. They said this will require the help of all involved, including Browne and Cahill. "We want and need their help," Healy said.

Browne phoned Healy at the student government office and "made a very polite concession speech," said Healy. Both tickets met late last night.

Healy and Lawrence said, as they stated in their platform, they plan to place "much more stress on the HPC." Healy feels "the HPC deserves more credit than the Student Sen-

Landslide wins dominate in races for five positions in Student Senate

By MIRIAM HILL
Senior Staff Reporter

Landslide victories occurred in all five of yesterday's Student Senate races.

In District One (Alumni, Carroll, Holy Cross, Lewis, St. Ed's, Sorin, Walsh), Chris Abood easily defeated opponent K.M. Burke with a 70.6 percent share of the vote. "I'm happy about the victory. I'm looking forward to working with Bill (Healy) and Duane (Lawrence)."

K.C. Culum emerged victor in District Two (Cavanaugh, Breen-Phillips, Keenan, Stanford, Zahm, Farley), where he ran unopposed. Culum said he hopes to "promote unity on North Quad," which is the platform on which he ran. Regarding the recent problems in the Student Senate, Culum said, "Student government is going to come under a lot of scrutiny from the administration, but I think it's important we bury the wounds and go on."

In District Three (Badin, Dillon, Fisher, Howard, Lyons, Morrissey, Pangborn), John Ginty won the race against Tom Browne. Ginty said the new senators must "assess and decide what to do about the image of the Student Senate."

District Four (Flanner, Grace, Pasquerilla East, Pasquerilla West) was the only race with more than two candidates, and Flanner resident Steve Taeyerts defeated both Peter Blood and Michael Jaeger. "I'm really glad we were able to avoid a run-off. I'm grateful to everyone that helped me; I couldn't have done it without them."

Jim Hagan won the off-campus race against Race Thoman by garnering a 61.6 percent share of the vote. "I'm grateful that the students had confidence in my ability," Hagan said. In response to questions about the recent problems in the Student Senate, Hagan said, "It's unfortunate that we have to inherit the legacy of their mistakes. I plan to work within the Senate as well as outside of it as an advocate for off-campus students."

El Salvador's Duarte chosen as Commencement speaker

By KAREN MC CLOSKEY
News staff

Jose Napoleon Duarte, president of the Republic of El Salvador, has been chosen to address the graduates of Notre Dame at this year's commencement exercises.

Duarte will receive an honorary doctor of law degree when he attends the 140th commencement exercises in the Athletic and Convocation Center May 19.

A 1948 graduate of the University with a bachelor's degree in civil engineering, Duarte is the first civilian to be popularly elected to the presidency of El Salvador in more than fifty years. He is the first Notre Dame alumnus to become a head of state.

Duarte was invited to address the graduates by University President Father Theodore Hesburgh. After Duarte confirmed the invitation, the selection was presented to the Board of Trustees at its meeting this past weekend.

According to Hesburgh, "The board was very happy about it."

Asked why Duarte was chosen, Hesburgh remarked, "He was recommended by a wide variety of people at the University. He is the first Notre Dame man to be named head of state."

Officials at the University have planned to present Duarte with an honorary degree since his election in 1984.

Although the topic of Duarte's address has not been announced, Hesburgh commented, "Being a graduate, he knows what he will say to graduates."

Hesburgh added he may offer a few suggestions for the theme of the address.

Hesburgh first met Duarte in 1945 when Duarte and his brother Rolando were attending the University.

"(It was) the first class I taught in 1945," Hesburgh recalled. It was a "class on moral virtue, especially on social justice," Hesburgh said.

The last time that Duarte and Hesburgh met in person was in 1982. The occasion was the election of El Salvador's Constituent Assembly. Hesburgh was part of a Student Senate's elimination would be a service to ND

Congratulations to Chris Tayback, chairman of the Hall Presidents' Council, as well as to Junior Class President Rick Ruchlmann.

Both of these have at this writing resigned from the Student Senate; it is to be hoped that more will follow. These two became aware that the Student Senate is a pretentious farce; a farce which should be eliminated now, while its true character has been freshly revealed to the student body.

The fiascos of the past few days have not cost Notre Dame student government any credibility. It had none before they happened; at most, the latest "scandals," if they deserve such a word, only proved to the remaining doubters that student government is, as it currently exists, a farce.

Some good may yet come of this, however. Perhaps the inane events of the last few days will provide the spark needed to begin a long overdue restructuring of student government.

One of the main problems with student government is that it is too balkanized to be effective. There are five organizations which profess to represent students: the Student Senate, Hall Presidents' Council, Campus Life Council, Student Union Activities Board, and class officers.

Of these, only the CLC can pretend to have any power, since members of the administration are counted in its number. The HPC coordinates hall activities; the SUAB, campus-wide events; and elected class officers, activities for each graduating class.

The Student Senate overlaps these functions; it serves no useful purpose. It should be abolished.

Sure, the senate sets budgets for the Student Union, the Judicial Council, Ombudsman, and other organizations. Another body could do this just as well, or the administration could set the budgets. After all, no budget of which the administration disapproves will ever be allowed to pass that barrier.

The senators also sometimes plan morale-raising functions, such as picnics, in their districts. Additional student union commissioners responsible for each quad would carry out this function quite capably.

The only other purpose for the Student Senate is to perpetuate the myth that students have a voice in University policy. It looks good for the University to have student government; to be cynical about the whole thing, it allows them to dupe the students for a few years, until the students realize that the senate is permitted to have effect only when and how the administration wishes them to.

Tom Mowle

Assistant News Editor

Since there is another campus-wide elected body in existence, there is no point to having the Student Senate. The Hall Presidents' Council could do the same job, and do it better.

Hall presidents usually provide an appropriate representation of a dorm because most residents know the candidates and vote, not on popularity, but on how good a job they think he or she will do. A group of hall presidents is representative of the student body.

A district senator, on the other hand, is not very representative of a district. Dorm unity will pull for the candidate from a given dorm; the vivacity of the candidates nearly always wins in the neutral dorms. Rarely can ability be taken into account in the campaigning period.

The chairman of the HPC is the best representative for the students of Notre Dame. If a figurehead student body president is wanted as a coordinator between the remaining levels, he or she could still be of some minor use. Perhaps he or she could serve to communicate between student government and the administration. In any case, the elimination of the Student Senate would be a great service to the students of Notre Dame.

Council votes to keep senate seats, pushes for reconstruction instead

By DAN McCULLOUGH
News Editor

The three representatives to the Student Senate from the Hall Presidents' Council are staying.

HPC Chairman Chris Tayback's proposal to remove the HPC's representatives and to "take steps to encourage (the senate's) immediate disbandment and reorganization," was rejected by the council by a 6 to 15 vote, with one abstention and three absences.

The proposal would have removed the three remaining HPC representatives Kevin Howard (Keenan), Duane Lawrence (St. Edward's), and Joanie Cahill (Lyons) from the senate at least until the senate can be restructured.

Tayback resigned his position from the senate Monday.

The HPC decided instead to ask the senate for an explanation of its actions, and to attempt to work with the senate in reorganizing the senate's structure.

Tayback's proposal called the Student Senate's weekend decision to reinstate the student body presidential ticket of Pat Browne and Cahill, "irresponsible and unrepresentative of student sentiment." It continued that the HPC's representatives in the senate "legitimizes that body as representative."

The proposal said, "The recent actions of the senate have shown to us, beyond doubt, that this senate is not an effective student voice, and lead us to question whether a senate so comprised can ever be effective or representative."

In the discussion preceding the vote, Tayback said, "In interhall government we do a lot, we have a lot to say, and we have a lot of clout. I think we ought to take a stand on this right now."

But Scott Hardek, Flanner Hall president, disagreed. "I didn't become a hall president to get involved with campus politics altogether. It's a real lack of faith in Rob (Bertino, student body president) and Cathy (David, student body vice president), who have done a pretty good job. I don't think it's our place to decide the structure."

Howard said, "If (the student senate) voted the way they did because of alliances that's not a student representative, that's a personal representative. We are a much more representative body than the senate."

Dillon Hall President Bernie Pellegrino said a tension has developed between the senate and HPC, and passing such a proposal would hurt relations.

Lori Kluczyk, Badin Hall president, saw deeper problems with the senate. "The appeal showed that the structure worked, but I think it was inherently flawed. We could propose our own structuring. I do think we have something to say in opposition to the student senate."

Pellegrino, also the executive coordinator of the HPC, agreed to take Tayback's place on the senate, which meets next Monday.

"I don't agree with what the senate did this weekend," Pellegrino said. "But the HPC has voting interests. I've been to senate meetings and I don't think I'll have a problem with it."

ate" because "the way (the Student Senate) is set up, it doesn't represent the students themselves as much as it does organizations such as the Student Activities Board."

Healy said they will study Chris Tayback's plan to restructure the Student Senate. "The restructuring committee will be extremely important," Lawrence said.

Tayback said, "We think we'd make our point better if we restructure from the inside rather than the outside. The recent elections incident is the prod which will bring about this much-needed restructuring of the Student Senate."

He also added his seat as Hall Presidents' Council Chairman will be filled by Dillon Hall President Bernie Pellegrino. Tayback resigned from his position on Monday.

Concerning OBUD, Healy said "as we made very clear in our platform, we plan to work very closely with OBUD" to ensure their continual success as an organization. To avoid the problems which the Student Senate and OBUD encountered in this year's election, Healy said, "it will be necessary to start from scratch in establishing election rules."

Student Body Vice President and Co-Chairman of the Ad Hoc Committee Cathy David said the elections ran smoothly despite OBUD's refusal to run the elections.

Hesburgh helps with ND response

University President Father Theodore Hesburgh will join several noted professors from the University for a discussion of the bishops letter "Catholic Social Teaching and the U.S. Economy" tonight at 7:30 in the auditorium of the Center for Continuing Education.

Tonight's discussion will be part of an effort to develop an "official Notre Dame response" to the letter's first draft, said Mary Beth Wackowski, president of Omicron Delta Epsilon. The economics honor society is sponsoring the event.

"Bishop McManus told us he values Notre Dame's opinion because of its academic setting and its broad experience in each of the areas of the letter," said Wackowski.

Hesburgh will discuss the motives behind the bishops' statements, and Father Oliver Williams, associate professor of management, will address the theological aspects of the draft. Charles Craypo, chairman of the economics department, will discuss the problems of unemployment, and Professors James Rakowski and Ed Trubac also will participate. Management Professor John Houck will moderate.

commission which observed the elections.

"We walked into the boardroom," Hesburgh said. Duarte (turned to some associates) and said, 'There's the fellow who is responsible for all the trouble I'm in. He taught me about social justice and I took him seriously'."

Hesburgh recalls a time, in 1972, when Duarte's life was jeopardized by his political activities. Duarte was running for the presidency of El Salvador on a coalition ticket. The incumbent opponent was Colonel Arturo Armando Molina. When early election returns showed a Duarte lead, the military government imposed a news blackout. After the blackout was lifted, Molina was declared the winner of the election.

A few weeks later, some of Duarte's military supporters tried unsuccessfully to overthrow the Molina government. Duarte was arrested, thrown in jail, and, according to Hesburgh, "was promised a fair trial and to be shot in the morning."

At that point, Rolando Duarte telephoned Hesburgh with news of his brother's plight. "I pulled out all the stops," Hesburgh said, "Church, state, everything."

The intercession of international officials and the government of Venezuela saved Duarte's life. Even though he was tortured before being delivered over the Venezuelan border into exile.

"Look at his face," Hesburgh said. "You'll see where he was pistol whipped."

"He's a gutsy guy," Hesburgh remarked. "He went to talk to the guerrillas with no bodyguards. There were only girl scouts and boy scouts on the streets. It was a long way from the capital."

Hesburgh is confident about the selection for the 1985 commencement speaker.

"He's an ND guy who made good and is doing a good job."

Chernenko illness real, Soviet officials admit

Associated Press

MOSCOW - Soviet officials confirmed yesterday that President Konstantin Chernenko is ill and said he canceled a scheduled meeting with Greek Premier Andreas Papandreu, a Greek government spokesman said. Chernenko has not made a public appearance in nearly seven weeks.

A Soviet Foreign Ministry official said Chernenko, who came to power a year ago today after the death of Yuri Andropov, was out of town "on vacation" and that there would be no meeting.

Greek government spokesman Dimitrios Maroudas later told a news conference that a planned meeting yesterday between Papandreu and the 73-year-old Soviet leader had been canceled by Soviet officials who said Chernenko was sick.

"The planned meeting of the premier of Greece with the general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party could not take place due to the illness of Mr. Chernenko," Maroudas said.

He declined to say how much advance notice was given.

Asked if the delegation was given any details about Chernenko,

Maroudas said: "we have no such curiosity."

Earlier, the Foreign Ministry official told The Associated Press: "Mr. Chernenko is not in Moscow. He is in the country. He is on vacation."

Maroudas said, "These two things do not necessarily contradict each other. He could be ill and out of town at the same time."

Chernenko's health has been the subject of persistent speculation since he took office on Feb. 13, 1984, including reports that he has emphysema. He has displayed obvious breathing difficulties when speaking in public.

The official Soviet news media were silent yesterday about Chernenko's condition.

The lead item on the national evening news program "Vremya" (Time) was an announcement that a new book by Chernenko has been published in the Soviet Union.

The book "On the Way to Completing Developed Socialism," is a compilation of speeches and writings by the Soviet leader in 1984. A still picture of Chernenko sitting behind a desk was shown during the announcement.

Chernenko kept a busy public schedule until his last appearance during a televised awards ceremony Dec. 27.

What should you know about MS?

Special to The Observer

Multiple sclerosis is a neurological disease the cause of which is as yet undetermined. It attacks the myelin sheath, the coating or insulation around the message-carrying nerve fibers in the brain and spinal cord. Where myelin has been destroyed, it is replaced by plaques of hardened tissue (sclerosis); this occurs in multiple areas within the nervous system. At first, nerve impulses are transmitted with minor interruptions. Later, plaques may completely obstruct impulses along certain nerves.

MS varies tremendously from patient to patient in its symptoms, severity, and course. For many, it involves a series of attacks, or exacerbations, and partial or complete recoveries, or remissions.

Symptoms vary according to the area of the nervous system affected. Different people suffer different symptoms, which may include one or more of the following: weakness, tingling, numbness, impaired sensation, lack of coordination, disturbances in equilibrium, double vision, involuntary and rapid movement of the eyes (nystagmus), slurred speech, tremor, stiffness or spasticity, weakness of limbs, and in more severe cases paralysis of the extremities or impaired bladder and bowel function. Often these symptoms are accompanied or preceded by fatigue, which is frequently mistaken for laziness.

Approximately two-thirds of those who have MS experience their first symptoms between the ages of 20 and 40. Sometimes, however, the diagnosis is not made until a person is in his 40s or even 50s; frequently in these cases a detailed medical history reveals that symptoms did appear previously but that they were not long-lasting or bothersome enough to warrant medical attention and hence a diagnosis at the time.

MS is not a fatal disease. A 1971 study carried out by Dr. Alan K. Percy in Rochester, Minn., followed a group of MS patients for 25 years after diagnosis. At the end of this period, 74 percent of the group were still living, compared with an expected survival rate of 86 percent for the general population. The study demonstrated that life expectancy is reduced by no more than 15 percent.

No one can catch MS. Neither is it a hereditary disease. There are two groups of factors which influence whether or not a person develops it: environmental factors (such as a virus) and internal, or predisposing factors.

Unfortunately, medical science has not yet discovered how to alter the course of MS. But there are several methods of mitigating its effects. Patients are urged to maintain the best possible state of health and avoid infections. Occasionally medication is useful in easing some of the symptoms or curtailing a flare-up. Physical therapy is used to improve circulation or, after an acute episode, to help a patient overcome residual motor disability.

'Hill Street Blues' — The show of the '80s

Eric Bergamo
Television review

It is a little after ten o'clock on a Thursday evening as you put away your studies and head down to the TV lounge for a little television watching. You turn on the TV and Hugh Downs welcomes you to "20/20". Changing the channel to CBS, you see the panoramic landscape of "Knot's Landing". Once more you turn the knob to NBC. A garage door raises up. A siren wails as police cars emerge and accelerate quickly away. A familiar arrangement of notes are played in the background on a piano as the words "Hill Street Blues" flash on the screen. You sit down and watch, knowing that this was what you were looking for in the first place.

"Hill Street Blues" is a television show that comes along once in a long while. A show that changes the philosophy of network programming and earns for itself a position in video history. In the 1970's, the show that best filled these qualifications was "M.A.S.H." "Hill Street Blues" is the show of the 1980's.

Set in the inner-city desolation of an unnamed American metropolis, "Hill Street Blues" deals with the police officers who have to contend with the crime and decay of the ghetto. They do their job as best they can, only to make all too human mistakes and have those who they have apprehended slip through their fingers because of a legal loophole. It is chaos in this corner of the world known as the Hill Street precinct. A realistic chaos that television has never seen before.

Steven Bochco, the executive producer of the NBC hit, has a talent for utilizing what he has on hand to develop the best show he can — every show. He asks for the best from his actors and writers and gets it from them. Bochco concocts a delicate blend of serious drama and light humor from the scripts, not trying to place the show into a heavy handed position where only the drama controls the tempo of the show. Bochco has the unique perception of knowing where to put the humor, while not disrupting the show's flow.

What sets "Hill Street Blues" apart from other shows of the police drama genre is that it breaks away from the "perfect cop" syndrome that afflicted police shows of the seventies. It isn't afraid to show that officers at the Hill Street precinct are human, making errors that "perfect screen cops" of the seventies never made. If someone would forget to read the Miranda Code to a suspect or use unnecessary force in apprehending a criminal, the "Hill Street" cops pay for their mistakes when they watch the criminal walked free through the cracks in the judicial system.

Daniel J. Travanti

Their faults carry over into their personal lives, showing that they are not pillars of perfection on or off the job. The Hill Street Blues actors help to reinforce the image of faulted enforcers of the law.

There are sixteen principle characters on every episode of "Hill Street Blues". Each actor is talented and skilled at his craft, and handles his character in such a way that the audience cares what happens to him week in and week out. Each character's feelings, fears and hopes can be traced and plotted by the audience. The viewer shares in the precinct camaraderie and tragedy.

In very simple words, "Hill Street Blues" is a drama about people, not about police work. It is about people like you and me and what happens to them on and off the job.

Of all the actors, Daniel J. Travanti shines in his role as Captain Frank Furillo. An unknown before "Hill Street Blues", he has now become a household name because of the series. Travanti portrays Furillo as he should, a calm man who is able to rise to the rigors of his position if the need be. If the rest of the station house is plunging into anarchy, Travanti's Furillo is the only sane voice in the din. His quiet strength commands the screen whenever he is on.

The rest of the supporting cast does its job well, using their craft to portray their characters to the fullest. Hats off to Bruce Weitz, Michael Warren, Robert Prosky, Charles Haid, Betty Thomas, Taurean Blaque, Kiel Martin, Veronica Hamel, Ken Olin, James B. Sikking, Joe Spano, Barbara Bosson, Ed Marinaro, Robert Hirschfeld, and Mimi Kuzky. The ensemble cast of "Hill Street Blues" is the best on television today.

NBC has to be congratulated for standing by "Hill Street Blues" during the show's first season when the ratings were less than encouraging. The show was a critical success, but up against ABC's escapist fare of "The Love Boat" it was a ratings failure. Still, NBC knew that it had a winner on its hands and stayed with it. Then came the time for the Emmy awards and the moment of NBC's vindication as "Hill Street Blues" walked away with eight of the coveted awards, including best drama and best actor in a drama series to Daniel J. Travanti.

The next season NBC moved "Hill Street Blues" to Thursdays at ten. The rest, is television history. NBC is not afraid to produce excellent drama that strikes our nerves and our hearts. ABC and CBS can only stick to formulas tried and true while NBC takes the chances. "Hill Street Blues" is a chance that succeeded.

"Hill Street Blues" is what television programming was meant to be and should be. Not dealing with things, such as money on shows like "Dynasty" or "Dallas", but with people and how they react to the situations around them. A show where all involved work to produce the best that can be made. A show that makes us laugh, cry, and feel with the characters on the screen. An event of which we never tire.

'Consenting Adult' deals with a reality

One can usually count on the first month of a semester to be relatively laid back. Lengthy papers haven't been started yet and most students haven't had to face a major exam. This leaves time for such frivolity as watching television. The following is a hypothetical conversation between two roommates with nothing better to do on the first Monday evening of February except watch the tube:

Domer 1: What do you want to watch?
Domer 2: Don't know. Turn it on, buddy.
It's about 9 p.m. and on the screen appears the following warning:
The following program deals with mature subject matter. It is the story of a young man who informs his family that he is homosexual, and details his family's reactions. Parental discretion is advised.
Domer 2: Want to watch it? (Pause) Might be good for a laugh or two.
Domer 1: Nab. There's bound to be something better on. I get tired of hearing about these gays. Nobody I know is gay anyhow.

The Gay Society of Notre Dame & Saint Mary's

guest column

It would be interesting to know how many viewers at Notre Dame and across the United States were participants in a similar conversation when ABC aired "Consenting Adult" on Monday, Feb. 4. Those who switched channels missed an eloquent, sensitive, moving, and masterfully acted program; but worse, they missed an extraordinary educational opportunity.

Not that the film dealt with the causality of homosexuality, which remains largely unknown. The film neatly skirted both the etiology of homosexuality and the issue of its morality.

Instead, the film dealt with how Jeff Lynn, the epitome of an all-American college male (a pre-med major, swimming star; he could easily have been a Domer!), comes to grips with being gay and how his parents, family, and college roommate handle this revelation. The film treated what is for many Americans, a threatening and disturbing topic with candor and perceptivity without resorting to stereotypes and sensationalism. This, in itself, made for worthwhile viewing.

For students who didn't switch to another channel, the film could have been a healthy experience as it brought to the surface a subject which is on the minds of many, but which remains buried under layers of fear and anxiety. This fear, almost tangible at times, seems especially evident at Notre Dame with its strong residential character. It is a fear which usually only gains release in crude jokes and put-downs or in one's dreams. It is a fear of being suspected to be gay and, for some, it is a fear of actually being gay.

Jeff Lynn realized that he had always been gay. It wasn't just a phase he was passing through or some "disease" he caught at college that could be cured.

He remained the same person that his parents had always loved - honest, bright, compassionate, moral - and the revelation of his gayness didn't change who he was. Yet his parents, and especially his father, were so burdened with the stereotypes and prejudices common about gays that they initially shut out their only son. Faced with a real, live homosexual and not a mere objectification, but the reality of having a gay son, his parents painfully disengaged themselves of their disgust and moral condemnations, realizing that their son merited none of these.

Jeff's roommate and parents were entirely unprepared to deal with his homosexuality in any manner other than one fed by ignorance and fear. And this is where the educational value of the film lies: it vividly portrays the agony that results from ignorance and we can all learn from this.

It may come as a surprise to some, but even good Catholic families sometimes wind up with gay children. Many graduates of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's will themselves have sons and daughters who, through no one's fault, will turn out to be gay.

It might be a good idea once in a while to imagine what you would do if you discovered your own child to be gay. Would you act out of ignorance and help your child to hate himself/herself? Or would you help your child to accept himself/herself as a graced individual and to realize his/her human potential to the fullest? If you answered the first question affirmatively, perhaps you ought to consider celibacy. If you answered yes to the second question, you are not far from the Kingdom.

The Gay Society of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's encourages members of the Notre Dame community to learn more about sexuality. Those interested may call Counsellor Monday through Friday between 4 p.m. and midnight and ask for tapes 20 and 21. The Counsellor number is 239-7793. Information about the Society can be obtained by writing: GSND-SMC, P.O. Box 194, Notre Dame, Indiana 46556.

The history of the Palestinian problem

Despite the fact that many books, thick and thin, have been written and published on the title subject during the last 60 years or so and that many divergent views have been presented, I shall try hereby to limit, within my modest abilities, my treatise to the very essentials as I see and understand them. My parents are both from Nazareth, which is situated to the north of Palestine, and I was born in Bethlehem, which is a little south of Jerusalem. I lived for nineteen years in Jerusalem before coming to the United States two and a half years ago.

Mansour Eid

An impartial study of books written about the Palestine problem by both Arabs and Zionists will necessarily yield one common fact which is indisputable, namely that the Zionist enterprise was undertaken with the view of establishing in Palestine a new national entity which, because of its very character, necessarily had to replace the then native Palestinian society comprising a Moslem majority and the rather small minorities of Christians, Druse and non-Zionist Jews.

After 1948-49, the seriously weakened Palestinians lost those parts of the country which formed its economic backbone. The remaining areas were flooded with some half a million refugees. To boot, both the Jordanian and the Egyptian authorities suing in what remained of Palestine suppressed both local leadership and any attempts at establishing new industries. These steps turned the Palestinians into depression and drove the better elements of its population out of the country.

As a result of the 1967 invasion/occupation, whatever remained of Palestine fell to the strengthened and developed Zionist entity - The State of Israel. This entity aimed at reducing the lower classes of Palestine - those living in the pre-1967 Israel and in the newly occupied territories - to a dispossessed mass of unskilled laborers.

At this moment Palestine is ruled by a Jewish majority forming the internationally recognized entity called the State of Israel, which has at its disposal a war machine which is absolutely sufficient for the task of ruling over those Palestinian inhabitants who, as a minority, still live within the country's boundaries. To further our understanding of the problem, we have to define the Palestinians. They are the occupants of that land - they have been there since the rise of civilization. They are often referred to by western media as "Palestinian terrorists," but a question arises in my mind here which is, "Do we believe everything we read in papers, or hear through radio or television?" The Palestinians have been uprooted from their homeland and scattered around the world, mostly in refugee camps in neighboring Arab countries, some under Israeli occupation and others in Europe and the United States. They are named after the land where Jesus preached brotherly love. The majority can be considered as exiles for they have spent the last four decades trying to come back to their beloved homeland, but in vain.

Israelis believe that if the Palestinians are to come back, they (the Palestinians) will throw all the Jews in the sea. From an Israeli's point of view there is always the possibility of a re-occurrence of the holocaust. So they have to fight all the possibilities of such a thing reoccurring.

The Palestinians, on the other hand, are still struggling for their rights - for the right to their land as well as for their civil and human rights. They believe that injustice exists in this world because their rights are not given to them. They have been very tolerant and patient. They have waited for a peaceful solution for a long time but, alas, none has shown up yet. As a result, the Palestinians have resorted to violence in some instances, in situations where any other nation would have done the same - even Americans, if put under similar circumstances, such as Soviet occupation. The Afghans did not take more than one hour to call for revolution against Soviet occupation.

Hatred is planted in the heart of every Palestinian and every Israeli. This hatred has become almost innate. Coupled with such beliefs and the mutual hatred existing, there is no possibility for ending this conflict. Neither side shows any sign of hope that peace will grow over hatred. The end to this conflict is only a dream, as long as there is no Palestinian State and the existence of an Israeli State. It is a beautiful dream, and if we can live it, then it becomes reality. In closing, I must ask, "How can we attain that dream?"

Clergy have responsibility to speak on issues

The question of the political role of the clergy is a prominent one, receiving much media coverage and attention in public debate. By way of an open response to Bishop McManus' request for input on this question, I would like to add to the confusion my opinion that religious leaders not only have the option but the responsibility to speak out on certain issues that some may consider beyond their religious authority. While this may seem a banal observation, I will try to make a case for it nevertheless.

Although it may at first seem that religious leaders' primary responsibility should be only to the spiritual well-being of their followers, further consideration should show the importance of attention to the physical needs of the faithful as well. Material conditions will often have a great impact on people's spiritual lives. On the network news last week, a missionary who had spent over twenty years working with the poor in Peru observed that he was so active in the mundane life of the community because it was hard for him to open a soul that had to carry an empty stomach. Clerics in Latin America, Africa, Asia, the Pope's homeland and the United States have recognized a similar necessity.

Because clerics have chosen to lead others they must bear some responsibility for the effects of their leadership. In this light, neglecting earthly concerns to preach only eternal salvation does not appear so admirable as it may in the biographies of the saints. Looking exclusively to the heavens has the real effect of a tacit endorsement of the status quo, regardless of whether this is intended or not. In many areas, the faithful lack the awareness to see that many material conditions are within the range of man's feeble power. Implying these people to look beyond all else to their eternal reward inhibits the growth of this awareness, and can stunt spiritual growth as well. They are left to resign themselves to enduring their "God-given" fate. Certainly this type of "apolitical" worldview has political ramifications.

Finally, there is the question of whether the religious and political realms can be, or ought to be, separated. The separation of church and state in our system is mainly a nominal one, to allow for the presence of several different religions but not the preclusion of religiously motivated viewpoints. To some extent, practically any action or viewpoint on earthly matters will have some political aspects. The political or "public" sphere can be considered to encompass any actions or opinions put forth in public, and increasingly in private, and so also includes religiously based actions and opinions. Religiously motivated actions and opinions will either agree with or propose alternatives to other political interests and viewpoints.

Problems arise in trying to delineate separate realms for religion and politics. For example, such unimpeachable guidelines for action as the corporal works of mercy can take on very political overtones. In many areas of the world, just to call for, let alone provide, food for the hungry and clothing for the naked is an explosive and dangerous act, and one that certain elements would consider "subversive". In the United States, simply to recognize the presence of great numbers of homeless and hungry people in our cities and rural areas carries a high political charge.

This difficulty in classifying issues raises serious questions. For instance, what are the politics involved in approving of clerical involvement in Polish problems, but not in Latin America? Why would some Catholics who would not hesitate to cite Church statements to back up their stand on abortion not only refuse to accept the American Bishops' pronouncements on nuclear arms and economics, but condemn them for overstepping their "bounds"? It would seem that in these cases people follow the Church's statements not because of its authority, but because of their agreement with such statements. They are using their own judgement concerning these positions which are not dogma. It is my contention that most people in this country and elsewhere make political choices regarding religious issues that have political implications.

With the realization that they do make political choices concerning the suggestions of their religious leaders, people should not try to restrict these leaders from promulgating the recommendations of their faith. For their part, the clergy must not hesitate to preach the dictates of their consciences, because to refrain out of political considerations is also a political choice. In this way, religious leaders can try to tend to the causes of much suffering and injustice, instead of treating only the symptoms.

Some in government will still do their work

Dear Editor:

In their zeal to 'do the right thing' several student government members have resigned in what they seem to think is some type of noble protest over the Brown/Cahill reinstatement. The people who remain in student government are those individuals who have the energy and backbone to put the issue into perspective and prevent the reoccurrence of such a confused, unfair, and unfortunate event. Those who resigned have let the issue control them.

I am the student government Executive Coordinator in charge of special projects and a participant in Student Senate. With the help of my commissioners, I will continue to work on projects such as a proposal to build senior townhouses, Adopt-a-Transfer, Freshman and Transfer Orientation, the M.S. drive and most importantly, the committee to restructure student government. I feel that the projects I have participated in are too important to be side-tracked by a single issue.

Armed security are not needed at dinner

Dear Editor:

I was greatly impressed by something that I saw in the dining hall Saturday night. Stationed at the entrance was an armed security guard. A backup was poised near the dirty dish conveyor belt. The guard near the door had a revolver and ten extra rounds of ammunition strapped to a holster. I asked what the heavy security was for, and the guard said that things could get out of hand due to the basketball game that day.

All I could think was "Dammit, it's about time." I am so sick and tired of people throwing food, smashing glasses, and cutting in line at that dining hall! Maybe now there will be some law and order.

If someone throws food, the guards should give them a crack in the head with one of the long-handled flashlights they carry. When some obnoxious student/punk vandalizes Notre Dame property or tries to slither out with an extra peanut butter sandwich stuffed up his shirt, he should be shot right there on the spot! If the sheer number of rebels and pranksters should intimidate the guards, well that is where those extra bullets would come in handy.

Despicable behavior should be met with brute force in all aspects of campus life. People who elbow others out of the way on the way to class should be shot in the back

Those who insist on clogging traffic by jogging on roads rather than the sidewalks provided should be run over, if at all possible. A Bernard Goetz-style shooting on the shuttle would put an end once and for all to the rude freshmen and to those who smoke directly under the "No Smoking" signs.

I hope that the security guards in the dining hall are a sign of better things to come.

Vote on Browne hurts instead of helps

Dear Editor:

The action taken by our present student body representatives - voting to ostracize student body presidential candidate Pat Browne from the SBP elections - hurts the students instead of helping. The proud weeders of corruption allowed Browne to remain in the SBP campaign race however, they forced him to refrain from further campaigning.

These people in our student government of which I speak, made a grave error when they voted to cease the further hanging of posters and campaigning for Browne. They in effect sent a message to the students by taking autonomous action on an issue which will effect us in the near future.

It is of grave importance that we be given a competitive election. If we want to make an attempt to practice politics in this small polity called Notre Dame, we must not penalize a candidate too seriously to effect the normal flow of democratic ideals which the SBP elections seek to obtain.

The legality of Browne's action must not effect the students' right to enjoy a hard fought campaign where the victor will have legitimately won on the political issues themselves - that of providing Notre Dame a better place for students to co-exist.

Robert's ridicule of Ruppe was wrong

Dear Editor:

I disagree with Theron Robert's description of Loret Ruppe as unsuitable and disappointing. Loret Ruppe satisfied Father Hesburgh's criteria for selecting a commencement speaker. She was memorable and motivating.

I find fault with Robert's criticism of Ruppe because of the controversy surrounding her selection. Controversy is not adversely related to personal greatness, I can easily remember the controversy and student protest surrounding Ronald Reagan's selection in 1981. If Ronald Reagan can be controversial and a great speaker, than Loret Ruppe can be controversial and a great speaker also.

Loret Ruppe has connections with Notre Dame. Her great grandfather, grandfather, father and brother attended Notre Dame. (Loret's grandfather was Fred Miller, the all-American and captain of the football team that won one for the Gipper.)

Loret Ruppe's point of view interested the students. She talked about the many Notre Dame alumni who volunteered their services to other nations. She discussed the Peace Corps' work in the world today. Loret Ruppe challenged each member of the Class of 1984 to work for world peace through their jobs, in their communities, in the United States and abroad.

Loret Ruppe's name is not known in every household. The media rarely focuses attention on the director of the Peace Corps. Yet, Loret Ruppe will remain an exceptional person.

I would like to thank Father Hesburgh for selecting such a great person to speak at my undergraduate commencement. I hope he chooses someone as suitable as Loret Ruppe for the commencement of 1985.

The real message was 'go Notre Dame'

Dear Editor:

Do you know what I hate? I hate it when people get mad at students for booing opposing teams. Just when you think you are helping your own team, someone has to go and tell you that you are "reprehensible." Boy, I hate it when that happens.

Unlike Sister Maurita, who found the behavior of the students nothing short of praiseworthy. I believe that the uproar which lasted from the pre-game warm-ups to the final buzzer not only helped to raise the level of excitement in the ACC, but also the level of play.

In response to the charge that the students' behavior was reprehensible because we booed, I say, lighten up Sister. I am positive that none of the Notre Dame students had anything personal against any of the DePaul players. It simply comes down to the fact that the students, as fans, have a responsibility to do anything, within limits, that might cause an opposing player to be nervous, to miss a shot or to throw an errant pass. In short, to inform other teams that it will be no easy task to win a basketball game in the ACC.

Once again, I think the student body should be congratulated for a job well done at the DePaul game. They were loud, they were rowdy and they stayed within the limits of acceptable fan behavior. Keep it up, everybody! And GO IRISH!

People should give even without a return

Dear Editor:

In "Letters to a Lonely God" (2/8/85), Father Griffin has missed one of the fundamental messages of Christianity. One is not to be tolerant, considerate, kind, and loving towards others only in return for tolerance, consideration, kindness, and love; rather, one must give of oneself regardless of whether one receives similar treatment in return. One does not even have to be a Christian to see the fundamental right-headedness of Matt 5:46, "For if you love those who love you, what reward have you? Do not even the tax collectors do the same?", or Luke 6:35, "Do good, and lend, expecting nothing in return."

Generously, Father Griffin has offered to stop clouding the world with smoke and pitching his butts on the grass provided that we stop burning rubber and make an effort to flush after using public restrooms. Doing a good deed in return for a good deed is not what makes this world a better place in which to live. Certainly, our world needs tolerance and love, as Father Griffin suggests, but it should be an unconditional tolerance and love.

I know that I will continue to try (and no doubt sometimes fail) to be kind, tolerant, and loving towards others and to flush public toilets, even if he and other smokers continue to cloud the air, make my clothes smell like an ashtray, and damage my lungs.

Government appalling because of broken rules

Dear Editor:

The events involving student government over the last few days have been appalling. What we have on our hands is a clear-cut case of blatant rule breaking by someone seeking the highest office representing the student body. Despite claims by Browne and Cahill, their unfortunate actions in question were not simply the result of a "moment's ignorance;" the facts are too obvious to avoid concluding otherwise.

Without question, Browne and Cahill should have been thrown out of the race. To allow such a ticket, sunk as it is in cement of deceit and vice, to remain in the running for any office is to make a mockery of our favorite democratic principles. Chris Tayback, Rick Ruehlmann and Ray Wise, congratulations on letting your conscience be your guide. Rob Bertino et. al., shame on you for legitimizing the debased conduct of the Browne-Cahill ticket.

St. John's beats Lions

Associated Press
NEW YORK - Chris Mullin and Walter Berry scored 14 points each as top-ranked St. John's broke loose in the second half and extended its winning streak to 15 games with a 68-49 college basketball victory over Columbia Tuesday night.

The Redmen, with the longest winning streak in Division I, raised their record to 20-1, while the Lions fell to 7-11.

St. John's shot out to a 26-8 lead with Mullin and Berry totaling 14 points between them, but the Lions, using a deliberate offense and having no player taller than 6-foot-4, out-scored the Redmen 14-4 over the last 7:18 and only trailed by 30-22 at intermission.

Mike Moses added 10 points and center Bill Wennington nine for the Redmen, while Mark Murphy and Mark Settles each scored 12 for the Lions, who suffered their third straight loss.

Wales Conference beats Campbell Conference in NHL All-Star Game

Associated Press

CALGARY, Alberta - Pittsburgh's Mario Lemieux, the National Hockey League's top draft pick last summer and leading rookie scorer, collected two goals and an assist Tuesday night to lead the Prince of Wales Conference to a 6-4 victory over the Clarence Campbell Conference in the 37th All-Star Game.

Lemieux, the most touted rookie to enter the league in more than a decade, was named the game's most valuable player.

He had given the Wales a 4-2 lead at 17:47 of the second period after taking a pretty pass from fellow rookie Kirk Muller of the New Jersey Devils and slipping a wrist shot past goalie Grant Fuhr.

Just four minutes before Lemieux's first goal, Anders Hedberg of the New York Rangers had broken a 2-2 tie.

Hedberg, at 33 the oldest player in the game and in his final NHL season, took a pass from Lemieux and sent home a backhander from the slot. It was Hedberg's first NHL all-Star game.

The Wales Conference got off to a quick start, scoring twice in the first 5:31.

Hartford's Ron Francis put in a 10-foot backhander from the slot just 1:40 into the contest. Philadelphia's Tim Kerr, who set up Francis' goal, made it 2-0.

But the Campbells, who have won just two of 10 games under the present format, rallied on goals by Marcel Dionne and Miro Frycer.

Dionne, the Los Angeles Kings' center appearing in his eighth All-Star game, had his 35-foot wrist shot deflect off the glove of Wales defenseman Mike Ramsey and into the net just 62 seconds after Kerr's goal.

Frycer, a Czechoslovakian native who plays for Toronto, zipped a 25-foot wrist shot past goalie Tom Barasso after taking the puck off Lemieux's stick at 16:55.

NHL scoring king Wayne Gretzky lifted the Campbells within 4-3 with his seventh All-Star goal at 10:09 of the third period. Edmonton's Mike Krushelnyski stole the puck from defenseman Scott Stevens and fed Gretzky in the slot, where the Oilers' star center put a wrist shot past goalie Pelle Lindbergh.

Exactly one minute later, Lemieux skated around Winnipeg's Paul MacLean and banked a short wrist shot off Fuhr and into the net. Boston's Ray Bourque picked up his third assist of the game on Lemieux's clinching goal. Bourque added a fourth assist later in the game.

Krushelnyski, who had three assists, set up Randy Carlyle in the slot for the Campbell's fourth goal with 2:51 remaining.

With just nine seconds to go, Washington's Mike Gartner scored into an empty net on a feed from Bourque.

impressive is her 60-percent field-goal percentage. Forward Pam Timmerman and backup center DeeDee Davis also will see a good amount of playing time.

As a team, the Tide has taken advantage of its good 48-percent shooting to outscore its opponents by an average of 11 points per game. However, Alabama has been less than impressive from the foul line, dropping only 64 percent of its free throws. In close games, the latter figure has proven costly.

"They're going to throw a lot of players at us," says DiStanislaw. "They like the up-tempo, so they'll play tough perimeter defense and look to push the ball up the floor on offense."

The keys for us will be stopping their transition game and controlling the boards, but it's going to take some intelligent defense. We're going to have to get good position and take advantage of it. I feel, though, that we're going down there in good shape to win the game. They might be a little quicker, but we can match up pretty well with them."

As usual, the Irish will be looking for forward Trena Keys to carry a large share of the offense. The 6-0 junior set a school record Saturday in Notre Dame's 107-61 rout of Xavier when she scored in double figures for the 11th straight game. Her 53 points in two North Star games last week earned her a share of the conference's player of the week award.

Maybe even more important for the Irish, though, will be the play of center Sandy Botham, who will have the unenviable task of trying to stop Smith. The 6-2 freshman has been very impressive in recent weeks and DiStanislaw is confident that she will be up to the task.

But whether or not the team will be up to the task, the outcome of the game is of secondary importance to the Irish. Notre Dame finds itself in a good position in the conference, a half-game behind leader Dayton. The Irish season will be made or broken by the remaining conference games, the next of which will be Sunday when Detroit visits the ACC at 2 p.m.

Men's interhall basketball season ends; Sorin finishes up undefeated

By JERRY MELIA
Sports Writer

The men's interhall basketball 'A' league wrapped up its regular season Monday night when Flanner beat Zahm 48-40 in the ACC division. This game was of great consequence to the final divisional standings. Flanner won the division with a 6-1 record while Zahm's defeat knocked it out of playoff participation. Dillon was the other team in this division to advance with a record of 5-2.

In the Big Ten division, Morrissey and Grace both will see post-season action after compiling 6-1 records. However, Morrissey finished as the divisional winner, since it defeated Grace during the regular season. Both teams are strong and will definitely make some noise in the playoffs.

The Pac Ten division featured the only undefeated team in the entire league. Sorin, with a 7-0 record, undoubtedly is the favorite to win the championship as a result of its regular season excellence. St. Ed's was the other team to advance to the post-season from this division, losing only once in seven outings. This loss came at the hands of Sorin.

The playoffs are conducted as follows. The top two teams from each division make the playoffs. The teams are then seeded, with the top two teams receiving a first-round bye in the double elimination format. The remaining four teams clash according to the seeding, and both winners' and losers' brackets brackets are developed. The games are arranged in such a way that the same teams will not meet twice unless they are both competing in the finals.

The team that emerges from the loser's bracket into the finals is at a disadvantage because it must defeat the winner from the winners' bracket twice in order to gain the championship title.

The system for seeding the teams has not yet been determined. Sorin almost has a lock at the top seed because of its undefeated regular season record. However, difficulty will come in seeding the remaining teams, because of the fact that four teams have only one loss.

This year's tournament should prove to be rather exciting with the caliber of teams that are competing. All of the "patsy" games are over and it is time to see what team is best prepared to handle the best competition in the league. The team that is best able to meet this challenge will be the 1985 champion of the men's interhall basketball league.

Will be done at random

British will implement drug testing

Associated Press

LONDON - The British Amateur Athletic Board will implement one of the world's strictest anti-drug policies - random tests for track-and-field athletes that could disqualify anyone refusing to take them from representing Britain in international competition.

"We would like to think Britain is taking a fresh lead in the field of drug abuse and that other nations will follow suit," board Secretary Neil Cooper said Tuesday. "If they do not, our athletes could be at a disadvantage."

British athletes hoping to compete internationally, including at Olympic Games and world championships, will be asked to sign a special register pledging their willingness to be tested for drugs - at any time of the year.

"If they do not sign, then they will not be invited to represent Britain in our sport," said Cooper.

Although more than 20 sports in Britain are subject to year-round testing, checks in track and field have been confined to competitive events, meaning that athletes who use drugs out-of-season or in training theoretically can manipulate their intake to avoid detection.

The U.S. Olympic Committee requires that anyone representing the United States in the Olympics, the Pan American Games or the World University Games has to pass a mandatory drug test. Some U.S. federations require drug testing of athletes at national championships. But the U.S. athletes know when the blood samples will be taken and by whom.

Irish hope for strong performance tonight against visiting Privateers

By ERIC SCHEUERMANN
Sports Writer

There has been a great deal of talk this week about the upcoming Notre Dame men's basketball game against Duke on Saturday at the Meadowlands. But before the Irish can concentrate on the Blue Devils, they must face the Privateers of the University of New Orleans in a game tonight at 7:00 at the ACC.

Since New Orleans owns a record of just 9-16 after Monday's 93-76 victory over Pan American, there is a great tendency to take tonight's game for granted and simply add another victory to the year's total.

But this Privateer squad has talent which the Irish cannot afford to overlook.

Heading the list is 6-8 center-forward John Harris. The 250-pound senior currently is averaging 20.1 points and 9.9 rebounds per game, leading the team in both categories. Harris possesses a strong inside game and a soft shooting touch out to 15 feet.

Six-five senior Robert Johnson helps Harris out at forward, contributing 15.4 points and 4.7 rebounds per game. Together, this pair accounts for half of the points scored by the Privateers.

New Orleans also will have the tallest player on the court in tonight's game. Seven-foot freshman center Hannes Haid pulls down 5.1 rebounds per contest, second on the team, while scoring 5.4 points per game.

Haid, a native of Innsbruck, Austria, gives the Privateers the height they need, although averaging only 24.5 minutes per game.

The Irish front line, however, should be able to use both its bulk and height for an advantage. Ken Barlow (15.7 points, 7.2 rebounds per game), Tim Kempton (7.3, 5.0), Jim Dolan (4.2, 4.6) and ever-improving Donald Royal (7.7, 4.8) should be able to dominate the smaller Privateers inside.

At the guard position, inexperience appears for New Orleans. Freshman swingman Sam Jones heads the backcourt with 7.2 points and 4.8 rebounds per game. The 6-6 Jones, who hails from Monticello, Fla., owns an excellent outside shooting touch and has enough strength to also score inside.

Six-three junior Rocky Adrianson and 6-1 freshman Gave Corchiani also contribute in the backcourt for the Privateers. Corchiani scores 6.0 points per game, while Adrianson helps out with 5.4.

The Irish backcourt, led by freshman David Rivers, is starting to gel at this point in the season, and will get a chance to tune up in preparation for Duke. Rivers, averaging 14.4 points and 4.5 assists per game, has cut down on his turnovers in recent games.

At the off-guard slot, Scott Hicks (9.4 ppg) and Joseph Price (5.2 ppg) have alternated to give the Irish strong point production.

However, both Hicks and back-up point guard Dan Duff were sick and in the infirmary last night, and probably won't be able to go tonight.

The Privateers were expected to perform better this season, but a poor 3-12 record in road games has contributed to their downfall. But since going 4-10 in its first 14 games, New Orleans has been able to win five out of its last 11.

But if the Irish can keep from looking ahead to their trip to New Jersey on Saturday, they should be able to overpower the Privateers with inside strength and quickness outside.

Irish round turn into homestretch

Irish Items

Hello again, everybody!

In horse racing, there is a marvelous phrase to describe this time of the season. It's the time when you have just passed a crucial point on the track, and whatever happens between now and the finish line will decide the race. In the immortal words of Phil Georgette, longtime track announcer, "here they come spinning out of the turn and into the homestretch."

The homestretch. It's where you see horses like Secretariat, Seattle Slew, and Man O'War pull away from everybody else. It's where champions are made. In the horse world, the homestretch is where you separate the thoroughbreds from those destined to be found in your next bottle of Elmer's Glue. In the basketball world, it's where you separate those who go to the NCAA from those who go to the NIT.

The Irish have certainly come "spinning out of the turn." Between the times that those fans who had their pre-game lobotomies fired their oranges onto the court Saturday, Notre Dame played one of its finest games of the season. Unfortunately, the effort went for naught, as Syracuse snapped Notre Dame's four-game winning streak with a three-point win over the Irish. It was a tough one to lose after such a great effort, but Notre Dame proved it can play with one of the top teams in the country for 40 minutes. That is not a fact that should be forgotten as Digger Phelps' squad heads into the homestretch.

It is a track down through the homestretch that, in horse racing terms, may be considered "muddy." There are smooth spots, such as the games with New Orleans, Loyola (Md.), and Butler, that the Irish should be able to go through at full gallop. However, there are also games like Duke, BYU, Washington and Dayton which could keep the Irish from coming up on the outside.

Notre Dame will need a late charge to emerge from a pack of good teams that are crowded together at the final turn. The matter is complicated when you consider all the teams which make the NCAA will not be thoroughbreds. In fact, some of them will be old grey mares, which merely qualify because they get an automatic bid for winning a conference nobody knows about. That makes the task even tougher for the Irish, because independents make the NCAA these days as often as a filly wins the Kentucky Derby. Considering that only one filly has ever won the "Run for the Roses", that doesn't bode well for the Irish.

The Irish have a 13-6 record, and that's good, but not outstanding. The opinion of most followers is that 20 wins would certainly get the Irish into the NCAA, 19 victories might get them to the big tournament, and 18 would be an extremely questionable proposition. With nine games remaining, it doesn't take an Einstein (or a Michelangelo) to figure out that Notre Dame is going to have to beat some good teams to reach the finish line ahead of most of the field.

Still, it is not an impossible task for Notre Dame, as they are finally getting into the groove they have been looking for all year. The emergence of Donald Royal and Jim Dolan on the front line, along with the continued solid play of David Rivers and Ken Barlow has helped Notre Dame establish some consistency. That's all everybody has been looking for from this team, and now that the Irish have it, good things are bound to happen.

Hopefully, good things will happen this week, as the Irish take their first steps towards the final wire. New Orleans comes into the ACC tonight with a 9-16 record and one of the nation's leading scorers in 6-8 center John Harris. On paper, the Privateers shouldn't give the Irish much of a challenge after they come out of the gate, but after seeing the St. Louis game two weeks ago, don't be surprised if New Orleans keeps the tempo down.

Meanwhile, Duke looms in the wings on Saturday at the Meadowlands. The seventh-ranked Blue Devils, at 17-4, have strength up and down the lineup, including all-America candidate Johnny Dawkins at guard. Phelps knows that Mike Krzyzewski's squad provides the Irish a chance to improve their standing in the NCAA race at a time where they need to win a big game against a good team.

So, now is the time for the Irish to go to the whip, loosen the reins, and come out flying. Notre Dame's coming into the homestretch, and the race is on the line in the next nine games. This year the Irish have a chance to put themselves where the best of thoroughbreds wind up... the winner's circle.

Pick of the Week. . . One team that is currently racing towards the finish line is the Notre Dame women's basketball squad. Coach Mary DiStanislao's cagers have reeled off seven wins in their last eight games to raise their record to 12-7 and move to the top of the North Star Conference.

Sunday afternoon, the Irish play host to Detroit in a key North Star Conference matchup at 2 p.m. in the ACC. The Irish came away with a win against the Titans earlier in the year at Detroit, but Dewyane Jones' team is long on talent. Still, Trena Keys has been red hot, as has the rest of this Irish team, so this one should be a dandy. Come out and see the "Showdown with Motown" Sunday afternoon at the ACC.

Notre Dame visits Alabama

By MIKE SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

After finishing the first half of its North Star Conference schedule with an impressive 5-1 record, the Notre Dame women's basketball team will take a vacation from the conference as it travels to Alabama for a game tonight against the Crimson Tide.

The short vacation will be anything but relaxing for the Irish, however, as they will be facing one of the better teams in the country. Alabama is not currently in the Top 20, but has been in and out of the poll throughout the season. Despite being in the Southeastern Conference, which is the toughest conference in the country - four SEC teams are in the Top 20 - the Tide has been able to produce an impressive 16-9 record. Obviously, Notre Dame will be hard-pressed to improve on its 12-7 mark.

"Leaving the thick of the conference race for a game outside is an interesting situation which we haven't had before," says Irish coach Mary DiStanislao. "But I'm looking forward to it as a real good test for us. Alabama is a solid team that's tough at home, so it won't be easy."

Tonight's game is a rematch of Alabama's 71-56 win over the Irish in the ACC two years ago. Scheduling problems forced the second part of the home-and-home series to be played at an unusual time. Despite the two-year delay, though, many players remain from the first game.

The star of that first game, Carol Smith, was a freshman when she scored 25 points and dominated the middle against the Irish. Now a junior, Smith has grown into an even more dominating player, emerging as one of the premier players in the nation. The 6-3 center's current averages of 17.8 points and 9.9 rebounds per game show that even the tough SEC teams are having problems containing her.

"Carol Smith is as solid as a rock," says DiStanislao, who knows that her players must shut down Smith in order to win. "She's emerged as the leader of the team.

"Alabama, as a whole, posts a lot of points, though, so it's more than just Smith. She's the key, but they've got other people who can hurt you."

In fact, there are six Alabama players who are averaging more than eight points a game. Much of the scoring punch comes from the backcourt, where juniors Sandra Rushing, Vickie Cox and Terry Howell are scoring more than 30 points each time out. The 5-8 Rushing, whose 10.6 scoring average is second on the team to Smith's, leads the team in assists with about four each game.

Although Smith produces a large chunk of the inside offense, she does get some help from her teammates, especially forward Cynthia McDougal. The 5-11 freshman has contributed 9.5 points and 5.4 rebounds per game, but even more
